FORWARD

The law has an important influence on the organization, control, and performance of the U.S. food system. For this reason, a major focus of the regional project NC-117 is the status and economic impact of selected areas of the law. This NC-117 Special Report, Bibliography of Agricultural and Food Law, 1960-1978, will assist those individuals who wish to study the effects of the law on the U.S. food system.

The individuals and organizations participating in NC-117 are listed below.

Agricultural Experiment Station Representatives:

California, Leon Garoyan
Cornell, Olan D. Forker
Florida, Richard L. Kilmer
Ronald W. Ward
Illinois, Raymond M. Leuthold
Daniel I. Padberg
Iowa, Ronald E. Raikes
Kansas, Milton L. Manuel
Kentucky, Loys L. Mather
Michigan, James D. Shaffer
Ronald W. Cotterill
Minnesota, Dale C. Dahl

PREFACE

This monograph is one of a series of publications developed by the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station as part of a research study entitled Economic Regulation of the U.S. Food System. This study is a contributing project to a regional research effort identified as NC-117 (Organization and Control of the U.S. Food System).

The Minnesota research, and the monographs developed to summarize its findings, has the following objectives:

Objective 1 (Phase I): "To develop an economic framework for describing existing statutory, administrative, and common law that facilitates, constrains, or regulates the firms and agencies in the U.S. food production and distribution system;"

Objective 2 (Phase II): "To conduct economic analyses of major legal institutions that deal directly with the organization, operation, and control of the U.S. food system; and"

Objective 3 (Phase III): "To study the manner in which the law can be used as an instrument to affect the structural change suggested by other economic analyses dealing with the future performance of the food system."

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is organized in terms of legal-economic subject matter category as well as by type of publication. The references cited are a compilation of titles of books, legal periodical articles, economic journal articles, U.S. Government publications, regional publications, state experiment station, extension and agricultural economics department publications, state agency publications, Ph.D. dissertations, and Master of Science theses.

A number of indices and bibliographies were searched for the compilation of this bibliography. Generally, the search was made for the seventeen-year period from 1960 through March 1978. However, in some instances where special subject matter bibliographies were available for a longer period of time, the compilation is more inclusive, e.g., the agricultural cooperative-legal periodicals entries include the period from 1920 through March 1978. The general indices searched for the 1960 through March 1978 period include:

1. University of Minnesota Libraries card catalogues (including law).
2. U.S. Department of Agriculture Current Research Information System (CRIS) data base.
3. The Index to Legal Periodicals, published by The H.W. Wilson Company in cooperation with the American Association of Law Libraries.
4. Monthly Checklist of State Publications, compiled by the Exchange and Gift Division, Processing Department, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.
5. Lists of Departmental Publications from College and University Departments of Agricultural Economics (not all departments have such a list).
6. Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications, Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C.
7. Catalog of the National Agriculture Library. Totowa, N.J.: Rawan and Littlefield for the United States Dept. of Agriculture, through Nov. 1977.
8. Contents of American Cooperation, American Institute of Cooperation, Washington, D.C., 1960 - 1977.
9. Indices to the American Journal of Agricultural Economics (Journal of Farm Economics), the American Agricultural Economics Association, 1960 - February 1978.
10. Index of Economic Articles (Journals), American Economic Association, 1960 - 1971.
11. Journal of Economic Literature, American Economic Association, 1972 - March 1978.
12. Dissertation Abstracts, University Microfilms, Ann Arbor, Michigan: Xerox.
13. Masters Thesis Abstracts, University Microfilms, Ann Arbor, Michigan: Xerox.

Major section headings in this bibliography refer to legal-economic subject matter categories. Subsections are labelled according to literature sources, i.e., books, legal periodicals, federal government publications, state publications, dissertations.

References selected for this bibliography include published compilations of law in the legal categories, articles which state "what the law is" in the various categories, analyses and interpretations of laws and analyses of the economic effects of laws.

A comprehensive search of the literature was made in the compilation of this bibliography. However, the authors would like to point out that this is a select bibliography and we do not claim to have included every relevant piece of literature which may have been published in the agricultural and food law area from 1960 through March 1978.

Technical Notes: Numbers found in parentheses after many of the entries in the federal publications sections are SuDocs numbers. These numbers provide ready access to government documents in libraries which catalog their documents under the SuDocs system as do the federal libraries.

Only the last names of authors of legal periodicals are listed. This is standard format for legal bibliographies.

A solid line (_____) in the place of the author's name may be used to indicate "same author" or "anonymous" in a bibliographical entry. In this bibliography the line is used to indicate "anonymous."

For want of a better place, American Enterprise Institute publications are included under Federal Publications.

III. LAND AND OTHER REAL PROPERTY

This section includes not only entries of a general nature concerning land and other real property, but also many specific entries. This section was not broken down into subcategories because the subcategories were so numerous and the entries within each were so relatively few. It was felt that the section would be less confusing and more useful as a whole.

Some examples of specific subjects which may be found in this area are fence law, zoning and planning, transfer of property rights and eminent domain.

As with the bibliography as a whole, the compilers make no claims that this section is an exhaustive compilation of relevant real property literature.

IV. WATER

The materials in this section cover both water rights and the legal questions concerning water pollution. However, the references concerning water pollution are also included in Section V on environmental law as it affects agriculture.

Specific topics listed in this section include, for example, transfers of water rights, irrigation rights and problems, drainage law, state and federal pollution control legislation, reclamation law, and legal problems arising out of agricultural chemical and feedlot pollution.

Many selections from colloquia and conference proceedings will be found among the following citations. Generally, in this section and others, proceedings citations fall into the subsection of state publications due to the nature of their sponsorship.

IX. BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS

This section is divided into four subsections: general, partnerships, limited partnerships, and corporations. There is no separate subsection on sole proprietorships because very little has been written about their legal nature.

The works cited in this section deal with the legal nature, formation, operation, dissolution and tax implications of the various organizational alternatives.

Much of the material in the "General" category is concerned with criteria for choosing one business organization alternative over all the others.

X. COOPERATIVES

This section is divided into three categories. The first category, General, includes articles and publications dealing in a general way with the legal aspect of farmer cooperatives. It also includes some articles concerning rural electric cooperatives and other topics of a specific nature which do not fit into the other categories.

The second category, Formation, Organization and Operation, includes such topics as state cooperative laws, cooperative contracts and any other topics having to do with the formation, organization and operation of cooperatives.

The third category, Taxation, includes all articles and publications concerning taxation of cooperatives and their patrons.

Articles concerning the cooperative antitrust exemption are included as part B of section XVI. Antitrust.

The last part of each category in this section will be a collection of citations to American Cooperation. Because each article in those parts is from the same source, the name of the source is not repeated for each entry. Each citation, therefore, includes only the author's name, the title of the article, the year of the American Cooperation volume in which the article begins and the page on which the article begins.

XIV. LIABILITY FOR AGRICULTURALLY RELATED ACTIVITIES

Although the number of entries in this section is relatively small, it is just large enough to make the subject of liability stand out as a separate entity. Liability was included as a separate section because it is a potentially very important legal issue which must be faced by farmers from time to time.

XV. REGULATION

This section is a complex organization of entries having to do with regulation of agriculture and agricultural markets. It includes publications dealing with regulations, legislation creating regulations, and regulatory administration.

The subsections include General; Consumer Protection; Grades, Standards and Inspection; Regulation of Structure, Conduct and Performance; Marketing Orders and Agreements; Commodity Futures Regulation; Chemical Use; and the Transportation Exemption. The following section (XVI) is devoted solely to Antitrust and Agriculture - Including the Cooperative Exemption.

The General category includes administration, general topics and specific topics which defied categorization. The Consumer Protection category includes all selections having to do with the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act as well as other selections. Grades, Standards and Inspection speaks for itself. Regulation of Structure, Conduct and Performance includes analyses of the effects of regulations on structure, conduct and performance and publications dealing with the Packers and Stockyards and Perishable Agricultural Commodities Acts -- it does not, of course, include antitrust and agriculture. The Marketing Orders and Agreements, Commodity Futures Regulation, Chemical Use and Transportation Exemption categories speak for themselves.

XVI. ANTITRUST

This section is divided into two categories. The General category includes citations to the relatively few publications that deal with anti-trust and agriculture other than the cooperative exemption. It also includes some citations to publications not dealing directly with the agriculture or food issues but which are helpful as background for those issues.

The Cooperative Exemption category includes citations to publications concerning the Cooperative Antitrust issue.

All other Cooperative topics will be found in section X. Cooperatives.

XVII. POLICY

This section is divided into six categories. The General category includes several compilations of relevant statutes as well as books and other publications dealing with food and agricultural policy, generally.

The Price and Income Policy category includes publications concerning, for example, agricultural adjustment, set aside, commodity programs, land retirement, acreage allotments, and price and income policy in general.

The Poverty category covers food stamps, child nutrition, school lunch, as well as more general topics on poverty policy.

The category concerning U.S. Rural Development and Electrification speaks for itself.
