“Reaching Out” Mural

The mural installed in the Northrop Memorial Auditorium foyer to honor the College of Education and Human Development Commencement was created by students from the Multicultural Voices Learning Community in the Department of Postsecondary Teaching and Learning. Entitled “Reaching Out,” the painting represents community—the many communities that are served by the College as well as the community of students who created the mural. Dean Darlyne Bailey asked the learning community to create the mural for Burton Hall, where the College administration is housed and where it will be hung permanently.

The learning community includes Creativity Art Lab, taught by Pat James; International Literature, taught by Rashné Jehangir; and Basic Writing, taught by Pat Bruch. Seventeen first-year students and one undergraduate teaching assistant researched, designed, and created the piece during the spring 2007 term. Using art, literature, and composition, they explored themes of identity, community, and empowerment in each course and in the mural.

On the left side of the mural are photographs of students’ own hands interspersed with questions they wrote about education. The hand photos reach toward each other and out toward larger hands on the right that contain students’ paintings and photographs of their families and friends, which embody multicultural communities in the Twin Cities. The College of Education and Human Development mission statement frames the images and reminds us of the many forms of outreach practiced by faculty, staff, and students. The mural visually represents the act of creating community.

May 10, 2007

Dear Graduates,

On behalf of the faculty, staff, and students of the College of Education and Human Development, let me say first and foremost CONGRATULATIONS! We are gathered here today to celebrate your achievements with your families, fellow students, and friends.

Your journey may continue here in Minnesota, across the nation, or around the globe, and you will surely impact others, as they, in turn, impact you. As you go forth into your chosen field, I urge you to remember to not only apply what you have learned from your time here with us, but to also stay open to learning from everyone and everything in the days and years to come. It is this continuous process of discovery that allows us to deepen and use our gifts and most fully appreciate the biggest gift for us all—the gift of Life.

We are proud to have you as colleagues and look forward to continuing our relationship with you. Please know that your membership in CEHD is lifelong, and I wish for you the ability to begin every day looking as if through the eyes of a child—seeing wonder and new adventures every step of the way.

Please stay in touch.
