The Outstanding Achievement Award

In 1947 the Regents of the University of Minnesota, long desirous of giving special recognition to outstanding alumni of the University, approved an award in the form of a medal and citation for outstanding achievement which could be presented from time to time to those former students who have attained signal distinction in their chosen fields.

The University continues to recognize on such occasions as this, a few of its graduates who have brought distinction and credit to the University and to the professions in which they have carved new frontiers and established new bench-marks of growth.

The presentation of Outstanding Achievement Awards this evening to two of our distinguished medical graduates is a significant event in the history of the University. We are particularly happy that these presentations can be made tonight at a time when we are also recognizing our graduating Seniors.

All of us present know that the greatness of a university resides in large degree in its graduates who contribute to the hopes, aspirations, and well-being of mankind. The recipients of the Outstanding Achievement Awards at the University of Minnesota have earned for themselves the respect and the admiration of their professional colleagues. The presentation of these awards is, among other things, an expression of the deep obligations which all of us have for those who have lived courageously and fruitfully to the end that society in general benefits.
