APPENDIX A

In the 1970 Census only five questions on population were asked of all individuals. The "complete count" or "100 percent" items on relationship to household head, sex, race, age, and marital status are cross classified along with items from housing questions several ways in the first three counts of summary tapes.

All other information concerning individuals is obtained from questions asked of only a sample of the population. Sampling permits the collection and estimation of data about an area even though a small number of individuals were actually questioned. Data from sample and some items from 100 percent count are included in the Fourth and subsequent count summary tapes.

The following table provides a summarized comparison of the 1970 census items with the 1960 content. That the 1970 items do not differ strikingly from 1960 is not surprising. Although many new items were proposed, the dominant tone through most discussions of improvement of the 1970 product by users was for a greater exploitation of the existing (1960) items by more intensive cross-tabulation and by providing additional data for small areas. Thus, while a number of new items have been added on a sample basis (primarily to meet the program needs of Federal agencies), the subject needs which the decennial census serve have not changed greatly during the decade.

The stability of the census items stems from a desire to develop historical continuity in data series. This continuity is sometimes lost, however, and should be examined carefully on a case-by-case basis. A question asked for one census may not be asked for the next because it no longer yields useful data, or it is no longer important in most localities, or it may yield unreliable data. For example, the 1960 item on structural condition was dropped because it was based on a subjective rating made by the enumerators, which post-census evaluation studies found in many cases to be unreliable and inaccurate.

APPENDIX B

MINNESOTA
Technical Document No. 8 Supplement
For Tabulation 35.

35. POPULATION AT WORK DURING THE CENSUS WEEK BY PLACE OF WORK (15 PERCENT)

Count of Persons At Work During the Census Week

The first 20 data items of this matrix locate workers within 20 specified areas. The base levels for which this tally is made are counties. The full tally array will only be meaningful up to these summary levels. For each SMSA and component summary levels, the metropolitan part of the 20 data items will be meaningful at the SMSA level. This appendix lists the 20 defined places of work and identifies the metropolitan part, if applicable, for the counties.

Data Items 21-23 represent workers inside the SMSA, outside the SMSA, and not reported cases. (They are meaningful only at the SMSA level or any component part thereof. For a component, only those workers within that part are contained in the tallies.)

Data Items 24-26 represent workers inside their county of residence, outside their county of residence, and not reported cases.
