Minneapolis --- S. L. A. Marshall, author and military columnist for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, will speak at a University of Minnesota convocation, open free to the public, at 11:30 a. m. Thursday (April 4) in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Marshall, whose books include "Pork Chop Hill", will speak on the topic "Panmunjom Plus Ten, the Korean War in Retrospect".

A military writer, historian and policy maker for the United States Army during both world wars and the Korean conflict, Marshall retired from military service in 1962 with the rank of brigadier general.

His military career has been combined with 41 years as a newspaperman. He served as foreign correspondent, military critic and editorial writer for the Detroit News from 1927 to 1962. Previously, he was sports editor and city editor for the El Paso Herald. In various capacities---as correspondent for the Detroit News, as an Army historian, analyst, instructor and deputy chief of information--- he has covered both world wars, the Spanish Civil War, the Korean war and the Sinai and Lebanon Civil wars.

During World War II, he established the Army News Service, wrote the basic national policy on Americans of Japanese blood and developed the plant for indoctrination of enemy prisoners of war, in addition to other duties as Army chief of orientation.

Among the 13 books he has written, based on the wars he has participated in or covered, one of the best known is "Pork Chop Hill", a story of a Korean war battle.

Marshall's lecture will be sponsored by the University's school of journalism, history department, Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps unit and the department of concerts and lectures.

University of Minnesota faculty members will televise their views of "The Many-Sided Language" in the fifteenth annual public discussion series presented by the University Graduate School Research center.

The series of 10 lectures will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10 p.m. Mondays on the University of Minnesota television hour over KTCA-TV, Channel 2, beginning April 15 and concluding June 17. This year's program will be the fifth to be televised--- previously it was broadcast by radio.

Robert F. Spencer, University anthropology professor, will host the series and lead the discussions which will ask and attempt to answer questions such as: What is language? How do we analyze it? How do we teach it? What does it indicate to us about ourselves, our backgrounds, our social class, our ways of thinking, our political system, our culture and our history?

In introducing the series Monday, April 15, Professor Spencer will speak on the definition and background of language. Other lectures in the series include:

April 22-"The World of Language", Cecil Wood, associate professor of German, and Paul Staneslow, instructor in Slavic and Oriental languages.

April 29-"Language Evolution in Schools", Harold B. Allen, professor of English, and Stanley B. Kegler, associate professor of English education.

May 6 -"You and Your Dialect", Professor Allen.

May 13 -"Slanguage Tells", Brom Weber, associate professor of English.

May 20 -"Words in Mind", James Jenkins, professor of psychology.

May 27 -"Words that Persuade", William S. Howell, professor of Speech and theater arts.

June 3 -"Law, Words and Music", Carl A. Auerbach, professor of law.

June 10 -"From Words to Pictures", Richard B. Mather, associate professor of Slavic and Oriental languages.

June 17 - "Bringing the Many Sides Together", Professor Spencer brings the complete panel together.

Joseph H. North, producer of University programs for the educational television station, KTCA-TV, and Richard Carter, KTCA-TV producer-director, will work with the University Graduate School Research center in producing this series of programs.

CREATIVE ARTS
FESTIVAL TO OPEN
SUNDAY AT U OF M

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE-214 MORRILL HALL
MINNEAPOLIS 14, MINNESOTA
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
APRIL 3, 1963

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Interpretations of the field of creative arts ranging from the traditional Good Friday performance of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra to a jazz workshop and from a tour of Twin Cities church architecture to an arts and crafts sale will make up the week-long Creative Arts Festival which will open Sunday (April 7) at the University of Minnesota.

An annual presentation of the Coffman Memorial Union board of governors, the festival is co-sponsored, in part, by the department of concerts and lectures and the Minnesota Orchestral association.

Officially opening the festival Sunday will be the regular Sunday concert of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and its guests, the St. Olaf college choir, at 4:30 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium. Sunday evening's musical program will be completed by the 8 to 11 p.m. performance of the Out High Workshop, a Union jazz workshop production, in the Union main lounge.

Work by members of the professional art fraternity Delta Phi Delta will be on display in Coffman Memorial Union Fine Arts lounge, during the week.

Original objets d'art will be on sale from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday (April 8) in the Union main ballroom. The sale, sponsored by the fine arts area of the Union, will offer a wide variety of student work ranging from prints, oils and water colors to pottery, fine fabrics and children's toys.

Two special student convocations will highlight Monday's festival. The opening performance at 11:30 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium will present the University Chorus in concert. The second convocation, at 12:30 p.m., will offer the Contemporary Dancers in "Creative Thrust in Dance" and a program, "Interpreting the Imaginative Philosophy of Kahlil Gibran in Dance", a recital by the University women's dance group, Orchesis.

(MORE)

Professor Ralph Rapson, head of the University school of architecture and designer of the new Guthrie theater in Minneapolis, will discuss "Creation in Design and Theatrical Mood" at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday (April 9) in the Union men's lounge.

Also scheduled Tuesday is a discussion, "The Stance of Folk Music, Ballads and Poetry", at 3:30 p.m. in the Union women's lounge. A film, "The Crucible", will be shown at 8 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium. The showing will be open free to the public.

Wednesday's Creative Arts Festival program opens at 11:30 a.m. when the University McKnight fellows discuss "Theater Arts and Creativity" in Room 320, Coffman Union.

Five Twin Cities churches, including several which have won national design competitions, will be visited in the tour of modern church architecture at 5 p.m. Wednesday. The tour, sponsored by the Union fine arts gallery committee, will visit Christ Lutheran church, 3244 34th ave., S.; St. Frances Cabrini church, 1500 Franklin ave., S. E.; St. Mary's Greek Orthodox church, Irving av. at 34th st.; St. Peter's Lutheran church, 54th and France ave.; all in Minneapolis, and the Temple of Aaron congregation, 616 S. Mississippi boulevard, St. Paul.

"The Eyes of the Past and Jazz", a Union jazz workshop presentation, from 8 to 10 p.m. in the Union men's lounge, will conclude the Wednesday program.

Sir Tyrone Guthrie, director of the Guthrie theater, will be the convocation speaker at 11:30 a.m. Thursday (April 11) in Northrop Memorial auditorium. Sir Tyrone will speak on "Work and Play". He also will discuss his new theater and its repertory program at a coffee hour at 3:30 p.m. in the Union Men's lounge.

Brahm's "Requiem"---traditionally presented on Good Friday by the Minneapolis Symphony and the University Chorus---will close the 1963 Creative Arts festival. The 8:30 p.m. performance in Northrop auditorium will feature baritone Kenneth Smith and soprano Irene Jordan as soloists. Admission will be charged.

350 HS STUDENTS WILL TAKE PART IN STATE'S FIRST MODERN LANGUAGE CONFERENCE AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Approximately 350 Minnesota high school students will take part at the University of Minnesota Friday and Saturday (April 5-6) in the state's first conference for students of modern language.

The conference, in which 60 teachers also will participate, will be conducted at the Center for Continuation Study.

Fred E. Berger, Continuation center director, said registration for the conference far exceeded expectations which had been for approximately 100 participants.

Participating students, who were selected by their teachers on the basis of their proficiency in a foreign language, will be given an opportunity to try out their language skills on native speakers in a simulated foreign setting.

The conference will open at 7:30 p. m. Friday with sessions in Spanish, French and German in which the students will converse only in the foreign language and will demonstrate folk singing and dancing native to the language areas they are studying. Student talent shows also will be given at these meetings. Exchange students from other countries will participate in the conversations and teachers will lead the sessions. Many students will wear dress of foreign countries.

Saturday's session will be devoted to lectures and workshops designed to give the students new insight into the nature of language and to point out the many fields related to language and the opportunities these fields present for advanced study and research.

'U' PHYSIOLOGIST GETS
NSF VISITING
SCIENTIST GRANT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Robert L. Evans, assistant professor of physiology at the University of Minnesota and president of the Minnesota Academy of Science, will use a recent $9,315 grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF) as the Minnesota academy's "visiting scientist" for the 1963-64 academic year.

In its state academies of science program the foundation supports "visiting scientist" projects in which state academies organize and administer planned educational institution consultations by outstanding scientists.

According to Professor Evans, $6,785 of this grant will be applied to his work under the NSF "visiting scientist" definition. The remaining $2,530 will be used in a collegiate academy program for the encouragement of graduate study in Minnesota colleges.

The later program will involve work with undergraduate students in the five Minnesota state colleges and in the many private colleges in the state, he stated.

As a past-president of the Minnesota Academy of Science, on the expiration of his term of office June 30 Professor Evans will assume the visiting professorship, a position traditionally awarded to the retiring president of the organization. Professor Walter O. Lundberg, director of the Hormel Institute, Austin, last year's academy president, is the current "visiting professor".

U* HOSPITALS SOCIAL SERVICE DEPARTMENT
WILL MARK GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY APRIL 18

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis--- The golden anniversary of the University of Minnesota Hospitals Social Service department will be commemorated at a dinner Thursday, April 18.

Dr. Frederick Elliott, American Hospital association consultant and staff associate of the group's counseling program, will speak at the fiftieth anniversary observance at 6:30 p.m. in Coffman Memorial Union junior ballroom. An informal social hour will be held from 5 to 6 p.m. in the University Campus club in Coffman Union.

Ray M. Amberg, director of University Hospitals, will preside at the dinner.

Staff members of the more than 100 public and private social service agencies in Minnesota working with the University group, University doctors and medical department personnel, former patients and Twin Cities residents interested in the University Hospitals Social Service department have been invited, according to Professor Annie Laurie Baker, department head.

Reservations may be made with Miss Frances Sundby, Social Service department, University of Minnesota hospitals, Minneapolis 14, Fe.9-7311, extension 2641. Checks for $3.50 per plate should be made payable to University of Minnesota Hospitals, attention of Miss Helen Kretchmer, Box 181. Tickets will be mailed in advance of the dinner date.

One of the first hospital social service groups organized in the United States, the University's department originally was suggested in 1911 when Dr. Elias P. Lyon, dean of the University medical school, appointed a committee to consider the establishment of such an organization at the University. Committee members were Doctors Richard Olding Beard and Jennings C. Litzenberg.

Established in 1913 under the direction of Dean Lyon, the department employed Miss Marion Tebbets of the St. Paul Associated Charities in 1915 to direct and develop the social service work at the University Hospitals.

Social Service deaprtment---

Dr. Litzenberg , head of the department of obstetrics and gynecology, was the first to employ one of the department's workers. The second was assigned to work in the venereal disease clinic, and the third was requested , soon after, for service in the heart clinic.

At the request of Dr. Olga Hansen of the heart clinic and Dr. Archibald Beard, who worked with diabetic patients, the heart clinic social worker was asked to assist with the diabetic work. The use of insulin had not been discovered at this time, and diet was the only known control for diabetes. The social worker, by enlisting the assistance of nutrition students from the St. Paul campus' home economics classes, initiated, between these two University departments, the cooperation which continues today, Miss Baker said.

With the departments of pediatrics and neurology next requesting the assistance of social workers, the new department was firmly established by 1918. In addition to the director, Miss Tebbets, five workers were employed.

Notes from Miss Tebbets' annual director's report in 1920 show, even in those days, the constant problem of shortage of workers: "During the past year, following the readjustments necessary during the war period, the department has gradually returned to a somewhat normal condition. We again have full-time workers on duty in the dermatology, obstetrics and pediatrics clinics of the dispensary. A fourth worker has been on duty for some months in the tuberculosis clinic three days weekly, and also handles 'general' cases. A fifth worker assists half-time each in dermatology and obstetrics departments, where the load of work really demands two full-time people."

Miss Tebbets continues: "The summer months of the year were marked by 'outing work', whereby arrangements were made for 63 patients to have outings of a week or more. These were made possible by the generosity and cooperation of such outside agencies as the International Sunshine society..... the fall, winter and spring quarters involve not only our work with patients, but student work as well. From the academic college we had six sociology students who were assigned to us for three hours weekly as well as 14 students from the school of nursing who spent from one to two weeks with us. Three students from the American Red Cross came in for special work and many volunteers should be given special credit for assistance they have given when called upon in the emergencies which continually arise."

When the University Hospitals Out Patient department moved into its new quarters in 1929, the social service department was reorganized with Miss Frances Money as its new director. The services were extended to all medical departments of the hospitals and all staff members were required to have master's degrees.

These were depression times, Miss Baker recalls, when social work in the hospitals required ingenuity as resources were limited----problems tragic. Two accomplishments of the University Hospitals group were the support---with facts and figures--- of Director Amberg's sponsorship of a bill in the state legislature requiring the State Board of Health to license all state nursing homes, and the establishment, through the hospital's eye clinic, of the Minnesota Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

At this time, as there were no centralized state, county or local organizations to assist the ill, the social service department staff had to work with 435 county commissioners. In one instance, 86 individuals were contacted to make discharge plans for just one patient, according to department records. The staff was responsible for interpreting the effects of illness, the physician's recommendations and the needs of the patients to Child Welfare board members, county commissioners and, later, to the new county welfare staffs. Patient by patient, they provided a knowledge of disease and the needs of the ill people which helped make the Minnesota Public Assistance program liberal.

The University Hospitals Auxiliary to the Faculty Women's club, organized in 1930, has donated money, clothing and services through the years. Currently headed by Mrs. John J. Bittner, the group, Miss Baker stated, "has been our right hand in providing for emergencies that we could not handle".

Social Service department---

On Miss Money's death in 1946, Miss Lydia Christ was appointed acting director and supervisor of student education.

In 1948 Miss Baker became head of the department, combining the psychiatric and the medical social service work departments in the hospitals into one social service department. The staff was increased to meet the needs of the new services and facilities and a program added to assist patients through the use of group problems techniques.

Following World War II, modern scientific medical practice modified the focus and functions of social work with protection of the care given becoming more complex.

The Social Service department staff contributed---- by social planning---- to prevent unnecessary recurrences of illness and assisting the patients to achieve the maximum benefits of treatment. It continued to re-evaluate its function to meet the changes in medical care, the community welfare structure and the new developments in social work practice.

With the development of community social agencies, the department established a "working partnership" of communication on a policy level as well as on case interpretations. State and local agencies were provided with written directives on pertinent administration policies and on new services in University Hospitals. Planned programs were held for county commissioners, judges, social workers, county board members and other interested groups. A committee of representatives from the State Department of Welfare and the administration of University Hospitals was organized to consider plans and programs of mutual concern.

The department initiated two organizations in this period: the Minnesota Epilepsy league and the Nursing Home Volunteer program.

MUMPS VIRUS AS POSSIBLE CAUSE OF FATAL CONGENITAL
HEART DEFECT SUGGESTED BY UNIVERSITY OF MINN. STUDY

(FOR RELEASE FRIDAY, APRIL 12)

Minneapolis --- The possibility that children of mothers exposed to mumps virus during the first three months of pregnancy will be born with the inevitably fatal heart deformity known as endocardial fibroelastosis is suggested by recent clinical findings of three University of Minnesota pediatric cardiologists.

In a report published in the April issue of the Journal of Pediatrics, Dr. George R. Noren, National Heart Institute trainee in pediatric cardiology, and Drs. Paul Adams, Jr., and Ray C. Anderson, associate professors of pediatrics, presented evidence that mumps infection of the fetus may cause the disease which results in a thickening of the heart lining and the formation of elastic fibers inside the heart, predominantly on the left side.

Each year, some 35,000 children are born in the United States with congenital heart defects. About 1 per cent of these, or from 350 to 400, suffer from endocardial fibroelastosis. The majority of these die in the first year of life, and almost none reach maturity.

The Minnesotans' study was prompted by the observation of a St. Louis, Mo., pediatrician, Dr. D. L. Thurston, concerning the positive skin reaction to mumps antigen in an infant with endocardial fibroelastosis.

Drs. Noren, Adams and Anderson measured the skin reactivity response of 30 infants and children, 28 of whom were under 2½ years of age, whom they injected with a small amount of mumps skin testing material. None of the children had a history of having had mumps.

The group was composed of 11 children without evidence of heart disease and 19 children with a diagnosis of congenital or acquired heart disease. Of these 19, nine were children with endocardial fibroelastosis.

Every one of the nine children with a diagnosis of endocardial fibroelastosis developed a positive skin reaction at the site of the mumps antigen inoculation 24 to 36 hours after the injection. The mothers of two of these children had a definite history of exposure to mumps during early pregnancy, and another had a questionable history of exposure. Another had mumps during the first weeks of pregnancy. This was confirmed by rising antibodies against mumps in the mother's blood as her pregnancy progressed.

One child with a diagnosis of a different type of congenital heart ailment, an interventricular septal defect, also reacted positively to the mumps antigen skin test, the doctors reported. This child's mother had had mumps during the third month of her pregnancy.

None of the children with other heart problems and none of the 11 control children---who showed no evidence of heart disease---demonstrated more than a relatively slight reaction to the mumps antigen inoculation, according to the researchers.

Positive skin reactivity to killed mumps virus, the Minnesota doctors point out, has been defined as evidence of a previous mumps infection whether or not a history of mumps infection in the individual has been recorded. Thus, it is indicated that the nine children with endocardial fibroelastosis, none of whom had a history of mumps since birth, evidently were infected by mumps virus prior to birth---probably in the formative weeks or months immediately following conception.

The Minnesota scientists consider the results of their study a "very promising lead" which opens up many areas for further investigation in the fields of immunology, virology, preventive medicine and obstetrics. Because of the preliminary nature of their data, they decline to comment on potential practical applications of their findings, such as the possibility of immunization of women of child-bearing age against mumps.

The University of Minnesota study was supported financially by the Minnesota Heart Association and the Dwan Family Fund.

Minneapolis --- William C. Sullivan, assistant director of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), will speak on "Communism and the Academic Community" at 11:30 a. m. Thursday (April 18) in Northrop Memorial auditorium at the University of Minnesota.

Sullivan, who is in charge of the domestic intelligence division in the FBI, will address a University convocation, open free to the public.

A native of Bolton, Mass., Sullivan has served with the FBI for 22 years. He joined the bureau as a special agent in 1941. Since, he has served in all sections of the United States as well as outside the country during World WAR II on confidential assignments.

He became an inspector in the bureau in 1954, chief inspector in 1960 and assistant director in charge of the domestic intelligence division in 1961.

Sullivan attended Clark university, Boston college graduate school, the American university and George Washington university graduate school. He holds bachelor of arts and master of education degrees. He has served as guest lecturer at several universities and colleges.

The convocation will be sponsored by the University's department of concerts and lectures.

CYSTIC FIBROSIS

AWARDED TO 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A National Cystic Fibrosis Research Fund (NCFRF) grant of $22,333 has assured continuation of the Cystic Fibrosis Regional Care, Research and Teaching Center at the University of Minnesota Hospitals, according to Dr. Warren J. Warwick, assistant professor of pediatrics in the University medical school and center director.

The University center is one of 30 cystic fibrosis centers located in medical schools and their affiliated teaching hospitals throughout the United States. All have been established with the help of the national organization and are maintained with its support.

The new award, second University grant renewal, was presented to Dr. Warwick by Ray Kapala, 7645 Upton ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn., Cystic Fibrosis fund chapter president.

In making the presentation, Kapala said, "Dozens of children in this part of the country are alive today because they were fortunate enough to be born in an area where a cystic fibrosis center exists. It is our hope and belief that through the work of this center and others like it, an eventual control for this disease will be found".

Cystic fibrosis, leading cause of pulmonary death in children, is an inherited disease affecting the glands of external secretion---the mucus, sweat and saliva glands. Without early diagnosis and intensive medical and home treatment, half the children born with cystic fibrosis die before they are five years old, but when the disease is identified and treated in its initial stages, patients may live into their teens, according to Dr. Warwick. Some survive into adulthood.

In announcing the renewal of the NCFRF grant, Dr. Warwick commented: "Until 1938, cystic fibrosis was mistaken for various other diseases. Children who died from it were thought to be dying of pneumonia, bronchial asthma, celiac diseases or other causes. Now that cystic fibrosis has been identified, medical research workers are trying to discover the altered chemical and enzymatic factors that produce the primary glandular malfunction. When these are known, the means of control is virtually certain to follow".

In addition to providing facilities for research, the regional centers strive to improve methods of patient care. They also offer medical students, interns, residents and practicing physicians and allied professional personnel the opportunity to become skilled in diagnosis and management of the disease.

Minneapolis --- Spring quarter attendance at the University of Minnesota totals 29,305 or 2,593 more than the 26,712 who were attending classes during the spring quarter a year ago, according to True E. Pettengill, University recorder.

The increase for the spring quarter, which opened April 1, over the corresponding term last year is almost 10 per cent, Pettengill pointed out. Fall and winter quarter enrollments this school year ran 9 per cent ahead of the previous year's terms. Fall attendance totalled 33,616, and 31,421 students were in classes winter quarter.

The current student total includes 19,894 men and 9,411 women, continuing the trend of a slightly rising ratio of women to men in the total student body noted over recent years, Pettengill said. A year ago, 18,206 men and 8,506 women were enrolled.

Attendance by colleges and divisions of the University for spring quarter of 1962 and 1963 were reported by the recorder as follows:

TEACHERS SOUGHT
FOR SCHOLARSHIPS
AT MINNESOTA 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- With three new scholarship programs to offer qualified teachers, the University of Minnesota's College of Education is searching the midwest area for applicants.

Fellowships of tuition plus $2,400 for four quarters of graduate work are available to experienced teachers accepted in a program for training teachers of emotionally and socially maladjusted children. This program, which is in its first year, is supported by a five-year grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.

Participants in a new training program for teachers of hearing handicapped children are eligible for scholarships of tuition plus $2,000 for one year of graduate work or $1,600 for the final year of undergraduate study. The program is supported by a United States Office of Education grant.

Students interested in teaching visually handicapped children may receive $2,000 for three consecutive quarters of graduate study in a program supported by the American Foundation for the Blind.

Each program of study includes appropriate coursework in the area of handicap plus child psychology, educational psychology and special teaching methods. Supervised practical experience is an important part of each program of preparation.

Inquiries should be addressed to Special Education, 14 Pattee Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14, Minn.

MINNESOTA 'U' SCIENTISTS DESCRIBE NEW TRANSPLANTATION BARRIER 'BREAKTHROUGH'

(FOR RELEASE P. M. THURSDAY, APRIL 18)

Minneapolis --- A breakthrough in crossing the immunological barrier to transplantation, which could make possible human organ transplants within one to two years, was reported Thursday (April 18) by a University of Minnesota physiologist at the 47th annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology in Atlantic City, N. J.

Dr. Carlos Martinez, physiology professor, described how he and associates at the University of Minnesota medical school had induced tolerance to transplants in mice by repeated injections of non-living spleen cell material taken from a donor strain of animal.

Dr. Martinez said the successful experiments had overcome the strongest as well as the weakest genetical barriers in mice to acceptance of foreign tissue. He predicted the Minnesota group will begin applying the techniques to humans within a year or two.

He explained that successful use of non-living cells was a breakthrough in experiments to date to produce immunological tolerance to tissue transplants.

It is the immunity mechanism that makes the body reject grafted tissue or transplanted organs from one person to another, except in the cases of identical twins who are identical immunologically.

"Up until seven months ago, we had thought only living tissue could produce immunological tolerance," Dr. Martinez said. "The danger of injecting live cells, however, was that the donor material could induce immunological disease in the recipient by attacking the host tissue, making it susceptible to infection which could severely damage its health or result in death."

(MORE)

In an interview in Minneapolis prior to the Federation meeting, Dr. Robert A. Good, University research professor of pediatrics who worked with Dr. Martinez, predicted if the technique can be applied to man "it could usher in the transplantation era".

"Its application to humans," he added, "seems only a technical problem."

The Minnesota experiments with mice in building tolerance to transplants from a specific donor involve injections of large doses of spleen cells from the donor strain which have been disrupted, or broken up, by several cycles of freezing and thawing. Injections of the dead cell materials are then given repeatedly to the recipient over a period of several weeks.

Dr. Martinez explained that the disrupted cell material is incapable of producing antibodies, so cannot harm the recipient, but at the same time it still contains the tissue antigens necessary to condition the recipient to accept homografts containing the same antigens.

Antigens are substances within cells capable of producing specific immunological reaction. Given in small quantities, antigens stimulate the immunity mechanism by triggering the production of antibodies. Given in large doses, as in the Minnesota experiments with tissue antigens, they paralyze the capacity of the recipient to react to the specific antigen with which it has been injected.

As a check to determine that the non-living cell material could not harm the recipient, Dr. Martinez' group attempted unsuccessfully to induce immunological disease in animals injected with donor cell material.

One of the problems in applying the procedure to man will be to obtain enough cell material from an individual donor, according to Dr. Martinez and Dr. Good.

(MORE)

The fact that non-living cells can produce tolerance could mean the door is open to use of any kind of tissue for building tolerance, Dr. Martinez said. It had been believed that only lymphoid tissue, such as the spleen, could produce tolerance because of its ability for rapid cell growth.

"Now we think we may be able to use any tissue---lung, kidney, liver, skin," Dr. Martinez said.

Dr. Martinez and Dr. W. D. Kelly, surgery professor, are working on the possibility of using whole blood, of which the white blood cells have been destroyed, as a tolerance builder for tissue transplantation.

"By using blood," Dr. Martinez explained, "we would have a permanent source of conditioning material in the donor."

First experiments at the University of Minnesota with the disrupted cell material were conducted on animals in which the histocompatibility (the ability of accept foreign tissue) differences were weakest---that is, from a male of one strain to a female of the same strain.

The adult female mice were injected with disrupted male donor spleen cells. One group of the adult females received a single dose of spleen material and one week later skin graft from male donors. Another group received injections three times a week for four weeks. At the end of the first week, the injected mice were grafted with male skin. Finally, a third group received no treatment and was similarly grafted with male skin.

It was found, Dr. Martinez reported, that most animals receiving either a single injection of spleen material or no treatment rejected the male transplant. By contrast, those repeatedly injected accepted permanently the male transplant in most instances.

In later experiments, where the genetic differences were stronger, as between animals of different strains, injections were given over a longer period of time, with up to 40 injections over a 12-week period.

In those cases where the grafts have not taken after injections, Dr. Martinez believes it is just a matter of increasing the amount of the injected material in order to induce tolerance. He is conducting further experiments to test this supposition.

Because inbred strains of mice are used in the experiments it has been possible to use injected material from several animals of the same strain. In humans, the conditioning material as well as the skin or organ to be transplanted to another individual would have to come from the same donor.

The Minnesota group has been conducting experiments to produce immunological tolerance in adult life during the last five or six years.

"It did not seem useful to us to look at the embryo and the neonate which had previously been believed to be the only stage at which immunological tolerance could be induced," Dr. Good said, "because it is most often in the adult that transplantation becomes desirable."

Other collaborators in the current experiments with Dr. Martinez and Dr. Good are June M. Smith and Michael Blaese.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Twenty-four University of Minnesota "mermaids" will present their version of forest folklore and animal fantasy at 8 p. m. Friday and Saturday (April 19-20) in the Cooke hall pool on the Minneapolis campus.

"Palms, Pines and Pixies" is the annual water show presented by the University Aquatic League, a student organization of the University's department of physical education for women. Tickets, at 75 cents, may be purchased at the door.

Two of the top feminine divers in the state, Mary Mero, 235 Robie, St. Paul, current low board state champion, and Kathleen Lynch, 7200 Clinton, Richfield, will present a diving exhibition as a special feature of the performance, according to Lela J. Stoner, women's physical education instructor and league coach.

Aquatic "forests" to be depicted in the show will be designated as a jungle forest, the Black Forest and an American forest, Miss Stoner said. The program includes "Red Riding Hood", "Robin Hood", a pixie number, a cannibal number, "Rain", "Green Mansions" and a swan number. Exceptional costumes have been designed for the jungle birds, cannibals and swans, Miss Stoner reported.

Minneapolis --- An Argentine journalist and journalism professor will be the first "visiting scholar" at the University of Minnesota under a grant recently made by the Ford Foundation for faculty exchange with Latin America.

Teodulo Dominguez, 36, director of the Center of Journalistic Extension and Research in Buenos Aires, was approved Friday (April 19) by the University's Board of Regents for a nine months' fellowship, beginning June 17. Dominguez previously had been selected by a national committee composed of representatives from Minnesota and five other universities sharing in the Ford Foundation grant.

The appointment will enable Dominguez to visit University classes and to participate in seminars related to journalism and international affairs. He also will work upon the translation and adaptation of teaching materials for use in Latin American schools of journalism.

Before assuming his present position, Dominguez was a professor in the Argentine School of Journalism, of which he is an honor graduate. The Center of Journalistic Extension and Research in Buenos Aires, which he now directs, is a post-graduate program for a selected group of journalism graduates and journalists who are working to improve the status of journalism education in their country.

Dominguez also is a full-time staff correspondent of "El Sol", a daily published in Avellaneda, the principal industrial suburb of Buenos Aires. He has been a columnist and reporter on other newspapers and has written one journalism textbook.

Other universities sharing in the Ford Foundation exchange program with Minnesota are Columbia, Harvard, California, University of California at Los Angeles and Texas.

NEW MINNESOTA 'U' STATISTICAL CENTER
TO PROVIDE FACULTY, STUDENT RESEARCH AID

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- A statistical center has been organized at the University of Minnesota to provide research assistance to faculty and students and to non-University agencies.

Under the direction of Professor I. Richard Savage, the center will establish permanently a University statistics department service which provides consultation in collecting and analyzing data and in formulating theoretical models underlying experiments.

The center has been organized under the direction of a committee appointed by University President O. Meredith Wilson. Head of the committee is Reuben L. Hill, sociology professor. The faculty of the statistics department will participate as consultants for the center, and three graduate students are assisting in the center as interns. Professor Savage is full-time director.

"Our business, on a consulting basis," Professor Savage said, "is the application of the best statistical techniques to problems under study in various sciences."

The University's statistics department itself is only four years old. Establishment of the center is an indication of the growing role this academic discipline is playing in research in several departments.

"Since World War II," Professor Savage said, "many of the sciences have become more and more probabilistic or experimental in content, with an emphasis on 'model making' as well as careful design of experiments and the analysis of the resulting data."

Professor Savage said statisticians differ on their definitions of probability. His own definition is that probability "is a reflection of what a well-informed person is willing to risk on the outcome of possible events".

"A scientist must weigh the possible consequences of various kinds of research as well as determining guidelines for the actual investigation," Professor Savage explained. "After talking with a client, it might be determined the entire problem as arranged might not yield the anticipated results and should be rearranged."

U. OF M. PROFESSOR
TO ADDRESS BUILDING
CONFERENCE IN GERMANY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

C. E. Lund, professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Minnesota, will address the International Building Industry Congress to be held May 1-3 in Hannover, Germany. The industry congress is being held as a part of the World Trade Fair.

The invitation to appear at the congress, Professor Lund said, came from the Institute for Building Research, Hannover. "Vapor Diffusion, Heat and Weather Protection on Roofs and Building Constructions" will be his topic.

Professor Lund will discuss condensation of moisture within insulated structures, the effects of different types of insulation, the resistance to heat transfers and the effects of solar radiation, both from a human and an economic standpoint.

He will emphasize the failures of built-up roofs, causes of such failures and solutions to the problems involved. Built-up roof failure, Professor Lund said, has become very serious throughout the United States, and studies now are being conducted here as well as in Australia and Europe in an attempt to solve the problems involved.

Willis E. Dugan, University of Minnesota professor of educational psychology and director of counselor education, was elected president of the American Personnel and Guidance association (APGA) at the organization's annual national convention in Boston.

He will take office May 1.

Professor Dugan has held office in three of the APGA's six divisions: president of the Association for Counselor Education and Supervision, past president of the Student Personnel Association for Teacher Education, and former trustee of the National Vocational Guidance association.

He also has been APGA's treasurer, chairman of the committee on professional preparation and standards, members of the research awards committee and co-chairman of the committee on counselor education standards.

A member and chairman of the Minnesota State Board of Examiners of Psychologists, Professor Dugan currently is a member of the Minnesota State Advisory Committee on Guidance and the executive board of the Minnesota Counselors association.

In 1960, he was appointed as one of the consultants to Arthur S. Flemming, then Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and to Lawrence G. Derthick, at that time Commissioner of Education, on matters relating to the National Defense Education Act (NDEA).

Professor Dugan also has served as director of three NDEA guidance and counseling institutes at the University.

Author of numerous professional articles, Professor Dugan is co-author, with C. Gilbert Wrenn, of "Guidance Procedures in High School" and has been editor of the periodical Counseling Points of View.

Minneapolis --- The University of Minnesota has been selected as one of 80 test centers in the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada to administer the annual Certified Professional Secretary (CPS) examination. More than 1,400 secretaries will take the examination Friday and Saturday, May 3 and 4. At the University, the examination will be given in Room 208 Vincent hall.

Announcement of the University's selection was made jointly by Naomi M. Peterson, assistant professor in the University's school of business administration, and Professor Carlos K. Hayden, chairman of business education at the University of Houston. Professor Hayden is dean of the Institute for Certifying Secretaries, a department of the National Secretaries association.

Inquiries about the Minneapolis examination may be telephoned to Miss Peterson at 373-3576.

The CPS examination is open to all qualified secretaries who meet certain requirements as to education and business, whether or not they are members of the association. These qualifications must be verified and accepted by the Institute for Certifying Secretaries no later than Dec. 1 of the year preceding the examination. Inquiries concerning the 1964 examinations may now be directed to the Institute for Certifying Secretaries, 1103 Grand ave., Kansas City 6, Missouri. The deadline for acceptance of applications is Dec. 1, 1963, for the examination scheduled for May 1 and 2, 1964.

The two-day examination is based on actual secretarial duties and responsibilities and covers six sections: personal adjustment and human relations, business administration, business law, secretarial accounting, secretarial procedures and secretarial skills.

The May examination marks the thirteenth successive year that the CPS examination has been given. Since 1951 a total of 2,500 secretaries including six men have achieved the CPS rating.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Arnold J. Toynbee, British historian, will give the Education Day convocation address Thursday, May 9, at the University of Minnesota at 11:30 a. m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

His topic will be "An Historian Looks at the World Today".

Toynbee, who retired in 1955 after 30 years as a University of London research professor of international history and director of studies at the Royal Institute of International Affairs in England, currently is John R. Heath visiting professor of history at Grinnell college, Grinnell, Iowa.

He will deliver the Dalton LeMasurier Memorial lecture May 10 at the University of Minnesota, Duluth.

Toynbee's last appearance at the University of Minnesota was in November 1955, as a Gideon Seymour Memorial lecturer.

The 74-year-old historian has been awarded numerous degrees and honors by such institutions as Oxford, Cambridge, Columbia and Princeton universities. He has lectured at several schools in the United States and is the author of more than 20 historical books. His best known work is a 12-volume series, "A Study of History", the last volume being published in 1961. Volumes I-III were published in 1934. An abridgement of Volumes I-VI, published in 1947, was on the best-seller list for many weeks.

From 1939 to 1946, Toynbee devoted his time to government service as director of a war-time branch of an institute which became the Research Department of the Foreign Office. He was a member of the British delegation to the Paris Peace Conference in 1946.

Toynbee's lecture at the University will be sponsored by the department of concerts and lectures.

NEWS EXECUTIVES OF FIVE STATES
TO CONFER AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Jenkin Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, and Herbert Richard Davies, longtime director of The Newspaper Society, London, England, will head the list of speakers for the annual News Executive conference Friday, May 3, at the University of Minnesota school of journalism.

News executives from Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin will participate.

Opening session will feature two women writers: Phyllis Singer, women's editor of the Waterloo (Iowa) Daily Courier, and Emily Warden, staff writer for the women's pages of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

Jones, former president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, will speak on "The Inexact Science of Truth Telling". Jones recently has been noted for his writings calling for a revival of discipline and "old-fashioned" good taste in American life. He has been with the Tulsa Tribune since graduating from the University of Wisconsin in 1933.

Davies, who is in this country for three months as a visitor at the University of Southern Illinois, served 25 years as head of The Newspaper Society, the principal newspaper trade association in the United Kingdom. In his address before the news executives, he will describe the scheme of labor negotiation under which British newspapers have operated since a general strike in 1921 and will answer questions about the private professional council of the press formed by the British in 1954 to represent newspapers in relations with the public.

(MORE)

Davies will lead a special seminar Saturday, May 4, on the weekly newspapers of Greater London.

Other topics and speakers on the conference program include:

Legal problems of journalists, Professor Allen H. McCoid, University of Minnesota law professor.

Offset printing for small daily papers, James L. Vance, managing editor of the Worthington (Minn.) Globe.

Training newspaper correspondents, Ray Stougaard, managing editor, Fairmont (Minn.) Sentinel; E. J. Karrigan, editor, Aberdeen (S. D.) American-News; Wallace Morgan, Duluth (Minn.) Herald and News-Tribune.

Psychological testing of prospective employees, Daniel M. Upham, managing editor, Minneapolis Star, and Robert L. Jones, director, University of Minnesota school of journalism.

Legislative reporting, Fred Heaberlin, executive editor, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press; Franklin Rogers, editor, Mankato (Minn.) Free Press; Gene Newhall, capitol reporter, St. Paul Dispatch; Arlen Albrecht, managing editor, Red Wing (Minn.) Republican-Eagle; and Wallace Lindell, city editor, Fargo (N.D.) Forum.

Improved techniques in pictures and in page display, R. Smith Schuneman, photography instructor, and Associate Professor Harold W. Wilson, typographer, both of the school of journalism faculty.

U.N. PRESIDENT
TO ADDRESS 'U'
LAW BANQUET

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- An address by His Excellency, Chandri Sir Muhammad Zafrulla Khan, president of the United Nations General Assembly, and presentation of the University of Minnesota Law School Alumni association's annual award will highlight the annual University law school banquet at 7 p. m. Friday, May 3.

Sir Zafrulla Khan, who became Pakistan's ambassador and permanent representative to the United Nations in 1961, will speak on "The United Nations Today" at the dinner at Capp Towers motor lodge, Minneapolis.

Honored guest and recipient of the law alumni group's award at the banquet will be William L. Prosser, law professor at the University from 1929 to 1942 and former dean of the University of California (Berkeley) law school (1948-61).

The University Law School Alumni award is given annually to a law school alumnus who has brought distinction to the school through scholarship, practice of the law and public service.

The award to Dean Prosser will be presented by Judge Gunnar Nordbye, chairman of the alumni award committee and first recipient of the award, in 1959. Other award winners are Professor Edward S. Bade, 1960; Charles Lilley Horn, 1961; and Norris Darrell, 1962.

A 1918 graduate of Harvard university, Dean Prosser received the bachelor of laws degree from the University of Minnesota in 1928, the same year he was admitted to practice in Minnesota and became associated with the Minneapolis law firm of Dorsey, Colman, Baker, Scott and Barber. He remained with this firm until 1931.

In 1929, he joined the University law school faculty as lecturer. He became a professor in 1933, and in 1943, he left the faculty to return to private practice with the Dorsey firm. He left Minneapolis in 1947 to become a professor on the Harvard law faculty. In 1948, he became dean of the California law school, a post he held until 1961, when he resigned the deanship but remained on the law faculty. Next year, Dean Prosser will become professor of law at the University of California Hastings College of Law in San Francisco.

Dean Prosser, 1959 president of the Association of American Law Schools and recipient in 1955 of the University of Minnesota's Outstanding Achievement award to distinguished alumni, is the author of "The Law of Torts".

All Minnesota lawyers, non-graduates of the University law school as well as graduates, are invited to the banquet. Reservations must be made by Wednesday, May 1, by calling the University law school, 373-2717, or by writing Mrs. Gerry Shephard, Room 125 Fraser hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14. The dinner charge will be $5 per person.

CHOPER TO GIVE
'U' LAW DAY
TALK WEDNESDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- A special convocation at 12:30 p. m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium will mark the University of Minnesota law school's annual observance of Law Day Wednesday (May 1).

"Lawyers throughout the world have selected this day to join in recapturing respect for law and legal institutions," according to the convocation speaker, Jesse H. Choper, University associate professor of law. "We hope, by selecting this particular day as 'Law Day', to emphasize our total disagreement with the 'May Day' celebrations held in Communist countries."

"Public Education and Religious Freedom: Is Godliness Required by the First Amendment?" will be Professor Choper's topic. The public convocation will be sponsored by the University's department of concerts and lectures and the law school.

Professor Choper, 5117 Xerxes ave., N., Minneapolis, is a member of the bar of the District of Columbia and acted as clerk to Chief Justice Earl Warren of the United States Supreme Court, 1960-61. A frequent contributor to the American Bar association award-winning newspaper series discussing recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court, Choper also is co-author, with University law school Dean William B. Lockhart and Professor Yale Kamisar, of the 1962 supplement to Dodd's "Constitutional Law" case book.

MINNESOTA 'U' STUDY LINKS CONGENITAL
DISORDERS, CHROMOSOME ABNORMALITIES

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE-214 MORRILL HALL
MINNEAPOLIS 14, MINNESOTA
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
APRIL 26, 1963

(FOR RELEASE 12 NOON, SUNDAY, APRIL 28)

Minneapolis --- Results of large-scale testing at University of Minnesota Hospitals showing that patients suffering various types of congenital disorders and leukemias have chromosomal abnormalities were reported Sunday (April 28) to the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists.

The report was given at the association's annual meeting in Cincinnati, Ohio, by pathologist Dr. Jorge J. Yunis, director of the University of Minnesota Clinical Genetics Laboratory in the Department of Laboratory Medicine.

His paper, entitled "Chromosomes in Disease", contains findings of the first University of Minnesota survey, undertaken in 1962, on chromosomal abnormalities. The Minnesota study is one of the few large hospital surveys in the United States in what is a new field of pathology and medicine. Of 120 selected cases of suspected chromosomal defects studied during 1962 at the University of Minnesota, 25 per cent bore such abnormalities.

Chromosomal abnormalities have become the subject of research only in the last few years since the discovery in 1956, by Tijio and Levan that there are 46 chromosomes in human cells, instead of 48 as previously believed. This discovery was due chiefly to improved techniques for the separation of chromosomes grown in tissue culture.

It was only in 1959 that the first chromosomal abnormality was reported, which was in cases of mongolism. Since then, several conditions have been shown to be associated with chromosomal defects, which are usually manifested by a variation in the number or structure of chromosomes.

Chromosomes are small bodies within each cell which determine body characteristics, including sex. They are identified by pairs numbered 1-22 and a 23rd pair called sex chromosomes, because they are sex determining, identified as XX in females and XY in males.

Dr. Yunis said the study of chromosomes is now an important factor in the diagnosis of abnormalities of sex development, intersexuality, sterility and some types of mental deficiency. Chromosomes give the genetic counselor a valuable tool in cases of mongolism. It is known that most cases of mongolism are due to non-disjunction (the failure of two chromosomes to separate during cell division), are sporadic and appear with increasing frequency in relation to the mother's age. A few cases, however, are of the hereditary type. These cases, usually found among young parents having mongoloid children, are due to the fact that one chromosome of pair 21 in the mother's cells is attached to a chromosome of another pair and when transmitted into the next generation can give rise to mongoloid children.

The Minnesota studies showed 14 of 19 newborn patients referred for possible mongolism bore 47 instead of the usual number of 46 chromosomes. Two familial cases of mongolism also were observed by Dr. Yunis. The first one was suspected because the mongoloid child had a mongoloid maternal uncle. The clinically normal mother of the child had a chromosomal abnormality in which a No. 21 chromosome was attached to a No. 22 chromosome. The second family was studied because of the presence of mongoloid offspring of two clinically normal sisters. The chromosome studies of both sisters showed a No. 21 chromosome attached to a No. 15 chromosome.

Dr. Yunis' study supported earlier findings that most cases of leukemia bear chromosomal abnormality. In his study, all patients affected with chronic myelogenous leukemia possessed the so-called "Philadelphia chromosome", a shortened No. 21 chromosome.

In searching for new chromosomal abnormalities, Dr. Yunis found an anomaly previously undescribed. The case was that of a 40-year-old woman with multiple cancers of the skin and bone abnormalities. In this case, the number of chromosomes was normal but one of the No. 1 chromosomes had an extra piece. Four other members of the patient's family showed the same chromosomal anomaly, but did not exhibit any signs of disease afflicting the patient.

Approximately one out of 200 newborn babies are now known to bear a defect of the sex chromosomes. These sex anomalies are usually due to the presence in excess or defect of X chromosomes and commonly produce sterility. Other types of sex anomaly are not due to a chromosomal abnormality but the external sex characteristics may be such in some of them as to give an erroneous impression of the true sex. The true sex can now easily be determined by the study of chromosomes.

Minneapolis --- The University of Minnesota's radio station, KUOM, will observe its twenty-fifth anniversary as a full-scale educational broadcasting service Thursday (May 2).

Featured on various programs throughout the day from 10:30 a. m. to sign-off at 7:30 p. m. will be many well-known broadcasting personalities and educators who over the years have taken part in KUOM programming. Among them will be two men heard on May 2, 1938, when KUOM (then WLB) launched its expanded schedule: Professor Burton Paulu, director of the department of radio and television, who then was station manager; and Dean E. W. Ziebarth of the Summer Session, then a member of the University speech department and broadcasting staffs.

KUOM was first licensed in 1922, and is the oldest licensed radio station in Minnesota.

Over the years, KUOM has served as the training ground for hundreds of students who have gone on to successful careers in the broadcasting field. They have worked at KUOM as student employees and have taken part in the activities of the University Radio and Television Guild, a student organization.

Former students, staff members and periodic contributors who will be heard on KUOM during the twenty-fifth anniversary day will include: Bob Ryan, John McDougall, Don Doty, Leigh Kamman and Kenn Barry of KSTP; Dave Moore, Jergen Nash, Roger Ericson, and Maynard Speece of WCCO; Bill Wigginton of WPBC; Ray Christensen of WLOL; George Grim of the Minneapolis Tribune and KMSP-TV;

Lennox Mills, professor of political science; and Northrop Dawson, Jr., former program director of the station, now production manager of EMC Recording corporation, St. Paul.

Some 186 young musicians from 45 Minneapolis and suburban school^s make up the Student Symphonies of Greater Minneapolis which will present a free public concert in Northrop Memorial auditorium at 4:30 p.m. Sunday (May 5) at the University of Minnesota.

Howard Evenson, musical director and orchestral teacher in the Minneapolis public schools, organizer and director of the symphonies, will lead them in their twenty-ninth appearance in the Twin Cities.

The Junior Symphony is made up of 91 children from third grade through junior high school while the 95-piece Youth Orchestra accepts members through senior high school, Evenson said. Founded in 1957-8 with the aid of the Minnesota Federation of Music clubs, the orchestras played their first concert in June 1958. Fifteen "charter members" who played in this first concert will appear in the Northrop concert.

The Youth Orchestra's concertmistress, violinist Anita Halverson, 17, will be making her last appearance with the orchestra Sunday. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.H. Halverson, Jr., 5133 Dupont ave., S., Minneapolis, Anita is a charter member of the Student Symphonies. She also is concertmistress of the Minneapolis Washburn high school orchestra and of the All-City Secondary school orchestra.

The Junior Orchestra will open the program:

"Jig"-----Thomas Arne
"Divertimento"-----Josef Haydn
"Largo and Minuet"-----Josef Haydn
"Who Is Sylvia?"-----Franz Schubert
"March Militaire"-----Franz Schubert
Finale from "Carnival"-----Robert Schumann

Following the intermission, the Youth Orchestra will play:

Overture to the opera, "Lucio Silla"-----Mozart
"La Traviata" Fantasy-----Verdi
"Pavanne"-----Morton Gould
"Circus"-----Ernst Toch

The overture to the opera "Lucio Silla" cast in miniature symphonic form, is most appropriate for presentation by the youngsters in these orchestras, according to Evenson. It was written by Mozart when he was 16.

INDUSTRIAL NURSES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Let's Look at Mental Health" will be the theme of the University of Minnesota's 23rd annual Institute for Occupational Nurses May 9-10 at the Center for Continuation Study.

Institute participants will tackle one of the most complicated problems facing an industrial nurse --- the extent to which she can care for the mental health of employes and become involved in counseling them, according to R. Kay Humphrey, Continuation center program director.

"The program," Humphrey said, "is designed to develop an understanding of the extent to which the occupational health nurse can meet the expectations of her management, the employes in her firm and the physician to whom she reports in the area of emotional problems and mental health."

Guest faculty will include industrial psychologists, physicians, representatives of community agencies and occupational health nurses.

Cyril R. Mill, Minneapolis psychologist, will open the conference at 9 a. m. Thursday, May 9, with a "Report of a Survey of Mental Health Responsibilities of Occupational Health Nurses". He also will give a demonstration of counseling at Friday's (May 10) 1:30 p. m. session and will conclude the conference that afternoon with a consideration of "What's Next" in the area of mental health as it involves the occupational health nurse.

Jeanette A. Malberg, Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator company occupational health nurse, will speak on "What the Employe Expects the Occupational Health Nurse To Do". Robert Bloomberg, Austin, Mower County Mental Health Clinic psychologist and program director, will discuss "What the Occupational Health Nurse Can and Cannot Do". George L. Shapiro, University assistant professor of speech and theater arts, will give a lecture on "Listening and Counseling". Dr. Donald O. Osborn, Austin, staff physician of the George A. Hormel company, will speak on "The Doctor's Role in Treatment and Referral and What He Expects the Occupational Health Nurse To Do". Howard R. Davis, Minnesota state public welfare department chief of psychological services and research coordinator, will talk on "Consultation and Continuity".

The Minnesota state health department and the Minnesota League for Nursing will cooperate with the University's Continuation center in presenting the course.

Minneapolis --- Plans for a University of Minnesota Alumni club in the new Sheraton-Ritz hotel in downtown Minneapolis were announced Tuesday (April 30) by E. L. Haislet, executive director of the Minnesota Alumni association. The new club will open about Sept. 1.

Facilities of the club --- on the hotel's lobby floor --- will include a dining room, three private dining-conference rooms, kitchen, lounge, cocktail lounge, office and checkroom. All food served will be prepared in the club's kitchen. Bar and dining service will be open throughout the day and evening.

"Since the association was organized in 1903," Haislet commented Tuesday, "this is the first time Minnesota alumni will have their own club where they can meet friends, classmates and business associates and where they can renew old acquaintances and meet other University graduates. The club will provide University alumni with a downtown haven where they can dine, confer and relax."

Membership in the new club, according to Haislet, is open to all graduates and former students of the University who are members or who will become members of the Minnesota Alumni association. Two kinds of membership are available, resident and non-resident. Resident members are those who have their homes or principal places of business in Hennepin, Ramsey, Dakota, Washington, Scott, Carver or Anoka counties. Non-resident members are those who live or operate their businesses outside those seven counties.

The club will be governed by a board of directors which will have overlapping membership with the board of directors of the Alumni association, Haislet reported.

U OF M ENGINEERS
READY FOR ANNUAL
E-DAY OBSERVANCE

APRIL 30, 1963

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis--- Traditional embellishments such as the "Blarney stone", St.Pat, Queen Colleen and the "wearin' of the green" will enliven the annual observance of Engineers' Day---E-Day--- Friday (May 3) at the University of Minnesota.

The annual engineers' convocation, customarily a part of E-Day, will be held one day earlier, Thursday (May 2) at 11:30 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Raymond L. Bisplinghoff, director of the Office of Advance Research and Technology in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will speak on "Research---Key to Space". The public convocation will be sponsored jointly by the E-Day committee and the University's department of concerts and lectures.

Open house tours of many of the Institute of Technology's departmental exhibits and of commercial displays of engineering material and equipment will be held Thursday from 12 noon until 10 p.m. The tours will be guided by engineering students and will take the visitors through many of the engineering buildings on Church street (17th ave.) S.E. between Washington and University avenues.

Open houses also will be held on E-Day Friday (May 3) from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and special tours for high school students will be conducted from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

Bands, floats, marchers, Queen Colleen candidates and general "high jinks" will make up Friday's E-Day parade on the University campus. This year, the route will not enter downtown Minneapolis. The parade is scheduled to start at 11:20 a.m. and will wind up at 11:45 a.m. by escorting the queen candidates to the court east of the Main Engineering building where the engineers will cheer the knighting of St.Pat, salute the Blarney stone and learn the identity of their new Queen Colleen.

The E-Day picnic will be held in the Main Engineering building court, weather permitting. In case of rain, it will be moved to the University Field House.

The E-Day Brawl in the St.Paul hotel from 9 p.m.Saturday (May 4) to 1 a.m. Sunday (May 5) will complete the 1963 celebration of the University engineers' holiday. Tickets for the dance may be purchased at the door.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

His Excellency, Chandri Sir Muhammad Zafrulla Khan, president of the United Nations General Assembly, will address members of the University of Minnesota Law School Alumni association at the group's annual banquet at 7 p. m. Friday (May 3). The dinner will be held at Capp Towers motor lodge in Minneapolis.

Sir Zafrulla Khan, who became Pakistan's ambassador and permanent representative to the United Nations in 1961, will speak on "The United Nations Today".

Honored guest and recipient of the University Law Alumni association's award at the dinner will be William L. Prosser, law professor at the University from 1929 to 1942 and former dean of the University of California (Berkeley) law school.

The University Law School Alumni award is given annually to a law school alumnus who has brought distinction to the school through scholarship, practice of the law and public service.

The award to Dean Prosser, now a law professor on the Berkeley campus, will be presented by Judge Gunnar Nordbye, chairman of the alumni award committee and first recipient of the honor.

Dean Prosser, 1959 president of the Association of American Law Schools and recipient, in 1955, of the University's Outstanding Achievement award to distinguished alumni, is the author of "The Law of Torts".

All Minnesota lawyers, non-graduates of the University law school as well as graduates, are invited to the banquet. The dinner charge will be $5 per person.

Minneapolis --- The first "look" at the 1963 football Gophers in action, campus tours, spring gardening tips from an expert, conferences with student counselors and a barbecued chicken picnic supper will highlight the annual University of Minnesota Parents' Day observance Saturday, May 11.

Willard L. Thompson, assistant to President O. Meredith Wilson, will address the parents in the University Armory after a picnic supper there. He will speak on "The University Tomorrow".

The annual campus event for fathers and mothers of students is sponsored by the University Dads' association.

Parents attending the festivities will be given their choice of watching the annual spring intra-squad football game from 2 to 4:30 p. m. in Memorial Stadium (as well as the baseball game and track meet preceding it, if they wish) or taking tours of the campus from 2 to 3 p. m. before returning to Coffman Memorial Union for a talk on spring gardening by Professor Leon C. Snyder, head of the University's horticulture department. The athletic events will be part of the University's Spring Sports Day.

University student counseling bureau staff members will meet with the parents and share refreshments from 4:30 to 6 p. m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium. After this discussion session, the picnic supper will be waiting in the Armory, just across 17th ave., S. E., from the museum. Members of the University Poultry Science club will barbecue the chicken.

Reservations for Parents' Day---$1.75 each---may be made with the University Dads' association, 200 Eddy hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14. Tickets are for the full schedule of activities, including the sports events at which parents will be the guests of the University athletic department.

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARDS
GIVEN TWO U.OF M. PROFESSORS

Two University of Minnesota Institute of Technology faculty members Friday (May 3) became the first recipients of a new Distinguished Teaching Award for faculty members of the institute.

Professor Edward P. Ney, physics, and Keith S. Champlin, associate professor of electrical engineering, were presented with the newly created honor by Dean Athelstan Spilhaus of the institute at the annual Engineers' Day ceremonies on the Minneapolis campus.

Initial suggestion for the awards and money for their support were contributed by an Institute of Technology alumnus, George W. Taylor, class of 1934.

In writing to Dean Spilhaus of his idea, Taylor said: "Remembering my student days, there were some instructors who made drudgery out of what should have been an extremely interesting subject and others who were a real inspiration to their students. I believe I have heard of some schools where there is an award for these outstanding and inspiring teachers..... such a person might be a laboratory assistant or instructor or he might be the most learned full professor on the staff."

"I find that the suggestion you make is an excellent one", Dean Spilhaus commented in thanking Taylor. "We do not have too many ways in which we can express tangible recognition for excellence in teaching".

The Distinguished Teaching Award citation to Professor Ney---"To Edward P. Ney: for his inspiring teaching at both undergraduate and graduate levels; for his active participation in the development of honors courses in physics; for his imaginative approach to the development of special materials for these courses; and for his stimulating effect on graduate students in their research activities, we present this Distinguished Teaching Award for 1963".

Professor Champlin's citation---- "To Keith S. Champlin: for his dedication to good teaching to both undergraduate and graduate students; for his participation in the development of a modern curriculum for undergraduate electrical engineers; and for his stimulating and enthusiastic efforts as a research advisor for graduate students in electrical engineering, we present this Distinguished Teaching Award for 1963.

MINNESOTA 'U' RECEIVES $500,000
BEQUEST FOR ARTS COLLEGE FACULTY,
GRADUATE STUDENT TRAVEL AND STUDY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Arts college faculty members and graduate students who have completed a four-year liberal arts course will benefit from a $500,000 bequest received by the University of Minnesota Monday (May 6) from the estate of Putnam D. McMillan, former vice president of General Mills, who died April 7, 1961 in Santa Barbara, Calif., at the age of 79.

A check for the amount of the bequest was turned over Monday to L. R. Lunden, University vice president for business administration and secretary of the Board of Regents, by L. A. Short, vice president of the First National bank of Minneapolis.

In his will, McMillan, a 1903 graduate of the University, provided that the bequest shall be held by the University as a separate fund known as the "McMillan Fund" and that the net income shall be used "for professorships and fellowships".

McMillan specified that the professorships be awarded to faculty members of the college of science, literature and the arts "for travel and study in foreign countries or in this country". The award also may be made to arts college faculty members during the first year after their retirement.

The fellowships are to be given to University graduate students, "who have completed at least a four-year course in a college of liberal arts and are engaged at the time of their appointment in graduate study at the University of Minnesota, for the purpose of enabling such selected students to pursue study for specified periods in universities or institutions of higher learning located in foreign countries or in this country".

Recipients of the awards, to be known as the Putnam Dana McMillan professorships and fellowships, are to be selected by the University Regents.

"This very significant bequest," Lunden commented Monday, "in terms of awards to faculty, is one of the first such received by the Regents and will be of inestimable value. Similarly, the fellowships which are provided are of equal significance because they will permit selected qualified graduate students to study abroad."

McMillan, who lived in Wayzata, Minn., and Santa Barbara, was president of the P. D. McMillan Land company of Minneapolis and had served as a General Mills vice president from 1928 to 1946. He also was a director of General Mills. He was honorary chairman of the board of trustees of the Minneapolis Society of Fine Arts and a trustee of the Santa Barbara Art museum.

Executors of the McMillan will, along with the First National bank of Minneapolis, are Leslie N. Perrin and Charles W. Crosby of Minneapolis.

NEW FAR EASTERN LANGUAGE INSTITUTE
PLANNED BY MIDWESTERN UNIVERSITIES

(FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, MAY 9)

Minneapolis---Eleven major midwestern universities, including the University of Minnesota, will extend their educational "common market" into intensive Far Eastern language instruction through a $256,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

The award -- made to the Committee on Institutional Cooperation (CIC) -- will enable the universities to hold rotating summer Far Eastern language institutes over a four-year period, beginning in the summer of 1963 at the University of Michigan. The CIC, a group formed several years ago by the 11 presidents to stimulate voluntary cooperation, includes -- in addition to Minnesota and Michigan -- the following universities:

University of Chicago, University of Illinois, Indiana university, State University of Iowa, Michigan State university, Northwestern university, The Ohio State university, Purdue university and University of Wisconsin.

Faculty for the initial Far Eastern Language Institute will be drawn chiefly from the Chinese and Japanese teaching staffs of CIC institutions. Specialists from universities outside the CIC will be added for certain courses.

The 1963 institute will be open to all qualified persons without restriction -- both at the graduate and undergraduate levels -- but participation of students from other CIC universities is especially being encouraged. Such students will pay whichever summer tuition is lower, that charged by their home institutions or by the University of Michigan.

Stanley J. Wenberg, University of Minnesota vice president for educational relations and development and the University's CIC representative, said the arrangement is another major step in the CIC's long-range effort to avoid costly duplication of effort and expenditures and to assist in orderly academic expansion when such expansion is desirable. He added: "The Ford Foundation grant culminates more than two years of intensive study and planning by the CIC deans of liberal arts and the joint Far Eastern language faculties."

Professor Joseph K. Yamagiwa, chairman of the department of Far Eastern languages and literatures at the University of Michigan, is chairman of the CIC Far Eastern language faculty committee and will serve as director of the 1963 institute. Location of the three following institutes has not yet been determined.

The Michigan department head emphasized that instruction will range from beginning courses through faculty-graduate student seminars at the advanced level. Future institutes on other campuses will be closely coordinated with work at Michigan this summer and with course offerings of the various universities during the regular academic year.

In addition to providing formal instruction in Chinese and Japanese languages, the Ford grant will support 30 undergraduate scholarships per summer, a series of faculty conferences, the preparation of instructional materials, and evaluation programs. For the 1963 institute 30 additional graduate fellowships will be made available by the U. S. Office of Education through National Defense Education act funds. (Application for the various awards may be made to the Michigan department of Far Eastern languages and literatures through May 15.)

"The four summer institutes will upgrade the teaching of Far Eastern languages in CIC institutions by doing cooperatively what would be impossible to accomplish singly," Professor Yamagiwa concluded.

(MORE)

The series of institutes is the first phase in the development of a broad CIC master plan on cooperation in offering uncommon languages. Deans of liberal arts in the CIC universities are directing this development.

Since its establishment in 1958, the CIC has encouraged and sponsored voluntary cooperation in a variety of fields. Among its recent accomplishments is a plan to encourage graduate students to move freely from one institution to another. This innovation, called the CIC Traveling Scholar program, will begin in September of 1963.

The CIC staff office is located on the Purdue university campus, Lafayette, Ind. The Purdue Research Foundation will serve as fiscal agent in administering the Ford Foundation grant.

Presidents of the cooperating universities have designated an administrator from each campus to serve on the CIC. Chairman of the CIC is Frederic Heimberger, vice president for instruction and dean of faculties at Ohio State. Vice President Wenberg is Minnesota's member. Other CIC members are:

Robert L. Clodius, vice president, academic affairs, University of Wisconsin; Ralph L. Collins, vice president and dean of faculties, Indiana university; R. W. Harrison, vice president and dean of faculties, University of Chicago; Lyle H. Lanier, executive vice president and provost, University of Illinois; Donald R. Mallett, vice president and executive dean, Purdue university; Howard R. Neville, acting provost (acting CIC member), Michigan State university; J. Lyndon Shanley, associate dean, College of Liberal Arts, Northwestern university; John C. Weaver, vice president for research and dean of the Graduate College, State University of Iowa; and Robert L. Williams, administrative dean, University of Michigan.

'U' HISTORICAL SOCIETY COLLECTING
EASTERN EUROPEAN IMMIGRANT ARCHIVES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- The University of Minnesota and the Minnesota Historical society have begun a collection, in the state and throughout the country, of the archives of Eastern European immigrant organizations in the United States.

The collection will include materials in Slovene, Croatian, Serbian, Finnish, Italian, Polish, Russian, Greek and other Eastern European languages, groups which are found in significant number in Minnesota, particularly on the Iron Range, according to Professor Edward B. Stanford, director of University Libraries.

Organizations whose records will be sought include national and regional fraternal orders, clubs, churches and private associations.

"No research center exists in the United States where scholars can find extensive collections of materials concerning recent immigrants to America from the Eastern European countries," according to Professor Stanford. "Minnesota, a state whose population contains significant numbers of all these groups, hitherto has had no central collection."

Gathering of the historical papers is an outgrowth of the University's Iron Range Project --- a study by four historians of the role of education in the life of the people of the Minnesota Iron Range towns. Timothy L. Smith, associate professor of history and education whose special field of interest is American educational history, directs the work of this group. Other members of the research team are Hyman Berman, associate professor of history and a labor historian; Clarke A. Chambers, associate professor of history and a specialist in the history of social work in America, and William E. Wright, associate professor of history, whose specialization is Central and Eastern European history.

(MORE)

Professor Wright is in Austria this year on a Fulbright grant and recently visited Ljubljana and Zagreb, Yugoslavia, in search of materials relating to emigration to the United States.

These scholars are now engaged in collecting materials of ethnic groups and associations in the Minnesota Iron Range towns. They also have planned individual trips to other cities in the United States to collect materials.

Impetus for the University collection was the receipt by the University Library of a gift from the Slovene National Benefit society of the archives of the Yugoslav Socialist Federation, which had been located by Professor Smith, and a gift of the records of the Finnish Work Peoples college, Duluth.

Russell Fridley, director of the Minnesota Historical society, and Professor Stanford have worked out an agreement whereby the society will collect materials pertaining to Minnesota and the upper Mississippi valley at its library in St. Paul, and materials of national and international significance will be housed at the University's Walter library. The University has arranged for a manuscripts room and the appointment of a manuscripts curator to supervise its portion of the collection.

STIMULATION OF CREATIVE WORK IN DRAMA,
THEATER, AIM OF NEW PROGRAM AT 'U'

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE-214 MORRILL HALL

TELEPHONE: 373-2137
MAY 9, 1963

(FOR RELEASE 10 A. M. FRIDAY, MAY 10)

Minneapolis --- A program aimed at making the University of Minnesota and the Twin Cities area a center for the emergence of new and creative work in the theater---bringing to the area leading playwrights, directors, producers and actors---was announced Friday (May 10).

Impetus for the program is a $74,000 grant to the University from the Rockefeller Foundation which was accepted Friday by the University Board of Regents.

The grant will supplement the present work of the University Theater staff, the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre and other persons in the Twin Cities interested in theater in a search for ways of establishing a climate conducive to the production of "genuinely creative work in drama and the theater", according to Professor Donald K. Smith, chairman of the department of speech and theater arts and of the planning committee for the grant project.

"Initially," Professor Smith explained, "the grant will be used for a study program---to explore the problems that inhibit the development of drama and theater, and to look for ways in which new creative work can be stimulated. One of the assumptions on which this program is based is that the American theater needs to foster the production of new drama, appropriate in form and statement to our own immensely complicated age."

Reasons for looking to the possibility of creating this climate in this area, Smith added, is that Minnesota already has the resources of a major university with a major department of theater arts, of the new Tyrone Guthrie repertory theater and of vigorous development in community theater throughout the Twin Cities area.

(MORE)

Arthur H. Ballet, associate professor of speech and theater arts and executive secretary of the grant project, already has begun conversations on trips to New York and California with leading professionals in the theater to explore the possibility of developing the program and of finding out what the problems are facing the theater today.

To date, he has met with several leaders in the theater, including playwrights William Inge, Robert Anderson and Lawrence and Lee, producers Robert Whitehead and Norris Houghton and critic Eric Bentley, as well as college and university playwrights and directors.

"These conversations with outstanding people in the theater will be continued in the months ahead," Professor Smith said. "Our plan also is to bring these people to the Twin Cities to continue these discussions. We hope to be able to formulate from these meetings the next step which development of the theater can take at the University of Minnesota and in the Twin Cities."

Focus of this program likely will be on playwrighting, according to Smith, although the program will be aimed at theater as a total art form.

Professor Smith is chairman of the project planning committee, which includes as members Oliver Rea and Peter Zeisler of the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre, and Professor Frank M. Whiting, director of University Theater, and Willard L. Thompson, assistant to University President O. Meredith Wilson.

Smith said a procedure also is being set up under the direction of David W. Thompson, professor of speech and theater arts, for bringing members of the University faculty from other departments into the program. Plans also are to establish a project committee on a community level.

Minneapolis --- Parents of University of Minnesota students will be the guests of the University athletic department for the annual Spring Sports Day Saturday (May 11). Others, more garden-minded, will attend a lecture on spring gardening hints. The concurrent events are programmed for the annual Parents' Day observance at the University.

Conferences with student counselors, a barbecued chicken supper and a talk on "The University Tomorrow", by Willard L. Thompson, assistant to President O. Meredith Wilson, will complete the program sponsored by the University Dads' association.

Parents attending the festivities may come early for the sports program featuring the Gopher-Boilermaker double-header baseball game at Delta field at 11 a. m., the Minnesota-Wisconsin track meet at Memorial stadium at 12:30 p.m., and the "first look" at the 1963 football Gophers in action in the stadium at 2 p. m.

Campus tours from 2 to 3 p. m. will precede a talk on spring gardening for green-thumbed parents. Professor Leon C. Snyder, head of the University's horticulture department, will discuss "Spring in Minnesota" in Coffman Memorial union.

University student counseling bureau staff members will meet with the parents and share refreshments from 4:30 to 6 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium. After this discussion session, the picnic supper will be waiting in the Armory, just across 17th ave., S. E., from the museum. Members of the University Poultry Science club will barbecue the chicken.

Reservations for Parents' Day---$1.75 each---may be made with the University Dads' association, 200 Eddy hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14. Tickets are for the full schedule of events including the chicken dinner.

U.S. GOVT. DOCUMENTS DEPOSITORY

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE-214 MORRILL HALL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis ---The University of Minnesota Walter Library has been designated as a regional documents depository for all United States Government publications by action of the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., according to Professor Edward B. Stanford, University libraries director. The directive goes into effect immediately.

A new law passed in August 1962, created these regional documents depositories, of which Minnesota's is the third to be established in the country. Wisconsin and New York also have similar depositories.

Arrangements for having the University Library designated as a regional documents depository were worked out with the cooperation of the library division of the state department of education with the support of United States Senator Hubert H. Humphrey.

The new status for the University library means that it will receive automatically as issued, each new or revised government document authorized for distribution to depository libraries.

The 14 libraries in Minnesota currently designated as official depositories will continue to receive such publications as they may request, but may now arrange to dispose of items no longer needed, Professor Stanford reported, as the University library's regional depository will retain one copy of every government publication. This will assure the permanent availability of one complete file in the state for future use.

The official depository libraries are: the libraries of St. John's university, Collegeville; Duluth public library; Minneapolis public library; State college, Moorhead; Carleton and St. Olaf colleges, Northfield; the Minnesota Historical society, St. Paul; the Minnesota State Law library, State Capitol building, St. Paul; St. Paul public library; Gustavus Adolphus college, St. Peter; Stillwater library; Kandiyohi County-Willmar library; St. Cloud State college and the University of Minnesota, Duluth.

"This new arrangement for keeping these permanent records at the University library," Stanford said, "not only assures a more complete collection of government publications at the University---it also permits a greater sharing of documents, as duplicates become available, among libraries that may not presently be eligible as official depositories."

ECONOMIST TO GIVE
GUY STANTON FORD
LECTURES AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Kenneth E. Boulding, English-born economist, poet and philosopher, will give three Guy Stanton Ford Memorial lectures Friday, Sunday and Monday (May 17, 19,20) at the University of Minnesota.

The free, public lectures honor the late Guy Stanton Ford, who served as University president from 1938 to 1941 and as dean of the graduate school for 25 years.

Boulding, University of Michigan economics professor, is the author of a book of poetry as well as nine volumes on economics. He has been honored by various professional organizations both for his accomplishments as an economist and a philosopher.

His first Ford lecture, on "The Infant Science of Conflict Management", will be given at 4 p. m. Friday (May 17) in Murphy hall auditorium.

He will speak on "Peace As An Economic Problem" at 8 p. m. Sunday (May 19) in Mayo Memorial auditorium.

His final lecture, on "The Conflict of Freedom and Justice as Economic Ideals", will be presented at 11:30 a. m. Monday (May 20) in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium.

Professor Boulding was born in Liverpool, England, and received the bachelor and master of arts degrees from Oxford university. He came to the United States in 1932 to study as a Commonwealth fellow at the University of Chicago. After serving as an assistant on the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, faculty for three years, he returned to this country in 1937 to join the faculty of Colgate university. He also taught at Fisk university and Iowa State college before joining the University of Michigan faculty in 1949.

Boulding's varied interests are reflected both in the positions he has held in professional organizations and in the subjects of his writings. His books include "Economics of Peace", "The Image", "Linear Programming and the Theory of the Firm", "Conflict and Defense", and a volume of sonnets entitled "There Is a Spirit". His pamphlets include such titles as "The Practice of the Love of God" and "Religious Perspectives of College Teaching in Economics".

He was elected a fellow of the American Philosophical society in 1960. In 1962, he was given the American Council of Learned Societies prize for distinguished scholarship in the humanities. He was elected a fellow of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences in 1954 and of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1958. The American Economics association awarded him the John Bates Clark Medal in 1949. He served as president of the Society for General Systems Research in 1957-59.

His lectures at the University of Minnesota will be sponsored by the University's advisory council for arts and letters, the Graduate School Research center and the department of concerts and lectures.

Minneapolis --- Two University of Minnesota alumni of the class of 1913 will be given the University's Outstanding Achievement Award Wednesday (May 22).

William M. Steinke, president of the Peavey Company Flour Mills, Minneapolis, will be honored at a luncheon marking the 50th anniversary of the Class of 1913. The luncheon will be at 1 p. m. in Coffman Memorial Union junior ballroom. University President O. Meredith Wilson will present the award, which consists of a citation and a medal, to Steinke.

Dr. Margaret Warwick McCullough, Buffalo, N. Y., who has had a career as a pathologist, educator and leader in women's organizations, will receive the Achievement award at the annual meeting of the Minnesota Alumnae club at 6 p. m. in the Campus Club of Coffman Memorial Union. Mrs. Marjorie J. Howard, University regent, will present the award to Dr. McCullough.

The University's Outstanding Achievement Award is presented to alumni who have distinguished themselves in their chosen fields.

Steinke, who lives at 4520 Browndale avenue, Minneapolis, will be honored as a "distinguished leader in one of America's great basic industries". He began his career in the flour milling industry after his graduation from the University in 1913. He entered the field as a flour salesman and rose steadily to executive positions. As one of the two co-managers of the King Midas Flour Mills in the 1930's and 1940's, he helped to build the Millers' National federation to a position as one of the leading national trade associations.

He has held his present position since 1958, when the division he heads was known as the Russell Miller-King Midas Mills division of F. H. Peavey & Company. The name was changed this year to Peavey Company Flour Mills.

He has been active on the Minneapolis Park Board and in the Rotary club. A native of Sleepy Eye, Minn., he is married and the couple has a son and a daughter.

CAP AND GOWN DAY RITES WEDNESDAY

(FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, MAY 19, 1963)

Minneapolis --- Approximately 7,000 University of Minnesota honor students and scholarship and award winners will be given formal recognition Wednesday (May 22) at the annual Cap and Gown Day convocation on the Minneapolis campus.

It also will be the day for members of the 1963 June graduating class to make their first public appearance in academic costume.

The convocation, open free to the public, will begin at 11:30 a. m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium. Dean Harold Macy of the institute of agriculture, who will retire June 30, after 44 years on the faculty and 10 years as head of the institute, will address the assembly of students, their families and friends. His topic will be "Honor and Duty". It is traditional at the University for a retiring faculty member to give the Cap and Gown Day address.

Members of the graduating class and the faculty, with President O. Meredith Wilson last in the line, will march in procession from Coffman Memorial Union through the campus Mall into the auditorium for the convocation. The procession will begin at 11:25 a.m. Leading the march will be the mace bearer Professor Ike J. Armstrong, director of the department of physical education and athletics, who also will retire June 30.

The University Concert and Symphony bands under the direction of Bandmaster Frank Bencriscutto will play from the steps of the auditorium during the procession.

Another traditional event of Cap and Gown Day ceremonies is the reunion of the University's 50-year alumni. Members of the Class of 1913 will sit in chairs in front of Northrop auditorium for the procession and will march into the auditorium after the president. The class reunion luncheon will be held in Coffman Memorial Union junior ballroom immediately after the convocation.

(MORE)

Inside the auditorium, Associate Professor Heinrich Fleischer, University organist, will play the processional music.

The convocation program will include brief remarks by President Wilson and by Norman T. Uphoff, senior in the college of science, literature and the arts and former Minnesota Student association president.

Dean Bryce L. Crawford of the graduate school will present to the faculty and to the audience the members of honor societies, the recipients of scholarships, fellowships and awards, honor students and the members of the graduating class.

Edmund G. Williamson, dean of students, will preside over the ceremonies.

The Reverend Thomas Payne, director of the Wesley Methodist Foundation on the campus, will give the invocation. Roy A. Schuessler, music professor, will lead the audience in singing the National Anthem at the beginning of the program and "Hail! Minnesota", the University's Alma Mater, at the conclusion.

A brief concert will be played before the Cap and Gown Day procession starts by the University carillonneur, Daniel Chorzempa, a senior in the college of science, literature and the arts, on the Frances Miller Brown Memorial bells in Northrop auditorium.

MOVE QUARTERS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Several University of Minnesota offices offering public service have been relocated on the Minneapolis campus in recent weeks to make way for a new classroom building.

These services occupied three wooden buildings at Washington and 15th avenues, S. E., erected as temporary structures after World War II to meet the critical need for building space caused by the influx of veterans attending the University under the G. I. Bill of Rights.

The temporaries, as they are called, will be replaced by a $1,200,000 science classroom building. Construction of the new building will begin as soon as razing of the three wooden structures, which is underway now, has been completed.

Those departments which have been moved out of the temporaries---Temporary South of Mines (TSM) a, b and c---are:

The State Organization Service, including the International Center for Students and Visitors, the League of Women Voters of Minnesota, the Minnesota Welfare association, the Children's Plea for Peace, Pen Pals and the World Affairs center, have moved from TSMc to the Social Science building on the west bank of the Minneapolis campus.

The student activities bureau has relocated from TSMa to a temporary building north of Appleby hall on 15th avenue, S. E.

The department of industrial relations, the Industrial Relations center and the labor education program have moved from TSMb to the School of Business Administration building on the west bank.

The women's continuing education program has moved from TSMA to the temporary north of Appleby hall.

Relocation of several academic departments also has resulted from the opening of the new buildings on the west bank. English, American Studies and mortuary science departments are now located in Vincent hall, former home of the school of business administration. Statistics, philosophy and arts college mathematics departments and the humanities division of interdisciplinary programs now occupy space vacated in Ford hall by social science departments now on the west bank.

Departments remaining in Folwell hall will relocate to take advantage of the space vacated by the English and mathematics departments. The department of plant services, located on the ground floor of Morrill hall, will move to the ground floor of Folwell hall.

H S SENIORS MUST SIGN FOR COLLEGE
TESTS BY JUNE 1

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Minnesota high school seniors have only until Saturday, June 1, to register for the last examination of the American College Testing Program being held this school term, according to Ralph F. Berdie, Minnesota ACT state coordinator.

The examination, to be administered Saturday, June 22, is required or recommended for admission to more than 700 colleges and universities participating in the nation-wide ACT program, reported Berdie, director of the University of Minnesota student counseling bureau. These include the following Minnesota colleges which require or recommend the testing: Austin Junior college, Augsburg college, Bemidji state college, Bethany Lutheran college, Brainerd junior college, College of St. Benedict, College of St. Scholastica, Concordia college (Moorhead), Corcordia college (St. Paul), Crosier seminary, Dr. Martin Luther college, Ely Junior college, Eveleth Junior college, Fergus Falls Junior college, Hibbing Junior college, Mankato State college, Minneapolis School of Art, Moorhead State college, Rochester Junior college, St. Cloud State college, St. Mary's college, St. Mary's School of Nursing, Mounds-Midway School of Nursing (St. Paul), University of Minnesota (all campuses), Virginia Junior college, Winona State college and Willmar Community college.

Consequently, high school seniors seeking admission to any of the ACT-affiliated colleges or universities should register for the tests before the June 1 deadline, Berdie advised.

COLLEGE TESTS

The following is a list of centers in Minnesota at which the ACT test will be administered: Austin Junior college, Bemidji State college, Brainerd Junior college, Dr. Martin Luther college, Ely Junior college, Fergus Falls Junior college, Hibbing Junior college, Mankato State college, Moorhead State college, Rochester Junior college, St. Cloud State college, University of Minnesota at Duluth, Minneapolis and Morris.

The June 22 test date is the last of the four national test dates scheduled for the 1962-63 school term, Berdie said, Students may obtain ACT registration forms and instructions from their high school offices.

Colleges and universities participating in the program use results for admissions, for guidance of in-coming students, in the awarding of scholarship aid and also in placing freshmen in classes or programs best suited to their ability.

The three-hour test has four parts that yield five scores----a composite score indicating college potential, and four separate scores indicating levels of general capability in English, mathematics, social studies and the natural sciences.

Results and manuals explaining how scores should be interpreted are furnished colleges selected by the student and are sent to the student's high school for his and the school's use in guidance.

In Minnesota, the advisory committee for the ACT program consists of the Committee on Minnesota High School-College Relations of the Association of Minnesota Colleges and the Minnesota Association of Secondary School Principals.

MARCIA RAFINSKI
AWARDED $2,000
FELLOWSHIP AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Marcia Rafinski, University of Minnesota graduate student in social work, has been awarded the annual $2,000 Delta Gamma Social Service fellowship. The award is open on a competitive basis to all first-year graduate social work women students in schools of social work in the United States and Canada.

This is the second time that a University of Minnesota student has won this award, according to Professor Anne Winslow Oren of the University's school of social work. Mrs. Miriam Milgram, who received the award in 1961, now is with the Washburn clinic in Minneapolis.

Miss Rafinski, 714 14th ave., S. E., Minneapolis, received the bachelor of arts degree from the University, magna cum laude, in 1961, and was elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Epsilon, Chimes and other honorary scholastic organizations. Currently she is completing her first year of graduate study with clinical work at the Elizabeth Kenny institute, Minneapolis.

After completing the work for the master of social work degree in 1964, Miss Rafinski plans to work in a family and children's social service agency.

Delta Gamma sorority annually awards a variety of yearly scholarships throughout the country to members and non-members, Mrs. Oren said. The sorority's grants and loans committee at this time is centered in Minneapolis with Mrs. Woodbury G. Andrews, Excelsior, as chairman.

'U' SIGMA XI
TO HONOR THREE
SCIENTISTS TUESDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Two University of Minnesota professors emeritus and a faculty member who is retiring this year will be honored Tuesday (May 21) by the Minnesota chapter of the Society of the Sigma Xi, national honorary scientific society.

The chapter's distinguished service award will be presented to Edward Allen Boyden, professor emeritus, former head of the department of anatomy and currently a research professor at the University of Washington; Jonas J. Christensen, professor emeritus and former head of the department of plant pathology and botany; and Thomas L. Joseph, professor of metallurgical engineering and former head of the schools of mines and metallurgy. Professor Joseph will retire June 30.

The awards, given in recognition of distinguished service in furthering science and scientific research in Minnesota, will be presented at the chapter's initiation dinner at 6 p.m. in ^{the} Campus club, Coffman Memorial Union.

Professor Boyden will give a free, public lecture at the University Monday (May 20). He will speak on "Swammerdam: Pioneer Anatomist and Physiologist of Old Leiden" at 3:30 p. m. in Mayo Memorial auditorium. The lecture will be sponsored by the anatomy and surgery departments.

Professor Boyden, who served as professor of anatomy at the University from 1931 to 1954 and as anatomy department head from 1940 to 1954, will be honored for his contributions to the knowledge of the structure and functioning of the gallbladder and related tubes and of the lungs. In 1925, he published the first X-ray picture of the normal contraction of the gallbladder in response to a meal of egg yolk. The "Boyden meal" of egg yolk is still a standard test for biliary disease.

(MCRE)

Professor Christensen has contributed extensively to the genetics of plant pathogens, disease-causing organisms, and to the development of disease resistant crops. He is credited with fostering cooperative work among plant geneticists and pathologists in Minnesota which led to successful disease control programs in corn, wheat, oats, barley, soybeans and alfalfa. Many of his papers on plant pathogens are considered by colleagues to be classical studies. His research is credited with stimulating similar scientific investigations in plant pathology throughout the world. A native of Minnesota, he received bachelor and master of science degrees and the doctor of philosophy degree from the University. He joined the faculty in 1920 advancing from instructor to professor and department head.

Professor Joseph, who has served on the University faculty since 1936, has contributed extensively to technological improvements in the design of blast furnaces used in iron and steel production. He also has done research on iron ore pelletizing and sintering and has written approximately 100 scientific papers. He has been active in the last 15 years in developing the University's mining symposiums held annually on the Duluth campus, where hundreds of leaders of the iron ore and steel industries meet to discuss mutual problems. He served as assistant dean of the institute of technology and head of the school of mines and metallurgy from 1944 to 1955, when he gave up his administrative duties to devote more time to writing, research and teaching.

RESEARCH GRANTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- The Minnesota Medical Foundation Monday (May 20) awarded $9,000 in research grants and stipends to faculty members and medical students of the University of Minnesota medical school.

Nine researchers will share in the 1963 awards, offered for work in the fields of heart disease and cancer and endowed permanently by a bequest of the late Arvid Olson, New Town, N. D.

The Minnesota Medical Foundation is a non-profit organization of alumni, physicians and friends of the medical school.

Dr. C. H. Hodgson, Rochester, president, said the Foundation's purpose in making the awards was to provide a local source of research funds for younger faculty members and students who conceive promising projects and who demonstrate research capabilities.

Begun in 1962, the program has now awarded $16,750 to assist 16 researchers. Named 1963 recipients were:

Faculty: Dr. Jack H. Bloch, department of surgery, "Hemodynamic Effects of Drugs on Coronary Shock in the Closed Chest Dog", $1,500.

Dr. Paul E. Strandjord, department of laboratory medicine, "Studies of the Inhibition of the Glycolysis of Malignant Cells by Lactate Dehydrogenase Inhibitors", $1,500.

Dr. Lorraine M. Gonyea, department of laboratory medicine, "Activation Studies of Prothrombin", $1,000.

Dr. Theodore B. Grage, department of surgery, "The Relation of Volume Sensitive Receptors in the Left Atrium to Diuresis and Antidiuresis", $900.

MAY 20, 1963

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis----Flags snapping in the breeze, the music of a military band and gleaming brass will be the "order of the day" Friday (May 24) when approximately 800 Army and Air Force cadets and Navy midshipmen take part in the fifth annual tri-service review of the University of Minnesota Reserve Officer Training Corps at 2 p.m. in Memorial stadium.

The review also will mark the 100th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg.

"Taking the review" will be Major General Frank C. Sackton, XIV Corps, United States Army, Minneapolis. He will be accompanied by heads of the three ROTC units at the University, Captain Edward M. Morgan, USN, Lieutenant Colonel Robert J. Elliott, USA, and Major Frederick D. Stockdale, USAF.

Governor Karl F. Rolvaag will be a member of the reviewing party with the University representatives Malcolm M. Willey, academic vice president, and Rodney C. Loehr, associate professor of history and chairman of the University Senate committee for ROTC.

The special recognition of the centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg, Captain Morgan stated, will honor the gallant stand of the First Minnesota regiment in this Civil War battle. Members of the 135th Infantry Regiment, National Guard, from Stillwater, the organization that is the direct descendant of the First Minnesota regiment, will parade the colors in the review. The color bearers will be attired in the blue uniforms of the Civil War regiment. The color guard will be attired in black pantaloons and red flannel shirts worn by members of the unit at Fort Snelling before they were inducted into Federal service.

Tri-Service Review-----

"Color girls", representatives of the units' coed sponsors who will leave the reviewing party to present the color company awards to their units include Mrs. Eleanor Baker Wartnick, 1025 S. Thomas, Minneapolis, the recent bride of one of the Army cadet captains, Jack Joel Wartnick. Mrs. Wartnick is a senior student in the University's college of science, literature and the arts (SLA). Representing the Navy is Elise Reed, 5201 Meadow Ridge, Edina, a freshman in SLA; the Air Force's Honorary Colonel is Karen Ann Liljemark, 2410 E. 43rd st., Minneapolis, also a freshman in SLA.

Cadet and midshipman commanding officers of the review will be: Army Cadet Colonel James W. McCormack, 219-B Balsam lane, Minneapolis, Army brigade commander; Navy Midshipman Captain Tucker D. Ausman, 2228 Sheridan ave., S., Minneapolis, commanding the Navy battalion; and Air Force Cadet James R. Skalicky, 5701 2nd ave., S., Minneapolis, Air Force group commander.

The three top annual ROTC awards will be presented to the winning cadets and midshipman at the review, as will the inter-service athletic award, won this year by the Navy.

Presenting the John Watson Memorial watch to Army Cadet Colonel McCormack will be Donald Miller, Worthington, commander of the Minnesota Department of the American Legion. This award, sponsored by the Minnesota department, is given by William G. Watson, Minneapolis attorney, in memory of his son Lieutenant John Watson (Distinguished Military Cross), a University law school graduate of the class of 1942 who died heroically during the North African landings in World War II,

Robert E. Nelson, president of the Minneapolis Council of the Navy League, will present the league's annual award to Midshipman Battalion Commander James E. Traver, Arlington Heights, Ill. This award is made to a midshipman who has shown outstanding aptitude for a naval career.

Tri-Service Review----

Mrs. Lawrence C.Lundberg, 3812 48th ave.,S.,Minneapolis, will present the Lawrence C.Lundberg memorial plaque to Air Force Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Ronald C.Sacre, 3925 38th ave.,S.,Minneapolis.

The 70-member joint services band under the direction of midshipman Timothy S.Brady, 1830 Summer st., St.Paul,will play for the review which will be preceded by luncheon at 11:30 a.m. in Coffman Memorial Union for all senior cadets and midshipmen and their guests.

Minneapolis --- Robert F. Woodward, United States ambassador to Spain, will receive the University of Minnesota Outstanding Achievement Award Friday (May 24) at a dinner in his honor.

The award, consisting of a gold medal and a citation, is presented to alumni who have distinguished themselves in their chosen fields.

The dinner for Ambassador Woodward, at 6 p.m. in the Campus Club of Coffman Memorial Union, will be attended by faculty and family and friends of the ambassador.

A native of Minneapolis, Woodward has been in the United States diplomatic service since 1931, a year after his graduation from the University with a bachelor of arts degree. He has served as ambassador to Costa Rica, 1954-58 and Uruguay, 1958-61, and has held embassy assignments in several other Latin American countries and Sweden and Canada.

Before being named ambassador to Spain in April, 1962, he served for one year as assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs. He was deputy secretary of state for inter-American affairs in 1953-54. Other state department posts he has held include chief of the division of foreign service and acting assistant chief of the division of American republics.

Born Oct. 1, 1908, Woodward took his first job when he was 13 years old as an office boy for the printing firm of Lindsay Bros. Co. He also worked as a printer's apprentice, part-time manager of a printing plant and assistant editor of a farm machinery catalogue before his graduation from the University.

Ambassador Woodward is married and makes his home at 1642 Avon Place, N. W., in Washington, D.C., and at 3224 Harriet ave. S., in Minneapolis. His mother, Mrs. Charles E. Woodward, lives at the Minneapolis address.

A brother, C. Emerson Woodward, lives at 2948 Beard ave., S., Minneapolis, and a married sister, Mrs. Roy Hagenstad, is a resident of rural Cross Lake, Minn.

Julius Herford, choral conductor and music educator, will take over the duties of guest director at this year's University of Minnesota Choral Art Institute, July 1-14, because of the illness of Robert Shaw.

Shaw, associate conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra and director of the Robert Shaw Chorale and Orchestra, informed University officials this week he would have to cancel out as director of the summer institute. Shaw has directed the institute since 1960.

Herford, who also has been a member of the institute faculty for the last three years, will direct the public concert featuring the University Summer Session Chorus, the institute chorus and a professional symphony orchestra which traditionally concludes the institute. The concert, on Sunday, July 14, will feature Bach's B Minor Mass, instead of the scheduled Mozart's Requiem.

Herford is lecturer in music at Union Theological seminary, New York, and music professor at Westminster Choir college, Princeton, N. J.

Donald B. Aird, University assistant professor of music and director of the University Chorus, will be associate director of the institute. Other University faculty members on the institute staff will be Arnold F. Caswell, associate professor of music education, and Roy A. Schuessler, music professor.

The institute, which carries three credits, will offer study in the fields of preparing and performing choral music. Lectures, discussions and rehearsals will cover musical and technical problems faced by the choral conductors.

Fee for the institute is $60. Registration may be made by writing to the Director, Center for Continuation Study, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14.

A member of the class of 1917 at the New Mexico school, Professor Gruner---a native of Neurode, Germany---received both the master of science and the doctor of philosophy degrees in geology from the University of Minnesota. He joined the University faculty as an instructor in geology in 1921. He became a professor of geology and mineralogy in 1944, the position he held until his retirement in 1959. During many summers, he served as a geologist for the Minnesota Geological Survey.

Professor Gruner, an internationally known expert in the field of crystal structures and fine-grained minerals, also is widely known for his work with iron ores and allied deposits. He is the author of a great number of publications in these and allied fields and recipient of one of the world's highest honors in the field of mineralogy, the Roebling medal, awarded to him at the annual meeting of the Mineralogical Society of America in Houston, Texas, in 1962. Since 1949 he has been a consultant to the Atomic Energy Commission and other government scientific agencies.

Among other honors, Professor Gruner was elected president of the Crystallographic Society of America in 1947, president of the Mineralogical society in 1948 and vice president of the Geological Society of America in 1949. He was president of the Minnesota chapter of the Society of the Sigma Xi in 1951.

The blue uniforms and white aprons worn during training by the 42 members of the June 1963 graduating class of the University of Minnesota school of nursing soon will be donned by student nurses at Seoul National university in Korea, according to Professor Tracy F. Tyler, assistant to the University's academic vice president.

The custom of the University's graduating nurses shipping their student uniforms---no longer needed when they shift into the starchy white of the graduate nurse---to their "sister" nurses at the Korean institution started in 1955, Professor Tyler explained. "At that time, the Seoul university, through a Federal government contract, was affiliated with the University of Minnesota," Tyler said, "and the graduating nurses thought of the idea of sending their uniforms to their 'sister' nurses."

Professor Tyler served as coordinator of the Korean project which ended formally June 30, 1962.

Some 96 uniforms, weighing more than 200 pounds when packed in five large cartons, are on their way to the Korean nurses.

69 RETIRING 'U'
FACULTY, STAFF
TO BE HONORED MONDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Twenty-five faculty and 44 civil service staff members will be honored at the University of Minnesota's annual retirement party at 3 p. m. Monday (May 27) in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

President O. Meredith Wilson will present certificates of merit to the retirees in recognition of their contributions to the University. Certificates also will be awarded posthumously to three staff members, bringing to a total 72 individuals with combined service of 1,657 years of service who will be honored at the party.

The retirement party is a tradition established 17 years ago by the Board of Regents to honor staff members with 10 or more years of service.

"Through this event, the University expresses its gratitude for the time, talents and devotion which its honored guests have brought so abundantly to the services they have performed," according to Malcolm M. Willey, vice president for academic administration.

Vice President Willey will read the names of the retiring faculty members as they receive their certificates from the president. Laurence R. Lunden, vice president for business administration, will read the names of the civil service staff members. President Wilson will speak briefly before presenting the certificates.

The ceremony will be tape recorded for broadcast at 6:45 p.m. Monday on KUOM, University radio station, at 770 kilocycles.

Refreshments will be served after the formal program.

Minneapolis --- William F. Buckley, Jr., editor, author and lecturer, will be the initial speaker in the newly announced Citizens' Series of public lectures sponsored by the University of Minnesota Union board of governors (UBOG).

Buckley, editor of National Review magazine, will open the 1963 spring and fall quarter series Wednesday (May 29) with a free public lecture at 3:30 p. m. in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom. He will speak on "The Liberal Ideology and U. S. Foreign Policy".

Internationally known speakers representing diverse opinions in the political and social sciences areas will be invited to take part in the symposium, according to Larry Sargent, 2382 Doswell, St. Paul, UBOG Citizens' Series committee chairman.

The series, Sargent said, is being established to supplement classroom instruction in these areas with speakers from off-campus. The committee sponsored the Union appearance May 10 of Sidney Lens, Chicago, editor of Liberation magazine, as a pre-season opener of the series.

Buckley first provoked national public attention with his best-selling book, "God and Man at Yale", published in 1951. "McCarthy and His Enemies", co-authored with L. Brent Bozell in 1954, kept his name on the best-seller lists, as did the publication of his third book, "Up from Liberalism". His most recent volume, "The Committee and Its Critics", was published in January.

As editor of the National Review, he has headed a team of well-known conservative writers which has included John Chamberlain, Max Eastman, John Dos Passos and the late Whittaker Chambers.

A native of New York city, Buckley studied in England and France, served in the U. S. Army during World War II, and was graduated from Yale university, with honors, in 1950. He lives in Stamford, Conn.

WILSON TO RECOMMEND ZIEBARTH, THOMPSON
TO REGENTS AS 'U' ARTS, EXTENSION DEANS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Appointment of E. W. Ziebarth and Willard L. Thompson to fill two University of Minnesota deanships, effective July 1, will be recommended to the Board of Regents at the board's next meeting June 15, President O. Meredith Wilson reported Tuesday (May 28).

President Wilson indicated that he will ask the Regents to approve the appointment of E. W. Ziebarth as dean of the College of Liberal Arts, now known as the College of Science, Literature and the Arts but scheduled to take on the new name July 1. He would succeed Dean E. W. McDiarmid, whose resignation as dean was accepted by the Regents Jan. 11. McDiarmid, who has headed the Arts college since July 1951, will remain on the University faculty as a professor of library science.

Ziebarth, Summer Session dean since 1953, was named by the Regents last Dec. 14 to succeed the retiring Julius M. Nolte as dean of the General Extension Division with the understanding that he also would continue as dean of the Summer Session. The change was to have taken place July 1, immediately following Dean Nolte's retirement after 26 years on the faculty including 20 years as Extension chief.

To fill the dual post as dean of the General Extension Division and dean of the Summer Session, President Wilson will recommend the appointment of Thompson, who has served as assistant to the president since 1960, when he accompanied President Wilson to Minnesota from the University of Oregon. No successor to Thompson has been selected to date, the president reported.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Dr. Wesley W. Spink, University of Minnesota professor of medicine, will be made an honorary fellow of The Royal Australasian College of Physicians at the organization's jubilee meeting Monday (June 3) in Sydney, Australia.

Dr. Spink will be honored as president of the American College of Physicians and in recognition of his "great distinction in medicine", according to Dr. K. B. Noad, president of the Royal Australasian College of Physicians.

Dr. and Mrs. Spink will leave for Australia Friday (May 31) and will return June 17.

A member of the University faculty since 1937, Dr. Spink is a world authority on antibiotics and brucellosis, a disease which can be transmitted from cattle to humans. He developed the first effective drug treatment for brucellosis and has been an adviser on the disease to the governments of Mexico, Spain, France, Italy, Yugoslavia, Malta and Tunisia.

He is director of the U. S. Brucellosis Research Center for the World Health Organization and was president of the Inter-American Congress on Brucellosis in 1950. He has served as president of the American Society for Clinical Investigation, the Central Society for Clinical Research and the Minnesota Medical Foundation.

Dr. Spink also helped introduce the use of penicillin in this area. He was the first doctor to use the drug at the University of Minnesota.

During World War II, he served as a consultant on epidemic diseases to the United States Secretary of War.

Dr. Spink will be attending the Sydney meeting as president of the American College of Physicians, a post he has held since April 4. Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies of Australia will open the meeting.

Minneapolis --- Arthur A. Barlow, president of Builders Material, Inc., Cedar Rapids, Iowa, will receive the University of Minnesota Outstanding Achievement Award Thursday (June 6).

The award will be conferred at the seventh annual alumni honors presentation and annual meeting of the Minnesota Alumni association.

United States Senator Everett M. Dirksen, (R-Ill.), previously announced Achievement award recipient, will address the dinner meeting at 6 p.m. in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

University President O. Meredith Wilson will present the awards to Barlow and Sen. Dirksen. The award, consisting of a gold medal and a citation, are given to alumni who have distinguished themselves in their chosen fields.

Barlow, born Nov. 13, 1892, in Sleepy Eye, Minn., was graduated from the University in 1923 with a bachelor of arts degree. He has had a varied career as a banker, business executive and "trouble-shooter" for business corporations.

He served as vice president of the First National Bank of Cokato, Minn., from 1921-25. He was with the Minnesota State Banking department for four years before moving to Cedar Rapids in 1930 as creditor's representative for the Builders Material company and the Shores-Mueller company. He took over the Shores company in 1935 to avoid bankruptcy and served as president until the firm was sold in 1956 to Cutter Laboratories. In 1936, he took over Builders Material, Inc. He organized the Barlow-Maney Laboratories in 1944 and served as its president until he sold the firm in 1954.

As business manager from 1932 to 1944 and 1950-52 of the Amana Society, an Iowa cooperative religious colony, he directed the organization's conversion from a communal mode of living into a modified capitalistic organization. The society, under Barlow's direction, built up several industries doing millions of dollars of business, including Amana Refrigeration which has been sold to a private concern.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- The University of Minnesota's annual Choral Art institute for choral directors and music educators will be held July 1-14 at the Center for Continuation Study on the Minneapolis campus.

Julius Herford, noted choral conductor and educator, will be guest director of the institute, replacing Robert Shaw. Shaw, who had to cancel out because of illness, has been director of the institute since it was started in 1960. Herford, lecturer at Union Theological seminary and professor at Westminster Choir college, also has been a member of the institute faculty and co-director each of the last three years. Shaw, director of the Robert Shaw Chorale and Orchestra, studied under Herford.

The institute will conclude with a free public performance of Bach's B Minor Mass by the University Summer Session Chorus, the institute participants and a professional symphony orchestra. Herford will direct the concert.

Donald B. Aird, University assistant professor of music and director of the University Chorus, will be associate director of the institute. Other University faculty members on the institute staff will be Arnold F. Caswell, associate professor of music, and Roy A. Schuessler, music professor.

For the first time, the institute will be a credit course. Three quarter credits will be offered for satisfactory completion. Subject matter covers preparing and performing choral music. Lectures, discussions and rehearsals will cover musical and technical problems faced by choral conductors.

Fee for the institute is $60. Registration may be made by writing to the Director, Center for Continuation Study, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14.

LABORATORY ANIMAL
CARE PANEL TO HEAR
DR. CARLOS MARTINEZ

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Dr. Carlos Martinez, University of Minnesota professor of physiology, will address the June meeting of the Upper Midwest Branch, Animal Care Panel, at 2:30 p. m. Thursday (June 6) in Room 320 Coffman Memorial Union.

Dr. Martinez, American Cancer Society cancer research professor, will speak on the vital research in the immunological field being carried on in his laboratory and on the use of animals in bio-research, according to Dr. Paul Zollman, Mayo Clinic, Rochester, presiding officer of the group.

The Animal Care Panel, a non-profit educational association founded nationally in 1950 and established locally in 1961, is made up of persons and institutional representatives professionally engaged in the production, care and study of laboratory animals. The panel's primary interest is in improving general conditions for the housing and care of laboratory animals for medical research.

"As the field is too extensive for an individual to thoroughly understand all of its many aspects, and the understanding and cooperation of workers in all areas is necessary," explained the group's secretary-treasurer, Elizabeth Simonsen Thorp, St. Paul, "the Animal Care Panel includes in its membership animal caretakers, technicians, supervisors, veterinarians, medical investigators, laboratory animal producers as well as animal feed, cage and equipment manufacturers."

In inviting interested participants in this extensive field of laboratory animal care to attend this meeting, Mrs. Thorp said, "As one who is actively engaged in some area of this research field, you will be especially interested in the panel as a means of exchanging information and ideas on the special problems involved. We feel that, through this exchange of ideas, each of us can contribute something which will be of value to the organization. At the same time we are certain to gain knowledge which will help us to do a better job".

In addition to the officers, Dr. Zollman and Mrs. Thorp, Animal Care Panel board branch/members, all associated with the University, are: Dr. Maurice B. Visscher, professor and head of the department of physiology; Dr. William T. S. Thorp, dean of the college of veterinary medicine; Dr. Robert B. Howard, dean of the college of medical sciences; Dr. William G. Kubicek, professor of physical medicine and rehabilitation; Donald J. Veara, senior engineer, department of plant services; Wayne Adams, administrative technologist, physiology; June Smith, junior scientist, physiology; and Donald E. UNIVERSITY THEATRE
TO STAGE SUMMER
SESSION SYMPOSIUM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---- Sir Tyrone Guthrie, guest lecturers from the New York theater world and University of Minnesota faculty members will join forces in a University Theatre Symposium during the second summer session at the University.

The course, open to upper division and graduate students, will involve intensive study of the art of the theater with particular emphasis on productions and production methods of the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre.

The University Theatre's Centennial Showboat, moored on the Mississippi river south of the Washington avenue bridge, will be the site of the afternoon weekday classes which will open July 22 and close August 24. A $96 fee will be charged for the six-credit Theatre Symposium course, according to Arthur H. Ballet, course director and associate professor of speech and theater arts.

Students of the Theatre Symposium will attend performances of this season's four Guthrie Repertory Theatre productions---- "Hamlet", "The Miser", "Three Sisters" and "Death of a Salesman", and will be required to write two critiques of each production---- one immediately after attending the performance, the other after studying and working with the symposium faculty and Guthrie personnel involved in the individual productions.

University faculty members taking part in the symposium include Kenneth L. Graham, professor of speech and theater arts; Alrik Gustafson, chairman of the Scandinavian language department; John D. Hurrell, associate professor of English; Wendell Josal, associate professor, speech and theater arts; Robert Moulton, associate professor speech and theater arts; Robert E. Moore, English professor; and Frank M. Whiting, director of the University Theatre and professor of speech and theater arts.

MORE

University Theatre----

Symposium guest lecturers, in addition to Sir Tyrone, are Arthur Miller, Gerald Weales and Robert Lewis.

Lewis, director of the new Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre Workshop, New York, a founder of the New York Actors' Studio and director of the New York productions of "Brigadoon", "The Grass Harp" and "Teahouse of the August Moon", has lectured on the drama at Yale university, at the Theater Wing, New York City, and at Vassar college. He is the author of the book, "Method or Madness?"

Arthur Miller, one of America's outstanding playwrights, is now working on a new play to be produced in Lincoln Center. His previous works include the current Guthrie Repertory production, "Death of a Salesman" as well as "All My Sons", "The Crucible", "A View from the Bridge" and the film, "The Misfits".

An English professor at the University of Pennsylvania, Gerald Weales reviews plays for the publications "The Reporter" and "Drama Survey". Among his books are "Religion in Modern English Drama" and "American Drama Since World War II".

In addition to lecturing at the symposium, Professor Weales will teach two University courses---- American Drama, in the English department, and American Theater in the theater department-----at the second summer session.

Guthrie personnel taking part in the University Theatre Symposium include representatives from the administrative, directorial and acting staffs. Tanya Moiseiwitsch will discuss her production designs; management will be represented by Peter Zeisler, production director; Oliver Rea, administrative director, and Louis Gelfand, general manager of the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre Foundation.

Guthrie actors Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy, George Grizzard and Rita Gam will discuss their current roles under the basic title, "The Actor Speaks". As each stars in one of the current Guthrie productions, their appearances will tie in with their stage appearances.

University Theatre Symposium-----

Douglas Campbell, Guthrie Theatre artistic director, and the McKnight Foundation actors (graduate students in the theater from schools throughout the country) will demonstrate Guthrie Theatre directing and acting techniques as shown in the current productions.

University Summer Sessions bulletins, listing other pertinent University Theatre courses available in possible conjunction with the Theatre Symposium, as well as further detailed information on the symposium may be obtained by qualified applicants from the University of Minnesota Dean of Summer Sessions, Room 904, Johnston hall, Minneapolis 14, Minnesota.

Enrollment in the University Theatre Symposium is limited to 200 registrants, Professor Ballet stated. Applications already have been received from California, North Carolina and Texas.

Minneapolis --- Students enrolled in the University of Minnesota this summer may be viewing the ancient ruins of Rome, hiking through a Colorado valley or digging Indian burial sites in Central Minnesota.

The University's summer offerings will include a number of field trips, special seminars, lectures and institutes in addition to regular classroom study.

Two summer session terms are scheduled, June 17-July 20 and July 22-Aug. 24. Courses will be offered in all colleges and schools on the Minneapolis and St. Paul campuses and at the Duluth and Morris campuses. Only the first term will be held on the Morris campus.

Among the special programs is a travel course in European art. Members of the class will travel to Spain, Greece, Italy, Austria, Germany, Denmark, Portugal, France and England to visit cultural centers, museums and cathedrals. The group will leave New York June 29 and return Aug. 12.

Two geographical field sessions will be given Aug. 29 to Sept. 18 as research seminars. One week of each session will be spent on the Minneapolis campus and two weeks will be spent in San Luis Valley, Colorado, doing research on related problems in physical and agricultural geography.

Students enrolled in the archeological field techniques course, Anthropology 140, will headquarter at Carlos State park, 10 miles north of Alexandria, Minn. They will participate in the excavation of Indian burial mound sites within the state park and will survey the right-of-way of Interstate Highway 94 in Douglas county.

Students of German and French will combine classroom work with practical experience in speaking the language they are studying during the Modern Language institute, June 17-July 20. Participants will live in a German or a French residence house, where all activities will be carried on in those languages.

The theater arts symposium, during the second term, will offer intensive study in the art of the theater, with particular emphasis on the productions and production methods of the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis. Guest lecturers will include Sir Tyrone Guthrie, director of the Guthrie theatre; Arthur Miller, New York playwright; Robert Lewis, director of the Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre workshop, New York; and Gerald Weales, drama critic and University of Pennsylvania English professor.

A two-week institute at the graduate level for government employes in administrative positions will be offered July 22 to Aug. 2. Lectures, seminars and workshops will be designed to bring participants up to date on current trends in public administration.

J. Donald Harris, director of the United States Navy Auditory Research laboratory, New London, Conn., will teach courses in basic hearing science and theories of hearing. The audiology clinic and a demonstration class of hearing-impaired children will be among special facilities available in this area of study.

The department of speech and theater arts offers an expanded program in speech pathology and rehabilitation during the summer session. Professor Paul Moore, University of Florida speech department head, will be visiting lecturer in speech pathology during the first summer term.

Both summer terms will include courses in all fields of special education--- speech correction and teaching the mentally retarded, the deaf and hard-of-hearing, the blind, the crippled, the gifted and the emotionally disturbed children.

Peter Wheeler Reiss, president of the Sheboygan, Wis., chapter of the John Birch society, will address the University of Minnesota Young Democratic Farmer Labor club at a public meeting at 3:30 p. m. Friday (June 7) in Coffman Memorial Union Men's Lounge.

His topic at the informal seminar session will be "The John Birch Society--- What It Is and Is Not". A question and answer period will follow the talk, according to the YDFL president, Dennis Wadley, arts college senior.

In response to the question of why a liberal student group is sponsoring a conservative speaker, Wadley said, "For the information of our own members and the campus at large, our executive board found it educationally worthwhile to program Mr. Reiss. It's partially a question of 'knowing your opponent'.

"In addition," Wadley continued, "we feel that the academic community should be a forum for the expression of a diversity of opinions. This program is one of a series of seminar-type discussions sponsored throughout the year by the YDFL on the various aspects of liberal education and the functions of the academic community. It is more political than some of the others, but it has the same purpose---to broaden the perspective of the student body by providing an informal exchange of views where both sides learn".

A graduate cum laude of Marquette university, Milwaukee, Reiss also received his law degree with highest honors there. While at Marquette, he was president of the Marquette University Young Republicans in 1960, 1961 and 1962.

PROFESSOR MONK
RECEIVES HONORARY
DEGREE IN MEMPHIS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Samuel H. Monk, University of Minnesota English professor, received the honorary degree, doctor of literature, from his alma mater, Southwestern at Memphis college, Monday (June 3).

Professor Monk, a member of the class of 1922, addressed the graduating class of the Tennessee school where he taught from 1924 to 1927 and from 1937 to 1942.

In his address, he deplored the present day tendency toward "lazy English" which has "disastrous results to the moral awareness of people and to their culture as a whole".

A native of Selma, Ala., Professor Monk, 2325 Pleasant ave., Minneapolis, continued his formal education at Princeton university where he received the master of arts degree in 1924 and the doctor of philosophy degree in 1929. He came to the University as a professor of English in 1947.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The University of Minnesota will conduct a course for physicians on human chromosomes, the body's hereditary carriers, Tuesday through Friday (June 11-14) at the Center for Continuation Study.

The course will be the first of its kind in the nation, according to the course director, Dr. Jorge J. Yunis, University instructor of laboratory medicine and director of the clinical genetics laboratory.

Chromosomes, small bodies within each human cell, have become a rapidly growing field of investigation in medicine since the first case of a chromosome abnormality was linked to disease---mongolism---in 1959.

Participants in the conference will be researchers from several American and Canadian universities.

The course will consist of a series of lectures on laboratory techniques for studying chromosomes and on the theoretical implications of those studies in biology and medicine. Techniques will be demonstrated at laboratory sessions.

Guest faculty will include Dr. T. C. Hsu of the University of Texas, which has been a leader in developing techniques of the study of human chromosomes and also has studied some aspects of the relationship between chromosomes and cancer; Dr. Klaus Patau, chairman of the University of Wisconsin medical genetics department, who has contributed to the understanding of the form and structure of human chromosomes and the role of chromosomal abnormalities in specific congenital disorders; and Dr. Susumo Ohno, City of Hope Medical center, Duarte, Calif., whose research has added extensively to the knowledge of the nature of the two X chromosomes which are characteristics of the cells of normal females.

Remainder of the faculty will include University staff members.

DEMOCRACY SERIES
TO BEGIN JUNE 17
ON EDUCATIONAL TV

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Democracy---what is it that we defend and believe in so readily? Does it deserve such acclaim?

David Cooperman, associate professor of social science and head of the University of Minnesota social science program, will define, defend and debate the answers to these questions in a series of 14 University-sponsored television appearances this summer on KTCA, Channel 2.

The series, titled "Democracy", will be televised from 9 to 10 p. m. Mondays June 17 through September 16.

"We do a good deal of talking and writing about democracy nowadays," Professor Cooperman said, "and we mostly assume that its meaning and what we like to call 'democratic principles' are self-evident. Too often, this assumption is a way of talking about democracy, but avoiding any questioning of the basic ideas and values to which we so ardently commit ourselves.

"These 14 talks," he explained, "will try to examine democracy in several ways and will deal with each aspect of the subject to the point where new questions are raised which seem to have no answers---or at least, none that can be dealt with on television.

"After the introductory talk, which will deal with the difficulties in talking about democracy, the remaining programs will be grouped around three ways of examining the subject: a history of democratic ideals, an analysis of democratic principles and systems and problems and prospects of democracy."

'U' WILL AWARD
DEGREES TO 3,275

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- President O. Meredith Wilson of the University of Minnesota will confer degrees on 3,275 graduates at commencement exercises at 7:30 p. m. Saturday, June 15, in Memorial Stadium.

President Wilson will give the principal address at the outdoor exercises and will present certificates of completion to graduating seniors in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

As degree candidates and their families and friends arrive on the Minneapolis campus commencement evening between 6:30 to 7 p. m., they will hear the Frances Miller Brown Memorial Bells played from Northrop Memorial auditorium by Daniel Chorzempa, University carillonneur and a junior in the college of science, literature and the arts.

A prelude concert will be played in the stadium from 7 to 7:30 p. m. by the University Concert and Symphony Bands conducted by Frank Bencriscutto, bandmaster and assistant professor of music.

The candidates for degrees will enter the stadium from the west end in academic procession. Leading the procession as bearer of the mace, University symbol of authority, will be Professor Walter K. Vivrett of the school of architecture, serving as a faculty marshal. The faculty will march after the graduates, followed by distinguished guests participating in the program and members of the Board of Regents.

Presentation of colors by a color guard made up of University Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC cadets and midshipmen will open the program in the stadium. Singing of the National Anthem will be led by Roy A. Schuessler, music professor.

The Reverend George F. Hall, pastor at the campus Lutheran Student Foundation, will give the invocation.

After President Wilson's address, Malcolm M. Willey, vice president for academic administration, will introduce the directors of the ROTC units and the deans of the several colleges who will present the candidates for certificates and degrees to the president.

After the degrees have been conferred, Professor Edwin L. Haislet, executive secretary of the Minnesota Alumni association and director of alumni relations, will address the graduates as alumni of the University.

Members of the graduating class will march across the stage to receive their diplomas from the deans of the several colleges or their representatives. President Wilson will present the degrees individually to the doctor of philosophy degree candidates.

"Hail! Minnesota", the University's Alma Mater song, will be sung at the conclusion of the program by the audience led by Professor Schuessler.

PRINCIPALS TO ATTEND
ANTI-DELINQUENCY
WORKSHOP AT U OF M

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE-214 MORRILL HALL

JUNE 11, 1963

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- A new dimension will be added to the University of Minnesota's training program in combating juvenile delinquency with the establishment this summer of a six-week Principals' Workshop.

The workshop, June 24 to Aug. 2, will be designed to give principals of schools in low income, culturally deprived areas better understanding of the backgrounds of their students and how the children and their families can be stimulated to have greater interest in education, according to John R. Ellingston, University professor of criminal law administration and workshop coordinator.

"If a principal or a teacher can get a child interested in school, he has a hold on him which for many youngsters can mean the difference between delinquency and non-delinquency," Professor Ellingston said.

The workshop for principals will be the third major training institute dealing with problems of juveniles offered by the University's Center for Continuation Study this summer and one of the first of its kind in the nation. The center has been conducting 10-week summer institutes for juvenile officers for seven years and for juvenile court judges for two years. ~~The institutes have been designed to give officers and judges for two years.~~ The institutes have been designed to give officers and judges a better understanding of psychological and sociological factors contributing to delinquency as well as training in correctional methods.

Twenty-five principals, mostly from Minneapolis and St. Paul schools, will participate in the workshop.

The Eighth Annual Juvenile Officers' institute and the Third Juvenile Court Judges' institute will be held June 17 to Aug. 22. Approximately 60 officers and 16 judges are expected to attend.

The three training sessions will be financed by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health which enables the University to provide free tuition to all registrants and living and travel expenses of $400 for participants from outside of the Twin Cities.

The principals' workshop will be presented through the cooperation of the University's Continuation center, the school of social work and the college of education. It will carry nine quarters of graduate credit in social work.

Course content of the principals' course, rather than focusing on delinquency, will be designed to help school administrators understand the cultural and family backgrounds of their pupils and their attitudes and patterns of behavior.

"Many children from economically and culturally deprived areas have no interest in education," Professor Ellingston explained. "They come from homes where there are no books and where no one has read to them out of a book. Unless a teacher can understand the tremendous differences in their background from that of the average middle class youngster, he is likely to alienate these children and be alienated by them."

Subject matter of the workshop will include three main areas: the child, his family and the way of life in poverty; educational methods useful with such children and adolescents; and community resources available to help such children and their families.

In addition to University faculty members and leaders in combating delinquency from various institutions in the state, the three training sessions will have several guest lecturers.

Dr. Douglas Alan Sargent, Detroit, Mich., juvenile court psychiatrist and Carl L. Marburger, director of the Great Cities Program for School Improvement in Detroit will serve on the faculty of all three institutes.

Other visiting faculty members on the judges' and officers' institutes faculty will include J. Weldon Moffitt, University of Utah director of leadership training, and Brother Aquinas Thomas, Manhattan College assistant professor of psychology, New York.

Minneapolis --- The University of Minnesota's Board of Regents today (June 15) appointed David L. Graven, Albert Lea attorney, as a professor in the University's Law school effective next Sept. 16.

"I hope Albert Lea will forgive us for taking away one of its distinguished lawyers," Dean William B. Lockhart of the Law school commented today, "David Graven is one of our ablest graduates in recent years. He has great potential as a teacher and scholar, and he will bring to the Law school the solid value of practical experience in general practice."

Graven has been a partner in the Albert Lea law firm of Olson and Graven since 1957.

Born in Minneapolis in 1929, Graven earned a bachelor of arts degree at St. Olaf college in 1950, and the bachelor of law degree at the University in 1953.

He became associated with the Minneapolis law firm of Dorsey, Colman, Barker, Scott and Barber following his graduation from the University. Called to active duty in the Army in 1954, he was discharged in 1957 as a first lieutenant.

Graven is a member of the American Judicature society, the Minnesota Bar association and the American Bar association. He is married and has three children.

'U' CLASS TO DIG
INDIAN MOUNDS
NEAR ALEXANDRIA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Sixteen University of Minnesota anthropology students and their professor Monday (June 17) will begin a five-week campout at Lake Carlos State Park, 10 miles north of Alexandria.

The park, where the students will live in group camp buildings, will serve as classroom, living quarters and field site for the summer session class of Anthropology 140, an archeological field techniques course.

Nine women and seven men students will be in the group. Elden Johnson, associate professor of anthropology, will be the instructor and group leader. His assistant is Robert Keyser, graduate teaching assistant. Keyser's daughter, Hannah, who will be a junior next fall in the college of liberal arts, will be a member of the group.

Major project of the class will be to excavate a large Indian burial mound, described by Professor Johnson as one of the largest he has ever seen. The mound is one of three located on private property owned by the Gerald Hoffman family three miles north of Alexandria.

Professor Johnson says he has no idea of how old the mound is, but that it could have been built as far back as 500 B. C. or as late as 1600 A. D. It is approximately 15 feet high with a diameter of 120 feet. The two other mounds on the Hoffman property are considerably smaller, according to Professor Johnson. They are approximately one to two feet high and 25 to 30 feet in diameter.

"We hope to get the big one done this summer," Professor Johnson said.

The mounds, according to Johnson, usually mean there is a village site nearby, so the class will be looking for clues to such a site as well as excavating the mound.

(MORE)

The University's anthropology department has excavated about 250 Indian burial mounds in the state during the last 25 years and has uncovered several village sites.

Another field project of the group will be to explore Lake Carlos State park for archeological sites and to survey the right-of-way of Interstate Highway 94 in Douglas county for archeological sites.

The excavating, exploring and surveying will be accompanied by daily classroom sessions in the park where the students will learn the techniques of archeological field work.

Professor Johnson explained that a great deal of valuable information can be lost if the excavation is done without proper surveying, note taking, digging and analysis of the materials found.

The group will consist of junior, senior and graduate students only, since it is an upper division course. Requirements, Professor Johnson said, will be that the students bring old clothes, mosquito repellent, bedding and dishes and a garden trowel for digging. Food will be purchased out of a community fund to which each student will contribute. Cost of the course, otherwise, is the regular University summer session fee.

The course, which carries six credits, will run through July 18.

A new United States Navy policy, announced today (June 17) will enable University of Minnesota juniors in engineering and the "hard" sciences who have established a "B" or better grade average to enroll in the regular Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps program at the University.

Enrollment in this special scholarship program, previously restricted to entering freshmen, will cover practically all of the remaining college expenses of the qualified applicants, according to Captain Edward M. Morgan, USN, NROTC commanding officer at the University.

Tuition, fees, books and retainer pay of $50 per month for the academic year will be furnished each successful applicant by the Navy. On graduation each member of the program will receive a commission in the regular Navy and will serve a four-year tour of obligated service.

The new program will become effective fall quarter, but applicants must be processed before June 30. Information may be obtained from the NROTC University unit in the Armory on the University's Minneapolis campus.

The NROTC unit at the University is one of 10 units at universities throughout the country to initiate this pilot program, Captain Morgan said. Other units participating are at the Universities of California (Berkeley), Illinois, Kansas, Michigan and Oklahoma and the State University of Iowa, Ohio State university, Purdue university and Pennsylvania State university.

Eligible for enrollment in the NROTC new program are qualified students currently working in chemistry, mathematics or physics, and in the 11 engineering fields of aerospace, aeronautical, chemical, electrical, engineering mechanics, engineering science, industrial, production, mechanical, metallurgical and nuclear engineering.

"It's Time for Music", a series of educational radio broadcasts by the University of Minnesota radio, KUOM, received a "first" award at the 33rd Annual Institute for Education by Radio and Television held recently in Columbus, O.

The award is the fourteenth "first" received from the institute by KUOM since 1940, in addition to numerous honorable mentions. Each year the organization evaluates the programming of more than 200 educational radio and television stations throughout the nation.

The award citation reads:

"For its unique and refreshing approach in presenting primary grade children with an introductory experience in music, the original composition and imaginative setting, the thirty-third American Exhibition of Education Radio-Television Programs, in recognition of outstanding educational value and distinguished radio production, presents this first award. Fine acting and delightful children's chorus used so naturally all contribute to making it an outstanding program thoroughly entertaining and truly educational. Mr. Lynn F. Olson deserves special commendation for writing all original music and scripts for this series."

Olson, a graduate of the University of Minnesota and the New School for Music Study, Princeton, N. J., currently is preparing the scripts and music to be used in "It's Time for Music" for the 1963-64 school year.

Oliver C. Osterberg, 5240 44th ave., S., Minneapolis, a graduate student in speech and theater arts, produced and directed "It's Time for Music" for the Minnesota School of the Air. Children from the Holmes and St. Lawrence schools, Minneapolis, were used in the program.

VISITORS TO STATE
PARKS TO LEARN
PRESERVATION NEED

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Visitors to Minnesota's state parks this summer will be learning not only how to enjoy the great outdoors, but how to help preserve its beauty and usefulness.

The educational program, or interpretation service as it is called, provided at the parks this year will stress the responsibility the public has to help manage and use the state's natural resources more wisely.

The program, now in its seventeenth year, is directed by experienced naturalists under the sponsorship of the Minnesota department of conservation's division of state parks and the Minnesota Museum of Natural History of the University of Minnesota. Donald K. Lewis, museum visual education adviser, will be in charge of the program.

Naturalists are located at five of the state parks. They will conduct guided trail walks, auto caravans, boat trips, film lectures and demonstrations. Self-guiding nature trails are located at 18 parks. Seven parks have natural history museums.

Lewis and Ben Thoma, Willmar Community college biology instructor, will be on hand at Itasca State park, near Roy Lake, to aid visitors.

Naturalists at the other parks are: Lewis N. Schroeder, Forest Lake junior high school science instructor, William O'Brien and Interstate parks near Taylors Falls; Harvey E. Djerf, Golden valley teacher, Gooseberry Falls park near Two Harbors; and Richard W. Barnett, Whitewater park near Rochester.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Two University of Minnesota graduates who are noted for their behind-the-scenes contributions to education will receive the University's Outstanding Achievement Award Wednesday (June 26) at the sixth annual meeting of the College of Education Alumni association.

They are Walter H. Gaumnitz, head of the United States Office of Education's rural research and statistical unit, and Phillip J. Rulon, Harvard university education professor.

Gaumnitz will be cited for his research and publications on rural education which have pointed the way to improved instruction and administrative structure in small schools.

Rulon will be honored for his leadership in developing research and statistical techniques in education. He has served as a consultant on many research projects and programs throughout the nation.

The awards will be presented by Stanley J. Wenberg, University vice president for educational relationships and development, at the 6:30 p. m. dinner meeting in the Campus Club in Coffman Memorial Union. The Outstanding Achievement Award, consisting of a gold medal and a citation, is given to alumni who have distinguished themselves in their chosen fields.

Gaumnitz, who was graduated from the University in 1921 with a bachelor of science degree, was born in 1891 in Rice, Minn. He received the master of arts degree from the University in 1924 and the doctor of philosophy degree from George Washington university in 1935. Before entering the University he taught in Ottertail county and served for two years as superintendent of schools at Lake Wilson, Minn.

He served as an instructor at the University and as head of the social sciences department at South Dakota State Teachers college in Madison before joining the United States Office of Education staff as a rural education specialist in 1927. He has held various positions in the office.

Rulon did his undergraduate work at Stanford university, from which he received the bachelor of arts degree in 1926. He received the master of arts degree from Stanford in 1928 and the doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Minnesota in 1928. He served as an instructor in educational psychology at Minnesota in 1928-30. Previously he had taught at San Jose State Teachers college and at Menlo Park in California. He joined the Harvard university faculty in 1930. He served as acting dean of the Harvard graduate school of education from 1943 to 1948. He was born in 1900 in Keokuk, Iowa.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The University of Minnesota Center for Continuation Study will broaden the scope of its summer music offerings this year with the establishment of a three-day piano workshop, which will start Monday (June 24).

The workshop will be followed by the annual Organ institute, July 1-6, and the fourth annual Choral Arts institute, July 1-14.

Robert Pace, head of piano instruction at Columbia University Teachers' college, will conduct the workshop. He will give three and a half hours of lecture-demonstrations each day of the session---Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The workshop, to be held in Scott hall, will be presented by the University's Continuation center and music department in cooperation with the National Piano Foundation.

Pace, a composer, concert pianist, lecturer and teacher, has held his present position at Columbia university since 1952. He directs his own laboratory studio in Mt. Kisco, N. Y. He formerly was national piano chairman of the Music Educators National conference and is piano editor of the Music Journal.

Topics to be covered by the workshop will include piano teaching today, keyboard harmony for teachers and organization of piano instruction for private studios and public schools.

Tuition for the workshop will be $7.

Julius Herford, Westminster Choir college music professor, will direct the choral arts institute. Faculty for the choral arts and organ institutes will include University music department staff members.

RESIDENCE HALLS
AT 'U' FILLING
FAST FOR FALL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Freshmen and new students attending fall quarter classes on the University of Minnesota's Minneapolis campus who do not have their residence hall contracts signed by now may not find space available unless they arrange for their housing immediately, according to Don L. Finlayson, director of University housing.

"The situation, today, is especially serious for the women students," Finlayson said. "Comstock hall is filled, as is Pioneer Court and Sanford hall is more than two-thirds rented and could be filled in a matter of days. When these few vacancies in Sanford are filled, there will be no more women's residence hall housing available on the Minneapolis campus. How long quarters will be available on the St. Paul campus, I don't know."

"Available residence hall space for men students is almost as limited," Finlayson added. "While in the past it always has been possible for men students to arrange for Minneapolis campus housing when they attended orientation in August and September, the way things are going this year, chances are good that the Minneapolis campus men's residence halls will be filled before the orientation program is over. Again, the St. Paul halls will be able to accommodate a limited number of the overflow. After that, private housing will be the only answer."

"I cannot emphasize too strongly that freshmen and transfer students who have not arranged for University housing for the fall quarter as yet should write or call the University Housing office, Room 100 Westbrook hall, Minneapolis 14---telephone 373-3758---at once."

Finlayson pointed out that, as priorities were announced early in the University's spring quarter limiting residence hall applications to present residents and to non-commuting new students, the early filling of the halls will limit the number of new and freshman "commuters" living on the campus. "Commuters" were defined in this announcement as students "whose homes are in the Twin Cities communities served by the Twin Cities Rapid Transit company".

SUMMER SESSION
ORCHESTRA TO PLAY
CONCERT TUESDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The opening concert by the University of Minnesota Summer Session orchestra will be given at 8 p. m. Tuesday (June 25) in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom with Leonard Sipe serving as guest conductor. Sipe is conductor of the St. Paul Chamber orchestra.

Pianist Miles Mauney, University assistant professor of music, and Marvin Dahlgren, principal percussionist of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, will be featured soloists.

Mauney will play Mozart's Piano Concerto in D Major ("Coronation"), K. 537. Dahlgren will be featured in the performance of Gene Gutche's Bongo Divertimento, Op. 35, which was given its premier by the St. Paul Chamber orchestra in December, 1962. Gutche lives at White Bear Lake.

The concert will be sponsored by the University Summer Session under the direction of the department of concerts and lectures and in cooperation with the Minneapolis Musicians association. The orchestral music for the concert is provided by the co-operation of Local 73 of the American Federation of Musicians through a grant from the Music Performance Trust Fund of the recording industry.

The complete program for the concert is as follows:

Tafelmusic III, No. 3.....Georg Philipp Telemann
The Winter's Passed.....Wayne Barlow
Piano Concerto in D Major ("Coronation"), K.537...Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
Miles Mauney, piano soloist
Bongo Divertimento, Op. 35.....Gene Gutche
Marvin Dahlgren, percussion
Symphony in D Major ("La Chasse"), Op. 73.....Franz Joseph Haydn

'AFRICAN MUSIC'
TOPIC OF 'U'
LECTURE THURSDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Alan Merriam, Indiana university anthropology professor who is lecturing this summer at the Social Studies Institute in St. Paul, will give a free, public lecture Thursday evening at the University of Minnesota.

He will speak on "African Music as Behavior" at 8 p. m. in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

The talk will be sponsored jointly by the Social Studies Institute and the University summer session under the direction of the University's department of concerts and lectures.

Merriam's educational background has combined chemistry, anthropology and music. He received the bachelor of arts degree in 1947 from the University of Montana, with majors in chemistry and music. He did graduate work at Northwestern university, receiving the master of music degree in 1948 and the doctor of philosophy degree in anthropology in 1951.

He has held several fellowships, including those of the American Anthropological association, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Council of Learned Societies fellowships. He did field research in the Belgian Congo and Ruanda Urundi in 1951-52 under grants from the Belgian American Educational Foundation, the Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research and in cooperation with l'Institute pour la Recherche Scientifique en Afrique Centrale.

'U' SCIENTIST REPORTS SUCCESS
WITH NEW THERAPY FOR UTERINE CANCER

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --- Successful results from the use of a comparatively new type of hormone therapy in the treatment of advanced endometrial carcinoma (cancer of the mucous lining of the uterus) were announced recently by Dr. B. J. Kennedy, associate professor of medicine in the University of Minnesota medical school.

The announcement was made to the medical profession by Dr. Kennedy in a paper read before the May meeting of the Minnesota Obstetrical and Gynecological society and the Minnesota Society of Internal Medicine at Duluth, and is published in the June 8 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The important aspect of the new treatment, in addition to the favorable results," Dr. Kennedy said, "is the evidence that the person with a long history of this disease has a better chance to respond to this treatment than one with the rapidly growing type of the same disease.

"More recent data, assembled since this test was concluded," he continued, "shows that use of even larger doses of the hormone than were administered in these test cases may be effective in those with the rapid-growing form of the disease."

Endometrial carcinoma is the only cancer to respond definitely to this hormone treatment, according to Dr. Kennedy. Before the discovery of this use of the drug, surgery or X-ray was the only effective treatment for this type of cancer.

(MORE)

In contrast to a number of other hormone treatments which produce varying undesirable side effects, the use of this female sex hormone---a derivative of progesterone--- produces no ill effects on the patient.

This hormone currently is regarded as a research drug, and, under the new Federal Drug Act, may be administered only by approved investigators.

In the test on which this report was based, 27 patients with far-advanced or recurrent endometrial carcinoma, all of whom had had surgery, irradiation therapy or a combination of the two types of treatment, were involved.

Eight patients (29.6 per cent) showed definite improvement, according to the report, with a significant decrease or disappearance of the cancer. Tumors in areas which had previously been treated with X-ray failed to respond as well or as rapidly as those in nonirradiated areas.

In discussing the report, Dr. Kennedy stated that continued administration of this hormone to the patients whose illness responds to this therapy may be necessary for the rest of their lives. This is the first therapy that allows successful treatment of endometrial cancer that has spread throughout the body--- inevitably fatal, heretofore, he pointed out.
