(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A long-range plan for geologic research, recently released by the Minnesota Geological Survey, calls attention to the urgent need for geologic and resources studies in the State of Minnesota.

In announcing the report, the Survey's director, Professor Paul K. Sims, pointed out that "except for research on our iron ores, geologic studies have lagged in our State during past decades, and we now must prepare to meet the challenges imposed by the rapidly expanding technological world of today."

The Geological Survey is a research department of the University of Minnesota's School of Earth Sciences.

"Greatly expanded research and compilation of data are needed," Sims asserted, "to assist in increasing our present production of minerals, to attract new mineral industries and to assure wise use and management of our land and water resources."

Some of the problems and specific proposals outlined in the report are:

1. The annual value of mineral production in Minnesota is about $500 million; in 1963, iron ore accounted for 91 per cent of the total production. Research will be continued on the State's iron ores to aid in maintaining and expanding the present industry.

2. The geology of Minnesota is favorable for the occurrence of additional mineral deposits other than iron ores. Geologic mapping and research will be directed toward those mineral raw materials that appear most promising for commercial development.

3. Although the State can never be self-sufficient with regard to all required mineral raw materials, output of known minerals can be increased, and others not now being used commercially can be developed for future technology.

GEOLOGIC RESEARCH

4. Hydrologic research is planned to meet the most pressing problem in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, that of determining the adequacy of the water supply to meet the estimated future growth.

5. Current detailed geologic mapping and related studies will be accelerated in the Twin Cities and the other metropolitan areas of the State, to provide information on construction materials and on problems of excavation, foundation stability and highway construction.

6. Only one per cent of the State has been mapped geologically. By comparison with other states, Minnesota ranks near the bottom with respect to geologic map coverage, and plans call for an immediate step-up in geologic mapping.

The plans also call for increased emphasis on the educational aspects of the geology of the State for use in public education and recreation. Several pamphlets and guidebooks on the geology and scenery are planned for publication.

Sims says that "geologic mapping is the basic framework for development of our natural resources". Because of the value of geologic maps to nearly every aspect of natural resources planning, he reported that the Minnesota Geological Survey has submitted a budget request to the Minnesota Outdoor Recreation Resources Commission for state-wide geologic mapping. The proposed program would consist of:

1. Geologic mapping of the entire State at a scale of one inch equals 4 miles.
2. Detailed geologic mapping in areas that appear promising as potential new sources of mineral raw materials, using available topographic quadrangle maps as bases.

He also says that the remainder of the Survey's proposed long-range program is being requested as part of the regular budget approved by the University's Board of Regents.

The long-range plan, "Our Land and Mineral Resources" is available free upon request to the Minnesota Geological Survey, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Dwight E. Sargent, who recently became curator of the Nieman fellowships at Harvard university, will be the guest at the sixth annual Ralph D. Casey seminar on the University of Minnesota campus Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday (April 5,6 and 7).

Sargent, who formerly was editorial page editor of the New York Herald Tribune, will meet primarily with journalism students and faculty at the school of journalism, Murphy hall.

In addition to several seminar-type sessions, he will be guest at an informal coffee hour at 2:30 p.m. Monday in the offices of the Minnesota Daily, campus student newspaper, and will be guest of honor at a luncheon with representatives of Twin City news media at noon Tuesday.

Sargent, 48, has held many news positions on Maine newspapers and radio stations and in 1950-51 was a Nieman fellow at Harvard. He was one of the organizers of the National Conference of Editorial Writers and its chairman in 1953, and also helped start the New England Society of Newspaper Editors. He is chairman of the Nieman Alumni council, which publishes the quarterly "Nieman Reports", a journal for discussion of current problems in journalism.

The Nieman fellowships give experienced newsmen a year of study at Harvard in any fields useful to their journalistic work.

The annual Ralph D. Casey seminar is held in honor of the man who headed the University school of journalism for 28 years, and is sponsored by the Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

U.S. EDUCATION
OFFICE SEEKS RECRUITS IN AREA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---University of Minnesota graduating senior and graduate students interested in United States government careers with the Office of Education may meet with a representative of that office Tuesday, April 13, at the University.

Mrs. Gail Thomas, a career employee of the Office of Education, will meet with interested students in Room 102, Burton hall, on the University's Minneapolis campus between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., according to Arnold S. Woestehoff, director of the University's Bureau of Recommendations, the sponsoring office at the University.

Students from all academic disciplines are sought, according to Woestehoff, with particular emphasis being placed on the recruitment of majors in English, history, political science, economics, psychology, sociology, mathematics, accounting and public administration.

"The career opportunities available to interested students offer the advantages of growing with the new and vital programs with this governmental agency, a part of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare", the director stated.

"This is a growing agency with many career opportunities for bright young men and women, as the Office of Education is anxious to staff and implement the many new programs passed by the 88th Congress", he added. "These programs, and many more to follow, are the basis of a professional career challenge to youth interested in the current federal attack on illiteracy and poverty and the federal concern for educational excellence."

Appointments to meet with Mrs. Thomas may be made by calling the University Bureau of Recommendations, 373-2266, Minneapolis.

Minneapolis---Seventeen faculty members at the University of Minnesota will retire at the end of the spring quarter with an aggregate of 610 years of service to the University.

Representing the greatest length of employment, with 48 years at the University, is Professor Albert C. Heine, superintendent of the Rosemount Experiment Station since 1957. He joined the University staff in 1917.

Next in longevity, with 46 years, is Physics Professor Joseph Valasek. A close third with 45 years at the University is Alfred L. Harvey, professor of animal husbandry.

Leaving the school of business administration after 42 years will be Reuel I. Lund, professor of accounting. Mathematics Professor Elizabeth Carlson will retire with 41 years of service.

In a tie with 39 years of University employment are Randolph Brown, professor of forestry, and Harold N.G. Wright, professor of pharmacology. Two who have served 38 years each are Arthur E. Hutchins, professor of horticultural science, and Mrs. Josephine Lutz Rollins, professor of art. Close behind with 37 years are Ernestine Donaldson, associate professor of office management in the school of business administration, and Fred L. Kildow, professor of journalism.

Clarence Christopherson, associate professor of agricultural engineering, will retire after 31 years at the University. Two retirees who have been teaching at the University for 30 years are Victor A. Newcomb, assistant professor in general college, and Lloyd M. Short, professor of political science.

Huntington Brown, English professor, will retire with 28 years of service. Another 28-year man is Harold T. Widdowson, professor of trade and industrial education.

(MORE)

John Ellington, retiring professor of law, has been with the University 13 years although his position was parttime prior to 1961.

In addition to faculty, approximately 75 civil service staff members of the University also will retire in June. All faculty and staff retirees have been invited to a retirement party to be held at 3 p.m. May 28 in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

Five other faculty members retired earlier during the 1964-65 year. They were Howard E. Balk, agricultural agent at Ortonville who served with the University 30 years; Ross L. Huntsinger, agricultural agent and associate professor, 28 years; Glenn I. Prickett, associate professor in the agricultural extension service, 37 years; Professor Dorothy F. Simmons, state leader, home economics agricultural extension service, 16 years; and Dr. Charles H. Watkins, professor of medicine at Mayo Graduate School of Medicine in Rochester, 35 years.

JOINS ARCHITECTURE
FACULTY AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---M. Carter McFarland, assistant commissioner for programs, Federal Housing Administration, Washington, D.C., will spend the spring quarter at the University of Minnesota as visiting professor in the school of architecture.

His appointment was made possible by a Hill Family Foundation grant, according to Professor Walter K. Vivrett of the architecture school.

McFarland, an economist whose particular areas of interest are urban planning, housing and community facilities, has a 20-year history of administrative and executive positions of government. He has lectured in economics at the American university, Washington, D.C., the College of St. Thomas, St. Paul, and at the University. He has been a guest lecturer on housing and urban problems at New York university, the University of Michigan, the University of Colorado, and at Duke, Northwestern and Brown universities.

In addition to conducting informal seminars and discussions with both graduate and undergraduate students of architecture, McFarland also will deliver a series of four public lectures, Professor Vivrett said.

He will speak on:

"Urban Renewal at the Crossroads," May 6.

"Residential Rehabilitation---Can It Be Done?" May 13.

"Needed---An Urban Land Policy," May 20.

"New Directions in National Policy on Urban Affairs," May 27.

The public lectures will be presented at 3:30 p.m. on the four Thursdays in May in Murphy hall auditorium.

MODEL UNITED NATIONS ASSEMBLY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Approximately 500 university and college students from 45 institutions in a five-state area will take part in the 19th annual North Central Area Model United Nations assembly at the University of Minnesota Thursday through Sunday, April 8-11.

This is the fifth consecutive year that this conference, sponsored jointly by the Minnesota Student association and the International Relations club, has been held at the University. Participating students will be from Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota and Iowa.

Delegates to the Model United Nations meetings at the University are expected to be familiar with the government, economic conditions and foreign policy positions of the country which they have chosen to represent, according to John F. Fischer, 2886 Hamline, Roseville, this year's Secretary-General of the Model United Nations, College of Liberal Arts junior and conference director.

"Each student delegate is supposed to present the viewpoint of an actual delegate from that country rather than his own opinions," Fischer pointed out.

"The structure of the Model United Nations is the same as that of the real UN---including corresponding committees and councils, such as the Economic and Social Council, the Human Rights Committee and the Security Council."

Speaking to the delegates at the "model" UN will be two top-ranking officials of the "real" UN, Fischer announced---Alex Quaison-Sackey, permanent representative of Ghana to the UN and current president of the UN General Assembly, and Lord Caradon (formerly, Sir Hugh Foot), British Minister of State for Foreign Affairs and permanent United Kingdom representative to the UN.

Both will address the annual banquet and international variety show of the Model United Nations group Saturday evening, April 10, in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom. Tickets, at $3.25, may be reserved by calling the Model United Nations office at the University, 373-5409.

OBEDIENCE STUDY
TOPIC OF 'U' TALK
BY HARVARD EXPERT

Stanley Milgrom, assistant professor in the department of social relations at Harvard university, will speak on "The Behavioral Study of Obedience" at 8 p.m. Thursday (April 8) in Mayo Memorial auditorium, University of Minnesota.

The lecture, which is open free to the public, is sponsored by the campus chapter of Psi Chi, professional psychology fraternity, and the department of concerts and lectures.

In his talk here, Milgrom will review his research in obedience. In 1963 he published his first research report, dealing with the amount of punishment that ordinary people would administer to others when told to do so as part of an experiment. The punishments in the experiment were sham electric shocks so no one was actually hurt, but those administering the shocks did not know this, and the persons supposedly receiving the shock acted as if they were hurt.

Milgrom was surprised and even frightened at the amount of punishment the people would administer when obeying orders and therefore supposedly "not responsible". He wondered what conditions were responsible for the fact that obedience apparently overcame other types of behavior that would have prevented people from inflicting harm on others. He wrote in his report:

"Facts of recent history and observation in daily life suggest that for many persons obedience may be a deeply ingrained behavior tendency, indeed, a prepotent impulse overriding training in ethics, sympathy, and moral conduct."

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The first in a series of 12 television programs on "Man versus Time" will be shown Wednesday (April 7) from 9 to 10 p.m. on KTCA, channel 2.

Three University of Minnesota professors will open the series with a general discussion on the effect of time in the various social science fields. They are Professor David Cooperman, chairman of the social science interdisciplinary program, History Professor Robert S. Hoyt and Economics Professor Leonid Hurwicz. Hoyt and Hurwicz will serve as hosts for the program on alternate weeks thereafter.

The programs are planned so that one or two specialists in a field -- such as sociology, physics, philosophy or anthropology -- will talk about time as it limits and influences their area of knowledge. During their discussion, so-called non-specialists will ask questions as they might occur to the TV viewer. The non-specialists will have no particular knowledge of the field being discussed, but will be authorities or well-known people in other areas.

Specialists who will appear during April are Professor William A. McDonald, classics; Professor Herbert E. Wright, Jr., geology; Professor Roy G. Francis, sociology; and Professor George D. Freier, physics.

April non-specialists will include Professor Eleanor Fenton, assistant to the dean of the General Extension division; Donal Morrison, Minneapolis Star columnist; Minneapolis attorney Douglas M. Head; and St. Paul attorney and McKnight foundation president, Walter Trenerry.

The programs are sponsored by the University's Graduate School Research Center and will continue every Wednesday through June 23. They are the center's 17th annual public discussion series.

'DOC' EVANS
TO TALK AT 'U'
WEDNESDAY NIGHT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Doc" Evans, well-known Twin Cities jazzman, will talk about popular music of the thirties, as the third speaker in a University of Minnesota lecture series on "Minnesota's Temper of the Thirties."

He will speak at 8 p.m. Wednesday (April 7) in Mayo Memorial auditorium. Admission is by series ticket only.

The series is sponsored by the University's General Extension division.

Although Paul Wesley Evans is best-known as a jazz cornetist, his musical interests are far-ranging. He plays cello with the St. Paul Civic Symphony, and has composed several string quartets. He learned many instruments in childhood, including piano and violin, and played saxophone with the Carleton Collegians, a dance band, during his student days at Carleton college, in Northfield, Minn.

He later taught college English, but gave up teaching to devote his life to music. He plays in a traditional early New Orleans style. A native of Spring Valley, Minn., Evans now lives in Bloomington.

In his Wednesday-night talk, Evans will talk about the jazz musicians of the thirties, many of whom he knew.

A New York sculptor who works in a new medium and who has a large grouping on display at the New York World's Fair is teaching at the University of Minnesota this quarter.

He is Robert Mallary, and in addition to two regular classes, he will present two seminars in sculpture every week which are free and open to all University students and faculty without registration.

The seminars will be given from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays in Room 147 Holman building, at 2035 University ave., Minneapolis. The Tuesday topic will be repeated on Wednesday.

This week's subject (April 6 and 7) will be "The New York Scene." The topic for April 13 and 14 will be "Is There an Avant-Garde?"

Mallary, who is a teaching associate at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, N.Y., holds a Guggenheim fellowship in creative sculpture this year and has spent much time traveling in the United States. He came to the University from a six-week seminar at Yale and before that was an artist-in-residence at the Crocker Art gallery in Sacramento, Calif., for a month.

One of his most recent commissioned works is a large sculpture group entitled "The Cliffhangers" which hangs on the outside of the Theaterama building -- part of the New York state exhibit -- at the World's Fair.

He works in his own experimental medium, which he describes as plastic-impregnated clothing. His sculptures are included in several New York collections, including those of the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney museum and Governor Nelson Rockefeller. Mallary has had 17 one-man shows in various parts of the country.

(MORE)

He has exhibited once in this area, when four of his works were at the Walker Art center, Minneapolis, in the fall of 1963, in a show that represented the United States at the Sao Paulo, Brazil, Bienal. Mallary was in Minneapolis for the show's opening and took part in a panel discussion at Walker.

In the Walker show's catalog, Mallary's figures were described as "doomed souls" made from cloth, ashes and charred fragments.

"Mallary sees his art in relation to the idea of the theater of the absurd, in which tragedy and comedy merge and interact," said the catalog, titled "Ten American Sculptors". "His work forces our sensibilities to greater acuteness by the very rawness of his imagery."

While here, Mallary will be doing some sculpting and may make use of the University's casting facilities, since his Guggenheim grant includes funds for casting some of his work in bronze.

CLAUDE BERNARD MEMORIAL SYMPOSIUM
SET APRIL 15-17 AT MINNESOTA 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A symposium devoted to the work and memory of a renowned French physiologist, Claude Bernard, will be held April 15, 16 and 17 at the University of $\frac{1}{2}$ Minnesota College of Medical Sciences, with the support of the Hill Family foundation of St. Paul.

All meetings will be held in Mayo Memorial auditorium. Lectures will be given by two noted foreign scholars and 11 American scientists, including seven University of Minnesota professors.

The Claude Bernard symposium is being held in recognition of two anniversaries. It is 100 years since Bernard published his "Introduction to the Study of Experimental Medicine", which set the stage for modern medical research by introducing Bernard's principles of controlled animal experimentation aimed at testing logical hypotheses. The symposium also will be a part of the observance of the 75th anniversary of the founding of the University's Medical School.

University President O. Meredith Wilson will welcome visitors when the symposium opens at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 15. The first evening's speaker will be Professor Reino Virtanen of the University of Nebraska who will talk on "Claude Bernard and the History of Ideas". Virtanen has recently published a book under that title in which he traces the impact of Bernard's scientific work and writing on the course of literature and philosophy as well as medicine.

Dr. Alfred Fessard, professor of neurophysiology at the College de France in Paris, where Bernard did his work a century ago, will speak at 9 a.m. Friday, April 16, on developments in neurophysiology since Bernard first discovered that transmission of excitation from nerve to muscle could be blocked by the Indian arrow poison, curare.

(MORE)

At 8:30 p.m. Friday, April 16, Dr. B.A. Houssay, Nobel prize winner from Argentina and former professor of physiology at the University of Buenos Aires, will talk on Bernard's discovery of endocrine glands and on developments since.

Others will speak Friday morning and afternoon and on Saturday morning, April 17.

Professor Hebbel E. Hoff of Baylor university will cover one of Bernard's great discoveries, that of vasomotor nerves controlling blood vessels. Dr. Owen H. Wangensteen, noted Minnesota surgeon and student of the digestive system, will talk on Bernard's contributions to the physiology of digestion.

Dr. Franz Halberg, University professor of pathology, will discuss one of Bernard's most famous principles, the constancy of the internal environment of living cells. Dr. Arnold Lazarow, head of the University anatomy department, and Dr. Joseph Larner, University professor of biochemistry, will talk on developments in diabetes and carbohydrate metabolism since Bernard's discovery of the source of sugar in the body.

Some of the more important philosophical aspects of Bernard's contributions will be discussed by Professor D.C. Tosteson of Duke university and Drs. Francisco Grande, Frederick E. Shideman and Maurice B. Visscher, University professors. Dr. Roger Guillemin of Baylor university will present some previously unpublished notes of Bernard.

Dr. Visscher, head of the University's physiology department, will conclude the symposium at 11:45 a.m. Saturday, April 17, with remarks on "Claude Bernard and the Experimental Approach to the Study of Disease".

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"The Economics of Empire" will be discussed by Herbert Heaton, University of Minnesota professor emeritus of history, in the third annual James Ford Bell lecture Monday (April 12) in the University Alumni club, Sheraton-Ritz hotel, Minneapolis.

The lecture series is sponsored annually by members of the Associates of the James Ford Bell Collection, a group organized "to create greater awareness of the scholarly and cultural importance" of the James Ford Bell collection in the University's Walter library.

Professor Heaton's talk at 8:30 p.m. Monday will follow a reception at 5:30 p.m. and a 6:30 p.m. dinner in the University Alumni club. Reservations for the $4 dinner may be made with John Parker, James Ford Bell room curator, Walter library, University of Minnesota.

A native of Yorkshire, England, Professor Heaton, 17 East Elmwood place, Minneapolis, came to the University in 1927, was named chairman of the history department in 1953 and retired from the University faculty in 1958.

In addition to his teaching at the University, Professor Heaton has taught at universities in Australia and Canada and at Columbia and Princeton universities in the United States. As an economic historian, he has published hundreds of articles and books in this field and is particularly known as the author of "The Economic History of Europe".

A pioneer in the use of private business records as source material for economic history, Professor Heaton believes economic analysis is the key to dispassionate historical study of controversial periods such as the New Deal.

He also feels that politicians and economists think themselves "too omniscient" when it comes to dealing with economic cycles of prosperity and recession.

2 UN DIPLOMATS
MODEL UN MEET

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Two distinguished international diplomats, both of whom represent their countries in the United Nations, will address the Model United Nations Assembly this weekend (Thursday through Sunday, April 8-11) at the University of Minnesota.

His Excellency Mr. Alex Quaison-Sackey, permanent representative of Ghana to the UN and current president of the UN General Assembly, will deliver the keynote address to the 500-some university and college student delegates to the 19th annual North Central Area Model United Nations at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

Lord Caradon, British Minister of State for Foreign Affairs and permanent United Kingdom representative at the UN, will speak at the organization's annual banquet at 6:30^{p.m.} Saturday in the Union main ballroom.

Tickets at $3.25 for the banquet and the international variety show which will follow it may be reserved at the Model United Nations office, Room 131, Coffman Union, 373-5409.

Students from the five-state area of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin attending the conference are expected to be familiar with the government, economic conditions and foreign policy positions of the country which they have chosen to represent, according to John F. Fischer, 2886 Hamline, Roseville, this year's Secretary-General of the Model United Nations, College of Liberal Arts junior and conference director.

"Each student delegate is supposed to present the viewpoint of an actual delegate from that country rather than his own opinions," Fischer stated.

His Excellency, Mr. Alex Quaison-Sackey, president of the 19th session of the United Nations General Assembly, will give a convocation lecture on "The Problems of the United Nations" at 11:30 a.m. Thursday (April 8) in Northrop Memorial auditorium, University of Minnesota.

He also will give the keynote address at the Model UN conference at 3:30 p.m. Thursday (April 8) in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

Quaison-Sackey is the permanent representative of Ghana to the UN, and has been ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary since 1959. He has headed Ghana's UN delegation since the 14th General Assembly session, and was one of 13 vice presidents at the 16th session. He also served as president of the Security Council in June 1962 and in July 1963.

He was elected chairman of the UN Committee on Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories in 1960, and second vice chairman of the Governing Council of the UN Special Fund in 1961. He also has served on the UN Congo Conciliation Commission.

Quaison-Sackey was born in 1924 at Winneba, Ghana (then the Gold Coast). He studied at Achimota college and later, in England, at Exeter college, Oxford, from 1949 to 1952, toward an Honours degree in philosophy, politics and economics.

In 1948 he was president of the Political Youth organization in Winneba working for Ghana's independence. On his return from England he was named Ghana's labour officer, from 1952 to 1954, and also lectured for the Ghana People's Education association on economics and government.

He was one of the first foreign service officers appointed before his country's independence, and undertook studies in international law at the London School of

FILM ON WHALING
TO END MUSEUM
SERIES SUNDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

An unusually old film, taken aboard a whaling ship in 1916, will be shown at 3 p.m. Sunday (April 11) in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium, University of Minnesota. It will be the last program of the museum's 1964-65 Sunday series.

The movie is titled "Hunting the Sperm Whale---The American Whaler Brig Viola," and shows the capture and processing of a whale 90 feet long and 50 feet around, in the North Atlantic. The harpoon, darting gun, lance and bomb gun are shown, along with the removal and processing of blubber, and of sperm oil from several whales' heads.

"It's an amazing film---a world we've very nearly forgotten about", said William J. Price, assistant to the director of the University's Audio-Visual Extension Service. "It shows methods that are no longer used in whaling---everything done by hand labor."

For instance, said Price, the men on the Viola used knives on the end of long poles to cut the whale into pieces while it was still in the water, and then hauled up chunks of the whale by windlass.

The film is black and white and is silent, with captions. It was purchased from the Dartmouth Historical society, New Bedford, Mass.

Although this will be the last Sunday program this quarter, the museum will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays all summer, and the programs will be resumed on November 7, the first Sunday in November.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Claude Bernard, a famed French scientist who opened the way for modern medical research with his experiments of 100 years ago, will be the subject of a symposium to open Thursday (April 15) at the University of Minnesota.

Lectures by two renowned foreign scholars will highlight the three-day meeting, which will be held in Mayo Memorial auditorium.

They are Dr. Alfred Fessard, professor of neurophysiology at the College de France, Paris, and Dr. B.A. Houssay, Nobel prize winner from Argentina and former physiology professor at the University of Buenos Aires.

The symposium will be presented by the University's College of Medical Sciences on the 100th anniversary of the publication of Claude Bernard's "Introduction to the Study of Experimental Medicine." It also will be part of the medical school's observance of its 75th birthday. It has been made possible by funds from the Hill Family foundation of St. Paul.

Seven University professors and four scholars from other parts of the United States will also lecture. Professor Reino Virtanen of the University of Nebraska will give the opening address at 8 p.m. Thursday (April 15), after a welcome by University President O. Meredith Wilson and an introductory greeting by University Professor Francisco Grande.

Friday morning (April 16) lectures will be given by Dr. Fessard; Dr. Frederick E. Shideman, University head of pharmacology; and Dr. Hebbel E. Hoff of Baylor university. The afternoon's speakers will be Dr. Joseph Larner, University biochemistry professor; Dr. Arnold Lazarow, University head of anatomy; and Dr. Owen H. Wangensteen, famed Minnesota surgeon and University head of surgery.

Dr. Houssay will speak at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Talks will be given Saturday morning (April 17) by Professor D.C. Tosteson of Duke university; Dr. Roger Guillemin of Baylor; and Dr. Franz Halberg, University pathology professor. Dr. Maurice B. Visscher, University head of physiology, will give concluding remarks on Bernard, ending the symposium at 12:15 p.m. Saturday.

KOREAN DANCER
TO GIVE RECITAL
AT 'U' THURSDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A Korean classical dancer, scholar and critic will give a dance recital at the University of Minnesota Thursday (April 15).

Won Kyung Cho, of Seoul, Korea, will dance at 11:30 a.m. in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom. The recital will be the week's convocation program and will be co-sponsored by the Union board of governors and the department of concerts and lectures.

Cho will perform 10 dances representing court, folk and religious types, and will make use of a colorful variety of costumes, props and masks. He will be accompanied by authentic Korean music.

Cho was a visiting professor at the University of Washington last summer and will serve there again this summer. In the fall of 1963 and 1964, he was visiting professor at the University of Wisconsin. The dancer recently was awarded his doctor of fine arts degree from Monmouth college, Monmouth, Ill. He is the author of "Dances of Korea," an illustrated booklet published in 1962.

He has studied at the Martha Graham School of Contemporary Dance and the Juilliard School of Music and has given dance recitals at many places, including Carnegie hall and the Seattle World's fair. He has given master dance classes and lecture-demonstrations at colleges, museums and television stations throughout the United States.

Cho holds a master's degree from Yonsei university, and for five years taught literature and dance at Yonsei, Ewha Women's university and other colleges in Seoul. For 10 years he conducted his own dance studio in Seoul, served as dance critic for four newspapers and performed at the National theatre and City Hall theatre.

His current schedule includes a five-week tour of Europe in May and June.

'ETHICS AND SECURITIES MARKET'
TO BE TOPIC OF SYMPOSIUM AT 'U'

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE-220 MORRILL HALL
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
APRIL 12, 1965

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Two noted investment bankers will speak at a University of Minnesota symposium on "Ethics and the Securities Market", to be held the afternoon of April 20 in Room 170 Business Administration building, West Bank area.

The two are Robert W. Haack, president of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD), and George A. Newton, St. Louis investment banker and former vice chairman of the NASD board of governors.

In addition, two University faculty members will address the symposium: Maynard E. Pirsig, law professor, and Paul V. Grambsch, dean of the school of business administration.

The purpose of the symposium is to stimulate discussion of ethical issues in connection with the securities business, and each speaker will take up specific ethical questions. The symposium also is intended to honor Merrill Cohen, a leading Minneapolis businessman and chairman of the NASD board of governors at the time of his death in 1963, who was deeply concerned with ethical behavior in the securities market during his lifetime.

The symposium is co-sponsored by the Merrill Cohen Memorial Fund and the graduate school of business administration. All the talks will be open to the public without charge, and will be of particular interest to members of the Twin Cities business and financial community.

Dean Grambsch will give the opening address at 1:30 p.m., April 20 on "Ethics, a Turning Point in Business Survival". His talk will be followed by a short biography of Merrill Cohen. Then Professor Pirsig will speak on "Ethics and Dealers in Securities: Analogies From the Professions".

After a short break, Newton will talk on "Investment Banking and Securities, an Industry of Ethics", followed by Haack speaking on "Ethical Problems in Self-Regulation". After general discussion and a summary of ideas, the symposium will end.

According to Dean Grambsch, much of contemporary business literature shows that businessmen are giving serious thought to such questions as the social responsibilities of the impersonal corporation and the validity of historic concepts of ethics.

"Many writers believe that the present generation of managers has a more active social conscience and is more aware than any preceding generation of its social responsibilities", writes Grambsch. "It appears appropriate, then, that forums should be provided for discussing the ethical issues and for looking at ways of handling them".

Haack just became the first president of the NASD---a self-policing organization for the over-the-counter market which works under the supervision of the securities and exchange commission. On April 1 he took over from the former executive director. As president he has a stronger hand in running the organization in a move designed to tighten the NASD's control over member securities firms. The NASD is located in Washington, D.C.

A Milwaukee native, Haack for 24 years was with the investment firm of Robert W. Baird and Co., Inc., Milwaukee, and its predecessors, and had become vice president and partner. He has been a governor of the Midwest Stock Exchange and is experienced in all phases of the securities business: underwriting, sales, trading, and management. He also has served in official capacities with the NASD for the past five years, the latest as chairman of its 21-member board of governors.

Haack holds a master of business administration degree from Harvard university, and a bachelor's degree from Hope college, Holland, Mich. He and his wife, Catherine, live in Potomac, Md. They have four children.

Newton is a partner in the investment banking firm of G.H. Walker and Co., St. Louis, was vice chairman of the NASD board of governors in 1956 and on the board for two years before that. He was an associate lawyer with Scott, MacLeish and Falk, Chicago, from 1936 to 1942, where he did most of his work in the areas of securities legislation, anti-trust laws and trial practice.

He joined the U.S. Army Air Force in 1942, serving as trial judge advocate and legal officer in the procurement division, and after the war joined Walker and Co.

He is managing partner and general counsel with major responsibilities in the fields of underwriting, evaluations and private placement of securities.

Newton was born in Denver and holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Colorado. He received his bachelor of laws degree from Harvard university.

He is a member of the Investment Bankers Association of America and served as its president in 1961, and of the Sales Executives association, of which he was director from 1955 to 1960. He also has served as director of the University of Colorado Development foundation and of its Alumni association, and is treasurer of the Episcopal diocese of Missouri and trustee of the Diocesan Investment Trust. He and his wife have three children.

Professor Pirsig has been at the University law school since 1926 and served as its dean from 1948 to 1955. He has taught a course in professional ethics for 30 years and is the author of "Cases and Materials on Professional Responsibility", which he has just revised for its third edition. He also has written "Cases and Materials on Judicial Administration" and a two-volume work on "Minnesota Pleading", and was the principal author of the revised Minnesota criminal code which was passed by the 1963 State Legislature.

Pirsig has served as Minnesota commissioner on the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws since 1947, and chairman of its arbitration committee from 1953-58; member of the U.S. supreme court advisory committee from 1950-56; and associate justice of the Minnesota supreme court in 1942-43. He is currently a member of the Advisory Committee on Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Pirsig is a native of Elmore, Minn., and received his bachelor of arts and bachelor of laws degrees from the University. He is married and has three children.

'U' TO PRESENT
KOREAN DANCER
AT CONVOCATION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Ten Korean dances, varying/ⁱⁿ theme from the Nightingale Dance to the Old Man's Dance, will be presented by a Korean classical dancer, Won Kyung Cho, Seoul, Korea, at a University of Minnesota convocation Thursday (April 15).

Cho will dance at 11:30 a.m. in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom. The recital will be co-sponsored by the Coffman Union Board of Governors and the department of concerts and lectures.

Cho was a visiting professor at the University of Washington last summer and will teach there again this summer. He recently was awarded the doctor of fine arts degree from Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill.

He has studied at the Martha Graham School of Contemporary Dance and at the Juilliard School of Music and has given dance recitals at Carnegie Hall, New York, and at the Seattle World's Fair.

He holds a master's degree from Yonsei University, Korea, and for five years taught literature and dance at Yonsei, Ewha Women's University and other colleges in Seoul. For 10 years he conducted his own dance studio in Seoul, served as dance critic for four newspapers and performed at the National theater and at the City Hall theater.

ERNST KRENEK TO CONDUCT CIVIC ORCHESTRA CONCERT

(FOR MUSIC PAGE OR COLUMN)

Composer-author Ernst Krenek, exponent of the 12-tone technique, will be the guest conductor for the annual spring concert of the Minneapolis Civic Orchestra Thursday, April 22, at the University of Minnesota.

The concert, open free to the public, will be held at 8:30 p.m. in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom. The Coffman Union Board of Governors Classics Corner committee will sponsor the musical event.

Programmed are five of Krenek's compositions:

"Seven Orchestra Pieces", conducted by Thomas Nee
"Piano Concerto Number Four", conducted by Krenek and played by James Johnson
"The Seasons" directed by Robert Holliday
"Sestina" sung by Shirley Kartarik
"Eleven Transparencies" conducted by Mr. Nee.

Mrs. Kartarik and Johnson have appeared as guest artists with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

A native of Vienna, Krenek achieved initial success with his jazz opera, "Johnny Spielt Auf". He is the author of "Music, Here and Now", a survey of contemporary composers, and of "Studies in Counterpoint", a text on 12-tone technique. His works include many American subjects composed since he came to this country in 1937, such as "The Ballad of the Railroads" and "The Santa-Fe Time Capriccio" for the 'cello and chamber orchestra.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A conference on human relations will be held Wednesday and Thursday, April 21 and 22, at the University of Minnesota Center for Continuation Study.

Persons in the Twin Cities area who are connected with the resolution of social problems have been invited to attend. The sessions will deal with "The Role of Universities in Research on Social Problems" and will feature four major addresses.

Otis Singletary, director of the Job Corps in Washington, D.C., and on leave from his post as chancellor of the University of North Carolina, will open the conference at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday with a talk on "Universities and the Economic Opportunity Act."

He will be followed by Arnold Rose, University sociology professor. At the afternoon session, the audience will participate in a general discussion led by Singletary and Rose.

The following day, Associate Professor Warner Bloomberg, of the University of Wisconsin's department of urban affairs and extension, will speak at 9:30 a.m. His topic will be "The University as an Agent of Social Reform: Some Platitudes, Paradoxes and Practical Prerequisites". Bloomberg was head of a policy committee that advised the University of Wisconsin to establish an institute of human relations, which is being set up this year.

The second speaker on Thursday (April 22) will be Peter H. Rossi, director of the National Opinion Research center at the University of Chicago, who will speak on the limits of the role that universities can play in the area of solving human problems. Audience discussion will follow the talks and will be continued that afternoon.

The conference is being set up by Professor David Cooperman, chairman of the University's social science interdisciplinary program and chairman of President O. Meredith Wilson's committee on the University's role in social problems.

It is being financed in part by the Eleanor Roosevelt Memorial foundation. The grant to the University is one of the first awards made by this foundation to U.S. universities to advance work in the field of human rights.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Alfred L. Vaughan, associate dean of the University of Minnesota general college, recently was given an additional title: chairman of the University College committee and, as such, director of University College.

He was named by the University Board of Regents. The position formerly was held by Professor Francis M. Boddy, associate dean of the graduate school now on leave of absence. Professor Mitchell V. Charnley, assistant dean of the arts college, served as acting chairman until Vaughan took over on April 1.

University College, which was established in 1930, is designed to serve the unorthodox student who doesn't find what he wants under any existing program. The college has no separate faculty or classes, but draws from all existing schools. It allows an unusual student to follow a tailor-made curriculum toward a bachelor's degree.

As director, Vaughan interviews all students who apply to enter University College, considers their reasons for entering and checks their proposed curriculum.

"Students generally come to us about the end of their sophomore year or early in their junior year," Vaughan said. Vaughan has worked with these applicants for a long time, since he has been a University College committee member for 18 years. The college now has between 45 and 50 students.

Vaughan has been a faculty member at the University since he received his doctor of philosophy degree in physics there in 1934. He holds a bachelor of arts degree in physics from DePauw university, Greencastle, Ind. He now teaches a general college physics class in addition to his administrative duties.

Vaughan has served on various committees of the University Senate, the faculty organization. He is currently chairman of the Senate committee on intercollegiate athletics and a member of the committees on institutional relations and on scheduling.

In addition he serves on the executive council of the American Friends Service committee for Minnesota, working on various service projects for high school and college students. He and his wife live at 3941 Bloomington Ave., Minneapolis.

Cavorting clowns, can-can line rehearsals and chatter about "props", "grips" and "hit that baby spot" on the University of Minnesota campus herald the coming annual performance of the University Campus Carnival Friday and Saturday, April 23 and 24.

The two performances of the carnival will be held from 7 p.m. to midnight in the University field house, University and 19th aves., S.E., Minneapolis.

Tickets at 75 cents will be sold at the door.

Proceeds from this, the 52nd Campus Carnival to be presented, will go, as usual, to University scholarships, according to Anna Marie Huston, Student Activities Bureau counselor for the carnival. "We are aiming to top the 1963 high of more than $11,000 net proceeds," Miss Huston said.

Funds from "Carny" will be allocated to SPAN (Student Project for Amity Among Nations), the International Student Exchange Scholarship, the Dean Elmer Johnson Scholarship, Project Awareness scholarships and the Social Service Council's general scholarship fund, Miss Huston stated.

While from 200 to 300 University students appear as barkers, pitchmen, dancers, chorus girls, actors in skits and participants in running the food booths and the games, some 2,500 students actually work in "Carny", according to Miss Huston. "The behind-the-scenes work of the carpenters, scene painters, electrical crews, costumers, scene designers, script writers and musical directors tends to be a thankless job," she pointed out, "but there wouldn't be any 'Carny' without them."

Student groups from fraternities, sororities, residence halls and campus service projects frequently combine forces (one men's group plus one women's group, natch) in presenting the games and skits whose topics are the best guarded secrets of the University spring quarter.

Clowns there will be: some 16 clown acts are scheduled to enliven the campus scene and to appear at children's hospitals during the pre-Carnival week. Food there will be: pizza palaces, hot dog stands, chili-con-carne huts---these are prerequisites. Acts, skits, dancing girls, ballyhoo artists, "combos", barkers, circus tents and crowds, crowds, CROWDS---all these are part of "Carny".

'U' LANGUAGE FEST
SET APRIL 30 - MAY 1
ON ST. PAUL CAMPUS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---High school students and their teachers from all over the state have been invited to attend the third annual Modern Language Festival, scheduled for April 30 and May 1 on the University of Minnesota St. Paul campus.

The festival is designed for 11th and 12th grade students who are especially interested in a foreign language --- Spanish, French, German or Russian --- and their teachers. It will give students a chance to test their language skills and to learn more about both the language as it is spoken and the culture of those who speak it.

It will be sponsored by the Center for Continuation Study of the University's General Extension Division, in cooperation with the Minnesota Council of Teachers of Foreign Languages, the Minnesota Association of Teachers of Spanish, French, German, Slavic and East European Languages and the Minnesota Group for Linguistics.

Students and teachers will register from 6 to 7 p.m. April 30 in the St. Paul campus Student Center. From 7 to 10 p.m. they will split up into four groups according to language, and will spend the evening in a foreign setting in such activities as games, singing, dancing, skits and auctions. The groups will be titled "Moscow Nights", "Les Paysans Parisiens", "Fiesta Espanola", and "Ein Gemütlicher Deutscher Abend." Refreshments will be served.

On May 1, the day's activities will be held in Green hall. They were originally scheduled for Coffey hall until that building's auditorium was destroyed by fire April 12.

Fred E. Berger, director of the Continuation Study Center, and Percy Fearing, state foreign language consultant, will give introductions to the festival at 9 a.m. May 1. At 9:30 a film will be shown on "The Nature of Language."

Robert F. Spencer, University anthropology professor, will speak at 10 a.m. on "The Pueblo Indian---His Language and Culture". He will be followed by Angelo Cohn, editor of Minnemath Center reports in the University's mathematics and science center, who will talk on "Careers With Foreign Languages".

A luncheon is planned for 11:45 a.m. in the North Star ballroom of the Student Center, with tables arranged by language. After lunch each language group will present a program of entertainment in Green hall auditorium. The festival will end at 2:30 p.m.

An advisory committee helping to arrange the festival consists of Wolfgang Kraft, head of the White Bear Lake high school German department; Barbara McKinney, head of the Spanish department in North high school, Minneapolis; Donald C. Ryberg, Russian instructor at University high school, Minneapolis; and Melvin Therrien, French teacher at Highland Park senior high school, St. Paul, and president of the Minnesota Council of Foreign Language Teachers.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Avraham Harman, Israel's ambassador to the United States, will give a convocation address at the University of Minnesota at 11:30 a.m. Thursday (April 22).

Topic of the talk will be "Israel: Problems of Nation Building in the Modern Age". It will be free and open to the public, sponsored by the University's department of concerts and lectures.

Harman has been ambassador since June 1959. From 1953 to 1955, he served as consul general of Israel in New York and upon his return to Israel he was appointed assistant director general of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs in Jerusalem. In 1956, he was elected a member of the Executive of the Jewish Agency, a position he held until he became ambassador.

Harman was born in London in 1914 and received a law degree from Oxford university in 1936. In 1938, he settled in Israel (then Palestine) where he entered the service of the Jewish Agency. In 1948, he became deputy director of the Israel Government Press Office and in 1949, was named Israel's first consul general in Montreal, Quebec. In 1950, he was transferred to the United States as director of the Israel Office of Information and also as counselor to the Israeli delegation to the United Nations.

Harman is married and has three children. His wife, Mrs. Zena Harman, has served as director of the international organizations division in the Ministry for Foreign Affairs in Jerusalem.

ATMOSPHERIC RESEARCH

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The University of Minnesota was admitted this week to the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR), a non-profit corporation that operates the National Center for Atmospheric Research at Boulder, Colo.

It was admitted at the same time as the University of Hawaii, the two becoming the 20th and 21st members. The UCAR was formed in 1959 of 14 universities with graduate programs and research efforts in the atmospheric sciences. Its chief activity is to manage the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR), which is supported principally by the National Science foundation.

The NCAR is a basic research establishment dedicated to the understanding of atmospheric processes. It maintains research facilities and serves as a planning center for the development of large-scale research programs involving a number of institutions.

Walter Orr Roberts, director of UCAR, commented that there are already unique links between the University and NCAR.

"At the University of Minnesota, the late Professor Jean Piccard pioneered in the improvement of balloons for scientific use. In addition, Professors Edward P. Ney and John R. Winckler are co-chairmen of the advisory panel that reviews the performance of the NCAR Balloon Facility's work in developing balloon techniques and aiding balloon-borne scientific research."

The recipients will be Thorvald Schantz-Hansen, professor emeritus of forestry and former director of the University's Cloquet Forest Research center and also of the Itasca Forestry and Biological station, and Arthur L. Anderson, professor of animal science at Iowa State university, Ames.

The awards will be presented at a meeting of the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics Alumni association, to be held at 6 p.m. April 24 in the North Star ballroom of the St. Paul campus Student Center.

Also to be honored at the meeting is Mrs. Charlotte Verrell Jacobson of Minneapolis, who will receive an Alumni association certificate of service to home economics from Louise Stedman, director of home economics.

Schantz-Hansen, of 416 Chestnut st., Cloquet, is a native of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He received his bachelor of science degree from the University of Minnesota in 1915; his master of forestry and doctor of philosophy degrees from Yale university. He joined the University school of forestry in 1919 and in 1924 was put in charge of the Cloquet center. From 1933 to 1938 he also was in charge of the Civilian Conservation Corps program in the Cloquet forest. Directorship of the Itasca station was added to his duties in 1940. He retired in 1960.

He has written or co-authored about 100 scientific publications, including a book, "This Is Our Land: The Story of Conservation in the United States", written with E.G. Cheyney in 1940 and revised in 1946.

He has a world-wide reputation in the field of forest management, according to Frank Kaufert, director of the school of forestry, and his studies on jack pine, an important pulpwood species in the state, are regarded as among the best in the United States. He built the Cloquet Forest Research center into one of the finest field stations in the world, said Kaufert, with excellent facilities for fundamental and applied research. From 75 to 90 forestry students train there annually, as well as wildlife and forest specialists in various fields. He also rebuilt the Itasca station into a major biology and forestry training center which attracts students from all over the nation.

"Few living foresters have made as great a contribution to forestry in Minnesota or in the nation as has Dr. Schantz-Hansen," said Kaufert.

Anderson, of 428 Pearson st., Ames, has been with Iowa State university since 1920, after serving in the U.S. Army during World War I. He received his bachelor of science degree from the University of Minnesota in 1916 and later his master of science degree from Iowa State.

"Professor Anderson's career has been devoted to the teaching of animal husbandry, animal nutrition and swine production," according to Professor Alfred L. Harvey of the University's department of animal husbandry. "He is widely known in other states for his activities and writings, especially in the field of swine production and nutrition.

"He has been active in the swine, nutrition and teaching sections of the American Society of Animal Science, as well as in university, church and community affairs. He is known and respected by swine breeders throughout the United States and as a judge of swine at state and national shows, and in 1959-60 he represented the University of Minnesota in Korea as an agriculture adviser."

Anderson's first book, titled "Swine Enterprises" in 1931, has been revised several times and is widely used in high schools. His other best-known books are "Introductory Animal Husbandry" and "Swine Management", used extensively in U.S. colleges.

REAL ESTATE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A forum on "Real Estate Law" will be held Friday and Saturday, April 30 and May 1, at the Capp-Towers motor hotel, Minneapolis, presented by the Department of Continuing Legal Education.

The program will cover all major areas of real estate law and procedure, including reviews of title examination, mortgage foreclosures and cancellation of real estate contracts.

The Department of Continuing Legal Education was formed in December, 1964, financed jointly by the University of Minnesota General Extension division and the Minnesota State Bar association. It is located in Room 210, Center for Continuation Study, and its director is Austin G. Anderson.

The real estate forum will be its first program. A fee of $20 will cover the speeches, a luncheon on Friday, April 30, and a bound copy of the speakers' outlines. Registrations may be sent to the above address at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455. Checks should be made payable to the University of Minnesota.

Friday morning, between 9 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., speakers and their topics will be David L. Graven, University law professor, on "The Minnesota Contract for Deed" and George M. Maloney of Minneapolis on "Mechanics of Title Examination".

Friday afternoon's session will be held from 2 to 5:30 p.m. Two speakers will cover the topic of "Financing Real Estate Transactions": Richard L. Bye of Duluth will deal with residential property and Darrel M. Holt of Minneapolis will talk on commercial property. They will be followed by Benjamin Drake, Jr., of Minneapolis, talking on "Recent Developments in Condemnation Law".

Saturday's meeting will start at 9 a.m. and the conference will end at 1:30 p.m. Speakers will be John F. Scott, Jr., on "Foreclosures of Mortgages and Cancellations of Contracts Pertaining to Real Estate"; and John H. Frundt of Blue Earth on "Real Estate Transactions---Tax Problems and Pitfalls".

'U' GETS $50,000
KRESS FOUNDATION
ART HISTORY GRANT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The University of Minnesota art department has been awarded a $50,000 Samuel H. Kress Foundation art history grant, according to Professor Carl D. Sheppard, Jr., department chairman.

The money will be presented annually in five $10,000 awards, Sheppard said. Of each year's $10,000 allotment, $5,000 will be used for graduate fellowships in art history and $5,000 for art history teaching materials, slides, photographs and augmentation of library equipment.

The first $10,000 installment will be received by the start of the 1965-66 academic year in September, Sheppard said.

"Students in art history who will be eligible for graduate fellowships in this field from all over the country as well as those from Minnesota are urged to get in touch with us at once," he stated. "We will welcome applications from anywhere in the country."

The $50,000 grant to the University was one of three such grants in support of art history studies in the United States made this spring by the Foundation at its semi-annual board meeting in New York City. The other two went to the Warburg Institute of London and to the Biblioteca Hertziana, Rome, providing stipends for a year's study in each institution for an American student in the field.

The Samuel H. Kress Foundation, 221 West 57th St., New York, lists as its purpose: To promote the moral, physical and mental well-being and progress of the human race". The Foundation's new grants continue the program announced in October 1963 in which it expressed its intention to devote most of its future resources toward art history education and the subvention of programs intimately connected with art history.

Benjamin Youngdahl, professor of social work at Washington university, St. Louis, will speak on "Welfare in the Turbulent Thirties" at 8 p.m. Wednesday (April 21) in Mayo Memorial auditorium on the University of Minnesota campus.

Tickets at $1.50 will be available at the door. The talk is part of a series on "Minnesota's Temper of the Thirties" sponsored by the University's General Extension division.

Youngdahl was director of social service and later director of public assistance in Minnesota during the thirties, and has described the period as one of "great dedication and experimentation" as well as a time of great need and confusion.

He began his career as a high school principal at Marietta, Minn., and taught at Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter, Minn., from 1923 to 1933. In 1939, he joined the faculty of Washington university where he was dean of the School of Social Work from 1945 to 1962.

He has served as president of the American Association of Schools of Social Work, the American Association of Social Workers, and the National Conference of Social Work, and has published widely.

The remaining Wednesday-night lectures will be "The Arts: Protest and Discovery" by Donald R. Torbert, University art professor, April 28; "Recollections of an Internationalist" by Professor Harold C. Deutsch, chairman of the University history department, May 5; and "The Way It Was" by Bernice Dalrymple, "a citizen of the thirties", May 12.

Tickets will be available at the door for all remaining lectures.

FOR SCHOLARSHIP

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Approximately 2,500 University of Minnesota students will devote their efforts to raising more than $10,000 for student scholarships when the 52nd annual Campus Carnival opens at 7 p.m. Friday (April 23).

Two performances, on Friday and on Saturday evenings, will be held in the University Field House, University and 19th aves., S.E., Minneapolis.

Making up this year's "Carny" will be 14 shows featuring musicals, dances, bands, melodramas and ballyhoo lines and barkers; 9 games of chance including balloon-toss and dunking stools; and the traditional carnival food concessions, according to Anna Marie Huston, Student Activities Bureau counselor for the carnival.

"Last year's net proceeds from Campus Carnival totalled $9,300", Miss Huston said. "This year the students are determined to top this figure and to turn over at least $10,000 to the University's scholarships programs."

Carnival funds from the 1964 affair were allocated to SPAN (Student Project for Amity Among Nations)---$600; the International Student Exchange scholarships (the Free University of Berlin and Osmania university exchange scholarships)---$1,200; Project Awareness scholarship---$400; and the Social Service Council's general scholarship fund---$6,800.

HUMAN LEARNING RESEARCH CENTER
AT 'U' PLANS PUBLIC MEETINGS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The University of Minnesota's newly formed Center for Research in Human Learning will sponsor its first major public meetings in May, according to its executive director, Professor John G. Darley, chairman of the University psychology department.

Each meeting will feature three visiting psychology professors who will speak on the general topic of "The Strategies of Research in Human Learning". The first symposium will be held May 6, 7 and 8, and the second May 13, 14 and 15.

The first three speakers will be Kenneth W. Spence, psychology professor at the University of Texas, at 8 p.m. May 6 in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium; Benton J. Underwood, psychology professor at Northwestern university, at 8 p.m. May 7 in Mayo Memorial auditorium; and William K. Estes, psychology professor at Stanford university, at 2 p.m. May 8 in the museum auditorium.

Spence and Estes are among 27 psychologists in the United States who have received the Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award of the American Psychological association. The award, which was established in 1956 and includes a $1,000 prize, is given each year to three eminent psychologists in the APA, which has a membership of more than 20,000. Spence received it in 1956 and Estes in 1962.

The second symposium will feature Howard H. Kendler, psychology professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara, at 8 p.m. May 13 in the museum auditorium; Gordon H. Bower, associate professor of psychology at Stanford university, at 8 p.m. May 14 in Mayo auditorium; and James E. Deese, psychology professor at Johns Hopkins university, at 2 p.m. May 15 in the museum auditorium.

The Center for Research in Human Learning was formed last fall with funds from the National Science Foundation, the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, and the University graduate school.

Its main goal is to create a stimulating atmosphere in which research psychologists and educators can discuss and investigate both theoretical questions and practical technological problems in the general area of human learning, according to Professor Darley.

Faculty members are drawn from four University areas: the department of psychology, the educational psychology department, the Institute of Child Development and the Center for the Study of Programmed Learning.

"By drawing on the abilities and interests of Center members and of visiting scholars," said Professor Darley, "the Center hopes to foster a productive cross-fertilization of ideas which will lead to a better understanding of the nature of human learning, and to a successful translation of theory and laboratory studies into tools for dealing with everyday problems in education."

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Two University of Minnesota graduates will receive the University's highest honor, the Outstanding Achievement Award, at the annual meeting of the College of Education Alumni association, to be held in the Campus Club starting at 6 p.m. Friday, April 30.

The two are Professor Kenneth E. Anderson, dean of education at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan., and William J. Micheels, president of Stout State university at Menomonie, Wis.

Anderson, who was born in Minneapolis in 1910, earned his three degrees at the University - bachelor of science in 1932, master of arts in 1934 and doctor of philosophy, 1949. He began his career as a high school principal in Lake Bronson, Minn., from 1934-46, then in New Prague, Minn., from 1936-38. Between 1938 and 1942, he was junior and senior high school principal at Tracy, Minn., and superintendent of schools at Askov, Minn., from 1942-44.

In 1944, he joined the staff of University high school, Minneapolis, as an instructor, football and basketball coach and head of the science department, and later served as assistant director and as director of the school. In 1947, he became an education instructor at what was then Iowa State Teachers college at Cedar Falls, and principal of its Campus high school.

He joined the faculty of the University of Kansas in 1948 as an assistant professor of education and from 1950-52 was also director of the university's Bureau of Educational Research and Service. He was named full professor and dean of education in 1952. From 1955 to the present, he has also been director of the university's Kansas Institute for Research in the Education of Exceptional Children.

"Dean Anderson's leadership in national organizations and within his own state has been distinguished by a continuing concern for the improvement and the extension of educational research," according to the committee that nominated him for the award. "His sound approach to questions of teacher education make him an invaluable educational consultant or member of educational planning organizations."

Anderson has recently been selected to serve on the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education, a relatively new group developing standards and procedures for improving teacher preparation in the United States.

Micheels, a native of Menomonie, Wis., received his bachelor of science degree in 1932 at what was then Stout Institute at Menomonie. He earned two degrees at the University of Minnesota - master of science in 1938 and doctor of philosophy in 1941.

For four years he was an instructor in industrial arts at the Shelby, Montana, high school, and from 1936 to 1941 headed the industrial arts department at University high school, Minneapolis. During World War II he was first assistant director of the teacher training department, Armored Force school, at Fort Knox, Ky., and later worked in the Washington Office of Defense Transportation, as chief of the personnel training section, chief of the program planning section and assistant director of the division.

From 1946-61, Micheels taught trade and industrial education at the University, becoming chairman of the college of education's department of industrial education in 1954. In 1961, he became president of Stout State college, now Stout State university.

He has given international service to education on two assignments. In 1949, he was visiting expert for the training of demonstration school staff in Germany, for the U.S. departments of state and war. In 1958-60 he served in Indonesia as an consultant on a study committee of the Indonesian Ministry of Education and adviser to the Ford foundation.

In his government service during the war, Micheels "was eminently successful in revamping training practices to attain greater efficiency and improved quality of instruction," according to the committee that nominated him for the award. A book which he co-authored, "Measuring Educational Achievement", made "a significant contribution in the field of educational evaluation. Many of his publications have provided bases for improvement in curriculum, guidance, instructional organization and measurement."

Both Anderson and Micheels have belonged to many state and national education organizations and committees, and both have published extensively. "Each one is truly outstanding in his own field", said Marcia Edwards, associate dean of the University College of Education.

Five forms of creative arts---music, dance, art, architecture and literature---will be illustrated and discussed at the University of Minnesota the week of Sunday, (April 25) through Saturday, May 1, when the tenth annual Creative Arts Festival is presented in Coffman Memorial Union.

Student artists in the five fields will join forces with University faculty members in the concerts, plays, lectures, exhibitions and demonstrations making up the festival, according to Tom M. Stark, student counselor for Coffman Union Board of Governors, which will sponsor the festival.

Highlights in the Creative Arts Festival observances will include the week's keynote address by poet Allen Tate, University English professor and third Minnesotan ever to be elected member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters; daily folk music "get-togethers" with members of the Folk Song Society of Minnesota; an all-day student art sale; and four performances by an experimental work shop group of the play, "State of Siege" by Albert Camus.

Trigger for some interesting discussion on "Is the University Campus Beautiful?" by a panel of architecture faculty and students, Stark said, may well be photographs of a series of wash-drawings by the famed architect, Cass Gilbert, of "General Views Showing Ultimate Development of the University of Minnesota" in which Gilbert specifies that Washington avenue be carried underground through the campus, with an uninterrupted Mall extending from Northrop Memorial auditorium to the Mississippi river bank. The drawings, now in the possession of the University Archives, were done in 1908.

The annual special Creative Arts Festival convocation at 11:30 a.m. Thursday (April 22) will feature a panel discussion on "Does American Life Stifle Creativity?" by University faculty members, Donald N. Ferguson, emeritus professor of music, E. Paul Torrance, professor of educational psychology, Robert Moulton, professor of speech and theatre arts, and Leonard H. Unger, professor of English. The discussion will be moderated by John Ervin, Jr., director of the University Press. This special convocation, open free to the public, will be held in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

'U' MEDICAL GRADS
ARE MATCHED UP
FOR INTERNSHIPS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Minnesota is the most popular region for internships selected by members of the University of Minnesota's 1965 graduating medical class. Fifty-six class members, or 38 per cent of the graduates, will stay in Minnesota, particularly the Twin Cities area.

Dr. H. Mead Cavert, associate dean of the University's College of Medical Sciences, recently announced results of the 1965 National Internship Matching Program, under which medical students all over the country are matched according to their preference of hospitals for internships, and that of hospitals for interns. The University will graduate 146 medical students in June.

California was the second most popular choice, with 19 per cent going there. New York, West Virginia and Illinois will get 18 per cent, with the rest of the graduates distributed around the country.

More than half the class (61 per cent) chose hospitals directly affiliated with medical schools. Twenty-three per cent picked private hospitals, and 11 per cent, general county or city hospitals not affiliated with medical schools. The armed services and the United States Public Health Service will get 5 per cent of the graduates.

Rotating internships, which give experience in the major specialty areas of medicine, were selected by 76 per cent of the class. They were preferred by most students who intend to go into general practice, and by others who wanted broad clinical experience before training in a specialty.

Mixed internships, which provide extensive experience in two major fields such as surgery, pediatrics or obstetrics-gynecology, attracted 12 per cent of the class. The remaining 12 per cent picked a straight internship, concentrating in one major clinical field.

U OF M THEATRE
TO STAGE FIVE
PLAYS IN 1965-66

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Five plays, varying in authorship from Shakespeare and Ibsen to a yet unproduced effort of a new American writer, are tentatively scheduled for production by the University of Minnesota Theatre in its thirty-fifth season during the 1965-66 academic year, according to Professor Kenneth L. Graham, speech and theatre arts department head.

The schedule includes Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing", directed by Lee Adey, November 4-6, 9-14; Leonid Andreyev's "He Who Gets Slapped", directed by Maxine Klein, November 24, 26, 27, 30-December 5; Henrik Ibsen's "Brand", directed by guest director Douglas Campbell, artistic director of the Guthrie Theatre, Minneapolis, February 3-5 and 8-13; Eugene Labiche and Marc-Michel's "An Italian Straw Hat", directed by Robert Moulton, February 24-26 and March 1-6; and Robert Anderson's "The Days Between", directed by Wendell Josal, April 21-23 and April 26-May 1.

"The Days Between" is an American Playwright's Theatre play scheduled for production by 50 college and community theaters throughout the country prior to professional production.

Season tickets now are on sale through the Scott Hall box office, according to Merle Loppnow, University Theatre business manager, and orders for these from past season ticket holders will receive priority through Friday, April 30, he stated. All orders for season tickets received after this date will be filled in order of date of receipt.

'U' PROFS TO DISCUSS
CREATIVITY IN AMERICA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The question "Does American Life Stifle Creativity?" will be discussed by a panel of University of Minnesota professors at the annual Creative Arts Festival convocation Thursday, April 29, in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

Panel members will include Donald N. Ferguson, emeritus professor of music, E. Paul Torrance, professor of educational psychology, Robert Moulton, professor of speech and theatre arts, and Leonard H. Unger, professor of English.

John Ervine, Jr., director of the University Press, will moderate the group's discussion.

This 10th annual Creative Arts Festival at the University Sunday, April 25, through Saturday, May 1, will present events in art, drama, literature, music, architecture and the dance, according to Gweneth Kay Anderson, 5917 Penn ave., S., Minneapolis, College of Liberal Arts sophomore and festival chairman.

"This year's Creative Arts Festival committee of the Coffman Union Board of Governors desires to create an awareness of the fine arts in students, faculty and community members alike," Miss Anderson said. The convocation will be sponsored jointly by the Union committee and the University's department of concerts and lectures.

Nurses who work in industries rather than in hospitals have special communications problems, and these problems will be the center of attention at a coming Institute for Occupational Health Nurses.

The institute --- the 25th annual --- will be held May 6 and 7 at the University of Minnesota Center for Continuation Study, in cooperation with the health department and the Minnesota League of Nursing.

Speakers will include University faculty members in journalism, speech and rhetoric, an occupational health nurse and a Minneapolis educator.

Registrations along with a $20 Institute fee should be sent by April 30 to the center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455.

"Communication is a major responsibility and function of the occupational health nurse," said R. Kay Hymphrey, program director at the Continuation Study center, "She devotes most of her time to transmitting and receiving messages -- oral, written and wordless messages; querying, explaining, persuading. Her professional effectiveness depends on her communication skills.

"This institute is designed to identify the major factors in effective communication for the occupational health nurse. Special emphasis is given to the particular importance of wordless communication: gestures, facial expression, manner and tone of voice."

Among the speakers will be Arthur Ballet, University professor and speech and theatre arts; Virginia L. Carlson, nurse with the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co.; John G. Geier, assistant to the president of Northwestern college, Minneapolis; John Lippert, University special and evening class lecturer; Harold A. Miller, University assistant professor of rhetoric, St. Paul campus; and William A. Mindak, University associate professor of journalism.

Minneapolis---The book that was promised to thousands of University of Minnesota students by their professor during his 33 years as a teacher of speech has been published and now is available for their perusal, according to Bryng Bryngelson, emeritus professor of speech and clinical professor of pediatrics.

Professor Bryngelson's book, "Personality Development Through Speech", has been published by the T.S. Denison Publishing company, Minneapolis, and is on the stands in bookstores throughout the country.

Other books authored and co-authored by Professor Bryngelson include "Speech in the Classroom", "Know Yourself" and "Speech Correction Through Listening". He also is the author of hundreds of professional articles in the field of speech correction.

"Some 6,000 University students 'went through the psychologic mill' I write about," Professor Bryngelson said, "and I told them that they and their experiences would be the basis of this book of mine. Even the title, 'Personality Development Through Speech' is the title of the course that I taught for so many years."

Professor Bryngelson, who retired from the University faculty in 1960, established the Speech and Hearing Clinic in 1927 when the University speech department was created. In 1931, he established a speech clinic in the pediatrics department of the College of Medical Sciences where he also taught for many years.

He holds degrees from Carleton college, Yale university and the State University of Iowa and recently received the honors of the American Speech and Hearing association (the national group's highest award). He is an honorary member of the Northwest Pediatrics society and a member of Sigma Xi. Since his retirement, Professor Bryngelson has been guest lecturer at the University of Buffalo, the University of Syracuse and the University of Hawaii.

CENTER FOR GENETICS
ESTABLISHED AT 'U'

A Center for Genetics has been established at the University of Minnesota with the major goal of coordinating long-range planning in the area of genetics --- the biological science that deals with heredity, with applications in medicine as well as plant and animal breeding.

More specifically, the center's purposes are to strengthen the graduate students' training program, to bring together widely scattered faculty members who have a primary interest in genetics, and to serve as a focal point for research and the development of research proposals.

The center was authorized recently by University President O. Meredith Wilson, on the recommendation of William G. Shepherd, vice president for academic administration. Wilson named William E. Rempel, professor of animal husbandry, as director.

"We have a lot of geneticists at the University," said Professor Rempel, "but they are found in many different colleges and departments---botany, zoology, plant pathology, poultry science, horticulture and many others."

"The center will provide a strong central core for these faculty members, where they can get together to plan research programs, to decide what needs strengthening in our graduate students' training, and to keep up with the newest information in the field. And the center will give recognition to the importance of genetics in the biological studies at the University."

A genetics group, composed of University people interested in the field, has been meeting since 1961. One of the group's first tasks was to work out requirements for advanced degrees. In 1961, it set up curricula and examinations so that a student could earn a master of science or a doctor of philosophy degree with either a major or minor in genetics.

"This same group of about 35 interested persons will continue to meet," according to Rempel. "We have business meetings where we deal with graduate requirements or training grants, and we also have informative meetings at which one of the staff tells the rest of us about his particular work, so we can keep up with what is going on in the various areas of genetics."

One of the group's most recent accomplishments has been to obtain a new faculty member in biochemical genetics, an assistant professor who will join the department of agronomy and plant genetics this fall. The position will be financed partly by a National Institutes of Health training grant.

Three visiting social scientists will give a symposium on marriage Thursday (April 29) on the University of Minnesota campus. They will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday in Murphy hall auditorium on "Who Marries Whom---Mate Selection and Marital Adjustment".

The three are Roland G. Tharp, associate professor of psychology at the University of Arizona and director of the psychology department of Southern Arizona Mental Health center; George Levinger, associate professor in the School of Applied Social Sciences and the psychology department of Western Reserve university, Cleveland; and Charles D. Bolton, chairman of the sociology department of Portland State college.

The symposium will be open free to the public and co-sponsored by the Minnesota Family Study center and the department of concerts and lectures.

Tharp, a native of Galveston, Texas, earned his bachelor of arts degree at the University of Houston while winning awards for poetry and fiction. He did his graduate study at the University of Michigan, with a thesis on "Marriage Roles" for his doctor of philosophy degree. He has held various posts in both hospitals and universities, and has written a number of professional papers.

Levinger, who was born in Berlin, Germany, holds a bachelor of arts degree from Columbia college, New York City, a master of arts degree from the University of California and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Michigan. He has served as a research consultant at the Child Study Center of Philadelphia and has taught at the University of Michigan and Bryn Mawr college, Bryn Mawr, Pa. At Western Reserve since 1960, Levinger is currently conducting research studies "focusing on interaction in marriage, in which the family is examined in terms of its group properties". He has published widely, his most recent articles having to do with marital and family relationships.

Bolton, an associate professor of sociology, joined the Portland State faculty last fall. He has also taught at the University of California, Davis; the University of Illinois, Chicago; Colorado college, at Colorado Springs; and the University of Denver. He received his doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Chicago, master of arts from the University of Denver, and bachelor of arts from Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. His many articles include a recent one on mate selection.

A University of Minnesota art professor, Donald R. Torbert, will speak on "The Arts: Protest and Discovery" in this week's Wednesday-night series on "Minnesota's Temper of the Thirties". Tickets at $1.50 will be sold at the door. The lecture will be given at 8 p.m. Wednesday (April 28) in Mayo Memorial auditorium.

This summer, Torbert will conduct a travel seminar in European art for the fourth time. Those taking the course, which earns five University credits, will leave June 28 for seven weeks of travel viewing European cultural centers, museums and cathedrals. Among the places they will visit are Athens and the Greek Isles, Delphi, Rome, Florence, Venice, the Italian, Austrian and Bavarian Alps, Innsbruck, Munich, Paris and London. Torbert has led the group previously in 1954, 1956 and 1962.

Torbert joined the University faculty in 1936 as an instructor of art education in the college of education. He was on leave four years during World War II to serve in the U.S. Army Air Force, and on his return in 1946, he began studying for a doctor of philosophy degree, which he received in 1951.

He became a full professor of art in 1959 and spent the 1959-60 school year as a Fulbright scholar at the Ecole des Beaux Art in Paris. He served as acting chairman of the art department from 1961-63.

A native of Ohio, Torbert earned his bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees at Ohio State university. He has also studied art in New York City and Colorado Springs, Colo., and taught at Ohio State, Louisiana State and Syracuse universities before joining the University faculty.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

George D. Freier, University of Minnesota physics professor, will talk about standards of time on this week's University KTCA series on "Man versus Time", from 9 to 10 p.m. Wednesday on Channel 2.

Freier's thesis will be that fundamental concepts of time necessarily became involved with concepts of space and mass. He will be questioned by two "non-specialists": Mrs. Patricia Collins, wife of Professor Robert J. Collins, chairman of the electrical engineering department, and Walter Trenerry, St. Paul attorney and president of the McKnight Foundation.

Leonid Hurwicz, professor of economics, will be host this week. The programs make up the 17th annual public discussion series sponsored by the Graduate School Research center.

STRING CONGRESS
AUDITIONS SET
MAY 15 AT 'U'

(FOR MUSIC PAGE OR COLUMNS)

Auditions for scholarships for stringed instrument players to attend the American Federation of Musicians Congress of Strings summer project will be held Saturday, May 15, at the University of Minnesota.

Interested string players whose ages range from 16 to 22 years are eligible to audition for the scholarships, said Professor Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music and music education departments at the University.

Auditions will start at 10 a.m. in room 104 Scott hall on the Minneapolis campus.

The A.F. of M. Congress of Strings scholarships include transportation to the group's summer location at Michigan State university, East Lansing, Mich., board and room for the eight-week session, private instruction with leading string instructors in the country, and ensemble and string orchestra coaching, Professor Oberg stated.

One hundred A.F. of M. Congress of Strings scholarships are awarded each year to young musicians from the United States and Canada.

Any interested string instrument student musician, man or woman, may apply for further information on these scholarships to Thomas Loberg, Minneapolis Musicians association, 32 Glenwood Avenue, Minneapolis.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A five-day national conference on research in the area of vocational and technical education will be held at the Center for Continuation Study at the University of Minnesota Monday through Friday (May 3-7).

Approximately 40 persons who are outstanding in their fields will attend by invitation, according to the seminar's general chairman, Professor Howard F. Nelson, chairman of the University's department of trade and industrial education. They will be in the areas of home economics, business education, distributive education, agriculture, trade and industrial education and industrial arts.

The seminar will be one of four being held this spring on different campuses, financed by the U.S. Office of Education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The seminars are an outgrowth of the Vocational Education Act of 1963, which provided greatly increased federal funds to help vocational schools strengthen and expand their courses and develop new training programs. The Act authorized 118 million dollars for the current fiscal year, $177,500,000 for the fiscal year from July 1, 1965, through June 30, 1966.

Ten per cent of these funds are earmarked for colleges and other non-profit agencies to be used for research and experimental or pilot programs. The campus seminars are designed to help educators plan and develop such research proposals and submit them to the U.S. Office of Education.

An example of this type of research would be a study of how Minnesota vocational schools select their students, and how this procedure could be improved so that the most promising trainees are accepted in each field of study.

Among the conference speakers will be Duane Nielson, director of resources development in the training branch of the U.S. Office of Education, and David Krathwohl, Michigan State university education professor.

Robert J. Keller, dean of the University college of education, will welcome the participants. Others on the program, all from the University, will be Donald G. MacEachern, assistant professor of education; Associate Professor David P. Campbell, director of the Interest Measurement Research center; Richard Elliott, research contract coordinator; and Donald K. Smith, assistant vice president for academic administration.

Minneapolis---Kurt Adler, Metropolitan Opera chorus master and conductor, and Julius Herford, nationally known choral arts workshop lecturer, will head the fifth annual Choral Arts Institute to be held this summer at the University of Minnesota.

Adler will be musical director and Herford study director for the choral seminar to be held at the University's Center for Continuation Study June 21-29.

Highlight and finale of the class work will be the performance by Adler's group choir of Verdi's "Requiem" in conjunction with the Summer Session Symphony Orchestra on the evening of June 29 in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

The Choral Arts Institute is planned primarily for choral directors who have completed courses of study in music, according to Harry Dederling, program director of the Center for Continuation Study. However, Dederling stated, other choral directors and undergraduate music students will be accepted. Registrants may apply to receive three University credits (graduate or undergraduate) for the course.

University Institute sponsors include the Summer Session, the department of music, the department of concerts and lectures, the Center for Continuation Study and the General Extension Division.

Fee for the institute is $60 which does not include meals or lodging. Lodging will be arranged for out-of-town choral directors attending the institute.

Herford will guide the institute participants in studying the choral works of Joseph Haydn, including his masses, songs, canons and the oratorio, "The Creation".

Institute seminar topics, also under Herford's tutelage, will include: choral methods, audition procedures, singing teaching for choirs, solo literature, accompanying, sources for choral materials, sources for program notes and children's choirs.

For further information on the 1965 Choral Arts Institute, write: Center for Continuation Study, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, 55455, Minn.

Registration deadline is June 15.

ENGINEERING-BOUND H.S. STUDENTS TO BE 'U' GUESTS ENGINEERS' DAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Some 400 Minnesota high school students interested in engineering as a career will tour the University of Minnesota's Institute of Technology facilities during the annual Engineers' Day ("E"-Day) Thursday (May 6). They also will hear the "E" Day convocation address by Joseph S. Shea, manager of the Apollo Spacecraft Program.

The annual high school student visitation to the Institute of Technology serves as the kickoff to the "E"-Day observance, according to Professor Frank Verbrugge, associate dean of the institute.

Scheduled programs for the high school students include tours from 8:30 to 10 a.m., of industrial exhibits set up throughout the Architecture building, comprehensive tours of the Institute of Technology facilities from 10 to 11:15 a.m., and attendance at the "E" Day convocation at 11:30 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Shea, director of the United States' effort to put men on the moon and to return them to earth---the Apollo program of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA)---will speak on "The Apollo Program---The Forward Sweep of Technology" at the convocation.

Following a picnic lunch for the high school students at 12:30 p.m. in the Main Engineering courtyard at which a number of engineering faculty and students will be present to talk with the students, the young prospective engineers will visit specific engineering departments that particularly interest them, Verbrugge stated. Faculty members will be present in these departments for consultation and comment.

On arrival, Dean Verbrugge said, the students are requested to assemble inside the front door of the Architecture building where maps, programs and bulletins on the day's programs will be given them.

Open house tours of University of Minnesota engineering facilities, a convocation address on NASA's Apollo spacecraft program, a parade and the knighting of this year's St. Pat", will highlight the 51st observance of Engineers' Day ("E"-Day) Thursday through Saturday (May 6,7 and 8) at the University.

"E"-Day actually has grown far beyond a single 24-hour day, according to Larry C. Burton, 5845 Zenith ave., S., Edina, 5th-year chemical engineering student and "E"-Day publicity chairman.

"Events for 'E'-Day will start Thursday morning with open house tours for high school students and our annual special convocation in Northrop Memorial auditorium," Burton explained. "Friday we will continue with the morning open house tours for the general public and will stage our customary 'fun' day with a campus parade at 11:30am, our royalty crowning ceremonies at 12 noon, and our picnic. We will close our celebration with the "E"-Day Brawl Saturday night at the Curtis hotel."

Joseph F. Shea, manager of the Apollo spacecraft program office for NASA, Houston, Tex., will deliver the convocation address at 11:30 a.m. Thursday in Northrop Memorial auditorium. He will speak on "The Apollo Program---The Forward Sweep of Technology". The talk will be open to the public.

The open house tours of many of the University's Institute of Technology departmental exhibits and of industrial displays of engineering materials and equipment in the Architecture building and in the engineering buildings on the Minneapolis campus will open to the public at 8 p.m. Friday.

Bands, floats, marchers and student St. Pat and Queen Colleen candidates will make up Friday's "E"-Day parade through the campus at 11:30 a.m.

Following the parade, traditional St. Pat ceremonies will be held in the court east of the Main Engineering building. Dean Athelstan Spilhaus of the Institute of Technology will "knight" St. Pat for 1965, will salute the new Queen Colleen and will announce winners of top departmental awards.

The annual "E"-Day Brawl from 9 p.m. Saturday to 1 a.m. Sunday at the Curtis hotel, Minneapolis, will complete the 1965 celebration of the University engineers' holiday. Tickets for the dance may be obtained at the door.

Minneapolis---Dorothy M. Leahy, a professor of home economics education in the graduate school of education at the University of California, Los Angeles, will receive the University of Minnesota's Outstanding Achievement Award, May 15. The award is given to alumni who have distinguished themselves in their chosen fields.

It will be presented at the annual meeting of the Minnesota Alumnae club at 1 p.m. at the Midland Hills Country club, St. Paul. University President, O. Meredith Wilson will address the group on "Education and Women".

Miss Leahy received a bachelor of science degree in home economics from the University in 1922. She later received master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from Columbia university, New York.

Before joining the U.C.L.A. faculty in 1948, Miss Leahy was a professor of home economics at Florida State university, Tallahassee, for four years, and an assistant professor of education at the University of Connecticut, at Storrs, five years. She also has taught at Columbia university and at three Minnesota high schools; Central in Minneapolis, Belle Plaine and Pine Island.

She has also served as a summer visiting professor at Colorado A & M college, Fort Collins; University of British Columbia, Vancouver; and Long Beach (Calif.) state college.

Miss Leahy has served in numerous college, state and national organizations concerned with home economics education and curriculum, nutrition and public health instruction, teacher education, and higher education in California. Her biography has appeared in "Who's Who in America" since 1954 and she has been an editorial adviser for the Encyclopaedia Britannica since 1953.

Her research projects have ranged from a "Survey of Drop-outs in Home Economics in Land-Grant Institutions" to "The Femininity of College Home Economics Majors". She has written many articles and papers and has co-authored a book, "You and Your Family", which has been translated into Japanese.

Miss Leahy was born in Minneapolis and graduated from Central high school there.

Three psychology professors will give public talks this Thursday, Friday and Saturday (May 6, 7 and 8) at a symposium sponsored by the University of Minnesota's new Center for Research in Human Learning.

A second symposium with three more visiting psychologists will be presented the following week, May 13, 14 and 15. Both symposia will be titled "The Strategies of Research in Human Learning".

In addition to the three talks, each symposium will feature coffee hours Friday morning and afternoon and Saturday morning, at which the visitors will talk with staff members and interested graduate students in Room 108 Psychology building.

This week's speakers will be Kenneth W. Spence, from the University of Texas, at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium; Benton J. Underwood of Northwestern university at 8 p.m. Friday in Mayo Memorial auditorium; and William K. Estes of Stanford university at 2 p.m. Saturday in the museum auditorium.

A public reception will be held in the museum lobby following Thursday's talk.

Professors Spence and Estes both have received the Distinguished Scientific Contribution award, which is given to three psychologists each year by the American Psychological association. The award, which includes a $1,000 prize, was given to Spence in 1956, the first year it was established, and to Estes in 1962.

Spence joined the Texas faculty in 1964, after 26 years at the State University of Iowa, at Iowa City, where he was head of the psychology department. For five years before that he was a National Research Council fellow in the Yale Laboratories of Primate Biology, a research assistant at Yale, and assistant professor at the University of Virginia.

He holds a doctor of philosophy degree from Yale, and bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from McGill university, in Montreal.

Spence has received many honors for his research. The citation for his Distinguished Scientific Contribution award notes that he has "analyzed, clarified and simplified the major differences among competing theories of learning, through the realistic development and application of the logic and philosophy of science to theory-construction in psychology".

Estes, a native of Minneapolis, received bachelor of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Minnesota. His graduate research work included assisting in the development of the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory and working with B.F. Skinner on the experimental analysis of behavior.

He joined Stanford university in 1962 and became a member of the Institute for Mathematical Studies in the Social Sciences. He had been at Indiana university, Bloomington, for 16 years before that, as well as visiting professor at the Universities of Wisconsin, Northwestern and London; Faculty Research Fellow of the Social Science Research council from 1952-55, and fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences in 1955-56.

He has been editor of the "Journal of Experimental Psychology" and is currently serving a five-year term as editor of the "Journal of Comparative and Physiological Psychology". His areas of concentration include quantitative methods.

Underwood has been at Northwestern university since 1946 and has also taught at George Washington university in Washington, D.C. He received his doctor of philosophy degree from the State University of Iowa, master of arts degree from the University of Missouri, and bachelor of arts degree from Cornell college. His special area of research is retention in human learning.

The Center for Research in Human Learning was formed last fall with faculty members drawn from the University's departments of psychology and educational psychology, the Institute of Child Development and the Center for the Study of Programmed Learning. Its purpose is to bring together research psychologists and educators for discussion and investigation of problems in the field of human learning, according to Professor John G. Darley, executive director of the center and chairman of the psychology department.

APOLLO CHIEF
ENGINEERS' DAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Joseph F. Shea, manager of the Apollo Spacecraft Program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) will address the annual Engineers' Day ("E"-Day) convocation Thursday (May 6) at the University of Minnesota.

He will speak on "The Apollo Program---the Forward Sweep of Technology" at 11:30 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium. The program, jointly sponsored by the "E"-Day committee and the department of concerts and lectures, will be open to the public.

The Apollo program is the culmination of the late President John F. Kennedy's national objective "to land a man on the moon and to return him to earth by 1970". The Apollo spacecraft will be made up of three modules to be launched by Saturn I-B rockets. At launch, the command module with its rocket escape tower will be at the top. Under this will be the service module and the LEM (Lunar Excursion Module).

The command module is designed to accommodate three astronauts in a "shirtsleeve" environment with the controls and equipment for the trip to the moon and return. This module stands 11 feet tall, has a base diameter of 13 feet and weighs about 5 tons, according to NASA specifications.

The service module is equipped with rocket engines and fuel supplies to enable the astronauts to propel their craft into and out of lunar orbit and to change their course in space. The service module, weighing 24 tons, is 23 feet high, and 13 feet in diameter. It will be jettisoned just before the Apollo reenters earth's atmosphere on the trip "home".

The LEM is the "space ferry" that will take two astronauts down to the moon while the third stays in the command module. On the moon, one astronaut will remain in LEM while the other leaves the capsule and investigates the moon's surface. Then LEM will carry them back from the moon's surface into lunar orbit where it will rendezvous with the command and service modules.

At launch from the earth, LEM weighs about $14\frac{1}{2}$ tons. It is some 20 feet high and also has a base diameter of 13 feet. Among LEM's equipment are rockets for slowing down before landing on the moon, rockets for launch from the moon and for maneuvering in orbit and five spiderlike legs that will be extended to support the spacecraft on the moon's surface. The legs and landing rockets will be left on the moon.

Shea was appointed manager of the Apollo Spacecraft Program Office, NASA, in Houston, Tex., in 1963. Previously he was deputy director, systems, of NASA's Office of Manned Space Flight where he directed the systems engineering effort of the manned-flight space programs. Before joining NASA in 1959 he was with the A.C. Spark plug division of General Motors, Milwaukee, where he served as director of the advanced system research and development division and as manager of the Titan inertial guidance program. Prior to that, he was employed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Whippany, N.J., as military development engineer. He also has served as an instructor in engineering mechanics at the University of Michigan.

A native of New York City, Shea received the bachelor of science, master of science and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Michigan. He is a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, the Society of Mechanical Engineering, the Institute of Radio Engineers and the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

In February 1965, he received the Arthur S. Flemming award as one of the ten outstanding young men in Federal Government.

"A Clergyman and the Disadvantaged Parishioner" will be the theme of the thirteenth annual Institute for Clergymen to be held next Tuesday and Wednesday (May 11 and 12) at the University of Minnesota Center for Continuation Study.

"Our planning committee was fortunate in being able to get persons who can speak with authority on the disadvantaged in our society," said Fred E. Berger, director of the Continuation Study center.

They will include Beulah Compton, University professor of social work, who will talk on "The Pastors' Resources for Disadvantaged Families", and John Geier, assistant vice president of Northwestern college, Minneapolis, and associate professor of rhetoric on the University's St. Paul campus, who will speak on the psychological principles used to communicate with "All Sorts and Conditions of Men".

Robert Evans, pastor of Minneapolis' Prince of Glory Lutheran church, and Robert Lesh, rector of Minneapolis' All Saints' Episcopal church, will discuss "This Is Where the Action Is", and Robert Johnson, county attorney of Anoka county and chairman of the Governor's Advisory Council on Children and Youth, will speak on "The Preferred Position of the Clergyman With Respect to the Disadvantaged".

"Private and Public Faith" will be the topic of Arthur Johnson, University sociology professor. Henry E. Allen, University coordinator of student religious activities, also will participate.

Those attending will take part in group discussions according to the type of area they serve: rural, suburban, town or city.

Fee for the institute, which is open to clergymen from the entire state, is $15, including two luncheons at the center.

Daily newspaper editors from six states will attend the annual Conference of News Executives at the University of Minnesota school of journalism May 14 and 15, to discuss professional problems and to hear talks on current affairs.

Charles Roberts, White House correspondent for Newsweek, will talk on "Lyndon Johnson's Washington" at the dinner session May 14 in the Minnesota Press club. Roberts, a Minnesota journalism graduate, has covered the White House during the Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson administrations and was one of two reporters aboard the presidential plane returning from Dallas after President Kennedy's assassination.

Arthur J. Snider, science editor of the Chicago Daily News, will head a Friday panel discussion of "Science News and Your Readers." Joining him will be Victor Cohn, Minneapolis Tribune; Robert J.R. Johnson, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, and Harold Quarforth, Modern Medicine.

Reports on printing of daily newspapers by the offset printing process will be made by James L. Vance, Worthington Globe; Dick Martin, Dubuque (Ia.) Telegraph-Herald, and Walter K. Mickelson Jr., Fairmont Sentinel.

Professor Paul C. Rosenbloom, director, will head a group from the University's School of Mathematics and Science Center explaining the "New Math" program to the editors. Discussants will be Clarence Burgeson, Austin Herald; Kenneth Allen, Albert Lea Tribune, and Orville E. Lomoe, Duluth Herald and News-Tribune.

Discussing news photography trends will be Cal Olson, Fargo (N.D.) Forum; Myron Hall, St. Cloud Times, and John M. Connelly, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.

Richard P. Cunningham, Minneapolis Tribune staff writer, will be the Friday luncheon speaker.

A discussion of the role of the newspaper in criticizing and encouraging the arts will be led Saturday morning by Bradley G. Morison, public relations director of the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre. Joining him will be Ron Lorenzen, Davenport (Ia.) Times-Democrat; Charles Withers, Rochester Post-Bulletin, and Guilbert W. Jarvis, Little Falls Transcript.

Problems of newspaper staffs will be surveyed by L.E. Swanberg, Faribault Daily News; Arlin Albrecht, Red Wing Republican Eagle; Les Sellnow, Brainerd Dispatch; Don Casey, Moline (Ill.) Dispatch, and Terry Bormann, Winona Daily News.

Byron G. Taft, Yankton (S.D.) Daily Press & Dakotan, is conference chairman. Presiding at various sessions will be Jack Hagerty, Grand Forks (N.D.) Herald; Deemer Lee, Estherville (Ia.) Daily News; Ralph W. Anderson, Eau Claire (Wis.) Daily Telegram and Leader; and William E. Macklin, New Ulm Journal.

Serving with Taft on the program committee are Robert L. Jones, director of the school of journalism, and Professor Edwin Emery.

'U' OFFERS 3 MAIL
LANGUAGE COURSES
FOR GRAD STUDENTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

For the first time, graduate students at the University of Minnesota may fulfill their foreign-language requirements by taking a correspondence course.

The three courses now being offered for this purpose are French 17A, Spanish 17A and German 17A-B. Any student who completes one of these courses will be given essentially the same final examination as regular students take and, if he passes, will receive graduate-school credit for reading knowledge of a foreign language.

Further information is available from the Correspondence Study Department, 254 Nicholson Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455. The phone number is 373-3256.

HOW TO TEACH
BEGINNING PHYSICS,
'U' MEET TOPIC

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---How to teach introductory college physics is the subject of a three-day conference now being held at the University of Minnesota through Saturday (May 6-8).

Approximately 100 physicists and interested observers from several other fields are attending or addressing the conference in Room 170 Physics building. They represent 50 major institutions around the country.

The major discussion revolves around five experimental courses that have been tried out on five campuses. Two other programs, mainly involving new apparatus, also are on the agenda.

The new approaches to introductory physics have been designed for students majoring in science and engineering. The five are the Feynman course, developed at the California Institute of Technology (Caltech); the Berkeley course, from the University of California; the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) course; the Washington university course, and the Bryn Mawr course.

New apparatus being discussed was developed at Dartmouth college and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

At the conclusion of the conference, recommendations will be made as to the most effective use of the various new materials: at what types of colleges they would be most effective, for what particular groups of students, etc. The report of the recommendations committee also will include what still needs to be done to improve undergraduate physics courses.

The conference is sponsored by the Commission on College Physics, which is financed by the National Science Foundation. The commission, with headquarters at the University of Michigan, was set up five years ago "to stimulate activity in education at the undergraduate level, and to make known the results of such activity," according to Arnold Strassenburg, one of the commission's three staff physicists, who is attending the University meeting.

PHYSICS

The commission consists of 17 to 20 physicists elected nationally by their colleagues. Heading the commission at present is Professor Matthew Sands of Stanford university, who is attending the conference and who was instrumental in developing Caltech's Feynman course. James H. Werntz, associate professor of physics at the University, is in charge of the conference.

Professors Alfred O.C. Nier, chairman of the School of Physics, and Frank Verbrugge, associate dean of the Institute of Technology, are past members of the commission and are attending the conference. In all, 17 University physicists are taking part, including one from Duluth, plus three state heads of physics departments: Philip Youngner, St. Cloud State college; and Robert Reitz, Carleton college, and Thomas Rossing, St. Olaf college.

In addition to physicists, a number of people are attending whose disciplines are closely connected with physics, and whose courses would most likely be affected by changes in the physics curriculum. They represent mathematics, chemistry and various types of engineering.

Physics professors on the program who are well-known in their fields include Victor Neher of Caltech; Alan Portis and Walter Knight of the University of California, Berkeley; Anthony French and John King of MIT; Walter Michels of Bryn Mawr and Robert Resnick of Rensselaer. Also attending is Morton Hamermesh, physicist at Argonne National laboratory who will head the University's physics department as of this September.

PRE-COLLEGE SUMMER
COURSES OFFERED
AT ST. PAUL CENTER

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Seven courses for high school graduates who plan to attend college will be offered this summer at the University of Minnesota's St. Paul Extension center, Ninth and Exchange.

The classes will be in English, mathematics and study skill, and are designed either to fill course needs at the pre-college or the freshman level, or to provide specific skills which will be of value all through college.

The program will run from June 14 through Aug. 22, with classes held in the afternoon or evening. Students may take just one course or as many as they want. The program is an offering of the University's General Extension division.

Courses to be offered are Preparatory Composition; Freshman Composition; Intermediate Algebra; College Algebra and Trigonometry; Efficient Reading; Vocabulary Building, and How to Study.

Registration will be held from May 31 through June 10, from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1:30 to 8 p.m. at the Extension center. Descriptions of the courses, fees and further information are available from the College Anticipation Program, St. Paul Extension Center, Ninth and Exchange, St. Paul, Minn., 55102. Minneapolis---Graduating seniors at the University of Minnesota will don their caps and gowns for the first time Wednesday (May 12) and will join faculty members for a procession up the campus Mall for Cap and Gown day ceremonies.

Approximately 3,670 seniors will take part in the traditional march up the Mall and then will enter Northrop Memorial auditorium for a convocation at 11:30 a.m. Several thousand honor students and winners of awards or scholarships also will be recognized during the program.

Professor Lloyd Short, who is retiring after 30 years of teaching political science at the University, will give the convocation address on "The University and the Public Service". Traditionally, a retiring faculty member gives the Cap and Gown day talk.

Presiding officer at the ceremonies will be Paul H. Cashman, assistant vice president for educational relationships and development. He will introduce James W. Rustad, law sophomore and outgoing president of the Minnesota Student association, who will speak for the Class of 1965; and President O. Meredith Wilson, who will speak for the University.

Following Professor Short's address, William G. Shepherd, vice president for academic administration, will present recipients of scholarships, fellowships, awards and prizes; members of honor societies and all students with a "B" average of above; and all members of the graduating class.

Special guests will be members of the class of 1915, holding their 50th reunion. They will march in at the end of the procession up the Mall, and will be seated in a special section at the front of the auditorium.

Maurice B. Mitchell, president of Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc., will speak at the University of Minnesota's Education Day convocation Thursday (May 13) at 11:30 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

His topic will be "Education for the Great Society". The talk, sponsored by the department of concerts and lectures, will be free and open to the public.

Before assuming his present post in 1962, Mitchell had served for nine years as president of Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, Inc., a subsidiary of the parent company.

While there he directed a group of 250 specialists engaged in producing and distributing educational films and filmstrips all over the world. Under his direction the firm produced several complete science courses on film, the first of their kind, which have been widely used in science education in the United States and abroad.

Mitchell also has pioneered in the field of programmed self-instruction, heading the production by psychologists and math specialists of programmed curricula in mathematics which were released for distribution in 1961-62.

He was honored with a doctor of laws degree from the University of Denver in 1958, which cited his vital creative leadership in the field of audio-visual teaching and his "myriad contributions to the communications industry".

Mitchell, a native New Yorker, attended New York university and began his career with the New York Times. He later worked on several New York newspapers as editor or advertising manager and, after serving in the army in World War II, joined the Columbia Broadcasting System in Washington, D.C., becoming station manager within six months.

Mitchell was picked as vice president of Muzak corporation by Senator William Benton, chairman of the board of both Muzak and the Encyclopaedia Britannica. His success with Muzak led to his position with Britannica Film.

Mitchell has represented the educational film field at several UNESCO conferences and also has served on many educational and charitable organizations. His current responsibilities include direction over-all of the Britannica affairs and of the divisions and affiliates that include the Great Books of the Western World, the F.E. Compton division, the G. & C. Merriam company, Britannica Press, and the affairs of the company in more than 20 countries outside the United States. He is the first president of the firm who also serves as editorial director.

Mitchell, his wife and three children live in Lake Forest, Ill.

Minneapolis---Two University of Minnesota professors in the Institute of Technology were named Distinguished Teachers in the 1965 observance of Engineering Day ("E"-Day) Friday (May 7).

Named as the "best teachers in the Institute of Technology" for 1965 by Dean Athelstan Spilhaus were Professor Ernst Eckert of mechanical engineering, and Associate Professor Allan A. Blatherwick of the department of aeronautics and engineering mechanics.

Professor Eckert was named "for the inestimable influence he has had on students and colleagues as an outstanding lecturer and a skilled researcher---his enthusiasm and understanding have contributed widely to the advancement of engineering science", Dean Spilhaus announced.

Professor Blatherwick was cited for "his exceptionally productive efforts toward better teaching. He is an effective and stimulating teacher in his own classes. By his early interest and his active participation in teaching by closed-circuit television, he established himself as a prime mover in this development, not only in the Institute of Technology but in the University as a whole".

Each award consists of $500 and a citation.

The two Distinguished Teachers will receive their awards at presentation ceremonies at the annual Institute of Technology Alumni association meeting Nov. 19.

At the "E"-Day ceremonies Professor Eckert also received the Western Electric Fund award for excellence in instruction of engineering students. One such award is presented annually in each region of the American Society for Engineering Education.

Professor Eckert's award honors him as the society's choice as the distinguished teacher in the North Midwest region---Iowa, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Minnesota and northern Michigan.

The donor of the Distinguished Teaching award in the Institute of Technology, Dean Spilhaus said, was alumnus George W. Taylor, Rockford, Ill., who provided financing for "an annual award for outstanding and inspiring teachers. Such a person might be a laboratory assistant or instructor or he might be the most learned full professor on the staff".

Four Institute of Technology faculty members have received the award since its inception in 1963; Keith Champlin, associate professor, electrical engineering, and Edward P. Ney, physics professor, in 1963; and Professors Wayland E. Noland, organic chemistry, and William E. Ranz, chemical engineering, in 1964.

Minneapolis---Thirty-eight women students at the University of Minnesota who will be juniors and seniors next year were honored at the annual Cap and Gown Day luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday (May 12) in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

At this time the names of the new members of Mortar Board (senior women's honorary society) and Chimes (junior women's honorary society) were announced.

Both organizations seek to promote college loyalty and recognize outstanding scholarship, leadership and service to the University. Mortar Board members must have at least 2.92 grade point average; Chimes, a 2.75 average.

In addition to the naming of the new honor students, seven awards and scholarships to outstanding women in special areas were announced, according to Joan Emerson, 977 Manuel st., St. Paul, luncheon chairman of the sponsoring group, Sigma Epsilon Sigma, sophomore women's scholastic honorary society.

Mrs. O. Meredith Wilson, wife of the University president, announced the names of women elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary fraternity.

Special awards presented at the luncheon included the Women's Athletic Association Seal awards, the Business Women's Scholarship Keys, the Twin City Panhellenic Alumnae Association award, the Alice Pomeroy Scholarship in Education, the Home Economics Leadership award, the Women's Continuing Education award, and the Sigma Epsilon Sigma Scholarship to an outstanding freshman woman.

The president of Chimes, Laurie Ann Schultz, 1006 Brenner st., St. Paul, presented these newly elected Chimes members:

'U' ANTHROPOLOGIST TO GIVE TV TALK
ON TIME, CULTURES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Anthropology will be the focal point of this week's University of Minnesota television program on "Man versus Time", to be shown from 9 to 10 p.m. Wednesday (May 12) over Channel 2, KTCA-TV.

Professor Robert F. Spencer, chairman of the University's anthropology department, will speak, with two "non-specialists" asking questions. This week's guests will be University President O. Meredith Wilson and Mrs. Barbara Cunningham, chairman of the Brooklyn Center Human Relations committee and secretary of the Committee of Concern.

While anthropology traditionally considers the transition from primitive man to civilized man, Professor Spencer also will consider what the anthropologist can contribute as a humanist rather than as a biologist or archaeologist.

"As its special contribution to the social science disciplines, anthropology has the concept of culture," according to Spencer. He will offer the theory that cultures differ because of the circumstances of time rather than because of any innate character differences in men.

Spencer will use Germany to illustrate his theories regarding the interchange of ideas, "crossroads" cultures and "marginal" cultures.

Economics Professor Leonid Hurwicz will be host Wednesday night. The programs are the 17th annual public discussion series sponsored by the Graduate School Research center and will continue through June 23.

MRS. DALRYMPLE
TO GIVE FINAL
'THIRTIES' TALK AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mrs. John Dalrymple will give the concluding talk in the University of Minnesota's spring lecture series on "Minnesota's Temper of the Thirties".

Speaking at 8 p.m. Wednesday (May 12) in Mayo Memorial auditorium on "The Way It Was", she will present personal experiences and impressions from the thirties. Tickets will be available at the door.

After being graduated from Smith college, Bernice Dalrymple married and moved to her husband's farm in North Dakota. Later they also maintained a Minneapolis residence, and she became very active in civic affairs, serving as president of many organizations including the Women's Exchange, the Woman's Club, the Friends of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts and the Council of Social Agencies. In recognition of her services, she received the First Citizen of Minneapolis award in 1947.

During World War II, Mrs. Dalrymple served with the Hennepin County Red Cross. She also has been a trustee of Smith college, a board member of Northwestern hospital and active in the Planned Parenthood association. For the past five years, she has been a University of Minnesota student under the Minnesota Plan for the Continuing Education of Women and has attended the liberal arts seminars for five years under that program.

The lecture series has been presented by the University's General Extension division.

HUMAN LEARNING
RESEARCH SESSIONS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A second symposium on "The Strategies of Research in Human Learning" will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday (May 13, 14 and 15) at the University of Minnesota, sponsored by the new Center for Research in Human Learning.

Three visiting psychologists will speak at three meetings which are open to the public without charge. In addition, they will visit with University faculty members and interested graduate students at coffee hours in the Psychology building, most of Friday and all morning Saturday.

The speakers will be Howard H. Kendler, psychology professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara, at 8 p.m. Thursday (May 13) in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium; Gordon H. Bower, associate professor of psychology at Stanford university, at 8 p.m. Friday (May 14) in Mayo Memorial auditorium; and James E. Deese, psychology professor at Johns Hopkins university, at 2 p.m. Saturday (May 15) in the museum auditorium.

Kendler, who has been at Santa Barbara since 1963, formerly taught at New York university for 15 years and was chairman of its psychology department for 10 years. He also has taught at the University of Colorado and the State University of Iowa, has been a research psychologist for the Psychological Corporation and served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He has been a project director in the Office of Naval Research since 1950 and has served in various other capacities for the United States Government, including the post of chief clinical psychologist at Walter Reed hospital in 1945-46.

His special areas of research include the psychology of learning and problem solving and the role of drive in learning theory. He received his master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from the State University of Iowa, at Iowa City.

Bower has been at Stanford since 1959, the year he received his doctor of philosophy degree from Yale university. He is a consulting editor of the "Journal of Comparative Physiological Psychology", with special interest in learning theory, mathematical models and perception.

Deese, who has been at Johns Hopkins since 1948, is associate editor of the "Journal of Experimental Psychology" and consulting editor of the "Journal of Verbal Learning and Verbal Behavior", with special interests in learning, stress and language. He served as visiting professor at the University of California, Berkeley, in 1958-59, and earned his master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees at Indiana university.

The first symposium on human learning research was held last week. The two symposia are the first public offerings of the Center for Research in Human Learning which was formed at the University last fall, headed by Professor John G. Darley, chairman of psychology department. It brings together research psychologists and educators from four University areas: the psychology department, the educational psychology department, the Institute of Child Development and the Center for the Study of Programmed Learning.

U OF M OFFERS
COLLEGE COURSES
FOR POLICEMEN

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---College courses for policemen which will lead to a certificate in police administration are now being offered by the University of Minnesota.

A unique feature of the 45-credit program is that a policeman may take all the courses by correspondence, thus making it the only plan of its kind in the United States. Or, if the officer prefers, he may take some of the courses in evening or regular day classes.

The program has been developed by the Correspondence Study department of the General Extension Division.

It is designed "to provide college-level education to supplement training programs conducted in police departments," according to F. Lloyd Hansen, director of correspondence study. "It includes many features of value to experienced officers and supervisory personnel as well as to newer officers.

"Also, the program hopes to help raise the professional status of officers and the general level of law enforcement."

If a policeman has completed some college courses, he may be able to apply these credits toward his certificate. Of the 45 credits required, 33 could be applied to a bachelor's degree should the officer decide to get one.

The program centers around five courses (15 credits) in police administration, designed "to raise the technical competency of policemen who have the potential for administrative and supervisory positions", Hansen said.

It also requires 30 credits in general courses comparable to the first year of college, "in the belief that policemen must have an understanding of the bases of the social problems that affect law enforcement, as well as the ability to communicate effectively enough to meet administrative responsibilities."

After completing the program, an officer will be awarded a General Extension Division certificate. Such certificates "are increasingly being recognized as measures of significant educational achievement," said Hansen.

The police administration courses offered are Methods in Police Supervision; Elements of Criminology; Methods of Criminal Procedure; Police Organization, Planning and Management; and Methods of Investigative Procedure.

The English requirement is a choice of three possible sequences: Freshman English 1B, 2B and 3B; or Communication 1,2,3; or Freshman English 1B plus a choice of two other courses (eight credits) to be selected from Freshman English 2B; Basic Technical Writing; Masterpieces of World Literature; and Humanities in the Modern World I, III or IV.

Required social science courses are American Government and Politics 1; General Psychology, and Man in Modern Society. In addition, the officer can choose two courses from the following offered: American Government and Politics 2; Social Problems; World Politics; Juvenile Delinquency and Juvenile Courts; and American History I, II or III.

The program is offered with the cooperation of police administrators, municipal officials and civic organizations, to reduce the cost to individual officers. Further information can be obtained by writing the Correspondence Study Department, General Extension Division, 254 Nicholson Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455.

U OF M MEDICAL SCHOOL ACCEPTS
150 FRESHMEN

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The University of Minnesota Medical School has accepted 150 students for its freshman class in medicine which will be enrolled in September, Dr. H. Mead Cavert, associate dean of the College of Medical Sciences, announced today.

A total of 798 applicants sought admittance to the class which will enroll in the year the medical school celebrates its seventy-fifth anniversary, according to Dr. Cavert.

Of those students accepted, 91 per cent are residents of Minnesota. Most of the others come from the Northern Midwest area which historically has been supplied by the University with practicing physicians, Dr. Cavert said. He said the class appears to be one of the best qualified academically ever to enroll at the medical school. Although four years of college preparation is not mandatory for enrollment in the medical school more than 60 per cent of the incoming class will have college degrees before matriculation on September 27, 1965. Eight of the 150 members of the class are women.

The University of Minnesota has the only four-year medical school within Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana. North and South Dakota each has a two-year medical school, from which the University of Minnesota annually accepts several transfer medical students to complete the third and fourth (clinical years) of their medical education.

Selection of the 1965 freshman class, Dr. Cavert reported, was made on a competitive basis by the medical school's admissions committee. The application period is open until October 15 of the year preceding the actual matriculation of entering students. If any accepted students decline the opportunity to enroll, their places are filled subsequently by qualified alternate applicants who also are selected by the admissions committee on a competitive basis.

The number of applicants for the medical school has increased steadily in recent years. For the 1959 entering class, applicants totaled 319; for 1960, 337; for 1961, 392; for 1962, 504; for 1963, 612; and for 1964, 689. A national trend of increasing numbers of applicants also has developed during the last three years, according to a report of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

The University's medical school presently has a total enrollment of 595, Dr. Cavert stated, and will graduate a class of 148 seniors in June of this year.

ALL-NIGHT TEACH-IN PLANNED
AT 'U' ON VIETNAM POLICY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A teach-in---an all-night series of speeches and group discussions---will be held at the University of Minnesota May 24 on the subject of United States involvement in Viet Nam.

The night's program will be divided into two parts. First, four national figures will speak in Northrop Memorial auditorium on both sides of the Johnson administration's position, from 8 to about 11:30 p.m. Then smaller discussion groups will meet in Coffman Memorial Union from approximately midnight to 4 a.m.

All sessions are open to the public, according to Dr. James S. Beck, assistant professor of physiology and a spokesman for the recently formed Faculty-Student Committee on Viet Nam --- a committee for gathering information and sharing views on Viet Nam.

"We hope to have all views presented," said Beck, "and also represented in the audience. We want to encourage free and open discussion."

"The committee members feel that the public in general, as well as the academic community, has every right and indeed a duty to participate in the government of our country and its decisions."

The four speakers who will start off the night's program will be Hans Morgenthau, a University of Chicago professor and state department adviser; Norman Thomas, a spokesman for democratic socialism and peace movements in the United States; Rep. Clark MacGregor, U.S. Congressman from Minnesota's third district; and a high-level representative from the U.S. State department whose name will be announced later.

Each man will speak for around a half hour and, after all have spoken, each will have a short time for rebuttal. Questions from the audience will be invited. George L. Shapiro, assistant professor of speech, will moderate.

When this session is over, those who wish to participate for the rest of the night will go to Coffman Union where three or four discussion groups, led by faculty members, will meet simultaneously in different rooms. Each discussion will last for approximately half an hour, when a new leader with a new subject will take over. Faculty leaders will be from such areas as anthropology, sociology, political science and Asian history.

The teach-in is sponsored by the Faculty-Student Committee on Viet Nam, the department of concerts and lectures and the Union Board of Governors' Citizens' series.

TALK ON LIBRARY
OF CONGRESS SET
MONDAY AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A former deputy librarian of Congress will give two free, public lectures at the University of Minnesota Monday (May 17).

Rutherford D. Rogers, who is now Stanford university librarian, will speak at 2:30 p.m. in Room 320 Coffman Memorial union on "Problems of Running the World's Largest Library", referring to his years in the Library of Congress.

He will speak at 8 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium on "Libraries and Automation". Both talks are sponsored by the department of concerts and lectures and the University Library school, supported by the Frank K. Walter Lecture fund.

Rogers, a native of Iowa, is a graduate of Iowa State Teachers college and of the Columbia university library school, and holds a master of arts degree from Columbia. He has worked in libraries at Columbia university and in New York City and has been director of the Grosvenor library in Buffalo, N.Y., and of the Rochester, N.Y., public library.

Sir George W. Pickering, Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford (England) university, will lecture next week (May 17-21) at the University of Minnesota medical school as recipient of the first Cornelius Visiting Professorship in Medicine at the University.

Dr. Pickering will address the medical faculty and guests at 1 p.m. Wednesday (May 19) on "The Nature of Essential Hypertension" in Mayo Memorial auditorium. This talk is open free of charge to anyone interested.

He also will speak at a University Hospitals staff meeting at noon Friday (May 21) on "Nodular Arteriosclerosis: Problems of Cardiac and Cerebral Infarction". As guest of the department of medicine, Dr. Pickering will attend ward rounds with students, interns and residents, take part in conferences and teaching activities and visit research laboratories.

Prominent in both British and world medicine, Dr. Pickering is an expert on vascular disease and high blood pressure. He is past president of the British Medical association and member of many British and foreign medical societies. He is an honorary fellow of the American College of Physicians.

Dr. Pickering was knighted by the Queen of England for distinguished work in medical research and education and is one of the few medical men to hold the title of Regius Professor of Medicine, first conferred by King Henry VIII in the 15th century.

During his visit to the United States, Dr. Pickering also will address the annual meeting of the American Association of Physicians in Atlantic City, N.J.

The Cornelius Visiting Professorship was established by John and Miriam Cornelius of Minneapolis, through the Minnesota Medical foundation, to bring a distinguished teacher to the University each year.

STATE DEPT. OFFICIAL
TO SPEAK FRIDAY AT 'U'
ON VIET NAM CRISIS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Martin Cramer, chief of Education Project staff, Office of Public Service, Bureau of Public Affairs, State Department, Washington, D.C., will speak on "The Crisis in Vietnam" at 2:30 p.m. Friday (May 14) in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom on the University of Minnesota Minneapolis campus.

Cramer will replace Robert W. Barnett, also from State Department, the previously announced speaker, according to Tom Reeve, Coffman Union program director.

Cramer has taught in the international relations departments of McGill college, Montreal, Tufts university, Medford, Mass., and Louisiana State university, Baton Rouge, La. He won the Distinguished Flying Cross in the U.S. Air Force during World War II, and has spent several years on training missions in India and Japan for the U.S. State Department, most recently has worked as a part of the Far and Near Eastern Affairs and Vietnam Task Force committee of the State Department.

Cramer's talk at 2:30 p.m. will precede a talk at 3:45 p.m. by U.S. Representative Clark MacGregor on "The Voting-Rights Bill" which also will be given in the Union main ballroom.

Both addresses, open free to the public, will be moderated by Professor Harold W. Chase, political science. The program is sponsored by the Union Board of Governors.

Robert Hewett, foreign correspondent for the Minneapolis Tribune, will give "A Candid Report on Viet Nam" at 3:30 p.m. Monday (May 17) in Murphy hall auditorium at the University of Minnesota.

The talk will be free and open to the public, and is sponsored by the departments of political science and concerts and lectures.

Hewett, who covers the Far East, has lived temporarily in Saigon and often has accompanied Vietnamese troops and American advisers into battle areas. He was one of the first correspondents to report that all was not going well in Viet Nam.

Hewett and his wife, Mary, have traveled in more than 28 countries including eastern Europe, Africa, India, Ceylon and the Middle East. Before he joined the Tribune eight years ago, Hewett was a reporter for the Associated Press for 17 years. Ten of those years were spent abroad, and for two years he was chief of the Ap Middle East bureau.

Hewett was given an Overseas Press club award in 1961 for the best interpretation of foreign affairs for a newspaper. In 1957, he won a National Headliner club award for outstanding coverage of a foreign news story, based on his reports of life in Communist Europe.

A native of Detroit, Hewett attended the University of Michigan. He has worked for the An Arbor (Mich.) Daily News and the Decatur (Ill.) Herald and Review, and joined the U.S. Marine Corps in World War II, serving in Kwajalein, Saipan, Tinian, Iwo Jima and Ikinawa.

Robert C. Liebenow, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, will be keynote speaker at the annual Business Day ("B"-Day) luncheon, at noon Wednesday (May 19) in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom. His talk will be titled "Quality for Our Future."

Another highlight of the luncheon will be the crowning of the "B"-Day queen. Business administration students will vote for one of the seven queen candidates Monday (May 17) in the West Bank Classroom building.

The "B"-Day luncheon will feature tables sponsored by about 60 Twin Cities business firms, and at each table a representative of the firm will talk to students and faculty members about his company. Students may sign up in advance for the table they prefer.

All graduate and undergraduate business students are invited to the affair, which is planned for informative purposes rather than job recruiting.

Business administration classes will be excused after second hour Wednesday. Two panel discussions are planned for 10:30 a.m., in the junior ballroom and in Room 320 of the Union, where several presidents of Twin Cities companies will speak.

Liebenow, in addition to heading the world's oldest and largest contract grain exchange, is chairman of the Export Advisory committee appointed by Governor Otto Kerner to expand Illinois agricultural exports. He is a director of American Industrial Leasing Co., a faculty associate for the Graduate School of Business at Indiana university, and member of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce's Agriculture-Business Relations committee, and of various Chicago agricultural and economic clubs.

A native of Aberdeen, S.D., Liebenow holds a bachelor of laws degree from the University of South Dakota, and served as attorney for the First National Bank of Chicago, then as assistant secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade. He and his wife and five children live in Wilmette, Ill.

Another event of Business week, which runs from May 14 through 19, will be a lecture at noon Monday (May 17) by Stanley Nelson, vice president of the commercial division of Honeywell, who will speak on "Competition in the Computer Age" in Room 5, Classroom building, West Bank area.

Frank Brooke, business administration senior from Edina and president of the Business Board, is in charge of Business week activities. Publicity chairman is Charles Connoy, business administration junior, of 4626 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis.

Minneapolis---Flags will snap in the breeze, bugle calls will ring out and 350 midshipmen and cadets---members of the University of Minnesota R.O.T.C. units of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force---will pass in review before top-level military "brass" in the seventh annual Tri-Service Review at the University at 2 p.m. Friday (May 21) in Memorial stadium.

One hundred and one cadets and midshipmen of the corps will be taking part in their final University review before being graduated and commissioned in the Armed Forces in June, according to Captain Daniel R. Zenk, U.S.A., assistant professor of military sciences at the University.

The review will be dedicated to the memory of those members of the Armed Forces who have given their lives in Vietnam, Zenk said.

"Taking the review" will be Major General Chester J. Moeglein, Adjutant General, State of Minnesota, St. Paul. Invited members of the reviewing party will include University President O. Meredith Wilson; William G. Shepherd, University vice president for academic administration; the three heads of the military units at the University---Captain Edward M. Morgan, U.S.N.; Lieutenant Colonel Robert J. Elliott, U.S.A.; and Lieutenant Colonel James Suttie, U.S.A.F.---and Professor Rodney C. Loehr, chairman, Senate Committee on R.O.T.C. at the University.

Cadet commanding officers of the student units which will pass in review are: Army---Colonel Michael J. Smith, College of Liberal Arts (CLA) senior, Freeport, Ill.; Navy---Captain Herbert F. Clark, CLA senior, Livingston, N.J.; and Air Force---Colonel Robert E. Bennett, business administration senior, 3814 Chicago ave., S., Minneapolis.

The top annual awards to each branch of the Armed Forces, two all-service scholastic awards and the annual Inter-Service Athletic trophy will be presented to the winning cadets and midshipmen at the review.

Presenting the John Watson Memorial award to Army Cadet Colonel Smith will be Laurence E. Carlson, department commander of the Minnesota Department of the American Legion. This award is in memory of Lt. John Ward Watson, Minnesota '42, who heroically gave his life for his country during World War II.

Robert E. Nelson, president of the Minneapolis Council of the Navy League, will present the league's annual award---a sword---to Midshipman Captain Clark. This award is made to a midshipman who has shown outstanding aptitude for a naval career.

Mrs. Lawrence C. Lundberg, 3812 48th ave., S., Minneapolis, will present the Lawrence C. Lundberg memorial plaque to Air Force Cadet Major Charles L. Anderson, 2012 Excelsior ave., Hopkins. This award is presented by Mrs. Lundberg annually in honor of her late husband, Captain Lundberg, who gave his life in 1956 rather than let his crippled plane crash in a populated area. It is awarded to the graduating Air Force cadet entering pilot training who has shown the greatest potential for aviation.

Professor Loehr will present a scholastic achievement award bearing his name to the graduating ROTC student of the three branches of the Armed Forces who possesses the highest over-all grade point average. This year the award will go to Midshipman Lieutenant Walton G. Warner, Robbinsdale, battalion adjutant for the naval corps.

Warner also will be the recipient of another award, offered this year for the first time---The Northwest Post, American Ordnance award---presented by Clarence A. Knapp, Northwest Post. This new award will go annually to an outstanding fourth-year cadet or midshipman majoring in engineering, physics, chemistry or mathematics.

 (Insert) ***

The 20-member joint-services band under the direction of Army Cadet Lieutenant Raymond E. Paulson, Jr., 5276 Lochloy drive, Minneapolis, will play for the review.

A luncheon at 11:30 a.m., Friday, in the University Campus Club in Coffman Memorial Union for all senior cadets and midshipmen and their guests will precede the review. The annual Tri-Service Ball will be held at the Pick-Nicollet hotel, Minneapolis, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

OF 'U' SESSION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Survival After Death" from the point of view of the parapsychologists will be discussed at the University of Minnesota at 8 p.m. Wednesday, May 26 at a public meeting of the newly formed Minnesota Society for Parapsychological Research in Murphy hall auditorium. Public admission will be 50 cents at the door.

Professor Mulford Q. Sibley of the political science department, advisor to the group working in the extra sensory perception (ESP), will review the classical evidence of this proposition.

Charles Honorton, 857 Bidwell, West St. Paul, a freshman in the University's College of Liberal Arts, will discuss research in this field. Honorton, organizer of the group, has spent the last three summers working in the Duke university parapsychology laboratories with Professor J.B. Rhine, head of the laboratories.

The newly organized ESP group now is established in its quarters above the Stadium cafe, Oak st. and Washington ave., S.E., Minneapolis. According to Honorton, the meeting quarters were leased and furnished through a grant from Professor Rhine, who provided testing equipment so that a number of such experiments as the "card-reading" test and demonstrations of psychokinesis can be conducted locally.

SHOW ON CH. 2

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Time and Space in Baroque Architecture" will be the topic discussed on this week's University of Minnesota television series on "Man versus Time", to be shown from 9 to 10 p.m. Wednesday (May 19) over KTCA, channel 2.

Hylton A. Thomas, professor of art, will talk about several significant aspects of Baroque architecture which first appeared in that style.

Questions and comments will be interjected by Leslie MacFarlane, a visiting professor of history at Macalester college, St. Paul, from the University of Aberdeen, Scotland; and by Professor Walter W. Heller of the University economics department, former economics adviser to the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

History Professor Robert S. Hoyt will moderate. The series is sponsored by the Graduate School Research Center and the University television hour is sponsored by the General Extension Division.

Professor Thomas, who joined the art department in 1950, holds bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from the University of Chicago, and another master's degree and a doctor of philosophy degree from Harvard university.

He has spent a year in Italy doing research in fine arts at the University of Padua on a Fulbright scholarship, and another year studying the life of Tiepolo and his influences on 18th century monumental painting in Germany, on a Guggenheim fellowship. He has traveled extensively in Europe, often during the summer, and his specialty is 18th century Italian art.

CONFERENCE ON RELIGION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Such pertinent questions as "Must there be a conflict between religion and education?" and "How are religious and political doctrine similar or different?" will be discussed at a Conference on Religion in National Life Saturday (May 22) at the University of Minnesota.

The conference, which will begin at 9 a.m., will be held at the University Episcopal Center, 317 17th ave., S.E., Minneapolis. Those interested in attending are asked to register at once through the University Office of Coordinator of Students' Religious Activities, Room 211, Eddy hall, on the Minneapolis campus.

The conference is particularly designed as a program for both American and foreign students who have an interest in religion, according to Professor Henry E. Allen, campus religious activities coordinator.

The 29 student religious organizations---ranging, alphabetically, from the Baha'i club through the Sikh Study circle to the Y.W.C.A.---that make up the University's Council of Student Religious Organizations are joining with the Council of Religious Advisers, the Student Activities Bureau and the Office of the Foreign Student Adviser in sponsoring this new event on the University Minneapolis campus.

The conference, Professor Allen pointed out, is an outgrowth of questions and problems encountered in the last several years by the Council's Panel of World Religions' student members who have found that "the problems of communications between religious groups do not lie so much in difference in ritual or in practice, but lie instead in the culturally defined place of religion in the daily secular life" of the individual believer.

"After an understanding of differences in belief has been gained, the remaining issues have to do with the way in which the individual applies his religious beliefs to the political, economic or social world which surrounds him," Allen stated. "In a sense, it is these questions---the ones which we seem only to raise but not effectively to discuss in panel presentations---which are the subject of the conference."

'U' REPRESENTATIVE TO ATMOSPHERIC
PROJECT NAMED

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE-220 MORRILL HALL
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
MAY 17, 1965

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

University of Minnesota President O. Meredith Wilson today named Physics Professor Homer T. Mantis as the institution's representative to the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR) at Boulder, Colo.

In April, the University was admitted to UCAR which operates the non-profit National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR), a basic research establishment dedicated to the exploration and understanding of atmospheric processes. Both UCAR and NCAR were set up in 1959. They are financed by the National Science Foundation.

The NCAR was established for two purposes: first, to provide research facilities for the atmospheric sciences that might be larger and more elaborate than any university or existing agency could itself provide, and, second, by providing these unified facilities and favorable research environment, to attract physical scientists from other disciplines to the problems in atmospheric physics, according to Professor Mantis.

"The problems in atmospheric physics are so diverse, the scientist trained solely as a meteorologist cannot hope to cope with all of them," Mantis said. "The physical scientist is often unaware of the details of the atmospheric phenomenon which may be related to his own field of study. NCAR hopes to stimulate an increasing exchange between the meteorologist and the rest of the scientific community."

As the University's representative on the UCAR Council of Members, Mantis will attend one meeting a year at Boulder, where the board of directors reviews the year's programs, and makes plans for the coming year.

"Our joining UCAR will give us a better way of keeping up with what's going on in atmospheric research," said Mantis, "and will give us some jurisdiction over the research programs in this large national laboratory. Also, our students will have somewhat easier access to the facilities."

The NCAR facilities consist of a High Altitude Observatory operated in connection with the University of Colorado at Boulder, and a connected building now under construction, for radio astronomy and solar astronomy; a major balloon-launching center at Palestine, Texas, which provides balloon-launch shelters, radio tracking equipment, launch crews, weather forecasting equipment and an airplane for tracking; and a second balloon center being set up at Page, Ariz. A new atmospheric laboratory is being built on top of a Colorado plateau, Mantis said, where cloud physics experiments and others will be carried out.

Professor Walter Orr Roberts, a University of Colorado astronomer and director of the High Altitude Observatory, now is director of the NCAR as well. Members of the geophysics staff at the University of Colorado have joint appointments with NCAR, Mantis said.

During the summer, seminars on various topics are held at Boulder, and several hundred faculty members and graduate students from around the country attend programs and work on experiments there. "Now they can also make use of a brand-new computer---the biggest computer ever built by Control Data," Mantis said.

"The University had many connections with the NCAR before joining it," Mantis said. "Our graduate students and professors have used its laboratories in the summer and its balloon facilities at Palestine, and in fact three of us are on the balloon panel which supervises flight operations." In addition to Mantis, they are Professors John R. Winckler and Edward P. Ney, co-chairmen of the advisory panel.

Other faculty members in the University's physics department who have an interest in atmospheric science, astrophysics or cosmology are Professors George D. Freier, Paul J. Kellogg and Alfred O.C. Nier, School of Physics chairman; Associate Professors Peter Signer, Cecil J. Waddington and William R. Webber, and Assistant Professor James A. Earl.

Minneapolis---At least 25 University of Minnesota faculty members will take part in an all-night teach-in on Vietnam scheduled for Monday (May 24).

A State Department representative will present the Johnson administration's point of view on Vietnam during the first part of the evening. He is Frank Sieverts, a special assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs.

Sieverts will join with Representative Clark MacGregor, Third district Minnesota Congressman, in presenting the case for United States actions in Vietnam. Opposing this viewpoint will be Hans Morgenthau, State Department adviser and University of Chicago professor, and Norman Thomas, nationally known socialist spokesman. The four will speak and answer questions between 8 and 11:30 p.m. Monday in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Sieverts has recently returned from a month in Vietnam. He has previously served as a legislative assistant to Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin, on the John F. Kennedy campaign staff, as a correspondent for Time magazine and as a teacher of American foreign policy and political science at Oxford (England) university and in the University of Maryland Overseas Program.

He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Swarthmore college and did graduate work as a Rhodes scholar at the Nutfield college social studies research center of Oxford university.

From about midnight until 4 a.m. Tuesday, the faculty members will hold seminars in various rooms in Coffman Memorial Union. Several discussion groups will meet at a time and each will last about half an hour, when another speaker will take over.

Seminar speakers will include Professor David Cooperman, chairman of the social science interdisciplinary program; Roy G. Francis, sociology professor; Martin J. Hauser, political science instructor; Professor Charles H. McLaughlin, chairman of political science; Stuart L. Markoff, English instructor; John K. Munholland, history assistant professor.

Minneapolis---A Marine Corps research psychologist will give a lecture and a seminar Monday (May 24) at the University of Minnesota School of Business Administration.

Richard S. Hatch, resident research psychologist for the Marine Corps Research and Development Battalion, San Diego, Calif., will speak at 10 a.m. on "Operations Research and Computers in Industrial Relations Training, Research and Practice" and will give a seminar at 3 p.m. on "Operations Research Techniques and Computer-Based Solutions in Industrial Relations."

Both sessions will be in Room 170 Business Administration building, West Bank area. They will be the final program in a winter-spring series on the general topic of "The Application of Quantitative Methods in Business Administration".

Hatch's latest work has been concerned with the Corps-wide problem of the most effective use of manpower. He has designed a dynamic computer program to make daily assignments of Corps personnel to the special school or duty classification each man is best fitted for, according to aptitude and achievement tests.

He also developed the Automated Testing and Attrition Control system which is used by the Marine Corps' Electronic School Battalion to provide constant surveillance and administrative control over the testing and grading of students and instructional assignments within the school.

Hatch holds three degrees from the University of Minnesota : bachelor of arts, master of science and doctor of philosophy - all in psychology. He has worked as a research adviser and educational consultant for the Educational Science division of U.S. Industries, a pioneer producer of programmed learning materials and teaching machines. He also has been a research psychologist with the Aircraft Observer Research laboratory, Air Force Personnel and Training Research Center, Mather Air Force Base, Calif.

FOUR ENGINEERING
STUDENTS AT 'U'
RECEIVE AWARDS

Minneapolis---Four undergraduate electrical engineering students in the University of Minnesota's Institute of Technology have been announced as this year's recipients of the annual Rosemount Engineering company essay contest prizes.

The awards are given by the company in a contest for undergraduate student papers on topics broadly concerned with measurement techniques, according to Professor F.N. Bailey, of the electrical engineering department at the University.

The paper, "A Method of In-Circuit Transistor Testing", won first place award for fifth-year students Robert L. Chaput, Marshall, and his co-author, Dennis J. Brady, 2116 Como ave., S.E., Minneapolis. The authors will divide the first-place cash prize of $500.

The two second-place awards of $50 to each author were presented to second-year student Keith B. Smith, 415 Turner's Crossroad, N., Golden Valley, and to fifth-year student Carlton C. Miller, 417 E. 98th st., Bloomington.

Smith's paper discussed the design of a type of magnetic brake, while Miller's paper was titled "Engineering Problems of a Prosthetic Neuro-Servo Muscle System".

Object of the yearly essay contest, Professor Bailey pointed out, is to stimulate the interests of undergraduate students in problems of measurement in modern technology and to emphasize the importance of technical writing skills to the practicing engineer.

Minneapolis---A virtually invaluable collection of Ukrainian publications---newspapers, periodicals, books and rare pamphlets, most of them in the Ukrainian language---was presented Wednesday (May 19) to the University of Minnesota by Professor Emeritus Alexander A. Granovsky.

University President O. Meredith Wilson and Edward B. Stanford, director of libraries, accepted the large collection for the University. Also in attendance in a ceremony in President Wilson's office were Vice Presidents William G. Shepherd, academic administration, and Laurence R. Lunden, business administration, and Professor Timothy L. Smith, chairman of the Immigrant Archives committee and historian.

The collection will become part of the Immigrant Archives, University library, and constitutes "the core of a collection which will support study of the history and culture of Ukrainians in both the old world and the new for many years to come", according to Professor Smith.

This single gift, Smith said, makes the Ukrainian section of the archives equal to the Slovene and Croation sections, which are richer in immigrant materials than any American or European library.

Professor Granovsky joined the University staff in 1930 and retired in 1956. He taught in the department of entomology and economic zoology and was founder and director of the University's Lake Itasca Forestry and Biological Station. He also served 28 years as president of the Organization for the Rebirth of Ukraine, and has written six volumes of poetry in Ukrainian. He was born in the Province of Volyn, in what is now the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, and emigrated to the United States in 1913.

Professor Smith also has announced that Benjamin P. Uroff, history instructor, will spend part of the summer visiting various centers of Ukrainian and Russian settlement in this country, seeking to expand and enrich the collections of those nationalities in the Immigrant Archives.

Theofanis G. Stavrou, history associate professor, will visit Greek-American communities to follow up work he did on a trip to Greece last year, according to Smith. And Albert Tezla, English and humanities professor at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, who is responsible for the archives' Hungarian collection, will spend the summer in Hungary searching and collecting.

An international authority in the field of Slavic and comparative literature will give a free, public lecture at the University of Minnesota Tuesday (May 25).

Zbigniew Folejewski, professor of Slavic literature at the University of Wisconsin, will speak at 8 p.m. Tuesday (May 25) in Room 125 Mayo Memorial auditorium on the subject of his current research, "Novelty and Convention in the Poetics of Russian Futurism".

The lecture will be sponsored by the department of Slavic and Oriental languages and concerts and lectures.

Professor Folejewski, formerly chairman of the University of Wisconsin's Slavic department, is a past president of the American Association of Slavists and has served as a consultant to the Swedish Academy Nobel Prize Committee in Literature, the Swedish Encyclopedia and several publishing houses.

He was born and educated in Poland and holds advanced degrees from the University of Uppsala in Sweden. He also has studied and traveled extensively in France, England and the United States, and has taught at the Universities of Stockholm and Uppsala in Sweden, and has been visiting professor at the Universities of California (at Berkeley) and Colorado, and of Polish University Abroad, in London.

He has written numerous articles and books ranging over a broad field of Slavic and Scandinavian literature and particularly has been concerned with linguistic problems connected with poetics. His latest book is a critical biography of the Polish writer, Maria Dabrowska.

MAY 20, 1965

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Five graduate students in art history have been named initial winners of the newly established Samuel H. Kress Foundation fellowships at the University of Minnesota, according to Professor Carl D. Sheppard, Jr., University art department chairman.

Announcement of the fellowships for the 1965-66 academic year, is the initial step in putting into effect the department's participation in the $50,000 award to the University which provides for five annual $10,000 grants, Sheppard explained. Of each year's $10,000 allotment, $5,000 will be used for graduate fellowships in art history and $5,000 for art history teaching materials and augmentation of library equipment.

Of the five fellowship recipients, four currently are teaching assistants in the University art department. The fifth is a museum aide in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.

Fellowship recipients are:

Helen Harkonen, 511 15th ave., S.E., Minneapolis, $2,000. Miss Harkonen received the bachelor of arts degree from the University of Chicago, and the bachelor and master of fine arts degree from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. She also will hold a half-time instructorship in the University art department during the 1965-66 academic year, and will use the fellowship to complete work on the doctor of philosophy degree.

David Walsh, 1528 N. 17th st., Arlington, Va., $1,000. He is a native of Holyoke, Mass., with his family home in Perry Hall, Md. He received the bachelor of arts degree from the American university, Washington, D.C., has done graduate work as a National Merit Scholar at Baltimore university and at the Maryland Institute of Art, and currently is at the National Gallery, Washington, D.C.

David Anderson, Box 63, Lutsen, $500. Anderson is a native of San Antonio, Tex., who received the bachelor of arts degree from the University of Minnesota in 1961, served in the U.S. Army upon graduation, and now is a teaching assistant in the art department.

Gerald Hanna, 20 North Logan, Colorado Springs, Colo., $500. Hanna came to the University to work on the master of arts degree in philosophy, but has changed his field of major interest and now is working toward the M.F.A. degree with a minor in philosophy.

William J. Williams, 6500 Winchester, Kansas City, Mo., $500. Williams received bachelor of arts degrees in art history and geography in 1963 from the University of Kansas City, Kansas City, Mo.

The $50,000 grant to the University was one of three such grants in support of art history studies in the United States made this spring by the Kress Foundation, New York City. The other two went to the Warburg Institute of London and to the Biblioteca Hertziana, Rome, providing stipends for a year's study in each institution for an American student in the field of art history.

DESIGN CLASS

A University of Minnesota class in interior design will be offered this summer at the St. Paul General Extension Center, Ninth and Exchange streets, St. Paul.

The three-credit course, which proved very popular when given last year, will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon on Mondays and Thursdays from June 14 through July 15. The course is Art 83A and will be taught by Leah Lewis, professor of interior design. It will cost $30 plus a $1 laboratory fee.

Those interested may register from June 1 through 10, between 8 a.m. and noon or 1:30 and 8 p.m., at the St. Paul General Extension Center. The course is being offered by the evening and special classes department of the University's General Extension Division.

The course will deal with floors and floor coverings, walls and wall coverings, cabinet woods and their finishes and furniture selection and arrangement, with both traditional and contemporary furniture considered, according to Mrs. Lewis. Basic design principles will be applied to projects done by the students. Style trends for both residential and commercial settings will be studied.

Minneapolis---"The United States and Canada" will be the subject of a Minnesota-Dakotas Assembly, to be held from June 2-5 at Moorhead, Minn.

Sponsors will be the University of Minnesota, the American Assembly of Columbia university, the Universities of North and South Dakota, North Dakota State University of Agriculture and Applied Science, South Dakota State university and Moorhead State college.

It will be the third Minnesota-Dakotas Assembly, which is patterned after the American Assembly: a nonpartisan educational institution designed to bring together interested citizens to discuss particular subjects and make recommendations. The first was held last June on "The United States and Latin America" and the second in September on "The Population Dilemma".

The American Assembly was established in 1950 by Dwight D. Eisenhower, then president of Columbia university, who remains its honorary chairman.

Clifford Nelson, president of the American Assembly, will open the first meeting on the evening of June 2, following a reception and dinner.

The three major speakers will be Ivan B. White of the United States State Department, currently serving in the Office of British Commonwealth and Northern European Affairs; General Frank B. James, chief of the United States Air Force central coordinating staff in Ottawa, Canada; and John W. Holmes, director-general of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

The Minnesota World Affairs Center and the Center for Continuation Study, both parts of the University of Minnesota's General Extension Division, are in charge of the conference.

White has worked on many special government assignments, including the Bretton Woods Financial and Monetary conference and meetings of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund. He was named by President John Kennedy as chief U.S. negotiator in the Columbia River Treaty agreements.

General James has served as the U.S. Air Attaché in the American Embassy in Moscow and with the Joint Intelligence Group, Joint Staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington, D.C.

Holmes served for 17 years in the Canadian Department of External Affairs where he was, for a time, Canada's acting permanent representative to the United Nations.

Minneapolis---A survey of the scholastic and employment records of the 23 University of Minnesota graduate students in engineering currently working under the Ford Foundation "forgiveable loan" program to encourage teaching of engineering as a profession shows that every member of the group has successfully completed the work for the doctor of philosophy degree. Also more than three fourths of the students have accepted positions as teachers.

"These figures are equally satisfying to the University's Institute of Technology and to the Ford Foundation who established this program in 1961 and have contributed a total of $210,000 to its support," according to Warren E. Ibele, mechanical engineering professor and director of the program.

The program, Ibele explained, provides fellowship loans, up to a maximum of $10,000 over a three-year period, to graduate students in engineering who hold a master's degree, have been admitted to the University's graduate school and who have decided to make teaching engineering their profession.

Terms of forgiveness or repayment of the loans include debt cancellation at the rate of $1,000 per year or 20 per cent of the total owed on completion of graduate study, whichever is greater, if the recipient is serving as a full-time engineering faculty member in the United States or Canada.

If the recipient does not go into teaching, the debt is to be repaid to the University at a minimum rate of $1,000 per year and at 3 per cent interest on the balance.

Two of the Ford Foundation engineering fellows, all of whom have received the rank of assistant professor in the school to which they will go, are remaining as engineering faculty members at the University. Other teaching assignments range from coast to coast in the United States. Of the five who chose to go into private industry, their positions range from consulting engineer in Pakistan to aircraft and oil industry assignments.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Gerald R. Firth, associate professor of secondary education at the University of Minnesota, is the new director of University high school.

He was named director recently by the Board of Regents and, at the same time, was made chairman of secondary education in the University's education department, a position he has filled since September as acting director.

Firth replaces Robert J. Keller, who became dean of the college of education in May, 1964. Robert A. Anderson, assistant professor of education and principal of the high school, has been serving as its acting director.

"All year, a faculty committee has been seeking the best person for this job," according to Keller, "and I am very pleased that they came up with someone on our own staff. Dr. Firth's interest in the importance of the institution, and in curriculum development, will be exceedingly helpful as we move ahead both in University high school and in the department of secondary education."

Firth joined the University staff in December 1963, after three years as director of secondary education for the Utica, N.Y., public schools. Before that he was an assistant professor in the school of education of the University of Buffalo, N.Y., associate professor at State University College of Education, New Paltz, N.Y., and science teacher and assistant principal of a White Plains, N.Y., junior high school.

He also spent two years as director of the Catskill Area Project in Small School Design, a research study involving 22 schools in a three-county region. The project was sponsored by the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Advancement of Education, with headquarters at the State University College of Education at Oneonta, N.Y.

Firth holds a master of arts and a doctor of education degree in administration and supervision from Teachers college of Columbia university, and a bachelor of arts degree with a major in natural science from the State University of New York at Albany. He also has nine years of active and reserve duty with the United States Army.

HENRY C. MACKALL TO RECEIVE U OF M
ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Henry C. Mackall, a Minneapolis attorney and a 1906 graduate of the University of Minnesota, will receive the University's Outstanding Achievement Award Tuesday (June 1).

He will be honored at the 61st annual meeting of the Minnesota Alumni association, to be held starting at 6 p.m. in the Leamington hotel, Minneapolis.

Also at that meeting, three University graduates will receive the Alumni Service Award. They are Mrs. Charlotte Winget Chope, Joseph A. Maun and Kendall B. Macho.

The Outstanding Achievement Award is the University's highest honor. The Alumni Service Award is given to former students who have contributed to the welfare of the University by outstanding service to the Alumni association.

Mackall, permanent chairman of the Class of 1906, has long been an active supporter of the University's alumni program. Under his leadership, his class established one of the first class scholarship funds, with the interest going for current scholarships.

He served as a trustee of the Greater University Fund for five years and was chairman of the board for two, then helped in the dissolution of that organization and the establishment of the University of Minnesota Alumni Fund and the University of Minnesota Foundation. He now serves as chairman of the board of the new foundation, for which he wrote the constitution and bylaws.

Mackall, who earned his bachelor of arts degree at the University, holds a law degree from Harvard university and has practiced law in Minneapolis since 1909. He has served as an officer of a number of business firms, has been active in law organizations, and from 1933-39 was a member of the National Commission on Uniform Laws. He resides at 2221 Oliver ave., S., Minneapolis.

Mrs. Horace M. Chope, of 3212 Hazelwood road, Wayzata, was for six years a member of the board of directors of the Alumni association, and has been a board member and president of the College of Science, Literature and the Arts and University College Alumni association. One of her major contributions has been her concern for honoring good scholarship, and she successfully inaugurated the Distinguished Teacher Award which acknowledges teaching excellence.

Maun, a St. Paul attorney who lives at 1757 Pinehurst Ave., has served as national president of the Minnesota Alumni association and as president of the Law Alumni association. As national president, he was largely responsible for the establishment of the University Alumni Club in the Sheraton-Ritz hotel, and also was active in strengthening relations between the State Legislature and the Minnesota Alumni association.

Macho, of 1895 Lincoln ave., St. Paul, was instrumental in organizing the College of Pharmacy Alumni association and served as its first president in 1958-59, conducting a vigorous membership campaign among all state pharmacists and organizing outstanding alumni activities including an impressive scholarship program.

UMD PROF. TEZLA
TO VISIT HUNGARY
IN HISTORY SEARCH

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Albert Tezla, professor of English at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, and a member of the University's Immigrant Archives committee, will leave for Hungary Tuesday (June 1) to search for materials on the history of emigration to the United States and Canada.

Professor Tezla will visit libraries and private collections in his search. His trip was made possible by a grant from the University's International Studies program.

The Immigrant Archives are a recently established section of the University Library with the goal of preserving the archives of immigrants from eastern and southern Europe.

Tezla also will spend part of the summer as a guest of the Hungarian Cultural Relations Institute, Budapest, completing work on the second volume of his "Bibliography to the Study of Hungarian Literature". The first volume, published last December, received worldwide scholarly acclaim as a unique and much needed bibliography.

On his return, Tezla will visit major centers of Hungarian settlement in this country, as well as the offices of the main religious, social and benevolent organizations, searching for files of newspapers, periodicals, pamphlets, books and manuscripts for the Immigrant Archives, where they will be preserved for future scholars.

A native of South Bend, Ind., and the son of Hungarian immigrants, Tezla holds a doctor of philosophy degree in literature from the University of Chicago. Before joining the Immigrant Archives committee, he made two visits to Hungary, one on a Fulbright scholarship and one under a fellowship from the inter-University Committee on travel grants. He collected for the University possibly the nation's finest collection of Hungarian literature published in the Old World.

He was recently chosen to be the first recipient of the Outstanding Teacher award at the University of Minnesota, Duluth.

University Professor Timothy L. Smith, chairman of the Immigrant Archives committee, has announced that Croatian, Lithuanian, Italian, Greek and Slovenian materials have continued to accumulate in the Immigrant Archives during the year.

Stanley Boric, editor of "Nasa Nada", organ of the Croatian Catholic Fraternal union, placed the extensive research papers left by Professor Francis R. Preveden in the archives in November. The editor of "Ahepa", organ of the American Hellenic Educational Progressive association, presented an almost complete file of that periodical in January.

Complete files of two Lithuanian periodicals, "Aidai" and "Teviskes Ziburiai", also have been added to the collection, along with a box of pamphlets from Mrs. Theresa Kerze, wife of the late editor of the Slovenian literary magazine, "Cas", and several shipments of Roman Catholic Slovenian pamphlets from Father Bertrand Kotnik of Lemont, Ill.

Leading members of the Dalmatian community in San Pedro, Calif., are gathering materials for the archives from the various lodges and clubs there. And from Gary, Ind., Z.I. Kerhin has enriched the archives with an extensive collection of programs and anniversary booklets published by Croatian singing societies in America.

SUMMER LANGUAGE
CLASSES FOR AREA
YOUNGSTERS SET AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Enrollment is now open for free demonstration classes in German and Spanish for Twin Cities area youngsters this summer at the University of Minnesota's National Defense Education Act Foreign Language Institute.

Classes are scheduled in German and Spanish for children who will be entering the fifth grade next fall and for those who will be entering the eighth grade.

The associate director of the institute, Gerhard H. Weiss, associate professor of German, cautioned that enrollment is limited and acceptance cannot be guaranteed.

Purpose of the classes is to acquaint elementary and junior high school teachers attending the institute with the newest methods of language teaching as well as to provide an educational opportunity for the youngsters. Teachers enrolled in the institute will come from all parts of the United States.

Classes will meet June 28 to August 11, five days a week, on the Minneapolis campus. They will be scheduled early in the afternoon, and each class session will last approximately 45 minutes.

The instructors, experienced teachers of foreign languages, will be Mrs. Dorothea Bruschke of Washburn high school, Minneapolis; Mrs. Carol Pesola, Wabasso; Miss Ruth Elliott, Hopkins; and Mrs. Juanita Jenkins, Bethesda, Md.

Parents interested in enrolling their children in the program may write to Professor Weiss, NDEA Foreign Language Summer Institute, 216 Folwell Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455, or telephone the NDEA office at 373-2579.

Minneapolis---Theofanis Stavrou, associate professor of history at the University of Minnesota, has been named associate director of the University's new Center for Immigration Studies.

Stavrou will spend part of the coming summer visiting Greek religious and community leaders in the United States and Canada, collecting material for the Greek section of the Immigrant Archives section of the University library. He will spend Thursday (June 3) through June 12 in the New York and Boston areas and later will go to the West Coast.

Stavrou also has announced that he will devote part of his graduate seminar next year to the subject of Eastern Orthodox culture. He and University Professor Timothy L. Smith, an American social historian and director of the Center for Immigration Studies, are planning an extensive research program in the history of Eastern Orthodox churches in the United States and Canada.

In the fall of 1966, Stavrou hopes to inaugurate a University course in Eastern Orthodox culture. His book on the relationship between the Russian church and Eastern Orthodox patriarchates, entitled "Russian Interests in Palestine, 1882-1914", was published last year at the Balkan Institute, Salonika.

A native of Cyprus, Stavrou earned his doctorate in modern Russian and Near Eastern history at Indiana university. He spent the winter of 1963-64 in the Soviet Union doing research in aspects of 19th-century ecclesiastical relations between Russia and the Near East. He returned by way of Greece, where he visited libraries and research institutes discussing cooperative plans for collecting materials pertaining to Greek emigrants in America.

As director of the University's Student Project for Amity Among Nations, he will lead a group of students in a study tour of Greece during the summer of 1966.

SOCIAL WORKERS'
LAW WORKSHOP
SLATED AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A two-day workshop designed to help social workers become familiar with Minnesota law and the legal aspects of their work will be held at the University of Minnesota Center for Continuation Study Thursday and Friday (June 3 and 4).

Titled "Social Work and the Law", it will be the fourth such workshop to be held and will deal with the problems of neglect and dependency, with leaders in law and social work participating in the program.

The workshop is open to persons in public or private social welfare agencies who have administrative, supervisory or case-work responsibilities which bring them into contact with the courts.

A session Thursday (June 3) at 9 a.m. will be led by Robert J. Levy, professor of law, who will explain legal principles, concepts and language.

Thursday afternoon, a panel will discuss the role of the attorney as prosecutor, as adviser to welfare boards and as counselor to parents and their children, in the courtroom. Panelists will include Levy and Beatrice M. Bernhagen, supervisor of special and facilitative services for the Ramsey county welfare department St. Paul; Robert Johnson, county attorney for Anoka county; and Kenneth E. Tilsen, a St. Paul attorney.

Friday (June 4) morning Levy will talk on legal aspects of neglect and dependency, and that afternoon Miss Bernhagen will speak on social aspects.

Social workers from all over the state will attend. The program is under the direction of Harry Dederer of the Continuation Study center staff.
