2 CONCERTS TO FEATURE
CONTEMPORARY MUSIC

Contemporary "live" and electronic music will be presented in two concerts at the University of Minnesota Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 12 and 13.

Professional musicians from the Center for New Music of the State University of Iowa will perform in a program of compositions by Karlheinz Stockhausen, Luciano Berio, John Cage and others. The concerts are designed to give the listener a wide perspective on contemporary serious music composition. The first will emphasize the relationships between "live" music and electronic sounds and the second will present some theatrics, improvisation and chance music.

Both concerts will begin at 8 p.m. in Scott hall auditorium and are open to the public with no admission charge. Sponsors are the University departments of music and music education and concerts and lectures.

MODERN URDU POETRY
TOPIC FOR 'U' LECTURE

Modern Urdu poetry will be the subject of a free public lecture at the University of Minnesota Thursday (Jan. 8).

Professor Ali Ahmad Suroor will discuss "Trends in Modern Urdu Poetry" at 8 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium.

Suroor, chairman of the department of Urdu at Aligarh Muslim University in India, is currently visiting professor in the South Asian language and civilization department at the University of Chicago. He is the author of three volumes of literary criticism and two volumes of poetry.

NAFTALIN TO TEACH AT SALZBURG SEMINAR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Former Minneapolis Mayor Arthur Naftalin will leave the city this week for two months of work as an American urban specialist in Europe.

Naftalin, who is on a one-year leave of absence from his position as a professor in the University of Minnesota School of Public Affairs, will be faculty chairman of a four-week session on "Urban Problems and Planning" at the 1970 Salzburg (Austria) Seminar in American Studies, Jan. 11 to Feb. 7. He is scheduled to speak at the "Exhibition on Urban Planning: U.S.A." in West Berlin, Germany, Feb. 9 and 10. Later the same week he will meet in a colloquy with German municipal officials in Hamburg.

As a participant in the American Specialists Program, sponsored by the State Department, Naftalin will visit Bucharest, Romania in mid-February.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

The Salzburg Seminar is a study program for European city planners, officials and architects. This will be the second time the former mayor has been on the faculty and the first time he has served as a chairman. He first attended in 1966. Other faculty members in the past have included Saul Bellow, Arthur J. Goldberg, Frances Perkins, Robert C. Wood, Kingman Brewster, Jr. and Arthur S. Flemming.

Mrs. Naftalin will accompany the mayor to Europe. In Salzburg, they will stay at Schloss Leopoldskron, built as a private residence in 1736 by the then Archbishop of Salzburg.

'DISTRESSED BUSINESS' TOPIC FOR LAWYERS' REFRESHER COURSE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Rehabilitation or liquidation of a financially distressed business will be discussed in the 10th annual refresher course offered by the Hennepin County Bar Association Continuation Studies Committee in cooperation with the continuing legal education department of the University of Minnesota General Extension Division and the Minnesota State Bar Association.

The course will be given in five weekly two-hour sessions, beginning Tuesday, Jan. 13, at Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank auditorium in Minneapolis and will be offered statewide through videotape presentations in February and March in Duluth, Moorhead, Mankato, Montevideo and Rochester.

Speakers will include Minneapolis attorneys Lawrence C. Brown, Faegre and Benson; Donald R. Johnston, Wagner and Johnston; Thomas G. Lovett, Jr., Thompson and Lovett; James J. Mickelson, trustee in bankruptcy; Kenneth G. Owens, referee in bankruptcy, and Howard A. Patrick, Robins, Davis and Lyons.

The "live" sessions will begin at 4:30 p.m. and end at 6:30 p.m. The final session, Feb. 10, will be a panel discussion including all the speakers.

All-day videotape sessions, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., are scheduled in Duluth and Moorhead, Feb. 13 and 14; Mankato and Montevideo, March 6 and 7, and Rochester and the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, March 13 and 14.

Professor Donald B. Pedersen of the William Mitchell College of Law will answer questions, by telephone, following each of the videotape lectures.

Cost for the course is $35 per person, including the price of written materials. Up to four members of the same firm may register for $25 each, with one $35 registration. No written materials are provided with the lower fee. Registration will be accepted at the first session.

MOON'S OLD AGE AND UNIQUENESS
CONFIRMED BY V. RAMA MURTHY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The moon is about 4.5 billion years old, and is not at all like the earth or any meteorite. This finding, by Professor V. Rama Murthy, University of Minnesota geochemist, confirms preliminary estimates made by the NASA Lunar Receiving Laboratory in Houston.

Murthy's examination of eight samples of lunar material from the Apollo 11 moon mission show that the age of the samples ranges from 4.4 billion to 4.6 billion years old.

Scientists have long speculated that the solar system is approximately 4.5 billion years old, indicating -- according to Murthy's NASA report to be presented this week in Houston -- that "lunar melting processes date back to the early history of the solar system."

Murthy's analysis also led him to theorize about what kind of rock might be found by the Apollo 13 astronauts when they land on the moon's highlands in the near future (scheduled for sometime in March).

Murthy expects that they will find "significant amounts of plagioclase." His reason for expecting plagioclase is that chemical trends found in the moon rock samples he has analyzed indicate strongly that they must have separated out from other rock high in plagioclase materials.

Plagioclase is a type of rock commonly found on earth, including such areas as the Adirondack Mountains of New York and the Duluth gabbro on the north shore of Lake Superior.

The Apollo 11 moon samples were also examined for any evidence of a highly active stage in the sun's formation in the beginning of the solar system. Rocks on the surface of the moon, unprotected by an atmosphere such as earth's, would have reflected such activity in their appearance and composition.

"We did not find any such evidence," Murthy said, "and what one finds are simply nuclear reactions that are produced by cosmic-ray type of interactions very much like what is going on at the present time."

Aided by University scientists M.R. Coscio, N.M. Evensen and Ber-Ming Jahn of the department of geology and geophysics and the Space Science Center, Murthy concluded that the age of the lunar samples was similar to that previously found in certain meteorites. However, the chemical composition of the moon material was definitely not that of any previously analyzed material, either from meteorites or from earth rocks.

V. Rama Murthy --

Expected back in the Twin Cities on Jan. 8 (p.m.).

Professor 1969--

Although the age of the earth, sun and moon has long been estimated at 4.5 billion years, no earth rock has yet been dated at older than 3.3 billion years old. This may be because older rock is impossible to find on earth due to the intense geologic activity here.

Technically, according to Murthy's report, trends in the trace elements, potassium, rubidium, strontium, and barium, coupled with a depletion in europium, are his reason for pointing to a plagioclase separation "from the melts that produced these rocks." Plagioclase separation is offered as a simple mechanism which would account for such trends.

UNIVERSITY PHYSICIST
FINDS MOON ROCK
RESEMBLES METEORITES

Apollo 11 lunar samples examined at the University of Minnesota are more like material from meteorites than like anything seen on earth.

This is the conclusion reached by Assistant Professor of Physics Robert O. Pepin after an examination of the rare gases trapped in the moon rock. Pepin, a specialist in the examination of meteorites in the past, said that "we can probably confirm the suspicion that is already extant that the moon and the earth are not particularly closely related.

"In fact it's more probable that the two bodies formed from rather different batches of material rather than from the same uniform batch often suggested in the so-called 'double planet' hypothesis."

Pepin, assisted by University scientists L.E. Nyquist, Douglas Phinney and David C. Black of the Space Science Center, also confirmed that the moon rock showed the result of prolonged exposure to high-energy cosmic rays and solar flares. This effect had been expected because the moon material is completely unshielded from the sun by a protective atmosphere such as earth's.

"I think it's fairly clear that the gas found in the moon rock is gas that streamed out of the solar wind and was absorbed in the small particles of dust lying around on the lunar surface," Pepin said.

"This doesn't happen on earth because the atmosphere protects us against the solar wind, deflecting it off into space.

"The interesting finding is that the gases are very similar to those we find in a class of very primitive meteorites and very dissimilar to the gases that we find on the earth."

Pepin said one of the great hopes in studying the gases is to learn something about the activity through which the sun has gone in the last few billion years.

The bulk of Pepin's findings were possible to obtain only with the highly sophisticated mass spectrometer designed by Regents' Professor of Physics Alfred O. C. Nier. The equipment was built by the recently deceased instrument-building specialist Rudolph B. Thorness.

"Thus we had better than a 'Rolls-Royce' type of instrument for our analysis," Pepin said.

Although the moon material resembled meteorite material more than earth, there were significant differences. Both moon and meteorite material show an evolutionary history and environmental effects which are very much alike. Chemical composition, in general, is quite different.

Pepin believes on the basis of his research that "it is quite probable that some kinds of meteorites are created on the surface of bodies such as the moon" before they show up in space.

Pepin's mass spectrometric analyses were carried out for all rare gas isotopes in six lunar crystalline rocks, a breccia (rock naturally cemented in soil), coarse fines ("fines" are tiny particles) sieved from the lunar soil, and the soil itself.

Joined University of Minnesota in 1965.

Technical Notes:

The range found for trapped neon gas isotope ratios found in the lunar soil resembles the gas-rich meteorites, such as the achondrite Kapeota. In the trend line shown in Pepin's NASA report, however, points plotted for the moon samples tend to lie to the left of the line rather than following it as they would for typical meteorite material.

One neon isotope composition seen in the lunar rocks and coarse fines is essentially identical to the gas-poor meteorites Felix and Chainpur, but this is apparently an exception for these isotopes. Overall neon isotopic patterns in lunar fines and breccia are virtually identical to those seen in gas-rich meteorites.

The instrument used for most of these analyses was a double-focusing mass spectrometer designed by A.O.C. Nier and built by R.B. Thorness.

Note to Newsmen wishing interviews:

Pepin will return to the Twin Cities around Jan. 17. Nyquist, Black and Finney will return on Jan. 8, as will Professor Murthy, the other principal investigator at the University. Pepin will stay in Houston because he is on the NASA committee to determine the distribution of the recently acquired Apollo 12 lunar samples.

FEIGL TO DELIVER
FIRST REGENTS LECTURE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Herbert Feigl, Regents' Professor of Philosophy at the University of Minnesota, will deliver the first in a series of Regents' Professor Lectures at the University Wednesday (Jan. 14).

"Science Unlimited?" will be the topic of his lecture at 12:15 p.m. in Mayo auditorium.

Feigl is director of the Minnesota Center for the Philosophy of Science and president of the international Institute for the Unity of Science.

A native of Austria-Hungary, he joined the University faculty in 1941 and was named a Regents' Professor in 1967.

A past president of the American Philosophical Association and the Minnesota Philosophical Association, he has written more than 100 published articles. In 1966 he was honored by a book published by the University of Minnesota Press titled "Mind, Matter and Method: Essays in Philosophy and Science in Honor of Herbert Feigl."

The Regents' Professor Lectures are sponsored by the Campus Committee for Convocations and the Arts and are open free to the public.

PIGS, BANANA SKINS
SUBJECTS FOR WORKSHOP

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"The pig is the most important animal in America right now" -- Alan Kraning, University of Minnesota assistant professor of studio arts.

Pigs and banana skins will be the subjects of a workshop at the University of Minnesota Wednesday and Friday, Jan. 14 and 16.

There will be a banana-skinning demonstration by Professor Kraning and participants will make their own antenna pigs of polystyrene. Two films will be shown -- "Devil Woman," the story of Kraning's pig kill, and "Banana Trapping," the story of "an average inner-city banana trapper," says Kraning.

The workshops are open to the public with no admission charge and begin at 1:15 p.m. both days in the Automatic Engineering building, 134 Twentieth Ave. S., Minneapolis.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Kraning's interest in pigs began when the National Farmers Organization slaughtered them to raise prices. He says men are now using them to "dump their sins on." "Pigs are wonderful," he says, "Men say pigs are dirty -- and they're not. Men says pigs are dumb -- and they're not."

GENERAL B.A. SCHRIEVER

"Economic Implications of the National Space Program" will be the topic for two speeches by General Bernard A. Schriever in Minneapolis Tuesday and Wednesday (Jan. 13 and 14).

Schriever, retired commander of the Air Force Systems Command, will address a dinner meeting of the Twin Cities chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Sheraton-Ritz Hotel and will give a public speech at 10 a.m. Wednesday in Room 170 Anderson hall at the University of Minnesota.

The four-star general, who was responsible for the development of the Inter-continental Ballistic Missile program and the Air Force's initial space programs, is appearing in the Distinguished Visitor Series sponsored by the Twin Cities chapter of SAM and the University of Minnesota Graduate School of Business Administration.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

General Schriever retired from the Air Force in 1966 and is now chairman of the board of Schriever and McKee Associates, a management consultant firm in Arlington, Va. He is a member of the board of directors of the Minnesota Experimental City and Control Data Corporation.

'U' STUDENT PRESIDENT PROPOSES LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON STUDENTS

A joint Senate-House subcommittee on student concerns for the state of Minnesota was proposed today by the president of the University of Minnesota Student Association.

In a letter sent to key personnel in the State Legislature, Tom Gilsenan urged dialogue between students and legislators on a regular basis and not just during legislative sessions or "when a conflict is already present that tends to impede communications."

Gilsenan's suggested composition of the subcommittee includes members of the state House and Senate who are concerned with higher education and its financing plus a composite of students from both private and public colleges, including junior colleges.

"For too long student concerns have been explained and developed by others, instead of by students themselves," said Gilsenan. "Education is too integral a part of this state's growth to exclude from ongoing participation in decision making those for whom it is provided."

Quality of instruction and services students need on their campuses, such as transportation, health care and dining facilities, were suggested as issues students feel most strongly about.

Gilsenan proposed that development of such a subcommittee could be considered at the statewide meeting of student body presidents he suggested to Governor LeVander last week.

REGENTS APPOINT WEBB
ASSOCIATE DEAN OF CLA

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, JAN. 9)

The University of Minnesota Board of Regents today appointed John W. Webb, professor of geography, to the position of associate dean for social sciences in the College of Liberal Arts (CLA).

He succeeds Lloyd Lofquist whose promotion to the position of assistant vice president for academic administration was announced earlier. Both appointments are effective immediately.

Webb, a native of England, has a master's degree from the University of St. Andrews, Scotland, and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Minnesota. He was appointed to the University faculty in 1952 and served as chairman of the geography department from 1966 to 1969. His area of research specialization is settlement and population geography, particularly the urbanization of Europe and North America.

In other action, the Regents approved the appointment of John B. Hughes as professor and chairman of the Spanish and Portuguese department in CLA. He succeeds Walter T. Pattison who resigned as chairman effective Jan. 1 and will remain on the faculty as a professor.

Hughes joined the University faculty in September after serving as a visiting professor in 1968-69. He was previously on the faculty of Princeton University where he received his bachelor's, master's and doctor of philosophy degrees. He is the author of two books--one on the 18th-century Spanish writer Jose Cadalso and another on the 19th-century Argentine poem "Martin Fierro."

Other new department heads in CLA this year include Frank C. Miller, succeeding

E. Adamson Hoebel as chairman of the anthropology department; Philip W. Porter succeeding Webb as chairman of the geography department; Samuel Krislov succeeding Francis J. Sorauf, Jr., as chairman of the political science department, and Rachel Van Meter Baumer, chairman of the South Asian languages department.

Hoebel, who is Regents' Professor of Anthropology, and Professor Sorauf will remain on the University faculty. Hoebel is on a one-third time leave of absence this year and Sorauf has received a sabbatical leave for the entire academic year. Mrs. Baumer is the first chairman of the South Asian languages department, formerly a part of East and South Asian languages, which became a separate department in 1968.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Samuel Krislov -- New York University, B.A. and M.A.; Princeton University, Ph.D. Joined the University faculty in 1964, formerly taught at University of Vermont, Hunter College, University of Oklahoma and Michigan State University. Author of numerous articles for legal and social science journals and four books -- "The Supreme Court and Political Freedom," "The Supreme Court and Political Process," "The Negro in Federal Employment" and "The Politics of Regulation." Specialist in the judicial process and constitutional law.

Frank C. Miller -- Carleton College, B.A.; Harvard University, Ph.D. Appointed to the University faculty in 1964, formerly taught at Carleton College. Assistant dean in the Office of International Programs, 1967-69. Currently conducting research in cultural change among American Indians and urbanization in Mexico.

Philip W. Porter -- Middlebury College, A.B.; Syracuse University, M.A.; London School of Economics and Political Science, Ph.D. Joined University faculty in 1956. Visiting professor at the University College of East Africa in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, in 1969. Specialist in environmental basis of economic development, especially agricultural development, in Africa, where he has done extensive field work.

WELL-KNOWN FILM,
"ISLAND TREASURE," TO SHOW AT MUSEUM

"Island Treasure," a well-known film of wildlife on an island in the Mississippi located near the Twin Cities, will be shown free this Sunday (Jan. 11) at the University of Minnesota. Showings will be at 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. at the Bell Museum of Natural History, University and Seventeenth aves. SE.

Several years in the making, the film will be narrated by its maker, Walter Breckenridge. "For a small island, so close to civilization, an amazing number and diversity of wild creatures have been seen in action there -- and captured on film," says Assistant Professor Richard Barthelemy of the museum staff.

The island was recently donated to the University by Northern States Power Company in honor of Breckenridge, who retired last June as director of the museum.

"If you've missed this film, you've missed one of life's better experiences," Barthelemy says. "This is a continuous, in-depth record of one piece of our environment -- still unspoiled. Everyone, children especially, should see it if they are to gain an appreciation of our environment."

PHARMACY COLLEGE
TAKES DRUG EDUCATION TO HIGH SCHOOLS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A four-pronged drug abuse information program has been launched by the College of Pharmacy at the University of Minnesota.

-- Junior and senior pharmacy students have completed an intensive orientation session for appearances in junior and senior high school health classes.

-- Pharmacy faculty have received updated knowledge on the most abused drugs and will serve as resource people at professional seminars.

-- Community pharmacists from all over the state can attend a two-day drug abuse seminar on campus in February.

-- A drug information resource center containing audiovisual aids and display kits will be established for students, faculty and graduate pharmacists.

William Hodapp, assistant to the dean and director of continuing pharmacy education, is coordinating the program.

"The few professionals who are participating in drug abuse programs are swamped with requests from schools, service groups and professional organizations," he explained. "Based on the present demands, the mushrooming need and the extreme shortage of qualified personnel, the pharmacy college hopes to fill a gap in the community's knowledge until comprehensive programs are developed in the school districts."

First and second-year students will accompany the juniors and seniors to the health classes. The volunteer students, in a factual presentation, will try to create an awareness that all drugs (prescription, alcohol, or psychedelics) are potentially dangerous and to develop the teenagers' understanding of the effects of the drugs. Their goal is to give the teenager enough information so he can make an informed decision when faced with a drug experimentation challenge.

Faculty members, also volunteers, are preparing abstracts of the current literature on drug abuse and will be available to train professional groups such as parole agents, policemen, and educators.

Pharmacists from all over the state participating in the Feb. 8-9 drug abuse training program will be able to use their new knowledge to plan and participate in local informational programs.

Display kits of commonly misused drugs and other visual aids will be supplemented by a periodically updated drug information newsletter.

Both faculty and students have already been baptized under fire. Eleven formal presentations have been made since the end of November. Pharmacy student activism has been received with unrestrained enthusiasm by high schools in the metropolitan area, according to Hodapp.

At Anoka High, where six students made 10 presentations over a two-day period, one teacher commented, "The pharmacy students put across more information in one hour than I could have in a year of preaching on drug abuse."

STUDENTS, PARENTS TO DECIDE
'U' RESIDENCE HALL GUEST POLICY

(FOR RELEASE AT NOON FRIDAY, JAN. 9)

Individual student's choice combined with parental consultation will determine guest policy in University of Minnesota residence halls, according to action passed by the Board of Regents today (Friday, Jan. 9).

The Board adopted a multiple option interim policy for residence halls -- with the options ranging from 24-hour open visiting, in which case guests would have to be registered and escorted at all times, to a completely closed hall. A third alternative would be similar to the University's present guest policy -- allowing visitors of the opposite sex during specified hours. As before, each hall will decide its own policy by a two-thirds vote.

A new feature of this policy is that parents of students under 21 (approximately two-thirds of the dormitory population) will be notified of their son's or daughter's choice and will have the ultimate decision as to the kind of guest policy he or she lives under.

No person will be forced to participate in a more liberal guest hour policy than he or she wants. Arrangements will be made for students who prefer a more restricted policy to live in a residence hall, wing, house or on a floor that adopts such a policy.

Paul Cashman, vice president for student affairs, called the plan a logical evolution of the University's housing policy.

"Since the late 1950's when the residence halls first allowed parents to come in for brief visits on Sunday afternoons, students have gradually been given more responsibility to exercise judgment over the environment in which they live and learn," says Cashman. "The University has been well satisfied with the students' handling of this responsibility and we are confident that they will continue to handle their responsibility satisfactorily."

The multiple option interim policy was drawn up by Neil Lavick, president of the Inter-hall Residence Association, in cooperation with student leaders in residence halls and the Student Housing Bureau. Cashman pointed out that Michigan, Michigan State, and the University of Illinois have adopted similar policies, with the results showing that about half of the residence halls adopted 24-hour guest hours, with the others voting for more restrictive policies.

Cashman said the policy will be studied and evaluated during winter and spring quarter and that the results will be presented to the Board of Regents before fall quarter 1970. At this time they will decide whether or not to adopt the policy on a permanent basis.

DUANE SCRIBNER
OF UNIVERSITY RELATIONS

The department of University relations at the University of Minnesota has a new director, by action of the Board of Regents today.

He is Duane Scribner, 38, former teacher and newsman, who has been serving as assistant to Vice President Donald K. Smith for the last six months while working on a doctoral degree at the University. The appointment is effective immediately.

Scribner succeeds William L. Nunn, who now heads the Special Projects fund-raising program as special assistant to Roger Kennedy, vice president for investments.

For two and a half years, until his return to the Twin Cities last August, Scribner had been administrative assistant to Senator Walter F. Mondale (D-Minn.) in Washington, D.C.

Scribner's assignment under Smith, who is vice president for administration, has included general organizing, information-gathering, reporting and writing.

As director of University relations he will supervise the University News Service which supplies information to all news media; a publications section which issues, among other things, the twice-monthly University Report to all University staff members; and a functions section which organizes various activities dealing with the public including dinners, ceremonies for naming buildings, ground-breaking, etc., and commencements.

HEARING, COMMUNICATION DISEASES CENTER APPROVED

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. JAN. 9)

The Midwest Hearing and Communication Diseases Center, a cooperative treatment-service project of Fairview, St. Mary's and University Hospitals, was approved today by the University's Board of Regents.

Trustees of the two Minneapolis West Bank hospitals and the Metropolitan Hospital Planning Agency have already given their approval.

Opening in March, the center will be temporarily located in St. Mary's Extended Care Center. All three hospitals will share the funding and administration of the center while working to develop a free-standing facility.

Presently the audiology and speech pathology program of the University's otolaryngology department, the largest in the area with 16 fulltime staff members, has a three-month waiting list for audiology testing and a one-month list for speech therapy.

There is also a serious manpower shortage of people trained to deal with communications disorders such as aphasia, stuttering, or post-laryngectomy. These specially trained individuals include otolaryngologists, audiologists, speech pathologists, deaf education specialists, public health nurses, and social workers.

The center, a development of the "communiversality" concept expressed by President Malcolm Moos, will offer coordinated multidisciplinary services to the entire state.

JOHN PRESTON WARD TO TEACH AT U OF M

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, JANUARY 9)

John Preston Ward, black civil rights attorney, has been named a visiting professor at the University of Minnesota for winter and spring quarters.

Ward was appointed today by the University Board of Regents as a Hill Family Foundation visiting professor in the Afro-American studies department. He will teach a class in "Law and Society -- a Minority Point of View" and conduct seminars.

Ward, whose home is Marion, Ind., graduated from the Indiana State School for the Blind and has bachelor's and master's degrees from Indiana University. He received his law degree from New York University School of Law where he studied under a Root Tilden fellowship. He is now completing his dissertation for a doctor of philosophy degree.

He is director of Law Reform for the Legal Services Organization of Indianapolis, Inc., and consultant for the Legal Services Program of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Appointment of two other visiting professors also was approved by the Regents. Dogan Kuban was named a visiting professor in the art history department and Heinrich Engel was named a Hill Family Foundation visiting professor in the department of architecture and landscape architecture.

Kuban, a professor at Istanbul Technical University, will teach classes in Islamic and Turkish art.

Engel, who taught at the University from 1955 to 1963, is now a practicing architect in his native Germany. He is the author of books on Japanese architecture and the architecture of structure. At Minnesota, he will teach classes in architectural design.

IMHOLTE NAMED PROVOST OF U OF M AT MORRIS

(FOR RELEASE AT 4 P.M. FRIDAY, JAN. 9)

John Q. Imholte today was appointed provost of the Morris campus of the University of Minnesota.

The appointment was made by the Board of Regents of the University upon recommendation of President Malcolm Moos. Imholte has been acting provost of the Morris campus since the resignation last spring of Rodney A. Briggs.

Following Briggs' resignation, a Search Committee was established, comprised of members of the central administration in Minneapolis, faculty, students and a representative of the University Civil Service on the Morris campus. This is the first time that students have been officially involved in the process of recommending a nominee for a major administrative post within the University structure, with the exception of the selection of the University president.

It was noted that the recommendation of Imholte was unanimous on the part of the Search Committee. Candidates from throughout the United States were considered, a number of them personally interviewed in both Minneapolis and Morris, and three of the five "finalists" in the selection process were from states other than Minnesota.

"The appointment of Dr. Imholte is richly deserved," said President Moos. "He is both an effective administrator and a productive scholar in the field of history. I am very pleased and proud of this appointment."

Imholte, 39, joined the original faculty of the University of Minnesota Morris in 1960 as an assistant professor of history. He was named Chairman of the Division of Social Science in 1962, assistant dean in 1967, academic dean in 1968, and acting provost last April. He was promoted to associate professor in 1964 and to professor in 1969.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Imholte was born in St. Paul and is a graduate of Cretin High School. Received a bachelor of arts degree from Washington and Lee University 1952, and master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from University of Minnesota in 1957 and 1960.

Imholte is the author of a book, "The First Volunteers," and a number of historical articles and papers. He is a member of a number of national and regional historical and professional societies. He married the former Lucy Gibbs of St. Paul in 1955 and has four children: Sara, 13; Rachel, 11; John, 6, and Rebecca, 4.

The University of Minnesota Morris, a four-year liberal arts college, was created by action of the Board of Regents in October, 1959, and began accepting students in the fall of 1960. Current enrollment at the Morris campus is approximately 1500 with over 100 faculty members.

"PROJECT NEWGATE" TO BE FEATURED ON NEWS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The University of Minnesota's "Project Newgate" is scheduled to be featured on the Sunday News with Frank McGee, an NBC network news program, from 5 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday (Jan. 18).

"Project Newgate," a program designed to give prisoners at St. Cloud Reformatory an opportunity for university education, will be reported by Steve Delany, NBC correspondent.

Established at St. Cloud by the University of Minnesota and funded by the federal Office of Economic Opportunity, the project makes it possible for 30 inmates to enroll in University classes on a fulltime, tuition-free basis and attend classes on a "campus" within reformatory walls.

The first group of student-inmates was released from the reformatory to attend classes this fall. Living accommodations are provided in a private, coed dormitory near the Twin Cities campus, called the "half-way house," while they are away from the reformatory.

The Frank McGee News is not scheduled to be broadcast over the Twin Cities NBC affiliate, KSTP. It's likely, however, that the "Project Newgate" segment may be broadcast on the KSTP news that evening. Persons living outside the area covered by KSTP should consult their local listings for the exact times and stations.

'U' DOCTOR GETS GRANT TO STUDY BLOOD FLOW

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A $134,426 grant has been received by the University of Minnesota from the John A. Hartford Foundation, Inc., New York, for clinical research on blood flow to tissues of the leg.

The three-year grant was announced jointly by the University's Board of Regents and Harry B. George, president of the Hartford Foundation, Inc.

Dr. John P. Delaney, associate professor of surgery, will be conducting the investigations using techniques he perfected in the animal laboratory. Previous Hartford Foundation grants enabled him to develop a method for measuring blood flow in the legs of animals, particularly blood going directly from arteries to veins bypassing the tissues.

Capillaries (tiny blood vessels which form an intermediate system between arteries and veins) perform the basic function of the circulatory system: exchanging life-giving oxygen for waste products from cells.

Using a modified technique for human study, Dr. Delaney will be injecting radioactive particles of a normal serum component (albumin) into the blood stream leading to the leg.

His three-fold goal is to gain insight into the various conditions that lead to inadequate blood flow to the legs, to perfect pre-operative and post-operative assessments to determine which patients need operative procedures, and to measure objectively blood flow improvement following operation.

FORMER STUDENT ASSN. PRESIDENT
CRITICIZES 'U' ADMINISTRATION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Last year's University of Minnesota Student Association president today warned students of possible "politicking" in the decision-making process of the University's Office of Academic Administration, in a strong criticism of certain procedures within the University's power structure, and a University administrator reacted sharply.

Joe Kroll, now a teacher service specialist in the University's Living Learning Center, presented the second half of his report on University power structure at today's Minnesota Student Association (MSA) forum meeting. The report consists of an evaluation of administrators, departments and offices within the University that he felt would be helpful to future student leaders. Part I was issued in October.

In an introduction, Kroll said the intent of his study was a subjective evaluation of people and systems. He said he used several criteria in judging the departments and administrators: Is student representation token or meaningful? Does the administrator believe that students have a legitimate position in decision-making? How open is he to change? Are the issues controversial enough to elicit pressure from the public, Regents, legislators and superiors? And how does the administrator react to these pressures?

"I attempted to verify controversial perceptions by cross-checking my information," he said. "What follows is true to the best of my knowledge."

In an example of what he termed "questionable tactics" in the Office of Academic Administration, Kroll claimed that the professor's right to dismiss classes, with the understanding that he will make up the class time, is now being questioned because of "pressures from our anti-dissent society."

"For years professors have been given the green light to dismiss classes to attend professional conferences and meetings, at their discretion," he said. "The administration rightfully assumed that the professor would make up this class time. But now educational policy committees, under pressure from the outside, are questioning the professor's right to dismiss class to take part in political activity."

He also cited a so-called "watered-down" ban on secret research as "de facto support for the military."

"The neutrality (of the University) that President Moos speaks of does not exist," he said.

Kroll spoke of the administration's failure to reappoint some of the more outspoken critics to important committees, leading to one-sided discussions.

"This has happened in spite of the Senate committee on committees' taking pains to suggest a more balanced slate on all committees," he said.

In commenting on the make-up of the University Senate, Kroll noted the "over-representation of the full professor." Of the 120 faculty members on the University Senate, he said, 68 per cent are full professors, while only 2 per cent are instructors. Full professors make up 80 per cent of the membership of University committees, he said. Kroll suggested a possible solution to this imbalance would be to elect faculty members to the Senate by academic rank.

University Vice President for Administration Donald K. Smith responded to Kroll's charges.

"Mr. Kroll's interpretation of University policy on dismissing classes is completely inaccurate," Smith said. "University policy in this matter has not changed and a reasonable reading of Vice President Shepherd's memorandum on the subject could not lead to Mr. Kroll's conclusion.

"His contention that the University's policy banning secret research is de facto support for the military is equally strained and tendentious. Careful study of the policy would eliminate the need for such erratic interpretations.

"As to his charges on committee appointments, I can only assume that someone he knows didn't get appointed to the committee of his choice. Mr. Kroll might at least ask the people doing the appointing 'Why?' before making his own imputations of motive. I suspect that the 'subjective' research methodology he followed has had the unfortunate effect of screening conclusions from the embarrassment of information."

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Part I of Kroll's report contains an evaluation of the Senate administration, the libraries, Institutional Research, Admissions and Records, Concerts and Lectures, University Services and the Office of Student Affairs.

Part II of the report includes an evaluation of the department University relations, the athletic department, the Reserve Officers Training Corps, the Office of Academic Administration and Senate composition.

Copies of both parts of the report are available from the News Service.

HARRISON SALISBURY, HUMPHREY
PARTICIPATE IN CHINA SEMINARS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Harrison Salisbury, assistant managing editor of the New York Times and author of "The 900 Days," will moderate a public seminar on China at the University of Minnesota Wednesday and Thursday (Jan. 21 and 22).

Panelists will include former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, adjunct professor in the College of Liberal Arts at the University, and four of this country's leading experts on Asia.

"The seminar will present an intensive look at U.S. and Russian relationships with China as the United States begins diplomatic talks with China in Warsaw," said Professor Hyman Berman, director of the social science program which is sponsoring the two-day event.

Speakers in addition to Humphrey will be John W. Lewis, professor of political science, director of the Center for East Asian Studies at Stanford University and author of "The United States in Vietnam" (1967); Ezra F. Vogel, professor of social relations, associate director of the East Asian Research Center at Harvard University and author of "Canton Under Communism" (1969); James C. Thomson, Jr., assistant professor of history at Harvard, former State Department official and author of "Papers on China" for Harvard University, 1957; and Donald S. Zagoria, associate professor of government, director of the Institute on Modern Asia at Hunter College and author of "Vietnam Triangle: Moscow, Peking, Hanoi and the War in Vietnam" (1968).

Sessions will be held from 10 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 4 p.m. both Wednesday and Thursday (Jan. 21-22) in Mayo auditorium.

Lewis and Vogel will speak Wednesday on internal developments in China both before and after the cultural revolution.

Sino-Soviet relations will be discussed Thursday morning by Zagoria, and Thomson will speak Thursday afternoon on U.S.-Chinese relations.

Each presentation will be followed by panel discussion and audience participation.

Jan. 18 through 24 is International Emphasis Week at the University.

'U' PROGRAM CELEBRATES
GHALIB CENTENNIAL

A program to celebrate the centennial of the Urdu poet Ghalib will be presented at the University of Minnesota Tuesday (Jan. 20) at 7:30 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium.

Readings and commentary will be given by Aijaz Ahmad, an Urdu scholar poet, and two American poets, Adrienne Rich and William Stafford. The poems to be read are taken from a forthcoming book, "The Ghazals of Ghalib."

The event is open free to the public, sponsored by the University's department of South Asian languages, the South Asia Center and the Comparative Literature Program.

'U' GALLERY SHOWS
50 POLISH POSTERS

Fifty contemporary posters from Poland are on exhibit in the University Gallery at the University of Minnesota through Feb. 12.

The posters were designed specifically to promote music, theatre and film productions.

The exhibit shows "an exciting graphics design renaissance taking place in Poland today," said Allen Davis, gallery director.

The gallery, on the third floor of Northrop auditorium, is open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

ENCORE FILMS FEATURE HEPBURN, SWANSON, HOLDEN

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED TO HELP
CYSTIC FIBROSIS CHILDREN

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Would you like to help keep a small child alive? One and a half hours morning and evening each day are all the help a child with cystic fibrosis needs. Anyone with some time to spare will be appreciated.

A meeting to organize volunteers will be held Wednesday (Jan. 21) at 7 p.m. on the seventh floor of the University Hospital on the Minneapolis campus of the University of Minnesota.

According to Kathy Kojis, University student and one of the volunteers working with the Cystic Fibrosis foundation, "many of these children's families are unable to afford to pay for therapists. There's a shortage of therapists for this work as well. Mostly, the therapy we'll be doing as volunteers involves massaging the children -- thumping them, actually -- to help them clear their lungs."

Cystic fibrosis is a hereditary disorder, primarily affecting the lungs and digestive system of small children and infants. If you are unable to attend the organization meeting but would still be interested in helping, call Kathy Kojis at 378-1196, or Jerry Toogood of the Cystic Fibrosis foundation at 827-3655.

KUOM 'INDIAN WEEK'
SET JAN. 26 TO 31

Pulitzer Prize-winning Indian novelist N. Scott Momaday and Senator Walter Mondale (D.-Minn.) will speak on Indian education during KUOM radio's "Indian Week," Jan. 26 through 31.

Momaday and Mondale were among the speakers at the first national Indian education conference, held in Minneapolis in November. Their taped speeches, plus addresses to the conference by the Minnesota director of Indian education and a former commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), will be broadcast during the week.

Accompanying Mondale's speech, which will be broadcast at 1:30 p.m. Jan. 26, will be an interview conducted by Marion Watson, KUOM program director, with an Alaskan woman who is quoted by Mondale. The senator is co-author of a recently published Senate report on Indian education.

Momaday, author of "House Made of Dawn," a first novel which won the 1969 Pulitzer Prize for fiction, will be heard at 1:30 p.m. Jan. 27, and again at 10:30 a.m. Jan. 31 on KUOM's regular "Best of the Week" show.

Will Antell, director of Indian education in Minnesota, and former BIA Commissioner Robert Bennett are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Jan. 28 and Jan. 30 respectively.

The Jan. 29 broadcast, also at 1:30 p.m., will include part of a Macalester College symposium on the BIA and remarks to the national conference by Louis Bruce, current BIA commissioner.

KUOM is the University of Minnesota General Extension Division radio station.

DRUG ABUSE TO BE TOPIC OF PHARMACISTS' SEMINAR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"The Pharmacist and Drug Abuse Education," a seminar for pharmacists, will be held Feb. 8 and 9 at the Thunderbird Motel in Minneapolis. It is designed to help narrow a crucial part of the information gap between the public and professionals concerning drugs.

Limited to 100 participants, the conference will give preference to pharmacists but will allow other health professionals if space is available.

Faculty for the seminar will represent professions or groups actively involved in the problems of drug abuse, according to William Hodapp, director of continuing pharmacy education at the University of Minnesota.

Persons interested in attending may contact Hodapp at 115 Appleby Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Sponsors of the seminar are the University's General Extension Division and the Minnesota State Pharmaceutical Association.

Speakers will include:

William F. Appel, Minneapolis pharmacist;
George E. Bigelow, postdoctoral student in psychiatry and pharmacology;
Charles M. Heinecke, director, Bureau of Drug Abuse and Alcoholism, Minneapolis Department of Health;
Terry O'Brien, team director, Loring-Nicollet Center, Minneapolis;
Roy W. Pickens, assistant professor, psychiatry and pharmacology;
John E. Walsh, special agent, Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, Minneapolis;
Lawrence C. Weaver, dean, College of Pharmacy, U of M.

GLOBAL GEOLOGIC STRUCTURE TO BE DISCUSSED BY DISTINGUISHED GEOLOGIST

The San Andreas fault in California is big news from time to time. Recently, some people were convinced that a huge earthquake along the fault would dump the state into the Pacific Ocean.

Mason L. Hill, a geologist, will discuss the San Andreas system of deformation within the context of a world-wide scheme on Tuesday, Jan. 27, at the University of Minnesota. Hill's talk, "New Global Tectonics Related to West Coast Structure," will be given in Room 110 Pillsbury hall at 2:15 p.m. Although the talk is aimed at professionals in the field, interested members of the public and students are welcome.

Hill also will give his talk at the University of Minnesota-Duluth on Jan. 28. The talks are sponsored by the American Association of Petroleum Geologists as a distinguished lecture tour.

'U' COLLEGE OF EDUCATION
TO CUT ENROLLMENT IN 3 AREAS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Enrollment limitations for prospective secondary teachers in English, speech and the social studies were announced today by the University of Minnesota College of Education. Students in these majors normally enter the College of Education as juniors.

In English-speech, the college expects to admit 100 majors for fall 1970, as compared with 103 admitted for fall 1969; and 80 majors in the social studies as compared with 93 for fall 1969. These fall admissions will constitute 2/3 of the enrollment quotas expected for the entire year in these fields -- 150 in English-speech and 120 in social studies.

These numbers represent a reduction of approximately 1/3 in the total new entrants for the four quarters for January, 1969 to January, 1970. The reduction will come through the decision not to admit students to these fields in winter quarter and summer quarter, 1971. The fall admissions plus additional students accepted for spring will make up the total to be enrolled.

Reduction in the proportion of students accepted in these fields is necessitated by the limitations of instruction space, facilities and personnel. The action is in accord with the University's "controlled growth" policy.

Supply and demand are also factors in the decision. The supply has exceeded the demand for teachers of speech and the social studies for some time, and more recently a similar situation has developed for English teachers.

The needs of communities and schools for teachers with special backgrounds and areas of preparation will be considered in the selection process. Preference will be given to applicants with promising academic records and potentialities for classroom teaching.

During the current year, limitations are in effect in the elementary education field. A further reduction in the number of students accepted for the elementary education program is planned for fall, 1970. A total of 300 juniors will be accepted for next year. This year there are 450 elementary education juniors in the College of Education.

2 ARCHITECTURAL FIRMS NAMED FOR 'U' PROJECTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Two architectural firms have been awarded design contracts for two University of Minnesota projects, University Vice President Hale Champion said today.

They are Parker Klein Associates who will design a new Law School building and Hodne/Stageberg Partners who will do a related West Bank environmental design study and master plan. Both are Minneapolis firms.

Champion, vice president for planning and operations, said the two were selected under a new University procedure devised to give all qualified Minnesota architects an equal opportunity to seek University work. Letters were sent to all Minnesota architects concerning the Law School building -- which will cost between $8 and $14 million -- and 58 responded with interest. From these, seven firms were chosen to make presentations.

"This new procedure obviously takes more time and effort by both the University and the architectural profession," Champion commented. "The intention, however, is to obtain the most qualified architect for the project and improve the environment of the total University."

He said that some of the factors affecting selection of an architectural firm will be the quality and character of previous work with special emphasis on design, ability to meet time and manpower requirements, specific strengths in the types of planning or building under consideration and an interest in making use of diverse and new talents or ideas.

(MORE)

The selection committee which screened the applications and interviewed architects for the Law School project included Law School Dean William Lockhart and two other representatives of the school, and Champion along with three members of his staff, including two architects.

Letters have been sent to Minnesota architects concerning three more pending University projects, including the West Bank student union for which students will be involved in the selection process.

Champion noted that the present policy of including University faculty members among those architects invited to seek University work has been reviewed and will continue.

"The Architecture School here has won many prizes and has a national reputation, in part because of its heavy involvement of practicing architects on the teaching staff," he said. "It is clear that the University has attracted some of the best design talent available anywhere, and we should not deny ourselves the benefit of that fact."

Champion added that no preference will be given to an architect because of University affiliation, and that only staff architects, as distinguished from the teaching faculty, will be involved in the selection process.

'U' STUDENTS PLAN
GREEK WEEK, JAN. 26-31

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Student members of sororities and fraternities at the University of Minnesota will participate in Greek Week next week (Jan. 26-31).

Planned around the theme "Liberate, Educate, Communicate," the week is designed to inform members of the metropolitan and University communities of the intellectual, social service and athletic programs sororities and fraternities are involved in, according to Donald Nolander, College of Liberal Arts junior and Greek Week chairman.

The week begins Monday (Jan. 26) with a lecture by Professor of Physical Chemistry John E. Wertz on "Educational Reform" at 12:15 p.m. in Room 320 Coffman Union.

That evening at 9 p.m. on the University Television Hour, KTCA-TV (Channel 2) will televise the final round of the Greek Week Quiz Bowl and a program called "Greek Confrontation."

Also on Monday evening 12 paired Greek houses will sponsor public seminars on such topics as the role of sensitivity in educational work and progressive moves in education.

On Tuesday (Jan. 27) Paul Cashman, vice president for student affairs, will speak on "Values in Education" at 3 p.m. in 320 Coffman Union.

Wednesday (Jan. 28) evening, the houses will present a free public talent show at 8 p.m. in Coffman Union main ballroom. The students plan to take disadvantaged children out to dinner and then to the talent show.

The week will close with a concert by the Paul Butterfield Blues Band at 8 p.m. Saturday in Northrop auditorium. Proceeds from the concert will be given to the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre "because it performs an educational service to the students and the community," said Nolander.

CAMOUFLAGE IS THEME OF SUNDAY FILMS

Camouflage is the theme for the Bell Museum of Natural History film program this Sunday (Jan. 25). One film, "Camouflage in Nature Through Pattern Matching," explains the camouflage phenomena of the garden toad, night hawk and bark moth.

"Coyote," a film produced by Walt Disney, surveys the life story of the coyote and its control of the rattlesnake and jackrabbit populations. Through camouflage these animals are protected from the coyote.

The museum's Sunday film program, at 2:30 and 3:30 p.m., is free to the public. The museum is located at Seventeenth and University avenue SE., and Sunday parking is allowed on University avenue.

STUDENTS, RELIGION TO BE SUBJECTS OF
'U' TELEVISION SERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

What responsibility, if any, does a large state university have for its students' religious lives? Are today's students interested in organized religion? What moral and religious values do they hold?

Paul Cashman, University of Minnesota vice president for student affairs, will host a television series beginning Jan. 28 in which guests from the University and the community will discuss these and other questions about students, their moral and religious beliefs, and the role of religion at the University.

"Students Search for Religion" will be seen Wednesdays on the University of Minnesota Television Hour at 9 p.m. on KTCA-TV, channel 2, through April 1.

Vice President Cashman and his guests will accept telephoned questions during the second half of each program.

The first broadcast will deal with the general topic of "Religion on a Tax-Supported Campus." Issues for discussion on subsequent programs will be:

Feb. 4 and 11	-- Current Moral and Religious Values
Feb. 18	-- Are Students Interested in Organized Religion?
Feb. 25	-- Forms of Religious Expression

OF ROTC, CRIMINAL JUSTICE STUDIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A group of students demanding the abolishment of ROTC and of the criminal justice studies department on the University of Minnesota Twin Cities campus will hold a demonstration Wednesday (Jan. 28) to present its demands to the University administration.

The group is calling for a rally to begin at 12:30 p.m. in the lobby of Northrop auditorium, followed by a march on Morrill hall, the University's administration building. At 1:15 p.m. it will present its demands to President Malcolm Moos. (The schedule may be altered somewhat.)

The demands will be: (1) abolition of ROTC (the Reserve Officers Training Corps) and CJS (the criminal justice studies department); (2) that the University not enter into any agreement for the existence of ROTC and CJS; and (3) that ROTC cadets presently receiving military scholarships receive scholarships from the University instead.

A joint statement explaining the group's position states that "ROTC is involved in the exploitation and oppression of Third World people, like the Dominican Republic and Vietnam, and...the criminal justice studies department is involved in the exploitation and oppression of minorities and workers in this country."

SIBLEY TO LEAD SEMINAR ON AMERICAN VIOLENCE

Professor Mulford Q. Sibley of the University of Minnesota political science department will discuss violence in the United States in a two-part seminar on the University's St. Paul campus Feb. 1 and 15.

The sessions, sponsored by the General Extension Division's department of continuing education for women (CEW), will each open with a talk by Sibley followed by dinner and discussion. Enrollment is not limited to women, according to Mrs. Louise Roff, CEW director.

Government reports on civil disorders and violence in America will be used as a basis for discussion. The four-hour sessions will begin at 4:30 p.m. in the faculty dining room in the St. Paul campus Student Center. A registration fee of $15 includes supper.

Information is available from Continuing Education for Women, 315 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455. Mrs. Roff suggests early registration since enrollment will be limited. -UWS-

SHAW'S 'DON JUAN' TO BE TELEVISED IN
'U'-MCKNIGHT PRODUCTION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Don Juan in Hell," an independent sequence from George Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman," will be presented on the University of Minnesota Television Hour Monday, Feb. 2, at 9 p.m. on KTCA-TV, channel 2.

Warren Frost, instructor in speech, communication and theatre arts and director of the production, says the play represents "Shaw at his best. The rapid-fire dialogue requires close listening."

"The social problems to which Shaw addresses himself are as timely today as they were when he wrote the play," Frost says.

"Don Juan in Hell" is the fourth in a series of plays produced for television by the University General Extension Division's department of radio and television with support from the McKnight Foundation and cooperation from the University Theatre.

'U' CAMPUS CLUB
PLANS FIRST-EVER
PARTY FOR WOMEN

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

For the first time in the 64-year history of the University of Minnesota Campus Club, faculty wives and faculty women will have a "ladies only" party.

Approximately 2,500 invitations have been extended to University women and their guests for the Jan. 28 dinner and style show which begins at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Club, fourth floor of Coffman Union.

Since the club was originally established as an all-male, faculty organization, there have been no programs exclusively for women.

"This party was planned to give the female members something to identify with," according to Bruce Anderson, club entertainment chairman, who assisted with the party plans.

"We really want to bring women into the club's activities and their party can be described as a complement to the traditional men's stag," Anderson said.

CANCER RESEARCHER TO
ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

An internationally known cancer researcher, Professor Harold P. Morris of Howard University, will receive the University of Minnesota's Outstanding Achievement Award Thursday, Jan. 29.

Morris will accept the award at the January meeting of the Minnesota Section of the Society of Experimental Biology and Medicine, to be held in Mayo auditorium at 8 p.m. The award -- one of the highest honors the University bestows on distinguished former students -- will be presented by Bryce Crawford, Jr., dean of the University's Graduate School.

Morris, who received a doctor of philosophy degree in agricultural biochemistry from the University in 1930, headed the nutrition and carcinogenesis section of the National Cancer Institute from 1957 to 1968. He is currently a research professor of biochemistry at the Howard University College of Medicine, Washington, D.C. He is best known for his research with transplantable liver tumors. A strain of these tumors commonly used in research is known as the 'Morris hepatoma.'

Morris' talk, fourth in a symposium that evening, will be on "The Significance of Minimal Deviation Hepatomas for Cancer Research." Short talks by Professor of Medicine James Carey, Biochemistry Professor John Gander, and Franklin Zieve, research fellow in the Medical School biochemistry department, will precede Morris' talk.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Morris received the Superior Service Award of the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare in 1956. In his career he has studied the effects of various nutritional deficiencies on the development of experimental tumors. He has authored more than 200 papers.

He resides in Silver Spring, Md.

POLLUTION REPORT CENTER TO OPEN MONDAY ON 'U' MINNEAPOLIS CAMPUS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A Pollution Report Center will open Monday (Jan. 26) in Room 110 Coffman Union on the University of Minnesota Minneapolis campus. The center will be staffed by volunteers from the Environmental Teach-in committee at the University.

Karim Ahmed, co-chairman of the committee, today said the primary goal of the Pollution Report Center is to encourage involvement in the April 22 nationwide Environmental Teach-in and to alert Minnesota citizens to the pollution crisis.

"The pollution problem is community-wide," Ahmed said, "and the interest is extremely high throughout the Twin Cities, the state --- and the world, in fact."

The center will serve several functions:

1. To receive and investigate pollution reports.
2. To collect pollution reports and indications of interest, in order to build files for use in informing lawmakers and others.
3. To work with the Students for Environmental Defense (SED) to create a "Polluter of the Month" award.
4. To serve as an information center for people with questions about pollution, laws, controls, effects, etc.
5. To provide "pollution complaint cards" to interested groups so that individuals may report polluters by mail.

"No such service has been available until now," Ahmed said. "The Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) lacks the funds and manpower to handle the many complaints they receive each day. We're sure we can provide a real service in this area."

Ahmed said the center will begin functioning immediately, will build momentum through the April 22 teach-in, and "hopefully, continue indefinitely thereafter." Volunteers from the University YMCA will man telephones in the center.

The center's office will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Ahmed urges anyone with a complaint, question or comment on pollution or the environment, or specific case complaints, to call the office. The telephone number is 373-0342.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Karim Ahmed is a research associate in the University's Health Sciences Center and a teacher of classes on pollution and environment at the Free University. He has been instrumental in bringing several speakers on environmental issues to the University sponsored by the Biomedical Students Committee for Social Responsibility, of which he is chairman.

The nationwide Environmental Teach-in will be held April 22 at colleges and high schools throughout the United States. The University of Minnesota teach-in will last two days (April 22-23) and will be held in conjunction with many community organizations.

'ZERO POPULATION GROWTH'
GROUP TO MEET AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"The population bomb is everyone's baby," according to Zero Population Growth, Inc. (ZPG).

Increasing concern over the world's population growth, and problems such as pollution and starvation brought by this growth, has led many people to wonder what they can do about it. As a result, a new organization, "The ZPG," has been born -- with a growing population of members from coast to coast.

The first regular meeting of the Twin Cities chapter of ZPG will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 3, at the University of Minnesota.

Speaker for the public meeting, in the Bell Museum of Natural History on the Minneapolis campus, will be Associate Professor of Zoology Frederick Williams. He will speak on "Provisional Catastrophe."

"Parents of large families as well as young single people are needed in our organization," says Ronald Hellenthal, Twin Cities chapter coordinator. "We feel that the population explosion begins at home."

The major goal of the ZPG is to "bring about a state of zero population growth in the U.S. by the year 1980. If each woman has no more than two natural children, then we will reach our goal," says Hellenthal.

'U' PROF EDITS BOOK
ON EXTRAMARITAL RELATIONS.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A University of Minnesota professor is the editor of a recently published sociological study of extramarital relations.

"Extra-Marital Relations," published Friday (Jan. 23) by Prentice-Hall, Inc., was edited by Professor Gerhard Neubeck, president of the American Association of Marriage Counselors and chairman of family studies at the University of Minnesota.

"The book is not meant to be a 'how-to' or 'how-not-to'...but it should serve the function of taking the problem seriously," Neubeck says in his introduction.

Studies by nine contributors cover such topics as religious attitudes toward extramarital intercourse, the Kinsey findings, marriage and fidelity in other parts of the world, extramarital sex as alienation or extension of normal behavior and the effects of altered marital contracts.

The authors include Vera Schletzer, director of counseling for the University of Minnesota General Extension Division; Stephen E. Beltz, behavioral psychologist and executive director of the Center for Behavior Modification in Philadelphia; William Graham Cole, president of Lake Forest College and author of "Sex and Love in the Bible;" John F. Cuber, professor of sociology, Ohio State University; Albert Ellis, executive director of the Institute of Advanced Study in Rational Psychotherapy and author of "Sex Without Guilt;" Yoon Hough Kim, assistant professor of sociology at East Carolina University; Hyman Rodman, sociologist at the Merrill-Palmer Institute; Constantina Safilios-Rothschild, senior research associate at the Merrill-Palmer Institute; and Robert W. Whitehurst, associate professor of sociology at Indiana University.

Professor Neubeck is currently on a one-year sabbatical leave from the University. He joined the Minnesota faculty in 1947 after receiving a bachelor's degree from New York University and a master's degree from Northwestern University. In 1953, he received a doctor of education degree in marriage and family living from Columbia University Teachers College.

EDWARD PAYSON CALL TO DIRECT
'THE SERVANT OF TWO MASTERS'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A "no-holds-barred" production of "The Servant of Two Masters" directed by Edward Payson Call will open Friday, Feb. 6, in Scott hall auditorium at the University of Minnesota.

"We have tried to create the spirit of commedia dell' arte (improvised comedy). It is an experiment," Call said. "We have drawn on what we know of the vulgar or popular theatre."

"The Servant of Two Masters" is a physically oriented comedy with a ridiculous plot, written by 18th-century Italian dramatist Carlo Goldoni. Lance Davis, a graduate student from St. Louis, Mo., plays the lead role of the servant, Truffaldino. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Notre Dame and has a McKnight Foundation fellowship at the University.

This will be the second play Call has directed for the University Theatre. Four years ago he directed "Revelation" in Scott hall. He recently resigned as producing director for the Minnesota Theatre Company.

In 1969 he directed "Julius Caesar" at the Guthrie Theatre and in earlier Guthrie seasons he directed "The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui," "The Caucasian Chalk Circle," "As You Like It" and "Tango." He has directed "Endgame" and "The Seagull" for the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco.

Performances of "The Servant of Two Masters" will be at 8 p.m. Feb. 6,7,11, 12,13, and 14 and at 3:30 p.m. Feb. 10 and 15. Tickets are on sale at the Scott hall ticket office on the campus and at Dayton's.

'U' GENETICS CLINIC HELPS PARENTS UNDERSTAND ABNORMALITIES

by Bob Lee
University Health Sciences Writer

The personal tragedy of a malformed baby is compounded when the parents learn the infant was affected by a genetic defect.

Whether the problem is physical, mental, or both, parents are understandably confused and worried. The possibility of having a child with a chromosomal defect is greater for parents who have had an occurrence of the syndrome in their families, for young mothers who have already given birth to a child with a chromosome defect, and for mothers approaching the end of their reproductive life (45-50 years.)

Medical science has recently made great strides in understanding the complexities of human chromosomes and genes which transmit family characteristics from generation to generation.

To aid area physicians in using this new knowledge, University of Minnesota Hospitals has established a Human Genetics Clinic for diagnosis and evaluation. Cooperating in the project are the Dight Institute for Human Genetics, the State Health Department, and the School of Dentistry.

Detailed testing is often necessary to pinpoint the exact disease. For example, there are at least 15 forms of muscular dystrophy each with its own mode of inheritance.

Other congenital abnormalities, such as mongolism which affects one in every 600 births, are associated with mental retardation.

(MORE)

The clinic's laboratory has some sophisticated testing procedures including amniocentesis for prenatal diagnosis. Amniocentesis means withdrawing a small amount of fluid from the womb in high-risk pregnancies. The technique is also used in Rh factor anti-immunization and sex determination.

Sex determination five or six months before birth is important because hemophilia, certain types of muscular dystrophy, and rare immunologic defects affect only males.

This medical information is combined with the family history to determine the probability of the syndrome's recurrence within the family. A counseling session with the parents or their referring physician is next. In either case the physician receives a full report.

Knowledge that the outcome of a pregnancy will result in an abnormal child can be of great help to the physician in making an early diagnosis and instituting prompt treatment. Through genetic counseling the clinic hopes to provide patients and their families with accurate understandable information concerning hereditary factors in reproduction.

'ART OF POETRY' RECEIVES NATIONAL PROGRAM AWARD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Contemporary poetry and "live" poets entered Minneapolis classrooms in a University of Minnesota project which recently received a major award from a national organization.

"The Art of Poetry," directed by Mrs. David LaBerge for the University General Extension Division and the Minneapolis Public Schools in 1968-69, has received the National University Extension Association's creative programming award.

Supported by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, plus matching local funds, the program had three main divisions: well-known poets, among them Robert Bly, John Berryman, Allen Ginsberg and Allen Tate, conducting seminars for Minneapolis teachers; public poetry readings by these poets; and local poets visiting classrooms, working directly with students.

Some 250 teachers and 25,000 students benefitted from the program.

Continuing the program and expanding it to include the St. Paul schools, under the sponsorship of the St. Paul Council of Arts and Sciences, will depend on raising local funds to match a new National Endowment for the Arts grant, according to Mrs. LaBerge.

Describing the project as "lively and rewarding," she said, "Many teachers commented that this was the only chance they had to meet the artist who practices the art they teach.

"Students have responded enthusiastically by immediate rapport with the poet, who uses their language to speak of things they know. As one fourth-grade boy wrote, 'The poet talked about things we aren't supposed to know, but we do and that's life, after all.'"

Mrs. LaBerge is now seeking funds to match the new grant. Individuals or groups interested in contributing can contact her through the St. Paul Council of Arts and Sciences.

TOPIC OF TTT SERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"The Language Problems of Children in the Inner City" will be the topic of a five-part, free public lecture series beginning Feb. 5 sponsored by the Training of Teacher Trainers (Triple T) Project.

The Triple T Project was designed in cooperation with the Minneapolis and St. Paul public schools, the University of Minnesota and several Minnesota colleges to involve citizens of the central-city community in the process of teacher education.

Given by nationally known linguists and scholars, the lectures will focus on learning problems of inner city children.

Susan Houston, professor of linguistics at Northwestern University, will give the first talk on "Child Language Acquisition and Cognitive Development: What are the Implications for Teachers and Learners?" at 7:30 p.m. in the Central High School library, 3416 Fourth ave. S., Minneapolis.

Other topics in the series, scheduled for the same hour and place, will be:

March 5 --"Reading Problems of Inner City Children," by Joan Baratz, co-director, Education Study Center, Washington, D.C.

March 19 --"The Test Question as a Social Dialect," by William Labov, professor of linguistics, Columbia University.

April 6 --"Teachers' Language and the Disadvantaged Learners," by Barbara Sizemore, director, Woodlawn Project, Chicago.

April date to be announced --"Current Approaches to the Problem of Nonstandard English," by Roger Shuy, director, Sociolinguistics Program, Center for Applied Linguistics, Washington, D.C.

FORMER CZECHOSLOVAK NEWS DIRECTOR
TO SPEAK ON 'MASS MEDIA CRISIS OF '68'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Kamil Winter, former news director for the Czechoslovak Broadcasting System, will speak at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (Feb. 4).

"The Mass Media in the Czech Crisis of 1968" will be the topic of his talk at 3:15 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium.

Winter, who was one of the best known television commentators in Czechoslovakia, directed the news operation until the Russian occupation in 1968. For a time after the invasion he directed the underground radio news programming.

Following his escape from Czechoslovakia, he sought asylum in Great Britain and now travels on a United Kingdom passport. He is currently a visiting professor of mass communications at Southern Illinois University.

Winter's lecture at the University of Minnesota is free and open to the public, sponsored by the School of Journalism and Mass Communication and the concerts and lectures department. He will also address the Northwest Broadcast News Association Friday at the University.

HHH TO TALK ABOUT WORLD PERSONALITIES, POLITICS ON 'U' TELECAST

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Comparing Nikita Khrushchev to a turbulent stream and the Russian people to a slow-moving glacier, Hubert Humphrey says Khrushchev's demise was foreseeable in these basic differences in character.

Humphrey, who says that Khrushchev went too far to suit a cautious people, talks about world personalities and politics in an interview with Harrison Salisbury, assistant managing editor of the New York Times, to be broadcast on the University of Minnesota Television Hour on KTCA-TV, channel 2, at 9:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 6.

Meeting "great and interesting" people is one of the rewards of public office, says Humphrey, who has met former German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer ("a strong personality"), former French President Charles de Gaulle ("a spectacular, dramatic figure") and Chiang Kai-shek, president of the Republic of China ("a commanding presence; he understands the limits of his power").

Humphrey holds the world's record for the longest talks with Khrushchev -- more than eight consecutive hours.

Salisbury and Humphrey agree that they would like to meet Chairman Mao Tse-tung of Communist China.

The University Television Hour is an educational service of the General Extension Division. The Humphrey-Salisbury interview will be aired on the Television Hour's weekly "Folio" show.

EDITOR TO TELL
HOW TO LOOK AT CITIES

Whether to plant trees and flowers or to pave the whole thing over depends on how you look at a city. Planning, developing, tearing down and building up--suburban or urban---are decided by how these things are looked at.

"How to Look at Cities" will be explained at the University of Minnesota on Tuesday, Feb. 10. Speaking at 3:30 p.m. in 12 Owre hall on the Minneapolis campus will be Grady Clay, editor of "Landscape Architecture Quarterly" and a specialist in environmental and urban development.

Clay, of Louisville, Ky., has been president of the National Association of Real Estate Editors, a member of the President's Task Force on Suburban Problems and of the Advisory Committee on Urban Development to HUD Secretary Robert Weaver, and first urban affairs editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

His talk, open free to the public, is sponsored by the Center for Urban and Regional Affairs, department of concerts and lectures and School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture.

WARREN STUDENT'S CANCER RESEARCH AT 'U' EARNS 2-YEAR GRANT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A summer project in a University of Minnesota cancer research lab has given a Medical School student the rare opportunity to see the treatment potential of his laboratory discovery.

Bruce Peterson, a Medical School junior and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Peterson of Warren, Minn., received a fellowship in cancer research between his freshman and sophomore years to study in Masonic Memorial Hospital.

Working under Dr. B.J. Kennedy, professor of medicine and director of the oncology (cancer) section, Peterson observed the effect of the drug hydroxyurea, a known anti-leukemia agent, on the growth of a type of cancer in mice. He wanted to determine the duration of the drug's action and develop methods to prolong its effect.

By periodically giving mithramycin, an experimental drug, Peterson found he could prolong the beneficial effects of hydroxyurea.

Both of the drugs have been used individually in humans and have shown some effectiveness on some types of cancer, but Peterson showed in the laboratory animal what they could do if given in sequence.

Dr. Kennedy, in support of Peterson's preliminary work, applied to a new program of the American Cancer Society for clinical investigation funds to extend the studies to human use. The society recently awarded the team a $26,972 two-year grant.

Peterson, working with Dr. David Garfield, senior clinical cancer trainee of the U.S. Public Health Service, is now making toxicity studies to develop a dose schedule for critically ill cancer patients.

SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY OF BUSINESS COMMUNITY
TO BE TV SERIES TOPIC

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Consumer affairs, pollution control, ghetto marketing, the prevention of discrimination in employment and other areas in which the business community has social responsibilities are the subjects of an upcoming television series.

"What Do They Care?" will begin on the University of Minnesota Television Hour on KTCA-TV, channel 2, Feb. 9 and run on Monday evenings from 9 to 10 p.m. for 15 weeks.

Among the guests who will visit the University seminar from which the series is taken are Mayor Thomas Byrne of St. Paul, a representative of striking grape pickers and the Bank of America's chief economist.

Professor Robert Holloway instructs the seminar, attended by senior honors students in the School of Business Administration. The guest speakers will give short introductory statements, then talk informally with students.

Topics for the first six of the 15 programs are:

- Feb. 9 --"Ghetto Marketing"
- Feb. 16 --"Huelga" ("Grape Pickers")
- Feb. 23 --"Discrimination in Employment" (guests will be Gleason Glover representing the Twin Cities black community and Robert Fjerstad of Northern States Power Company representing business)
- March 2 --"Black Capitalism"
- March 9 --"Business and Government Relations" (Walter E. Hoadley, executive vice president and chief economist of the Bank of America)
- March 16 --"Consumerism" (St. Paul Mayor Thomas Byrne)

PSYCHOLOGISTS START SPEAKERS BUREAU ON CONTEMPORARY ISSUES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Speakers and discussion leaders on drugs and drug use, race relations, youth protest, violence, changing sexual mores and other current issues are available through a new service developed by University of Minnesota and Twin Cities psychologists.

James Turnure, University assistant professor of special education, said today the group will provide the latest factual information to business, civic, church, school and other community groups. He said the decision to establish a speakers bureau developed out of the increasing need and demand for objective information about rapid changes in contemporary society.

Generally, only larger groups can be accommodated, Turnure said, because of the pressing schedules of the speakers---all of whom are psychologists. But he added that smaller groups occasionally will be considered.

Information about speakers is available from Judith Simms, a graduate student in the University's Institute of Child Development; telephone 373-2389 or 2390.

SECURITIES TO BE SUBJECT OF LAWYERS' SHORT COURSE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Securities law and practice will be the subject of a continuing legal education one-and-one-half-day course to be held Feb. 20 and 21 at the St. Paul Hotel.

Planners -- the University of Minnesota General Extension Division and the Minnesota State Bar Association -- say the course is the first and most basic in a contemplated series on securities.

Among the topics for discussion are federal and state laws, including the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Minnesota Blue Sky Law and 1969 amendments to Minnesota statutes.

Lecturers will be from Twin Cities law firms and the William Mitchell College of Law. Detailed lecture outlines will be included in a practice manual for the course.

Registration, for a $30 fee, can be made in advance with Continuing Legal Education, 338 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55 55.

Late registration will be held at 8 a.m. Feb. 20 at the St. Paul Hotel.

POLICE OFFICERS STUDY FOR DEGREES

by Judy Vick
University News Service

It's 8 p.m. and a 6-year-old youngster hasn't returned home from school. His mother is worried.

A married couple begins to argue. Soon the screaming disturbs the neighbors.

Two teenagers are involved in a scuffle at a local youth center.

Attending to problems such as these takes up 80 per cent of the average police officer's time. It's called community service. Only 20 per cent of his time is spent in the pursuit of criminals.

"Our program is designed to help prepare officers for their community service activities, not their criminal apprehension duties," says Professor David Ward, chairman of the University of Minnesota's department of criminal justice studies. "Police academies and training units provide their technical training."

Working police officers, or students who are interested in careers in law-enforcement and criminal-justice agencies, can earn a two-year associate in arts degree or a four-year bachelor of arts degree with a major in a field like sociology, political science, anthropology or psychology. They also take courses in criminal law and procedure, police administration, police problems and practices in the United States, issues in the administration of criminal justice, and police-community relations.

In addition, national experts in law enforcement are brought to the campus for the benefit of the students, as well as working police officers from several midwestern states.

This year -- the first year of full operation -- some 100 working police, probation and parole officers, and court service and prison personnel are enrolled in the program. Many of them are receiving scholarships provided by a $131,000 grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration of the U.S. Department of Justice.

PARENT AND FAMILY LIFE EDUCATION TO BE TOPIC OF COURSES IN MOORHEAD, MANKATO, DULUTH, MPLS.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Families have forgotten how to have fun together," says Mrs. Elizabeth Peterson, coordinator of parent and family life education in the University of Minnesota General Extension Division.

A discussion of "fun" family traditions built around holidays, birthdays and other special occasions will be part of a course for leaders in parent and family life education to be held around the state in April. A panel of students -- elementary through senior high school -- will take part.

"Anxiety exhibited by parents I've talked with" is another subject that will receive attention at the four institutes, scheduled for April 8 and 9 in Moorhead, April 15 and 16 in Mankato, April 22 and 23 in Minneapolis and April 29 and 30 in Duluth.

Mrs. Peterson also will present a "Yardstick for Parents" which, she says, "might make parents think 'maybe I'm okay after all.'"

"Can You Immunize Against Social Problems?" will be the topic of a talk dealing with the plausibility of trying to immunize children against contact with social problems such as drug abuse and sexual promiscuity, which Mrs. Peterson says parents worry about "15 years too late."

Speakers, in addition to Mrs. Peterson, will be representatives of local schools, churches, welfare and corrections agencies and the Minnesota PTA. The University General Extension Division and the Minnesota PTA are co-sponsoring the institutes, with support from the Minnesota Department of Health.

Registration is now open through the Department of Conferences and Institutes, Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455. Tuition is $15.

Locations for the institutes are: Moorhead -- Comstock Memorial Union at Moorhead State College; Mankato -- Good Counsel Academy; Minneapolis -- Coffman Union at the University of Minnesota; Duluth -- University Methodist Church (not at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, as originally announced).

'U' IS MADE MEMBER OF EXPERIMENTING UNION IN HIGHER EDUCATION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

In recognition of its innovations in education, the University of Minnesota has been admitted to the Union for Experimenting Colleges and Universities, it was announced today by Samuel Baskin, union president.

The union is a group of progressive colleges and universities in the United States that are involved in experimental programs in higher education. Among them are Sarah Lawrence, Hofstra and Stephens College. Union offices are located at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio.

According to Professor James Werntz, director of the University's Center for Curriculum Studies, who was appointed as liaison between the union and the University, "Membership in the union not only will broaden the opportunity for University faculty and students to participate in innovative programs shared by member institutions, but also will extend to a national level the results of pioneering effort in education originated here."

Goodwin Watson, associate director of the union who visited the University in January to meet with individuals involved in experimental projects, described the University as the union's "one example of an extremely large institution that has been innovative."

Particularly relevant to work the union is doing are the University's Center for Urban and Regional Affairs, the Living Learning Center and the Teacher Service Corps, Watson said.

Negotiations between the union and the University began last summer, according to Werntz. Membership was decided by the presidents of the member colleges after a union committee had evaluated the innovative programs in which the University is involved.

INDIAN HIGH SCHOOL, COLLEGE STUDENTS TO ATTEND HIGHER EDUCATION MEET AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

More than 300 American Indian high school and college students are expected to attend the first statewide Indian student higher education conference at the University of Minnesota Friday and Saturday, Feb. 20-21.

They will come together for a series of workshops and lectures to discuss and evaluate the educational process. They also will discuss how their education relates to their future, according to Mrs. Delores Snook, College of Liberal Arts freshman and chairman of the American Indian Student Association at the University, sponsor of the conference.

"There has never been an educational conference in Minnesota, either Indian or white, in which Indian students have really been involved," says Mrs. Snook. "We hope this conference will not only help those students already in college, but will also encourage high school students to stay in school and graduate, so they can take advantage of the opportunities in higher education and vocational training."

Among those addressing the group will be former Vice President Hubert Humphrey and Lee Brightman, president of United Native Americans, Inc., of San Francisco, and an influential member of the group now occupying Alcatraz Island. State officials from the Bureau of Indian Affairs also will participate in the conference. The sessions will be open to the public, with space priority given to American Indian students.

Ron Welch, a junior majoring in American Indian Studies at the University and publicity chairman for the conference, says that donations to help defray the cost of the conference will be greatly appreciated.

FREE MEMBERS TO ATTEND
REGULAR DANCE AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Some 50 members of a University of Minnesota homosexual organization intend to "integrate" a University dance Friday, Feb. 27, according to a spokesman for the group, Fight Repression of Erotic Expression (FREE).

"One of our main functions as a group is to acclimatize the straight public to our existence--to our reality," says Stephen Ihrig, a FREE founder and a member of its three-man interim coordinating committee. "We believe integrating the dance will be a major step in that direction."

Although FREE has been holding gay dances on campus since October, this is the first time it will participate as a group in a regular University dance. Ihrig said the group has not encountered opposition at any of its weekly dances and meetings and he does not expect any problems Feb. 27.

Thom Higgins, a member of FREE, allegedly was fired from his job as an announcer at a state-owned radio station last week after he told his employers he planned to take part in a news conference before the dance. Higgins, who is not a University student, was employed by the Radio Talking Book Network, operated by State Services for the Blind. He claimed the station management said his "sexual preference would be acceptable for a staff member, were it not to become public knowledge," and that "the blind in Minnesota could not, as a minority group, stand to be associated with an overt homosexual."

Since being recognized as an official student group by the University in September 1969, the first of its kind in the midwest, FREE has moved in many directions to provide basic knowledge on homosexuality to both gay and straight people in Minnesota. FREE members have addressed church, high school and college groups with what Ihrig called "overwhelmingly favorable response."

"Our most important work has been done in the gay community itself," says Jack Baker, University law student and member of the coordinating committee. "Sensitivity and encounter sessions have enabled large numbers of homosexual men and women to relate more honestly to themselves, their friends and relatives, and to each other. FREE has developed a sense of social-community identity. The day is coming when society will accept the homosexual as a human being, and stop forcing him into a role of shame and guilt."

FREE hopes to test the legality of a gay marriage in Minnesota, start a University course on the homophile movement, and speak at Minneapolis police training sessions.

WCCO-TV WINS AWARD FOR BEST EDITORIAL

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 P.M., FRIDAY, FEB. 6)

"Voices in October," a 30-minute presentation on Moratorium Day, by WCCO-TV, Minneapolis, received first place in the editorial division of the Northwest Broadcast News Association (NBNA) competition for excellence in television news broadcasting.

The awards were presented tonight (Friday) at the annual NBNA dinner in the Radisson Hotel.

First place for excellence in television spot news coverage went to WTMJ-TV, Milwaukee, Wis., for a comprehensive factual report and film story of a National Guard plane crash.

Awards for excellence in radio news broadcasting were presented to WRIT, Milwaukee, spot news; WTMJ, Milwaukee, documentary; and KWNO, Winona, editorial.

WDIO-TV, Duluth, received a citation for its comprehensive planning, research and follow-through in presenting an editorial opinion that helped to generate legislative action on the complex subject of a taxing formula and tax receipt distributions to its viewing area.

In the spot news category a citation for outstanding public service was presented to WDAY-TV, Fargo, N.D., for alerting and preparing its audience for spring flooding.

No awards were presented for television documentaries. Citations in this category went to Al Austin, WCCO-TV, for scripting of "Grunt's Little War;" WDIO-TV, Duluth, for "Taconite and the Lake;" and WAOW-TV, Wausau, Wis., for "Last Bus Leaving," an in-depth report on the loss of bus service in the community.

Citations in the radio competition went to WCCO, Minneapolis, editorial; and WWTC, Minneapolis, and WOKY, Milwaukee, documentaries.

The competition includes television and radio stations in a six-state area. Judges were members of the public relations staff of 3M Company and Irving Fang, associate professor of journalism at the University of Minnesota and former American Broadcasting Company news executive.

JACK SHELLEY RECEIVES
MITCHELL V. CHARNLEY AWARD

An Iowa man has received the Mitchell V. Charnley Award for distinguished service to broadcast journalism.

The award went to Jack Shelley, professor of journalism at Iowa State University and former news director at WHO in Des Moines, at the annual Northwest Broadcast News Association dinner Friday (Feb. 6) in Minneapolis. It was presented by Professor Robert Jones, director of the University of Minnesota School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Shelley was news director for WHO for 30 years until 1965. He currently does a weekly human interest show, "Hometown News," on WHO and is a consultant for educational television in Iowa. He is executive secretary of the Iowa Broadcasters Association and has been state supervisor of Iowa election returns for the National Broadcasting Company for the last two years. He has a journalism degree from the University of Missouri.

Previous recipients of the award have been Columbia Broadcasting System newsman Harry Reasoner and Jim Bormann, news director for WCCO radio, Minneapolis.

The award is named in honor of Mitchell V. Charnley, professor emeritus of journalism at the University of Minnesota and founder of the Northwest Broadcast News Association.

FILLERS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA GENERAL EXTENSION DIVISION

The University of Minnesota World Affairs Center celebrates its 20th anniversary in 1970. The center's newest members, among more than 40, are the St. Paul Jaycees and the Twin City YMCA.

More than 4,000 questions about municipal government from 593 Minnesota municipalities, 36 other states and four foreign countries were answered last year by the Municipal Reference Bureau, a League of Minnesota Municipalities information service at the University of Minnesota.

The Municipal Reference Bureau, information center for the League of Minnesota Municipalities, was established at the University of Minnesota in 1913 in the same year and by the same man, Richard Price, who established the General Extension Division, of which the bureau is still a part.

University of Minnesota President Malcolm Moos once was a research assistant in the Municipal Reference Bureau, University information center of the League of Minnesota Municipalities.

Of Minnesota's 853 cities and villages, 706 are members of the League of Minnesota Municipalities and its Municipal Reference Bureau at the University of Minnesota. The 706 represent a startling 98 per cent of the state's population of approximately 3.5 million.

More than 900 doctors from 47 states and a number of foreign countries attended continuing medical education short courses offered by the University of Minnesota General Extension Division during the 1968-69 academic year.

Minnesota pharmacists can continue their educations at ten regional sites where the University of Minnesota General Extension Division presents video-taped short courses.

A master's degree in computer science is the latest advanced engineering degree available through University of Minnesota General Extension Division closed-circuit television classes in Rochester.

Using newspapers in teaching was the subject of a University of Minnesota teachers workshop taken around the state last year by the General Extension Division. A similar workshop this year is on teaching social studies.

MEDICAL SCIENCES DEAN HOWARD
WITHDRAWS FROM CONSIDERATION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dr. Robert B. Howard, dean of the University of Minnesota's College of Medical Sciences, has withdrawn himself from consideration as chief administrative officer of the University's emerging health sciences complex, now in an organizational stage.

Dr. Howard, dean since 1958, will take a year's leave of absence starting July 1, 1970.

University President Malcolm Moos accepted Dr. Howard's decision with "profound regret" calling the dean a "senior statesman" who has made distinguished contributions both to the University and to the various professional organizations he serves.

Dr. Howard is current chairman of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

Both President Moos and William G. Shepherd, vice president for academic administration, cited Dr. Howard's work toward the development of the health sciences concept and also praised the calibre of people brought to the University by Dr. Howard to fill major appointments.

Dr. Howard has expressed an interest in returning to the faculty of the University's department of internal medicine where he taught for some 14 years.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Dean Howard, a St. Paul native, received his B.A., M.B., M.D., and Ph.D degrees from the University of Minnesota. Prior to his being named dean he taught in the department of internal medicine, was director of the department of continuing medical education and associate dean.

Two years ago the University's Board of Regents recognized a Health Sciences Council of Deans and Directors as an informal coordinating body chaired by Dr. Howard. The heads of the Schools of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing and Public Health, University Hospitals, and the Colleges of Pharmacy and Veterinary Medicine were charged with the responsibility of identifying programs that were health-sciences-wide; making those programs operational, and developing alternatives.

Recently the University invited a group of distinguished medical educators to review the health sciences organization and governance in relation to the state and the University. Their report is expected to be submitted to President Moos by the end of this month.

REPORT URGES U OF M INVOLVEMENT IN DIFFERENT TYPES OF HOUSING

NEWSMEN: For further information, contact NANCY PIRSIG, 373-5193

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Describing some neighborhoods around the University of Minnesota's Minneapolis campus as severely deteriorated ghettos of single students, a University housing committee today suggested several sweeping steps to reverse that situation and to change the institution's traditional focus from on-campus residence halls to the types of housing most desired by students and faculty.

Its proposals range from permitting mobile homes for married students on vacant University property to the construction of innovative "village housing" that would include: a variety of types of housing within one complex to serve married and single students and faculty members; "common" facilities for all tenants to serve their social, academic and recreational needs; and equipment to take advantage of various modern educational techniques such as closed-circuit television.

The "Report of the President's Committee on Housing and Related Space" was submitted to University President Malcolm Moos by the committee's acting chairman, Hugh G.S. Peacock, associate professor of architecture and University planner. The committee, created in 1967, originally was headed by Elmer Learn, then assistant to the president who since has joined the University of California, Davis, faculty.

"Our report does not contain detailed economic analysis that would be needed before implementation," Peacock said today, "but we believe it can provide a useful guide." He said the committee assumed that staff and students would have a chance to react to the report before any action is taken.

The committee strongly recommends "an immediate and continuing policy by the University and the community-at-large to develop and implement a comprehensive Community plan for housing and related space facilities."

It defines the "core of the problem" as the free market's inability to accommodate the rising student demand for nearby high-quality housing at a reasonable price. Apartment rents near the campus "are grossly inflated," it states, and accommodations are "frequently unsafe, overcrowded, unhealthy, or simply unsuited to the student way of life."

A questionnaire used by the committee ascertained that 80 per cent of all students, and 90 per cent of graduate students, would prefer to live in the immediate vicinity of the University. Single students showed a strong preference for apartment living; dormitories were low on their list and "complaints about this form of...living ...are many and strong."

The report also goes into the problems and possibilities of financing the needed housing. It urges the University to:

- * encourage new laws that would help private developers get into the institutional market;
- * make every attempt to lower the rents on University-owned housing;
- * consider subsidizing housing because of its related educational value to students;
- * encourage federal agencies to provide new funds for housing needs;
- * "expand its cooperative efforts with governmental and community housing agencies;" and
- * encourage student-owned cooperatives.

The committee also suggests short-term "youth-hostel"-type lodging for commuting students who want to spend some nights on the campus; giving more help to out-of-state and foreign students who have an especially hard time finding places to rent; and making available more information on housing, for both staff and students.

Citing a "fifty per cent decline in available square footage per student" on the Twin Cities campus since 1945, the report also criticizes the University's failure to pay enough attention to "related space" needs, including dining, study, lounge and recreational areas, outdoor space, and "goods, services, and activities areas."

Such areas "should not be considered as luxury space," the committee stated, "but as a vital and necessary aspect of the University's educational assets."

The major proposal in this regard is that the University develop small, decentralized units of related space within about a three-minute walking distance of anyone on the campus. "Our concern," the committee wrote, "...results from the University's practice of constructing giant, undifferentiated spaces such as lunch rooms, study spaces, lounges and plazas, which do not provide the human-scale privacy and atmosphere that the reduced physical environment...can offer."

'U' THEATRE TO PRESENT
'RIMERS OF ELDRITCH'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Small town atmosphere fosters sexual perversity," is the theme of "The Rimers of Eldritch," according to Terry Converse, director of the University Theatre production which opens Tuesday (Feb. 17) in Shevlin hall arena theatre.

"The Rimers of Eldritch" was written in the "collage form" by Lanford Wilson. "It is a series of images that finally leads to a total statement," Converse said. It was first presented under Wilson's direction at Cafe La MaMa in New York City in 1966. This will be the play's first production in the upper midwest.

The drama is set in a nearly abandoned small midwestern town of the present time. All 17 characters are on stage for the duration of both acts. David Monasch, a sophomore theatre major from Sacramento, Calif., plays the pivotal character, Skelly Mannor, the town's outcast.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Feb. 17 through 21 and at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 22. Tickets are on sale in the Scott hall ticket office on the campus and at Dayton's.

Converse, a graduate student in theatre at the University, previously did graduate work at Tufts University after receiving his bachelor's degree from Lake Forest College in Illinois. He has directed dramatic productions for a Boston television station and ran his own Village Theatre in Lake Forest.

In addition to Monasch, the student cast includes Kathleen Dougherty, Camille Page, Ellen Powers, David Rasmussen, Valery Daemke, Mark French, William Neuman, Maralyn Dossey, Jeffrey B. McLaughlin, Barbra Berlovitz, Gina Swain, Constance Marie Hasapopoulos, John Behan, Joanne Gould, Mary Churchill and Paul Haas. Mathew Tombers is the assistant director and Elaine Kass is the musical director. Technical direction is by Tom Poss and costumes were designed by Wendy Cole.

JUVENILE OFFICERS TO STUDY DRUG ABUSE AT ANNUAL 'U' MEET

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Juvenile drug abuse will be the topic of the 15th University of Minnesota juvenile officers' institute in Minneapolis Feb. 24 through 26.

A review of current problems in juvenile law enforcement is the purpose of the annual meeting, arranged through the University's General Extension Division.

Harold Higgins, superintendent of the Minnesota Bureau of Criminal Apprehension, will open the conference Feb. 24 with a keynote address to be followed by a panel discussion with several Minnesota juvenile officers.

Physical and behavioral effects of drugs and medical complications, drug distribution channels and drug information programs are among the topics for other talks, all at the Leamington Hotel.

Speakers will include a medical resident from Hennepin County General Hospital; University faculty members in pharmacology, psychiatry and criminal justice studies; and state, local and federal officials.

Though the conference is planned specifically for juvenile officers, any law enforcement officer who deals with young people may attend.

Registration information is available from the Department of Conferences and Institutes, Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

There is a $30 registration fee.

NOLTE WRITES, DIRECTS
NEW PLAY FOR 'U' THEATRE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Charles Nolte, assistant professor of theatre at the University of Minnesota, has written a new play which he will direct for the University Theatre.

August Strindberg -- celebrating his 44th birthday, recently divorced from his first wife and having rejected the theatre -- is the subject of the play titled "A Night at the Black Pig." "The Black Pig" is the Berlin cafe where Strindberg gathered with his colorful and talented friends in 1893.

It was during this time that the Swedish playwright, having authored several plays, turned his talents to chemistry, attempting to convert base metal into gold.

The University Theatre production will open Friday, Feb. 27, in Scott hall auditorium on the Minneapolis campus. Performances will be at 8 p.m. Feb. 27 and 28 and March 4,5,6 and 7 and at 3:30 p.m. March 3 and 8. The production is financed by the University's Scandinavian department.

Nolte -- who has written several successful plays, including "Do Not Pass Go" which was directed by Alan Schneider on Broadway and also produced in Berlin, London and Tel Aviv -- spent several recent months in Stockholm, Berlin and London doing research for the play. During the winter and spring quarters he is conducting a seminar in playwriting at the University.

"The play is a series of charades from Strindberg's past life as acted by his friends at the Black Pig," Nolte said. "It includes the many techniques and styles Strindberg used in his plays." Several members of the cast portray Strindberg in the cafe charades.

(MORE)

Strindberg at age 44 is played by Warren Frost, a graduate student in theatre. Frost adapted and directed the television production of "Don Juan in Hell," presented recently on KTCA-TV, and he also directed Theatre-in-the-Round's recent production of "The Killing of Sister George."

Tickets are on sale at the Scott hall ticket office on the campus and at Dayton's.

Nolte has 15 years' experience as a professional actor. He now teaches winter and spring quarters at the University and spends the summer and fall traveling, researching and writing plays. His most recent work produced in the Twin Cities was "End of Ramadan" done last year by Theatre-in-the-Round.

The cast includes the following graduate students in theatre: H. Evalyn Baron, Barbara Baumhart, Allison Giglio, Diana Devlin Graham, William J. Grivna, Thomas Eugene Houde, David R. Kanter, Katherine Lenel, Bill Levis, Janece Mamches, Jonathon A. Mezz, Susan Mason, Deborah Mooney, John Chase Soliday and Michael Tezla.

Undergraduate members of the cast include Gregg A. Almquist, Holly Herbig, Steven W. Herrmann, Gary Hildenbrand, Kathleen Kollodge, Susan R. Margoles, Stephen Parker, James Tucker Pringle, Richard D. Siegel, Bob Therien and Maureen Wells. Michael E. Pufall, a graduate student in theatre, is the assistant director. Nanette Sue Flakes, a graduate student, is assistant to the director.

CENTER FOR YOUTH STUDIES
ESTABLISHED AT 'U'
UNDER GISELA KONOPKA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A Youth Development Center has been established at the University of Minnesota. Its major focus will be to make existing information about youth available and understandable for those who work with young people.

The center, which does not have financial support as yet, is a division of the Center for Urban and Regional Affairs (CURA). Under the directorship of Professor Gisela Konopka, coordinator for CURA, it will serve to bring together knowledge and skills from various disciplines relating to youth.

To develop the center as a "reservoir of knowledge" about youth, University faculty members, students in youth fields, and community leaders have been meeting for nearly two years. The dialogues from the group's sessions will be published and widely distributed.

"The response from those in the community and University who want to contribute has been overwhelming," says Mrs. Konopka. "We all feel there is a definite need for in-service training for youth leaders working in the field today. That's why we've pushed so hard for this center."

Mrs. Konopka hopes the center's impact can be extended beyond the state of Minnesota. "We want this to have an international dimension. It would be ideal if we could attract internationally known youth experts to serve on the staff at different times."

Another special feature of the center is that young people are being involved in every aspect of the center's activities; teaching, research and direct service to youth workers.

HEAD OF INDIAN STUDIES AT BERKELEY TO SPEAK AT 'U' INDIAN CONFERENCE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Lee Brightman, director of American Indian studies at the University of California, Berkeley, Institute of Ethnic Studies and president of United Native Americans Inc., will be a main speaker at the statewide American Indian Education conference to be held at the University of Minnesota Friday, Feb. 20.

Brightman, an Oglala Sioux from South Dakota, heads a campaign to remove Secretary of Interior Walter Hickel from office for his alleged unfair treatment of the American Indian, and has been prominent in the Indian occupation of Alcatraz Island. Brightman's free public speech will begin at 1 p.m. in Coffman Union main ballroom.

G. Theodore Mitau, chancellor of the state college system; State Senator George Konzemius, member of the State Indian Affairs Commission; Will Antell, State director of Indian education; and representatives of the University and state higher education will be questioned by some 300 high school and college students throughout the day in Coffman Union main ballroom.

According to Mrs. Delores Snook, chairman of the University's American Indian Student Association sponsoring the conference, information from the question-and-answer sessions will be pooled for future use by Indian students all over the state.

CLA SENIOR DEFENDS
ORATORICAL CONTEST CHAMPIONSHIP

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Randy Tigue, College of Liberal Arts (CLA) senior, successfully defended his championship of the Pillsbury Oratorical Contest held Wednesday (Feb. 11) at the University of Minnesota. The contest was sponsored by the department of speech, communication and theatre arts.

Tigue, who won the contest last year, captured the title again with his speech, "Confessions of a White Racist--1968." He received $100 for first place.

Susan Bradley, CLA junior, won second place with the speech, "Trust Me, We're Faced With a Dilemma." Tom Kleven, CLA senior, came in third. His speech was titled, "The American Psyche at Rush Hour." Second and third-place prizes were $50 and $25.

Prize money was provided by the Eleanor F. Pillsbury Trust.

The winner of the contest usually represents the University in the Northern Oratorical League (NOL) contest. However, Miss Bradley will represent the University because Tigue attended last year and league rules prohibit a person from representing the same school two years in a row.

The NOL contest will be held March 2 at the University of Michigan. Other schools participating are Western Reserve university, Northwestern university, and the universities of Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

FAMILY PRACTICE DEPT. AT 'U'
SEEKS SUPPLY OF 'NORMAL' PATIENTS

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, FEB. 13)

A proposal for supplying patients to the University of Minnesota's fledgling department of family practice and community health was discussed today by the University's Board of Regents. No action on the proposal, which was brought in by the College of Medical Sciences, is anticipated at least until next month's Regents' meeting (March 13).

The problem of finding a supply of patients occurs because ordinarily patients referred to University Hospitals for treatment have unusual diseases or complications, requiring the specialized knowledge of the Hospitals' highly trained physicians. However, in the department of family practice, the prospective doctors need a more normal patient group to prepare for becoming family physicians in outstate, rural areas and small towns.

Two options were presented to the Regents as possibilities for securing patients, with equal effort to be given to both:

(1) The standard fee-for-service program, whereby patients who enroll pay regular fees for whatever services and treatment they require, using their present insurance to repay those expenses;

(2) Prepaid group insurance for individuals or families, who would then receive all their medical services at the University's Health Sciences Center. This option, called the Minnesota Family Health Plan, would be offered through several insurance companies to employees of business firms. It would include preventive medical care such as immunizations and physical exams, and out-patient treatment as well as hospitalization at University Hospitals.

Approximately 100 individuals or family units are desired for every family-practice resident serving at the University's Health Sciences Center. It is not known what percentage would be enrolled under each of the options, but everyone will have a free choice between them.

In addition to the standard individual/family units, the department also hopes to enroll members from the following groups: over-65 members of the families in the basic population group; residents of nearby housing for the elderly; and new members of the University faculty after July 1. The first two groups presumably would be covered by Medicare/Medicaid, whereas the last group could choose either of the options.

TO ASSOCIATE VICE PRESIDENT

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, FEB. 13)

Stanley B. Kegler, assistant vice president for coordinate campuses and educational relationships at the University of Minnesota since 1968, today was promoted to associate vice president for coordinate campuses and educational relationships.

The appointment, made by the University's Board of Regents at their regular monthly meeting, is effective immediately.

"Dr. Kegler's appointment is further evidence of the growing emphasis we are placing on the development and strengthening of the coordinate campuses in the University system," said University President Malcolm Moos.

For three years before he was named assistant vice president Kegler served as associate dean in the College of Education where he has been a faculty member for 19 years. Prior to joining the University faculty, he was a high school teacher in South St. Paul.

Kegler has four degrees, including a doctorate in English education, from the University of Minnesota. He has authored numerous articles, book chapters and monographs. His book, "The Changing Role of English Education," was named to a list of outstanding education books when it was published in 1965. In 1966, he received the Minnesota Education Association's School Bell Award for his television series, "Revolution in the Schools."

In other action, the Regents accepted the resignation of Associate Professor Austin G. Anderson as associate dean of the General Extension Division and director of continuing legal education, effective Feb. 27. Anderson will join the Minneapolis law firm of Dorsey, Marquart, Windhorst, West and Halladay as director of administration.

(MORE)

Other major appointments made by the Regents included:

Jasper S. Hopkins as associate professor in the philosophy department. Hopkins is currently an associate professor of philosophy at Harvard University where he received his master's and doctor of philosophy degrees.

Donald K. McInnes as executive assistant to the vice president for planning and operations. McInnes has been executive assistant to the director of the Boston Redevelopment Authority since September. He has a bachelor's degree from Grinnell College, a master's degree from Northwestern University and a law degree from Harvard Law School. He was in private practice as an attorney before joining the Boston Redevelopment Authority in 1964.

Caroline B. Rose as professor of sociology. Mrs. Rose is the widow of Arnold Rose, who was a professor of sociology at the University until his death in 1968. She has been a parttime faculty member at the University since 1962 and last year taught at Federal City College in Washington, D.C. She has a bachelor's degree from West Virginia University and a master's degree from the University of Chicago.

David N. Lovinger as director of technical services for University Services. He has been production analyst for University Services. In his new position he is responsible for administration of the scientific apparatus, glass technology, laundry and office machine rental facilities of the University.

SCOTTISH PIANIST TO PERFORM AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Scottish pianist Agnes Walker will perform in a free public "Music Hour" at the University of Minnesota Thursday, Feb. 26.

Miss Walker, who has been called "a descendant of the School of Liszt," will present a brief concert at 11:15 a.m. in Scott hall auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

The program will include three preludes from "The Edge of the Great World" by Erik Chisholm; Suite, Opus 14, by Bartok; and Etude de Concert and Tarantella from "Venezia E Napoli" by Liszt.

Miss Walker has been presented in concert many times in Europe and Canada. Orchestras she has played with include the London Philharmonic, the Moscow State, the Scottish National, the Nottingham Symphony, the Hamilton Symphony of Ontario, the Radio Eirean of Dublin and the Radiotjanst of Sweden. She has appeared in television series in Scotland and Canada.

For many years, Miss Walker was a pupil of Frederic Lamond, Scottish pianist and pupil of Franz Liszt, creator of the transcendental style of piano playing.

Her appearance here is sponsored by the departments of music and concerts and lectures.

ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENTIST TO HEAD UNIVERSITY'S BELL
MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M., FRIDAY, FEB. 13)

Professor Harrison B. Tordoff, 47, was named head of the Bell Museum of Natural History and professor of ecology and behavioral biology in the College of Biological Sciences by the University of Minnesota Board of Regents today. The appointment will be effective July 1.

Tordoff, a zoologist, is described by Richard Caldecott, dean of the College of Biological Sciences, as "one who has a deep concern about the quality of man's environment -- and the initiative and drive to help make the University of Minnesota a leader in the area of environmental science."

Originally from New York, Tordoff received his Ph.D. degree in zoology from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, in 1952. In the period from 1957 to 1970, he advanced from assistant to full professor at Michigan.

According to Dean Caldecott, Tordoff will have close ties with the new Minnesota Zoo, now in the planning stage. The new zoo director, Phillip Ogilvie, was formerly a student of Tordoff's.

"It is anticipated that this relationship will be cemented by joint appointments of metropolitan zoo personnel to faculty positions in the College of Biological Sciences," Caldecott said.

"The appointment of Dr. Tordoff to the directorship is a significant example of the effort of the University in general and the College of Biological Sciences, in particular, to put the State of Minnesota in a leadership role in training the young people who will have the responsibility of assuring that man's existence on this planet is a continuing and enduring one."

(A JOINT RELEASE FROM CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL AND THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA)

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL,
'U' PEDIATRICS DEPT.
ENTER FORMAL AFFILIATION

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, FEB. 13)

Children's Hospital of St. Paul today became the first private institution and the third Twin Cities hospital to enter into formal affiliation with the University of Minnesota pediatric department.

The University's Board of Regents passed the affiliation agreement at its meeting today. St. Paul-Ramsey and Hennepin County General hospitals are the other Twin Cities facilities.

The affiliation agreement is expected to accomplish several things, according to Dr. Krishna Saxena, medical education director at Children's Hospital, and Dr. Stanley Leonard, past chief of staff who was instrumental in drawing up the agreement:

- * In response to Minnesota's growing need for pediatricians, the hospital will play an important role in training and stimulating young physicians in actual clinical practice, with more of them ultimately becoming practicing pediatricians. (More than one-third of the medical students at the University now receive pediatric training at Children's Hospital.)
- * The hospital will be able to bring more continuing-education programs into the hospital, to meet the needs of both doctors and other health professionals.
- * The hospital will increase the stimulus for pediatric research by providing more and better laboratory facilities.
- * Because its doctors will be more involved in the teaching of medical students, the hospital hopes more pediatricians will join the faculty and thereby enlarge the service-training program of medical students, residents and interns.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

The 40-year-old Children's Hospital at 311 Pleasant Ave. near downtown St. Paul serves more than 16,000 hospitalized and ambulatory patients annually, aged up to 16 years. Accredited as a 99-bed hospital, it will increase its capacity to 122 beds with completion of a five-story addition in early spring. The five-year-old teaching program at the hospital serves its own pediatric residents in a two-year program of study and clinical experience.

HEART DISEASE CONFERENCE
SET AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Two important and serious complications of heart disease are the subject of a continuing education course for Upper Midwest physicians Monday and Tuesday (Feb. 16-17) at the University of Minnesota.

This is the third in a series of statewide symposia cosponsored by the Intensive Coronary Care Unit Project of the Minnesota Heart Association and funded by Northlands Regional Medical Program.

Distinguished faculty from the University's department of medicine, and other medical centers will focus on cardiac arrhythmias (irregular heart beats) and sudden death resulting from coronary disease. Problems in diagnosis and treatment of heart attacks also will be discussed.

(A JOINT RELEASE FROM NORTHLANDS REGIONAL MEDICAL PROGRAM AND THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

DR. FIFER NAMED U OF M
DIRECTOR OF NORTHLANDS RMP

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, FEB. 13)

A Minneapolis physician, Dr. William R. Fifer of the St. Louis Park Medical Center, today was appointed director of the University of Minnesota division of the Northlands Regional Medical Program (NRMP), Inc., by the University's Board of Regents, and as such will also be an associate director of the entire NRMP organization. Dr. Fifer, also a clinical professor of medicine at the University, will assume his new duties April 1.

His principal responsibility as director will be to further develop the University effort in post-graduate medical education. The objective will be to strengthen and coordinate the continuing medical education of Minnesota physicians beyond their formal training after they have completed medical school, internship and residency.

The effort to assure cooperative, coordinated, regional planning of long-range medical educational programs will involve directors of hospital education in area hospitals throughout the state; the Minnesota State Medical Association; the Minnesota Academy of General Practice; and the core staffs of Northlands Central, Mayo Clinic and Foundation, and the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Fifer, as an associate director of NRMP, will be a member of the NRMP Core Council which provides guidance and direction for the whole program in Minnesota.

'U' GRAD SCHOOL'S NEW POLICY RECOMMENDS TRANSFER CREDITS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A general policy of accepting transfer credits from other Minnesota colleges and universities to be applied toward master of arts and master of science degrees has been adopted by the executive committee of the University of Minnesota Graduate School.

The decision of whether or not to actually accept transfer credits and the number to be accepted will be determined by the director of graduate studies in each major field.

Prior to this time transfer of credit has not been permitted in the standard length master of arts and master of science programs, although it has been possible in the professional master's programs which are of unusual length, as well as the specialist and doctor of education and doctor of philosophy degree programs.

"In a time when post-baccalaureate education is increasingly important and individuals are increasingly mobile, graduate offerings in the several institutions in our region should be coordinated and complementary," said Bryce Crawford, Jr., dean of the Graduate School.

Crawford encouraged the directors of graduate studies in the several major fields to develop cooperative programs with other state institutions and suggested that programs for individual students which are approved in advance may involve substantial amounts of study taken at other institutions, while retaining sufficient concentration in this institution to assure that the degree-conferring faculty is sufficiently familiar with the student. When the programs of individual students are not approved in advance, the Graduate School's executive committee has authorized faculty committees in the major fields to accept a maximum of nine quarter credits from other schools.

MEDALLION CARRIED TO MOON, GIVEN TO 'U' SPACE SCIENCE CENTER

(FOR RELEASE AT 11 A.M. TUESDAY, FEB. 17)

A medallion that has been to the moon and back today was presented to the University of Minnesota for permanent display.

The half-dollar-sized medallion was carried aboard the Apollo 12 moon flight last November by Astronaut Charles "Pete" Conrad, Jr., as a favor to an old friend, former Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

Humphrey, who is an adjunct professor at the University, today presented the medallion to University President Malcolm Moos, who in turn presented it to Professor Lawrence Cahill, director of the Space Science Center where it will be put on display. It will be encased in plastic, mounted on edge, and exhibited in a lighted, revolving display case.

The front of the medallion contains a likeness of the Regents' seal and the words, "Space Science Center" and "Apollo 12 Moon Flight." The back reads, "This medallion was carried by Astronaut Charles Conrad, Jr., on the Apollo 12 Moon Flight of November 1969 at the request of former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey on behalf of the Space Science Center of the University of Minnesota."

DENTAL AUXILIARIES FOUND TO BE EQUAL TO ADVANCED STUDENTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dental auxiliaries, with special training, can equal the quality of work done by advanced dental students and, in a team situation, increase production.

These were the findings of a year-long study by Dr. Freeman Rosenblum, assistant professor of pediatric dentistry in the University of Minnesota's School of Dentistry.

Four graduates of an approved dental assistant program were given three months of laboratory training and an additional nine months in the pediatric dental clinic. Each was teamed with a senior dental student and a dental assistant.

Both the quality and quantity of a dozen procedures were measured against a control team of a senior dental student and an assistant.

Dr. Rosenblum found that for the majority of procedures there was no significant difference in the quality between the dental students and the auxiliaries. Over the nine months the experimental team, with the auxiliary, performed 50 per cent more procedures than the control team.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Dr. Rosenblum received his DDS degree from the University of Minnesota and NSD degree from the University of Nebraska. He is director of the experimental pedodontic training program at the University of Minnesota and a diplomate of the American Board of Pedodontics.

ANDREAS PAPANDREOU
TO SPEAK AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Andreas Papandreou, son of the late prime minister of Greece and minister of state and of economic coordination prior to the 1967 Greek coup, will speak at the University of Minnesota Friday (Feb. 20).

"Greece: A Problem for the West" is the topic for his talk at 12:15 p.m. in Coffman Union main ballroom. Open to the public with no admission charge, it is sponsored by the departments of economics and concerts and lectures.

Papandreou is a professor of economics at York University in Toronto, Canada, and chairman of the Panhellenic Liberation Movement. He was formerly a professor of economics at the University of Minnesota and chairman of the economics department at the University of California in Berkeley. He has also taught at Harvard University, where he received his doctor of philosophy degree in 1943, Northwestern University, and the University of Stockholm.

When the military junta took over in Greece in 1967, Papandreou was jailed and nine months later was given amnesty. He spent some time in Europe and moved to Canada in August, 1969.

He is currently writing a book on economic development which will incorporate his experiences as founder and director of the Center for Economic Research in Greece and as minister of economic coordination. The book will be published by the University of Minnesota Press in the spring of 1971.

WORLD TRAVELERS FROM UNIVERSITY SPEAK IN SERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Ancient Greece, Viet Nam, Japan, India, the U.S. or the South Pole -- it's all one world. The only one we have. This fact, more than any other, stands out in talks being given by world travelers from the University of Minnesota.

Talks on the speaker's experiences in far parts of the world are being given every Monday night at 8 p.m. at St. Matthews Episcopal Church, 2136 Carter ave., St. Paul. The remaining talks, free and open to the public, are:

Feb. 23 - Dr. R. Hugh Monahan, "Medical Practice in Viet Nam."

March 2 - Dean Bryce Crawford, Jr., "Japan and India, Communities of Contrast."

March 9 - Professor William McDonald, "Digging into a Community of the Past."

March 16 - James Houck, "A White Teacher in a Black University."

March 23 - R.J. Hofman, "Exploring the South Pole."

All talks are followed by coffee and questions. In a talk on Feb. 16, Dean E.W. Ziebarth, of the University of Minnesota's College of Liberal Arts, showed slides and explained his experiences on his most recent trip to the Soviet Union. He described at one point what it was like to be under intensive surveillance for comments he had made just prior to the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

CREATIVE PROGRAMS HELP
PERSONALIZE U OF M CLASSES

by Joan Friedman
University Relations Writer

Mention the University of Minnesota and images of vastness and overcrowding come to some people's minds. But within the University, students are discovering opportunities for creativity, improved quality education, and personalized instruction.

Two projects -- out of 100 or more new ideas tried out recently -- are a dental course that sensitizes dental students to attitudes and life styles of people, and a program that brings community people into the classroom as teachers.

All freshmen studying dentistry now take a course in Health Behavior, first offered last spring. It helps them understand people and their dental habits -- why some people go to the dentist and others don't, for instance.

"This understanding is important if we want to provide the best in dental care for everyone," according to Dr. Joanna Samuels and Mrs. Jean Woodbury, the creators of the class, both of whom are assistant professors of health ecology.

The course attempts to bring the community to the students by means of panels, video-taped interviews with children, and tape-recorded discussions with mothers.

The panel presentations bring community people into the classroom. Representing different economic, social, and racial groups, these people give their ideas about dentists and dental care. Another type of panel introduces professional specialists from the Minneapolis and St. Paul areas.

Interviews tape-recorded in homes with mothers from various socio-economic backgrounds, reveal some of the problems parents face in providing adequate health care for their families.

Last spring Dr. Samuels interviewed 355 black, white and Indian children in Minneapolis. The candid third graders came from middle class, working class, and welfare families. While discussing dental care and diets, the children revealed a great deal about their home environments, attitudes, family health practices, and experiences. The video-tape vignettes may help the dental students to deal with children's fears of the dentist.

The Dental School is not the only unit to turn to the community for instruction. In September, 1968, the University's Office of Community Programs initiated the use of the Cultural Education Specialist Program in some courses dealing with poverty and social and racial problems.

The specialist, generally from a minority or poverty group, "is an articulate person," says Arthur Harkins, a coordinator in the Office of Community Programs, "who can describe and explain minority-group ideas and attitudes. He can relate academic subjects to realities, although he is not a formally trained or academically licensed instructor."

One of the first classes to use the Cultural Education Specialist was an education course, School and Society, required of all education majors. The students visited The Way, a north Minneapolis community center. Syl Davis, director of The Way, often came to the University to speak with the students.

"He spoke freely," says Harkins, "about the black man's response to formal education, and related it to politics, economics, and social problems. The purpose of his visits was not intended to give him the last word, but a word."

Bringing outside resource people into the classroom is not new. What is new about the Cultural Education Specialist is that he is a regular part of the teaching staff, having equal status with the professor in the class they plan and teach together.

The specialists have been used with great success at the University in courses such as education, sociology, social work, and American Indian studies.

'END WAR' GROUP TO MEET AT UNIVERSITY SUNDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The Student Mobilization Committee to end the war in Vietnam will hold its state convention at the University of Minnesota Sunday (Feb. 22).

Minnesota college and high school students will make plans for the April 13-18 national "spring offensive" against the war. The convention will begin at 1 p.m. in the Coffman Union Pop-Inn.

Participants also will discuss the results of the committee's national convention held in Cleveland last week, at which time the group reaffirmed its demands for the immediate withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Vietnam, abolition of the draft and self-determination for women and black America, according to Carla Riehle, University student and committee member.

'U' ST. PAUL CAMPUS OF 1980
ENVISIONED AS UNIQUE VENTURE

(FOR RELEASE MONDAY, FEB. 23)

Proposals for making the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota the home of 10,000 to 15,000 students by 1980 (compared to approximately 4,000 students there now) are contained in a report being circulated among key faculty and Regent committees.

The 26-page "Prospectus on the Development of Academic Programs in St. Paul in the Decade of the 1970's" also is being reviewed by outside agencies such as HECC (the Higher Education Coordinating Commission)---the legislature-appointed unit coordinating various higher-education plans for the state.

The prospectus was developed by the University's vice presidents as the culmination of six years of study and discussion among various faculty groups and committees, and reflects data and conclusions found in Part Two of a University task force report on "Availability of Educational Opportunity." (Part Two, "An Analysis of Projections and Implications of Suggested Alternatives," also is being circulated for discussion at this time.)

While stressing that its proposals are not conclusions, and are flexible enough to be changed along the way if it seems desirable, the prospectus goes on to recommend that:

- * A strong social science faculty, drawn from many different departments, should be developed, with particular focus on problem-solving and multi-disciplinary cooperation.
- * University College should expand its operations and its functions, to include offices on all three areas of the campus (West Bank, East Bank and St. Paul) and to encompass a wide variety of experimental educational efforts.

(MORE)

- * General College should include third- and fourth-year offerings, leading to a bachelor's degree (it is at present a two-year college), accompanied by increased interaction with St. Paul-campus programs.
- * A new School of Home Economics, with emphasis on family life studies, should be developed and the entire Institute of Agriculture (in which it is located) reorganized.
- * Two major units on the West Bank of the Minneapolis campus should be relocated to St. Paul: the School of Business Administration and the School of Public Affairs.
- * A major center for continuing education should be developed in the St. Paul area.
- * Basic courses for undergraduates on the St. Paul campus should be offered there by such colleges as Liberal Arts (CLA) and the Institute of Technology.

"We are visualizing the St. Paul campus of the future as a very special kind of place," Vice President for Administration Donald K. Smith said today.

"We envision a concentration there of programs that relate especially to emerging community and national concerns. This view is very different from the traditional one in setting up a department or collegiate unit. We have tried to ask the broad question of how to develop a unique campus responsive to the large problems that face this state and nation---such problems as the quality of the environment, the friction of social encounters, and preparation for emerging careers and vocations.

"With this frame of reference, we are hoping to stress problem-solving abilities among the faculty and students on the St. Paul campus: through innovative and flexible undergraduate education, through a concentration on interdisciplinary and problem-oriented instruction and research and through expanded offerings in continuing education.

"And we believe these new programs will both draw strength from and enhance those already based on the St. Paul campus---agriculture, forestry and home economics, biological sciences, and veterinary medicine."

As the prospectus states, the criteria for moving units to the St. Paul campus will include their potential for contributing strength to units and programs already there, with the end result "a reasonably coherent community of students and faculty whose purposes and activities will reinforce one another."

Closely tied in with the St. Paul plan is the development of University College as a center for innovative and experimental programs and the expansion of General College to a unit offering a bachelor's degree.

Many students who receive a two-year Associate in Arts degree from General College seek to enter CLA and other colleges, which puts a strain on the colleges. This situation is seen as an opportunity for the University to develop new and different kinds of programs in both General College and University College and perhaps to offer a different sort of bachelor's degree.

Such a functional change also would increase the University's capacity for handling upper-division (third and fourth-year) students, which it must do if it follows the HECC guidelines for its future proportion of students (one-third lower-division, one-third upper-division, one-third post-baccalaureate).

The last section of the prospectus lists step-by-step phases of development. The planning of St. Paul development is viewed as a continuing process, with opportunity to modify goals in the light of experience and on-going discussion.

First steps would include the naming of consultants to develop a master plan for the use of land and the construction of facilities on the St. Paul campus; discussions between General College personnel and the central administration concerning its proposed expansion; discussions with University College committee members about the establishment of college offices in St. Paul and on the West Bank; study initiated by appropriate Senate committees to determine the form for developing an appropriate social science faculty in St. Paul; and study by relevant colleges of their role in expanding offerings in St. Paul.

REPORT ANALYZES ALTERNATIVES FOR STATE, METRO HIGHER EDUCATION

(FOR RELEASE MONDAY, FEB. 23)

A major shift in percentages of students at various levels, bold new proposals for serving the needs of central-city residents, and an emphasis on exploration of new educational models are three of the major points in a report on higher-education alternatives now circulating at the University of Minnesota.

It is Part Two of an administration task force report on "Availability of Educational Opportunities" and is called "Analysis of Projections and Implications of Suggested Alternatives." It is now being reviewed and discussed by the executive committee of the Board of Regents and also by Senate and faculty committees and outside agencies such as HECC (the Higher Education Coordinating Commission). (It has been disseminated along with a "Prospectus on the Development of Academic Programs in St. Paul in the Decade of the 1970's;" the two reports contain some complementary and overlapping material.)

The shift in student levels will come about in response to HECC's recommendation that the University by 1980 aim for a 1/3-1/3-1/3 student population: one-third lower division (first and second year), one-third upper division (third and fourth year) and one-third post-baccalaureate, including graduate, students.

While the report points out that such a distribution is impossible for the University system--primarily because its outstate campuses have few or no graduate students--it can come close to realization on the Twin Cities campus.

The report foresees a Twin Cities distribution of students in 1980 as 32%-36%-32%; or, in numbers, approximately 18,200 lower division, 20,500 upper division, and 18,300 graduate students.

To achieve this distribution, major development of the St. Paul campus would have to take place because the entire burden of lower-division growth would occur there. In fact, by 1980 first and second-year students on the Minneapolis campus probably will be 2,300 fewer than at present.

Along with St. Paul campus expansion at the lower level, the report suggests increased capability for handling upper-division students on both the Minneapolis and St. Paul campuses: an additional 4,800 in Minneapolis and 3,200 in St. Paul (1980 figures over 1969).

If this proposal is not adopted, the report suggests two other options available to HECC to provide for "the great need for upper division capability, especially in the metro area": (a) develop a new institution that might enroll both lower and upper division students, while at the same time imposing a ceiling on the University Twin Cities campus growth; or (b) expand capabilities in the state colleges while tightening upper division enrollments at the University, Twin Cities.

Meanwhile, on the lower division level, the University, Twin Cities, cannot begin to fulfill the great metro-area need since it will be cutting back by more than 800 students at that level (1980 figures compared with 1969). The report suggests therefore that junior college development in the metro area is an urgent need.

"We have assumed that 4,000 students is considered a ceiling for metropolitan-area junior colleges," Associate Vice President Stanley B. Kegler, author of Part Two, said today. "If our figures are accurate there really is a need for two or three new metro junior colleges by 1980."

Recommending that St. Paul be the site for one of those junior colleges, the report mentions that "the only public junior college in Ramsey County is at Lakewood in the northeastern corner..." and later alludes to the non-feasibility of central-city residents commuting to suburban colleges.

New proposals for the General College and University College call for their expansion and a change in their purposes and functions. "Experimental leadership in the development of new collegiate models" is suggested as one of their potential roles.

They might become "experimental colleges for dealing with the specialized needs of residents of the central cities, especially those who are educationally or culturally disadvantaged," the report states. Possibilities include a bachelor's degree that combines classes, occupational experience, and independent study.

Three- and four-year programs in General College (at present a two-year college) could serve "some students who have special abilities in a limited area (who) cannot develop their particular talents or pursue their special interests...because they are unable to survive in the (traditional) areas of academic competence which lie outside their abilities."

Additional reasons cited as arguments for the innovations are rising admission standards in traditional four-year programs; increasing interest in a four-year general education rather than two years of general and two years of specialized coursework; and a rising interest in having experience outside the classroom count toward one's degree.

Specifically mentioned as fields that could be emphasized in General College are new, emerging careers in the area of human services: paraprofessional people in education, medicine, social work and the like.

University College could provide a focal point for innovation and experiment: for testing out instructional materials or new teaching methods or curriculum organization. It could, in fact, eventually serve as a base for a center serving this need for all Minnesota higher-education systems, the report suggests.

In a separate set of recommendations dealing with the Rochester and the Range areas, Part Two strongly urges that the University be given the opportunity to develop a five-year college in Rochester; and states that "expansion of the University of Minnesota, Duluth, campus...provides the best option for meeting the needs of the Range area. Doubling the UMD enrollment...by 1980 should serve the students of that area as close to their homes as can be reasonably expected."

The University's existing ties with the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine in Rochester, the large number of students from the Rochester area who attend the University's Twin Cities campus, the wisdom of decentralizing the University's educational facilities, and the University's expertise in areas of special interest to Rochester--engineering, business administration, health manpower--all are cited as reasons for the University to be involved in developing a Rochester college.

The need for some sort of four- or five-year institution is all but incontrovertible. The task force feels the University can best meet the needs, and indicates that a five-year college, "offering a comprehensive baccalaureate program as well as selected graduate programs, should be capable of accepting students by the fall of 1973." Prediction is that such a campus could grow to a student enrollment of 5,000 by 1980.

"In addition," the report states, "if present population projections are accurate, it is possible to envision a mature, complex University campus developing in the next two to three decades."

Minnesota Human Rights Commissioner Conrad Balfour will speak at the Thursday (Feb. 26) meeting of FREE (Fight Repression of Erotic Expression) at the University of Minnesota.

Balfour's department was recently involved in the case of a local radio announcer who was allegedly fired after he admitted being a homosexual. Though the department could not accept the case on the basis of discrimination because of creed, Balfour said he would go before the 1971 Minnesota legislature to broaden the definition of "creed" so that it would cover complaints not applicable to race, religion, color, sex or nationality.

His talk on the human rights of the homosexual will begin at 8 p.m. in Coffman Union men's lounge. It is open to the public.

'U' HAS NEW APPROACH TO RELIGIOUS STUDIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

There is a new and enlarged approach to religious studies at the University of Minnesota.

The interdepartmental major in religious studies will be listed as a separate program in the 1970-72 College of Liberal Arts catalog and advisors will be available to students who are interested in the study of religion. Six new courses in religious studies have been added in three departments.

"Although it has been possible to major in religious studies for some time, there has not been a structured program in this area," said Thomas Kraabel, assistant professor of classics and chairman of the religious studies committee. "We hope this plan will enable the student to more efficiently select his program."

The committee headed by Kraabel has produced a booklet on religious studies which will be available later this spring.

Each religious studies major must select two sub-areas for specialization. The eight outlined in the new program are Religions in Antiquity, Religious Expression in Literature and the Arts, Religion in Europe, 20th Century Religions, Religion and Society, Religions in East and South Asia, Near Eastern Religions and Religions in America.

There are a number of courses listed under each sub-area. They total more than 200 and include courses from the departments of art history, classics, English, languages, music, philosophy, political science, history, humanities, sociology, anthropology and American studies.

New courses to be offered this year are Hellenistic Religions, Beginnings of Christianity, and Religions in the Roman Empire---classics department; Ancient Israel and Islamic Religion---Middle Eastern Languages department; and Religions of the 20th Century World---humanities department.

MOON GLASS ANALYSIS
FOR PLANT GROWTH

Earth plants grow exceedingly well in moon soil, moon researchers have found. Does this indicate that there are tiny germs or viruses hidden deep in the moon soil that could conceivably escape and contaminate the earth --- or is there another, equally logical, explanation?

Thus far, no one has found physical evidence of hidden germs, even though the moon soil has been examined down to the molecular level. On the other hand, two researchers have theorized that the "unexplained biological effect" of moon soil on earth plants is caused by chemicals, since chemical fertilizers also make plants grow.

Principal investigator of the team is Edwin Roedder, geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Washington, D.C. His assistant is Paul W. Weiblen, assistant professor of geology at the University of Minnesota.

Using a microprobe---a rare, sensitive analytical instrument---and working at the University with Apollo 11 moon rock samples, the two have discovered a unique property of moon soil which makes the chemical explanation reasonable.

They found that molten lavas, from which the Apollo 11 moon rocks apparently formed, once split into two immiscible liquids---like oil and water---as they cooled into rock.

As these liquids cooled on the moon some time in the distant past, certain chemical elements---primarily iron, calcium and titanium---concentrated in a dense liquid. Other elements such as potassium and silica made up another, lighter liquid.

Recent work by Roedder and Weiblen show that most of the phosphorous -- a well known chemical plant nutrient -- concentrated in the denser liquid. Both liquids formed glasses of distinctly different chemical composition, later found as small inclusions in the moon soil.

"It is thus reasonable to suppose," Weiblen said today, "that when Earth researchers pour water on moon soil samples to see if plants will grow, the nutrients potassium and phosphorous, released from the moon glasses, fertilize the plants.

"Although the water solubility of moon glasses has not been established by us -- our research does not concern plant growth -- we do know that such nutrients are typically more soluble from a glass than they would be from a mineral. We know that plants grow very well on 'glassy' soils on earth such as those found on volcanic islands."

Evidence for the immiscibility of moon rock may also explain the nature of differences between the lunar seas and lunar highlands and make plausible the possibility of a lunar origin for the mysterious glassy meteorites known as tektites.

"On the moon," Roedder said, "large aggregations of the lighter liquid, having the composition of a potassium-rich granite, may have coalesced to form the lunar highlands.

"If the samples from the Sea of Tranquillity are at all representative of the maria, it is possible that this same splitting occurred on a large scale in the early history of the moon. As a result of the rising of such low-density liquid globules, the lunar highlands may be, in effect, partly 'granitic.'"

Weiblen also commented on a current controversy about the actual origin of the Apollo 11 moon rock samples. "Despite certain similarities between the true lunar sample and meteoritic material, the moon rock fragments are clearly not meteoritic."

Interest in a theory that the process of immiscibility may have occurred in the early history of the earth has been renewed by these findings. Despite large-scale differences in the geology and chemical composition of earth rock formations, however, only meager evidence of such immiscibility has ever been found in earth rock despite several years of investigation.

In moon samples the most common, and obvious, evidence for immiscibility was seen in certain fine-grained glass inclusions found in and between the major minerals of lunar rocks.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Because of the "unexplained biological effect" of moon soil on earth plants, a government space-biology advisory committee is advising continued lengthy quarantine procedures following moon trips.

Roedder and Weiblen are continuing their work with Apollo 11 samples and soon will receive approximately 6 grams of Apollo 12 moon rock. (Two other Minnesota investigators, Professor V. Rama Murthy and Assistant Professor Robert O. Pepin, each will receive approximately 13 grams from Apollo 12.)

Weiblen holds a bachelor of arts degree from Wartburg College, and three degrees--- master of arts, master of science and doctor of philosophy---from the University of Minnesota. He has been on the staff since 1960.

EX-PRESIDENT OF BOLIVIA TO SPEAK AT 'U' FRIDAY

The exiled president of Bolivia, Luis Adolfo Siles, will speak at the University of Minnesota Friday (Feb. 27).

"Youth in Latin America" will be the topic of his free public talk at 12:15 p.m. in 330 Anderson hall on the West Bank.

Siles, 44, who had served as president of the South American country for five months and now lives in Santiago, Chile, was exiled in September when General Alfredo Ovando Candia became the military ruler of the country. Siles had been elected vice president in 1966 and served in that post until the death in April, 1969, of President Rene Barrientos.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Siles is the son and half-brother of men who also served as president of Bolivia. His father, Hernando Siles, was president from 1926 to 1930, and his half-brother, Herman Siles Suazo, was president from 1956 to 1960. Prior to his election to public office, Luis Siles was a professor of sociology at the University Mayor of San Andres in LaPaz.

His appearance at the University is sponsored by the departments of sociology and concerts and lectures.

PAINTINGS, PHOTOGRAPHS TO BE SHOWN AT COFFMAN

Paintings by Jane Starosciak and photographs by John Eide will be exhibited in Coffman Gallery at the University of Minnesota Monday (March 2) through March 27. The gallery is open free to the public from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Miss Starosciak, a New Englander, has been a St. Paul resident since 1967. Her most recent showing was at the Kramer Gallery. She is a researcher in the University's School of Public Health. Eide is a graduate student in studio arts at the University.

The show will open with a public reception from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday.

Cooperation is the crucial key if solutions to the many problems faced by man today are to be found. A new and very different course, "Ecology, Technology, and Society," based on the cooperative efforts of experts from many different fields of study, will be taught at the University of Minnesota spring quarter.

Although the course, titled "Social Science 82," will be taught primarily by University professors, industry representatives also will lecture. After two lectures---often on opposing aspects of controversial topics---a session will be held for open discussion.

On a given Monday, for example, a professor may talk about the adverse environmental effects of nuclear power plants. That Wednesday, a lecturer from Northern States Power might give the industry's viewpoint. Then on Friday, the 200-some students expected to enroll in the course would discuss the subject with both lecturers present.

Other subjects, handled in much the same way, will be population growth, natural resources, the arms race, air and water pollution, waste disposal, pesticides, costs, politics, and human values.

Course planners are hopeful that with cooperation rather than conflict or confrontation as a theme, some new solutions to these problems may be found.

"The objectives of this course are to acquaint the student with major problems of the next decade in the interaction between man, technology, and nature: to show him how these problems are related to each other and to his own value system, and to show him how he can participate constructively in their solution," J. Edward Anderson, associate professor of mechanical engineering and moderator of the course, said today.

The course will be held at 11:15 a.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday beginning March 30. Registration is now open. It is also offered as an independent study course, for those unable to attend all sessions. Grading will be on a pass-no-pass basis (P-N).

Postcards indicating your interest in the course, in case you cannot attend this quarter, may be sent to Anderson at 235 Mechanical Engineering, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455. Evidence of such interest will be used in determining whether or not such a course is offered next year. If enough interest is shown on a statewide basis, a videotape production of it may be made as well.

A JOINT RELEASE FROM THE CENTER FOR ADVANCED AFRICAN UNDERSTANDING AND THE

U.N. GENERAL ASSEMBLY PRESIDENT
TO VISIT TWIN CITIES MARCH 12

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Angie Brooks, president of the 24th session of the United Nations General Assembly, will visit the Twin Cities Thursday, March 12.

Miss Brooks, an attorney and the second woman and second black African elected to lead the General Assembly, will speak on "Impact of Youth Upon National Affairs" at 3 p.m. in Coffman Union main ballroom at the University of Minnesota and will address a $25-a-plate benefit dinner for the Center for Advanced African Understanding at 8 p.m. in the St. Paul Hilton Hotel.

March 12 has officially been declared "Angie Brooks Day" in Minneapolis, St. Paul and the state of Minnesota.

There is no admission charge for her University appearance which is sponsored by the department of concerts and lectures.

"The United Nations as a Stabilizing Factor in World Peace" will be her topic at the dinner. Harold W. Greenwood, Jr., president of Midwest Federal Savings and Loan Association of Minneapolis and president of the United Nations Association of Minnesota, is chairman of the event which will be attended by Governor Harold LeVander, Mayor Thomas Byrne of St. Paul and Mayor Charles Stenvig of Minneapolis. Austin Coleman of the Center for Advanced African Understanding, 275 Dupont Ave. N., Minneapolis, is in charge of dinner reservations.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Miss Brooks has represented Liberia, Africa's oldest republic, in the United Nations since 1954. In 1966, she was elected president of the U.N. Trusteeship Council. She has served as her country's assistant secretary of state and vice president and has been mentioned as a possible successor to the aging President Tubman.

Miss Brooks was born in 1928, one of nine children of a poor African Methodist Episcopal minister. She was raised by an African seamstress and worked her way through high school as a typist. An early marriage ended in divorce and her two sons, now college graduates, are working in Liberia. She has 47 Liberian foster children.

Aided by scholarships, government funds and her wages as a dishwasher and waitress, Miss Brooks received a bachelor's degree from Shaw University in Raleigh, N.C. She has a master's degree in political science and a law degree from the University of Wisconsin and a doctor of law degree from Howard University. She is a former president of the International Federation of Women Lawyers and has been decorated by 11 governments.

Comments on the United Nations -- quoted from "Ebony" magazine, January, 1970

"As the UN's 13-week fall session draws to an end, Angie Brooks reflects deeply on the meaning of the United Nations as an international institution, its possibilities and its glaring faults. She considers it 'one of the greatest achievements of mankind,' pointing to its humanitarian aspects and the assistance it has granted emerging nations through its agencies and, as a forum for world opinion, an organization that has, in many ways, prevented the outbreak of an out-and-out global holocaust. As for its shortcomings, she observes, as she did in her initial speech to the General Assembly: 'It has not been able to solve all the problems in the world, but the fact is that the United Nations can only be as successful as its members make it. And that is where the question lies. We must admit that in public opinion, in its prestige or influence, the United Nations is declining in view of these important problems which have not been solved. We have not really got down to solving the disarmament problem which has plagued the UN from the beginning. Though some treaties have been made in some stages, we must think of the fact that in places like Vietnam, the United Nations is helpless to carry out any functions or to give assistance to the suffering people there, as in Nigeria and southern parts of the African continent.'

HOW PLANTS AFFECT HUMAN LIFE TO BE DISCUSSED AT U OF M

Plants are not just to be sniffed at. They may well determine the social system and quality of life of man.

On Monday (March 2) the man who believes this will speak at the University of Minnesota. Professor Aaron J. Sharp, a world-travelling botanist and speaker, will discuss the relationship between the plants surviving in an area and the social economies of the men in that area.

His talk, "Biology, Botany, and Our Social Economy," will be given at 3:15 p.m. in the Botany auditorium on the Minneapolis campus. Much of this talk is expected to be based on his observations of both men and plants in travels across the U.S., in the Far East, the Aleutian Islands, Asia and Africa. Man's pollution as it affects the plants which can grow in an area also enters the picture.

The talk, free and open to the public, is sponsored by the University departments of botany and concerts and lectures.

GIVEN A CHOICE, MENTAL PATIENTS
CHOOSE FREE ENTERPRISE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mental patients choose free enterprise over the welfare state when given the choice, a leading psychologist said today (Feb. 27).

Speaking at the University of Minnesota, Professor Teodoro Ayllon of Georgia State University, Atlanta, described the results of work with mental patients at Anna State Hospital in Illinois. Ayllon was formerly director of clinical research at Anna State.

"We knew that our task was to change the behavior of mental patients so that they would behave like 'normal' people," Ayllon said. "The problem was to define just what normal people do. We were confronted with the myth of mental health."

Ayllon and his co-workers finally decided that the closest practical example of normal behavior was that of the hospital attendants. "After all, we reasoned, the attendants are being paid by the state to work here. They do their jobs well. In some sense, this must be what mental health is," he said.

Accordingly, the patients were trained to wash dishes, make beds, prepare meals, work in the laboratory, and to do other things that attendants did. They were carefully and slowly shaped in doing these jobs through the use of tokens as payment. The tokens could later be spent by the patient to buy privileges on the ward, such as extra TV time, candy, pop, or leisure activities.

To test how well the token payment system worked, the therapists tried several variations. One morning, all patients were paid the tokens in advance. Few felt they had to do their jobs because they'd already been paid. At another time, tokens were stopped entirely and all privileges were made freely available to the patients. Many of the patients' bizarre and anti-social behaviors started again.

Asked why they wouldn't work if there were no token payments, a typical answer was, "I may be crazy, but I'm not stupid."

Thus, as it turned out, the mental patients showed the greatest improvement under a free-enterprise type system rather than under various welfare type systems. "The free-enterprise token system," said Ayllon, "allows patients the dignity and freedom to choose their own behavior. Perhaps this is one reason it works so well."

Ayllon said the problem now was to find a place in society for the rehabilitated mental patient. "Our society may not yet be ready for the changes being brought. Mental patients who behave as normally as anyone else after training with the token economy have as much chance of finding a job as a 65-year-old female."

ABORTION DEBATE TO BE HELD AT U OF M

The question of abortion will be debated at the University of Minnesota on Thursday (March 5). Beginning at 7:30 p.m., representatives from two opposing organizations will speak in the Bell Museum of Natural History on the Minneapolis campus.

Representing the Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life will be Dr. Fred Mecklenburg, instructor in obstetrics, and Rev. William Hunt. Representing the Minnesota Council for the Legal Termination of Pregnancy will be Mrs. Catherine Taylor and Dr. Erick Hakanson, associate professor of obstetrics.

The debate is sponsored by the Twin Cities chapter of a new group, Zero Population Growth, Inc., which now numbers over 150, according to Ron Hellenthal, University graduate student and chapter coordinator.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

From MCLTP: About 8,000 abortions per year are performed with legal sanction.

About 1,000,000 abortions per year are performed illegally.

Our current live birth rate is about 3.5 million per year.

During the two-year period of 1964-65, about 50,000 deformed babies were born to women infected with German measles. The 20,000 who survived suffer grave defects.

Last year, in Minnesota, 52 children ranging in age from 11 to 14 gave birth to children.

About 10,000 children each year are severely beaten by parents -- at least 2,500 die as a result. Most are considered unwanted at birth.

A poll conducted in February 1969 revealed that 71% of the people of Minnesota support reform of the abortion law.

From MCCL: "Opposes the violent, destructive, dehumanizing approach represented by abortion on demand or its equivalent."

Favors amending the present Minnesota Statute to provide that any abortions by performed only by a licensed physician; only in a licensed hospital; approved by a hospital committee; that adequate provision be made for recording all abortions performed and for reporting them to a public agency.

That no hospital or person be required to perform an abortion or assist in one...with the right to refuse...on grounds clearly stated.

That if society wishes to popularize legal abortion..."let it forthrightly state that it intends to invite this procedure as a social convenience."

HOPE COMES TO "HOPELESS" MENTAL PATIENTS

by Bill Hafling
University of Minnesota Science Writer

Naked, Johnny squatted on the floor, babbling and splashing in his own urine. Around him, the other men of the Dakota building at Faribault State Hospital screamed, twirled aimlessly, rocked back and forth, or fought with one another until attendants broke them up and put them into isolation.

Labelled "profoundly retarded" many years before, men like Johnny had been institutionalized for life. Another label for the men, ranging in age from 18 to 60, was "hopeless." Many therapies had been tried on them by many experts -- all had failed.

Today, only a year later, Johnny sits proudly at a work table. In front of him is a completed jigsaw puzzle. Some of the men are learning to read. Some are learning work skills. A few are starting to learn how to play a harmonica.

In a year's time, the men have progressed from over half unclothed to over 90 per cent totally clothed and the rest partially clothed. Ninety-four per cent did not talk, now 43 per cent use at least some words correctly. Where 65 per cent could not toilet themselves or didn't care to, 82 per cent now use the toilet without help. Self-feeding has gone up from 40 to 95 per cent. No patients have been placed in isolation for assaultive behavior in over six months.

What happened to change these men's lives so dramatically?

Introduced to Faribault State Hospital by a group of University of Minnesota psychologists, the highly successful "therapy" involved is known as "operant conditioning."

Instead of being a "therapy" in any medical sense, operant conditioning is a means of changing behavior through learning. According to Psychology Professor Travis Thompson, the University's chief consultant in the program, "behavior is acquired as a result of reinforcing or rewarding desired responses. Behavior is weakened or eliminated by allowing the responses to go unreinforced."

Although the technique was first discovered and described by Professor B.F. Skinner, formerly of the University of Minnesota, in 1938, it was not used with mental patients until the late 1950's. Generally successful since then, the technique has not been used on a larger scale until recently. It is more broadly referred to as a type of "behavior modification," "behavior therapy" or "behavior management."

Requiring a great deal of skill on the part of the "therapist," the deceptively simple-looking technique depends on the use of "reinforcers." According to Dr. Thompson, "a reinforcer is anything which will make it more likely that an individual's act will be repeated in the future."

With profoundly retarded men like Johnny, marshmallows, soft drinks and candy, as well as praise from hospital technicians, work as reinforcers. For less severely retarded patients, tokens work well as reinforcers. These patients later exchange the tokens for various items or extra recreational activities which they may choose.

In all cases, reinforcing the more positive, progress-making behaviors tends to crowd out the negative behaviors. Men like Johnny learn skills at the expense of time spent in bizarre behavior. They also learn hope.

ENVIRONMENT TO BE SUBJECT OF 'U' CHANNEL TWO SERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Environmental News," a series of magazine-format programs with interviews, news commentary and a what-you-can-do feature, will begin Tuesday, March 10, on the University of Minnesota Television Hour.

Weekly programs will be broadcast from 9 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays through June 2 on KTCA-TV, channel 2.

Randall Moody, University graduate student in journalism and former news director for the American Forces Vietnam Network (six radio and eight television stations serving troops in Vietnam) will act as host and anchorman.

The initial program will include live interviews with Steve Gadler of the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency and representatives of the University's new Pollution Report Center.

Ralph Nader and Paul Ehrlich, author of "The Pollution Bomb," will be interviewed later in the series, according to planners.

'U' PROF, STUDENTS TO EXCAVATE IN ISRAEL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A University of Minnesota faculty member and student volunteers from the University will participate this summer in the excavation of an ancient town in northern Israel.

Thomas Kraabel, assistant professor of religious studies in the classics department, has been named a member of the core staff for the Khirbet Shema project sponsored by the American Schools of Oriental Research and the Smithsonian Institution. Other members of the staff are from Harvard, Duke and Drew universities and Hebrew Union College in Jerusalem.

A total of 20 student volunteers will be accepted for the project.

Three seasons of field work are projected at the presently unexcavated site of Khirbet Shema, "the Ruins of (Rabbi) Shammai," a Galilean town which dates back to at least 100 B.C. The first season will be from July 13 to Aug. 14 of this year.

Applications for student volunteers will be accepted through April 1 in 311B Folwell hall on the University campus. Academic credit may be granted through arrangements with Professor Kraabel. Some expenses for volunteers are paid for by the sponsoring schools which include Harvard, Duke, Drew, Dropsie University in Philadelphia, Luther College in Decorah, Iowa, and the University of Minnesota.

DUPONT COMPANY
GRANTS U OF M $15,000

DuPont Company, a well known manufacturer of chemical products, has granted the University of Minnesota $15,000. The department of chemical engineering has received $5,000 and the chemistry department $10,000.

The "no-strings-attached," unrestricted funds are used by these departments for graduate student support, equipment and supplies. DuPont has granted such money to these University departments for many years. This year, DuPont announced that its over-all educational aid program had been increased from $2.3 million to over $2.5 million.

"These grants from private industry have long been a major source of funds to scientific endeavors at universities," Professor Neal Amundson, head of chemical engineering, said today. "With increasing cutbacks in our chief source of research funds---the federal government---private funds such as these from DuPont are especially welcome."

PRESIDENT MOOS NAMES COMMISSION TO STUDY 'MINNESOTA DAILY' SUPPORT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

John Fischer, contributing editor and former editor-in-chief of Harper's magazine, and Philip Potter, chief of the Washington bureau for the Baltimore Sun and one-time student editor of the Minnesota Daily, are among 17 people named today by University of Minnesota President Malcolm Moos to form a commission to study support arrangements for the Minnesota Daily.

The commission, which will begin functioning immediately, includes four professional journalists, a University administrator, six faculty members and six students.

Professor Thomas Lewis of the Law School was appointed chairman and Merle Schneidewind, vice president for legislative affairs of the Minnesota Student Association (MSA), was named associate chairman.

President Moos was directed to appoint the commission at the Feb. 13 meeting of the University Board of Regents. The Regents requested that a commission be established to study support arrangements for the Minnesota Daily and to report back to the Regents on a plan to place the Daily on a self-supporting basis by the fall of 1973, as well as any alternative plans which the commission may wish to submit.

In addition to Fischer and Potter, James Vance, publisher of the Worthington (Minn.) Globe, and Charles Withers, editor of the Rochester (Minn.) Post-Bulletin, also were named.

The University administrator on the commission is Duane Scribner, director of the department of University relations. Faculty members include Robert Jones, director of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication; Harold Chase, professor of political science; Robert Holloway, professor of business; Ronald L. Phillips, assistant professor of agronomy and plant genetics; James Werntz, director of the Center for Curriculum Studies; and Lewis.

In a communication addressed to the new members of the commission, President Moos suggested they consider the following questions:

1. What has been the historic role of the Daily and what is its appropriate role today?
2. What is necessary for the Daily to carry out that role?
3. What alternative possibilities are there for supporting a newspaper such as the Daily?
4. What are the problems and advantages of each? Does one plan appear to the commission to be more effective than others?
5. In the event the Daily does not fulfill the campus newspaper role under a new plan, what should be done about the campus community news function?
6. What will be the implications for other publications under the jurisdiction of the Board of Publications if a change is made in the role and support of the Daily?

MEN'S, WOMEN'S LIBERATION TO HOLD SYMPOSIUM AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Why do so many men die of heart attacks?

According to some proponents of women's liberation, it is because men feel the undivided pressure of running the world, supporting the family and making the major decisions. In the interest of both men and women, these responsibilities should be equalized, they say.

Men's and women's liberation will be the topic of a two-day symposium at the University of Minnesota. On Tuesday and Wednesday (March 10 and 11), a Chicago-based team will conduct lab sessions and general information discussions in room 320 Coffman Union.

"Look Out Girlie! Women's Liberation Is Gonna Get Your Mama," a sound and slide show filmed at Berkeley, Calif., will be used as a conference opener, describing some of the thoughts and feelings behind women's liberation. It will be shown from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Wednesday (March 11) will feature a marathon lab session with Cokey Boss, recently a leader of a series of Femininity Labs for Metropolitan Women, beginning at 11 a.m. in room 320 Coffman Union.

The symposium is being sponsored by the University YWCA. Anyone interested in having the slide show presented Tuesday or Wednesday to his group should contact the YWCA at 373-2511.

'U' WOMEN'S COURSES
SET FOR MACPHAIL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Spring women's courses offered by the University of Minnesota will be in family studies, psychology, writing, study skills, and contemporary American life.

All five will be taught at MacPhail Center, 1128 LaSalle ave. in downtown Minneapolis, beginning in late March and early April.

Several carry University credits and are taught by instructors who have been popular with students in similar courses in the past, according to Mrs. Louise Roff, director of continuing women's education.

Mrs. Elizabeth Peterson, parent and family life education coordinator for the General Extension Division, will teach Family Studies 25A, on parenthood, Monday mornings March 30 through June 1. The course carries two credits.

The extension division counseling director, Vera Schletzer, will discuss the application of psychology to living in a three-credit course, Psychology 1A. Class meetings will be Friday mornings April 3 through June 5.

Humanities 23, American Life, a three-credit course, will be taught by Denis O'Pray, teaching associate in American studies, Thursday mornings April 2 through June 4.

Non-credit workshops in writing (Monday mornings April 6 through May 4) and reading and study skills (Tuesday and Thursday mornings April 7 through 23) also are part of this spring's expanded program at MacPhail.

"We're offering more courses at MacPhail because it's easily accessible by freeway to women in St. Paul and the suburbs, and the parking situation is good," Mrs. Roff says.

"Early registration is important since enrollment may fill up for any of the classes or, if a minimum number of women do not register, a class may be cancelled," she says.

Information on tuition and registration is available from the General Extension Division's department of continuing education for women in 310 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, 55455; telephone 373-9743.

'PORTUGUESE WORLD' TO BE SUBJECT OF
'U' SPRING SERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Portugal -- a country with two large African colonies and an incapacitated dictator -- will be the subject of a spring lecture series at the University of Minnesota beginning April 8.

"The Portuguese World" will feature lecturers from Harvard and Vanderbilt Universities and the University of Chicago, as well as Minnesota.

"Portugal was the first European state to bring a Western influence to the non-Western world, and Brazil---the largest country in South America---has a Portuguese culture," says William C. Rogers, director of the University's World Affairs Center, explaining why Portugal was chosen as the topic for the annual spring lecture series.

"Portugal has several remaining African colonies, including the extraordinarily large colonies of Angola and Mozambique, and in all of them, revolutionary independence movements are brewing in varying degrees of intensity. There's a lot stirring in the African parts of the Portuguese world.

"In addition, Portuguese dictator Antonio Salazar has been incapacitated by illness, so that new developments may be expected from inside Portugal as well."

The series will cover the history of the Portuguese world from early Portuguese overseas exploration to the present, in six Wednesday-evening sessions at 8 p.m. in Mayo auditorium.

General admission to the series is $6 ($1.50 for individual sessions); or $5 for University staff and students. General admission and student-staff tickets will be available in 150 Nicholson hall (Minneapolis campus) or at the door; and general admission tickets will be on sale at Dayton's.

Co-sponsors of the series are the General Extension Division's World Affairs Center and department of evening and special classes; the James Ford Bell Library; and the department of Spanish and Portuguese. The Gulbenkian Foundation, devoted to the study of Portuguese culture, is supporting the series.

Topics and lecturers for the series are:

- April 8 -- "Beginning of Overseas Expansion," Francis Rogers of the department of Romance languages and literature at Harvard University.
- April 15 -- "The Evolution of the Portuguese Empire," Donald Lach of the history department at the University of Chicago.
- April 22 -- "Colonial Brazilian Society," Stuart Schwarz, visiting professor in the history department at the University of California, Berkeley.
- April 29 -- "The African Provinces," Allen Isaacman, history instructor at the University of Minnesota.
- May 6 -- "Contemporary Brazil," Werner Baer of the economics department at Vanderbilt University.
- May 13 -- "African Influences on the Portuguese World," Russell Hamilton, associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese at Minnesota.

'U' CHAPTER OF AAUP
DEPLORES FRIDAY VIOLENCE

The following statement was passed Monday (March 9) by the executive committee of the Minnesota chapter of the American Association of University Professors:

"We deplore the violence which occurred on the University of Minnesota Minneapolis campus last Friday (March 6) at the end of a demonstration. Destruction of equipment, breaking of windows, and tearing up and burning of files are acts of vandalism that are incompatible with the spirit of a university. We especially deplore the violation of academic freedom in the destruction of research data and a student's thesis. Free inquiry, without intimidation of any kind, and reasoned discussion characterize a university. Acts of violence such as those last Friday are abhorrent to all who cherish the ideals of free inquiry and reasoned discussion.

If any individuals who took part in the vandalism can be identified, we expect prompt proceedings to be undertaken against them.

"We believe that the University administration should take immediate and effective steps to prevent any such interference with the academic process from occurring again."

BOARD OF PUB PRESIDENT SAYS
'U' DOESN'T 'SUBSIDIZE' DAILY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Objecting to use of the word "subsidy" in reference to the University of Minnesota's financial connections with the Minnesota Daily, Stephan Modan, president of the Board in Control of Student Publications, today issued the following statement:

"Student and faculty subscriptions to the Minnesota Daily are being incorrectly described in the press as 'subsidiaries.' The use of this term, tainted as it is by political usage, prevents the public from getting a truthful picture of the publication of the Minnesota Daily.

"Money is paid by students for subscriptions under authority of (1) the constitution of the Board in Control of Student Publications, which is approved (and can be disapproved) by campus-wide student vote; and (2) the University fees committee, a subcommittee of the Senate Administrative Committee, which always is open to student petition and always consults the Assembly Committee on Student Affairs. (A majority of this latter committee are students, including the leaders of the Minnesota Student Association). The fees committee has failed to grant some requests by the Daily for a change in subscription prices.

"The fact is that students authorize the University, in this way, to collect their subscriptions to the Minnesota Daily in advance at the current rate of $1.15 for three months (and they can petition the fees committee and subsequently the Board of Regents to terminate the authorization at any time.) The study called for by the Board of Regents raises the question of termination---by the Regents without appropriate student consultation---of the right of the students to subscribe in this way.

"Therefore, subscription money is paid by students to the Daily, not by the

University, and it is NOT a subsidy.

"As to the money paid by the University for faculty subscriptions, the facts here also are misstated in the press. The $10,000 paid by the University for faculty subscriptions is, in reality, a package arrangement whereby the University's Official Bulletin for faculty and students is printed and distributed at a considerable saving in time and money. At the special reduced advertising rate granted to the University and student organizations ($1.68 per inch last year against an open rate of $2.24; $1.89 this year against an open rate of $2.52) the Official Bulletin occupied space worth $5,200 last year and, at the present level of usage, will amount to $5,800 this year. This leaves $4,200 to $4,800 for 3,000 nine-month faculty subscriptions (so that the teachers and staff can read the Official Bulletin), a rate one-third of that the students pay!

"The University likes this way of distributing its Official Bulletin so well that it added to it this year the advance agendas (dockets) of the University Senate and the Twin Cities Assembly....

"We appreciate the interest of the newspapers and broadcasting stations in the University and in the Minnesota Daily. As the public becomes better acquainted with this genuine student operation, we predict it will come to like it more rather than less."

TIME EDITOR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Hedley Donovan, editor-in-chief of Time Inc., will speak in Minneapolis Tuesday and Wednesday, March 17 and 18.

"Editors and Managers for the Early 70s" will be the topic for his talk at a 6:30 p.m. dinner meeting of the Twin Cities chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) March 17 in the Minnesota Alumni Club of the Sheraton-Ritz Hotel; and for his public speech at 10 a.m. March 18 in Room 850 Social Science building, University of Minnesota West Bank area.

Donovan's appearances are part of the Distinguished Visitor Series sponsored by SAM and the University of Minnesota Graduate School of Business Administration.

Donovan, 55, is a native of Brainerd, Minn., and attended public schools in Minneapolis. In 1934, he graduated from the University of Minnesota magna cum laude, with a bachelor's degree in history. In 1945 he joined Time Inc. as a staff writer for Fortune magazine. In April 1964, he succeeded Henry R. Luce as editor-in-chief of all Time Inc. publications.

In addition to Time, Life, Fortune and Sports Illustrated, Time Inc. publishes the international editions of Time and Life and Time-Life Books. Its subsidiaries include Time-Life Broadcast, Inc.; Printing Developments, Inc.; and EastTex Incorporated.

Donovan is a trustee of the University of Minnesota Foundation, New York University and the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. During his senior year at Minnesota he was editorial chairman of the Minnesota Daily. He has a bachelor's degree from Oxford University and honorary doctorates from several colleges and universities. In 1956 he received an Outstanding Achievement Award from the University of Minnesota. Prior to joining Time Inc., Donovan worked as a reporter for the Washington Post from 1937 to 1942 and as an intelligence officer in the Navy from 1942 to 1945. He is a member of the Board of Visitors of the Air Force Systems Command. In 1958 he was a member of a three-man team sent to the Soviet Union as official American observers of the Supreme Soviet election.

ECOLOGY GROUPS TO RETURN
'NO RETURN' BOTTLES TO CANADA DRY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Canada Dry Bottling Co., a "blatantly no-return organization," will be singled out for a nationwide bottle mail-in Wednesday (March 11)---an action initiated by two Minnesota and Wisconsin ecology groups.

According to Wes Fisher, a graduate student in ecology at the University of Minnesota, other major bottling companies such as Coca Cola, 7-Up and Pepsi Cola have retained returnable bottles, thus saving the taxpayer the cost of garbage crews to collect them and the valuable land that would be used to dispose of them.

"No-return bottles, such as Canada Dry uses, are also a waste of the limited fuel-oil and coal needed to make them," Fisher said.

Canada Dry, which has branches across the nation, including one at 3530 E. 28th St. in Minneapolis, will be sent bottles from ecology groups in Louisiana and California, as well as from Students for Environmental Defense at the University of Minnesota and the Ecology Action group at River Falls State College in Wisconsin.

There will also be a group of students at the Minneapolis branch of Canada Dry at noon Wednesday to present company officials with some of the collected bottles.

Fisher explained that the bottles the students have collected will be carefully wrapped for mailing so that postal employees won't be cut, and mailed to the company with no return address. The action will be repeated the eleventh of each month.

Twin Cities high school groups are also expected to take part in the action.

'U' ROTC COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS
UNITS UNDER EXTENSION DIVISION;
DEFENSE DEPT. SHOULD PAY COSTS

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11)

A University of Minnesota committee on the relationship between the University and the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) today presented the results of its 11-month study with a recommendation that the University continue its formal tie with the corps, but one that would be much modified from the past.

The report recommends that all four ROTC units (Army, Navy and Air Force on the Twin Cities campus and Air ROTC on the Duluth campus) be placed as programs under the General Extension Division. It also recommends that the Department of Defense pay the total cost of having ROTC units on the campus and that the University "cease immediately the inclusion of military personnel in the ceremonial occasions of the University."

According to Regents' Professor E. Adamson Hoebel, chairman of the 16-man student-faculty committee, a majority of the committee concurred on all points except the recommended location of ROTC. (One student cast a dissenting vote on the entire report.) A minority report recommends that the Duluth ROTC unit remain as a regular department of the Duluth campus, administratively responsible to the academic dean, and that the three Twin Cities units be placed in the College of Liberal Arts, possibly in the School of Public Affairs, where interaction between ROTC and the liberal arts curriculum could be maximized.

At present all three units on the Twin Cities campus are located directly under the vice president for academic administration, the only programs so located on a continuing basis.

The committee also reports that though it could find no legal requirement for having ROTC at the University, this was not in itself an argument for its discontinuation.

Bearing in mind the "uncomfortable necessity that the United States must maintain a stable and effective military force," the University "carries a clear responsibility to do all it can to ensure that a component of military officers have experienced the best we can offer in higher education," the report says. It further states that "we believe the University has a liberalizing influence on the potential military officer."

In making its specific recommendations, the report notes that "although there has been a continuing change and improvement in the ROTC programs, too much control of on-campus course offerings, faculty recruitment and student evaluation remains in the hands of the Department of Defense."

Other recommendations are:

* That the Standing ROTC Committee be replaced by an executive committee made up of faculty and student members with active responsibility for evaluating and developing ROTC programs, assigning proper academic credit to ROTC classes and reviewing nominations for officers to be assigned to the University as staff members in the programs. Recommendations would be transmitted to the dean of the General Extension Division and then to the vice president for academic administration. This is the usual manner in which University staff is certified.

This recommendation carries with it the suggestion that current ROTC courses such as drill, weaponry and platoon leadership be presented as outside activities or phases of summer camp or cruise programs and carry no academic credit. The committee notes that ROTC programs have been moving in that direction.

* That students, many of whom register for ROTC in their senior year of high school, be allowed to drop out of the program during their first two years at the University without suffering any penalties.

* That ROTC faculty at the University on a three-year tour of duty be given the title of visiting professor, or visiting associate or assistant professor, instead of the "unqualified professorial rank" now assigned.

* That ROTC "space assignments for staff and operations be reviewed through procedures which apply to all University programs."

* That the University initiate discussion within the Big Ten and other appropriate inter-university bodies "to examine the possibility of cooperation in negotiating recommended changes with the Department of Defense."

The committee pulled its information from testimony from the University attorney, members of the ROTC staff, students, faculty and published documents along with responses to a questionnaire sent to University deans concerning current college practices with regard to ROTC courses.

The report was presented to University President Malcolm Moos who will determine the next course of action, which could include sending it to the University Senate or the Board of Regents.

In the 1968-69 academic year, the University provided $45,526 for "modest support of civil service staff, routine office supplies and equipment, and maintenance and upkeep of ROTC physical space."

The report refers to the "relatively limited appeal" ROTC programs have for University of Minnesota students. While ROTC programs at the University "rank noticeably above the average in quality of commissioned officers and in the ratio of commissions earned relative to total enrollment, it ranks in the bottom ranges in numbers enrolled and commissioned." As an example, in 1968-69 the 175 students enrolled in the University's Army ROTC program accounted for 12 thousandths of one per cent (0.012%) of the 148,336 students enrolled in Army ROTC across the nation. "Navy and Air Force enrollments at the University are smaller in absolute numbers, but larger relative to national totals."

'U' HIGH SCHOOL MUSICIANS' PROJECT
SETS AUDITIONS FOR FIFTH SUMMER

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Auditions for the 1970 High School Musician's Project at the University of Minnesota will be held Saturday, April 18, on the Minneapolis campus.

Those who are unable to come to the campus may submit tapes through April 30, according to Charles Schwartz, associate professor of music and coordinator of the annual project which is scheduled for June 21 through July 19.

Previously limited to Minnesota high school students in the summer between their junior and senior years, the project is now open to all high school students (including those who will graduate in June) from any state, though "first consideration will be given to outstanding Minnesota musicians," Schwartz says.

Eligibility also has been extended to include students who have attended previous projects, for whom there will be a new, advanced program.

Auditioning students will be competing for 153 positions: 46 in the band, 47 in the orchestra, 48 in the chorus, 6 for piano instruction and, for the first time, 6 for harp instruction.

Professor Howard Swan of Occidental College in Los Angeles, Calif., will act as a vocal clinician during the third week of the project, and conduct a workshop for state vocal teachers.

Acceptance by audition automatically carries a scholarship for the cost of instruction, so that students pay only board and room costs, or $140, with additional scholarship funds available to pay all or part of that if necessary.

"In effect, we guarantee that no qualified student will be unable to attend because of his financial situation," Schwartz says.

Sponsors of the project are the Summer Session and the departments of music and music education.

Applicants may write to Schwartz in the music department, Scott hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455.

FAMILY VALUES TO BE DISCUSSED IN 'U' SYMPOSIUM, LECTURE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Family values will be discussed by home economists, anthropologists, educators, artists, sociologists, psychologists and philosophers from leading American universities and colleges at the Clara Brown Army symposium to be held Sunday through Tuesday, March 15-17, at the University of Minnesota and the Northstar Inn in Minneapolis.

Alvin L. Schorr, director of the Income Maintenance Project at Brandeis University and former Health, Education and Welfare Department official, will open the symposium with a public lecture at 8:30 p.m. Sunday in Mayo auditorium on the Minneapolis campus. "Family Values and Social Policy in 1975-2000" will be his topic.

Sessions Monday and Tuesday at the Northstar Inn will be open only to registered symposium participants. Speakers will include Kenneth Boulding, recent past president of the American Economics Association and leading contemporary writer on social economic problems, and his wife Elise Boulding, University of Colorado sociologist; William Frankena, professor of ethics at the University of Michigan; Robin Williams, Jr., and Nicholas Tavuchis, both Cornell University sociologists; Marvin Opler, anthropologist from the State University of New York at Buffalo; and Richard K. Bell, a psychologist in the Child Research Branch of the National Institute of Mental Health.

University of Minnesota faculty members speaking at the symposium will include Robert Beck, professor of education; Professor Ira Reiss, director of the Family Study Center; H. Reid Hastie, art education; and Marjorie Brown, home economics.

The symposium is sponsored by the Clara Brown Army Research and Lecture Fund Committee in cooperation with the University's School of Home Economics, College of Education, and Family Study Center. Clara Brown Army was a University professor of home economics education from 1915 to 1953 when she retired.

The purpose of the symposium is to stimulate research relative to family values by providing opportunity for a free exchange of ideas across disciplinary lines.

TTT PROJECT RECEIVES HALF-MILLION DOLLAR GRANT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A $500,000 grant for the Twin Cities Training of Teacher Trainers (TTT) Project has been awarded from the U.S. Office of Education for the fiscal year beginning July 1, Charles R. Bruning, project director, announced today.

The project has also received a commitment from the U.S. Office of Education that funding will be provided for an additional two years, Bruning said.

The basic purpose of TTT is the improvement of central-city education through improvement of the pre-service and in-service education of school personnel.

TTT was first funded in the Twin Cities in December, 1968. Last fall 35 professors, teachers and teacher-aides began working in the program, which includes classes at the University of Minnesota and actual work with children in the inner-city schools of St. Paul and Minneapolis. The new grant will make it possible to continue the program and to increase the number of participants.

Cooperating in the project are the University of Minnesota, the Minneapolis and St. Paul public schools, the communities in Minneapolis and St. Paul which are represented on the TTT Board of Directors, the Minnesota State College System, the State Department of Education and several private schools in the state.

CASHMAN REQUESTS HEARING ON SDS PARTICIPATION IN 'U' CAMPUS DISRUPTION

(FOR RELEASE AT 5:30 P.M. WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11)

Paul Cashman, vice president for student affairs at the University of Minnesota, said last night (Tuesday, March 10) that he has asked for a hearing on charges that the campus chapter of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) participated as an organization in last Friday's attack on the office of the department of criminal justice studies.

Cashman cited "a publicity flyer alleged to have been distributed today by the SDS"...which appears "to have confirmed its role as a participant in the incident." The incident included the breaking of windows, tearing and burning of papers and scattering of files.

The request for a hearing went to the Twin Cities Campus Assembly Committee on Student Affairs, headed by Speech Professor George Shapiro. Under the University's Policy on Campus Demonstrations, this committee can conduct its own hearings or can refer the request to the Campus Judiciary Council (a sub-committee of the Assembly Committee), headed by Law Professor John O'Brien.

The hearing would, according to Cashman's letter to Shapiro, "ascertain the role of SDS and, if the facts alleged are confirmed, consider all necessary sanctions."

'U' FILM DEPARTMENT SERVES STATE COMMUNITY

by Lynn Marasco
University News Service

"Community service" is a substantial term at the University of Minnesota's department of audio visual extension: the "community" it serves is the state.

Audio visual extension was a part of the General Extension Division even before the division was formally put together in 1913. Both originated in an effort to extend the University's resources to all Minnesotans.

Around 1910, the department was loaning its 400 slides to groups around the state. Today, some 17,000 films are available for short-term loans at minimum cost.

Described by its director, Assistant Professor Willard Philipson, as "a comprehensive library service in non-print material," the department has "a strong commitment to educational films."

The hastiest glance through the catalogue gives evidence of the fact that "educational" is used in as broad a sense as "community."

In addition to an extensive collection of films on expected subjects such as animals, nature, foreign peoples and places, science and history, there are many films on topics of current national interest -- old age, urban problems, crime, the deterioration of our environment.

Additions to the collection -- usually around 100 titles a month -- keep it up to date, as old titles are weeded out.

Last November, additions included a series on innovations in education (team teaching, flexible scheduling, etc.); a CBS series called "Of Black America:" "Oops!" and "Take A Deep, Deadly Breath," new ecology films; and films with such intriguing titles as "Heritage of the Uncommon Man," "The Evolution of Good and Evil" and "How the Mind Begins."

University faculty members help in the selection of films. "We can be experts in cataloguing and distributing the films, but not always in the subject matter," Philipson says.

Philipson and William C. Rogers, director of the University's World Affairs Center and head of a program of continuing education in urban affairs (both General Extension Division units), recently collaborated on annotated bibliographies on urban and world affairs films.

The urban affairs bibliography, to be available soon, will be the first of its kind, according to Philipson, and of the 231 titles listed, all but six can be found in the University's collection.

Philipson has headed the department since 1966. A native Minnesotan, he came to the University from Northern Illinois University at De Kalb, where he was assistant professor of education and head of a film library. His first job at Minnesota was assigning much of the department's routine work to a new computer.

Although the computer schedules films, writes to confirm or change the dates and, finally, prepares the bill, personal service is not lost.

A reference librarian is available to recommend films to the department's "customers" -- including all the colleges in Minnesota, all the state school systems, such groups as hospitals, churches and businesses, and similar groups in neighboring states.

Anyone interested may write the department at 2037 University ave., Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

REGENTS APPOINT DWYER TO 'U' PLANNING OFFICE

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, MARCH 13)

Donald R. Dwyer, former Minneapolis police chief, was appointed consultant in the University of Minnesota's planning office today by the University Regents.

He has a bachelor's degree from the University of Minnesota and a master's degree from Michigan State University. He is on leave from the Minneapolis police force.

Other appointments made by the Regents at their Friday meeting include the following:

Frederick Siegler as visiting associate professor of philosophy and criminal justice studies, effective March 16. Siegler will teach a new course, "Of Law and Order," offered spring quarter in both the criminal justice studies and philosophy departments. Professor Siegler is currently associate professor and assistant to the provost of the University of Washington. Previously he taught at the University of Chicago. He has a bachelor's degree from Oxford University and a doctor of philosophy degree from Stanford University. He has authored numerous articles for philosophical journals.

Glen Griffith as adjunct professor in the Law School, effective March 16. He is a practicing attorney in Minneapolis and will assist in conducting an estate planning seminar.

Robert G. McKinnell as professor of zoology in the College of Biological Sciences, effective Sept. 16. McKinnell is currently a professor at Tulane University. He received his doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Minnesota in 1959.

Resignations were accepted by the Regents from two University Theatre faculty members. Theodore Herstand, associate professor of speech, communication and theatre arts, has resigned, effective July 17, to accept a position as professor and chairman of the theatre department at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. Maxine Klein, associate professor of speech, communication and theatre arts, has resigned, effective Aug. 21, to become the acting teacher at LaMama repertory theatre in New York City. Mrs. Klein is on a leave of absence from the University for the current academic year.

U REGENTS RECEIVE
REORGANIZATION REPORT FOR HEALTH SCIENCES

(FOR RELEASE AT 10 A.M. FRIDAY, MARCH 13)

ROCHESTER, Minn. -- An external committee report on the structure and reorganization of the University of Minnesota Health Sciences was received here today (Friday, March 13) by the University's Board of Regents.

The 26-page report, containing 16 specific recommendations, was distributed simultaneously to health sciences faculty in the schools of medicine, nursing, dentistry and public health; the colleges of veterinary medicine and pharmacy, and University Hospitals.

Faculty reaction will be channeled through the Council of Health Sciences Deans and Directors back to the University's central administration by early May.

Basically, the report calls for the dissolution of the College of Medical Sciences and the establishment of a chief administrative officer (CAO) with greater responsibility for allocating funds. The report also suggests the CAO have assistants for the basic sciences, continuing education, and affiliations.

The specific recommendations:

Health Sciences Administrative Structure -- The Health Sciences Center should be headed by a chief administrative officer (CAO); the center's budget should not be submitted to the Legislature as a separate line in the University budget; the existing College of Medical Sciences should be dissolved and a dean of the Medical School appointed; the College of Veterinary Medicine should be considered one of the units in the Health Sciences Center; and the director of University Hospitals should report directly to the CAO.

(MORE)

Basic Health Sciences -- A coordinator of basic health sciences, responsible to the CAO, should be appointed; the basic science departments should remain an integral part of the Medical School; their budgets should reflect the extent of their commitment to each health sciences unit, and greater interaction should be encouraged among basic sciences faculty and between the basic sciences and other health sciences units.

Allied Health Sciences -- A School of Allied Health Sciences should be established to develop and train paraprofessional personnel.

University Hospitals -- The hospitals should be an autonomous administrative unit in the Health Sciences Center; a new governing board should replace the present Medical Staff Hospital Council; present restrictions on admission of patients to the Hospitals should be abolished and the Hospitals encouraged to develop improved programs for care of emergency patients and to extend their services in new ways to the community.

Affiliation with hospitals, community agencies, and services -- Affiliation functions should be centralized in the office of the CAO.

Graduate School -- Clinical or research residents and fellows should not be required to register as graduate students of the University.

Continuing Education -- Each health sciences unit should have a director for continuing education who would work with an assistant CAO.

The 11-member committee of distinguished medical educators visited the campus in January and spent four days examining the Health Sciences Center. In their report they noted the public's "concern and urgency regarding efficient, equitable and comprehensive health care for all citizens and the manifest need to provide adequate opportunities for all qualified citizens who wish to pursue health careers."

But it added the discouraging note, "Nowhere in the nation have these two objectives yet been met."

(MORE)

The committee said the Regents must more clearly define goals and priorities for the health sciences program because of changing expectations on the part of the public in the delivery of health care. Such a definition would help all those involved in the health sciences to understand the objectives of the programs and their priorities.

(SEE NEWS RELEASE ON "MAYO FOUNDATION UNDERGRADUATE MEDICAL SCHOOL...")

Statements for release on Friday, March 13

"Together with the development of the Health Sciences program at the University of Minnesota, the agreement reached today marks the accomplishment of two vital steps recommended 13 months ago by the Commission of University Presidents, created by the Mayo Trustees and University Regents to advise them regarding the establishment of an undergraduate medical school in Rochester.

"We at the University of Minnesota look forward with great anticipation to the promise and the challenge of this renewed and enlarged affiliation with the Mayo Foundation. Now we can move on toward achievement of the vision of that Commission -- 'a team of institutions destined to influence medical education not only in Minnesota but in our nation and the world beyond.'"

Malcolm Moos, President
The University of Minnesota

"This affiliation represents a major extension of the cordial and productive relationship that has existed between the University of Minnesota and Mayo Foundation in graduate education for more than half a century. As two of the nation's leaders in medical service, education and research, Mayo and the University share a heavy responsibility to the people of Minnesota. The newly approved affiliation in undergraduate medical education and the allied health sciences should enable the two institutions to serve more effectively together than either could serve alone."

MAYO FOUNDATION UNDERGRADUATE MEDICAL SCHOOL TO BE AFFILIATED WITH UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

(FOR RELEASE AT NOON FRIDAY, MARCH 13)

ROCHESTER, MINN. -- A far-reaching statement of educational affiliation between the University of Minnesota and Mayo Foundation was approved by the University's Board of Regents today.

The statement provides a framework for academic and administrative ties between the University and the proposed Mayo undergraduate medical school, which will be established as soon as sufficient funding has been assured.

This affiliation also may be extended to future Mayo educational programs in the allied health sciences.

The Regents approved the statement during a meeting held in Rochester with Mayo Foundation as host. The Foundation's Board of Trustees had voted approval during their annual meeting here on Feb. 20.

The statement reaffirms the relationship that has existed between Mayo and the University in graduate medical education over the past 55 years and then goes on to make these key points and proposals:

1. Establishment of a University of Minnesota-Mayo Foundation Liaison Committee is called for in the statement. Its membership would consist of University Regents, Mayo Foundation Trustees and central administrative officials of both institutions.

Purpose of this committee would be to coordinate educational efforts of the two institutions to insure the development of the best possible programs of health education for Minnesota.

2. Long-standing and productive relationships now exist between the University and the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine, which conducts graduate degree programs together with residency and internship training at Mayo.

However, "there is need of extension of graduate programs into other fields besides those directly concerned with medicine; for example, allied health sciences ...Existing channels within the two institutions will be able to mount such programs in the future."

3. To foster coordination of medical education activities at the University and at Mayo, "the chief executive officer of the Mayo Medical School, the Director for Education, will be responsible to the President of the University of Minnesota for the development and maintenance of educational programs in Rochester acceptable to the standards required by the Regents..."

"The Director for Education of Mayo Foundation will be appointed by the Regents of the University of Minnesota on recommendation from Mayo Foundation to the President of the University."

4. Mayo undergraduate medical students would be awarded the M.D. degree by the Regents of the University of Minnesota on recommendation of the faculty of the Mayo Medical School. Students in the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine, in the future as in the past, may work toward M.S. and Ph.D. degrees, which are conferred by the Graduate School of the University of Minnesota.

Degree-granting authority is vested in the University of Minnesota's Board of Regents by its Charter of 1851 and perpetuated in the Minnesota State Constitution.

The affiliation is described in the statement as "an equal partnership of responsible, mature, independent institutions," with mutual recognition of each other's independence.

Approval of the affiliation statement today marks another major step toward the establishment of a Mayo undergraduate medical school, which has been in the discussion and planning stages for several years.

(MORE)

Dr. Raymond D. Pruitt, Director for Education, Mayo Foundation, said that present plans call for an enrollment of 160 undergraduate medical students, with expansion of up to 400 as means and facilities permit. Many of the buildings, equipment, and personnel necessary to a medical school already exist in the Mayo setting.

Although no opening date has been set for the school, it is anticipated that the first class of 40 students could be admitted as early as 1972, Dr. Pruitt said.

The school is a priority item in the Mayo Development Program, which seeks $50 million over the next five years to support undergraduate medical education.

Annual operating expenses of the school are estimated at $3.5 million. It is hoped that about $1 million of that amount will come from the Federal and State governments, with the remainder to be provided by private sources, Dr. Pruitt said.

He noted that the development of the proposed Mayo medical school will be separate and distinct from the development of any four or five-year college which might be established in Rochester as part of the state's higher education system. Rochester has been recommended as the site for such a college.

However, as pointed out in the statement of affiliation, "Mayo is vitally concerned in the provision of college-level training in the biological, social and basic sciences in Rochester" because of the relationship of these fields to medicine and the allied health sciences.

REGISTRATION REMAINS OPEN FOR MOORHEAD, MANKATO, MPLS., DULUTH
PARENT, FAMILY LIFE INSTITUTES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Will parents react with anticipation or fear to the thought of raising children in the coming decade?

Mrs. Elizabeth Peterson, coordinator of parent and family life education for the University of Minnesota General Extension Division, hopes to swing the balance toward anticipation in conferences to be held throughout the state in April.

"Parenthood in the 70's" will be the topic for the extension division's annual statewide institute for leaders in parent and family life education, to be held in Moorhead April 8 and 9, in Mankato April 15 and 16, in Minneapolis April 22 and 23, and in Duluth April 29 and 30.

Registration remains open for all four sessions through the Department of Conferences and Institutes, Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455. Tuition is $15.

Speakers, in addition to Mrs. Peterson, will be representatives of local schools, churches, welfare and corrections agencies and the Minnesota Parent - Teacher Association (PTA). The PTA is co-sponsor of the program, with support from the Minnesota Department of Health.

Locations for the institutes are: Moorhead -- Comstock Memorial Union at Moorhead State College; Mankato -- Good Counsel Academy; Minneapolis -- Coffman Union at the University of Minnesota; Duluth -- University Methodist Church (not at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, as originally announced).

PAUL FEELEY EXHIBITION TO OPEN IN 'U' GALLERY

An exhibit of 75 watercolors and drawings by the late American artist Paul Feeley will open Thursday, March 26, in the University Gallery at the University of Minnesota.

"Feeley is a rarely exhibited artist. His influence, importance and contributions to the development of post-sixties painting is only now being investigated," said Allen Davis, acting director of the gallery.

These works were done between 1927, when Feeley was 17 years old, and his death in 1966. The exhibition is circulated by the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. and will be up through April 19.

The University Gallery, located on the third floor of Northrop auditorium, is open Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m. It is also open to concertgoers in Northrop auditorium before concerts and during intermission.

AFT GROUP TAKING APPLICATIONS FOR LABOR EDUCATION APPRENTICESHIP

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Applications for an apprenticeship in labor education are now being accepted by the Workers Education Local 189 of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT).

Martin Duffy, assistant professor in the University of Minnesota Labor Education Service, made the announcement locally. Deadline for application is April 30.

Qualifications for the position are experience with the labor movement and familiarity with its collective bargaining, economic, administrative, legislative and political processes, and an acquaintance with general educational principles.

The man or woman chosen will spend 10 weeks between June and November, 1970, working with a university or international union labor education program and at least one week in Washington, D.C. studying the AFL-CIO education program and meeting education personnel of several international unions.

Union members active in educational activities, teachers interested in adult education, and graduate students in the social sciences might wish to apply for the apprenticeship, Duffy said.

Application forms are available from AFT Local 189, 535 Clemens Dr., Florissant, Mo. 63033.

'U' HOUSING OFFICE
SEEKS SUBLETS

People interested in listing their summer and fall sublets with the University of Minnesota Student Housing Bureau should notify the housing bureau now.

According to Margaret Space, associate director of the bureau, they are interested in apartments, duplexes and houses. The bureau, which serves students and staff, reports "excellent success" with sublets.

"Complaints about the upkeep of a sublet are infrequent," said Miss Space. Housing located anywhere in the Twin Cities and suburbs is needed.

"The freeways make the University accessible from just about any location," said Miss Space.

Students and staff members interested in renting housing for the summer or fall should contact the bureau as soon as possible. Beginning April 1, all housing will be listed at the bureau's three locations: 209 Eddy hall, 131 Clay School (West Bank) and 190 Coffey hall (St. Paul). For information, call the bureau at 373-4184.

HEAD OF SCIENCE FOUNDATION TO SPEAK AT 'U' COMMENCEMENT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The director of the National Science Foundation will speak Saturday (March 21) at the University of Minnesota winter quarter commencement.

William D. McElroy, former biology professor at Johns Hopkins University and former member of President Kennedy's Science Advisory Committee, will address the 900 graduates and their guests at 7:30 p.m. in Northrop auditorium.

(There are approximately 1,150 winter quarter graduates, including those receiving degrees in absentia.)

McElroy is the first biologist to be appointed to a top scientific policy-making position in the federal government.

Receiving degrees will be 755 undergraduates, 95 candidates for master's degrees and 50 candidates for doctor of philosophy degrees.

President Malcolm Moos will speak for the University and confer the degrees and certificates. The Rev. Clyde Steckel, of United Ministries in Higher Education, will deliver the invocation.

Following the ceremony, graduates and their guests have been invited to the President's reception in Coffman Union main ballroom.

STUDENTS SEEKING HOUSING AT 'U' SHOULD INQUIRE NOW

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Students seeking off-campus housing at the University of Minnesota for the fall and summer should inquire now, while the lines are short, and the lists of available housing are long.

The Student Housing Bureau has already compiled lists of sublets and regular rental units for the fall and summer, according to Margaret Space, associate director of the bureau. Beginning in April they will mail these lists to prospective students who have written to the bureau in search of housing. The lists will be updated several times during spring quarter.

"Students shouldn't think that April is too soon to start looking for housing," Miss Space said. "The earlier they start looking, the better chance they have of finding something close and at a reasonable price."

Those seeking housing should write to the Student Housing Bureau, 209 Eddy Hall, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455, or go directly to their office. No appointment is necessary.

MOOS, NAFTALIN NAMED TO STUDY
DATA BANKS, PERSONAL PRIVACY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Malcolm Moos, University of Minnesota president, and Arthur Naftalin, professor in the University's School of Public Affairs and former Minneapolis mayor, have been named consultants to a nationwide study on data banks and personal privacy.

The study is sponsored by the National Academy of Science and the Russell Sage Foundation and is directed by Alan F. Westin, professor of public law and government at Columbia University and author of "Privacy and Freedom."

"Today, computerized data banks are springing up all across the national organizational landscape," Westin said. "Many of these data banks contain highly personal information . . . the information is being relied on heavily by private organizations to decide whether individuals get jobs, credit and insurance and by government agencies to determine whether a citizen should be employed, receive government benefits, or be the subject of regulation or persecution."

The study will be concerned with the problems of record keeping and personal freedom. Present plans call for the study's report to be made to the Computer Science and Engineering Board of the National Academy of Science in 1971.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

A total of 19 persons have been named as advisors for the study. In addition to Moos and Naftalin, they include James Farmer, assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare; Nicholas deB. SCHOOL STAFFING METHOD
TO BE CONFERENCE TOPIC

One of the most controversial topics in current educational methods is the concept of differentiated staffing.

So says Thomas Stark, executive secretary of the Educational Research and Development Council of the Twin Cities Metropolitan Area, Inc., (ERDC) and assistant professor of education at the University of Minnesota.

"Differentiated staffing is a system in which teachers assume specialized teaching roles and are paid according to job responsibilities," Stark says. "It breaks the tradition of the single salary schedule for teachers."

The system received special attention in the Twin Cities metropolitan area with the publication of the Citizens League report called "Stretching the School Salary Dollar."

To provide state educators and interested citizens with basic information on differentiated staffing, a two-day conference is planned for Wednesday and Thursday, March 25 and 26 at Kennedy High School in Bloomington.

Conference speakers will describe differentiated staffing models across the country. Sessions on how the system relates to teachers, administrators, school board members and teacher educators will be included.

The conference is sponsored by the Twin Cities metropolitan area schools through the ERDC. Registration, for a $40 tuition fee, is open through the University General Extension Division's Department of Conferences and Institutes, Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455; telephone 373-3151.

ADULT WOMEN, YOUNG PEOPLE TO DISCUSS 'GENERATION GAP' :

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Both sides of the "generation gap" will be represented in discussions of some of the issues that divide them in a University of Minnesota women's seminar series beginning April 8.

Professor Clarke Chambers of the history department will lead discussions between adult women participants and several college-age students in five Wednesday-afternoon sessions April 8 through May 6 in Coffman Union.

Scheduled discussion topics are "Ethics and Morality"; "Black and Poor -- Culture or Class?"; "The Psychedelic Scene -- Escape From or To Reality?"; "Change -- Revolution or Evolution?", and "Visions of the Future."

Continuing education for women (CEW), a department of the General Extension Division, first offered the seminar last spring, with enthusiastic response from participants, according to Mrs. Louise Roff, CEW director.

Enrollment for the upcoming seminar will be limited to 25. Tuition is $30. Registration can be made with CEW, 315 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455. Telephone 373-9743.

ART SHOWS TO OPEN
IN 2 'U' GALLERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Art exhibitions will open in two University of Minnesota galleries Monday, March 30.

Paintings by Herman Somberg, visiting professor of studio arts, will be shown in the Studio Arts Gallery at 2020 Washington Av. S. March 30 through April 17.

Somberg, who lives in New York City, has taught at Pratt Institute, the School of Visual Arts and Queens College. He has had one-man exhibitions at the Poindexter Gallery in New York in 1964 and 1968 and at the Tirca Carlus Gallery in Provincetown in 1968. His works are in many public and private collections, including those of the Brooklyn Museum and New York University.

Two student artists will exhibit their works in Coffman Gallery March 30 through April 17.

Ceramic sculpture by Jerry Chappelle, a candidate for his master of fine arts degree, will be shown with paintings by Robert Meyer, a dental student.

A retrospective exhibit of drawings and watercolors by the late American artist Paul Feeley is now in the University Gallery in Northrop auditorium through April 19.

All three galleries are open to the public with no admission charge. The Studio Arts Gallery is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. There will be a public opening for the Somberg show from 3 to 5 p.m. March 30. Coffman Gallery is open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. VIETNAM VETERANS TO DISCUSS WAR
ON 'U' TELEVISION HOUR SERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Vietnam veterans describe the changes brought about in a man who is trained to kill and the uselessness of rules protecting the lives of Vietnamese civilians and prisoners in the first of three upcoming University of Minnesota Television Hour programs.

Twin Cities area men of many styles of life and attitudes toward war were interviewed for "Faces of Vietnam," to be broadcast on KTCA-TV, channel 2, from 9 to 9:30 p.m. March 27 and April 3 and 10.

"Killing is as low as you can go," one man says. "It's uncivilized. What is the use of having rules?"

Some South Vietnamese women, children and old men carry grenades, plant mines and, in general, are as dangerous to an American soldier as any Viet Cong soldier, according to a general consensus among many of the men.

Prisoners seriously hinder movements that must be swift and silent, and may be killed for that reason, it is suggested by several of the men, one of whom points out the irony in trying to kill healthy enemy soldiers and trying to keep wounded prisoners alive.

Relationships with the people of Vietnam, Vietnamese attitudes observed by the men, and the question of whether or not the United States should be involved in the war are among the topics for discussion in following programs.

According to Ralph Joyce, a California high school teacher presently on leave, the series writer and producer, the final program will include a clinical psychologist or psychiatrist speaking on "the brutalization of American youth."

1969 TAX REFORM ACT TO BE SUBJECT OF CONTINUING LEGAL EDUCATION COURSE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The tax reform act of 1969 will be the subject of a rescheduled continuing legal education short course to be held April 23 through 25 at the Holiday Inn Central in Minneapolis.

The two and one-half day course was originally planned for early in March.

General practitioners, as well as tax specialists, can benefit from the program, according to planners, since the reform act will affect nearly all their taxpaying clients.

A faculty of 19 from Minnesota, North Dakota and Wisconsin will discuss charitable foundations and charitable giving and other topics affecting both individuals and corporations.

Sponsors of the program are the Minnesota State Bar Association and its Section on Tax Law and the University of Minnesota General Extension Division, with cooperation from the North Dakota Bar Association.

A copy of the 319-page study guide prepared by the American Bar Association's Section on Taxation will be provided with payment of each $40 registration fee.

Registration information is available from the Department of Continuing Legal Education, 338 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455; telephone 373-5386.

'RADICAL' BISHOP TO SPEAK AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Episcopal Bishop C. Edward Crowther, director of church and campus relations for the Alliance for Labor Action, will give a special lecture Thursday, April 2, at 10:15 a.m. in Northrop auditorium.

In his speech, "Violence and Repression: The Personal Dilemma," Bishop Crowther will talk about racial oppression and its relationship to violence. He is internationally known as the bishop who was banned from his diocese in South Africa because of his stand against racial segregation.

In his position with the Alliance for Labor Action, Crowther is the first bishop to be hired by labor and has been entrusted by Walter Ruether to assist in reactivating the social conscience of the American labor movement, and to help build new coalitions for social change.

The Northrop program is sponsored by the University Episcopal Center and the department of concerts and lectures. Bishop Crowther also will present the Keeler Memorial Lectures at the University Episcopal Center on March 31 and April 1 and 2.

All lectures are free and open to the public.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Bishop Crowther, 40, came to the United States from England in 1958. In 1964 he went to South Africa as Dean of the Anglican Cathedral in Kimberly, and was elected bishop after one year. Because of militant opposition to the apartheid policies of South Africa he was harrassed by the police and banned from all African reserves in his diocese. In one incident, Crowther defied the ban and delivered truckloads of food to starving South Africans who had been dispossessed of their homes.

Most recently he was among those churchmen arrested last November 13 as they attempted to celebrate a Mass for Peace at the Pentagon.

BIOPHYSICS PROFESSOR TO TALK ABOUT
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

What affect does biophysics have on the designing of string instruments?

This will be the subject of a special lecture-demonstration (Wednesday)

April 1 at 8 p.m. in Mayo Memorial auditorium.

Michael Kasha, director of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics, Florida State University, will speak on "A New Look at the History and Design of String Instruments: Guitar, Viola and Violin." Kasha has taken the principles of accoustical engineering and used them to redesign string instruments.

Following the lecture, Jeffrey Van, University of Minnesota music instructor, and Gaetano Molieri, member of the Minnesota Orchestra, will give demonstration recitals on a redesigned guitar and viola.

Sponsored by the departments of chemistry, music and concerts and lectures, the program is free and open to the public.

LEADING SCANDINAVIAN LITERATURE SCHOLAR
ALRIK GUSTAFSON DIES AT 66

(FOR IMMEDIATE USE)

One of the world's leading scholars in the field of Scandinavian literature, Professor Alrik Gustafson of the University of Minnesota, died Tuesday (March 24) in Miller Hospital, St. Paul. He had suffered a stroke earlier this week.

Dr. Gustafson, 66, who joined the University faculty in 1939, was chairman of the department of Scandinavian studies from 1950 to the present. He also was director of the Center for Northwest European Language and Area Studies at the University.

Author of the comprehensive "History of Swedish Literature" and "Six Scandinavian Novelists" as well as many articles, Dr. Gustafson currently was working on two books, one of them on the Swedish playwright and novelist August Strindberg, the other on his friend, Swedish novelist Pär Lagerkvist. He once held a Guggenheim fellowship for research on Strindberg and had spent several years in Sweden.

Among the many honors he had received for his work were the Pioneer Medal given him by Gustav V, King of Sweden, and a knighthood in the Royal Order of the North Star from King Gustav VI. In 1962 he received the Henrik Schuck Award from the Swedish Academy for his "History of Swedish Literature." He represented American academic and theatrical life at the centennial celebration of Strindberg's birth, in Stockholm in 1949.

"In Professor Gustafson the University, as well as the field of Scandinavian literature throughout the world, has lost a valuable teacher and scholar as well as a fine human being," Dean E.W. Ziebarth of the College of Liberal Arts said today.

"At the time of his death Professor Gustafson was writing a definitive study of Strindberg, and he had intended to spend spring quarter in Stockholm working on the manuscript."

Because of his reputation in the field of Scandinavian studies, Minnesota was the only institution in the country to receive federal support to set up its Center for Northwest European Language and Area Studies, begun in 1965.

Born April 23, 1903, in Sioux City, Iowa, Professor Gustafson held undergraduate and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Chicago and taught at Cornell University four years before joining the Minnesota faculty.

He is survived by his wife, Cleyonne, of 5314 Oliver Ave. S., Minneapolis; and by two brothers and two sisters. Burial will be private. A memorial service will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, April 4, in Lakewood Chapel of Lakewood Cemetery.

Memorials are preferred to the University of Minnesota Memorial Fund.

EXPERT ON RELIGION, POLITICS
TO SPEAK AT 'U' APRIL 3

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Robert N. Bellah, an expert on the relationship between politics and religion, will speak at the University of Minnesota Friday, April 3.

"The Social Sciences and the Academic Study of Religion" is the topic for his free public lecture at 7:30 p.m. in Mayo auditorium.

Bellah is chairman of the Center for Japanese and Korean Studies and a professor of sociology and comparative studies at the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author of numerous articles on religion and politics in the United States and on East Asian religions. With William G. McLoughlin he edited "Religion in America," published by Houghton Mifflin in 1968 and later published as a paperback.

Bellah's lecture at the University is sponsored by the departments of concerts and lectures, sociology, philosophy, East Asian languages and classics and the Minnesota Conference on Christianity in Higher Education.

STATE INTERNSHIPS PROVE ATTRACTIVE FOR MED GRADUATES

Minnesota is a popular state for graduating seniors of this nation's medical schools.

According to the National Intern Matching Program, 74 of this year's University of Minnesota Medical School graduates have accepted internships in the state and another 119 graduating seniors from other states will also be coming here July 1.

Of the University's 174 Medical School seniors 100 will be going out of state, mainly to California. This means Minnesota will have a net gain of 19 doctors. Studies indicate doctors tend to practice in the state where they have their post-graduate education.

In the National Intern Matching Program graduating medical seniors list their internship preferences; the participating hospitals do the same, and the program's computer does the rest. Eighty-five per cent of the Minnesota seniors got either their first or second choice.

Minnesota, while ranking 20th in population, ranked 9th in the number of interns received. States receiving more interns were California, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Massachusetts, Michigan, and Texas. Neighboring states and the number of interns matched are North Dakota, 0; South Dakota, 15; Iowa, 51; Nebraska, 59; and Wisconsin, 111.

NO CHEMICALS, NO SPRAYS IN FOOD SOLD BY 'ECO-OP'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

An Ecological Cooperative formed less than a month ago to buy organically grown, unsprayed foods in bulk is already growing so well itself that it's seeking new quarters.

The non-profit "eco-op" was started by Karen Lofgren, a recent University of Minnesota anthropology graduate, and Karim Ahmed, a co-chairman of the University's Environmental Teach-In "Festival of Life" Week and a founder of the University Pollution Report Center.

The cooperative has now become one of several on-going community-involvement programs created in conjunction with the University's observance of the national Environmental Teach-in April 21-27.

Some 25 members of the cooperative -- University students, staff and faculty, and other members of the Twin Cities community -- received their first delivery of food last week.

The shipment included fruits and vegetables from California; rolled oats, flour, rice and beans from North Dakota, and cheese from Wisconsin.

"It's very difficult to find food grown by ecologically responsible farmers in the Twin Cities area," Ahmed said. "Almost everything grown here, and sold here, is either planted in soil contaminated and drained of its natural nutrients by chemical fertilizers, or the food crops are sprayed with various ecologically harmful insecticides and herbicides".

Ahmed, a research associate in laboratory medicine at the University, said that although the food is guaranteed by the suppliers to be free of chemicals, the "eco-op" will have regular sample tests made by independent laboratories as an extra precaution.

Karen Lofgren also is buying "clean" foods for The City School, a private children's school on the University's West Bank, where she is a purchaser and cook.

The freight rates on the food shipments are high, but the lower bulk rates help to compensate for the additional cost.

And there are other compensations. Mrs. Janet Ahmed, the mother of two children, explains: "It's so exciting. You know, there is such a difference in the taste of this food. And the quality is so high. You can just see it. Now I feel like when I give my family food, I'm giving them something good to nourish their bodies and not putting dangerous chemicals into them."

In addition to her peace of mind Mrs. Ahmed has found some surprising savings inherent in the cooperative buying method.

"Take lettuce for example. Leaf lettuce from California comes in enormous heads. Even with the air freight charges it amounts to only 30 cents a head, and it's equal in size to at least two heads in any market here."

The Ahmed family has been receiving small orders of organically grown, insecticide-free vegetables from California for some time. Mrs. Ahmed reports "It stays fresher longer, and you don't find the rust spots on it that develop on other lettuces." She says she throws away virtually no spoiled vegetables or parts of vegetables.

The first shipment of more than 800 pounds of food was distributed to cooperative members in Ahmed's basement last weekend. "It's clear that the cooperative is already growing," Ahmed said. "Soon most of us will probably buy just about all our foods this way."

"And there are more people who want to join," he added. "So we're looking for inexpensive or free space where we can store and distribute our food."

Miss Lofgren said group members are laying plans for growing many of their own vegetables this spring. The group is seeking land near the Twin Cities where all the "eco-op" members can take part in weekend and evening cultivation, planting and harvesting of their own crops.

"But we've got a major problem, much like the one that forced us to form the cooperative in the first place," Karen Lofgren pointed out.

"It's difficult to find any nearby land that isn't contaminated by chemical fertilizers, insecticides, herbicides or all three."

'U' POPULATION, RENAISSANCE COURSES TO COMBINE RADIO, TELEVISION LECTURES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A color telecast on Renaissance art featuring the works of Leonardo da Vinci will be among the highlights of two University of Minnesota courses to be taught on radio and television this spring.

Combining lectures on KUOM, the University radio station, with supplementary programs on the University Television Hour on KTCA-TV, channel 2, the courses are open for credit to anyone who wishes to register.

Sociology 112, "World Population Problems," will include radio lectures by Assistant Professor Robert E. Kennedy, Jr., at 11:15 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday beginning April 13 and telecasts on population problems in India, Brazil and Japan at 9:30 p.m. May 1, 8 and 15. (The final date for the radio lectures will be determined by Professor Kennedy's classroom lectures.)

Faculty members from many University departments will speak on Renaissance humanism, political philosophy, music, literature and exploration in Humanities 70, "The Renaissance," on KUOM Tuesday and Thursday at 11:15 a.m. April 14 through May 28.

German Professor Gerhard Weiss, associate dean for humanities and fine arts in the College of Liberal Arts, will introduce the course and speak on "Faust -- The Renaissance Man" in the first two lectures.

Telecasts on Renaissance art and the development of scientific thought during the Renaissance are scheduled for 9 to 10 p.m. April 17 and 9:30 to 10 p.m. May 22 respectively.

Free study guides and information on registering for credit are available from KUOM.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Radio lectures on the Renaissance, following Professor Weiss' opening lectures, will be:

- April 21 and 23 -- "Humanism," James D. Tracy, assistant professor of history.
- April 28 and 30 -- "Political Concepts: Machiavelli," Mulford Q. Sibley, professor of political science.
- May 5 and 7 -- "Music," Johannes Riedel, professor of music.
- May 12 and 14 -- "Italian Literature," Marilyn Schneider, assistant professor of Italian.
- May 19 and 21 -- "English Literature (Aspects of Elizabethan Imagery)," Gordon W. O'Brien, professor of English.
- May 26 and 28 -- "The Broadening of the Horizon" and "The Age of Discovery," Professor John Parker, curator of the James Ford Bell Library.

KUOM is a part of the University's General Extension Division and the University Television Hour is an educational service of the division.
