NOW AT LOCAL LIBRARIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Are you looking for a speaker? If you don't know how to find one the University of Minnesota's department of University Relations may have a solution for you.

"Speakers Guide: Speakers and Program Ideas from the University of Minnesota" is designed to simplify the task for you.

The guide, available at local libraries throughout the state, lists individual speakers by campus---Twin Cities, Crookston, Duluth, Morris, or Waseca---their areas of specialization and where to get in touch with them. It also lists other University program services such as films, tapes, music ensembles and student speakers.

If there is no library near you, contact the University of Minnesota Speakers Bureau, Department of University Relations, S-68 Morrill Hall, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455, for a copy of the "Speakers Guide".

COMMITTEE RULES NO VIOLATION IN TREATMENT PROGRAM AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The treatment of a patient with homosexual tendencies by a psychiatry professor and a graduate student was found to be responsible and not in violation of policy by an ad hoc committee at the University of Minnesota.

The committee was formed in December to investigate a treatment program overseen by Dr. David Lykken after complaints by student body president Jack Baker.

Baker, a leader in the gay liberation movement, asked for an investigation after an article about the treatment of the patient appeared in a Twin Cities newspaper.

The four-member ad hoc committee, appointed by William Shepherd, vice president for academic administration, met in late December to hear both Lykken and Baker concerning the treatment done a year ago.

The committee found that there had been no harmful effects from the treatment and that no University policy was violated by the treatment.

"The activities in question were not part of a research project but were performed as part of therapeutic treatment sought by the patient for inhibition of behavioral tendencies he himself wished to overcome," the committee's report said.

The patient had 30 counseling sessions before he underwent a method of treatment called "aversive therapy" to change what the patient regarded as undesirable erotic responses.

The patient, known as "Charlie" to protect his identity, had a history of molesting teen-aged boys. After spending time in prison and on probation for such offenses, he requested the aversion treatment.

Lykken told the committee that the therapy involved attaching an electrode to "Charlie's" arm and allowing him to adjust the level of electric current needed to produce a shock. Lykken said the pain produced would be on the order of a pin prick.

The patient was then shown a series of slides, some of them representing situations similar to his own incidents of molestation. If "Charlie" did not reject the slides showing the undesired behavior within eight seconds he received a shock in his arm at the previously set level.

Lykken said the shock would be on the order of 5 milliamperes, compared to the one- or two-thousand millampere shocks used in electroshock therapy.

Baker had charged that the therapy in question used the much-higher shock level and that the treatment involved high risk to the patient, was designed to turn non-heterosexuals toward involvement with the opposite sex and violated University policy.

Lykken explained that "Charlie" was not a homosexual being shocked into heterosexual behavior but was instead a man who wanted to rid himself of periodic homosexual impulses.

Since the patient was free to discontinue the program at any time the committee found that there was no reason to believe his rights had been violated. It concluded that Lykken's professional conduct was "responsible and proper."

Shepherd accepted the committee's findings and considers the case closed.

The ad hoc committee was chaired by May Brodbeck, dean of the Graduate School. The other members were Richard Chilgren, assistant professor of pediatrics and director of the program in human sexuality in the Medical School; William Lockhart, law professor and former chairman of the President's Commission on Pornography; and Zigfrids Stelmachers, director of the Crisis Intervention Center at Hennepin County General Hospital, and clinical assistant professor of psychology.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The full findings of the committee follows---

1. The activities in question were not part of a research project but were performed as part of therapeutic treatment sought by the patient for inhibition of behavioral tendencies he himself wished to overcome. The activities therefore do not come under any present or proposed University policies regarding the use of human subjects in research.
2. The allegations regarding the harmful effects of the treatment are totally unfounded.
3. There is no reason to believe that the patient's rights were violated in any way.
4. The treatment does not encourage persons to seek out illegal sexual activity.
5. Mr. Baker's charge that the activities in question are in any degree comparable to the research performed in concentration camps is intemperate and wholly unfounded.
6. In sum, the committee finds that Dr. Lykken's professional conduct was responsible and proper and that adequate precautions were taken to protect the rights of the patient.

BLACK STUDIES PIONEER TO SPEAK
AT U OF M, COMMUNITY MEETINGS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Henry Cobb, dean of the Graduate School at strife-torn Southern University and a pioneer in black studies programs, will speak at University and community gatherings sponsored by the University of Minnesota Afro-American studies department Monday, Jan. 15, the anniversary of the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr.

The program will begin at 11:30 a.m. in Coffman Union junior ballroom with music by the Zion Baptist Church Youth Choir and organist Reginald Buckner, a member of the Afro-American studies faculty.

"The Role of Black Studies in Higher Education" will be the topic of Cobb's talk at 12:30 p.m. Anna E. Stanley, teaching associate in the Afro-American studies department and a graduate student in American studies, will speak on the Afro-American studies department in retrospect. (Ms. Stanley was a member of the original group of black students who demanded establishment of the department). George D. King, chairman of the department, will speak on prospects for the department.

From 2 to 4:30 p.m. there will be an open house in the Afro-American studies department, 214 Social Science building, on the west bank of the Minneapolis campus.

At 7:30 p.m. Cobb will speak on "Creative Tensions in the Black Community" at Zion Baptist Church, 621 Elwood Ave. N., Minneapolis. This will be preceded by music by the Zion choir and Buckner and followed by an open dialogue between a panel of members of the Afro-American studies department faculty and members of the black community.

Both programs and the open house are open to the public.

The day's events are intended "to articulate to the community what we see as our goals and how we best see to achieve these goals," said King.

Last fall segments of the black community charged the department with a lack of community interest and involvement.

"We want to have both an academic scholarly thrust and a community outreach thrust," he said. "We want to respond to the needs of the community as we have the resources and competence to do so, but we believe it would be a dangerous thing for the community to direct the department or for the department to direct the community. As individuals, every member of our faculty is involved in community activities."

King also announced that beginning Feb. 6 he will hold open house in his office the first Tuesday of every month for open dialogue with any member or members of the black community.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Cobb, 55, was born in South Carolina. He has a bachelor's degree from Benedict College and master's and doctor of education degrees from Temple University and has done post-doctoral studies in African Studies at Boston University. He has been a professor of history at Southern University since 1957 and dean of the graduate school since 1969. He is chairman of the Afro-American Advisory Council, Institute for Services to Education, which is completing a study of black studies at major universities under a grant from the U.S. Office of Education.

MEMO TO NEWSMEN

Fourteen representatives of the Twin Cities news media will discuss problems in covering the University of Minnesota Friday (Jan. 12) with the University Board of Regents.

The 8:30 a.m. meeting will be in the Regents' room, 238 Morrill hall. The session is in response to a Regent's request made during a December committee discussion of the role of the University news service.

Five newsmen---Chuck Bailey, Minneapolis Tribune; James Bormann, WCCO Radio; John Finnegan, St. Paul Dispatch; Ron Handberg, WCCO television, and Cecil Newman, Minneapolis Spokesman---will make initial remarks and nine others will participate in the discussion. This meeting will be followed by the regular monthly board meeting at 10 a.m. in the Regents' room.

Committee meetings will be held Thursday afternoon (Jan. 11). The health sciences committee will hear a report from the advisory committee on medical education programs at St. Paul-Ramsey hospital by Dr. Lyle French, vice president for health sciences, at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Club in Coffman Union.

The budget, audit and legislative relationships committee will hear a report from Vice President Stanley Wenberg on prospects for the 1973 legislature at 1:30 p.m. in 624 Campus Club. At the same time, the educational policy and long-range planning committee will meet in 626 Campus Club.

The physical plant and investments committee will meet at 3 p.m. in 626 Campus Club while the faculty, staff, student and public relationships committee will meet at the same time in 624 Campus Club.

A proposal by several Minnesota farm groups that the University establish a vice presidential position for agriculture will be discussed at one of the committee meetings, as yet unspecified.

'U' STUDENTS CHOSEN FOR SECOND TERM ON REGENTS' COMMITTEES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Ten University of Minnesota students will join the Board of Regents this week as non-voting members of the board's committees.

The students will divide themselves among the Regent's five standing committees and serve through June when the student representation plan will come up for review. The students will not have voting power and will not sit on the Regent's executive committee.

The students just chosen for committees will sit for the second year in what the Regents have said is an experiment in student representation on the board.

The Regents voted last summer to continue the seating of students on committees for a second year. Student groups at each of the University's five campuses met during the fall to nominate candidates.

On the Twin Cities campus the student assembly formed an ad hoc committee to nominate students. The nominations from each campus were reviewed by the Student Senate Consultative Committee before they were forwarded to President Malcolm Moos for final approval last week.

The technical colleges at Crookston and Waseca will each have one student serving on committees, the campuses at Duluth and Morris will each have two students and the Twin Cities campus will have four representatives.

'U' SYMPOSIUM TO EXPLORE
PENAL SYSTEM, ALTERNATIVES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A week-long symposium at the University of Minnesota will examine the Minnesota correctional system and explore alternatives to the present system.

The main events will take place Tuesday through Friday (Jan. 16 to 19) in Coffman Union. The union's Program Council, sponsor of the symposium, has invited resource people who are affected by the correctional system, including inmates and ex-offenders, directors of halfway houses and community centers, prison administrators, a judge, a parole board member and elected officials.

Included as participants are Tom Murton, professor of criminal justice studies at the University and former Arkansas prison warden; T. Williams, corrections ombudsman at Stillwater State Prison; Neil Riley, municipal court judge and Kojo Odinga, an ex-offender.

All activities are free and open to the public.

Each day, there will be four consecutive programs, beginning at 11 a.m., noon, 1 p.m. and 2 p.m.

The 11 a.m. session each day in 337 Coffman will focus on society's responsibility to youth and how its failures produce criminals.

The noon sessions in Coffman main ballroom will explore life within prisons and will question whether prisons serve their purpose.

(MORE)

The sessions at 1 p.m. each day will explore existing methods for helping ex-offenders survive in society and alternatives to them, in 337 Coffman.

And the 2 p.m. sessions will discuss minority group members in prisons and reasons for their disproportionate numbers in institutions. The 2 p.m. sessions take place in 320 Coffman.

Small-group discussions will follow the hourly programs.

Several films will augment the program, including "Cool Hand Luke", which will be shown on Monday (Jan. 15) at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. in Coffman main ballroom.

Additional films on corrections will be shown Thursday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in 343 Coffman.

The program was planned by students with help from program office staff. For further information contact the union program office in 205 Coffman.

CHINA VISITORS TO SPEAK AT U, TO LOCAL WOMEN

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A first-hand view of health care in the People's Republic of China will be presented in Minneapolis Wednesday, January 24 by a New York physician and his wife, a psychiatric social worker.

Dr. Victor Sidel, chief of social medicine at Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center, and his wife Ruth, social work supervisor at the Comprehensive Child Care Project of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, were in the first group of western physicians invited to China in 1971---almost a year before President Nixon's historic trip.

Dr. Sidel, who has studied health care delivery around the world, will speak at 12:15 p.m. to health sciences students and faculty in Mayo auditorium on the University of Minnesota Minneapolis campus. His talk is free and open to the public.

Ruth Sidel, author of the book "Women and Child Care in China," will speak at 12:30 p.m. to a luncheon at the Women's Club of Minneapolis. Her talk is sponsored by the University Hospitals Volunteer Association. Tickets ($4.75) are available through Jan. 22 from Ms. Anne Murrey at 377-5279.

REGENTS POSTPONE ACTION ON U OF M CIVIL SERVICE COUNCIL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The University of Minnesota Board of Regents postponed action on the proposed civil service staff council today until questions of its legality can be answered.

Roy Richardson, personnel officer for the University, appeared before the committee on faculty, staff, student and public relationships yesterday to recommend that no further action be taken on the council until actual support for such a council by civil service workers is measured. At its July meeting the Board of Regents approved a constitution for the council which is designated to act in an advisory capacity to the administration. Council elections, which were scheduled for Nov. 15, were postponed because of objections raised by Council Six of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME).

"Since the postponement of the elections, I have received many, many letters, signed by 167 employees, who have expressed deep concern and disillusionment over the postponement of the council elections," Richardson said.

"The civil service workers feel they do not have a part to play in the University and they feel disenfranchised," he said.

Richardson proposed the appointment of an interim advisory committee, to report to the office of the personnel director, composed of civil service workers. Richardson would appoint the committee members himself. "We must respond to the sense of urgency felt by the civil service workers while we deal with the question of the council's legality."

He also proposed that a comprehensive survey of all civil service workers be made. "We've got to find out how these 9,000 people feel about playing a part in University governance, and if, in fact, they really want a council."

Roger Peterson, an attorney representing both the AFL-CIO and Council Six of AFSCME, warned that even the interim committee would be a violation of fair labor practices.

"The very act of a University administrator appointing this committee would constitute an involvement on the part of the employer," he said, "and this is an unfair labor practice."

According to Regent Fred A. Cina, if civil service workers were to withdraw their request for a Regent-approved council and form an independent body of civil service workers on their own, the questions of legality and unfair labor practices would be answered.

U OF M REGENTS ADOPT

(FOR RELEASE AT 11 A.M. FRIDAY, JAN.12)

A new television policy for the University of Minnesota was adopted today by the University's Board of Regents. The board approved the second of an anticipated three-part broadcasting policy on the recommendation of its educational policy and long-range planning committee which met Thursday.

Approval followed several months of meetings with other educational institutions and broadcasters with whom the University will cooperate in producing and transmitting television programs ranging from entertainment to classes.

The new policy is designed to "utilize the medium of television...to carry out (the University's) missions of education, research and public service, and to inform the public of how these missions are being accomplished," the policy states.

Peter Roll, special assistant to Vice President William Shepherd for media resources, pointed out to the Regents' committee that the policy will greatly increase access to the public through presentation of University-oriented events and programs. Much of the University's television programming will be produced in facilities now under construction on the west bank area of the Minneapolis campus.

The emphasis of the new policy, it was explained, is not on transmission of programs but rather on the planning, production and distribution of materials---mostly on videotape to television stations throughout Minnesota..

The policy states that the Higher Education Coordinating Commission (HECC) will be the coordinating body through which the University's TV operations will cooperate with other educational TV broadcasters in Minnesota.

The HECC interinstitutional television committee was involved in the final revision of the policy, along with students, provosts of the University's four out-state campuses, staff members of the University's media resources department and representatives of KTCA-TV and the Midwest Educational Television Network.

The first segment of the University's planned three-part broadcasting policy is a radio policy approved by the Regents last June. The third part, scheduled for presentation to the Regents by this June, will deal with cable television.

U OF M REGENTS FILL
EMPLOYEE RELATIONS POST

(FOR RELEASE AFTER 10 A.M. FRIDAY, JAN. 12)

William C. Thomas, 34, was appointed assistant director for employee relations at the University of Minnesota today at the monthly meeting of the Board of Regents.

According to Roy Richardson, who became University personnel officer in December, Thomas' duties will be to work with him in "the centralization of all personnel administration on a University-wide basis, staff development, formation of comprehensive personnel data and compensation systems and the handling of collective bargaining relations."

Thomas, who has been on the job since Jan. 1, will receive an annual salary of $24,000.

The University did not conduct a formal search for an individual to fill the post since Thomas was one of three candidates recommended for the position Richardson now holds.

Since 1967 Thomas has been employed by Honeywell, Inc., most recently as assistant market manager for the residential division of the Minneapolis branch, a position he assumed in September of 1971.

Thomas, who lives at 2149 Scott Ave., Golden Valley, holds a bachelor of education degree from Northeastern Illinois University and has earned graduate credit in industrial relations. Last year he was awarded a Bush Leadership Fellowship by St. Paul's Bush Foundation to attend Harvard's professional school of management and completed a four-month program there.

He is the author of several published papers on labor relations and personnel management and is a columnist for the Twin City Observer-St. Paul Sun.

'U' CLAIMS NEED FOR REVENUE-SHARING FUNDS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Stanley Wenberg, University of Minnesota vice president for state and federal relations, said Friday (Jan. 12) that University agricultural and health science programs may "suffer significantly" as the result of federal cutbacks to pay for revenue sharing.

"The original intention of revenue-sharing was that it provide replacement money for grant programs which will be cut back at the federal level to pay for the revenue-sharing proposal," Wenberg said.

Federal grants to the University in 1971-72 totaled about $51.5 million, 17.9 per cent of its total budget. Most such funds go to agriculture and medicine.

Wenberg said that revenue-sharing is a call for an evaluation at the local and state levels of programs that have been funded by the federal government rather than "new money" given to local governments.

He said that the conflict between the Congress and President Nixon over control of appropriations money will have a direct effect on the University.

"The traditional agricultural land-grant money was stricken out in each Nixon budget," Wenberg said, "and the Congress has put it back in."

President Nixon's appointments of George Shultz as his chief economic adviser, Roy Ash as director of the Office of Management and Budget and Casper Weinberger as secretary of health, education and welfare indicate his intention to eliminate federal grant programs entirely, Wenberg said.

Traditionally, the University has received federal funds through the Morrill Act of the 1860's which established agricultural land-grant institutions, and through individual research grants considered on an individual basis by the National Institute of Health, the National Science Foundation and the Department of Defense.

Wenberg said the intention of Congress has been to continue both the revenue sharing proposal and the federal grant programs. "Congress doesn't buy the idea this is replacement money and it is trying to continue both grant money and revenue-sharing."

Elmer L. Andersen, chairman of the Board of Regents, said that higher education has a "big communications job" to do to convince every state legislature that "every dollar to states for revenue sharing is cutting out programs that would otherwise have been funded."

Wenberg said that universities will have a "great number of allies" on the issue which also affects impacted school districts and water pollution control and other local appropriations which have been previously funded by federal grants to local governments.

Regent L.J. Lee, a former DFL legislator from Bagley, said that the 1973 State Legislature will be faced with requests for all kinds of existing and new programs from revenue-sharing money and that the University will be only one of many institutions looking for the appropriations.

Wenberg said that a number of federal programs at the University have been authorized by Congress but have not been appropriated by the President.

The Regents also heard several Twin Cities newsmen discuss problems of the news media in covering the University and the role of the University News Service.

Richard Gibson, a reporter for the Minneapolis Star, said he knew of instances of faculty members being frank with reporters and later being criticized by administrators for their comments.

University President Malcolm Moos said he has never criticized a faculty member for stating his opinion, but that administrators have to be more careful about what they say to reporters because their comments are taken as official policy.

Charles W. Bailey, editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, said the function of a News Service should be to seek out information in response to questions from reporters, to "scout for news" which their reporters may miss, and to argue with administrators who may not want to release information in a factual way.

The meeting came in response to comments by Andersen that the News Service places too much emphasis on reporting events which the media would like to emphasize rather than presenting the positive aspects of the University.

Ron Handberg, news director for WCCO television, said that unless the News Service receives the trust of the media through being honest on controversial issues, it will also be ignored on the more positive stories.

110 'U' FACULTY MEMBERS TO TAKE QUARTER LEAVES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

American dreams, resistance to busing of school children, water pollution and music of the French West Indies will be among the subjects for intensive study by University of Minnesota faculty members next year.

The University Board of Regents today (Friday, Jan. 12) granted single-quarter leaves to 110 faculty members to pursue various areas of study in 1973-74.

"The reason the University does this is to improve the faculty. It broadens their expertise, making them more effective teachers and researchers," said Ann Bailly, assistant to the vice president for academic administration and secretary to the all-University single-quarter leave committee which recommends applicants to the President, who in turn recommends them to the Regents. "The faculty member returns enriched for the benefit of his students and his colleagues," she said.

The leaves of absence are with full salary from the University and some are supplemented by grants from the federal government or private foundations which provide funds necessary for travel. A limited number of leaves are granted each year to faculty members with at least two years of service to the University who meet the eligibility criteria established by Regents' policy.

Among those granted leaves for the coming year are Professor Alan J. Brook, head of the University's ecology department, who will travel to Scotland in the fall to study oscillatoria agardhii populations in lakes there.

The research is directed to the control of offensive water blooms, said Brook, who is actively concerned with controlling water pollution in Minnesota.

"I have found some of the same organisms here as there---but they behave rather differently and I want to find out why---it has to do with water chemistry," he said.

John C. Weidman, assistant professor of social and philosophic foundations of education, is taking a leave in the fall to prepare a paper for publication on "White Rage: Resistance to Busing of School Children."

"I think it is a significant social issue that deserves attention now," Weidman said. "In the social sciences there is usually a lag of several years before data is analyzed. This leave will give me the time to analyze the available data on this issue when it is still current."

No leaves with pay are granted to faculty members to further graduate study or write textbooks.

Ernest G. Bormann, professor of speech communication, will spend winter quarter of next year working on a critical evaluation of persuasion by relating it to the dreams and fantasies of Americans. He plans to spend some time in Europe investigating the methods of persuasion used by the Nazis and the Communists.

Geneva H. Southall, professor of Afro-American studies, will spend spring quarter of 1974 on a historical study of the similarities and cross-currents among blacks in different parts of the French new world, with emphasis on musical tradition. She plans to employ the resources of the James Ford Bell Library at the University and to spend some time in Haiti, Martinique, Guadeloupe and in New Orleans, La.

U OF M EDUCATOR SAYS HANDICAPPED RUSSIAN AND AMERICAN YOUNGSTERS TREATED DIFFERENTLY

by Elizabeth Petrangelo
University News Service Writer

Handicapped and exceptional children in the Soviet Union receive different kinds of care than handicapped American children, according to Frank B. Wilderson, assistant dean of the University of Minnesota's College of Education, who returned recently from a three-week stay in the USSR.

"Russian teachers of handicapped children are very specialized," Wilderson said. "They are able to move children with speech defects and mental retardation to the maximum of their potential much more effectively than we do in this country."

Wilderson, accompanied by his wife, Ida-Lorraine, was in the Soviet Union from Nov. 24 to Dec. 15 as a member of the official U.S. delegation to the U.S.S.R. Seminar on Instruction of Handicapped Children.

After visiting many Soviet special schools in Moscow and Leningrad, Wilderson was surprized with the treatment of handicapped and exceptional children in the Soviet system.

"The older Soviet scientists seem to be caught in a period of research which we feel we have gone through," he said. "They concern themselves with classifying each child carefully as having this or that type of handicap."

In Russia, handicapped youngsters are sent to different institutions depending on their classifications, he said. There are schools for the mentally retarded, schools for those with speech defects, schools for children with motor problems and still other schools for children with cerebral paralysis.

"If we tried to categorize children so narrowly in this country, we would cause terrible status problems for them," he said. "But, the Soviet youngsters who are singled out to attend special schools feel honored."

Wilderson was impressed with the high levels of achievement reached by mentally retarded and handicapped Soviet children. "When you look at the work these children are doing, it's much superior to what you would see in our country," he said. "If we had taken the Russians to visit our state schools for the mentally retarded and our special classes for handicapped children, they would not have seen the well-trained and diversified staff that they have.

"In Russia, if a school for mentally retarded children believes it could benefit by having an EEG technician, then it will receive one. They train as many physicians and technicians as they need for as many schools as they have," he said. "We are not able to do that in this country and one of the reasons is inadequate funding."

Wilderson feels that the most important thing the American delegation learned was the advances that are possible in curriculum for handicapped children. "They have looked at what they ask their children to do very carefully and have asked themselves the question 'Can they do these things?' If they can't, new curriculum is developed," he said.

The whole Soviet stay was very structured for the American delegation, Wilderson said. Each morning was spent listening to reports of research, discussion took place in the afternoon and evenings were spent at cultural events.

After a week and a half, the American delegation grew tired of sitting and listening and wished to delve a little deeper, Wilderson said. "I, of course, was very interested in mentally retarded youngsters and those with physical pathology," he said. "But I also wanted to know about how the Soviets handled children with social and emotional difficulties. But each time I tried to bring up this question, I felt that the answers I received were evasive."

It was only after Wilderson showed the Soviet delegation a film he had prepared of a junior high school-aged boy acting aggressively---knocking over books and chairs, pulling away from teachers, and using obscenities---that the Russians opened up.

(MORE)

"Only then did they admit that, yes, they did have youngsters who behaved that way and they did have special facilities to handle these children. It seemed to us that the Russians don't like to admit that their system can produce behavior problems," he said.

"These youngsters with emotional problems are cared for in labor camps," he said. "The Soviets see work as a medium through which the youngster gains some understanding of the way he can contribute to the Soviet system."

Mrs. Wilderson, a child development specialist with the Greater Minneapolis Day Care Association, accompanied the delegation and spent a great deal of time touring nurseries and pre-school facilities, Wilderson said.

"She was able to help our delegation, which was studying school-age children, to learn more about the pre-school care of Russian children," he said. "We were all impressed with their elaborate system of pre- and post-natal health care which enables them to identify potentially handicapped children very early."

Wilderson believes that the trip was a success and a valuable learning experience for the delegation. However, he doesn't feel that their observations will have a tremendous effect on American systems of care for the handicapped. "It would be very inappropriate for us to run back here and start tampering with our own system on the basis of our observations," he said.

"However, we have established a good relationship with Russian scientists and educators so that if we are interested on following up on some of these things, we will be able to build on their experiences."

The conference, organized by the Johnson Foundation and the Department of State, was arranged under the cultural exchange agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union, calling for bilateral seminars in the field of education.

This was the first conference to be organized since the signing of the agreement in the spring of 1972.

'U' FILM TO SHOW
OF STUTTERERS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Begun in 1949 and completed in 1972 with the same subjects, the film, "Speech of Stutterers Before and After Treatment," will be shown Wednesday, Feb. 7, at 3:10 p.m. in Mayo auditorium on the Minneapolis campus of the University of Minnesota.

The film shows five stutterers, ranging in age from 19 to 33, at the time they came to the University's speech clinic for treatment in 1949. How they progressed is then documented as the film shows them one month after an eight week interval of intensive "psycho-talk-therapy", again in 1952, 1957, and finally in 1972.

Professor Emeritus Bryng Bryngelson, now 82 years old, began the project as chief speech pathologist, working with the people in the film.

Still an active researcher, Bryngelson got the idea for a 1972 filming of his subjects while he was eating corn flakes at 2:30 in the morning---a lifetime habit. He then began a search for his subjects which proved successful.

Technical director for the film was Donald Cain of the University's department of audio-visual extension.

ANTI-WAR RALLY AT 'U' TO HEAR REGENT, SENATOR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

State Senator Allan Spear and University of Minnesota Regent Josie Johnson will speak at a noon rally and teach-in on the Vietnam War on Friday (Jan. 19) at the University of Minnesota.

The rally, in Coffman Union main lounge, is sponsored by the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) at the University. Also on the program is a presentation by Lynn Watson, a national coordinator for Project Air War, based in New York City.

SMC coordinator John Linder said the rally is designed to show "as many people as possible that there is not total support for President Nixon's war policies."

Linder said Ms. Watson has travelled in Southeast Asia and will show slides of the aftermath of the recent Christmas-time bombing in North Vietnam.

Linder said the rally and teach-in will also inform people of the Inauguration Day rally in St. Paul the following day.

The rally on Saturday (Jan. 20) will start at noon at the State Capitol and is timed to coincide with a national demonstration in Washington, D.C., and demonstrations in other cities.

The Saturday rally is sponsored by SMC and the Minnesota Peace Action Coalition, with the endorsement of other groups, including Clergy and Laymen Concerned and the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice.

For further information about either of the rallies, contact the Student Mobilization Committee in 347 Coffman Union, or call 376-3315.

WOMEN SCHOLARS ARE CORE OF NEW 'U' WOMEN'S CLASS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A professor from Duke University flew into Minneapolis this week and met with a University of Minnesota class studying the professor's specialty---history.

What made the visit unusual is that the class is studying contemporary feminism, most of the students are women and the visiting professor is a woman historian.

The class is examining "whether the contemporary feminist movement is having an impact on American intellectual life," said Elsa Greene, coordinator of the new course.

The visiting professor, Anne Firor Scott, and four other women, who will visit later, make up the core of the class.

Ms. Greene said each of the five visiting women are "outstanding women from the disciplines we want to study. Each one can provide a piece of the whole picture of contemporary feminism."

Providing pieces of the picture will be a poet, a woman who has combined the study of psychiatry and history, a black professor of medical sociology and a literary critic, in addition to Professor Scott.

"It may be a very emotional experience for a lot of the students in the class to meet with professional, intellectual women who have made it in their own fields," Ms. Greene said.

Each of the five women will arrive in Minneapolis at two-week intervals and spend two days on campus. Each will give an evening speech, then meet with the class the following day.

"The class uses the two weeks between visits to prepare, through lectures and discussion about the writings of the woman who is coming, and read other writings about other women in that field," Ms. Greene said.

All but five of the 60 students in the class are women and Ms. Greene said their commitment to the women's movement ranges over a wide spectrum, from women actively involved in the women's liberation movement to women who are making their first statement of interest in women by taking the class.

The course was planned by the Women's Studies Task Force, a student group which began more than a year ago to investigate the idea of a women's studies department at the University.

The new women's studies course is a sort of trial balloon to assess the amount of interest in women's studies among students before setting up a program or department, Ms. Greene said.

The women students who planned the course overcame the hurdles of funding and sponsorship by a University unit. The course is based in the American studies program, which Ms. Greene said "enthusiastically" agreed to sponsor the course.

The funds were provided by an "astounding combination of contributors," she added. The departments of history, English, and Afro-American studies made donations, as did the experimental course committee, which gave approval to the task force's plan for the course. Other funds came from the University's Educational Development Fund.

With funding, sponsorship and what Ms. Greene calls "quite a lot of positive feeling in the faculty" the coordinator and her four women teaching assistants are looking forward to at least a second quarter of the class.

Meanwhile, an ad hoc committee on women's studies is exploring ways to establish a women's studies major.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The other visiting participants in the class will be:

Carroll Smith Rosenberg, who will meet with the class Jan. 31 to Feb. 1. She is assistant professor of psychiatry and history at the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Rosenberg will question the relationship between psychiatric theory and women's existence. She has published a book, "Religion and the Rise of the American City; The New York City Mission Movement" and is currently studying sex roles in socialization.

Jacquelyne J. Jackson, Feb. 14-15. She is associate professor of medical sociology at Duke University Medical Center. She is also head of the Caucus of Black Sociologists of the American Sociology Association. A specialist in the field of aging blacks, she has published an article in "The Black Scholar" which challenges the "Myth of the Black Matriarchy."

Carolyn Kizer, Feb. 28-March 1, director of the graduate writing program at Columbia University and visiting artist in residence at the University of North Carolina. She recently published a collection of poetry under the title "Midnight Was My Cry."

Wendy Martin, March 12-13. She is an assistant professor of English at Queens College in New York City. She will speak to the class on feminism and literary criticism and has founded a new journal called "Women's Studies."

Anne Firor Scott, who met with the class on Jan. 15 and 16, is a professor of history at Duke University and senior fellow at the Institute of Southern History at Johns Hopkins University. Her field is the history of the American woman, especially the Southern Woman. She is the author of "The Southern Lady; From Pedestal to Politics."

'U' RULES BAKER NOT ELIGIBLE TO REMAIN AS STUDENT BODY HEAD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

University of Minnesota student body president Jack Baker plans to appeal to the courts to help overrule a University policy which makes him ineligible to serve out his second term.

Baker wants the policy abolished and will seek a temporary restraining order from federal district court "within the next few days" to block enforcement of the policy, he said.

The University policy, defined by the Assembly Committee on Student Affairs (ACSA), says a student must carry a minimum of six credits to participate in student organizations. Baker, a law student, has been certified to take the bar examination and is finishing a three-credit course before graduation. His term as Minnesota Student Association (MSA) president expires May 14.

Exceptions have sometimes been made to the policy, but Baker learned yesterday (Jan. 16) that an exception in his case had been denied. Edwin Siggelkow, coordinator of student activities, informed Baker by letter that he was upholding the Jan. 10 vote by the MSA Forum to deny an exception.

(MORE)

"I consider this an unconstitutional intervention by the University into a student matter," Baker said yesterday. He said he feels the policy violates the Constitution by interfering with the right to assemble, protected by the First Amendment.

Baker said he does not feel bound by the Forum vote, because he considers himself an employee of the student body, not the Forum. The Forum is the legislative arm of MSA.

Siggelkow's letter states that Baker may remain in office until he can appeal to ACSA, which meets Monday (Jan. 21). Baker plans to appear at the meeting and ask that the policy be abolished.

Baker wants the restraining order to allow him to stay in office until there has been a hearing on his request. If the decision goes against him he will seek to have the matter decided in court.

He has requested the assistance of the Minnesota Civil Liberties Union but will seek legal counsel elsewhere if they don't take the case.

RARE UKRAINIAN PERIODICALS
GIVEN TO UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A collection of three rare Ukrainian periodicals, published during the period of the Russian revolution, has been given to the University of Minnesota Libraries.

Alexander A. Granovsky, professor emeritus of entomology and founder of the University's Ukrainian collection, donated the journals. They are Ukrains'ka Khata (Ukrainian Home), 1909-1914, a literary journal; Iliustrovana Ukraina (Illustrated Ukraine), 1913, a literary-art magazine, and Nash Holos (Our Voice), 1910-1913, a social-democratic monthly.

The Ukrainian Home collection is the only complete set known to exist in the United States, said Ralph Hopp, director of the University Libraries.

The University's Ukrainian Collection is housed at 1925 Sather St., St. Paul.

UGANDAN TO SPEAK ON 'U' CAMPUS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A Ugandan attached to his country's delegation to the United Nations will spend two days on the University of Minnesota campus next week to discuss the current situation in his country.

S. T. Bigombe, legal advisor for Uganda's U.N. delegation, will speak at 7 p.m. Thursday (Jan. 25) in the Bell Museum of Natural History.

The speech according to the Minnesota Student Association (MSA) officer who is sponsoring the visit, will deal both with the "controversial issue of the socioeconomic war being waged in Uganda and with international terrorism."

Francisco Lloyd, MSA's head of international and cultural affairs, said that the Minneapolis community, which has opened "its hearts, jobs and homes to Asian refugees from Uganda" should have the chance to hear another view of the situation.

"All we hear is the negative side of the Ugandan situation," Lloyd said. "It needs a deeper, closer look."

On Friday (Jan. 26) Bigombe will participate in a symposium sponsored by the Campus African Student Association at 6:30 p.m. in Coffman Union men's lounge.

Bigombe has been with Uganda's U.N. delegation since 1968.

BLACKEARTH PERCUSSION GROUP TO PERFORM AT UNIVERSITY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Blackearth Percussion Group will present the first concert in the 1972-73 Contemporary Music Series Wednesday (Jan. 24) at 8 p.m. in Northrop auditorium.

Blackearth is a new professional musical organization, presently in residence at the University of Illinois in Champaign. The program is a survey of contemporary styles and includes discussion of the works performed. The Northrop concert will include works by Frederic Rzewski, Ryszard Kwiatkowski, Edward Miller, Lou Harrison and Barney Childs, and a work written especially for the group by William Albright.

The group includes Richard Kvistad, who has been principal percussionist with the Grant Park Symphony and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra; Allen Otte, founder of the Oberlin (College) Improvisation Group and performer for four seasons with the Toledo Symphony Orchestra; Christopher Braun, who has played with three jazz groups---the Marin Symphony, the Oakland Youth Orchestra and the Marin Youth Orchestra, and Garry Kvistad, originator of the group who also has performed widely.

The concert is open to the public with no admission charge and is sponsored by the University departments of music, music education and concerts and lectures.

MOOS DECLARES FREEZE ON UNIVERSITY HIRING

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A temporary freeze on hiring at the University of Minnesota and an extensive budgeting review plan were announced Saturday by University President Malcolm Moos.

"I believe we have witnessed the end of the era of affluence in higher education," Moos said in a memo to the faculty. "Even though the governor's budget recommendations treat the University comparatively well, the stark fact is that those recommendations, if enacted into appropriations laws, will have major impact on University programs."

Moos said the freeze was necessary to "insure flexibility" in planning in the light of declining undergraduate enrollments, declining federal funding and the prospects of a stabilized state appropriation to the University.

Gov. Wendell Anderson's budget message earlier in the week recommended about $220 million for the University, a cut of about $20 Million from the University's request, but an increase of about $15.6 million over the 1971-73 appropriation.

The governor's recommendation would result in no cuts in positions at the University, and in increase in 45 academic and 52 civil service health sciences positions

"This move is a reaction to our belief that we are unlikely to find resources for areas of growth, other than the health sciences, unless we contribute those ourselves by cutting in some areas," Stanley Kegler, associate vice president of the University.

Kegler was directed by Moos to oversee the University-wide review of resources.

"Over the next few months we will pursue our legislative request v vigorously," Moos said. "During this time it will be necessary for us to begin planning for the 1973-74 budget. Almost simultaneously we will need to begin planning for the 1974-75 budget, as well as the 1975-77 biennial request."

Kegler said that the University received an increase in the governor's recommendations as the result of several private meetings with his staff, but will continue to pursue changes in that recommendation with the Legislature.

Moos said the University will continue to stress that an increased proportion of graduate and professional student enrollments is more expensive, despite a decline in the total number of students.

Moos, Kegler and other administrators discussed the proposals Saturday at two meetings, one with the faculty-student consultative committee and the other with provosts of coordinate campuses, deans and directors of University units.

"I am directing that the heads of all units not authorize the filling of any positions, academic or civil service, which are now or become vacant as a consequence of retirement, resignations, or deaths until the functions related to the positions have been reviewed and justified in the light of current or modified planning principles and priorities," Moos said.

The review is to be completed by March 15 and will include the health sciences.

Warren Ibele, associate dean of the Graduate School, expressed concern over a stabilization in the governor's recommendation for graduate research while the federal government is cutting back in the area.

"This move cannot help but have a depressing effect on faculty morale, since a part of the University's mission is the discovery of new knowledge," he said "If money is not forthcoming from the state, the University cannot respond to all of the state's needs."

Peter Hames, a student member of the consultative committee, said the governor made a "mistake" in considering tuition amounts which had been figured by the University as a percentage of the request, making a tuition hike disproportionate to the increase in the appropriations.

UNIVERSITY'S NEW THEATER BUILDING
NAMED TO HONOR LATE SPEECH PROFESSOR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The University of Minnesota's new $5.6 million theater and tele-communications building has been named Rarig Center, in honor of the late Professor Frank M. Rarig, chairman of the speech department at the University for many years.

The building, designed by Ralph Rapson, Inc. architects, who also designed the Tyrone Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis, will be the focal point on the mall of the University's West Bank campus. The formal dedication is scheduled for June 1. Present plans are for the University Theatre to open its 1973-74 season in the new building next fall.

Rarig Center includes four theaters---a proscenium theater, seating 467; a thrust theater, seating 487; an arena theater, seating 203, and an experimental theater, designed for flexible seating of about 145.

Other facilities in the building include two dance studios, four television studios, eight radio studios, related shop facilities and dressing areas for the theater, related control rooms for the studios, administrative offices for the department of radio and television and television and media classrooms for the department of speech and the school of journalism and mass communication.

FRANK M. RARIG

Frank M. Rarig, chairman and professor emeritus of the Department of Speech and Theatre Arts, died October 19, 1963 in Minneapolis, Minnesota at the age of 83. Professor Rarig was born on February 21, 1880 in Minneapolis, Kansas. At Northwestern University he received the B.A. degree in 1903 and the M.A. degree in 1905. He studied further at Harvard University in 1917-1918.

After teaching at Culver Military Institute and Northwestern University, Professor Rarig joined the Department of Rhetoric and Public Speaking at the University of Minnesota in 1908 as an assistant professor. He advanced to associate professor in 1917 and professor in 1925. When in 1920 the Department of Rhetoric and Public Speaking divided to become the two departments of English and of Speech, Professor Rarig became the first chairman of the Speech Department and continued in the post until his retirement from the University in 1948.

Professor Rarig's career was marked by an abundance of public service and fruitful controversy. An early and famous example of both was his serving in 1914 as one of the founders of the National Association of Academic Teachers of Public Speaking. This marked the first time teachers of speech in America dared to disassociate themselves from the elocutionists' Speech Arts Association on the one hand and from the National Council of Teachers of English on the other. The National Association of Academic Teachers of Public Speaking with its 17 founding members grew into the present Speech Association of America with its several thousand members. Professor Rarig served as the 14th president of this new professional association which he helped establish.

Professor Rarig was concerned with problems of clarifying personal identity in his 40 years of guiding speech students at Minnesota. On the occasion of his retirement in 1948, hundreds of his former students, ranging from national leaders in government and the arts to small town high school teachers of speech and drama, testified to the self-discovery they had experienced under Professor Rarig's kindly but persistent teaching. Although he sometimes taught persuasion and its rigors of logical thinking, his major interest was in teaching the oral interpretation of literature, which he made rigorous in his own special way. He insisted that students should learn, as he wrote, "to discriminate between their habits of conformity and the life of the free imagination." The ability of Professor Rarig to arouse in students their most basic energies, often ones they did not know they possessed, made him an unorthodox and great teacher of speech.

AAAC OPPOSES ATTACK ON AFRO-AMERICAN FACULTY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The steering committee of the Afro-American Action Committee (AAAC), an organization of 200 black University of Minnesota students, has released a statement of their opposition to "the violent physical attack on the Afro-American studies department, the chairman, George King and Professor John P. Ward."

The statement was prompted by an incident which took place Thursday (Jan. 18) in the Afro-American studies department offices in the Social Sciences building on the University's west bank.

University police were called shortly after 5 p.m. when an undetermined number of persons broke the door to Ward's office, causing about $100 damage, and physically attacked King and Ward. King and Ward have said they have not decided if they will press charges against the parties involved. University police remained to guard the department offices until Friday afternoon.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Central Steering Committee of AAAC's Black Student organization does not nor will it ever support the violent physical attack on the Afro-American Studies Department, the Chairman, George King and Professor John P. Ward.

On Thursday January 18th, 1973, at the University of Minnesota approximately thirty youth some of whom were armed, led by Milt Williams (Mahmoud El-Kati) disrupted the departmental faculty meeting, beat-up Dr. King and John Ward who is totally blind. The Black struggle has digressed to an unmoralistic low whenever it takes thirty stormtrooping youth to attack two defenseless men; when Black people chose to carry out violent actions against one another because of misinformation, then liberation has become non-productive and all progress towards Black unity has been jeopardized.

AAAC rejects the legitimacy of the Ad Hoc committee charged with evaluating the Afro-American Studies Department. Not once has the Ad Hoc committee submitted its thirteen-point position to AAAC for our views on our department. We as Black students are part of the Black community, we will not be ignored.

If necessary the Central Steering Committee of AAAC shall protect the Afro-American Studies Department and not allow its staff or faculty to be attacked, intimidated nor threatened.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR WAR CRIMES TO BE DISCUSSED BY VISITING PHILOSOPHER

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Richard Wasserstrom, professor of law and philosophy at the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA), will speak on the "Responsibility of Individuals for War Crimes" Monday (Jan. 29) at the University of Minnesota.

The special lecture will be held at 8 p.m. in Mayo Auditorium on the Minneapolis campus. It is sponsored by the departments of philosophy and concerts and lectures.

Author of the book, "The Judicial Decision," Wasserstrom has written that "It is certainly true that people often act without being aware of the probable legal consequences of their actions, but this does not necessarily imply that the opportunity to so consider these consequences ought not to be made available to them."

HUNTER, BROWN FEATURED AT THIRD WORLD CONFERENCE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Robert Hunter and Lester Brown, both senior fellows at the Overseas Development Council, Washington, D.C., will be featured speakers at a two-day conference on the Third World, Thursday and Friday, Feb. 8 and 9 at the Holiday Inn Downtown in Minneapolis.

Hunter, a professorial lecturer at the School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University, has taught international relations at the London School of Economics and was a research associate at the Institute for Strategic Studies in London. He was a member of President Johnson's White House staff during 1964-65.

Lester Brown, a recognized authority on the world food problem, was formerly administrator of the International Agricultural Development Service, the technical assistance arm of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, from 1966 to 1969. He is the author of three books and has written articles on the world food-population problem for such publications as U.S. News and World Report, The New York Times and the Washington Post.

University of Minnesota President Malcolm Moos will participate in the two-day program along with other members of the University community.

"The United States, Development and the Third World" will be the topic of discussion on Thursday, Feb. 8. Friday's program (Feb. 9) will concern "Teaching about the Third World."

Thursday's program is designed for all persons who share an interest in contemporary world affairs. The Friday program is designed for teachers who desire to gain information about effective materials and experience in teaching strategies. Teachers are encouraged to attend both days, but registration for either Thursday or Friday is permitted.

Fee for the conference is $13 for each day or $26 for both days. The fee includes lunch and coffee breaks. Students may register for a special fee of $5 (does not include lunch.)

For further information and to register contact Department of Conferences, Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455.

The conference is sponsored by the Overseas Development Council and the University of Minnesota world affairs center and department of conferences.

MENTAL HEALTH OF SENIOR CITIZENS TO BE TOPIC OF U OF M CONFERENCE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mental health needs of the older person will be examined in a two-day institute sponsored by the University of Minnesota's department of continuing education in social work Thursday and Friday, Feb. 8 and 9.

Designed for all staff working with older people in both institutional and non-institutional settings, the institute program will provide information on the aging process and various approaches to dealing with the mentally impaired older person.

On Thursday, Dr. Edward Posey, chief of psychiatry at Veteran's Administration Hospital, will speak on the causes and symptoms of organic brain syndrome, both acute and chronic, and behavior traits common to older people. Each session will be followed by a question-and-answer period.

The film "The Therapeutic Community" will be shown on Friday followed by discussions on reality orientation and remotivation programs, the two approaches designed to help the mentally impaired older person. A panel discussion on team relationships---an examination of the role of the doctor, social worker, nurse, aide, family and pharmacist as members of a team working on behalf of older people ---will follow.

The institute will be held at Nolte Center for Continuing Education on the Minneapolis campus. Fee for the institute is $35. Enrollment will be limited and early registration is encouraged.

'U' THEATRE TO PRESENT
FOUR BLACK-WRITTEN PLAYS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Four one-act plays, written by contemporary black Americans and directed by the University Theatre's first black faculty member, will be presented Jan. 30 through Feb. 4 in Shevlin arena theater at the University of Minnesota.

"Four By Four In Black", with a predominately black cast, includes "Sister Son/ji," a one-woman message play by Sonia Sanchez; "Electronic Nigger," a tragic-comedy in the absurdist tradition by Ed Bullins; "Clara's Ole Man," a picture of ghetto life with selected realism by Bullins, and "Contribution," a comedy centered around the integration of a lunch counter by Ted Shine.

Horace Bond, the University's first black theater faculty member, is directing the production. "I selected these plays because they are a representative picture of contemporary black drama," Bond said.

Bond joined the faculty last fall and is teaching the department's first classes in black drama. This spring he will teach a class on the history of the image of the black man on the American stage.

Bond, who is originally from Louisville, Ky., has bachelor's and master's degrees from Indiana University and is a candidate for his doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Kansas. He taught at Kansas from 1966 through 1972.

REGENTS WILL DISCUSS
DOMING OF 'U' STADIUM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Regents, faculty and administrators at the University of Minnesota will get their first public look in February at a model and detailed illustrations of a consultant's report which recommends an air-cushioned dome and remodeling for Memorial Stadium.

David Geiger, chief consultant on the project, will make the presentation to the physical plant committee of the Board of Regents at 3 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 8 in the junior ballroom, 337 Coffman Union.

The proposed renovation of the stadium would incorporate more physical education facilities into the structure.

Faculty members of the physical education department, the University's vice presidents and news media representatives have been invited to the meeting which is open to the public.

Geiger, of Geiger, Berger and Associates, consulting engineers of New York, was the designer and engineering architect of the air-cushioned dome on the U.S. pavilion at Expo'70 in Osaka, Japan.

Also speaking will be Harold B. Gores, president of Educational Facilities Laboratories, Inc., which partially funded the feasibility study; Robert L. Browne, architect-designer for Gassner-Nathan-Browne of Memphis, Tenn.; and P.R. Theibert, director of athletics at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., and representative of Educational Facilities Laboratories.

MEMO TO NEWSMEN

Rep. Shirley Chisholm (D.-NYC) will speak at an awards ceremony for minority and low-income students at the University of Minnesota Saturday (Jan. 27) at 7:30 p.m.

She will speak to about 450 adult students, most of them female heads of households, in the Bell Museum of Natural History on the Minneapolis campus.

Because the museum's auditorium will be filled to near-capacity by Project H.E.L.P. students and their families, the project's director requests no advance notice of the event by the media.

Newsmen who wish to cover the event are welcome, but there will not be room for the general public.

Project H.E.L.P. is a program for adult students offered by the University's Consolidated H.E.L.P. (Higher Education for Low-Income Persons) Center. The H.E.L.P. Center has a variety of programs to help minority and low-income students toward graduation, according to Fred Amram, the center's director.

Amram said 35 awards for scholastic achievement and community service will be given out during the fifth annual awards ceremony for Project H.E.L.P.

Amram said newsmen may photograph or film Rep. Chisholm before the ceremony or during the reception which follows in the lobby of the museum. He requests no photography or filming during the ceremony.

Because Rep. Chisholm will arrive in town shortly before the ceremony and will leave soon afterwards there will be no opportunity for a news conference.

'U' WINTER ENROLLMENT DROPS LESS THAN USUAL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The number of students enrolled for winter quarter at the University of Minnesota is four per cent less than for fall quarter.

But to University administrators that's an encouraging sign.

"Based on past experience, enrollment for winter quarter is usually six per cent less than fall," said Stanley Kegler, special assistant to President Malcolm Moos.

A count of regular day-time students taken at the end of the second week of winter quarter shows a total of 47,489 on all campuses compared with 49,929 for fall quarter, a drop of 2,440 students.

The rate of retention of students on the Twin Cities campus accounts almost entirely for the drop being less than expected, Kegler said.

Some 2,200 fewer students enrolled for winter quarter on the Twin Cities campus. Past experience led Kegler to expect 2,900 fewer students to return for winter quarter.

The enrollment picture at the coordinate campuses is just about as expected, Kegler said, with Crookston and Waseca showing normal winter quarter increases. Some students enroll only for winter quarter at the two technical colleges.

Winter quarter figures for each of the campuses are:

Campus	winter, 1973	fall, 1972
Twin Cities	39,608	41,840
Crookston	674	660
Duluth	5,315	5,488
Morris	1,678	1,763
Waseca	342	320

Following are comparative enrollment figures for several University units:

The College of Liberal Arts had 15,526 students enrolled by the second week of winter quarter, compared with 16,687 for fall quarter.

The General College is down 286 students, with 2,530 registered for winter quarter compared with 2,816 for fall.

In the health sciences, 2,667 are enrolled for winter compared with 2,747 fall quarter.

The Institute of Technology shows 3,397 registered for winter, compared with 3,559 fall quarter.

The College of Education is down 167 students, from 2,523 fall quarter to 2,356 winter quarter.

FORMER CBS NEWS PRESIDENT TO SPEAK TO NW BROADCASTERS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Fred Friendly, former president of CBS News, will give the keynote address at the Northwest Broadcast News Association's (NBNA) 25th annual radio-television seminar Friday, Feb. 2, in Minneapolis.

Friendly, now a professor of broadcast journalism at Columbia University, is the author of "Due To Circumstances Beyond Our Control." He will speak at a 7:30 p.m. dinner at the Hotel Dyckman.

About 150 broadcast journalists from Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin are expected to attend the silver anniversary seminar sponsored by NBNA and the University of Minnesota's School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

The two-day event will begin at 8:30 a.m. Friday, Feb. 2 in Murphy hall auditorium at the University.

Chuck Harrison, news director of WGN-TV in Chicago and president of the national Radio-Television News Directors Association (RTNDA), will speak at a Friday noon luncheon in Coffman Union.

A presentation on the last 25 years of broadcasting in the Midwest will be part of the Friday morning program, which will also include a panel discussion on the problems reporters face in gaining access to public meetings and a discussion of the role of wire services in broadcast news. Guest speakers will include Bill Ferguson, United Press International broadcast editor in Chicago and Jerry Trapp, general broadcast news editor for Associated Press in New York.

There will be a series of reporting workshops in Murphy hall Friday afternoon followed by the NBNA business meeting at 3:30 p.m. A Saturday morning session will be held at WCCO-TV in downtown Minneapolis.

'U' TO OFFER HUMAN BEHAVIOR
SEMINAR FOR SECRETARIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Human behavior as it relates to management problems in business will be the topic of a one-day seminar for executive secretaries Tuesday, Feb. 13, at the Sheraton Ritz hotel in Minneapolis.

Scheduled to begin at 8:30 a.m., the seminar will cover the causes of different kinds of behavior, attitudes and their formation, motivation and ways of dealing with frustration.

The seminar is designed for secretaries who make decisions about and organize a substantial part of an executive's time and work. Instruction methods will include lectures, discussions and role-playing.

Faculty for the seminar will include Kjell R. Knudsen, program director for continuing business education at the University of Minnesota and John J. Mauriel, Jr., associate professor of business policy for the University's College of Business Administration.

Enrollment is limited and early registration is encouraged. Fee for the seminar is $45. For further information and to register, write to Continuing Business Education, Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

The seminar is sponsored by continuing business education, the graduate school of business administration and continuing education and extension of the University in cooperation with the Minneapolis and St. Paul Chambers of Commerce.

SHIRLEY CHISHOLM BLASTS NIXON ADMINISTRATION FOR WELFARE STAND

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm (D-N.Y.) blasted the Nixon administration Saturday night for its welfare proposals and attacks on people who receive welfare.

Mrs. Chisholm said President Nixon's "wanton and malicious attacks" on people who are on welfare and the Welfare Rights Organization are part of a "movement which suggests that the poor have no rights."

"The Nixon rhetoric on welfare is nothing but public relations designed to keep conservatives quiet and it does nothing to educate people to the plight of the poor in this country," she said.

Rep. Chisholm spoke to about 200 people at an awards ceremony for participants in Higher Education for Low-income Persons (HELP) at the University of Minnesota.

"It is no sin for one to be poor," she said. "It is immoral, however, for one to see poverty and to turn his head, to see hunger and look the other way, to see other human beings in need and make no effort to assist them."

Despite an end to the U.S. military involvement in Vietnam, she said, foreign aid will continue to take funds away from the poor. "Indeed our government is quite generous in giving financial assistance to governments abroad, many of which are repressive regimes but it is stingy when it comes to fighting poverty and ignorance at home," she said.

She said President Nixon's "dismantling" of the Office of Economic Opportunity represented the "cynicism of an administration that caters only to the wealthy." With no election to look forward to, she said, President Nixon will ignore the needs of the country. "The real Richard Nixon, my friends, is about to enter the scene."

Mrs. Chisholm criticized President Nixon's welfare reform proposal, H.R. 1, for being "tainted with racism" and not meeting the needs of the people.

She said H.R. 1 would, (1) initiate a cash payment ceiling of $2,400, less than most states now pay in welfare, (2) eliminate food stamps, (3) force people to take employment at three-fourths the minimum wage, (4) make mothers of children under 3 go to work, (5) and gives "lip service to day-care, but provides no mechanism for establishment and maintenance of such centers.

Mrs. Chisholm said that welfare recipients will be unable to find jobs while the unemployment rate is increasing and that mothers cannot work if there is no day-care for their children.

She urged the poor to organize and bring pressure to bear on politicians.

"Workers, minorities, women and the poor in general, organize, organize, organize and maintain effective pressure groups so that our interests are protected as well as the interests of General Motors, Chase Manhattan, Lockheed and the whole bunch of them. Ours, my friends, is a long and tedious struggle but it is not an impossible one.

"Our dignity and our economic well being as well as the soul of this nation can only be better off for all of the efforts that we've got to make," she said.

MINNESOTA SCHOOL ADMINISTRATORS MOSTLY WHITE, MALE AND UNDERTRAINED, SAYS U OF M RESEARCHER

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The typical school administrator in Minnesota is white, male, between the ages of 41 and 50 and earned his highest degree sometime in the late 1950's or early 1960's.

Of 2,632 school administrators surveyed in the state, only 202 are women. There are no female school superintendents in the state and only three female high school principals.

Only 315 of the administrators surveyed have two or more years of professional preparation in spite of the 1963 State Board of Education regulation which set two years of post-baccalaureate work as the basis for certification.

And, it is predicted that this pattern of male-domination and undertraining in school administration will continue unless external intervention upsets the system.

These are some of the findings of a research model constructed by Professor Clifford P. Hooker of the division of educational administration at the University of Minnesota's College of Education to arrive at a prediction of future supply and demand for educational administrators in Minnesota.

To find out what present administrators were like, he sent questionnaires to all administrators presently employed in the state. Administrators from 406 of the 436 independent school districts which have both elementary and secondary schools responded.

In a report issued in January, Hooker states:

---The median age of incumbent administrators is between 41 and 45 with more over the age of 60 than below the age of 30. "The most senior members of the profession can be found in the front office, where one superintendent out of six is over 60 years of age," he said.

---Of the 2,632 administrators surveyed, only 202 are female and most of these are elementary school principals. There are no female superintendents. "Considering that 85 per cent of the elementary teachers are women, and about 60 per cent of all teachers in Minnesota are women, discrimination on account of sex is equally obvious throughout," he said.

---Over one-half of all superintendents are employed in small school districts with less than 1,000 students.

---Of the 406 superintendents surveyed, only 60 have the amount of professional training stipulated in the State Board of Education regulation.

---Less than 10 per cent of those administrators holding lifetime certificates have the amount of professional training stipulated in the regulation.

To get figures on supply and demand, Hooker contacted the eight institutions in the state which train school administrators for information on their outputs in the past five years.

Hooker states that seven of the institutions---the five state colleges, St. Thomas College and the University of Minnesota at Duluth (UMD)---are not producing their share of female or minority graduates. Out of 724 students who graduated from these institutions in the past five years, only 13 were minority students and only 47 were women.

"Minnesota public schools in the future are destined to repeat the discriminations of the past unless external interventions upset the systems," Hooker's report states.

"No females or minorities are employed at the rank of assistant professor or above in the administrator training programs in the five state colleges, UMD or St. Thomas. The pattern for the future seems to be established."

Hooker states that the Twin Cities campus of the University of Minnesota has affirmative recruitment programs, particularly for American Indians, and its educational administration program has employed one minority professor.

"Unfortunately" Hooker states, "the University, like all of the other educational training institutions in the state, has employed no females in its division of educational administration."

Hooker makes several recommendations for the improvement of administrator training in the future. He feels that much more emphasis must be placed on continuing education to improve the capabilities of present administrators, that there must be more recruitment of female and minority students and that the quality of preparation for administrators must be raised. He also recommends that research and development of administrator programs must be improved and that programs must be designed to prepare people for emerging administrative roles.

Hooker states that the only way these ends can be reached is through the development of a statewide master plan. "A state plan for educational administration should be developed," he said. "And an agency with statewide responsibility, such as the Higher Education Coordinating Commission, should provide the requisite leadership."

CLA ASSOCIATE DEAN TO RELINQUISH DUTIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

John G. Turnbull, associate dean of the University of Minnesota's College of Liberal Arts, has notified department heads of his intention to relinquish his administrative duties effective June 30, 1973.

Turnbull, 59, is acting dean of the college during the winter quarter leave of Dean E.W. Ziebarth.

As a professor of economics and a member of the graduate faculty of the School of Public Affairs, Turnbull will return to fulltime teaching. He has continued to teach at least one class each quarter, including a number of continuing education classes, during the nine years he has been an associate dean of the college. He was chairman of the economics department before he was named associate dean and has been a member of the University faculty since 1949.

"My personal desire to return to teaching, coupled with the increasing stress of administrative duties, has resulted in this decision, which I have been considering for several months," Turnbull said. "My notice at this time will permit the college and adequate amount of lead time to find my successor. I have indicated my willingness to serve during the summer, if a successor has not been named by June 30."

"Dean Turnbull has been a mainstay of the college in a difficult period," said William G. Shepherd, vice president for academic administration. His direct contributions to the governance of the college will be sorely missed. I am pleased that he is remaining to contribute to the teaching, service and research missions of the college and University."

Turnbull, originally from Milwaukee, Wis., received his bachelor's degree from Denison University and his doctor of philosophy degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Among his most significant publications are "Changing Faces of Economic Insecurity," published by the University Press in 1966; a text on "Economic and Social Security," which he wrote and recently revised for a fourth edition with C. Arthur Williams, and "The Changing Structure of Europe," which he helped write as a member of a group of University scholars who spent a year studying the economic, social and political trends in Europe.

OUTSTATE COMMUNITIES CAN RECRUIT 'U' HEALTH SCIENCES STUDENTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Outstate communities have been invited to "sell" their communities next month to advanced health sciences students at the University of Minnesota.

Minnesota Opportunities Day for the Health Sciences will start at 1 p.m. Friday, Feb. 16, in Coffman Union main ballroom.

Community representatives will be meeting individually with graduating students and their spouses from dentistry, hospital administration, medicine, nursing, pharmacy, public health, veterinary medicine and all allied health programs, as well as interns and residents from University Hospitals.

Last year more than 50 communities participated. Communities can get further information from Dr. David O. Born in the School of Dentistry at 612-373-0287.

'U' HOSPITAL PLANS
NURSE ONCOLOGIST
TRAINING PROGRAM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A program to train nurses to care for cancer patients is being developed at Masonic Memorial Hospital at the University of Minnesota.

According to Dr. B.J. Kennedy, professor of medicine and director of medical oncology, the nurse oncologist will be specially trained to work through public health nursing programs, community hospitals and cancer specialty hospitals throughout the country.

He said he expects the program to extend the nurse's role in research studies at Masonic Memorial Hospital and in the coordination of special treatments.

Program development is being made possible with a grant from the Minnesota Masons through the Masonic Hospital Fund, Inc. With the assistance of a nurse consultant in oncology, Dr. Kennedy will define the program content and then seek local and national funding to implement the training program.

'U' THEATRE TO PRESENT
'THE INHERITANCE' PREMIERE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The premiere production of "The Inheritance," a play by Ernest Joselovitz, will open Friday, Feb. 9, in Scott hall auditorium at the University of Minnesota.

Joselovitz lives in San Francisco, Calif., where another of his plays, "Hagar's Children," opened for its premiere production this month at the American Conservatory Theatre. He was a Schubert Playwriting Scholar at the University in 1965-66.

"The Inheritance," directed by Kenneth L. Graham, director of the University Theatre, is a portrait of a Jewish woman, Willa Neuwald. Graham describes her as "a woman of great capacity limited by the constrictive forces of society.

"Central to Willa's character is the inheritance---from grandmother to mother to daughter---of chutzpah," he said.

Sheriden Thomas plays Willa in the University Theatre's production. Ms. Thomas is a Bush fellow and graduate student in theater at the University. She was a member of the University's Showboat crew last summer. Her home is in Los Alamos, N.M.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Feb. 9, 10, 14, 15, 16 and 17 and at 3:30 p.m. Feb. 13 and 18. Tickets are on sale at Scott hall and at Dayton's.

U OF M STAFF MEMBER ATTENDS HAWAIIAN SEMINAR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mabelle McCullough, assistant dean of students at the University of Minnesota, will deliver the keynote address at a conference on the status of women in higher education in Hawaii on Friday (Feb. 2.)

Miss McCullough is participating in the conference in her capacity as chairman of the American Association of University Women's national committee on standards in higher education.

After a two-day discussion of employment patterns for women in higher education generally and specifically at the University of Hawaii on Feb. 2-3, she will participate in one-day conferences at four of the university's island branches. She expects to return on Tuesday, Feb. 13.

A number of faculty and staff women at the University of Hawaii recently filed a sex discrimination complaint with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The Hawaii conference is sponsored by Hawaii's Commission on the Status of Women and the American Association of University Women.

(FOR RELEASE AT 8 P.M. FRIDAY, FEB. 2, 1973)

Robert L. Jones, director of the University of Minnesota School of Journalism and Mass Communication, is the 1973 recipient of the Mitchell V. Charnley Award for outstanding contributions to broadcast journalism.

Jones was given the award Friday night (Feb. 2) at the Northwest Broadcast News Association (NBNA) annual dinner at the Hotel Dyckman in Minneapolis.

Jones has been active in NBNA for the last 15 years and received the award for "continued dedication to broadcast journalism," said NBNA president John Husak, news director for KEYC-TV in Mankato, Minn. The award was presented by the 1972 recipient Richard Petrik, news director for KOEL radio in Oelwein, Iowa.

Jones has been director of the University's School of Journalism since 1958. He first joined the University faculty in 1947 and became director of the Research Division of the School of Journalism in 1952. A native of Kansas, he has a bachelor's degree from the University of Wichita, and master's and doctor of philosophy degrees from Minnesota.

The award is named in honor of Mitchell V. Charnley, professor emeritus of journalism.

MILWAUKEE TV STATION,
WCCO RADIO TAKE TOP AWARDS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A Milwaukee, Wis. television station and WCCO Radio in Minneapolis received top awards at the Northwest Broadcast News Association's (NBNA) 25th annual seminar.

WITI-TV, Milwaukee, won firsts in three of the five television categories and also earned a second place, a third place and an honorable mention. WCCO Radio won firsts in two of the four radio categories and placed second in a third.

The NBNA Awards Contest is coordinated by the University of Minnesota School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

WITI earned first-place awards in categories for investigative and sustained coverage, documentary programming and editorial broadcasting. The investigative story was an exposé of Milwaukee city employes at play, during working hours, the documentary was a special program on the making of a heart surgeon and the editorial was a warning to drivers in holiday weekend traffic.

WCCO won first-place awards for spot and hard news coverage and for investigative and sustained coverage. The spot news award was for coverage of the spring flood in Rapid City, S.D., and the investigative award was for a program on the selling of wheat to China and the Soviet Union. They won second-place in the documentary category for a program on President Nixon's visit to Moscow.

KSTP-TV, Minneapolis-St. Paul, won first place in the television spot and hard news reporting category for a story about fire victims. Second place in that category went to WITI for a news story about Arthur Bremer the day Governor George Wallace was shot.

Second place in the investigative and sustained television coverage category went to WDIO, Duluth, Minn., for a look at sub-standard housing in Duluth. WITI won both first place and honorable mention in this category.

In the television documentary category, first place went to WITI; second place to WCCO, for their special production "Room 10-A Night at St. Paul-Ramsey," and third place went to KSTP for their production "The Cause is Peace."

The award to WITI was the only award given in the television editorial category.

In the Best Visual Story category first place went to KFIZ, Fon du Lac, Wis., for a filmed report on a ship cutting through the Great Lakes ice. Second place was given to KCMT, Alexandria, Minn., for a feature about a young collector of campaign buttons; third place to WITI for a humorous feature on beards and honorable mention to WDIO, Duluth, for flood coverage.

In radio spot and hard news coverage first place went to WCCO; second place to WMMR, the University of Minnesota campus station, for coverage of the anti-war demonstrations last spring; third place to KMA, Shenandoah, Iowa, and honorable mention to WTSO, Madison, Wis. and WDAY, Fargo, N.D.

In radio investigative and sustained coverage, first place went to WCCO, second place to KRNU, University of Nebraska, third place to WSUI-KSUI, University of Iowa and honorable mention to KOIL, Omaha, Neb.

In the radio documentary category first place went to WISN, Milwaukee, Wis., for a program titled "Until Death Us Do Part," produced by Roger Kortehass, now news director for WWTC in the Twin Cities. Second place went to WCCO, third place to WDAY, Fargo, N.D., and honorable mention to KMA, Shenandoah, Iowa, and WISN, Milwaukee, Wis.

In the radio editorial category first place went to WISN, Milwaukee, Wis., second place to KWNO, Winona, Minn., third place to WWTC, Minneapolis-St. Paul, and honorable mention to WIXK, New Richmond, Wis.

Irving Fang, associate professor of journalism and mass communication, was chief judge in the television competition. Hugh Sanderson, a University of Minnesota graduate student, who has worked with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, was chief judge in the radio contest.

BILINGUAL DAY-CARE TO OPEN IN ST. PAUL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The first bilingual day-care center in Minnesota to teach both Spanish and English will open Monday (Feb. 5) in a Spanish-speaking neighborhood of St. Paul.

"In Mi-Cultura, we will deal with the games, songs, and attitudes of Spanish-speaking peoples," according to Stella Alvo, who teaches the politics of day-care at the University of Minnesota Living-Learning Center.

Ms. Alvo, who grew up in a New York home where she was told not to speak Spanish even though her parents were bilingual, helped organize the center which will be in the Cherokee Park United Church, 371 West Baker.

"My grandmother speaks only Spanish and for years and years I didn't have a grandmother because I couldn't communicate with her," Ms. Alvo said in an interview. "I've had very young kids in day-care who say they are ashamed to speak Spanish."

Mi-Cultura will teach both Spanish and English and will attempt to maintain the neighborhood identity. Parents will help in the planning and teaching at the center which will also employ six full-time staff people.

(MORE)

The center will care for 20 children between the ages of six months and five years, she said.

"Education must stop dividing families because of a lack of communication," Ms. Alvo said. "Education must stop alienating children from the pride of their culture."

Ms. Alvo said that it is ironic that young children are punished for speaking Spanish but when they get into junior high school they are required to learn the language.

Ms. Alvo said the educational system often confuses a child by presenting such concepts as mathematics only in English and by putting the child in a slow class or classifying him as having low I.Q. scores because he can't speak the language.

"If, as in Mi-Cultura, you increase the vocabulary of the native tongue and introduce concepts in the native tongue, then teaching a second language is not confusing," she said.

Encouraging both languages, Ms. Alvo said, helps tie urban communities together. "The Mexican-American culture as well as other cultures have long traditions that tie their communities together even in urban neighborhoods.

"Last year, on the west side of St. Paul, residents organized themselves to have nine days of Pasadas," she said. "This custom has long been carried on in Mexico, and such traditions run through the home life background of these urban children."

Ms. Alvo, who has a degree in mathematics and economics from Brooklyn College in New York, said she is trying to improve the image of day-care.

"Poor people have been told they need day-care for their children so they can go to work, but among the middle class these centers are called nursery schools and considered a status thing," she said.

WHITNEY TO COORDINATE
'U' BUSINESS COURSE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Business students at the University of Minnesota will see business management from an executive's point of view through a course which will be taught by Wheelock Whitney and a number of other prominent Minnesota businessmen this spring.

Whitney is a former chief executive officer of Dain, Kalman and Quail, Inc., a Minneapolis investment firm, and a former Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate.

Whitney said the course should accomplish two objectives: "give students a chance to hear from and question people from the 'real world' of business and serve as a bridge between the University and the business community."

Whitney said that a closer relationship between the University and Twin Cities businessmen is necessary.

"The business community does not have the confidence it should have in the College of Business Administration," Whitney said. "This could be due to a variety of reasons, but getting together should create a climate for better understanding and a build-up in confidence."

Whitney plans to invite leading businessmen from throughout the state to serve as guest lecturers.

The course, which will be offered 2:15 to 5 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays during spring quarter, is limited to students with high grades in business.

Professors Albert K. Wickesberg and Richard K. Gaumnitz of the department of management and transportation will provide academic input into the course.

U OF M TO SPONSOR 'CAREERS IN EDUCATION FOR MINORITIES' DAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A special program for minority students interested in learning about career opportunities in education will be held Saturday, Feb. 17, from 1 to 4 p.m. in Coffman Union Men's Lounge on the University of Minnesota's Minneapolis campus.

Despite the decrease in general demand for new teachers in the past few years, more minority teachers are needed, according to Frank Braun, assistant director of the College of Education's placement office.

"Schools have shown a sincere, genuine demand for minority graduates," he said. "There's no question that there continues to be an across-the-board demand for minority teachers in all fields. The jobs are there for any reasonably good candidate."

Speakers will include Corydon Nichols, personnel director for the Minneapolis school district, Flavio Vega, community program assistant for the Martin Luther King Program, Chris Cavender from the University's admissions office and Frank Wilderson, assistant dean of the College of Education.

Representatives of community groups and University programs will be available to answer prospective students' questions.

The program is part of the College of Education's recruitment drive to attract minority students to careers in education. "The door to education has been closed to minority students for a long time," said James Beard, the coordinator of the program. "What we are trying to do is open that door. But the student must walk through himself."

Beard, who has worked for the State Human Rights Commission and several community groups, has been hired as a counselor to begin a recruitment and affirmative-action program for minority students.

Personal and career counseling is already available and certain undergraduate programs will be offering tutorial help and adopting more flexible entrance standards.

Further information on the program or the recruitment drive is available from Beard in the Student Personnel Office, College of Education, 206 Burton Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455 or call 373-2257.

'U' OFFERING CLASS FOR MINORITY CONTRACTORS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The Office of Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action at the University of Minnesota is now offering two sixteen-week classes for minority contractors.

"The intent of these classes is to upgrade the potential of minority construction businessmen," said Arnold Murray, coordinator for the program. "These men are individuals who, for several reasons, are underemployed in the Twin Cities area."

Held every Monday and Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. for the next sixteen weeks, all classes will meet in room 157 Physics building on the Minneapolis campus. Monday classes will deal with estimation and Thursday classes will cover blueprint reading.

Classes will include guest lectures by individuals from established firms, and will cover field inspection and general areas of concern to minority contractors.

"Efforts toward hiring minority contractors as subs on construction projects is an area that is underdeveloped in Minnesota," Murray said. "Hopefully this program will provide a step in the direction of solving the participant's construction problems."

Fee for the sixteen-week period is $15 for the estimation session and $8 for the blueprint-reading session. Those interested are encouraged to call Arnold Murray, Office of Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action, 373-7969 for more information and individual assistance.

RACISM IN WOMEN'S MOVEMENTS IS SUBJECT OF SPEECH AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A black sociologist will probe racism in past and present women's movements in a speech Wednesday (Feb. 14) at the University of Minnesota.

Jacquelyne J. Jackson, associate professor of medical sociology at Duke University, Durham, N.C., will speak on "The Racism of Women's Liberation" at 8 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium. The speech is open to the public with no admission charge.

Her visit is sponsored by a University class which is studying the impact of feminism on American intellectual life. Ms. Jackson will meet with the class on Thursday to subject the women's liberation movement to scrutiny.

Elsa Greene, coordinator of the class, said Ms. Jackson feels that because of its emphasis on individual liberation, the contemporary feminist movement ignores minority issues. Her speech will also look at racism in the earlier suffrage movement.

Ms. Jackson, who holds a doctor of philosophy degree in sociology, has done extensive research on aging blacks and black women. Among her publications is an article which challenges the stereotype of the black matriarchy, another on interaction between black females and males, and many articles on the aged black. She is the head of the Caucus of Black Sociologists of the American Sociology Association.

Ms. Jackson is the third in a series of five women speakers, each prominent in her respective field, who is being brought to campus to meet with the class.

U OF M POLICE BEGIN
ANTI-THEFT PROGRAM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

University of Minnesota police have set in motion a plan to decrease thievery on campus and facilitate recovery of stolen items, according to Captain John Brooker, acting police chief.

Centered around a new personal information sheet, the program is being tested at two University dormitories but is designed to serve all members of the University community, Brooker said.

"We have many valuable items that have been returned to us and we have many people in the community who have had these items stolen," Lt. Arthur G. Kirby said. "But since we have no means of identification, we can't match the two up.

"This is particularly true with bicycles, a common stolen item," he said. "For example, a student may call us and say his black, five-speed bicycle was stolen. We may have six black, five-speed bicycles turned in, but unless he has the serial number, we can't do anything."

Two copies of the personal information sheet have been distributed to all residents of Pioneer and Comstock halls and are available at the police department for faculty, staff and other students. The resident will use the sheet to record serial numbers and other identifying marks and numbers for all personal items of value.

"The resident should keep one copy himself and send the other home, put it in the dormitory files or register it with the police," Kirby said. "When something is stolen, the identifying numbers or marks will be entered in the National Crime Information Data Computer. That way, if the stolen item shows up anywhere in the country, the agency that recovered it will know it's a stolen item and the resident will be able to get it back."

University police decided not to participate in the currently popular identification program where certain registered numbers are engraved on personal property with special engraving devices.

"We decided the engraving procedure would not be effective with students," Kirby said. "They are too transient, the operation would require too much paperwork and, most importantly, it would cost too much money.

"By encouraging students and community people to have a record of serial numbers in a safe place, we hope to help them establish this habit for the future," Kirby said.

'U' RECEIVES GRANT TO PLAN ART MUSEUM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A grant of $20,000 from the Ben and Abby Grey Foundation, Inc. has been given to the University of Minnesota Foundation for the purpose of planning the building of a one million dollar art museum.

"Whether or not the gallery will actually be built will depend on the results of this feasibility study," said Robert Odegard, executive director of the University of Minnesota Foundation.

The agreement between the Grey Foundation and the University Foundation specifies that the museum, with related facilities, is to be constructed on the St. Paul campus on a site to be provided by the University, and that the museum will be staffed and maintained by the University.

The agreement stipulates that the museum "will be used initially, among other things, to house and display this (Grey) Foundation's collection of art." It also states "the program developed for the art museum and the collection is to be one related to and integrated in significant ways with other disciplines such as the classics, all forms of art, linguistics, history and sociology."

The gift was announced at the regular meeting of the University's Board of Regents Friday (Feb. 9).

BLACK POET TO GIVE
READING AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Sonia Sanchez, black poet and playwright, will give a reading of her poetry Friday (Feb. 16) at Coffman Union on the University of Minnesota campus.

The reading, at 8 p.m. in Coffman's main ballroom, is free and open to the public. Ms. Sanchez's visit has been timed to coincide with Afro-American History Week events in the Twin Cities and nation-wide.

Currently teaching grade-school children in New York City, Ms. Sanchez is the author of a book of poetry called "Homecoming." She is a former faculty member of the black studies department at the University of Pittsburgh.

A play written by Ms. Sanchez, "Sister Son/ji", was part of the "Four by Four in Black" theater production which recently played at Shevlin arena on campus. Her appearance on campus is sponsored by the program council of Coffman Union.

GRADUATE SCHOOL DEAN TELLS REGENTS:
FINANCIAL TROUBLE AHEAD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The University of Minnesota Graduate School may be headed for financial trouble as a result of cutbacks in federal and state support to advanced education, May Brodbeck, Graduate School dean, told a committee of the Board of Regents Thursday (Feb. 8).

"It's going to be a disaster," Dean Brodbeck said. "Demands on our special appropriations for research have increased five to tenfold and we now can fund only 30 per cent of the requests from our faculty for research projects."

Total funding of graduate education has remained roughly steady, she said, while inflation and demands on advanced research and education have increased. As a result, the University's rankings in graduate education, except in agriculture and the health sciences, have declined nationally relative to a number of other universities, she said.

The dean said the quality of graduate education can be improved through increased funds for research, funds for getting high-caliber graduate students and review of all graduate programs. "All of these cost money," she said.

"We could lose all of our assistantships and fellowships which are all federally funded," she said, "and that is the way we get good graduate students."

Lester A. Malkerson, a Regent from Shakopee, questioned whether the University should be admitting more students into Graduate School when Ph.D graduates are unable to get jobs.

Dean Brodbeck said that negative reports of the job market have been exaggerated.

"In 1970-71, unemployment among science doctorates was only 1.4 per cent, and 1.9 per cent among engineering doctorates, compared to an overall unemployment rate of 5.9 per cent," she said.

Dean Brodbeck admitted, however, that the situation is "very bad for English and possibly history doctorates." She said her department---philosophy ---has placed all its doctorates.

Dean Brodbeck said the job market cannot be predicted when a student enters school and that as society gets more sophisticated the demand will increase for people with advanced education.

Board Chairman Elmer L. Andersen said the University should allow students to enter fields they want regardless of the job market. "There's another part of the University's responsibility and that is to help people achieve their own goals," he said.

At the full board meeting, the Regents set aside for a month a policy which would require University employees to reveal their outside affiliations when they are speaking on issues.

The proposed resolution was partially a reaction to the recent testimony of C.S. Smythe, Jr., professor of industrial relations, before a legislative committee considering amendments to the public employee bargaining act. Smythe did not identify himself as a consultant for the League of Minnesota Municipalities when he spoke to the committee.

In further action, the Regents voted to amend the civil service rules to allow the use of sick leave for women unable to perform job duties because of pregnancy. Roy Richardson, director of personnel, said this brings University civil service rules into line with Health, Education and Welfare department regulations.

The Regents also passed a resolution to recommend to the Legislature significant improvement in the retirement benefits available to University civil service staff, who are included in the Minnesota State Retirement System. Retirement benefits for Minnesota's state employees currently rank 36th out of 41 states for employees who retire after 30 years of service and 39th out of 41 for those who retire after 20 years of service.

STUTTERERS STUDIED FOR TWENTY-THREE YEARS

by Bill Hafling
University of Minnesota Science Writer

The young man stood in front of the movie camera and microphone wearing a new suit and tie, his hair neatly combed into place. His task was simple---to give his name, age, where he was from and a little bit about himself.

Trying desperately to speak, he stood there uttering a long chattering string of sounds which no one could understand. A chronic stutterer, he was one of a group of young people who had come to the University of Minnesota Speech Clinic for treatment of advanced speech difficulties.

The year was 1949 and the head of the clinic was Dr. Bryng Bryngelson. After eight weeks of intensive "psycho-talk-therapy," the same young man, with considerably less difficulty, told the camera his name and some things about himself. So did the others. They were understandable.

Then they had to do the hardest thing of all for a stutterer to do. Return home.

"The most difficult thing I can think of for a stutterer to do is to talk to his parents, his teachers, his friends, and try to explain what he's been doing all this time," Dr. Bryngelson, now 82 years old, said.

Follow-up filming was made of the group in 1952, 1957 and again in 1972---twenty-three years after treatment. Each time, each member of the group told the camera, for the record, something about themselves.

Interviewed in 1973, three of the stutterers (who asked that their names not be used) had some interesting things to say about their experience at the University.

One, a successful oil distributor, said laughingly, "I only stutter when I talk. The rest of the time, I'm fine." His life-long hobby since leaving the University clinic in 1949 has been public speaking and he has entered several speech-making contests with the Toastmasters Clubs International.

"Tell people it's all a hoax," said another man, a successful social worker. "We came here to get 'cured' and we're still stutterers," he said, speaking carefully---yet quite clearly.

"I've learned that there are more important things on Earth than speaking perfectly," said a third man, who sings in his church choir. "Stutterers never stutter when they are singing, although I've often wondered what would happen if I started to block when trying to reach a high note.

"The main thing for me is to know that I can control my stuttering and that people can understand me when I do," he said.

Dr. Bryngelson said that one important part of the therapy was to teach them that their stuttering was in no way a handicap.

"We tried to get them to turn a liability into an asset," he said. "We emphasized modifying the total behavior of the subjects, beginning with exercises to strengthen voluntary control over their speech.

"Also much ado was made in the area of emotional hygiene. They were taught to think about their feelings, attitudes, and prejudices toward themselves and others.

In addition, the stutterers were required to take a "healthy dose of advertising their problem to strangers." This involved introducing themselves to strangers on campus and having a conversation with them.

"Incidentally," Dr. Bryngelson said, "they were managed by clinicians who were imbued with a disciplined 'loving care' for people. In any program of behavior modification, patients need understanding of what they might be 'all about.' We tried to make this happen. Our ultimate goal was to make them their own clinicians for their own problems with the final responsibility for their success resting with them."

"Stuttering has been a puzzle to people for at least 2200 years," Dr. Bryngelson added. "No one has the right to say they have all the answers. In 1949 we were trying to correlate it with physiology. I've seen about 14,000 stutterers by now and may know less about it than when I started. I know stutterers get an emotional beating from others which they don't deserve. The main thing is that they realize they are normal human beings."

The only formal treatment given the stutterers was that received in 1949. The film, documenting their progress was recently shown at the University. Technical director for the film was Donald Cain, who also did the original filming in 1949.

Born in Otisco, Minnesota in 1891, Dr. Bryngelson "retired" and was named Professor Emeritus of Speech and Pediatrics in 1960. Despite his "retirement", he is an active researcher, planning several projects and working on a new book. He is the author of the well-known books "Personality Development: Getting Next to Yourself" (1965), and "Know Yourself: A Workbook for Those Who Stutter" (1944), as well as nearly 100 articles on speech, stuttering, handedness, reading ability and personality.

CONFERENCE TO EXPLORE IMPACT OF CABLE TV

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A conference designed to raise basic questions about the impact of cable television before it becomes a reality is planned for Saturday, Feb. 24 at Augsburg College in St. Paul.

Sponsored by the University Community Development Corporation, the conference will explore cable television's impact on the University of Minnesota community. Individual workshops will cover its effect on education, community services, health care, culture, the arts, politics and government.

Anyone in the University community, as well as the general public, is invited to attend the conference beginning at 9:30 a.m. and lasting until 3:30 p.m. in Augsburg's College Center. A $1 registration fee will be charged to cover the cost of materials.

The keynote speech will be delivered at 10:40 a.m. by Lawrence Lichty, executive director of Wisconsin's Commission on Cable Communication. Lichty is also professor of communication arts at the University of Wisconsin. Another morning session will feature a report on the status of cable television in the metropolitan area.

The afternoon will be devoted to workshops led by local alderman and staff members from the Metropolitan Council, Citizens League and the University.

Lunch will be available at extra cost in Augsburg's cafeteria or participants may bring their own.

Pre-registration by mail is preferred, although participants may register at the door. To register early, send name, address and organization, if any, plus $1 to University Community Development Corporation, 1813 University Ave. S.E., Minneapolis, Minn. 55414 or call 378-0982.

REGISTRATION NOW OPEN FOR SPRING QUARTER U OF M WOMEN'S PROGRAMS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mail registration is now open for spring quarter classes offered through Women's Programs at the University of Minnesota.

This spring five liberal arts seminars and 12 regular University courses will be offered in the areas of American life, child psychology, English, history, humanities, political science and psychology.

New this spring is a four-credit course on Black writers in the United States Taught by Professor Chester Anderson of the University's English department, the course will cover prose, poetry and drama by Black writers of the 20th century. Authors for the course, which will meet Fridays from 9:30 a.m. until 12 noon at MacPhail Center in downtown Minneapolis, will include Booker T. Washington, Richard Wright, Ralph Ellison, James Baldwin, and Ishmael Reed.

Three supper seminars will also be offered this spring. "Alternative Futures for Man," which will meet from 4:30 until 8:30 p.m. March 4 and 18, will be taught by Arthur Harkins, assistant professor of history and philosophy of education. Fee for the seminar is $17 including meals.

"Alternatives to the Family," taught by Professor John Brantner of the psychiatry department, will meet Thursday, April 12, from 6 to 9 p.m. Fee for the seminar is $8.50 including the meal.

"Psychic Phenomena," taught by Professor Mulford Q. Sibley, will meet from 4:30 until 8:30 p.m. April 1 and 8. Fee for the seminar is $17 including meals. All three seminars will meet in the St. Paul campus Student Center.

Spring quarter begins March 28 and runs until June 15. For further information and to register, write to Women's Programs, 200 Wesbrook Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

STUDENT UNION GAMES

SET FOR 'U' THIS WEEK (Valerie Cunningham)

A regional games tournament of the Association of College Unions International (ACUI) will take place in Coffman Union on the University of Minnesota campus Thursday and Friday (Feb. 15 and 16).

About 250 students from colleges and universities in Iowa, North and South Dakota and Minnesota will participate in bridge, chess, table tennis, bowling and billiards events. About 25 University students are entered in competition.

The games will begin at 2:30 p.m. Thursday and continue through the evening. On Friday competition will begin at 9:30 a.m. and continue through the day. Events are scheduled simultaneously throughout Coffman Union.

Winners of the regional competition will compete in the national games this April.

The ACUI is a national organization of college student unions.

'U' WORKERS TO HOLD SEMINAR ON WOMEN IN WORKING WORLD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

An informational seminar on the changing role of women in the labor force, independently organized by three University of Minnesota civil service workers, will meet Monday (Feb. 19) in room 235 Nolte center on the Minneapolis campus.

Scheduled to run from noon to 2 p.m., the seminar will be conducted by Pamela LaVigne, Deanna Carstens and Sharon Henricks, all employees of the vocational-technical division of the College of Education.

The first in a two-part program, the seminar will offer information on the history of women's status in the work world, a profile of today's woman worker, sex-role conditioning and the reasons why women find themselves consistently in certain types of jobs. An overview of feminist activities and publications at the University, in the Twin City area, the state of Minnesota and nationally will also be given.

The second half of the seminar, which will meet Monday, Feb. 26, in room 63 Peik hall on the Minneapolis campus, will be for the purpose of discussing the information distributed at the first half.

"We haven't had any consultation with the academic staff in planning this seminar," said Mrs. Carstens, one of the program planners. "We've done everything on our own---the planning, research and profile work---and are paying for the seminar ourselves."

The seminar is free and open to the public and no registration is necessary. For further information, contact Deanna Carstens, 125 Peik Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

STUDY PREDICTS DECLINE IN COLLEGE ENROLLMENTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Enrollment in all public undergraduate colleges and universities in Minnesota, except St. Cloud State College, will decline by 1985, according to a study released today to the House higher education committee of the 1973 Legislature.

The report, titled "Public College Enrollments in Minnesota's Changing Population Pattern 1970-1985," also predicted sharp declines in the number of students attending nearly all of the state junior colleges.

The study of full-time undergraduate enrollment based its predictions on population and migration statistics and studies of areas served by the state's colleges, junior colleges and the University of Minnesota system.

The report, which was the outgrowth of a seminar at the University and published by the Center for Urban and Regional Affairs (CURA), was mostly written by John R. Borchert, CURA director, Thomas G. Mortenson, a research fellow for budget planning and information services, and Arnold R. Alanen, who is now an assistant professor at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

St. Cloud State College is expected to grow from 8,203 students in 1970 to 8,263 in 1985 for an increase of only one per cent over the 15-year period.

Moorhead State College will suffer the most serious decline in students, according to the report, with a loss of 25 per cent of its enrollment.

Southwest State College and the University of Minnesota, Duluth, are expected to lose 17 and 16 per cent, respectively, the study said.

The University's Twin Cities campus is expected to lose one per cent of its undergraduate enrollment, the report said.

Enrollment predictions will generally follow population growth patterns, the report said.

"The decline in college-age populations will directly affect enrollment earliest and relatively greatest outside the major growth region of the state," the study found, and "relatively least and latest in the metropolitan area and neighboring campuses."

A dramatic 75.7 per cent increase was predicted for Inver Grove Heights Junior College in a Twin Cities suburb.

All other junior colleges will lose enrollments by 1985, with the most serious loss---43 per cent---predicted at Rainy River Junior College in International Falls with a projected class of 131 fulltime students, the study concluded.

A trend toward increasing numbers of Twin Cities students attending outstate campuses was predicted to continue.

"At present the organizational survival of outstate campuses is dependent on attracting an increasing share of their enrollments from populations served in the past by the Twin Cities campus " of the University, the report said.

The study considered "tertiary education" which includes all post-high school education except graduate and professional schools and extension classes.

In 1970, the report said, the 66,500 Minnesota high school graduates could choose among 188 tertiary educational institutions in Minnesota.

Beginning in 1960, the birth rate began to decline. "The number of high school graduates in Minnesota will peak in 1977 at about 76,000, then decline slowly to about 75,000 in 1980. Then, following the birth curve set 18 years earlier, the number of high school graduates will drop to 68,600 by 1982 and more later," the study predicted.

Recommendations to alleviate some of the pressures foreseen by the report included the use of student financial aid, redefinition of liberal education, increasing emphasis on continuing education and better coordination among institutions.

Student financial aid, the report said, may increase student mobility and make it more likely that Twin Cities students could travel to outstate campuses to attend school.

A tendency to overemphasize the service functions and problem-oriented studies at the expense of a liberal education was mentioned.

"Americans have an information overload---more facts than we know what to do with. The need continues to grow for a basic framework of knowledge upon which to sort and relate the mass of facts," the report said, in citing the need for a "modern, revitalized liberal education."

The study recommended better coordination among existing institutions as an alternative to increasing the number of college, junior college or University campuses. "The state now has the physical components of a fully developed system of tertiary campuses," it said.

"The presence of a local junior college greatly reduces the number of students who migrate to a four-year campus in the first year of college," the report said.

But it warned that "placing a new institution of higher education in a town or region as an instrument of economic growth should at least be questioned and probably rejected in future policy considerations."

The report's predictions, which are based on estimating a stabilized rate of high school graduates attending college, may be too high because the rate of students attending college has decreased since 1970, Mortenson said in an interview.

Because the study was based on 1970 data, he said, the impact of Metropolitan State College is not measured, but he said it could take students from the University in the Twin Cities, St. Cloud State College and Mankato State College.

The study does not detail the future for area vocational technical institutes, but generally predicts some continued growth and later stabilized enrollment for them, he said.

ENROLLMENT

The report said that most of the recent growth of higher education was a crisis response resulting from a sharp increase in the number of 18-year-olds in 1964 and 1965.

The state colleges and universities and the percentage change in their undergraduate enrollment projected between 1970 and 1985 are:

Bemidji State College	-14%
Mankato State College	-10
Moorhead State College	-25
Southwest State College	-17
St. Cloud State College	+ 1
Winona State College	- 4
U of M, Duluth	-16
U of M, Morris	-11
U of M, Twin Cities	- 1

Changes in enrollment at junior colleges over the 15-year period, according to the report, will be:

Austin	-27.9
Brainerd	-21.6
Fergus Falls	-34.6
Itasca in Grand Rapids	-41.8
Northland in Thief River Falls	-11.3
Rainy River in International Falls	-43.0
Rochester	- 5.1
Willmar	-31.4
Worthington	-37.3
Hibbing	-29.6
Mesabi in Virginia	-29.3
Vermilion in Ely	-29.6
Anoka-Ramsey in Coon Rapids	-16.4
Inver Hills in Inver Grove	+75.7
Lakewood in White Bear Lake	-10.5
Metropolitan in Minneapolis	-10.0
Normandale in Bloomington	-11.0

FORMER SOVIET SCIENTIST
TO SPEAK AT U OF M
ON ACADEMIC FREEDOM IN USSR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Professor Herman Branover, former Soviet scientist, will speak on academic freedom in the U.S.S.R. at 2:30 p.m. Thursday (Feb. 22) in room 124 Mines and Metallurgy building on the Minneapolis campus of the University of Minnesota.

Branover is the former head of the Physics Institute in Riga, Latvia. He is world-renowned for his work in magnetohydrodynamics and is a past candidate for the Nobel Prize.

In November, 1971, Branover asked permission to leave the U.S.S.R. for Israel for reasons of conscience. Thereafter, he was forced to leave his teaching post and he and his family were harassed, as have been thousands of other Jewish intellectuals who wish to emigrate from the USSR.

Branover, his wife, and eight-year-old son were granted permission to leave the U.S.S.R. after Henry Kissinger, U.S. Presidential adviser, requested permission from the Soviet government on behalf of several U.S. Senators. Payment of a $40,000 "exit tax" was required before the Branovers were allowed to leave.

RANSOMED SOVIET SCIENTIST INVITED TO UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

by Bill Hafling
University of Minnesota Science Writer

Waiting---fearing---yet hoping still---Ben Levich and his family exist in a "state of suspended animation." In a Valentine's Day telephone conversation to Moscow by Professor L.E. Scriven of the University of Minnesota, Levich said, "We now exist in a suspended situation. So all wait and we wait."

Earlier this month (February), Levich's son Alexander was taken by police officers, searched, interrogated and released after three hours. As Tanya Levich, his mother, related, "There was nothing about him and so he was released."

"All the time," from different points, we receive not very pleasant news," Levich said. "We live all the time in a kind of nervous stress. For example a physicist we know is in a very, very difficult position. There was a search in his apartment and maybe there will be a trial for some reason. It is not quite clear.

"You see, all the time there is harassment, and therefore it is not easy to have a quiet situation. Only when you work---the one way for nervous relaxation."

Ben Levich is known to the world scientific community as Dr. Veniamin Grigorievich Levich, an authority in theoretical physics, electrochemistry and engineering sciences.

In November of 1972, Dean Richard Swalin of the University of Minnesota's Institute of Technology wrote a letter to Levich inviting him to be a visiting professor at the University for 1973.

Levich managed to send word that he would gladly accept the offer but was refused permission to visit the U.S. by the authorities of the Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R. on the "totally absurd ground that I was 'too busy' at the Institute of Electrochemistry, and because of the existing political situation.

"Taking into account my present conditions---when I am excluded from any kind of scientific activity and thoroughly isolated from my former collaborators and colleagues---the first of these reasons for refusal sounds like sheer mockery," Levich said.

As to the second reason, Levich said "it obviously contradicts the principles of scientific exchange between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R...Thus the Soviet scientific officials are evidently anxious to deprive me of making any further contribution to international science."

RANSOM: OVER $100,000

Early in 1972, Levich had been offered a job at Tel Aviv University and had accepted it by phone. He applied for visas for himself and his family to go to Israel and was denied.

He was subsequently removed from his jobs at the Institute of Electrochemistry of the Soviet Academy of Sciences and his chair at Moscow University, demoted in status, ostracized and prevented from lecturing, publishing and attending conferences.

He has since been told that he will never be given an exit visa and that an appeal is futile. Even if his efforts to obtain a visa are eventually successful, the "education tax"---in fact, a ransom---which he would have to pay the government to leave, would be over $100,000 for himself and his family.

(Articles in London newspapers, "Russians Demand 'Ransom' From Scientist," September, 1972, report that the "tax" introduced by the Soviet Ministry of the Interior affects all would-be migrants with an academic background, and "is being especially applied to Jews...")

The ransom on the Levich family is especially high because all members of the family are well educated.

Though prevented from working, Tanya Levich is a translator of English works (and taught English to Ben from Agatha Christie novels.) Yvgeny, 24, an astrophysicist, received his Ph.D. from Moscow State University when he was 20 years old--- the youngest Ph.D from that University. Alexandre, 28, is a corrosion engineer who has had to take work as a draftsman at a printing company.

ARE SCIENTISTS GOVERNMENT PROPERTY?

In an earlier statement Levich said, "in conformity with the dogma which is accepted in this country (Russia), the fate of the scientist is ruled not by any established principles of law, but by mysterious 'government interests.'

"Are scientists free human beings? Or are they the property of the government? This is the question which I believe to be of major significance for the future of all scientists and for science as a whole.

"At present, when the role of science and scientists in the life of society has greatly increased, when science itself cannot develop while being limited to any single country, the situation has considerably changed---scientists can no longer keep strictly to the ancient principle of non-intervention.

"New concepts have appeared, those of professional honor and the solidarity of scientists all over the world. I believe that the world scientific community cannot remain indifferent to the persecution of even one of its members for his national or religious convictions.

"The progress of science can by no means be separated from the problems of humanism and of the freedom of conscience of scientists."

University of Minnesota scientists are still hopeful that Levich and his family will be able to come to the University. They have joined in an appeal by scientists throughout the world, asking that Soviet authorities---at the very least---allow the Leviches to resume their scientific work and correspondence.

More than over 3,000 scientists in the world, particularly U.S., British, and Canadian, but including scientists from Germany, France, Belgium, Italy, Holland, India, Denmark, Switzerland, Sweden, Australia, Norway, Israel, Ireland, Spain, Portugal, Trinidad, Colombia, Japan, Hong Kong, and New Zealand, have protested to Soviet officials about the plight of the Leviches and other Soviet Jewish scientists.

Meanwhile the police come to the Levich apartment and ask, "Is Professor Levich working? There are rumors that he may be a parasite." If classified as a "parasite," Levich would face prosecution and imprisonment. In the meantime, he goes to the library when he can, "works on theory"---and waits.

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO PRESENT ADAM HAN-GORSKI

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Adam Han-Gorski, violinist, will be the featured soloist in the University of Minnesota Symphony Orchestra's second concert appearance of the year in Northrop auditorium Tuesday (Feb. 27) at 8 p.m.

Richard Massmann, associate professor of music at the University, will conduct the 75-member orchestra. The concert is open to the public with no admission charge.

Han-Gorski, associate concertmaster of the Minnesota Orchestra, will be the soloist for the orchestra's performance of Tchaikovsky's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D Major," Op. 35. The program will also include "Leonore Overture" No. 3, Op. 72a by Beethoven;" Valses Nobles et Sentimentales" by Ravel and "Symphonic Metamorphoses of Themes by Carl Marie von Weber" by Hindemith.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Adam Han-Gorski was born in Poland, where he began to receive nationwide acclaim as a violinist at the age of six. With an appointment from the Polish government, he took further studies in Czechoslovakia and later in Israel, when he emigrated with his family. At the age of 19, he auditioned for Jascha Heifetz, who offered him a scholarship in his Master Class at the University of Southern California.

At the completion of his studies with Heifetz in 1966, the master presented him with an 18th-Century Venetian Gofriller violin. Han-Gorski has performed as Concertmaster of the Metropolitan Opera Company, first violinist with the Cleveland Orchestra, Concertmaster of the Syracuse Symphony and as soloist throughout the United States, Europe, Mexico and Israel with such conductors as Leopold Stokowski, Arthur Fiedler and Istran Kertesz.

AAUP TO INVESTIGATE BLACK STUDIES ISSUE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A committee of the Twin Cities chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) will investigate the issues surrounding the temporary removal of George King, chairman of the University of Minnesota Afro-American studies department and John Ward, assistant chairman of the department, from their administrative duties.

AAUP President Paul L. Murphy said his group has worked "quietly" and "extensively" behind the scenes, but that "the situation is far from a constructive resolution" of the controversy.

Murphy said the committee would "clear the air" of "irresponsible rumors" and study the actions of some administrators "lacking in proper accountability" and the influence of groups outside the University on the department.

The committee will be chaired by Professor Harold Chase, of the political science department, and will include Professors Homer E. Mason of philosophy, Shirley Clark of education, Ernest Coleman of physics and Martin Dworkin of microbiology.

King and Ward were relieved of their administrative duties upon the recommendation of a community and University committee appointed by President Malcolm Moos to investigate a number of conflicts within the department.

U OF M SUMMER SESSION TO OFFER
NEW WORKSHOPS, 2,000 COURSES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Aerospace studies for teachers, computers in the humanities, forestry for secondary teachers and dance in education are a few of the areas to be covered for the first time during the University of Minnesota's 1973 Summer Session.

Nearly 2,000 courses in all fields will be offered again this year during the University's two summer terms. First term will begin June 18 and end July 20. Second term will run from July 23 to Aug. 24. Tuition for summer courses is $12.50 per credit hour.

Offered for the first time this summer, the two-week aerospace engineering workshop is designed to give elementary and secondary school teachers a background in recent discoveries in the space sciences. Organized with the cooperation of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the department of aerospace engineering and mechanics at the University, the course will meet from June 18 to 29. Advance application is required and enrollment is limited.

Also new this year is a first-term workshop on computers in the humanities. The workshop is designed to provide an introduction to the use of the computer in disciplines outside science and technology, such as social science, English, literature, fine arts and linguistics.

Regular features of the University's summer session are hundreds of courses in all academic disciplines, the Itasca Forestry and Biological session, death-education and drug-abuse workshops, geographical and archaeological field sessions and the Summer Arts Study Center at Grand Rapids, Minn.

Registration for first term runs from May 23 to June 5. There will be a final day of registration on June 18. Registrants for second term may register during first-term registration periods or from July 16 to 20 with a final day of registration on July 23.

For further information contact the Summer Session, 135 Johnston Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455

U OF M SUMMER SESSION TO OFFER
LOW-COST FOREIGN STUDY PROGRAMS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Students who enroll in the University of Minnesota's 1973 Summer Session will have an opportunity to study in Germany, France, Spain and Mexico at low-budget prices.

Programs of study offering both graduate and undergraduate credit will be offered in Bochum and Erlangen, Germany; Besancon, France; Barcelona, Spain and Cuernavaca, Mexico.

In each instance, costs of tuition and fees, room and board, books and transportation will total less than $800.

The program at Bochum, Germany, will be offered from July 23 through August 24 and will be limited to 40 students, both graduate and undergraduate. Offered through the department of German in cooperation with Ruhr University, the five-week term will provide intensive language study and cultural opportunities.

Programs at Erlangen, Besancon, and Barcelona will provide graduate work for in-service language teachers. Developed by the University's department of secondary education in joint sponsorship with the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages, the programs are designed to help teachers become more aware of the aspects of foreign culture which appeal to students, gain background in the contemporary life of the country whose language they are teaching and provide opportunities to gather culturally authentic materials for classroom study in their home schools.

Erlangen, located in Bavaria, offers a university setting in a community small enough to allow participation in the life of the area.

Besancon is the home of the Institut de Linguistique Applique, an internationally known center for the training of teachers of French as a foreign language. The program in Spain will make use of the facilities of the Institute of North American Studies at the University of Barcelona.

Enrollment in each of the in-service teacher programs is open to 20 language teachers at all levels---elementary, secondary or college.

In addition to the in-service teaching programs, study opportunities will be available to 20 other students seeking graduate or undergraduate credit in each of the programs in France and Spain. Courses for these students will be offered through the departments of French and Spanish.

Dates for the program at Erlangen, Germany, are July 2 through Aug. 10; at Besancon, July 2 through Aug. 10; and in Barcelona, June 25 through July 27.

The 10-week language and culture study program in Mexico, offered through the University of Minnesota, Morris, will run from June 18 through Aug. 24. Beginning, intermediate and advanced students will be able to earn 15 credits in language within the Mexican cultural setting.

Students enrolled in this program will participate in cultural excursions to historical and archaeological sites in and near Cuernavaca, a city of more than 100,000 people located near Mexico City.

For further information on the individual programs, contact the Summer Session, 135 Johnston Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

'U' TO SPONSOR HIGH SCHOOL STRING FESTIVAL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The University of Minnesota music department will sponsor a High School String Orchestra Festival Saturday, March 3.

The festival will provide the opportunity for over 100 high school string players to perform representative string literature and to listen to a professional string quartet.

At 1:15 p.m. Lea Foli, John Tartaglia, Robert Jamieson and James Clute, members of the Minnesota Orchestra and part-time University faculty members, will perform Brahms' "Quartet in A Minor, Op. 51, No. 2."

Foli, Tartaglia, Jamieson and Clute will also direct the high school musicians in sectional rehearsals.

The Festival Orchestra, conducted by University Symphony Orchestra conductor Dr. Richard Massmann, will perform at 4:15 p.m. This informal concert will include Mozart's "Adagio and Fugue in C Minor" and Vaughn-Williams' "Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra."

The two performances, to be held in Coffman Union main ballroom, are free and open to the public.

JOHN HARTFORD AT WHOLE COFFEEHOUSE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

John Hartford, song-writer, performer, recording star and author, will appear in concert Friday and Saturday, March 2 and 3, at the Whole Coffeehouse in the basement of Coffman Union on the University of Minnesota campus.

Hartford, who was a regular on the Smothers Brothers' Comedy Hour, the Summer Brothers Smothers Show and the Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour, wrote the song "Gentle on My Mind," which won three Grammy Awards and was the most recorded song in the world for two consecutive years.

Hartford's early banjo style, influenced by the music of country western musician Earl Scruggs, has been developed over the years to what he calls "grass-rock"---a combination of bluegrass and rock.

Appearing with Hartford at the Whole will be the New Grass Revival band, led by Ebo Walker, with Courtney Johnson on banjo, Curtis Burch on guitar and Sam Bush on fiddle and mandolin.

The Whole Coffeehouse will open at 8:30 p.m. both Friday and Saturday nights. Admission is $2.00 for advance tickets, which can be purchased at the M.S.A. Bookstore in Coffman, and $2.50 for tickets at the door. Those with advance tickets will be admitted first.

'U' PROF RECEIVES
TOP MCKNIGHT AWARD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Clarke A. Chambers, professor and chairman of the history department at the University of Minnesota, has been awarded the $1,000 McKnight Award for his book, "Paul U. Kellogg and the 'Survey': Voices for Social Welfare and Social Justice."

The awards are presented annually for the most distinguished books published by the University of Minnesota in the preceding year. The books are selected by the University's faculty committee on the press and funds are provided by the McKnight Foundation of St. Paul.

Chambers' book tells the life story of the editor of "Survey" and "Survey Graphic" and the history of those journals under his direction in the years 1912-1952. In its review of the book, the "Journal of American History" commented: "Chambers' study is useful not only for the light it sheds on the development of 20th century social work but also for the broader issues of social policy embedded implicitly in Kellogg's ideal of democratic social engineering."

Second-place awards, each accompanied by a check for $750, have been given to Joseph L. Grabill, professor of history at Illinois State University, Normal, Ill., for his book, "Protestant Diplomacy and the Near East: Missionary Influence on American Policy, 1810-1927," and to David H. Hesla, associate professor of literature and theology at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga. for his book, "The Shape of Chaos: An Interpretation of the Art of Samuel Beckett."

'U' TO OFFER COURSE ON WORKING WITH AGED

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Methods of care for older people who still are able to remain relatively independent in their own homes or public housing facilities will provide the main emphasis for a course to be offered by the University of Minnesota March 28 to June 16.

Sponsored by the department of continuing education in social work, "Working With the Aged" is designed for professional and para-professional personnel who provide services to older individuals still in their own homes.

Although some attention will be given to the special needs and concerns of older people who are institutionalized, the course will emphasize work with older people who are still able to contribute to the community.

Professor William Hoffman, director of continuing education in social work, is coordinator for the course. Experienced resource people and older persons from the community will assist as faculty.

Fee for the three-credit course is $45. The course will meet Thursdays from 6:20 to 8:50 p.m. in room 240 Blegen hall on the West Bank. In-person registration will run from March 14 to 23 in room 150 Nicholson hall on the Minneapolis campus.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON PERSONAL RAPID TRANSIT TO BE HELD IN MINNEAPOLIS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Little cars running along fixed guideways, carrying people or goods non-stop between stations, would greatly reduce pollution, increase safety and do away with rush-hour traffic jams. This, at least, is the dream.

On May 2 through 4, 1973, the dream will be discussed by concerned planners and interested citizens from many countries during the Second International Conference on Personal Rapid Transit at the Radisson Hotel in Minneapolis, Minn.

The registration fee of $75.00 includes all conference materials. To insure appropriate arrangements, registration should be made by April 25, 1973.

The first conference, held on November 1 through 3, 1971, attracted over 300 engineers, planners and government officials from 33 states and five foreign countries. It was awarded a first prize for creativity by the conferences and institutes division of the National University Extension Association. The book from this conference, Personal Rapid Transit, is the first comprehensive account available in this new field of study.

Registration information for the conference, sponsored by the University of Minnesota department of conferences and the Center for Urban and Regional Affairs, is available from Gordon J. Amundson, 222 Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455

U OF M THEATRE TO PRESENT
NEW TRANSLATION OF STRINDBERG

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A new translation of August Strindberg's classic drama, "A Dream Play," will be presented in the University Theatre's production which opens Friday (March 2) in Scott hall auditorium.

Stephen Benson, a program supervisor for the University's radio station, KUOM, has written the new translation of the play which will be directed by Frank M Whiting, professor of theater and "Captain" of the University's Centennial Showboat. Original music for the show has been composed by Curt Oliver, also a KUOM program supervisor.

"This play is one of the first truly profound journeys into the realm of the human condition," Whiting said.

This will be the last play Whiting, who began his career at the University 36 years ago, will direct in the Scott hall theater. Whiting will retire from the regular faculty at the end of this academic year, but will continue to direct the Showboat productions. Next fall the University Theatre plays will be presented in the new Rarig Center on the West Bank.

The play is being produced in cooperation with the University's Center for Northwest European Language and Area Studies.

The projected scenery has been designed by Whiting and graduate student Mimi Gramatky. Robert Moulton, professor of theater, has designed the costumes. He also designed the costumes for the 1949 production of the Strindberg play, which was also directed by Whiting and received international acclaim.

Benson, a graduate of the University's theater department, has a bachelor's degree from Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter, Minn., and has lived and studied in Sweden. He has taught Swedish classes at the University and performs as a dialect comedian at the annual Snoose Boulevard festival in Minneapolis. An original play by Benson, "Two Afternoons of Preston John," was produced by the University Theatre in 1967.

Leading roles in the current production of "A Dream Play" will be played by Robert Engels, a graduate student from Minneapolis, as the Officer; Douglas Guthrie, a graduate student from Cincinnati, Ohio, as the Lawyer; Thom Krueger, a graduate student from Merrill, Wis., as the Poet, and Margaret Nelson, a senior from St. Peter Minn., as Indra's daughter.

Performances are at 8 p.m. March 2,3,7,8,9 and 10 and at 3:30 p.m. March 6 and 11.

Tickets are on sale in the Scott hall ticket office and at Dayton's. Tickets are $2.50 each for the general public and $1.75 each for students and senior citizens

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A new course focusing on the problems Vietnam veterans face in their adjustment to civilian life, will be offered by the University of Minnesota's General College this spring.

Primarily a discussion course, "Interpersonal Communication for Veterans" is intended to encourage veterans to share the difficulties they have encountered in re-establishing relationships after their return from military service.

Discussion will cover culture shock, aimlessness, restlessness and veterans' concerns with educational and vocational planning.

Evelyn Hansen, assistant professor in communications, will teach the three-credit course which will meet from 12:15 to 1 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from March 28 to June 7. Enrollment is limited to 25 veterans and those interested are encouraged to register before March 6.

For further information contact Evelyn Hansen, 118 Nicholson Hall or Alex Kurak, 120 Folwell Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

U OF M PROFESSOR NAMED TO JUVENILE JUSTICE COMMISSION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Gisela Konopka, professor of social work and director of the Center for Youth Development and Research at the University of Minnesota, has been named to a national commission on juvenile justice standards.

Formed by the Institute of Judicial Administration and the American Bar Association, the commission will develop and implement the first comprehensive standards for juvenile justice in the nation.

"We hope to achieve substantive reform of the juvenile justice system which is plagued by failures and inefficiencies," said commission chairman Judge Irving R. Kaufman of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

"There are plenty of studies and reports but there are no cohesive guidelines on handling the child in trouble for police, judges, legislators, social workers, schools, correctional institutions and other agencies," he said.

One of the most important aspects of the standards project will be consideration of how the rights of children should differ from those of adults, Judge Kaufman said. Presently, laws vary greatly in how they regulate such matters as children's opportunity to receive medical care without parental permission, their access to information about sex and birth control, and the age at which juveniles may make contracts or incur other legal obligations.

The commission is composed of experts in education, sociology, psychology, law, social work, law enforcement and corrections. The standards and analysis will be published in 23 volumes and will take three years to complete.

ENERGY CRISIS TO BE EXAMINED AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A representative of independent oil suppliers, a state senator and a University of Minnesota faculty member will discuss the current energy crisis in a symposium at the University on Tuesday (March 6).

The symposium will meet at noon in Coffman Union main lounge and is free and open to the public.

Dean Abrahamson, associate professor of public affairs and director of the University's Center for Studies of Physical Environment, will probe whether there really is an energy crisis. The other participants are Paul Castonguay, representing independent oil suppliers, who will question whether they can survive and Senator Roger Laufenburger (Dem.-Dist. 34) discussing what legislators can do.

The energy crisis seminar, sponsored by four student governing groups, is the first in a series of bi-weekly dialogues on topics of current concern. Later seminars will examine mass transit, freedom of the press and the impact of the equal rights amendment.

ECONOMIST SEES BRIGHT FUTURE FOR THE U.S.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Economist Neil H. Jacoby says a "new conservatism" has emerged as a result of "social progress" which has made the "revolutionary potential" of the United States the lowest it has been in recent years.

Jacoby, former economic advisor to President Eisenhower and public member of President Nixon's 1972 Wage-Price Board, spoke Thursday (March 1) to students and faculty at the University of Minnesota College of Business Administration.

"The smashing victory of President Nixon in November 1972," Jacoby said, was an endorsement of the new conservatism and a rejection of the liberalism of Sen. McGovern.

"What Senator McGovern overlooked was that the social progress of the 1960s had elevated millions of Americans into property-owning members of society. It had generated a new conservatism," he said.

Jacoby attributed President Nixon's success to his "managing of public expectations" which has become "an essential new dimension of political leadership in contemporary democratic societies."

"It was the failure of the national leadership to hold social expectations within bounds of national capabilities for social progress that lay at the bottom of the violent and disruptive social behavior of the latter 1960s," Jacoby said.

Jacoby, who is professor of business economics and policy at the University of California, Los Angeles, made a number of predictions about the social and economic environment of the future.

"Society will impose constraints upon our exceptionally wide individual freedoms," he said. "As the nation becomes more populous and socially complex, it will become more dependent upon proper interaction of various groups in society."

He predicted five changes in the business system:

--Multinational corporations will expand, but the environment may be hostile with "political instability and local wars" as less developed countries "strive to resolve internal conflicts;"

--"Corporate managements will become more socially conscious and responsive" with an annual "social audit" of corporate affairs;

--Corporate boards of directors will become more independent from their corporations in an effort to reduce corruption;

--More people own stock in corporations than ever before and the result will be more shareowners "who will monitor the actions of corporate managers;"

--"Concentration of business in the hands of giant corporations will probably cease."

Jacoby used his predictions as part of the basis to show that "social changes that lie ahead will produce a hospitable environment for the business system."

He said American society has adapted to change over the past decade and it will become more stable.

"During the last four years radical activism has steadily diminished," he said. "The revolutionary potential of the society has plummeted."

'U' VICE PRESIDENT AND 2 ASSISTANTS RESIGN

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A University of Minnesota vice president and two of his assistants will not be returning to their administrative positions for the next school year.

William G. Shepherd, 61, vice president for academic administration for 10 years, told President Malcolm Moos he plans to resign at "a date most convenient to him and to the University," Moos said in a statement.

"It is with deep personal regret that I accept Dr. Shepherd's decision to step down from perhaps the most stressful position in the central administration and with great sincerity that I give him my personal thanks for an often-thankless job well done," Moos said.

Fred E. Lukermann, 52, and Lloyd H. Lofquist, 55, assistant vice presidents for academic administration, have both announced their plans to return to teaching.

Moos has named a committee of students, faculty and one dean to recommend a successor to Shepherd.

"There comes a time when everyone must ask, in his own context, whether his stint is done and someone else bringing fresh energy to the tasks should take over," Shepherd said. He did not state his future plans.

Shepherd was appointed to his position by University President O. Meredith Wilson in 1963 after teaching physics and electrical engineering at the University more than 20 years.

Lukermann had earlier indicated his plans to return this fall to the University of Minnesota Messenia Expedition which does archaeological research in Greece and later return to teaching geography.

Lukermann, who joined the University in 1954, has been chairman of the geography department and associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts. He is the author of a number of books and articles on social science and geography.

Lofquist joined the University in 1956 as a counseling psychologist and teacher of psychology. He was director of rehabilitation counseling and training for the University for 13 years. For three years he was associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

"All of us have served long periods in administrative posts and although we still find the duties challenging we believe firmly that a rotational policy is desirable," Shepherd said. "In my own case it was with a sense of shock that I realized that 19 of my 26 years on this faculty have involved administrative responsibilities."

"I am most sympathetic with Dr. Shepherd's desire to escape the rigors of the extremely demanding and energy-sapping office he has held for more than ten years now," President Moos said. "It is a tribute to his loyalty and dedication to the institution that he has remained until now under the trying conditions of recent years."

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

As a graduate student between 1933 and 1937, Shepherd taught in the physics department. He then joined the technical staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York and was appointed professor of electrical engineering at the University of Minnesota in 1947.

In 1969, Shepherd was elected to the National Academy of Engineering, one of only three current University faculty members in that organization. He has served as head of the electrical engineering department, associate dean of the Institute of Technology and director of the physical electronics laboratories at the University of Minnesota.

Shepherd has served on a number of committees for the International Scientific Radio Union, the Defense Department, National Academy of Sciences, National Science Foundation, National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the State of Minnesota.

He was chairman of the Governor's committee on electronic industries from 1958 to 1962 and has been a consultant for a number of electronic companies.

Lofquist is chairman of the University's Council on Liberal Education and the University of Minnesota Press. He is author of "Adjustment to Work" and a number of other books and articles on vocational and psychological counseling.

'U' TO OFFER SUMMER PROGRAM FOR HIGH SCHOOL MUSICIANS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Applications are now being accepted for participation in the eighth annual High School Musicians Project to be held from June 17 to July 15 on the University of Minnesota's Twin Cities campus.

Offered each summer by the University's Summer Session and the department of music, the four-week project includes intensive band, orchestra and chorus rehearsals and concert performances with members of the music faculty and principal players from the Minnesota Orchestra.

"The High School Musicians Project is unique in the United States," according to Henry Charles Smith, assistant conductor of the Minnesota Orchestra. "I know of no other situation which provides young students with such a superb opportunity to gain inspiration, stimulation, artistic insights and specific useful musical skills through frequent personal contact with distinguished performers, players, teachers and conductors."

Also included in the project are music theory, music literature and class vocal lessons, introductory classes in composition and creative music, repertory and coaching sessions for pianists and vocalists, orchestral repertoire sessions with the Minnesota Orchestra and jazz, harp and piano ensembles.

Auditions are open to all high school students in the midwest and may be made in person at the University on Saturday, April 14, or by five-minute tape. The fee for the project is $225 including room and board.

For further information and applications contact Richard Sieber, Coordinator, High School Musicians Project, 320 Westbrook Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

WEEKEND NURSING WORKSHOP TO MEET ON DULUTH CAMPUS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Training nurses, especially school nurses, to see their patients as whole persons rather than just disease carriers will be the purpose of a weekend workshop which will meet on the University of Minnesota, Duluth campus, on Saturday and Sunday, March 24 and 25.

Organized by the University of Minnesota's School of Nursing and the department of conferences, the workshop will meet from 8:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Sunday in Kirby Student Center.

Most of Saturday will be spent on the principles and practice of assessment with time for small group discussions. On Sunday, two special interest sessions will cover pre-school child assessment, family assessment, the drug user and assessment of minority and poor persons.

Faculty for the workshop will include Sister Patricia Angvik, R.N., assistant supervisor of public health nurses, Pilot City for the Combined Nursing Services; Mary Jackle, R.N., graduate student at the University and former faculty member of the University of Wisconsin's School of Nursing; John D. Tobin, M.D., a pediatrician currently instructing graduate nurses in pediatric physical assessment at Hennepin County General Hospital, and John Washburn, chemical dependency field representative for Minnesota Department of Health.

The fee for the workshop is $30 and includes luncheon both days and tuition. Deadline for application is Wednesday, March 21. For further information contact Sharon Vegoe, Program Coordinator, 223 Nolte Center for Continuing Education. University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

'U' TO OFFER THREE WORKSHOPS ON PARENT, FAMILY LIFE EDUCATION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"What Can Parents Expect From Their Children," will be the theme of three workshops offered by the University of Minnesota's department of conferences in April.

Co-sponsored by the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers and the Minnesota Department of Health, the first workshop in the series will meet Wednesday and Thursday, April 4 and 5, at Good Counsel Academy in Mankato. On Wednesday and Thursday, April 11 and 12, the workshop will meet at Gustavus Adolphus Lutheran Church in St. Paul and on Wednesday and Thursday, April 25 and 26, at the College of St. Scholastica in Duluth.

Designed especially for parents, educators, clergymen, social workers and nurses, the workshops will feature discussions on the nature of parent and family life, ways to tell children about sex, responsibility, venereal disease and ways to plan community discussion groups and youth panels.

Faculty for all three conferences will include Elizabeth Peterson, lecturer with the department of parent and family life education at the University and Betty Hansen and Marlys Diekoff of the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers. Individual conferences will also include representatives of local churches, schools, welfare and health departments.

Fee for each conference is $15 including lunch. Day-care facilities will be available at each location. Advance registration is recommended as enrollment will be limited.

U OF M COURSE ON BLACK WRITERS TO MEET IN SPRING

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Is a white man qualified to teach a course on black writers and their works? Can a white person know what it's like to be black? According to Chester G. Anderson, professor of English at the University of Minnesota, the answers are yes and no.

Anderson is scheduled to teach a course on twentieth-century black writers in the United States this spring under the sponsorship of the University's Women's Programs.

Students in the course, which will be offered from March 28 to June 15, will read and discuss the works of W.E.B. DuBois, Booker T. Washington, Richard Wright, Ralph Ellison, James Baldwin and Ishmael Reed.

"In 'Souls of Black Folk,' DuBois says he is going to try to explain to the 'gentle reader' the 'strain of being black,'" Anderson said. "I am able to teach this course because the writers themselves do the teaching."

But Anderson does not feel that a white person can ever really know what it's like to be black. "The advantage to having a class with both black and white students is that the black students may be able to help those of us who are white understand the black experience a little," he said.

Anderson has been teaching the course at the University since 1969. This year, a black instructor replaced him as the day-school teacher although Anderson continues to teach the course for Women's Programs.

Fee for the four-credit course, which will meet Fridays from 9:30 a.m. until noon, is $60. For more information and to register, contact Women's Programs, 200 Westbrook Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

'U' AGRICULTURE DEAN TAKES OVERSEAS JOB

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Sherwood O. Berg, dean of the Institute of Agriculture at the University of Minnesota for 10 years, today announced that he will spend the next two years on an overseas assignment in Indonesia. He will remain on the University faculty as professor of agricultural and applied economics, but will resign his deanship as of June 30.

His overseas assignment will be for the Indonesia project of the Midwest Universities Consortium for International Activities (MUCIA), a cooperative through which the University and four other midwest universities aid other nations in higher education, agriculture and medicine.

In Indonesia, Berg will develop a graduate program in the Institute of Agriculture at Bogor and an undergraduate agricultural college with a strong research emphasis at Jogjakarta.

"The MUCIA opportunity will enable me to get a second wind after 16 years of administrative work at the University," Berg said. "We all need new and different perspectives during our lifetime."

Berg, 53, a former agricultural attache in Yugoslavia, Norway and Denmark, has studied international economic development problems, especially as they relate to agriculture and higher education.

As dean of the Institute of Agriculture, Berg oversees the Colleges of Agriculture, Home Economics and Forestry as well as the Agriculture Extension Service, the experiment stations and international agricultural programs.

Under his leadership, agriculture, home economics and forestry were given status as separate colleges and the high-school-level schools of agriculture were phased out and replaced by technical schools at Naseca and Crookston. An Office of International Agricultural Programs was established.

Berg joined the University in 1957 as head of the agricultural economics department and became dean of agriculture in 1963.

He was named by President Lyndon Johnson to be chairman of the National Advisory Commission on Food and Fiber from 1965 to 1967 and was one of 19 business, union and political people named to the President's Commission on Income Maintenance Programs in 1968.

Berg, a native of Hendrum, Minn., received a B.S. from South Dakota State University in 1947, an M.S. from Cornell University in 1948 and a Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in 1951.

MUCIA, whose member universities are Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan State, is funded mostly by the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Ford Foundation. University President Malcolm Moos is MUCIA president for 1972-73.

RUSSELL HAMILTON HEADS
AFRO-AMERICAN ADVISORY GROUP

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Russell Hamilton, University of Minnesota professor of Spanish and Portuguese, has been appointed chairman of a 17-member Interim Advisory Committee on Afro-American studies.

The committee was named by President Malcolm Moos and John Turnbull, acting dean of the College of Liberal Arts. Establishment of the committee was recommended in January by a committee headed by Frank Wilderson, assistant dean of the College of Education. The Wilderson committee had been appointed by Moos to investigate dissatisfaction with the Afro-American studies department voiced by some members of the black community.

The first meeting of the new advisory committee will be held March 15. The charge to the committee will be discussed at that time.

Other members of the group are Terry Addison, teaching assistant in history; Horace Bond, theater instructor; Cozelle Breedlove, executive director of the Phyllis Wheatley Community Center; Carl Brown, student president of the Afro-American Action Committee; Robert Hickman, executive director of the Inner City Youth League in St. Paul; Lansine Kaba, assistant professor of history; Katie McWatt, member of the St. Paul Urban League; Geneva Southall, professor of Afro-American studies; Anna Stanley, teaching associate in Afro-American studies.

Also, John Taborn, associate professor of Afro-American studies; Alan Wade, director of the University's School of Social Work; John Preston Ward, professor of Afro-American studies; Janet Warfield, student in Afro-American studies; Theatrice Williams, clinical instructor in social work, and Milton Williams, (Mahmoud El-Kati), assistant professor of Afro-American studies. Named an ex officio member was John Webb, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts who has been temporary chairman of the department since George King was temporarily suspended from his duties as chairman in January.

SPEECH, TERM PAPER AND WRITING WORKSHOPS TO BE OFFERED AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mail registration is now open for three non-credit workshops to be offered this April through Women's Programs at the University of Minnesota. All three workshops are designed for people who have been away from an educational setting for some time.

Beginning Thursday, April 5, Ronald Dorr, teaching associate with the rhetoric department, will conduct a four-session workshop on the writing of term papers. The use of raw materials and the composition of a term paper will be covered in the workshop which will meet four consecutive Thursdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon at MacPhail Center, 1128 LaSalle Ave., Minneapolis.

Fee for the course is $16.

On Friday mornings from April 6 to May 11, Mary Annette Thompson, a University English instructor, will lead a six-session speech workshop. Personal attention will be paid to individual problems---diction, articulation, lack of self-confidence ---and some of each person's speeches will be taped.

The speech workshop will meet from 9:30 a.m. until noon at MacPhail Center and carries a fee of $28.

A workshop on creative writing, led by Gerald Metz, poet and instructor with the English department, will meet Mondays from April 2 to May 14. Designed specifically for those interested in short fiction and poetry, the workshop will provide exercises for stimulation of the imagination and suggestions for giving form to ideas.

The creative writing workshop will meet from 9:30 a.m. until noon at MacPhail Center and carries a fee of $30.

'U' REGENTS NAME
POLICE CHIEF, 2 DEANS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Eugene W. Wilson, deputy chief of the Minneapolis police department, today was named chief of the University of Minnesota police department. The appointment by the Board of Regents is effective March 19.

The Regents also appointed two new deans. Carl A. Auerbach, who is now acting dean, was named dean of the Law School, and Keith N. McFarland, also currently acting dean, was named dean of the College of Home Economics.

Wilson, 52, succeeds Andrew Vernes, who resigned as chief in September. He is a 1950 graduate of the University of Minnesota and has been a member of the Minneapolis police force since 1951.

He joined the force as a patrolman and was promoted to traffic officer, juvenile office, the detective bureau, supervisor of Morals and Narcotics and precinct captain, before being named deputy chief.

Throughout his career as a policeman, Wilson has encouraged higher education for law officers by setting up in-service programs in cooperation with institutions of higher learning, and he has invited community involvement in law enforcement. He served as project director for the Model City Police Program.

Auerbach, 57, has been a professor of law at Minnesota since 1961. From 1947 to 1961 he was a member of the faculty at the University of Wisconsin. He is a graduate of Long Island University and Harvard Law School.

Auerbach is a member of the State of Minnesota Constitutional Study Commission and the author of numerous books and articles on constitutional law. He is active in University governance, currently as chairman of the University Senate Committee on Tenure and formerly as chairman of the University Senate Consultative Committee

'U' THERAPEUTIC RADIOLOGIST
RECEIVES $115,000 CANCER GRANT (Bob Lee)

Dr. Chang W. Song, assistant professor of therapeutic radiology at the University of Minnesota, has received a three-year $115,882 grant from the National Cancer Institute.

Dr. Song, a radiobiologist, will be trying to determine the effects of radiation and other agents on tumors by studying their blood and oxygen supply. He will also be trying to determine new methods of making tumors more sensitive to treatment.

'U' MED SCHOOL
COMBINES 2 DEPTS. (Bob Lee)

Laboratory medicine and pathology at the University of Minnesota Medical School have been combined into one department.

Dr. Ellis S. Benson, head of laboratory medicine, has been named chairman of the new department of laboratory medicine and pathology.

Dr. Robert A. Good, who resigned as pathology chairman effective Jan. 1, has assumed the presidency of Sloan-Kettering Memorial Institute for Cancer Research in New York.

Dr. David Brown will head the clinical laboratories in University Hospitals and Dr. Alexander Templeton will direct pathology services at the University.

REGISTRATION NOW OPEN FOR 'U' CHILDREN'S ART CLASSES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Registration is now open for the spring quarter sessions of children's art classes at the Institute of Child Development on the University of Minnesota Minneapolis campus.

Children from five to eight years old are eligible for the program which meets Saturdays from March 31 through June 9. Enrollment is limited and preference is given to children who have not previously been enrolled in an art class at the institute.

The children are taught to experiment in new and traditional media, exploring new ways to express artistic ideas. Tye-dyes, batiks, pottery wind chimes and pinatas were created by the children in last quarter's classes.

Professor George K. Olson and Mary Hiniker of the art education department will supervise the program. The classes will be taught by graduate students in the department.

Fee for the course, which meets from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., is $15.

HAYAKAWA TO SPEAK AT 'U' YOUTH SYMPOSIUM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, president of California State University, will give the keynote address for this year's Health Alert Symposium April 10 to 12 at the University of Minnesota.

Hayakawa, noted semanticist, author and lexicographer, will speak on "Youth and the Real World". The theme of the symposium is "Today's Youth."

The symposium will include lectures, panels, workshops and a performance by Dudley Riggs' Brave New Workshop, all assessing today's values and offering help in crossing the generation gap.

Dr. David Sachs, California heart surgeon, actor and advocate of preventive health care for the young, will lead off a full day of workshops Wednesday, April 11. He will speak on "The Wonder of Life" at 9:30 a.m. in Coffman Union main ballroom.

Workshop subjects include behavior modification, teenage health counselors, drug education, the implications of rape, the first offender, the role of the courts, witchcraft and the occult, communication and trust and emancipation and the pain of separation from the family.

Panels include a group of young parolees from state institutions discussing their estimate of the correction system's successes and failures.

The Brave New Workshop will close the sessions at 1 p.m. Thursday, April 12 in Coffman Union main ballroom with an improvised reaction to the three-day program.

COURSES ON VIRGINIA WOOLF,
AMERICAN COMMUNITY OFFERED

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Women in the writings of Virginia Woolf and the search for community in America will provide the basis for two courses offered this spring by Women's Programs at the University of Minnesota.

Toni McNaron, associate professor of English, will teach "Woman on Woman: Virginia Woolf, Novelist, Critic, Literary Figure" from April 9 to May 7 at MacPhail Center, 1128 LaSalle Ave., Minneapolis. Students will discuss Virginia Woolf's female characters as reflections of social norms and expectations and how Virginia Woolf responded to these same expectations in her own life and death.

Fee for the two-credit course, which will meet Mondays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., is $28. Enrollment is limited to 25.

Denis O'Pray, assistant to the chairman of the American studies program, will teach "America's Search for Community" Thursdays from March 29 to June 15 at the St. Paul YMCA, Kellogg Blvd. Participants in the course will study a New England Puritan community, a Shaker utopian community, an emerging industrial town and the modern city.

Fee for the four-credit course is $59 or $45 for non-credit registration. The course will meet from 9:30 a.m. until noon.

DANISH AUTHOR TO VISIT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Erik Christian Haugaard, Danish author of children's books and translator of Hans Christian Andersen, will visit the University of Minnesota Thursday and Friday (March 15 and 16).

"Writing and Translating" will be the topic of Haugaard's lecture at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in 109 Walter library.

He will be in the same room from 10 to 11:30 a.m. and 2 to 5 p.m. Friday to talk informally with visitors.

Haugaard is the author of "Hakon of Rogen's Saga," "A Slave's Tale," "Orphans of the Wind," "The Little Fishes," "The Rider and His Horse" and "The Untold Tale." His translation of 165 Andersen tales will be published this year.

The original manuscripts for "Hakon of Rogen's Saga" and "The Little Fishes" are in the University's Kerlan collection of children's literature.

THEATER THERMOPLASTICS
SUBJECT FOR 'U' WORKSHOP

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Thermoplastics, resins and foams for the theater will be the subject of a workshop at the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis Saturday and Sunday, March 24 and 25.

The workshop is planned for people who are interested in the technical aspects of theater---property and set design and construction. There will be discussion and demonstration of vacuum forming, flexible urethane and rigid styrofoam fabrication techniques, polyurethane foam systems, hot air welding, heat sealing polyethylene film, strip heat forming plexiglass, mass/clear cast resins, fiberglass resins, flex foams and rigid foams and miscellaneous forming methods.

The faculty will include James R. Bakkom, property master for the Guthrie, and Nicholas Bryson, assistant professor and technical director of theater at the University of Wisconsin. The workshop is co-sponsored by the Guthrie and continuing education in the arts at the University of Minnesota.

Applications should be addressed to the Program Coordinator, Department of Conferences, Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455. The fee of $35 includes tuition and materials.

'U' RESEARCHERS GET
$300,000 CANCER GRANTS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Five University of Minnesota medical researchers have received grants from the American Cancer Society totaling more than $300,000.

The recipients and the amounts of the grants are Dr. Robert J. Roon, assistant professor of medicine and biochemistry, $69,243; Dr. James B. Howard, assistant professor of biochemistry and medicine, $68,789; Dr. Ignacio Fortuny, assistant professor of medicine, $68,109; the Medical School's Institutional Research Grant Committee, $52,500, and Dr. Leon Snyder, professor of genetics and cell biology, $42,723.

Using yeast cells, which share many characteristics of higher organisms, Roon will be studying nitrogen metabolism to try and clarify how this process is regulated. Hopefully the resulting techniques and findings can be applied to further studies in mammalian cells.

Certain types of cancer cells are unable to produce all the nutrients necessary for their growth. These missing nutrients are supplied by the other normal cells in the individual, but if the cancer cells are deprived of the nutrients they will starve to death.

Howard's lab is studying how the bacterial enzyme, L-asparaginase, destroys one of the essential nutrients (asparaginase) and is trying to modify the enzyme so it will be a more effective chemotherapy agent.

A newly developed machine at University Hospitals has made it possible to collect large numbers of normal white blood cells from donors. These white blood cells are used to treat leukemic patients who are particularly susceptible to infection since they do not have large enough quantities of effective white blood cells.

Dr. Fortuny will be developing a method of closely matching patients and potential donors to lessen the chances of immune reaction to the transfused leukocytes which are supposed to ward off infection.

Projects supported by Institutional Research Grant funds include a broad spectrum of cancer research in several University departments.

Snyder's group will be studying non-chromosomal genetic materials in bacteria and their interaction with controlling elements, either from the bacterial chromosomes or themselves. These elements have been shown to regulate various metabolic activities in cells, and a characteristic of cancer cells is their freedom from such regulatory control.

'U' REGENTS' PROF
SPINK TO SPEAK

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dr. Wesley W. Spink, Regents' Professor of medicine and comparative medicine at the University of Minnesota, will deliver a free public lecture Wednesday, April 11, on the Minneapolis campus.

Spink's lecture, the second Regents' Professor Lecture of the 1972-73 series, will be given at 12:15 p.m. in Mayo auditorium.

Spink, who introduced sulfanilamide and penicillin to University Hospitals in 1936, will be discussing his three decades of work with these and other antibiotics.

Named Regents' Professor of medicine in 1967 and the first professor of comparative medicine in 1970, Spink will retire this June. He has received a National Library of Medicine Distinguished Scholar Award to begin writing books on the historical aspects of the control of infectious diseases and comparative medicine, the common ground between human and veterinary medicine.

ALCOHOLISM CONTROL METHODS SHOW PROMISE

by Bill Hafling
University Science Writer

Say you're an alcoholic---everyone knows that once you start drinking you just won't be able to stop---right?

Wrong, according to drug-abuse researcher, Dr. George Bigelow. Speaking to a room packed full of psychologists, drug researchers, physicians and psychiatrists recently at the University of Minnesota, Dr. Bigelow explained several studies which show that chronic alcoholics can bring their drinking under control.

"In Canada," he said, "the rate of deaths from cirrhosis of the liver---a close measure of alcohol abuse---has gone down as the cost of alcohol has gone up."

In a laboratory study, Dr. Bigelow had chronic alcoholics pull on a one-pound lever several thousand times in order to get a drink. He found the same thing---the more times they had to pull on the lever (increased cost), the less the alcoholics drank.

In another study, he varied the amount of time the alcoholics had to wait between drinks in order to get another drink. When they did not have to wait, they drank all the alcohol available. However, when they had to wait longer between drinks they drank less---even though the same amount of alcohol was available. Those who had to wait up to 90 minutes between drinks, drank about half the amount they would have drunk when they did not have to space their drinking.

PRIVILEGES OR DRINKS

Loss of privileges in the hospital practically "knocked drinking right out" in a study by another researcher, Dr. Bigelow said. In this study, the alcoholics could have up to 24 drinks per day if they wanted them, but if they took more than five drinks, their privileges were taken away. Privileges included socializing with others, recreation and availability of the usual hospital food.

(MORE)

If a person drank more than five drinks, he was required to stay in his room by himself. Furthermore, his dinner was entirely pureed in a blender.

"I think it is especially significant that they were able to control their drinking---not exceeding five drinks---when it made a difference in how their dinner was fixed," Dr. Bigelow said.

"We saw that moderation was possible with every one of them," he added. "There is something to the 'loss of control' idea, but not as traditionally formulated. Here they demonstrated the ability to stop when they wanted to nearly 80 per cent of the time and only lost control some nine per cent of the time."

"I DRINK ALONE"

Many alcoholics claim that they drink alone. In another experiment, skid row alcoholics tested the validity of this claim. An "isolation booth" about the size of a phone booth was constructed and each person took turns sitting in it while drinking. They were given all they wanted to drink.

When people came and talked to the "isolated" alcoholics, they drank all the alcohol available. Even when left alone for two minutes, they still drank it all.

When left alone for fifteen minutes, however, an interesting thing happened. All but one of the alcoholics drank less than half as much.

"One guy went and sat in the isolation booth when he came in, 'just for fun,' and told us that was the way he liked to drink---alone," Dr. Bigelow said. "Later, when he was actually left alone for 15 minutes (after requesting a drink), his drinking dropped off the same as the rest of the people."

Stressing that these were all controlled laboratory experiments, and that "we're not that far along" in clinical applications, Dr. Bigelow said that nevertheless, "We've shown that alcohol drinking by chronic alcoholics is controllable, that they can learn to refuse a drink, drink in moderation, or even get drunk and quit again, depending on the drinking environment."

(MORE)

ANTABUSE CAN WORK

"The drug Antabuse has been around a long time, but has not been considered effective in preventing drinking because people won't take it," Dr. Bigelow said. "If we could get them to take it, there wouldn't be much drinking." (Antabuse causes nausea, vomiting and a very unpleasant feeling in general in people who attempt to drink alcohol after taking it.)

"We used Antabuse to help people keep their jobs who were about to lose them because of a drinking problem," he said. "To get to go to work each day, they have to take their Antabuse. The difference is that someone watches them take it.

"The same system is used with heroin addicts on a methadone maintenance program. About ten per cent of the addicts on methadone have become heavy drinkers despite the fact that most such programs screen out alcoholics in the first place.

"We keep the methadone and trade it to them for taking their Antabuse while we watch them swallow it. If they drink at all later on, it is in moderation.

"Those who are given Antabuse to take with them and who are not asked to come in and be watched while they take it, continue to have a high drinking rate."

Dr. Bigelow received a doctor of philosophy degree in experimental psychology from the University of Minnesota in 1969. His thesis research involved an intensive study of the behavior of laboratory animals. Since then he has been involved in attempts to apply the results of animal behavior studies to human behavior in a variety of settings.

He is currently director of research for the behavioral research unit at Baltimore State Hospital and on the faculty of the division of behavioral biology at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

'U' WORKSHOP FOR NURSES TO BE OFFERED LOCALLY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Childbearing Today," a telelecture series for nurses, will be offered locally by the University of Minnesota Wednesday evenings from April 4 to May 2.

Sponsored by the University's School of Nursing and department of conferences, the five-session series will include discussion of consumer participation in planning of maternity care, counter-culture impact, unmarried parents, new legislation, the nursing process as it applies to the individual maternity patient, parent education and recent medical developments.

The series will be presented through amplified telephone calls at sites located in Morris, Willmar, Marshall, Worthington, Mankato, Austin, Rochester, Red Wing and Winona. The lecturer's voice is transmitted through a telephone line, fed into an amplifier and heard through loudspeakers.

At each location visual materials and a local coordinator will be available. Direct communication between listeners and the lecturer is possible.

Faculty for the series will include Margaret Hewitt, R.N., nurse-midwife at Hennepin-County General Hospital, Minneapolis; Betty Lou Hogberg, R.N., instructor in parent education at University Hospitals and La Vohn Josten, R.N., maternal child health nursing consultant, Minneapolis Health Department.

Each session will run from 7 to 9 p.m. The series is designed primarily for registered and licensed practical nurses, but other interested persons may register. Fee for the series, which carries one certificate credit, is $20. For further information, write Sharon Vegoe, Program Coordinator, Department of Conferences, 223 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455 or call (612) 373-3987.

U OF M FINDS FOUR PER CENT OF STUDENTS ARE MINORITIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The first accurate count of minority students at the University of Minnesota shows that they make up less than five per cent of the student body.

Out of the 49,929 students who registered fall quarter at all five campuses of the University, 2,036 were minority students, or 4.1 per cent.

Donald Zander, assistant vice president for student affairs, said this is the first count of minority students that has any real validity. During fall registration students for the first time were required to fill out cards which asked them to check their predominant ethnic background. About 91 per cent of the students turned in usable cards and the figures were adjusted to represent the entire student body.

Most of the minority students, 89 per cent, are concentrated on the Twin Cities campus, as the chart shows:

(MORE)

Fall Quarter 1972

	American Indian	Afro- American	Asian- American	Spanish- Surnamed American	All others (includes for- eign students)	TOTAL
Crookston	6	0	1	0	653	660
Duluth	51	24	33	32	5,348	5,488
Morris	17	44	1	1	1,700	1,763
Waseca	2	0	0	0	318	320
Twin Cities	247	797	535	236	39,405	41,220
Mayo Grad. School of Medicine	0	1	3	5	469	478
TOTAL ENROLLMENT	323	866	573	274	47,893	49,929

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare requires the University to make reports on numbers of minority students. Before last fall students filled out ethnic background cards on a voluntary basis. Less than half the students filled out the cards and some wrote in nonsensical answers. Minority student totals were calculated for the whole student body on the basis of less than half returned.

Figures compiled in 1971 were higher than this year's figures but administrators feel they were less accurate.

"We weren't happy with the figures we were getting voluntarily," Zander said. "They weren't as dependable as this year's. We think we now have the best figures we can get."

Zander explained that only 91 per cent of the cards were usable because some students refused to fill them out or filled in more than one box. This year, like last year, the cards were filled in anonymously.

Although law forbids asking a person's race as a basis for admission, it is legal to ask it after a student is admitted and is registering, the procedure the University used.

'U' PROGRAM FOR RETIRED PERSONS TO OPEN FOR SPRING

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Registration is now open for classes offered through the University of Minnesota's Lifelong Learning Program for retired persons.

From April 2 to May 31 writing for publication, communication, theater in the Twin Cities, French and Spanish conversation for everyday situations and piano classes will be offered. In addition, two history courses will be offered, one on the history of the American people and the other on the Depression years through reminiscences and stories. All courses will be offered at MacPhail Center, 1128 LaSalle, Minneapolis.

"We are trying to reach this large group of citizens who have the best recommendation there is for education---leisure," said Celeste Raspanti, one of the organizers of the program.

"When today's senior citizen was a young person, going to college was not as possible as it is today," she said. "Many older people with limited education long to take a course in literature, art, or history---the things that are not available at recreation-oriented senior citizen's centers."

Offered through the University's program of continuing education in the arts, all courses are located in downtown Minneapolis during the day when senior citizens may take advantage of free bus service.

There are no academic requirements for any of the courses and the fee for each course is $5. For more information, contact Continuing Education for Retired Persons, 320 Westbrook Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455 or MacPhail Center, 1128 LaSalle St., Minneapolis, Minn. 55403.

'U' PHYSICIAN, FAMILY TO SHARE SABBATICAL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A sabbatical leave for a University of Minnesota physician has turned into a family project.

Dr. John Murray, professor of medicine, his wife Anne and their three children will spend the next few months establishing a community hospital in the central African country of Niger.

Originally, Murray, a native New Zealander, was granted a leave to study iron metabolism with the world's authority on the subject, Thomas Bothwell, at the University of Witwatersrand, in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Then his children intervened and asked if they could do something during the year as a family unit. The motion carried and letters went out volunteering the Murray family.

Eventually Mrs. Murray found a New York organization, the Ecumenical Council of Overseas Missions, that recruited professionals for special projects.

"They called us straight away," Dr. Murray recalls, "and asked if we were used to roughing it. They had an 'interesting' but 'tough' project in mind. But the important thing was that we were able to volunteer as a family unit."

N'Guigmi, Niger, on the northwest shore of Lake Chad, has 3,000 people, no electricity, no health facility and is a thousand miles from the nearest doctor. The area borders the Sahara Desert to the north and hilly grasslands to the south.

The Murrays will be there during the rainy season (May through October) when temperatures are relatively cool. During the rest of the year it rarely gets below 90 during the day but it does cool off at night.

They left today (Tuesday) for London where they'll pick up two Land-Rovers for the three-week trek across North Africa to Niger's capital, Niamey. One of the four-wheel-drive vehicles will later be outfitted to serve as a mobile facility to provide medical care for another 3,000 people who live around N'Guigmi.

Murray will be establishing a hospital in an abandoned French Foreign Legion outpost. Equipment and supplies have been promised by the council and the Niger government, but Murray will be bringing a gasoline-powered generator, a refrigerator, a portable electrocardiograph, drugs and supplies for a small laboratory himself.

He'll be using the electrocardiograph to study the incidence of coronary artery disease in the area. Even though the population eats a lot of dairy produce high in saturated fats they apparently do not have a lot of heart disease.

"Of course they don't live a long time anyway because of other contributing health factors," he pointed out. "But the study may prove useful because of their uniform diet and the lack of other variables usually found in western countries like obesity and smoking."

His son Nigel, 18, will be doing the laboratory analysis work; Mrs. Murray, who has a degree in nutrition and nursing experience, and daughter Megan, 14, will provide nursing care, and son Christopher, 10, will be the indispensable errand boy. Peace Corps nurses may arrive later.

The family has been boning up on French, the official language of the country, and will pick up language tapes in England for the area's major dialect, Hausa.

Murray is preparing for any language problem and is also anticipating meeting both tropical and western medical needs. Murray has committed up to six months to the project before he must be in Johannesburg, to begin his sabbatical research. A permanent physician is being sought for the hospital, but in the meantime, all the Murrays are hopeful they'll be able to make a meaningful contribution to better health for N'Guigmi.

ROWAN EXHIBIT TO INCLUDE SOUTHWEST LANDSCAPE PAINTING

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A mural - sized symbolic painting of the Southwest landscape will be included in a showing of works by University of Minnesota studio arts professor Herman Rowan opening Sunday (March 25) in the visual arts building at the College of St. Catherine in St. Paul.

Rowan has just completed the 25 feet by 6 feet painting titled "Six Spaces ---From Tucumcari to San Ysidro." The work, done in six parts, includes the plains, the high mountains, the high plateaus, the desert, the coastal range and the Pacific coast. It was executed in oil on canvas.

The exhibit of 40 Rowan works, done from 1953 to 1973, includes paintings from his Earth period of the late 1950's and his Love period, from 1963 to 1966.

Rowan first joined the University of Minnesota faculty in 1963. Originally from New York, N.Y., he studied at Cooper Union, San Francisco State College and Kansas State University, where he received his bachelor's degree. He has master of arts and master of fine arts degrees from the University of Iowa.

He has had one-man showings at Grand Central Moderns in New York (1960, 1962, 1965), Gumps Galleries in San Francisco (1955), and the Martin Gallery in Minneapolis (1969, 1971) and has participated in more than 50 national and regional group exhibitions. His paintings are included in the permanent collections of Walker Art Center, Brooklyn Museum, Notre Dame University Gallery and the San Diego Gallery of Fine Arts.

The showing at the College of St. Catherine will be on display through April 20. Rowan will present a gallery talk at 2 p.m. Wednesday, March 28.

MOST 'U' STUDENTS SATISFIED WITH TEACHERS AND TEACHING

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A majority of University of Minnesota students surveyed in a recent poll said they are satisfied with both the quality of the instruction they're receiving and with most of their teachers.

However, a majority also would like to be involved in the process of evaluating instructors before they are offered promotions or raises.

When asked how satisfied they are with the overall quality of instruction, 85 per cent of the respondents answered that they were very satisfied or satisfied.

And, 67 per cent indicated satisfaction with most or all of the faculty members from whom they have taken classes.

The poll, conducted on the Twin Cities campus by the University's office of Student Life Studies, also may indicate that students have little contact with faculty members outside the classroom.

None, or one or two was the response most frequently given when students were asked how many faculty they knew well enough to ask for a recommendation or with how many they had discussed a non-classroom concern.

The poll surveyed a randomly selected pool of 507 respondents out of an original sample of 608. Students also were asked several questions about how faculty performance should be evaluated.

Nearly all of the students polled (99 per cent) felt evaluating a faculty member's teaching is very important or important when considering him for a promotion or raise. Another 81 per cent felt evaluating a faculty member's performance as an advisor, both academic and personal, was important or very important, and 77 per cent felt evaluation of research and scholarly activities was important or very important.

And most students felt they should be involved in the evaluating process of a faculty member. A majority would prefer voting membership for students on evaluating committees.

As a proposal for a new tenure code is currently being debated by the faculty on campus, students were asked what kind of job security faculty should have.

Over half---53 per cent---recommended limited job security, in the form of one- or two-year binding contracts. Twenty-seven per cent chose contracts of several years duration and nine per cent chose permanent job security with no firing except for cause.

Some of the specific responses were:

How satisfied are you with the overall quality of instruction you have received at the University of Minnesota?

'U' FILM SOCIETY TO PRESENT HUNGARIAN FILMS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Nine new films from Hungary---one of the lesser-known producers of avantgarde films---will be introduced during a Hungarian Film Week at the University of Minnesota April 6 through 14.

The University of Minnesota Film Society is presenting the series of new features and shorts through arrangement with the American Film Institute (AFI), Washington, D.C., as the first of the AFI's major touring shows.

"There is still a large audience in the Twin Cities and surrounding area yet to make the discovery of the creative vitality of Hungarian cinema," according to Al Milgrom, humanities instructor and chairman of the Film Society.

"Sinbad," a first feature by 41-year-old Zoltan Husarik, will lead off the week at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 6. Miklos Jansco's "Confrontation," recalling the Communist takeover in Hungary in 1947, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, April 8.

Designed especially for children, "Grimaces," the story of a six-year-old boy attending school for the first time, will be shown at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, April 7. At 7:30 p.m. the same day, "Love Emilia!," set in a girls school in 1896 and "The Lady From Constantinople," a film about an old woman living alone in a Budapest apartment will be shown.

The rest of the week will include "Love Film," the story of a young man rejoining his boyhood love at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 11 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday, April 14; "The Upthrown Stone," illustrating the impact on an idealistic boy of political

FOGEL SCHOEN TO SPEAK AT
'U' HEALTH CARE CONFERENCE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

David Fogel, Illinois Commissioner of Corrections, and Kenneth Schoen, Commissioner of Corrections in Minnesota, will speak at the Upper Midwest Conference on Health Care in Correctional Institutions Sunday through Tuesday, April 1, 2 and 3 at the Marriott Inn in Bloomington, Minn.

Sponsored by the Minnesota Department of Corrections and the University of Minnesota, the three-day conference is designed to explore the special problems faced by health care personnel in correctional institutions and to set up a system of communication between personnel in different institutions.

Fogel, former corrections commissioner for the State of Minnesota, will deliver the keynote speech at 9 a.m. Monday, April 2. Schoen, who replaced Fogel, will give a welcoming address at 8:30 a.m. that same day.

The three-day session will include units on the psychological and economic background of persons in correctional institutions, both juvenile and adults; methods of improving communication with inmates. The session will also cover venereal disease, management of emergency drug reactions, dentistry, the treatment of common emergencies, the role of the nurse in health care and present research in the field of health care in corrections.

Faculty for the conference will include Robert Brusche, Assistant Surgeon General, U.S. Public Health Service, U.S. Bureau of Prisons; Lloyd T. Baccus, director of medical services for the State of Georgia; Harry Scott, hospital administrator for the State Prison of Southern Michigan; Marquette Origer, nursing supervisor for the Minnesota State Prison Hospital and Robert Wirt, professor and director, division of health psychology, University of Minnesota.

The conference is intended for all health care personnel in correctional institutions. The fee is $10 which includes tuition, luncheons and instructional materials.

The University's College of Pharmacy, division of health sciences continuing education and department of conferences are co-sponsoring the conference.

For further information and to register, contact Program Director, Department of Conferences, Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

'U' PROFESSOR INVITED TO SPEAK IN BELGIUM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Gordon Starr, assistant professor of leisure education at the University of Minnesota, has been invited to speak at the Second International Recreation Association Congress in Brussels, Belgium.

Starr, an authority on industrial recreation, will leave Minneapolis on Saturday, March 31, and return Sunday, April 8. He will deliver a paper on the state of industrial recreation in North America before recreation experts from the European and Scandinavian countries, Japan, Canada and the United States.

Starr has also been invited to visit the University of Brussels, currently forming its own department of leisure education, to exchange information on the University of Minnesota's program.

Next June, Professor Liven Bollaert, coordinator of the leisure education program at the University of Brussels, will visit the University of Minnesota for a similar exchange. Bollaert is being brought here by the Minnesota Recreation and Park Association.

The theme of this year's congress, sponsored jointly by UNESCO, the Van Cle Foundation and the International Recreation Association (IRA), is "Leisure Activities in the Industrial Society."

Starr has been research director for the IRA for 12 years and has published numerous articles and papers on recreation.

LETTUCE BOYCOTT
TO BE PROBED AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A five-day series of events, beginning on the University of Minnesota campus next week, will examine the national lettuce boycott and the dispute between the United Farm Workers (UFW), the Teamsters and the Grower's Association in California.

The Lettuce Boycott Seminar, weekdays from Wednesday (March 28) through Tuesday, April 3, is open to the campus community, the Chicano community in the Twin Cities and all other interested persons.

The seminar grew out of a University Board of Regents request for more information about the national lettuce boycott.

Prior to the Regents' request, the Latin Liberation Front and Students for a Democratic Society had demanded that the University only buy lettuce picked by the UFW. Both student groups claim that the Teamsters and growers discriminate against migrant workers.

Each day, beginning Wednesday (March 28), films about the migrant workers' situation will be presented at 10 a.m. in 320 Coffman.

Also on Wednesday, a troupe of former migrant workers, El Teatro Campesino, will deliver a satirical guerilla theater review at noon in Coffman main lounge.

On Thursday (March 29) at 11:30 a.m. in Coffman main lounge, the historical and sociological background of the boycott will be discussed by John Flagler, director of the University's Labor Education Service, and Alfredo Gonzalez, acting chairman of Chicano studies at the University.

At noon Thursday, California representatives of the UFW, the Teamsters and the growers will discuss the issues on a panel in Coffman main lounge. An open forum for questions will follow the discussion.

On Tuesday, April 3, University students will speak for and against the boycott and a University administrator will explain the University's purchasing policy. That discussion, at 12:30 p.m. in Coffman main lounge, will be followed by an open forum.

Films will be shown at 10 a.m. in room 320 Coffman on Friday (March 30) and Monday, April 2.

Del Swanson, a student and one of the week's planners, said the events will be filmed or taped for presentation to the Regents.

"What we're trying to do is get the opinion of all the interested parties involved and present it to the Regents," Swanson said.

Swanson said the events are also designed to air the issue before the Twin Cities community, with its large Chicano population.

All events are free and open to the public.

MANAGEMENT SEMINAR SERIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Registration is now open for six one-day management seminars offered by the University of Minnesota's department of continuing business education and Graduate School of business administration this spring.

The purpose of the series is to acquaint the practicing business supervisor with recent findings in the behavioral sciences and communication areas. The series is designed for supervisors in both private business and public agencies.

The seminars will meet 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesdays from April 4 to May 9 and a specific area will be covered each week. The date for each seminar and the topic covered on that date are: April 4, problem analysis; April 11, problem solving; April 18, introducing change; April 25, motivation; May 2, leadership and May 9, performance appraisal.

Participative teaching techniques such as case discussions, role-playing exercises and computer simulations will be used each week.

Participants may register for some or all of the seminars and registration closes one week before each session. The fee for the total series of six is $240 or $55 for any number of seminars less than the full series of six.

For further information and registration materials contact the Director, Continuing Education, Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

NEW BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES CENTER AT U OF M TO BE DEDICATED

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dedication ceremonies for the new Biological Sciences Center at the University of Minnesota will be at 3 p.m. Thursday, April 12. The eight-story, $10.8 million building is located at the corner of Gortner and Buford Aves. on the St. Paul campus.

Public tours of the building begin at 10:30 a.m. Following the formal dedication on the south patio of the center, a reception will be held in the North Star Ballroom of the Student Center.

Daniel S. Greenberg, publisher of "Science and Government Report" will speak at the reception, beginning at 4 p.m.

On Friday, April 13, an all-day symposium on "Fundamental Biology and Its Significance to Mankind" will be held from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the Junior Ballroom of Coffman Union on the Minneapolis campus.

Speakers for the symposium include biochemist Charles Thomas, of Howard Medical School; Arthur Cronquist, director of botany at the New York Botanical Garden; George M. Woodwell, department of biology, Brookhaven, N.Y., Margaret Bryan Davis of Yale.

The departments of botany, genetics and cell biology, and part of the department of ecology and behavioral biology are now housed in the center which has been in use since December, 1972. The building contains offices, classrooms, laboratories and a library.

BINGER RECEIVES
'U' ALUMNI AWARD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

James Henry Binger, chairman of the board and chief executive for Honeywell, Inc., received the University of Minnesota's outstanding achievement award Friday (March 23) in Palm Beach, Fla.

Binger, a 1941 graduate of the University's Law School, received the award at the University of Minnesota Foundation's annual Pillsbury Fellowship dinner. Binger is senior vice-president of the Foundation.

The outstanding achievement award is the highest honor the University confers on its alumni and is awarded to alumni who have achieved a certain degree of distinction.

Before joining Honeywell, Inc. in 1943, Binger practiced law in Minneapolis for two years. He was appointed president of the company in 1961 and chief executive officer of the board of directors in 1964.

Binger, who lives at 2511 Crosby Road, Wayzata, is a member of the board of directors for Northwest Airlines, Northwestern Bell Telephone Company, the Northwest Bancorporation and is a trustee of Breck School in Minneapolis.

MASS TRANSIT PROPOSALS TO BE EXAMINED AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Proponents of three different mass transit plans for the Twin Cities and a state senator will discuss the various proposals at noon Tuesday, April 3 on the University of Minnesota's West Bank.

University professor of mechanical engineering John E. Anderson will outline his proposal for a personalized rapid transit system based on small vehicles for up to four persons.

The Metropolitan Transit Commission's director of transit development, John Jamieson, will present a plan which calls for both an underground tube system and buses.

Ted Willard, community services specialist for the Metropolitan Council, will propose a plan which also utilizes buses but leaves open the option to use future advancements in technology in a mass transit system.

Senator John Chenoweth (DFL-St. Paul) will be the fourth participant. He chairs the Senate's metropolitan urban affairs committee which has jurisdiction over mass transit for the metropolitan area.

The discussion, the second in a series of bi-weekly seminars on current issues sponsored by several student organizations on campus, is free and open to the public in room 110 Anderson hall on the West Bank.

BEING AND NOTHINGNESS:
SARTRE AND THE ARTIST TO OPEN IN 'U' GALLERY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

An exhibition, Being and Nothingness: Sartre and the Artist, will be presented April 5 through May 11 in the University Gallery at the University of Minnesota.

Sartre and the Artist, organized by the University Gallery, looks at original prints and photo-reproductions of paintings discussed by Sartre in his writings.

George Howard Bauer, assistant professor of French and Italian, has prepared the written comments in the exhibition, based on his book, "Sartre and the Artist," published in 1969 by the University of Chicago Press. The book will be available at the exhibition.

Bauer will present an illustrated lecture on "Sartre and the Artist" Monday, April 9, at 8 p.m. in the Museum of Natural History auditorium. The lecture will be followed by a tour of the exhibition and refreshments in the gallery.

The exhibition is sponsored by the University's department of French and Italian and the lecture is sponsored by Alliance Fracaise.

The gallery is open with no admission charge from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

ADLERIAN MARRIAGE COUNSELING TO BE TOPIC OF 'U' CONFERENCE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

One approach to marriage counseling---the psychology of Alfred Adler---will be the focus of a two-day workshop at the University of Minnesota this April.

On Friday and Saturday, April 13 and 14, social workers and allied professionals will meet to discuss the Adlerian view of mate-selection, communication, the life tasks in marriage, the uses and abuses of sex in marriage and evaluation of treatment progress.

On Friday, emphasis will be on the basic principles and assumptions in Adlerian psychology. Saturday's program will be devoted to the presentation and discussion of case demonstrations.

Robert Bartholow, associate dean of the Alfred Adler Institute of Minnesota, and Robert G. Willhite, dean of the Academy of Certified Social Workers, will lead the workshop. Both have lectured extensively on Adlerian psychology and both are in private practice in individual, marriage and family counseling and in group psychotherapy.

Sponsored by the department of continuing education in social work and the department of conferences, the workshop will meet at Nolte Center for Continuing Education on the Minneapolis campus.

The fee for the institute is $35 which includes tuition and luncheon on Friday. Enrollment is limited and early registration is encouraged.

ARTIST-FEMINIST JUDY CHICAGO TO SPEAK AT UNIVERSITY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Artist and feminist Judy Chicago will speak at the University of Minnesota
Wednesday, April 4.

Ms. Chicago, a pioneer in striving for recognition of women artists, will speak at 8 p.m. in the new West Bank auditorium. The lecture is sponsored by the University's studio arts department and is open to the public with no admission charge.

Ms. Chicago is a founder and co-director of the Feminist Art Program at the California Institute of the Arts, the first program of its kind. One of the outgrowths of the program was "Womanhouse," an environment which reveals the situation of women through imagery.

She organized the first Women Artists Conference at the California Institute of the Arts in January, 1972, and has been instrumental in the development of Womanspace, the first large-scale exhibition program for women in the arts.

She has recently written a book entitled "An Art of Our Own," which deals with the development of female imagery. She now lives and works in Pacoima, Calif., where she is working on a series of paintings entitled "Great Ladies," all named after women of the past who transcended the female role.

In February of this year, Ms. Chicago was named Outstanding Woman of the Year in Art by Mademoiselle magazine.

ORFF'S 'CARMINA BURANA'
TO BE PRESENTED AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" will be presented in an admission-free performance Saturday, April 7, at 8 p.m. in Northrop auditorium at the University of Minnesota.

The performance will feature the University Chorus and Male Chorus, the Schubert Club Boys Choir and the University Symphony Orchestra. Guest soloists will be Barbara Brandt, soprano; Yale Marshall, counter-tenor, and Clifton Ware, baritone. Richard Massmann, associate professor of music at the University, will be the conductor.

"Carmina Burana," called by its composer a "Scenic Cantata" is a collection of 25 poems and student songs from a 12th-century Latin manuscript, in a setting of Orff music.

The performance is sponsored by the University departments of music and music education and has been planned as a part of the American Orff-Schulwerk Association national convention.

FOR EDUCATION OF HANDICAPPED

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Federal, state and local responsibilities in the education of the handicapped will be explored in a two-day conference at the St. Paul Hilton Hotel
Thursday and Friday, April 12 and 13.

The conference is designed specifically for school-board members, administrators, school psychologists, teachers and professionals from all service agencies working with the handicapped. It will examine the changing philosophical approaches to services for the handicapped, describe present agency resources and provide examples of programs already operating in Minnesota.

Staff for the conference will include Hal Birkland, Vocational-Technical Division, State Department of Education; Howard Casmey, commissioner, State Department of Education; Edward Constantine, director of Daytime Activity Centers,
State Department of Public Welfare; John DuRand, director, Occupational Training Center, St. Paul, and Bengt Nirje, coordinator of training, Mental Retardation Services Branch, Ministry of Health, Toronto, Ontario.

The conference is sponsored by the University of Minnesota's College of

U OF M PROGRAM HOPES TO INTEGRATE THE MOON

by Elizabeth Petrangelo
University News Service Writer

Restaurants, hotels, colleges and public beaches have been integrated. Bussing and quota systems are being used to integrate elementary and secondary schools.

What's left? The moon, says University of Minnesota Professor John Moran. "We won't rest until we have some Blacks on the moon."

"We" is Project Technology Power, a three-year-old program in the University's Institute of Technology (IT), training ground for scientists and engineers.

"Everybody knows that minority groups are vastly under-represented in the scientific and technological professions," said Moran, associate professor in aerospace engineering and mechanics and director of the project. "Only one per cent of the engineers in the United States are Black, and this figure has not changed since 1960."

Project Technology Power was organized in 1970 to improve the non-white enrollment picture in science at the University. At present, only 61 of a total 3,559 IT students are American Indian, Black or Spanish-surnamed.

According to Moran, simply recruiting from high-school science classes will not help. "We're not going to get anywhere just by sending people out to recruit from high school physics classes," he said. "Even in the inner-city, these classes tend to be for the elite."

Robert was recommended by his math teacher last spring to participate in the peer-teaching program. "It sounded like a good idea when she asked me, and then when I got into it, I found out it was fun," he said.

According to Robert, the sixth-graders he teaches enjoy having him there. "They like it because they don't have to do all their math work with the regular teacher," he said. "They think it's a privilege to have one of us in their class."

Robert's younger brother is a member of the sixth-grade class he teaches, and likes having his brother for a teacher. "He likes it a lot, but I try not to call on him too much," he said. "He seems to know all the answers and I want to give the other kids a chance."

Robert's fellow eighth-graders accept his teaching with mixed reactions. "Some still don't believe me when I tell them I'm teaching and some others want to know how come I get to do it," he said. "They want to know how they can get in on it too."

According to Moran, the students chosen to be peer-teachers are not necessarily high achievers. "Most importantly, they must be able to communicate with their peers and command their respect. We need youngsters that minority-group and low-income kids can identify with."

Each peer-teacher attends a five-week training session in the summer to qualify. During this five weeks, they are taught how to teach and given extensive practice in teaching each other. They are also given training in handling human relations problems.

Moran said he has little difficulty interesting the students in being peer-teachers. "At the junior high level, the kids really get turned on to the idea of teaching," he said. "In high school, the kids are a little more jaded and a little harder to interest. We do have some refusals here."

Orientation Day

As part of the project, IT held an orientation day this January for minority and low-income students. "We decided it was time for us to get more aggressive in our recruiting," Moran said. Some of IT's current non-white students went out to local high schools, visited students and invited them to tour the University's science labs and get acquainted with other IT facilities.

Fifty students turned out for the day which Moran judged a success. "We did get inner-city kids to campus, they did get to meet and talk with IT students and staff and some got good information on admissions, financial-aid policies and career opportunities."

Retention Program

The project staff is now working on a retention program for students who do decide to enroll in IT. "We are actually changing our courses, something that few other institutions are doing," Moran said.

In an attempt to make up for deficiencies in students' preparation, IT has begun a new calculus course in which students progress at their own rate and receive individual attention. Plans are also being made for lengthening the two-quarter physics class to three quarters.

"We don't expect a big change in our non-white enrollment for a few years," Moran said. "So far, minority-group and low-income kids have not been motivated toward scientific and technological careers.

"Most engineers tend to live in the suburbs or outer city so most of these kids have never even met one. Inner-city technology is not the greatest and doesn't offer a model for aspiration.

"Also, inner-city counselors haven't seen a history of success in math and science with these kids, and don't encourage them to go into these fields or take the courses necessary for background," he said.

Due to staffing and funding problems, the project is limited to the Twin City area. If Moran had more time and money, he would like to expand the project and move it into the Indian reservation schools.

To devote enough time to developing and running the project, Moran has had to give up his research. "I don't really mind though," he said. "These kids are just great and a lot of fun to work with."

U OF M TO OFFER COURSE ON

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The dos and don'ts of overseas travel plus tips on planning vacations and suggestions for places to visit will be discussed in a four-session workshop offered by University of Minnesota Women's Programs this spring.

"On Your Way to the Out of the Way," taught by Margo Sprague, an experienced world traveler, will meet Tuesday afternoons from April 17 to May 8 at MacPhail Center, 1128 LaSalle Ave., Minneapolis.

The first session will cover general suggestions on modes of travel---rented, car, buses or trains---and advantages and disadvantages of making reservations and tips on how to travel with children.

Later sessions will outline actual itineraries with maps and slides and offer suggestions on specific cathedrals, castles, abbeys, towns and villages and places of importance to visit in Great Britain, Ireland, Italy, France, Spain, Portugal and some parts of Austria, Germany and Switzerland.

Some time will also be allotted to discussion of more out-of-the-way places.

Fee for all four sessions is $18. For further information and to register, contact Women's Programs, 200 Westbrook Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455 or call 373-9743.

PORTRAIT, SCULPTURE
MISSING FROM 'U' HOSPITALS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A portrait is missing from University Hospital's dermatology ward and the department head says a reward will be given for its recovery.

Dr. Robert Goltz, professor and head of dermatology, also said that the frame may be retained by the person who has the portrait, but he would like the painting returned.

The portrait by artist August Kaiser of Francis W. Lynch, former head of the department, has an estimated value of $1,650. It was removed from the corridor wall sometime about the middle of March.

Persons with information about the missing portrait are asked to contact Dr. Goltz at 373-5716.

Also noticed missing at about the same time was a jade sculpture in the main lobby of the University's Variety Club Heart Hospital. The sculpture was given to the heart hospital staff by a Guatemalan family in appreciation for the staff's services in treating their son. Its value has not been estimated.

University Police are investigating both apparent thefts.

PORTRAIT, SCULPTURE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A portrait is missing from University Hospital's dermatology ward and the department head says a reward will be given for its recovery.

Dr. Robert Goltz, professor and head of dermatology, also said that the frame may be retained by the person who has the portrait, but he would like the painting returned.

The portrait by artist August Kaiser of Francis W. Lynch, former head of the department, has an estimated value of $1,650. It was removed from the corridor wall sometime about the middle of March.

Persons with information about the missing portrait are asked to contact Dr. Goltz at 373-5716.

Also noticed missing at about the same time was a jade sculpture in the main lobby of the University's Variety Club Heart Hospital. The sculpture was given to the heart hospital staff by a Guatemalan family in appreciation for the staff's services in treating their son. Its value has not been estimated.

University Police are investigating both apparent thefts.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The dos and don'ts of overseas travel plus tips on planning vacations and suggestions for places to visit will be discussed in a four-session workshop offered by University of Minnesota Women's Programs this spring.

"On Your Way to the Out of the Way," taught by Margo Sprague, an experienced world traveler, will meet Tuesday afternoons from April 17 to May 8 at MacPhail Center, 1128 LaSalle Ave., Minneapolis.

The first session will cover general suggestions on modes of travel---rented, car, buses or trains---and advantages and disadvantages of making reservations and tips on how to travel with children.

Later sessions will outline actual itineraries with maps and slides and offer suggestions on specific cathedrals, castles, abbeys, towns and villages and places of importance to visit in Great Britain, Ireland, Italy, France, Spain, Portugal and some parts of Austria, Germany and Switzerland.

Some time will also be allotted to discussion of more out-of-the-way places.

Fee for all four sessions is $18. For further information and to register, contact Women's Programs, 200 Westbrook Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455 or call 373-9743.

HYPNOSIS IS NOT A "PARTY GAME"

by Bill Hafling
University Science Writer

"Your lakes are veeling haivy and leemp, haivy and leemp. Shore armz are haivy, haivy, haivy as lead. Shoe are veeling tie-ard and sleefy...tie-ard and sleefy..."

Straining to understand, the student volunteer tried to cooperate with the South American hypnotist, but found it difficult because the man's accent made him hard to understand. It seemed to be a very poor hypnotic 'induction.'

Thus the student was relieved when told he was wanted on the telephone in the hospital. "Excuse me," he said politely, "I'll answer this call, then you can try to hypnotize me again when I get back."

After a considerable period of time, the student returned and related his adventure. He had wandered through the hospital corridors in a "trancelike state" and stood immobile over the telephone until a nurse had instructed him to pick it up and answer. In short, he had been hypnotized and didn't know it.

"Wake Everyone Back Up"

"People are often hypnotized and don't realize it," agree hypnotists Auke Tellegen and Alan H. Roberts, professors of psychology at the University of Minnesota.

"When training hypnotists, we caution them to always go through the procedure of 'waking' subjects up after an induction---no matter how they look or say they feel," they advised.

Undo What Has Been Done

"I once had a patient who was in fear of bears following her everywhere because someone had jokingly given her the hypnotic suggestion at a party," Roberts said. "It was relatively simple to undo the delusion under hypnosis, but it should not have happened in the first place." The woman could have been hurt in attempting to "escape from the bears," he said.

Thus Roberts and Tellegen advise that all suggestions given under hypnosis be "undone." Whatever situation the subject has been told to imagine under hypnosis must be "suggested away" again as the subject is being awakened from the trance.

Failure to take these precautions, coupled with the party hypnotist's lack of real concern for those people he may be hypnotizing, are two of the major dangers in treating the phenomenon too lightly. People have occasionally been hurt physically and psychologically as a result of an experience at the hands of a poorly trained practitioner operating in a non-therapeutic setting.

"On the other hand," Roberts said, "Stanford University has a list of case histories for thousands of hypnotically susceptible people on file. Only one person out of these thousands is not considered a fit subject for hypnosis. This one is a schizoid type who is not able to handle the imagery in hypnotic suggestion.

"With trained, concerned hypnotists, not one of these thousands of people has experienced any harm whatsoever as a result of being hypnotized," he concluded.

"Very frankly, I think there is very little harm which can be done with hypnosis," Tellegen added. "Besides, many suggestions which are not hypnotic ones can either help or harm a person, just as those in hypnosis can. For example, smoke could be coming under the door and someone could yell 'fire, jump out the window,' and you might.

"All of us, hypnotist or not, should remember that we have great power over others. You don't need hypnosis to influence someone else's actions. Even a casual suggestion to someone may have an influence on their behavior."

Dr. Tellegen said that even if hypnosis were just a party game, some caution and consideration for the other "players" would be called for.

"But this is really true of any game, if you think about it," he said. "Hypnosis as a game could be fun, for some, but it requires that a person be careful. Hypnosis does awaken strange impulses in some people. Some of these people are hypnotists."

Legal Problems

"We often get calls from high school kids who are 'experimenting' with hypnosis, either as subject or hypnotist," Dr. Roberts said. "We try to make clear to them that hypnosis is to be taken seriously and tell them about the precautions to take.

We also advise them strongly against taking part in it at all and some may even listen to us. I'm even more worried about those who proceed without asking advice from anyone."

Both Roberts and Tellegen concede that attempts to enforce a law against party hypnotists or high-school experimenters would be futile.

Paradoxically, Roberts has been testifying before the Minnesota State legislature this year to maintain the right of psychologists and other trained hypnotherapists, including dentists, to continue the practice.

Legislation has been introduced which would limit the practice to licensed physicians (M.D.s). "If this bill went through, we would no longer be able to continue academic research on hypnosis," Roberts said. "Furthermore, it would then be illegal for me to train any more medical students in hypnosis!"

ORIOLE MACRAME ARTISTS NEED
PRE-CUT NESTING MATERIALS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

_____ -area residents who missed their chance
to do their bit for the birds last year will get a second chance this spring.

The Bell Museum of Natural History at the University of Minnesota has more than 7,000 of their popular oriole-nesting kits packaged and ready to mail in time for this year's northern migration of the orange and black songbirds.

"Baltimore orioles are nature's own macrame artists," says Richard Barthelemy of the museum. "The male migrates about a week earlier than the female---in mid-May---and he picks a site. When the female arrives, he stands watch while she ties the darndest knots you've ever seen. She carefully selects certain fibers, and she ties together a nest so tough and strong that even strong winds seldom damage it."

One item in the kit is a one-yard length of rope. "You shred the rope and hang the fibers near your window," Barthelemy explained. "Then when the oriole spots your fibers from the air, he figures, 'Boy! Here's some material I can use right here!'"

"And, very often, they'll build their nest nearby. Then you can watch the whole operation---from fiber-gathering to nest-building to raising the whole family---and hear their songs too."

Barthelemy has a tip for oriole watchers. "Unstrand the rope," he said, "and soak the separated strands in warm water. They'll straighten out all by themselves. Just like a pre-cut home, but for the birds."

(MORE)

The 1973 oriole kits contain the rope; booklets on care, migration, feeding (Barthelemy reports orioles like marmalade), a data sheet for observations and a summary of last year's reports.

"The reports show orioles nest just about anywhere in this area," Barthelemy said. "They prefer elm, cottonwood, birch and maple trees."

The kits also contain some cotton bits with which the orioles might line the bottoms of their sack-like nests.

Barthelemy has another suggestion for people who already have the books from last year's kit. "Since the kit contains lots of fiber, why not order another kit this year and share the rope and the books with a friend?

"That way, you can give the whole kit to your friend, and still find out from last year's observation reports what the nesting patterns were in 1972. And, you'll be helping out the Touch and See Room."

The Touch and See Room is an area in the museum where anybody, including children, can handle bones, feathers, skins and "the stuff life is made of all to the recorded sounds of bird and other animal calls," he said. The Touch and See room is supported in part by oriole-kit sales.

To obtain a kit, send $1 to Oriole Kit, Bell Museum of Natural History, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.
