COVER STORY

Marshall W. Ryman, the University's director of inter-collegiate athletics as of July 1, is no stranger to the athletic department. In one capacity or another, he has served his alma mater for more than a quarter of a century, most recently as athletic ticket manager and business manager of athletics, a post he has held since 1943. Ryman, who holds both a BS and master's degree from the University, is the first "M" man ever to hold this top athletic post. He is a letter winner in both hockey and baseball and in 1932 served as captain of the Gopher hockey squad. For his story, see page 5. (Photo by Paul Wychor)

Everywhere, New England Life agents are tearing up their contracts

Of course, you don't destroy a good thing unless you've got a better one. This agent has. So have New England Life agents everywhere. It's a brand-new New England Life contract with many major improvements.

Over the years we've told you about the careers of so many of our agents that it seems appropriate to share news of this new development with you.

It isn't every day an agent happily tears up his contract. Or a new one like this comes along. Particularly, as in this case, on the heels of a broad liberalization in the agents' medical and retirement plans.

If you have ever thought about a career in life insurance—or if you're starting to think a little about it now—why not take that necessary preliminary step and write for more information. Address John Barker, Jr., New England Life, 501 Boylston Street, Boston 17, Massachusetts.

Profile of an

Athletic Director

Ryman Named University Athletic Director

"M" Stands for Marsh

Minnesota's new director of intercollegiate athletics is a man well-acquainted with the problems and challenges in a large university's athletic program.

He has seen and lived with them for more than a quarter of a century. As an athlete and coach he has seen through the eyes of a participant. As athletic ticket manager he has seen them through the eyes of the fans. And, as business manager of athletics, Marsh Ryman has been in close administrative relationship with the director of athletics and has participated in day-to-day administration and long-range planning decisions of the department.

Ryman, 52, was appointed by the University Board of Regents on April 19 to become director of intercollegiate athletics on July 1. He will succeed Ike Armstrong, who retires June 30 after 13 years at the helm of physical education and athletics.

Ryman will become the University's first director of intercollegiate athletics exclusively. Under the recent reorganization of the athletic department, he will have only one important responsibility—to build a sound intercollegiate program in all sports.

Under the new University setup a physical education director (Richard J. Donnelly) will be completely responsible for his department; there will be a separate intramural department; a budget director will handle all finances and maintenance of facilities with the athletic director concerned only with intercollegiate sports. Up to now, the athletic director handled all of these facets.

Ryman, a Minneapolis native, graduated from South High School in 1928, where he lettered in baseball, hockey and tennis.

He was graduated from the University of Minnesota College of Education in 1933 with a BS degree, majoring in physical education and minoring in science. He added a master of education degree in 1939.

An "M" man—the first ever to be selected to head the University's athletic program—Ryman was a varsity team member and letter winner in 1930-32. His sports were baseball and hockey.

He was captain of the 1932 hockey team which won the western Olympic trials, losing in the finals to a combined New York-Boston outfit.

Ryman began his career in athletics as head football coach,† basketball coach and teacher at Alden High School in Alden, Minnesota, following his graduation from the University in 1933. He stayed at Alden until 1935, when he joined the University of Minnesota staff as assistant intramural director and freshman coach in football, hockey and baseball.

"I was coaching at Alden High School in 1935 when Frank (McCormick) and George Hauser spoke at our high school banquet," he recalls.

"Frank asked me if I would like to coach hockey at Minnesota. He told me to come to see him at my convenience. I couldn't get down to Minneapolis fast enough.

"As it turned out, Larry Armstrong was named hockey coach. But I got a job as intramural director. Later it was Frank who moved me up to ticket manager when Les Schrader left."

McCormick, who coached Ryman in baseball, was director of physical education and athletics from 1932 to 1950.

From 1937 to 1943 Ryman served as director of athletics on the University's St. Paul Campus and head coach in cross country, basketball and swimming for the School of Agriculture. He also was in charge of the Intramural Athletic School and College at the St. Paul Campus gymnasium.

In 1934 he was appointed ticket manager of physical education and athletics. The appointment was changed to manager of athletic events services in 1945 and to business manager of athletics in 1946.

In the period of 1943 to 1952, in addition to athletic ticket and game event management, Ryman directed the operation of the University golf course and driving range, ice rink, tennis courts and was responsible for facilities supervision and team travel. In 1949 he was given the additional duties of supervising athletic program sales and student managers.

Ryman also has been freshman hockey coach and assistant varsity hockey coach since 1952.

He served as head hockey coach in 1955-56 while John Mariucci was on leave of absence with the United States Olympic Hockey Team. Ryman's squad posted a successful 16-12-1 record that year.

In 1958-59 Ryman himself went on leave, assuming the helm of the U.S. National Hockey Team in the United States and Europe. The Nationals, composed of the best available amateur hockey players in the country, played 25 games in this country and 30 games during their eight-week tour of Europe, posting a respectable 33-20-2 record. In Prague, participating in the world hockey tournament, Ryman's squad placed fourth in a field of 12 entries.

In 1959 he also served as a hockey referee at the Winter Olympics in Squaw Valley.

For 10 years Ryman was a summer playground director of the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul and he has served as a hockey referee since 1932. He was a high school football official from 1933 to 1940.

Simultaneous to the announcement of Ryman's selection as director of intercollegiate athletics came the announcement of his appointment to the academic rank of associate professor of physical education.

This academic tenure will be granted to other members of his department as a result of a new University rule, passed unanimously by the University Regents at the April 19 meeting. The Regents approved unanimously, upon President O. Meredith Wilson's recommendation, that all full-time coaches hereafter be granted tenure.

This guarantees their security in the academic manner, although their assignments can be changed if either the individual or the administration so desire.

Adoption of the tenure policy, enthusiastically endorsed by Ryman, will affect head coaches of all intercollegiate sports with the exception of hockey's John Mariucci, who coaches on a part-time basis.

The last football coach to have tenure at Minnesota was Bernie Bierman '16BA. Had he so desired, he could have remained in a position in athletics or physical education after he resigned as coach in 1950.

President Wilson emphasized to the Regents that the plan to lend an academic aspect to the coaching field with the tenure program was no attempt to de-emphasize intercollegiate athletics. "The reverse will be true, I feel," he said.

Ryman is delighted with the new tenure policy for the department he will soon head.

"I am delighted to have the opportunity to continue to serve the University," he said right after the Board of Regents had approved his appointment.

"But, I am also very pleased over the decision to grant tenure to our coaches. I think it is wonderful that Minnesota is a leader in this respect, and I feel sure other schools will follow our example."

Ryman's appointment has been enthusiastically received in all quarters. Louis Gross '25LLB, chairman of the committee appointed by President Wilson to advise him in the selection of a new director, had this to say about the appointment:

"Marsh Ryman will make an excellent athletic director. It was generally felt that the University had an exceptionally fine athletic staff and that some member of that group should be given the opportunity. Certainly, the background of Ryman will keep him gate conscious.

"What must not be overlooked is the most important step taken by the University in affording some security to the head coaches by way of tenure. President Wilson should be commended for taking the initiative in this action."

Ike Armstrong, in commenting on the selection, stated that "Marsh has been with the department for a good many years, knows the staff well and is acquainted with the administrative problems of the University and the conference. He is capable, diligent and dedicated, and is an excellent choice."

George P. Sweeney Jr. '42BS, "M" Club president, was no less enthusiastic.

"President Wilson and the Board of Regents are to be congratulated. We think Mr. Ryman is a fine choice and, of course, are delighted that an "M" man has been named."

Ryman's general endorsement was accompanied by that of Big Ten Commissioner Bill Reed.

"We in the Big Ten office have worked with Ryman for years. He is a capable man, a good organizer and administrator."

For this reason, Reed said, the conference can look forward "to the same type of cooperation with the University of Minnesota athletic directorship it always has had."

Other Big Ten directors were just as vociferous in their praise. A sampling includes:

Fritz Crisler, Michigan: "Marsh was a student and a fine hockey player when I was at Minnesota. I know him to be a very able man, a man who has dedicated his life to the University. I'm delighted to welcome him into our midst."

Clarence L. (Biggie) Munn '32 BSEd, Michigan State: "I'm looking forward to working with Marsh—I've known him since my days at Minnesota. He has my heartiest congratulations."

Doug Mills, Illinois: "I'm very happy both for Minnesota and for Marsh Ryman. He's a Big Ten man at heart and aware of the problems that we face. Knowing the top people available for the director's job at Minnesota, it's a credit to Marsh's ability that he was selected."

Ryman, despite his well-deserved appointment, cannot afford—nor would he want—to rest on his laurels. Much remains to be done, many problems to be resolved.

By administrative direction, the appointment of the new Gopher track coach will be made by Ike Armstrong. But he naturally will confer with Ryman regarding his choice.

Ryman also will have something to say, along with Rich Donnelly, about the appointment of the finance and facilities director. And, of course Ryman alone will decide on replacements for the two jobs he will now relinquish: those of freshman hockey coach and ticket manager.

These are among the immediate decisions for Ryman to consider. More in the future and more difficult, too, is the problem of Memorial Stadium.

With a possible enrollment of more than 45,000 students by 1970, lack of space poses a real problem. The stadium presently seats 63,000.

Ryman's problems, while many and varied, are not insurmountable. Because he is the first "M" man to head the department, he should have strong support from alumni and friends of the University. His long association with the department in a number of areas and his knowledge of administrative duties should eliminate many problems in this area.

He also has the advantage of the new University rule that gives tenure to full-time head coaches in all major sports and an already close working relationship with the present staff.

These, coupled with his enthusiasm for the University and its athletic program, should make the going considerably easier for Minnesota's new intercollegiate head man.

JOHN D. SCANLAN
'52BA, '55MA
Second Secretary of Embassy
United States Embassy
Warsaw, Poland

One day last fall I was sitting in one of Warsaw's many coffee houses with an American poet and a Polish writer. The American was trying tenaciously but unsuccessfully to lead the Pole into a serious political discussion. At one point, to emphasize a statement he had made, he said: "But, of course, one must not forget Poland's difficult geographical position." The Pole gave an irreverent snort. "What's so difficult about our geographical position?", he said. "Look at the buffer we have between us and China."

Despite this typical Polish flippancy it cannot be denied that Poland's tragic recent history has been largely determined by its powerful neighbors, Germany and Russia. Poland today is governed by a Communist regime and is geographically centered in the midst of the Eastern European Bloc of socialist countries. The Soviet Union, her huge, powerful neighbor to the east, is closely allied to Poland's southern and western neighbors, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Zone of Germany, both of whom are much more dogmatic about their Communism than is Poland. Poland's only non-Communist border is her northern coast on the Baltic Sea.

Poland is closely linked to all of these neighbors by military alliances, by economic and cultural agreements and, most important of all, by the ties of international Communism. Whatever her "druthers" might be, her fate is tied to theirs. This fact of geographical location must not be forgotten when considering Poland's internal and external policies.

Whatever Poland's Communist officials may say about her present day relations with the U.S.S.R., history indicates that for centuries past Poles have had little more reason to love their eastern neighbor than their western one. For a thousand years Poland has been eastern outpost of Catholicism against the aggressive threat of the "third and last Rome" of Russian Orthodoxy. From the Middle Ages through the 18th century Poland and Russia were frequently engaged in warfare. Russia took part in the three partitions of Poland in the late 18th century that eliminated Poland from the map of Europe for a century and a half. In 1830 and again in 1863 Russian troops brutally suppressed Polish uprisings against the Czarist occupiers. When Poland re-emerged as a nation after World War I its first military test was against the Red Army, which nearly captured Warsaw before being driven back to a border later stabilized by treaty. In August, 1939, the Soviet Union, for whatever reasons of her own, signed a non-aggression pact with Hitler which paved the way for the latter's attack on Poland. A month later, after Hitler's panzer units had crushed the Polish Army, the Red Army marched in to occupy the eastern third of Poland, its share of the booty under the terms of the non-aggression pact. Finally, during the uprising of Polish underground forces in Warsaw from August through November 1944, while Nazi troops were killing over 200,000 residents of Warsaw and systematically levelling the city to a huge pile of smoking rubble, the Red Army — again, for whatever reasons of its own — sat out the entire period within 8 kilometers of Warsaw.

Turning to the post-World War II period, the reasons for love appear to be no greater. Most Polish non-Communists hold the Russians responsible for the excesses of post-war Communism in Poland, particularly during the Stalinist period. Frequently even the Communist Party members will tell you that they were not masters in their own house until Wladyslaw Gomulka returned to power in October, 1956.

Polish ties with the United States traditionally have been informal and sentimental. Every Pole knows that Kosciuszko and Pulaski took part in the American Revolutionary War and that Pulaski lost his life in a cavalry charge at Savannah. Visiting American politicians frequently remind Poland of America's gratitude with wreath-laying ceremonies. It is often said in Poland that every third Pole has a relative in the United States. This is plausible when you consider that there are thirty million Poles in Poland and six million in the United States who were either born in Poland or whose parents were. The ties are strong and are expressed in many ways.

Most Poles know that Poland's re-emergence as a nation after World War I was the result of President Wilson's Fourteen Points, fought for at Versailles by Wilson against considerable Allied opposition. They know that the majority (72%) of the 478 million dollars of UNRRA relief and reconstruction supplies distributed in Poland during the immediate post-World War II period was financed by the United States. The Poles know that since 1957 they have received almost half a billion dollars worth of American surplus agricultural products on highly favorable non-interest credit sales with deferred payment provisions.

Despite the propaganda of the Stalinist era the average Pole's image of the United States remains unblemished. An American living in Poland has the feeling that this is perhaps one of the few countries in the world where the image of America the promised land, the legendary land of hope and liberty, still burns brightly for the average man. For us, who usually take our good fortune for granted and, unlike the average Pole, are more concerned with correcting America's faults than with admiring the sheen of its blessings, this Polish image of America is almost embarrassing.

So far we've been discussing popular attitudes in Poland towards the United States and the U.S.S.R. Let us now turn to the more practical matter of public attitudes as reflected by public policy. Observers generally agree that in October 1956 Poland won a tenuous victory in a bloodless revolution to regain the direction of its internal affairs. The Russians, faced with the possibility of another Budapest, agreed to the restoration to power of Wladyslaw Gomulka, the only Polish Communist leader not tainted with Stalinism as he had spent almost the entire Stalinist period under house arrest. Khrushchev made a flying visit to Warsaw, all accounts agree, to lay down the law to the Polish comrades. Gomulka drove a hard bargain, asserting that he could keep the lid on and Poland within the Communist orbit only if given a free hand. Basically, what he demanded, and got, was: independence from the Soviet Union in internal affairs—which, among other things meant an end to secret police excesses and Church persecution; the end of the forced collectivization of agriculture; the permanent departure from Poland of the large corps of Russian "advisors" that operated at various levels of Polish society; and a thorough-going reappraisal of Russian-Polish trade relations.

Western hopes that Poland would evolve to a position of total independence of Moscow similar to that enjoyed by Tito's Yugoslavia, viewed with the wisdom of hindsight, now seem to have been terribly unrealistic. Most observers are agreed that the Soviet Union has maintained constant pressure on Poland in order to force it as nearly as possible back into the old relationship. Poland in turn, most agree, has retained maximum possible control of its internal affairs but only by giving active support to aggressive Soviet foreign policy. Last fall, on an official visit to Yugoslavia, Foreign Minister Adam Rapacki unleashed an attack on the U. S. at a public reception that embarrassed the more prudent Yugoslav hosts. More recently, in Warsaw on Red Army Day, Minister of Defense Marian Spychalski made some highly offensive remarks concerning the United States.

In summary I would like to emphasize that the Polish regime is firmly committed to the Soviet Union in all matters involving what is most frequently referred to as the East-West struggle. It is the only Soviet ally, however, which enjoys a tenuous special relationship with the United States. So long as Poland does not by her own actions cancel out all the arguments for that special relationship, it will most likely continue. It is in the interests of both countries that it do so for most observers agree that the maintenance of the basic gains of October 1956 depend in large measure on the continuance of this special relationship. Their maintenance would seem to be in the interests of the United States, if what a prominent Polish Communist newspaper editor told me last December is true. He said that Poland merely gave the appearance of retrogressing in personal freedoms because it had been so far in advance of the other Communist countries that it had to pause to permit them to catch up. Although this is an almost crass oversimplification, it does appear to have some validity and we would be well advised to watch closely to note whether Poland plays the role of Mohammed or the mountain.

Changes of attitudes to the international scene of persons and countries alike take place kaleidoscopically these days.

At the time of writing, we in Britain have had the shock of being well prepared to enter Europe and of being rebuffed. Speaking personally, I welcomed the prospect of our entry, but only because I felt certain that after this would come a strong Atlantic bridge uniting Europe, the U.S. and the Commonwealth.

Some in Britain these past months held that the keenness in the U.S. to see us join Europe was prompted by a desire by American business interests to take over Commonwealth trade in such countries as Canada, Australia and New Zealand, but I did not believe this.

In my view, by far the most important factor in present-day affairs is the U.S.-Russian relationship.

I would say that the violent attitude against all things Russian evident in the U.S. until recently has not been understood in Britain. After all, Russia is part of Europe and is a country in which gigantic strides from feudalism into the 20th century have been taken in a mere 40 years.

The younger Russian generation, better educated and now enjoying a higher standard of living, cannot be devoid of the longings of the human spirit for personal and intellectual freedom that affect young people everywhere. Events must move towards a fulfillment of these.

I have a distinguished Australian friend, a member of the Australian Academy of Sciences, who travelled widely in Russia a month before the Cuban missile-site episode.

The longing for peace was expressed by the common people he spoke to, who continually asked the question: "Why does the U.S. ring us round with missile bases?"

Compared to the number of these, the Cuban base looked lonely. I think the Kennedy-Khrushchev settlement on Cuba was masterly with sequels already in evidence and, I hope, to come that may have profound effects.

In Britain there is great appreciation of the munificence of the U.S., first towards Europe to put her on her feet after the War and, afterwards, to support the underdeveloped areas of the world.

There is also sympathy for her in this role because charity on such a scale quite frequently generates opposed feelings of dislike stemming from envy. To turn the other cheek in such circumstances is an immense test of greatness.

Besides envy there is among peoples of, for example, Africa and the Middle East a proud desire to 'emerge' in their own way. Western standards of living are their objective and they realize that to enjoy them they must industrialize fast.

The great diplomatic and human feat will consist in finding the secret of how to help them to do the things they want as they wish, and not to impose preconceived systems and techniques.

Everywhere the accent is on youth and its aspirations and here the new American look in government with an intellectual and cultural 'flair' we admire seems most promising.

In my undergraduate days at Cambridge I took part in a debate on the motion that "a study of history's mysteries can only lead to an inferior hysteria." An American in college argued skillfully that his country had just the right amount of history and was therefore not tied to the past. Russia has, in Western European terms, a similarly short amount of history.

In each the technological revolution of this century is bound to shape philosophies and ways of living ultimately in the same direction: those who dwell in each country are, after all, members of the same human race.

England

CARL W. HAYDEN '16BA
First National City Bank
London, England

I shall endeavor to answer your questions regarding Great Britain where I have a connection going back to 1916 and where I have been a resident since 1944.

First, about the British attitude towards Communism. England has made a constant and persistent effort to develop a practical working arrangement with Russia ever since the war, and for that matter, with China, too.

The Russians have blown hot and cold as suited their temporary convenience. When Prime Minister Macmillan visited Russia he was openly insulted.

This, with the gradual realization that most of the wildcat strikes in Britain were caused by Communists or fellow travelers, together with several recent spy trials, has finally brought the ordinarily complacent Britisher to the realization of the acute dangers he is facing. The British are basically anti-Communist.

Now as regards Anglo-American relations and the British feelings towards us.

Great Britain has been, and should continue to be, our staunchest ally, but we should not continue to take her for granted.

The British are a steady, phlegmatic and practical people of the highest integrity. After the devastating losses in two world wars, they have accepted the fact that they no longer have the capacity to carry the great burden of Pax Britannia. They have set free an Empire with grace and dignity.

But, with their remaining strength and knowledge of foreign government and world diplomacy — with their remaining position as a great center of commerce, banking, insurance and shipping — they do not relish being written off as a second-rate nation as they suspect and fear the United States is inclined to do.

One of the chief difficulties is that the British do not really understand us. Their lack of knowledge of our evolution as a nation, our form of government, our politics and policies is truly amazing. There is a great field for mutual education here.

Many British feel that we are immature and inexperienced in world affairs. They fear we will drag them into the final world war. This first became evident when the Chinese attacked us in Korea.

The British influence restrained us from giving the Chinese the trouncing they deserved and which, at that time, we could have given them, irrespective of the Russian attitude. In my opinion, this is one of the great climactic turns in modern history against the West.

The same British reaction was recently manifest over Cuba. When we first moved to quarantine (partially blockade) the country, the British were in a frenzy, fearing that our action would trigger off a nuclear war. They complained that they had not been consulted beforehand.

They appear to have no understanding of our Monroe Doctrine or the workings of the Organization of American States in mutual defense against Communism.

However, when American firmness caused Russia to withdraw their nuclear missiles from Cuba, public opinion and the press swung completely around — not from any fundamental understanding of the real issues, but from sheer relief.

Another violent outbreak of anti-American feeling recently arose when we decided to scrap the Skybolt Missile project.

Now the British were relying upon our completion of this weapon and the delivery to them of a sufficient number of missiles to keep their bomber force in being for a further period of years. Perhaps we made a diplomatic error in not taking the British into our confidence earlier.

In any event, the news that we were leaving them in the air without a creditable weapon came as a great shock and we were accused of being a faithless and unreliable ally.

In spite of our subsequent offer to let them have our Polaris submarine missile, the political repercussions have not as yet subsided.

Space forbids more than mention of the resentment of the British to the fact that we voted against them in the United Nations over Suez. (In the least, they thought, we could have abstained.)

Or over the flurry caused by an innocent remark of Dean Acheson in a speech recently that Britain had not yet found her role in world affairs since the last war.

While anti-Americanism in Britain is chiefly found in the extreme right of the current ruling Conservative Party and in the extreme left of the chief opposition Labor Party, there is no doubt a general resentment of the manner of American dominance of the Western world. This runs parallel to the attitude of deGaulle, who seems intent on reducing our influence in Europe.

A writer in the Telegraph (London) February 24th said:

"French foreign policy — with its aim of a Europe independent of America — far from being repugnant to this country, strikes almost as resounding a chord here as it does on the Continent."

In the face of great danger, regrettably we find the Western alliance weakening at the seams, partly because the individual European countries are feeling again their strength and importance and partly because we Americans often do not give sufficient consideration to the problems and policies of others when formulating our own.

Surely, this is a form of arrogance of which our great Republic should not be guilty.

With no political bias, who can gainsay but that the atmosphere was much better under the more mature and greater understanding of the previous Administration than it is now under the new regime with its "Grand Design."

Brazzaville, Republic of Congo

Republic of Congo

The Republic of Congo (Brazzaville), not to be confused with its much larger and more newsworthy neighbor, Republic of the Congo (Leopoldville), was formerly the Moyen Congo (Middle Congo) Province of French Equatorial Africa.*

The two Congos, in concert with a good share of the African continent, achieved independence in the turbulent summer of what was heralded as Africa's year — 1960. Whereas the ex-Belgian Congo in the ensuing two-and-a-half years has been the focus of world attention, this Congo's transition to sovereignty and progress in nation-building has been relatively peaceful.

For an understanding of this country's role in African and world affairs, mention should be made of its links with the other emerging nations of this continent.

The Brazzaville Congo is included in that loose grouping of African countries, the Monrovia Powers, noted for its moderate position on international problems and generally pro-West orientation. It is also a member of the Union of African and Malagasy States (U.A.M.), a somewhat tighter organization of French-speaking countries that seeks to promote common efforts with regard to mutual political, economic, social and defense problems.

As for the Brazzaville Congo's own stand on the Free World's struggle with the Soviet system, the government of President Abbe Fulbert Youlou is unequivocally anti-Communist. It operates within the framework of a constitution that provides for a strong executive and has many points of similarity with the French system and our own Constitution.

President Youlou has led his people into a firm if not formal commitment to the Free World. His government has supported the West's position on such problems as Berlin, Cuba and nuclear testing.

Congolese officials are fully cognizant of the Soviets' methods and tactics in their efforts to penetrate Africa. Perhaps an indication of their assessment of the value of Soviet contacts lies in the fact that the Congo has thus far shown no interest in establishing formal relations with the U.S.S.R., and indeed no Communist country is represented in Brazzaville.

Nonetheless, with regard to the East-West struggle, the Congolese by and large consider themselves to be hardly more than interested observers. Their main preoccupation, now that colonialism has been put to flight, is why African unity and economic development.

In any discussion of an average African's views of other peoples and international events one must, of course, distinguish between the attitudes of the great mass of illiterate people and the relatively tiny but growing educated, informed elite.

The attitudes toward the outside world of the bulk of the Congolese people is to a large extent determined by its still very limited exposure to non-Africans. More often than not this may take the form of contact with a local missionary or merely listening to a radio broadcast.

*The dropping of "the" in the English rendering of the Brazzaville Congo is a purely arbitrary distinction devised by the Department of State to reduce confusion in referring to one Congo or the other. Some maps label the Brazzaville Congo simply "Congo" or "Congo Republic." However, the official names of the two states are actually identical — Republique du Congo.

However, radio remains a rare and highly-prized luxury in the bush and most Congolese who live outside the two or three cities of this country get what little world news they do hear by word of mouth or from a village reader of the tiny local press.

It can therefore be readily appreciated that to the vast majority of Congolese the United States and the Soviet Union are places beyond their realm of imagination, and the struggle between East and West finds no correlation to events in their daily experience.

To these people the United States may be "rich" and "good" insofar as they may learn that Americans can and do assist them in improving the condition of their lives. Beyond that, it should be borne in mind that white people are often lumped together as "Europeans" with faint comprehension of national differences or policies.

It is with the young, educated elite, whose ranks become daily more numerous with the extension of free education, that meaningful attitudes are found—attitudes that will influence the future direction of this country.

Among these people every victory in the competition between the rival systems in the fields of space and other scientific endeavors, but particularly in their ability to provide a richer life for their people, finds a responsive chord. Africa's greatest obsession is with economic development—to bring its people into the Twentieth Century in terms of a better material life.

Our struggle with the Communist system for the minds of men in the Free World's vast under-developed sector revolves around our ability to show that without subordinating individual freedoms and rights to the state we can provide a better material life quicker and more efficiently than the Communist totalitarian system, and that cooperation with the West is not a return to colonialism under a new guise.

One final but important point in considering Congolese opinions of the United States: In common with all the non-white peoples of the world, Africans are acutely conscious of our race problem, and watch with interest our efforts in solving it.

To the extent that we fail and the Communists succeed in establishing the image of their society as one free of racial stigmas we shall be unable to convince the African that our concepts of individual freedom have meaning for him or that we are sincere when we say that we want a world community of prosperous independent nations free to determine the form of their own institutions.

Central America

PHILLIP W. ERNST '58BA
American Embassy/USIS
San Jose, Costa Rica

In any comparison between the Soviet Union and the U.S., with respect to a Latin American nation or group of nations, it is well to keep in mind several factors which limit the legitimacy of such a comparison. The fact that the U.S. and the Latin nations are all geographically members of the Western Hemisphere has led to a continual history of close U.S. ties with the economic and political life of Latin America, for good or for ill, since our nations began. Trade relations of the U.S. with Latin America go back many generations. By contrast, Latin America is probably farther from the Soviet Union than any other continent with the possible exception of Australia. This factor alone, has been instrumental in keeping the Soviet Union from making many permanent inroads in the political and economic life of many Latin nations. This is especially true if one talks of the Soviet Union as a nation and excludes Cuba from the discussion. If the U.S. is more popular among the people, then it is because the U.S. is better known; if it is less popular, then possibly familiarity has bred contempt, or some variation thereon. A bare comparison between the two polar extremes, vis-a-vis Latin America, therefore, is a most difficult and dangerous one to make.

Nowhere are the above conditions more true than in my own particular area of assignment, Central America. The nations here have long histories of commercial ties with the U.S. and with North American companies. They have had almost no experience in dealing with the Soviets. Here again, I am excluding Cuba, Fidel and Communism from the discussion. My country of assignment, Costa Rica, has no relations whatsoever with any of the Iron Curtain countries, including the Soviet Union. Under such conditions, U.S. stock must inevitably be higher, if only by default.

Two factors which have had considerable effect on relations between the U.S., Latin and/or Central America, and the Soviet Union, have been the recent Cuban Crisis and the advent of the Alliance for Progress. The first, the Cuban Crisis, brought to the minds of the people of Central America the reality of the Soviet Union, heretofore a rather misty and shadowy figure standing somewhere far behind Fidel. The realization of the closeness of the Soviet Union to the vitals of Central America made it suddenly a common topic of conversation discussed on all educational levels. Castro, of course, had been a living menace for Central Americans for some time. As a result of the Cuban Crisis, the Soviet Union replaced Castro as the real number one menace to the hemisphere in the minds of some Latins. And, too, the Cuban Crisis of last fall, and the continued presence of Soviet troops in Cuba even now, are currently provoking a wave of realization that only the U.S. Armed Forces stand between the nations of the Caribbean and Communist domination; only with U.S. Armed Forces in the background can any discussions on "what to do about Cuba" have any real meaning, regardless of what methods may be discussed. The undeniability of the menace and the singularity of solutions for possible defense have made the Central American nations dependent, together, upon the U.S. in a way not seen before. This cannot help but temper wilder accusations against the U.S. Then, too, the demonstrated willingness of the U.S. to fight when the hemisphere is threatened, won many friends in this part of the world.

The second factor, the Alliance for Progress, by its very nature brings the U.S. into closer contact with Latin America at every level. As long as the Alliance survives and works, the two areas are bound together in a labor of hope. This has raised the stock of the U.S. greatly in Central America, I can attest. This is particularly true with the common man, as word of the Alliance and evidence of its works gradually filters down to him.

The Cuban Crisis and the Alliance for Progress, then, have clearly outlined, anew, for Latin Americans that the U.S. is unalterably a makeweight in the Western Hemisphere and will be involved intimately with affairs in Latin America for the foreseeable future. There was a time, not so long ago, when this seemed not so clear. The growing acceptance of the U.S. position and leadership in Western Hemisphere affairs has caused, at least in Central America, some dimming of blind "anti-Yankeeisms" and more effort at constructive criticism and cooperation, particularly on how to make the Alliance work better. The events of the past year or two have aided greatly in hammering out a basic consensus among the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Lest anyone be misled by public opinion, however, it must be said that the mere fact that U.S. stock is higher today in Central and most of South America than it was ten years ago, or the mere fact that the U.S. is more highly thought of in these areas than the Soviets, only indirectly affect the real problems therein. The task of the U.S. is really not so much to encourage the Latin peoples to look smiling toward Washington as it is to encourage them to look themselves squarely in the eye and examine carefully what they see. For in the end, despite all the government programs, it is only by self-analysis and self-help that other nations have risen to positions of world prestige and prosperity. And it is only by self-analysis and self-help that the Latin nations can hope to rise to similar positions of stature in the eyes of the world.

Greece

IRIS APOISTOLIDOU '55PhD
School of Social Work
Pierce College
Ellinikon, Greece

To make a short statement on the "political and personal feeling about the U.S. and Russia" in Greece, is a difficult if not impossible task. Feelings about important and powerful countries are always mixed and depend very much on the political situation at a given moment. They also depend on the experiences, political viewpoints, education and background of the person asked to make such statement.

In their long and stormy history Greeks have learned to be suspicious and distrustful of big foreign powers who gave or withdrew their support and mostly used Greece according to their political interests.

During World War II Greece fought on the side of the Allies and suffered enemy occupation, hunger and devastation. In 1945 the country was on the brink of Communism and soon was plunged into a ferocious civil war which lasted for three years. At that crucial time we received American aid through the Marshall Plan and this aid determined to a great extent that Greece was saved for the West. It also marked the turning point toward a slow economic recovery. We recognize and appreciate the fact that American military and economic assistance has saved us from Communist and laid the basis for economic development as well as greater political stability.

Politically Greece has always sided with the West and is a member of NATO. In every dispute with Russia, Greece has raised its small voice in defense of the free world and democracy. This has often caused angry rebukes from Moscow who demands that we become a neutral country and relinquish our NATO alliance. Yet our geographic position does not allow us to be neutral and we have to take a stand and face the responsibilities of a free country.

But can a small and poor country ever be completely free and independent? There is a price to be paid for economic aid and military protection and the Greek citizen often feels that there is too much U.S. interference in internal politics and affairs of state.

While most Greeks are pro-West and pro-American (of course there is always a minority of Communists and pro-Communists) they also are curious about what is happening in Russia and admire the progress that country has made in the area of science, technology and education.

Being always passionately interested in politics,

Greeks are objective and critical observers of world affairs. In the contest between East and West they often felt that Russia has shown greater ability in taking advantage of a situation, while American foreign policy shows lack of experience. U.S. diplomacy also displays a lack of knowledge about foreign nations and national characters. But even the most critical observers admit that American foreign policy has made strides during the last years and the U.S. is learning what it means to be one of the biggest powers in the world. Almost everybody in this country agreed with President Kennedy's firm handling of the Cuban situation and felt that Castro should never have been allowed to take the liberties he did.

Regarding nuclear warfare it is my opinion that on the average Greek people are more optimistic that neither the U.S.A. nor Russia will ever use atomic weapons to destroy humanity, than the average American seems to be.

In ending this statement it should be made clear that it was written by an American educated, politically moderate Greek woman.

BARUCH BLUM '40PhD
The Weizmann Institute of Science
Rehovoth, Israel

The writer has tried to obtain for the University of Minnesota Alumni News the views prevalent among educated Israelis on a number of issues and events of outstanding importance, on which the U.S.A. and Russia are currently on the stand of world judgment.

It must be pointed out that the initial impression on everyone of the people interviewed was of pro-Americanism, even among some who were not particularly so a few years ago.

It was said that America presents a model for a true democracy, except for a few defects, the most outstanding of which is the racial prejudice, especially against Negroes. In that field much advance is expected from the U.S.A. It is realized that President Kennedy is subject to the criticisms of American papers and public opinion in everything he does or says, which is far from true of the Russian premier.

Truely Russian space achievements made a great impression here, yet it is felt that American scientific and technological standards are far superior, and that the best Universities are American.

It is believed that the American system of education suffers from a few defects, an example of which is the lower standard of American high schools, and the lack of cultivation of interests in art among American youth. Yet the American young man is recognized as likable and is known for his generous nature and positive outlook, and the American populace as highly civilized. On the Russian system of education people here do not have any chance to obtain information, and what they do know does not arouse any trust or special respect.

The generosity of the American people and government in willingly aiding more needy countries is well recognized. It gains admiration whenever it does not show the marks of cold calculation of political and economic returns, but it is placed in shadow whenever America competes with Russia in buying off some governments.

On the Cuban crisis it is felt that America acted very well: With less courage on her side, the world would have been confronted with great fears of unknown, unbalanced, constantly threatening destructive forces. Lesser wisdom would have led to a totally destroying war. Yet U.S. public relation services should have assured at that time at least the true friends of America of their government's intense concern not to drag the rest of the world into a terrible condition, and that their actions are not for the sake of just warding off an uncomfortable situation or for the defense of an antiquated doctrine.

On disarmament of atomic weapons there are some people who express disbelief in the sincerity of either the U.S.A. or Russia on the matter, pointing out that when Russia stopped atomic testing some time ago, it was just to prepare for more efficient testing, and the U.S.A. is also bringing up trifling points of objection in delaying agreement even when circumstances have forced the Russians to make the unprecedented concession of agreeing to inspection on Russian soil. Other people expressed a more optimistic view, saying that disarmament of atomic weapons would be achieved, and seeing great progress in that direction. It is also hoped that the "Third Power" formed in Europe would not act as a hinderance in that matter.

On China the concensus of opinion is for the recognition of Red China by U.S.A. It is said that the U.S.A. is being absurd in not recognizing a government controlling eight hundred million people (!) when they do recognize other governments of dubious nature established by bloodshed and usurpation of power. Recognition of Red China by U.S.A. could, it is claimed, decrease the bitterness of the Chinese and make the ever-growing danger in the Far East a lesser menace to world peace.

In conclusion, all those interviewed look with satisfaction on what they regard a process of maturation of American politics, so important to world leadership, and pray for its success.

Memo

TO: Association Members
FROM: Executive Director
SUBJECT: A New Athletic Director and a New Policy

Minnesota alumni will applaud the appointment of Marsh Ryman as Athletic Director at the University, succeeding Ike Armstrong, who retires June 30, 1963.

Marsh is the first Minnesota graduate to ever hold this position. He is admirably suited for the job by reason of background, experience and ability. He is a gifted administrator of proven ability. He has been (and is) a coach, an Athletic Director, a Physical Educator. He knows intramural athletics. He knows the business end and the ticket side. He holds a Master's Degree in Physical Education and is an educator in the real sense. He is a fighter, courageous, resourceful, and fair minded; in the vernacular of athletics "hard nosed".

He is an "M" man and knows most of the letter winners at Minnesota, past and present. He has a wide acquaintanceship with coaches, officials and school administrators and knows the state high school set-up. He is closely identified with the supporters of University athletics and the business community of the Twin Cities, Duluth and the state.

He believes in the educational value of intercollegiate athletics and its place in higher education—what it could and should mean at the University of Minnesota.

Marsh Ryman will be an able representative of the University in Big Ten Councils. He will press for rules and regulations which will strengthen intercollegiate athletics as an integral part of higher education. He will always be mindful of the end product—the college student who chooses athletics as one of his educational experiences.

The announcement also, at the same time that Ryman was appointed, that all head coaches at the University of Minnesota will have tenure is a gigantic step forward and brings intercollegiate coaching into proper perspective as an educational job working with young men. It takes the coaching profession out of the win-lose column and makes it what it should be—a teaching job.

The University of Minnesota, with this action, is providing the kind of leadership which will help intercollegiate athletics take its rightful place in higher education.

The Administration and the Board of Regents are to be congratulated. In appointing Marsh Ryman Athletic Director and in giving tenure to Head Coaches, they have shown themselves to be wise beyond expectation and the results will give educational status to intercollegiate athletics everywhere, as well as strengthen the Intercollegiate Athletic Program at Minnesota.

Sincerely,

Ed Haselet

University and State Mourn His Death

Theodore Henske

1904-1963

Theodore H. Fenske, associate dean of the University of Minnesota's Institute of Agriculture, died Thursday morning, March 28, at Paynesville, Minnesota. He was 58.

He became ill while driving with his wife to Morris, where he was to have addressed the 52nd and final commencement at the West Central School of Agriculture—the school where he had been a teacher and then superintendent for 18 years in his early professional career.

At Paynesville he complained to his wife of feeling ill. He stopped at a service station and a doctor was called. He was taken to Paynesville Community Hospital where he died a short time later. Death was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Fenske has been on the St. Paul Campus since 1947 and had been associate dean since 1956. He was responsible for coordination and supervision of the University's School of Agriculture and outlying experiment stations and performed other duties as administrative assistant to Dean Harold Macy.

Dean Fenske was often called "the flying dean" because he held a pilot's license and flew to agricultural meetings throughout the state.

He was widely known in farm circles and in the Minnesota State Legislature where he presented details of the St. Paul Campus budget and the budgets for the 10 experiment stations.

Originally from Bemidji, Minnesota, Fenske in 1929 graduated with distinction from the University of Minnesota. He received his MS from the University in 1939 and in 1954 was named Honorary Doctor of Science by the University of North Dakota.

He began his agricultural career in 1927 with the Minnesota Dairy Herd Improvement Association. He was assistant county agricultural extension agent in Hennepin and LeSueur Counties prior to joining the teaching faculty at the West Central School and Experiment Station in 1929 as an instructor. In 1938 he was named superintendent and he became a full professor in 1944.

In 1947 he was named associate director of field operation for the entire Institute of Agriculture. He was promoted to assistant dean January 1, 1953, and to associate dean July 1, 1956.

In 1953 he spent several weeks in Scandinavian countries, studying agricultural experiment stations and farm practices.

In November, 1955, he was one of the four state winners in the National 4-H Alumni Recognition program. He was named an honorary Premier Seed Grower in the Northwest Crop Improvement Association in February, 1958, and was Grand President of Alpha Gamma Rho, national agricultural fraternity, from 1960-62.

In addition, during 1962 he served as a member of the Executive Committee of the Governor's Conference on Agriculture and Country Life.

From 1949-51, Fenske was vice president of Kiwanis International. He served as governor and secretary-treasurer of the district Kiwanis organization and in 1960 served his third term as chairman of the Kiwanis International Committee on Agriculture. At the time of his death he was also president of the Minnesota-Dakotas Kiwanis Educational Foundation.

He was a member of the National Civic Relationships Committee, Boy Scouts of America, served as commissioner of the Indianhead Council of the Scout organization and was a member of the Board of Directors of the St. Paul YMCA. He was chairman of the Committee on Agriculture for the Minnesota Statehood Centennial Commission during the Centennial year of 1958.

He also was a member of the National Board of Charities for the Lutheran Church and was to have been an official visitor to the Lutheran World Federation in Helsinki, Finland, this summer. He was president of his local congregation at St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church, St. Paul.

Fenske was senior author of the book, Arithmetic in Agriculture. He also wrote North Shore, the story of the territory from Duluth to Port Arthur and Fort Williams, Ontario, and wrote several articles and chapters of a book on the subject of Minnesota agricultural history.

University President O. Meredith Wilson said, "The University community was shocked and saddened to learn of the sudden death of Associate Dean Theodore H. Fenske."

President Wilson's statement continued: "For 34 years, Dean Fenske served the University of Minnesota and the people of the state with a special dedication.

"As Associate Dean, he carried major responsibilities on the St. Paul Campus. At the same time, he directed the activities of the Schools of Agriculture, the Experiment Stations, and other University installations throughout the state. Through his many activities, he became one of the best-known and most highly respected members of the University family.

"His dedication to the agricultural community and to the youth of the state earned for him a lasting affection with those he served.

"He brought distinction to the University and achieved for it a breadth of understanding among the people of the state that has been a vital factor in its growth.

"He will be greatly missed in the cities, on the farms, on the many campuses throughout the state and in the legislative halls."

THE ALUMNI

Annual Meeting

The Seventh Annual Alumni Honors Presentation and Annual Meeting of the board and membership of the Minnesota Alumni Association will be held Thursday, June 6, at 6 p.m. in the Main Ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union.

Five alumni will receive the highest awards bestowed by the University and the MAA—the Outstanding Achievement Award and the Alumni Service Award. University President O. Meredith Wilson will present the citations.

Another highlight of the evening will be the announcement of recent board election results and the introduction of the new board members and officers to the membership by retiring MAA President Joseph A. Maun '32BA '35LLB.

Single recipient of the Outstanding Achievement Award at the annual meeting will be:

Arthur H. Barlow '23BA, president of Builders Material, Inc., Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Barlow began his professional career as vice president of the First National Bank of Cokato, Minnesota, which he served from 1921–25. From 1925–29 he served with the Minnesota State Banking Department and in 1930 moved to Cedar Rapids as creditor's representative for the Builders Material Company and the Shores-Mueller Company.

From 1932–44 and again from 1950–52 he served as business manager for the Amana Society. In 1935 he took over the Shores Company and served as president until 1956 when it was sold to Cutter Laboratories of Berkeley, California. In 1936 he took over Builders Material, Inc., which he continues to serve as president. In 1944 Barlow organized and served as president of Barlow-Maney Laboratories, which he sold in 1954.

Barlow has served three three-year terms on the Cedar Rapids Chamber of Commerce, serving in 1943 as president. He is a director and officer in the YMCA in Cedar Rapids and has over 30 years service to Sigma Nu fraternity, serving seven years on the National High Council including two years as Regent (president). He has served for more than 20 years as a trustee of Coe College and currently is serving on the State Board of Regents.

Four alumni will receive the Alumni Service Award. They are:

Walter Blumst '48BS, market analyst with the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, San Francisco. Blumst was the chief instigator of the Minnesota Alumni Club of Northern California which was officially organized December 29, 1950. He chaired the organizing committee, drafted the constitution and was the first president of the club and an officer and director during the formative years. He helped establish and still serves as coordinator of the Minnesota Alumni Club of Northern California's Annual Achievement Award. He also helped establish the Minnesota Alumni Club of Northern California Trust Foundation and served as its secretary-treasurer during the first two years, 1959–60. He currently is on the board of directors of the Foundation.

Kenneth C. Glaser '42BBA, past president of the School of Business Administration Alumni Association and a former member of the MAA Board of Directors. While at the University he served as president of Beta Alpha Psi fraternity and as president of the Business School Board. He was elected to the board of the School of Business Administration Alumni Association in 1957, was elected vice president and served as general chairman of the Business School Institute in 1958, and in 1959 was elected president. On November 19, 1959 he received the Certificate of Merit in recognition of distinguished service to the School of Business Administration, the first to be so honored. He was the non-academic member of President Morrill's committee for the selection of the new dean of the Business School and for the past six years he has cooperated with the athletic department, assisting them with transportation for athletes whenever possible. He is pres-

In what other business could you go so far in your first year?

Each of these five men recently finished his first full year with Massachusetts Mutual. And they averaged over $900,000 in sales.

Can you think of any other business where such rapid achievement would be possible?

As you read the biographies at right, you will notice that these men held widely different types of jobs before they joined Massachusetts Mutual.

How do you feel about your present job? Are you advancing as fast as you'd hoped? Do you really like the work you're doing? Or would you rather be in business for yourself like these men — and in a business which rewards you in direct proportion to your achievements?

If so, you should investigate the potential of a career with Mass Mutual. It is one of the oldest and strongest life insurance companies in the country with 2.6 billion dollars in assets. And it has an outstanding record of dynamic growth.

Just write a personal letter about yourself to Charles H. Schaaff, President, Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, Springfield, Mass. It could well be the most important letter you've ever written.

JOHN T. SODERSTROM

A native of Madison, Wisconsin, he retired as a Chief Petty Officer after 20 years in the Navy and joined our Honolulu Agency in August, 1961. His sales in the calendar year 1962 totaled 89 policies for $690,534. He was honored as the Company's first year Man of the Month in April, 1962.

WALTER W. MAUER

With seven years experience in sales and service in tangible goods, he became a member of our Harrisburg Agency in June, 1961. During his first 12 months he sold 39 cases for $916,384. In March, 1962 he was selected as the Company's first year Man of the Month.

PATRICK J. ROACH

A graduate of Marquette University, and a practicing attorney for six years, he joined our Milwaukee Agency in April, 1961, and in his first 12 months he sold 39 cases for $747,400. In each of the last 15 consecutive months he sold over $30,000 and in May of 1962 was chosen first year Man of the Month.

RONALD DAVIS BALSER

Graduated from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania in 1960, he joined our Atlanta Agency in April, 1961. His 1962 ordinary sales amounted to 80.5 policies for $1,533,996. In each of the last 13 months his production exceeded $30,000.

GORDON E. GALLOWAY

A graduate of the University of Miami, he served three years with the USAF. After nine years of business experience first as a Tax Assessor, and later as a store manager, he joined our Miami-Pierce Agency in March, 1961. His 1962 sales totaled 52 cases for $627,250.

William Steinke to Receive OAA At 1913 Fiftieth Reunion May 22

William M. Steinke '13BA, president of the nation's fourth largest milling firm, the Russell Miller-King Midas Mills division of F. H. Peavey & Company, will receive the University's Outstanding Achievement Award at the Fiftieth Anniversary Reunion of the Class of 1913 on Wednesday, May 22.

Steinke, who began his milling career as a flour salesman, over the years has taken a leading part in the milling industry's national affairs, helping to build the Millers' National Federation to its position of stature among the national trade associations.

His special interest and skill has been in the field of sales and in the development of the sales potential in other people and in this way his contribution to society has been exceptional.

The award will be presented at a 12:30 luncheon in the Junior Ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union. Members of the Class will be guests of the Minnesota Alumni Association and there will be greetings from President O. Meredith Wilson and by representatives of the several 1913 college classes.

Registration will be held in Coffman Union from 9:30-11:20 a.m. at which time Class members will attend the Cap and Gown Day Convocation in Northrop Memorial Auditorium. A section of seats will be reserved for the Class.

Following the luncheon, buses will leave the Union for a conducted tour of the Minneapolis and St. Paul Campuses and at 4 p.m. Class members will be guests at tea of President and Mrs. Wilson at the presidential home.

At 5:30 p.m. the buses will return to Coffman Union. No general dinner session is planned. The Reunion Committee is arranging with the Campus Club to serve dinner so members of the Class may meet together informally before the evening's entertainment. This will be by reservation only, however.

For the evening entertainment, arrangements are being made to obtain a block of 200 tickets so that members of the Class may sit together in one section and view a performance of Hamlet in the new Tyrone Guthrie Theater.

Members of the Reunion executive committee are Edgar F. Zelle '13BA, chairman; Laura May Farnam '13BA, vice chairman; Clara Brown Army '13BA, secretary; and William Anderson '13BA, treasurer.

New Dean

Berg

Sherwood O. Berg, professor and head of the department of agricultural economics in the University's Institute of Agriculture, was appointed by University Regents last month to become dean of the Institute of Agriculture on July 1. He will succeed Dean Harold Macy, who will retire June 30 after 44 years as a member of the University faculty.

Prof. Berg was born in Hendrum, Minnesota, May 17, 1919. He was graduated from Hendrum high school in May, 1936, and later attended the School of Agriculture at the University of Minnesota for six months after which he enrolled at South Dakota State College where he received his BS degree in 1947.

Graduate work was pursued at Cornell University where he received an MS degree in 1948. He received the Caleb Dorr Fellowship at the University of Minnesota for 1948-49 and the Greater University Fund Graduate Fellowship for 1949-50. He received his PhD from the University in 1951. In 1952 the American Farm Economics Association awarded him an honorable mention for his PhD dissertation.

Berg was appointed American agricultural attache to Yugoslavia in 1951 and in 1954 transferred as agricultural attache for Denmark and Norway. The U.S. Department of Agriculture conferred upon him the Superior Service Award in 1956 for his record in Denmark.

He was named professor and head of the department of agricultural economics, Institute of Agriculture, effective July 1, 1957. Since joining the Minnesota faculty, his interests in the international aspects of agriculture have continued.

During 1958-60 he served as a consultant to the International Cooperation Administration. In 1958, under a grant from the Council on Economic and Cultural Affairs, Inc., he visited colleges of agriculture and agricultural research centers in Korea, Taiwan and Thailand. He also attended the International Conference of Agricultural Economists in India in 1958.

Regents Name Donald K. Smith New Assistant Vice President

Donald K. Smith, professor and chairman of the department of Speech and Theater Arts, was appointed by the University Regents last month as assistant vice president for academic administration, effective July 1.

Smith, 47, is a native of Nebraska. In 1936 he was graduated with a BA degree from Nebraska State Teachers College and subsequently did graduate work at the University of Iowa and the University of Wisconsin. He received the master of philosophy degree in 1942 and a PhD in 1951, both from the University of Wisconsin.

He began his teaching career as a high school teacher of English and history in Nebraska, where he taught from 1936-38. He was principal of the Kimball, Nebraska, high school in 1938-39 and taught at the University of Wisconsin laboratory high school in 1939-42. He returned to the University of Wisconsin after military service during World War II to become an instructor in the school of education.

Smith joined the University of Minnesota faculty in 1949 as a lecturer in the department of Speech and Theater Arts. He became an assistant professor in 1950, associate professor in 1953 and professor in 1957. He was named chairman of the department in 1959.

Since 1962 he has been associate director of the "Project English" Curriculum Research Center at the University, a project sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education to improve the teaching of English through the preparation and evaluation of curricular materials and guides in grades 7-12. He also has been active in recent years as a consultant in professional and administrative communications for the V.A. Hospital Administration institutes and for business and industry in Minnesota.

From 1954-56 he served as president of the Minnesota Association of Teachers of Speech and in 1960-61 as president of the Central States Speech Association. He has served as a member of the Minnesota State Language Arts Curriculum Committee, of the Advisory Council for the National Council of Teachers of English, and of the legislative assembly of the Speech Association of America.

Smith

On campus, Smith has taken a special interest in student problems and served on various committees. As a member of the University Senate Committee on Education, he played a central role in the discussions that led to the committee's report on reorganization of the College of Science, Literature and the Arts and served as chairman of the sub-committee that drafted the final document. He is a member of the Dean's Advisory Committee of the College of Science, Literature and the Arts and is vice chairman this year of the University Senate.

Elected President

William H. Edson, director of the University's student personnel office of the College of Education, has been elected president of the Student Personnel Association for Teacher Education (SPATE), a division of the American Personnel and Guidance Association.

Alumni response to the April issue of the Alumni News which carried the faculty view of Liberal Education as a Process has been most gratifying. The original issue of Inform, publication of the Minnesota Chapter of the American Association of University Professors, carried additional editorial comment not published for lack of space. Prof. John Turnbull, president of the Minnesota Chapter, reports that copies including the additional comment are available for examination from the AAUP.

Duluth Attorney Elected Eighth District Regent

William K. Montague, Duluth attorney, last month was elected to the University of Minnesota Board of Regents at a joint convention of the State Senate and House of Representatives.

Montague, widely known in the Legislature and in legal circles throughout the country, succeeds Richard L. Griggs '07BA, Duluth banking official, who stepped down from the Board after 24 years.

Re-elected to the University's governing body were Otto A. Silha '40BA, vice president and business manager of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune Company, and Fred Hughes, St. Cloud attorney.

Regents are appointed for six years and serve without pay. The terms of those elected last month will expire the first Monday of February, 1969.

Montague, who will represent the Eighth District, is the former legislative representative of the mining industry. He is now a consultant with the Reserve Mining Company.

Despite the fact that he himself does not have a college diploma the 71-year-old Duluth lawyer, who for years has been one of Minnesota's outstanding advocates of mining tax reform, believes higher education is a must for men and women in the future.

Montague was born in Crookston, one of 11 children. Following high school graduation he took a business course and worked as a stenographer for one year in the Great Northern Railway's Crookston division headquarters.

In 1910 he moved with his family to Virginia, Minnesota, where he worked as a stenographer for his father and studied law. He also worked as a stenographer for short periods for the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Pacific Railway and for a year was a stenographer for the Oliver Iron Mining Company in Ely.

Then in 1913 he went back to Crookston and worked for two years in law offices. A year later Montague returned to his father's Virginia office and took the bar examination. He practiced law with his father from 1915-17, when the elder Montague died.

After World War I service, Montague returned to Virginia and practiced law until 1928. Late in 1928 he went to St. Paul as assistant attorney general and served in this capacity until 1932.

Then he moved to Duluth and joined the former law firm of

He was a lobbyist in the Minnesota Legislature between 1933 and 1959 as attorney for the Lake Superior Industrial Bureau, an organization of mining companies. His mission was to get fair taxes for the Minnesota mining industry.

He was attorney for the Reserve Mining Company and Erie Mining Company in land acquisition, labor negotiations, legislation and other legal work. He represented Reserve in its litigation with the Mesaba Mining Company and had a part in the 1941 taconite law.

Admission Deadline

New undergraduate application deadlines for admission to the University will go into effect in the 1963-64 school year.

Deadline for next fall quarter will be August 15. Subsequent deadlines for winter and spring quarters will be December 13 and March 13 (or almost three weeks before the start of classes).

Exceptions to these deadlines are the programs for dental assistants and dental hygiene which have application deadlines of July 1 for the fall quarter and the practical nursing program which has moved its application deadline from July 1 to April 1.

Previous requirement was that undergraduate applications be completed by the middle of September for the fall quarter and 10 days before the opening of the winter and spring terms.

Accepts New Post

Werner Levi, professor of political science and a member of that department for 19 years, will not return to the University next fall. Levi, who has been on leave at the University of Hawaii this academic year, will remain there to teach political science.

A native of Germany, Levi received his MA and PhD degrees from the University of Minnesota and joined the political science faculty as an instructor in 1944. He became a full professor in 1951.

He was on a year's leave to help create an International Relations Center at the University of Hawaii.

Heads Physicians

Dr. Wesley W. Spink, University professor of medicine, has become president of the American College of Physicians, 12,000-member organization of specialists in internal medicine.

Dr. Spink, 58, is a native of Duluth who earned his bachelor's degree from Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota, in 1926. He was graduated from the Harvard University medical school in 1932.

A world authority on brucellosis, Dr. Spink served from 1942-45 as consultant on epidemic diseases to the secretary of war. He is director of the Brucellosis Research Center of the United States here, an agency of the World Health Organization. He is past president of the Minnesota Medical Foundation and has been a University faculty member since 1937.

Professor Honored

Paul E. Torrance, director of the University's Bureau of Educational Research, recently was honored for his book, Guiding Creative Talent, at the annual convention of the American Personnel and Guidance Association in Boston.

The book, published in 1962, was selected by the Research Awards committee as the outstanding study of its kind during the last year.

Visit South America

Prof. James A. Hamilton, director of the University's program of hospital administration in the School of Public Health, and Mrs. Hamilton, former associate professor in the same program, are spending six weeks lecturing and in consultations at South American Universities.

Their trip to the University of Chile and to the National University of Caracas, Venezuela, began April 1 and will end May 15.

While in South America Prof.

Hamilton also will consult with the ministers of health of Uruguay and Argentina and with World Health Organization officials in these countries. Problems to be discussed will include hospital development and building construction of health facilities within these countries.

Association President

Willis E. Dugan, professor of educational psychology and director of counselor education, has been elected president of the American Personnel and Guidance Association, effective May 1.

Dugan has held office in three of the APGA's six divisions: president of the Association for Counselor Education and Supervision, past president of the Student Personnel Association for Teacher Education, and former trustee of the National Vocational Guidance Association.

$22,333 Grant

A National Cystic Fibrosis Research Fund grant of $22,333 has assured continuation of the Cystic Fibrosis Regional Care, Research and Teaching Center at University Hospitals, according to Dr. Warren J. Warwick, assistant professor of pediatrics in the University Medical School and center director.

The University center is one of 30 cystic fibrosis centers located in medical schools and their affiliated teaching hospitals throughout the United States. All have been established with the help of the national organization and are maintained with its support. The new award, second University grant renewal, was presented to Dr. Warwick by the Minneapolis Cystic Fibrosis fund chapter president.

In addition to providing facilities for research, the regional centers strive to improve methods of patient care. They also offer medical students, interns, residents and practicing physicians and allied professional personnel the opportunity to become skilled in diagnosis and management of the disease.

Medical Breakthrough

A breakthrough in crossing the immunological barrier to transplantation, which could make possible human organ transplants within one to two years, was reported last month by a University physiologist at the 47th annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Dr. Carlos Martinez, physiology professor, described how he and associates at the University Medical School had induced tolerance to transplants in mice by repeated injections of non-living spleen cell material taken from a donor strain of animal.

Dr. Martinez said the successful experiments had overcome the strongest as well as the weakest genetical barriers in mice to acceptance of foreign tissue. He predicted the Minnesota group will begin applying the techniques to humans within a year or two.

In an interview in Minneapolis prior to the Federation meeting, Dr. Robert A. Good, University research professor of pediatrics who worked with Dr. Martinez, predicted if the technique can be applied to man "it could usher in the transplantation era."

The Minnesota group has been conducting experiments to produce immunological tolerance in adult life during the last five or six years. Other collaborators in the current experiments with Dr. Martinez and Dr. Good are June M. Smith and Michael Blaese.

Visiting Scientist

Robert L. Evans, assistant professor of physiology at the University and president of the Minnesota Academy of Science, will use a recent $9,315 grant from the National Science Foundation as the Minnesota Academy's "visiting scientist" for the 1963-64 academic year.

In its state academies of science program the foundation supports "visiting scientist" projects in which state academies organize and administer planned educational institution consultations by outstanding scientists.

Gullander

When the 67-year-old National Association of Manufacturers decided to hire its first full-time president, an eight-man committee appointed to find one approached a man who had an outstanding career as an executive of several leading corporations and was currently executive vice president and a director of General Dynamics Corporation. He was elected by the 170-man board of directors.

He is Werner P. Gullander '30BS, 54, who took his post last November 1. Until then, NAM presidents had served one-year terms, during which they were also working for their own companies.

While a student at the University, Gullander set his sights on a career in educational administration. However, he was brought into the business world by an offer from General Electric. Starting as an accounting trainee, he soon became a traveling auditor and later chief traveling auditor. He also served as manager of subcontract operations for the Aircraft Gas Turbine Division, and as district manager, secretary and treasurer of the General Electric Supply Company.

After 22 years with General Electric, Gullander moved to the West Coast to become vice president of finance for Weyerhaeuser Company at Tacoma, Washington, a position he held for eight years before returning East in 1960 to become executive vice president and a director of General Dynamics.

He is a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Karesh

Joseph Karesh '29BA, who in 1960 was elected to serve as a Superior Court Judge for the State of California, is the 1962 recipient of the Achievement Award of the Minnesota Alumni Club of Northern California.

The award, given annually, goes to a University alumnus who has achieved outstanding success in a chosen field of endeavor and has thereby brought credit to the University.

Judge Karesh, who received his degree in journalism from the University of Minnesota, received his law degree in 1933 from the University of San Francisco Law School.

Prior to his election as Superior Court Judge, Karesh served as U.S. attorney, U.S. Commissioner. He is former president of the San Francisco U.S. Federal Bar Association and vice president of the District U.S. Federal Bar Association.

The award - 10th to be presented by the Northern California Club - was given at the group's annual Spring Fling in March.

Some of the previous recipients of the award are Melvin Calvin '35 PhD, a Nobel Prize winner in 1962; Dean Everett Fraser '51LLD, Hastings Law School, former dean of the University of Minnesota Law School; and S. Clark Beise '22BSB, president of the Bank of America. Both Calvin and Beise are recipients of the University's Outstanding Achievement Award.

Larson

William D. Larson, director of the division of science and mathematics at the College of St. Thomas, has been named "Professor of the Year" at the college.

Selected by his colleagues on the St. Thomas faculty, Larson received a $100 gift from the college's alumni association, which sponsors the annual award.

A native of St. Paul, the 54-year-old chemistry teacher received his BA degree from the University of Minnesota in 1929, his MS from Michigan State University in 1931 and his PhD in 1936 from Minnesota.

He spent a year as a chemist with the Dow Chemical Company before he joined the department of chemistry at St. Thomas in 1932. In 1952 he was appointed chairman of the department and director of the division of science and mathematics.

Msgr. James P. Shannon, president of the college, cited Larson's role in St. Thomas' record in science education, pointing out that a 1960 report of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare ranked St. Thomas seventh among the nation's Catholic colleges in percentage of male graduates becoming physicians and third in production of science doctorates.

Larson, whose field of specialization is physical chemistry, was elected chairman of the Minnesota chapter of the American Chemical Society in 1961.

Faculty Deaths

Philip A. Anderson, 72, former associate professor of animal husbandry, died March 30 in St. Paul. He had retired in 1958 after 43 years on the University staff. He was closely associated with the St. Paul Campus meats laboratory, the country's first complete college facility for instruction in slaughtering meat and estimating its carcass value. For many years, Anderson taught all meat and meat products classes and was in charge of the University's sheep flocks. He graduated from the University's School of Agriculture in 1909 and from the College of Agriculture in 1914. He became an instructor in the Department of Animal Husbandry in 1915 and in 1918 became assistant professor in charge of meat and sheep sections. Anderson was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Society of Animal Science, served as director and president of the American Shropshire Sheep Association and was secretary-treasurer of the Minnesota Sheep Breeders' Association. He served as an advisor to A. D. Wilson, state food administrator during World War I. He was author of several University bulletins and folders. In 1958 Anderson received recognition from the National Livestock and Meat Board and from the Reciprocal Meats Conference. When he retired, he was honored by the Block and Bridle Club, student organization of animal husbandry majors, for his years of service to education and research.

Dr. Marrion P. Feigal, 63, a member of the oral surgery faculty at the University's School of Dentistry, died last month. Dr. Feigal had previously practiced dentistry at Redwood Falls, Morton and Franklin, Minnesota. He was a founder of the Minnesota Dental Foundation, which finances dentistry research and grants college scholarships. He was a past President of the Redwood Falls Lions Club.

Robert T. Jones, 78, professor emeritus of architecture, died last month. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio and studied architecture at Vincennes, Indiana, University and the University of Illinois. In 1919, he came to Minnesota as an assistant professor of architecture. He became a full-professor in 1929 and retired from the school in 1953. In 1928, he was a member of President Hoover's Conference on Housing and during the 30's, a member of the Minneapolis Mayor's Housing Conference. He was an associate architect of Sumner Field Homes, built by the federal government in 1936 and served as regional supervisor for the Federal Home Owners Loan Corporation. Jones became a member of the City Planning Commission in 1942, served as president from 1945 to 1950 and resigned in 1956 because of ill health. In the late 1940's, he was also a consultant for 15 other Midwestern communities. In 1928, he wrote "Small Homes of Architectural Distinction" and from 1932 to 1938 he edited Small Home Magazine. He also edited a syndicated newspaper column on small home construction and was general manager of the Architects Small House Service Bureau. He was a fellow of the American Institute of Architects and was honored by the regional chapter for his service in 1958. He was national president in 1936 of Scarab, an architectural fraternity.

Harry J. Ostlund, 77, retired professor of cost accounting, died last month. He taught for 34 years at the University before retiring in 1953. A graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, he was the author of three books and a number of articles in journals of accounting. He was a specialist in the drug industry and served as a special consultant and cost analyst for the National Wholesale Druggists Association. He held several positions with the National Association of Cost Accounts and was president of the Twin Cities chapter in 1926-27.

John M. Bryant, head and professor emeritus of the Department of Electrical Engineering, died last December at age 85 in Akron, Pennsylvania. Professor Bryant became head and professor of electrical engineering at the University in 1928, the rank he held on retirement in 1946. He was a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Illuminating Society, Sigma Xi, Acacia, Eta Kappa Nu and Tau Beta Pi.

Harry Burgess Roe '99BAgE, a member of the Agricultural Engineering department from 1908-44, died last November. Professor Roe was an authority on irrigation, drainage and land reclamation and taught in this and related fields, including mathematics. He was author or co-author of three technical books. Following his retirement from the University he became a resident of Oregon.

INTERPRETER

Slide rules and petticoats . . . what a combination! Incongruous? Yet this home economist, who is employed by the Frigidaire Division of General Motors, is involved with each. She wears many "hats" . . . tester, designer, writer, demonstrator. She conducts classes in home economics in schools and companies—teaches how to get the most out of new GM-built household appliances.

She and her counterparts spend full time interpreting the desires, needs and habits of American women in the kitchen and laundry room. Her department, for example, will bake enough cakes to make a stack 125 feet high just in testing a single oven design! In checking a new washer design, thirty tons of clothes are washed. In fact, she's "the voice of women" to the men who engineer and manufacture these appliances.

She's one more important member of the GM team—a team that includes more than 600,000 employes and a million-plus shareholders—as well as thousands of suppliers. Together they represent GM's greatest asset—people.

GENERAL MOTORS IS PEOPLE . . .
Making Better Things For You

Blue Cross provides benefits for actual hospital care

... not fixed cash allowances!

The difference? . . . The unique open-end "service benefits" feature of Blue Cross actually allows for expansion to provide benefits for the costs of hospital services, such as operating room, approved drugs, laboratory tests, oxygen, and all other services normally provided by the hospital—paid in full by most Blue Cross group plans.

Blue Cross plans provide protection against both the large and small bills! The "service benefits" concept also helps Blue Cross keep pace with rising hospital costs.

So don't wait for illnesses to occur before you choose Blue Cross. Protect your employees now with this reliable group protection that is:

ALWAYS THERE... WHEN YOU NEED CARE!

Mystery or History

Sirs:

Vice President Willey's article, "From Mystery to History," in the April issue, records a significant development in the cultural life of Minneapolis and of the University—a development well worth moving "from the realm of mystery to the realities of history."

Mr. Willey amusingly describes the dedicatory concert of October 22, 1929 (the date given, 1930, is an obvious error, as is clear from the context.) Unfortunately the reality of this event appears to have eluded our historian, and the true story may entertain your readers.

The University ROTC did indeed provide a cannon to lend traditional realism to the finale of the 1812 Overture. Whether it was "overcharged with powder" no one will ever know, because the cannon was not fired that evening, and if windows were broken on the campus, the commandant (who was Major Hester, not Colonel Wiggin) and his cadets cannot be held responsible.

To signal the cannoneer an electric circuit had been set up, controlled by a push button taped to Director Verbruggen's desk. When the precise moment came, Mr. Verbruggen pushed the button. Hearing no response, he pushed it again—and again and again—but to no avail. There was a break in the circuit.

Fortunately the University Band had also been enlisted for the occasion, with a hundred musicians (more or less) seated in front of the orchestra on the stage and others scattered throughout the auditorium to ring the chimes that represented the church bells of Moscow. A cannon drum (borrowed from the Shubert Theatre) was part of the instrumentation and the resulting volume of noise was quite adequate.

The absence of real cannon fire was nevertheless a great disappointment to those who knew it was in the score. I shall never forget (as a member of the band's

Likes Club Idea

Sirs:

I relish the opportunity to become a charter member of the University of Minnesota Alumni Club, and congratulate you on your initiative in bringing it about. I am a life member of the Alumni Association.

The membership card has escaped me but this letter can serve to verify my enthusiastic embrace of this fine project.

My check for $20 as a non-resident member is enclosed.

He Does, Too

Sirs:

I am sorry to report that I have lost my life membership card to the Minnesota Alumni Association. I was extolling the merits of same a few days ago to a friend and for some reason it never found its way to my billfold. I would like very much to have a replacement and will be happy to pay for any charges incurred.

The Alumni Club sounds wonderful, and I am proud to be a charter member.

I can imagine how proud this must make you feel to have played such an important role in the creation as well as the establishment of the Club.

Please accept my most humble and hearty congratulations.

1,657 Years of Faithful Service

Twelve University of Minnesota faculty members, including two deans, will retire this month with a total of 329 years of service.

Three other faculty members — whose combined service totals 81 years — retired earlier in the school year.

They were among 25 faculty and 44 civil service staff members honored at the University's annual retirement party May 27. President O. Meredith Wilson presented certificates of merit to the retirees in recognition of their contributions to the University. Certificates also were awarded posthumously to three staff members, bringing to a total 72 individuals with combined service of 1,657 years who were honored at the party.

Senior among faculty members retiring, with 44 years as a member of the staff, is Harold Macy, dean of the Institute of Agriculture. Tracy F. Tyler, professor of education and assistant to the University's vice president of academic administration, has been a faculty member for 25 years.

Julius M. Nolte, dean of the University General Extension Division since 1943, came to the University in 1937 as director of the Center for Continuation Study. He is retiring after 26 years of faculty membership.

Well-known University sports personalities leaving the staff in June are Isaac (Ike) J. Armstrong, director of athletics for the past 13 years, and James D. Kelly, track coach and professor of physical education for men for 27 years.

In addition, those retiring with 30 or more years of service are Emmert M. Brackney, professor of Romance languages, 34 years; Raymond L. Grismer, professor of Romance languages, 32 years; Nanna Jelstrup, professor of mathematics, West Central School of Agriculture, Morris, 35 years; and Lennox A. Mills, professor of political science, 35 years.

Others completing their University service are Thomas Joseph, professor of metallurgical engineering and former assistant dean, 27 years; Elmer R. Ausemus, professor of agronomy and plant genetics, 16 years; and Dr. F. H. Krusen, professor of physical medicine and rehabilitation, Mayo Foundation, 26 years. Dr. Krusen recently retired as president of the Sister Kenny Foundation.

Three Mayo Foundation members retired earlier this year. Dr. A. E. Brown, associate professor of medicine, retired after 35 years on the staff and Dr. B. F. McKenzie, assistant professor of physiological chemistry, retired with 30 years' service. Dr. J. H. Grindley, professor of surgery research, retired earlier with 16 years' service.

Macy, whose position will be filled by Sherwood O. Berg '51-PhD, was honored last month by his University colleagues at a special St. Paul campus reception.

A dairy bacteriologist by training and experience, Macy joined the University staff in 1919. He was a staff member in dairy husbandry until 1946 when he became director of the Agricultural Experiment Station. He was appointed dean in 1953.

Macy first gained fame in Minnesota agricultural circles with his work in dairy processing. As a prominent dairy bacteriologist, he has played a leading role in improving the quality of Minnesota dairy products.

Originally from New York, Macy received a B.S. degree from Cornell University in 1917 and a PhD from Iowa State University in 1929.

He served in the Army nearly a year during World War I, and during World War II he served more than two years as a member of the Sanitary Corps. His military decorations include Chevalier, Order of Public Health, and Chevalier, Legion of Honor, which he received in France in 1945, and the Armed Forces Reserve Medal. In 1955 Macy was retired from the Army with the rank of colonel.

During his years as professor of dairy bacteriology, and as director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, Macy worked constantly to improve Minnesota dairy products. According to his predecessor and former dean, Clyde H. Bailey, Macy succeeded and played a leading role in "paving the way for Minnesota's enviable reputation as the country's leading producer of high quality butter," and later milk, ice cream and dry milk.

His research in bacteriology is widely known through 150 articles and several books.

In addition to military leave during World War II, Macy has been granted three leaves to serve foreign countries. In 1952 he participated in a survey of agricultural research institutions in Latin America, sponsored by the Technical Cooperation Administration; in 1956 he was a member of a commission to Seoul National University of Korea for the Foreign Operations Administration; and in 1956 he served as agricultural research consultant for the International Cooperation Administration, for duty with the Office of Economic Coordinator, United Nations Command, in Korea.

Extremely active in a large number of honorary and professional groups, memberships include the American Dairy Science Association, American Society for Microbiology, Gamma Sigma Delta, Sigma Xi, Association of Land Grant Colleges and many others.

His honors include an award in January 1961 by the Minnesota Chapter of the Soil Conservation Society of America for distinguished service to conservation by advancing the art and science of good land use. He was elected an honorary member of the Minnesota Veterinary Medical Society in 1958 and of Phi Zeta in 1959.

In the past two years he has been honored by the Minnesota Sanitarians Association, North Central Cheese Industries Association, the University's Agricultural Extension Service, Minnesota Crop Improvement Association, Minnesota Dairy Products Association, Minnesota Rural Artists Association, Minnesota Future Farmers of America and the Northwest School of Agriculture, Crookston.

Tracy F. Tyler started his career in education following graduation from Doane College, Nebraska, by teaching high school mathematics and physical sciences. Four years in high school teaching, four years as superintendent and then six years as combined superintendent and business manager of a consolidated school gave an invaluable base for the future professor of education. Meanwhile, he had earned his master's degree from the University of Nebraska and then came his doctoral studies at Columbia University where he served as assistant in measurement, with his PhD granted in 1933.

Some time before that year, Tyler moved strongly into a new field of education—education by radio. Even before he received his PhD degree, he was made research director for the National Committee on Education by Radio, a post he held for five years. During this period he went to England, Scotland, Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Belgium and France under appointment by the General Education Board to study school broadcasting. Then he served on the President's Advisory Committee on Education in Washington. In the summer of 1938 he came to the University's summer session as a visiting lecturer in radio in education, little knowing that he would return that fall to remain a Minnesotan for the next 25 years.

Tyler was brought to the University by President Lotus D. Coffman and Dean Wesley Peik. The appointment came toward the end of President Coffman's presidency and in the first months of Dean Peik's deanship. His letter of invitation from President Coffman read in part:

"I have just been talking with Dean Peik about you and your work. I need a part-time assistant and he needs a part-time teacher. By combining we can provide for the full time of one person . . . If you are at all interested, please wire me so that I may know whether to count on you or look elsewhere."

Dean J. M. Nolte
General Extension Division

In 1954 the University accepted a contract with the United States International Cooperation Administration for the so-called "Korean Project," with the University of Seoul becoming a sister institution. The work involved sending faculty members and consultants to Korea and bringing many Koreans here, with a whole gamut of attendant planning problems. Tyler, as the person in the University best able to see the complex of problems, handle administrative detail, plan both here and in Korea for the best possible contribution to Korean higher education and, in short, to get the show on the road and keep it there was named coordinator.

Tyler authored two of the outstanding books on radio in education and has written countless articles. For 13 years he edited the Journal of the Association for Education by Radio-Television, for six six years before that the Journal of Education by Radio and, for the past five or six years, the Journal of Education Broadcasters.

His honors include the 1954 Presidential Award from the Association for Education by Radio. He has served on the Governor's Advisory Committee on Children and Youth; he has been chairman of the Advisory Committee for the Minnesota School of the Air, consultant on the American School of the Air for CBS, president of the Minnesota Radio Council and director of the Minnesota Chapter of the Horace Mann League of the United States. He was a delegate to the 4th National Conference of the United States National Commission for UNESCO. He has been the member of many professional and honorary societies, among them Phi Delta Kappa, in which he has served as faculty sponsor for Minnesota's Eta Chapter.

Julius M. Nolte, a 1937 graduate of the University's Law School, received his BA degree at Yale in 1917. He then accepted an appointment as Shevlin Scholar at the University but soon declined because of military service.

His first assignment at the University came in 1937 when he was named director of the Center for Continuation Study. Six years later, in 1943, he was named director of the General Extension Division and in 1946 was named dean of the division.

Long active in civic and professional organizations, he holds membership in the county, state and American Bar Associations, the American Judicature Society and Psi Upsilon, Phi Delta Phi and Phi Beta Kappa.

In 1949-50 he served as president of the National University Extension Service and in 1961-62 was a Senator on the American Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities. He was a director of the Minnesota Territorial Centennial from 1947-49 and a member of the Minnesota Statehood Centennial Commission, 1957-59. He has served on numerous Federal commissions including the U.S. National Commission for UNESCO, the advisory committee for the U.S. Department of Defense on the Armed Forces Educational Program and the NUEA Committee on Qualitative Planning for Extension for the Pan-American Union.

Ike Armstrong, one of the all-time athletic greats of Drake University, terminated more than 25 years at the University of Utah to succeed Frank McCormick in 1950 as director of the department of physical education and athletics. He held the dual offices of Utah athletic director and head football coach at the time of his resignation there.

Armstrong, a graduate of Fort Madison, Iowa high school, played fullback at Drake University under Coach Ossie Solem, a University of Minnesota alumnus. Following graduation from Drake in 1923, Armstrong served as freshman coach at his alma mater for one year, and assumed varsity backfield coaching duties in 1924. In 1925 he moved to the University of Utah as athletic director and head coach in football, basketball and track. He dropped his basketball duties in 1927 and relinquished his track post in 1940.

During his football coaching tenure with the Utes, his teams won 140 of 211 games, lost only 56 and tied 15. It captured 12 conference championships outright, tied for one and only finished as low as third place in the conference once. This record earned him selection to the National Football Foundation's Coaches Hall of Fame and, also, a place in the Helms Athletic Foundation Football Hall of Fame.

When Ike goes into semi-retirement this month — he recently was named supervisor of officials in the Big Ten — the department he has developed and nurtured during the past 13 years will virtually be an All-Armstrong department.

Every member of the football staff except Butch Nash was named during his administration. So was his other head football coaching appointment, Wes Fesler. Likewise the current hockey, basketball, swimming, tennis and gymnastic coaches. One of his last official acts as athletic director was to appoint Roy Griak the new track coach, succeeding Jim Kelly who will retire with Armstrong.

Jim Kelly, the dean of Minnesota head coaches, will terminate 27 years as head track coach at Minnesota when he retires in June at 68. He plans to move to California and will reside in the Los Angeles area.

Kelly began his coaching career at Fonda, Iowa high school in 1920 after leaving South Dakota University. From Fonda he went to Buena Vista College at Storm Lake, Iowa in 1922 and then to DePaul University in Chicago in 1926. At DePaul, Kelly served as track, football and basketball coach and athletic director during his 10 years there.

He was appointed to the Minnesota athletic staff in 1937 and since then has won one NCAA title (1948) and one Big Ten outdoor title (1949). His Gopher tracksters have won 25 Big Ten and six NCAA individual titles.

Kelly and the University have played host to five NCAA track and field championships. He has been a member of the NCAA Track and Field Rules Committee and has served on the AAU Track and Field Rules Committee for many years.

In the fall of 1956, Kelly coached the U.S. Olympic team at Melbourne, Australia. In 1951 he was coach of the United States squad which competed in the Pan-American games. His Olympic tracksters won 15 gold medals, a record number of awards.

For his outstanding job as coach of the Olympic squad, Kelly received several awards: The Los Angeles Times Award for Outstanding Coaching; the Knute Rockne "Coach of the Year" in 1956; and the Western Airlines Plaque inscribed, "Outstanding Contribution to Track 1956. He also is a member of the Helms Foundation Hall of Fame in track.

Thomas L. Joseph was born in Adamsville, Utah, in 1894 and received his bachelor's degree in 1916 and master's degree in chemistry in 1917 from the University of Utah.

From 1919 until 1936, when he joined the University faculty, Joseph was employed by the U.S. Bureau of Mines and held various positions leading up to his appointment as supervising engineer of the North Central Experiment Station of the Bureau of Mines in 1924.

Isaac (Ike) J. Armstrong, who will retire June 30 after 13 years as director of physical education and athletics at the University, is shown here leading the academic procession at last month's Cap and Gown Day. Armstrong succeeded Frank McCormick in 1950. (Minneapolis Morning Tribune photo)

In September, 1936, he was appointed professor and head of the department of metallurgy at the University. From 1944-55 he served as assistant dean of the Institute of Technology and head of the School of Mines and Metallurgy. At that time, in order to devote more time to writing and research, he became professor of metallurgy.

He received the J. E. Johnson Jr. Award from the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers in 1927, the Robert W. Hunt Award in 1937 and delivered the Henry Marion Howe Memorial Lecture before the annual meeting of the AIME in 1946. He recently was granted life membership in the Blast Furnace, Coke Oven and Raw Materials Committee of the AIME in recognition of his services as past chairman of the committee. He also has served as chairman of the Iron and Steel Division and as a member of the board of directors of AIME and as chairman of the Minnesota Chapter of the Society of Sigma Xi.

He is the author of papers on reduction of iron ore, desulphurization of pig iron, agglomeration and many other phases of blast furnace practice and raw materials. Some of his latest research is on pelletizing and sintering.

Elmer R. Ausemus, who received his doctorate in genetics from the University in 1932, began his career in 1925 when he received an appointment with the U.S. Department of Agriculture as an agronomist. He was located at the Northern Great Plains Field Station at Mandan, North Dakota, until 1929, when he was transferred to the University. Since then he has been in charge of spring and winter wheat breeding work at the University as well as the USDA program.

In 1947 he was appointed professor of genetics in the department of agronomy and plant genetics at the University. He has been an advisor to many students from all over the world, particularly those interested in wheat problems.

He has been a leader of the spring wheat area since 1951, where his duties are to coordinate the research work on wheat in this area. During this time he has cooperated very closely with workers, particularly in Canada and Mexico. He has been a leader in the development of several new, improved varieties of winter and spring wheats released by the Minnesota station and he has published many papers on genetics and wheat breeding, with particular reference to breeding for disease resistance.

Ausemus, whose many hobbies include gardening, growing of roses, church work and some travel will continue to work for the U.S. Department of Agriculture for a year or so following his retirement from the University.

Dr. Frank H. Krusen, professor of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the Mayo Foundation, most recently has served as president of the Sister Elizabeth Kenny Foundation and director of the Kenny Rehabilitation Institute.

Long active in professional organizations, he was the founder and first chairman of the American Board of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation and former executive director and chairman of the Baruch Committee on Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation. He also was founder and first president of the International Federation of Physical Medicine, president of the Third International Congress of Physical Medicine in 1960 and currently is serving as president of the federation. He also is an honorary member of 10 foreign societies of physical medicine and rehabilitation.

He is author or senior editor of seven books and author or co-author of more than 425 published articles on various phases of physical medicine and rehabilitation.

Honors and awards include the 1953 Physician's Award of the President of the United States, the 1958 Distinguished Service Medal Award of the American Medical Association, 1961 Award of Goodwill Industries of America, Inc., Honorary Fellowship in the Royal Society of Medicine of London, England, in 1961, and many others.

Another MAA Service

For Members Only

The Minnesota Alumni Club

Plans for a new University of Minnesota Alumni Club in the all-new Sheraton Ritz Hotel in downtown Minneapolis were announced last month by the MAA Board of Directors.

Ed Haislet, MAA Executive Director, has announced that the club will open about September 1.

Facilities of the club on the hotel's lobby floor, will include dining facilities, three private dining-conference rooms, kitchen, lounge, cocktail lounge, office and check-room. Facilities will be open throughout the day and evening.

"Since the Association was organized in 1903," Haislet announced, "This is the first time Minnesota Alumni will have their own club where they can meet friends, classmates and business associates and where they can renew old acquaintances and meet other University graduates. The club will provide University Alumni with a downtown haven where they can dine, confer and relax."

The proposed club facility is the second valuable MAA service to be offered to MAA members this year. Last fall a group life insurance program for members—the first such plan to be offered alumni of any Big Ten university—was announced by the Association. Sparked by an idea originated by the alumni organization of the City College of New York, the MAA Board of Directors unanimously agreed that making group life insurance available to members would be a realistic and valuable MAA service.

Plans for the Alumni club facility also were undertaken with this dual purpose in mind.

Membership in the new club is open to all graduates and former students of the University who are or will become members of the Minnesota Alumni Association.

Two types of membership are available, resident and non-resident.

Resident members are those who have their homes or principal places of business in the seven-county Twin Cities metropolitan area—Hennepin, Ramsey, Dakota, Washington, Scott, Carver or Anoka Counties.

Non-resident members are those who live or operate their business outside of the seven-county area.

The facilities and activities of the University of Minnesota Alumni Club have been designed and arranged for the convenience, comfort and pleasure of members, their families and guests. Alumnae who are members of the Association, upon joining the club, become full-fledged members in their own right. Each member's wife or husband is welcome to make full use of the club facilities for luncheons, as a meeting place, or just a pleasant place to relax. All food will be prepared in the club's own kitchen and served under the supervision of the Maitre d'hotel and the complete facilities of the Sheraton Ritz, including an outdoor swimming pool in the summer and ice skating rink in the winter, will be available through the club.

A special resident charter membership in the club is being offered by the MAA until June 30. For those accepting during this period, annual dues will be $30.00 including 20 per cent Federal tax, with an initiation fee of $10.00.

The initiation fee must be sent with the alumnus' application and in order to be assured of use of club facilities by the opening date, yearly dues should be sent in with the application. Those not sending their yearly dues with their application will be billed on or about the time of the club's opening.

After the June 30 cutoff date, regular initiation and annual dues will be in effect. Initiation fee for resident members will be $20, with annual dues of $36, including 20 per cent Federal tax.

Non-resident initiation and annual dues will be $10 initiation fee and $10 annual dues.

Charter members will receive a special permanent membership card and membership cards and numbers will be assigned as the applications are received.

The club will be governed by a board of directors which will have overlapping membership with the board of directors of the Minnesota Alumni Association.

Since all memberships are on a twelve-month basis, effective with the date of the club opening, alumni whose MAA memberships have expired or whose memberships will expire before September 1 are urged to enclose their membership dues when making application for charter membership in the club.

Annual dues are $5.00, $6.00 for a joint husband-wife membership; five-year membership is $20.00, $24.00 husband-wife; and life membership is $100, $125 husband-wife.

First year graduates of the University receive free membership in the Association with annual dues increasing one dollar per year until the sixth year out of school.

An application for charter membership in the University of Minnesota Alumni Club, latest service of the MAA to its membership, will be found on page 37.

Memo

TO: Association Members
FROM: Executive Director
SUBJECT: Entrance Requirements of the University

At this time of year the Alumni Office receives many calls as to the entrance requirements of the University, tuition, housing and other related subjects.

The University of Minnesota, while large, is highly selective. In comparison with other state universities, requirements for admission are among the highest. The average ability of University students is high in comparison with other colleges and universities throughout the state and nation.

For instance, the average freshman in the College of Science, Literature, and the Arts has a higher aptitude test score than 70 percent of all freshmen; a higher average score than many private liberal arts colleges.

Fifty percent of the freshmen at the University are in the top 90 percent of Minnesota's high school graduates; 80 percent are in the top 40 percent. Only 25 percent of University students graduate with their class in four years. Another 25 percent eventually receive their degree within ten years.

"Selection is so severe, especially at beginning levels," says R. E. Summers, Dean of Admission and Records, "that unfortunately the University loses many high ability students. To elevate standards much further would result in excluding many of the abler ones."

"Even excessive curtailment of freshmen would not necessarily keep the University small, since large numbers of its students now come with advanced standing after having completed a year or more of successful college work."

Each college of the University determines its own entrance requirements. They are:

BASIC ADMISSION CRITERIA.

COLLEGE OR DIVISION	ATTENDANCE Fall-1962
Science, Literature and the Arts	10,759	Freshmen selected from Minnesota high school graduates in: Upper 60 percent in college aptitude (i.e. average or high school graduating rank and college aptitude test scores).
Inst. of Technology	3,131	Upper 50 percent in grades, plus passing of special mathematics test.
College of Education	2,450	Upper 60 percent in grades for some curricula. For most curricula satisfactory completion of 1 or 2 years of preparatory work is required.
Duluth Campus	3,152	Upper 60 percent in college aptitude, according to program.
Morris Campus	522	Upper 60 percent in grades or aptitude.
Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics	1,873	Upper 60 percent in grades.
Others, including professional schools and Graduate school	8,650	Most students are admitted with 2 or 4 or more years of superior college work.
General College (2 yrs.)	3,079	Freshmen must have graduated from an accredited Minnesota high school.
	33,616

Any Minnesota high school graduate can go to the University of Minnesota but cannot necessarily enter the college of his choice unless he meets the entrance requirements as set by the college.

One reason that the University of Minnesota can be so selective is because of the General College. The General College, started in 1932, has as its purpose general education. Many of its graduates do go on in other colleges of the University.

Almost A Full Century of . . .

“Three Squares A Day”

The story of University housing spans almost a full century.

The first accommodations were offered in Old Main, which also housed the University classrooms, library and museum. Seventy-six years ago, in 1887, with the sum of $17,000 appropriated by the legislature, the Home Building was constructed on the St. Paul campus.

This building was the first residence hall and provided administrative offices, classrooms and living quarters for 100 male students in the then-new School of Practical Agriculture.

Just 71 years later, in September 1958, one of the newest of the University's residence halls, Bailey Hall, was opened near the site of the original Home Building at a cost of slightly more than $1 million for 308 students. The original entrance arch of the Home Building still stands in the court of Bailey Hall as a historical reminder to future students.

In the lengthy span between these two buildings, thousands of undergraduate and graduate students on both campuses have come to know the advantages of living on campus at the hub of their academic life. In this period, six residence halls were constructed on the St. Paul campus: Pendergast in 1889, Dining (North) in 1895, Brewster in 1897, Dexter in 1902, Meredith in 1907 and, finally, Bailey Hall in 1958.

On the Minneapolis campus residence halls first appeared in 1910

when the first section of Sanford Hall for women was opened. Pioneer Hall came several years later, in 1931, and was the mainstay during the war period when it was filled to the brim with military trainees.

In 1940 Comstock Hall was opened for women, followed by Centennial Hall for men in 1950. The newest halls on the Minneapolis campus — Territorial and Frontier — were opened in 1958 and 1959, respectively.

This year the University is offering "three squares a day" for 3,332 single men and women, but at a slightly higher rate than in 1870 when a room was $3 for a term of four months and in 1895 when board and room charges amounted to $4 weekly.

Not all of the changes since 1887 are new to University housing. Although most administrators believe that the idea of coeducational housing is an innovation of very recent vintage, in 1897 the girls of Brewster Hall and the boys of Home, Pendergast and Dining Halls were probably the first students to share common dining facilities in Dining Hall and thus qualify for the title of coeducational housing pioneers. The full circle of coeducational living was reached in 1958 when Bailey Hall was opened as one of the first residence halls designed specifically for this type of housing.

Other changes have been introduced since the first residence halls were built to serve as living quarters. The most significant of these has been the emergence of the philosophy of residence hall operation. Today's housing program is based on the belief that a residence hall is more than a place in which to sleep, eat and study; that the resident student must be given the opportunity to educate and be educated in a society of his peers; that the residence hall must be an extension of the learning process — an additional source of opportunity to the individual student's search for intellectual, social and emotional maturity.

To this end, the administrators of the halls, in cooperation with the Office of the Dean of Students and many other contributing departments and individual staff members, have worked diligently to guide a cultural and social program designed to meet the objectives. The base of the program is an active and aware student government organization in each hall which functions in the areas of activity programming, student behavior and administrative liaison. The "community" of the residence hall is a realistic and practical training ground for participating in citizenship education.

World War II brought about a

Sanford Hall

Bailey Hall

new phase of student housing which began as a temporary measure to provide emergency housing for the returning veteran and his family, and ended up as a permanent responsibility of the University.

In 1946, 20 trailers were given to the University and Como Village was born. In the next 18 months the "Villages" at the Como Avenue and Grove East sites mushroomed to more than 900 living units including trailers, prefab buildings, metal barracks and quonset huts. Amid the racket and confusion of hundreds of playing tots, thousands of harried fathers worked their way through the University academic program. As the World War II veterans came and went, the veterans of Korea took their place, and more recently the temporary units have been home to a new batch of married families, the undergraduate and graduate non-veteran students.

The trailers and prefabs were the first to wear out and were removed to other uses. In 1957 the temporary barracks and huts were reaching their usable limits and a gradual phasing out program was initiated. The total reduction is planned to be completed sometime soon after the 1967 year when all of the families in residence have either been graduated or moved on to other housing.

As the temporary units were being removed, the University squarely faced its growing responsibility to the growing married student population and began plans for a permanent housing program for families. In 1957 the southern tip of the St. Paul campus was selected for the site and between January 1, 1958, and July 1, 1962, 362 modern, frame and brick, one and two bedroom apartments were constructed on the 50-acre location.

As a side note, the temporary family housing at Como and Grove East Villages earned interesting and significant achievements in addition to rearing many hundreds of children and making graduation possible for many father-students.

The Village Union, a converted army two-story barracks, was for many years the first and only recreational center for married students, and pioneered many of the married student centers which exist today throughout the country. In 1947, Colliers magazine published a feature story on the project and its student government operation.

In that same year, the Village received the National Brotherhood Award from the Conference of Christians and Jews.

The married student housing program has proved its right to permanency on the University scene; Commonwealth Terrace, the first permanent married housing development, is proof of this fact. The University is concerned with the necessity for student family housing which is offered at reasonable rental rates, provides opportunity for a continuing academic and social education and is equal to or better than the standards of housing offered by private owners.

The relationship which exists among the families in married student housing, their supporting University personnel and the surrounding community is of vital interest to the University. Public understanding and support will be favorable if married student housing authorities and residents continue to accept and carry out their community responsibilities.

The married students who arrived in the backwash of a world war proved the marriage and education do mix. They also proved that in addition to working at income-producing jobs, and family raising and achieving their academic goals, married students can fulfill the civic responsibilities of self-government. It was on this evidence that the University moved ahead on the permanent housing of Commonwealth Terrace and plans for future married housing in other locations.

While all of this student housing was developing, the faculty of the University was not neglected by University housing.

In the early 1930's a small parcel of land north of the St. Paul campus was set aside for faculty home construction. Later expanded, this area now includes 66 individually designed and owned homes which are restricted to staff members with tenure.

In 1960 and again in 1961, as the Grove East barracks were removed, 24 additional lots were opened for faculty use for a total of 90 homes and home sites in what is called University Grove. Future plans call for an additional 13 home sites as Grove East Village is completely removed.

Soon after the University Grove was started, Thatcher Hall, a 38-unit three-story apartment building was opened on the St. Paul campus to serve graduate student families; but, as a result of the acute need for housing to attract academic staff in this period of increasing enrolments, Thatcher was temporarily assigned to staff from 1946 through 1952. Kewanis Court, a 29-unit apartment building in south Minneapolis which previously had been given to the University, was assigned for staff in 1952.

A further service to the home-hunting staff member has been the Staff Housing Bureau which has served as a clearing house to speed rentals and purchases of homes through a listing of available privately owned apartments and homes. The Staff Housing Bureau has been a vital service through the years to the new faculty and staff member and his family who must have help in housing and community orientation.

But what will the future bring? What are the current and long-range plans to meet the ever-increasing need for additional student housing and enrollments continue to soar?

Every phase of University housing facilities — as, indeed, every phase of University Services and academic programs — will require expansion in the immediate future.

This is the year for advance planning for housing which is intended to meet the needs in the foreseeable future.

For instance, it is anticipated that by 1975 an additional 2,500 single resident accommodations — including food service facilities — will be needed.

To this end, a steering committee, "Operation West," has been organized to study specific areas of concern as they relate to the design, physical layout and equipment required for additional University single student housing.

Broken down into three sub-committees — the Committee on Social, Cultural and Recreational Programming; the Committee on Student Government and Resident Assignment; and the Committee on Counselling and Academic Correlation — they will study and consider such diverse problems as those activities which should be incorporated into the design of each living unit within each residence hall as a "house" or group program, what is the maximum number of residents who can be considered effective as a "house" unit, should residence halls contain separate study facilities, etc.

The same growing pains are being felt in the area of married student housing. By 1975 it is anticipated that an additional 1,000 apartments will be needed to maintain the present 14.5 per cent ratio to the married student population.

The faculty and staff, as well, will require additional space in the immediate future.

To this end, 37 additional faculty homes are anticipated and construction of a staff-faculty apartment building is planned. The 51-unit structure will be located on the site of the Pillsbury home, former home of University presidents, a fitting tribute to this historic University site.

The University Medical School

Men, Money and Ideas

Men, ideas and money — these were the major factors in building a world-famous Medical School at the University of Minnesota, but they aren't quite the whole story. There are some things left over.

The overall University atmosphere — something that is pretty hard to pin down but, nevertheless, is there — has played an important role in the Medical School's development. The fact that the Medical School is a part of the total University picture and not a detached or semi-autonomous unit has had a far-reaching effect.

Faculty members of the Medical School are in close touch daily with other members of the University family and a myriad of facilities. Unquestionably, this has brought a deepening and broadening of intellectual interests that, while not directly connected to medical teaching, have produced in the long run better doctors and better teachers — and, as a result, better students.

Another factor has been the large metropolitan center and the many hospital facilities available. The University owns and controls Elliot Memorial Hospital, Cancer Institute, Todd Memorial Hospital, Psychopathic Hospital, Minnesota Hospital and Home for Crippled Children, Variety Club Heart Hospital, Masonic Memorial Hospital and the University Health Service.

Editor's note: Where does the University rank in national standings, college by college? Are its many colleges, schools and departments on a par, above or below average in comparison to other institutions throughout the country? This look at the University's Medical School is the second in a series of articles devoted to this thought-provoking subject, affecting all alumni.

Minneapolis General Hospital, Veterans Hospital in Minneapolis, Ancker Hospital in St. Paul, Gillette State Hospital in St. Paul, Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Minneapolis as well as certain private hospitals in Minneapolis and St. Paul also are available for graduate study.

While other medical schools also possess metropolitan hospital facilities, few have the field to themselves. The University has the only medical school in the State of Minnesota.

All these factors, added up, however, wouldn't necessarily come out as a great medical school. There has to be some fusing principal that brings all together in a living reality.

Former Dean Harold S. Diehl summed it up quite succinctly:

"The first function of a medical school, unquestionably, is to train good doctors; but a medical school, also, has an obligation to contribute to medical knowledge and progress. A school in which there is inquiry and investigation is a school with life and vigor.

"If medical students are to continue to grow after they leave here, we have to send them out with the spirit of inquiry. This, we try to do."

And this the University of Minnesota has done.

Heart surgery, cancer research, fat and diet studies, "deep freeze" surgery and a score of other subjects have continued to bring writers, students, visiting physicians and scientists and patients to the University from all over the world.

Perhaps one indication of the high esteem in which the University of Medical School is held is the ever-increasing number of applicants for available places. While surveys indicate that, on the average, both quality and quantity of applicants to the nation's medical schools are down, the University is not troubled in this respect.

Qualified applicants — those with proper academic and intellectual qualifications — have shown a steady, if not dramatic, increase. In 1958, with 140 available places, there were 268 qualified applicants. By 1962 this had risen to 506 applicants for 150 places and the 1963 starting class has 612 applicants for 150 places.

Quality as well as quantity is evidenced with a grade point average of 3.2 for September.

Medical School officials feel that this trend will continue for at least the next five to ten years.

This is a heartening development, at least on the University scene, since just to maintain the present ratio of one doctor for every 740 Americans, the Association of American Medical Colleges figures that U.S. medical schools must turn out 10,500 doctors a year by 1975. Allowing for dropouts, this would mean some 11,700 medical freshmen in 1971, about 3,200 more than last fall.

The American Medical Association warns that even this increase may not be enough. It cites additional strains on medical manpower imposed by the growing proportion of old people in the population and by rising incomes and welfare programs which put regular medical care within the reach of more people. And, with research and teaching luring many new doctors, there is a good chance the shortage of general practice "family" doctors will worsen.

Even this latter fear is not quite so devastating at the University of Minnesota. About 40 per cent of Medical School graduates go into general practice as opposed to a national average of about 34 per cent.

The ratio of men and women to the University of Minnesota Medical School has remained relatively constant over the past few years, with women accounting for approximately eight to ten per cent of the applications annually.

Though many graduating female physicians have assumed prominent professional roles in Minnesota and elsewhere and have contributed greatly to the high level of medical care and health in the nation, Minnesota's experience has been that the loss rate of women medical students, once accepted, is higher percentage-wise than that of men students — whether due to scholastic failure, personal considerations or combinations of these and other reasons.

With regard to the dropout rate at the University Medical School — which, actually, is very low — contrary to popular opinion, it is not primarily related to the cost of a medical education.

While it is true that for students contemplating Medical School, cost is often a major deterrent — especially if three to four years of prior University training has about exhausted the family resources for education — once enrolled and following a course of study, few withdraw because of money problems.

If the student is intellectually and academically prepared for Medical School, the school will find a way to help him.

Scholarships, as in any other school or college, are limited, but they are available. The Minnesota Medical Foundation, which offers 57 scholarships annually, last year was deluged with 150 applications from all four classes. While most medical scholarships are for $500, there are a few larger ones available at $750 and $1,000.

But there are other ways students can "help to help themselves." Among these are the general, non-medically related jobs available to all students; research laboratory jobs in University hospitals and affiliates; and private hospital externships (junior internships). Any and all such jobs are becoming of increased importance with the rise in the married student population — 75 per cent of the Medical students are married upon graduation.

In reality, though, for a Minnesota resident, the University offers the most reasonable medical education possible. Each resident receives the equivalent of a $500 to $1,000 scholarship on the basis of the $150 tuition.

The curriculum is one of the finest available. In some respects, it is unique.

In common with essentially all American medical schools, the University offers a comprehensive course of study in basic medical sciences during the first and second years of the curriculum.

Immediately following two academic years of study, however, the student embarks on two more years of clinical study, during which the focus shifts from the laboratory to the patient. Bedside instruction on hospital wards and in the clinics is now the focus of the students' experiences.

In June, immediately following completion of the second academic year of the Medical School curriculum, the student enters clinical studies on the hospital wards. Students may be assigned to the University Hospitals or to any of the major associated hospitals.

The two-year period is divided into eight academic quarters. Six of the eight quarters are required assignments to clinical services.

Dr. Allen

Dr. Arnow

Dr. Braasch

Dr. Hilleboe

Dr. Myers

Dr. Scott

Dr. Shapiro

Dr. Snell

Dr. Van Slyke

One quarter is a free period and one quarter is set aside as an elective period.

Both free and elective quarters may be arranged at any time.

The student is assigned to internal medicine during one quarter, to a surgical service in another quarter. During one six-month period the student rotates through a sequence which includes pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, and psychiatry and neurology. Nine weeks are spent on each of these three services. Finally, the student reports to a six-month assignment to the Comprehensive Clinic program.

Under the direction of Dr. Richard Magraw, director of the Comprehensive Clinic program, the medical student reaches the culmination of his experience in the care and treatment of patients. For two consecutive quarters the student's major assignment and responsibility is to organize and actively participate in the complete medical care of patients referred to University Hospitals. The student's role approaches that of an intern in many respects.

In addition, during the Comprehensive Clinic assignment, students work for three-week periods in specialty clinics where they have an opportunity to acquire further knowledge of medical specialties.

The success of the curriculum, and its obvious merits in the eyes of many, is notably attested to merely by the attractiveness of Minnesota graduates in the medical fields.

Of the faculty, little more than mention need be made — their fame and skill are well known to all.

The Drs. Lillehei, Dr. Wangenstein, Dr. Good, Dr. Varco — these and many more already have gone down in medical annals as being pioneers and leaders in their fields.

Not to be forgotten are the approximately 200 physicians practicing medicine in their various specialties in the metropolitan area who annually contribute a portion of their time and knowledge to the teaching of University medical students.

And the alumni, who also have distinguished themselves in all medical fields, also need but a passing mention. Their fame, as well as their many honors and awards, are well known.

To mention but a few of the many:

Dr. Raymond B. Allen '24BS '25MA '28MD '34PhD, director of the USOM to Indonesia and former chancellor of the University of California; Dr. L. Earle Arnow '40MB '40MD, president of Warner-Lambert Research Institute; Dr. William Braasch '00BS '03MD, professor emeritus of urology at the University and past president of the General Alumni Association; Dr. Herman E. Hilleboe '28BS '29MB '31MD, chief consultant on medical affairs to New York Governor Nelson E. Rockefeller and former commissioner of health for the State of New York; Dr. Jay Arthur Myers '20MD, professor emeritus of the University's School of Public Health and a career TB fighter;

Dr. Gordon H. Scott, '25MA '26PhD, dean of the College of Medicine at Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan; Dr. Morse J. Shapiro '15BS '17MD, chief of pediatric cardiology at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles; Dr. Albert M. Snell, senior internist at Palo Alto Clinic, Palo Alto, California; Dr. John P. Stapp '43MB '44MD, chief of the Aero Medical Field Laboratory at Holloman Air Force Base, noted for his studies on the effects of acceleration and deceleration; Dr. C. J. VanSlyke '27BS '28MB '28MD, director of the National Heart Institute, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Maryland.

These are but a few Medical School alumni who have distinguished themselves. There are many others — in private practice, serving clinics and hospitals, in business and industry, government and the military, teaching and devoting their lives to research.

Truly it can be said that the University of Minnesota Medical School is one of the nation's greatest, serving both the state and the nation.

Fund Honor Roll

The following is the list of contributors, alumni and friends, who gave to the Fund in 1962. This is to acknowledge the generosity of our contributors and to express thanks to each for his loyalty and support of the Alumni Fund.

The University of Minnesota Alumni Fund

Dr. V. J. P. Lundquist, '43 MD,
Chairman, Advisory Committee

For the fiscal year, January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962, 5,589 alumni gave a total of $316,270.31 to the Alumni Fund.

Because the Greater University Fund was discontinued and the Alumni Fund started only as of July 12, 1962, the results of the financial report need interpretation. Under the Greater University Fund, alumni annual giving, as well as non-alumni projects were handled together. Now the Alumni Fund is only responsible for alumni annual giving and alumni fund raising projects of Alumni Chapters, Classes and Constituent Groups.

Of the $316,270.31 total amount received, $113,125.00 came from alumni annual giving and alumni projects. Inasmuch as 107,000 alumni were solicited, this is only a 5.22% effectiveness. The average gift was for $20.35.

This has been a transition year for the Fund. Thus the fund results are not comparable to the preceding years - From January, 1, 1962 to June 30, 1962 it was the Greater University Fund, with gifts being recorded from many non-alumni projects; from July 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962 it has been the Alumni Fund with only gifts from alumni being recorded.

The University of Minnesota Alumni Fund is a separate division of the Department of Alumni Relations, supported by the University, and now under the direction of the Executive Director of Alumni Relations.

What is the difference between the usual liberal arts education and general education? General College courses are planned to be as complete as possible in themselves. Relationships within and among fields of knowledge are emphasized rather than intensive study of small isolated parts; completion of a two-year planned program of studies, rather than the traditional four-year sequence, with a degree of associate of arts being granted; courses all organized around areas of life activities as well as around broad subject matter fields.

Students in General College have the advantage of well developed and effective personnel and counseling service, and where they may become more gradually adjusted to the competition of college-level work. If they demonstrate by superior performance their ability to meet competition, they may transfer to the college of their original choice without undue loss of time or credit.

Sincerely,

Ed Hauslet

THE ALUMNI

Senator Dirksen Will Speak At Honors Presentation, Meeting

The Honorable Everett McKinley Dirksen '13-17, U.S. Senator from Illinois and Senate Minority Leader, will receive the University's Outstanding Achievement Award and be guest speaker at the Seventh Annual Alumni Honors Presentation and Annual Meeting of the Board of Directors and Membership of the Minnesota Alumni Association.

Dirksen will be one of two distinguished alumni to receive the Outstanding Achievement Award at the June 6 meeting. Four alumni will receive the Alumni Service Award.

President O. Meredith Wilson will present the awards and Joseph A. Maun '32BA '35LLB, MAA president, will serve as master of ceremonies.

Other recipient of the Outstanding Achievement Award will be Arthur A. Barlow '23BA, president of Builders Material, Inc., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Recipients of the Alumni Service Award will be:

Walter Blumst, market analyst with Pacific Gas and Electric Company, San Francisco. Blumst is one of the founders and first president of the Minnesota Alumni Club of Northern California;

Kenneth C. Glaser '42BBA, president of Lend Lease Transportation Company, Minneapolis. A former member of the MAA board of directors, Glaser is past president of the School of Business Administration Alumni Association;

J. D. Holtzermann '21BA, owner of Holtzermann's Imports, Minneapolis. Holtzermann is a past board member and past president of the MAA.

Parker D. Sanders '18BSAg, owner and manager of the Sanders Farms, Redwood Falls, Minnesota. He is a past director of the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics Alumni Association and a former trustee of the Greater University Fund, forerunner of the Minnesota Alumni Fund.

The program will begin at 6:15 p.m. with an invocation by Rabbi Louis Milgrom, director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation.

Following dinner President Wilson will make the awards presentations and Sen. Dirksen will speak.

The Annual Meeting will follow with announcement of election results and introduction of newly-elected board members and officers.

The president's report will be followed by presentation of awards to retiring board members and the meeting will close with "Hail Minnesota" directed by Roy A. Schuessler, professor of music.

R. F. Woodward Receives Award

Robert F. Woodward '30BA, United States ambassador to Spain, last month received the Outstanding Achievement Award at a dinner in his honor on the Minneapolis campus.

A native of Minneapolis, Woodward has been in the U.S. diplomatic service since 1931. He has served as ambassador to Costa Rica, 1954-58 and Uruguay, 1958-61, and has held embassy assignments in several other Latin American countries and Sweden and Canada.

Before being named ambassador to Spain in April, 1962, he served for one year as assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs. He was deputy secretary of state for inter-American affairs in 1953-54. Other state department posts he has held include chief of the division of foreign service and acting assistant chief of the division of American republics.

With this issue, the Alumni News suspends publication until October, at which time the magazine will begin its 63rd year of service to the alumni.

We wish to thank our readers for their comments and criticisms throughout the year for, undeniably, these will make us better — and better is what we want to be.

Have a pleasant summer.

Dr. Potter Named Adair Award Recipient

Dr. Edith Potter '23BS '24MB '25MD '34PhD, University of Chicago professor and 1951 winner of the University of Minnesota's Outstanding Achievement Award, has been named 1963 recipient of the Fred Lyman Adair Award.

The award, sponsored by the American Gynecological Society, is granted for the best work of original quality related to human genetics. The award is given biennially for a stipend of $2,000 plus an allowance for traveling expenses if the work is reported at an annual meeting of the American Gynecological Society.

Dr. Potter

Founder of the award is Fred Lyman Adair M.D., '98BS '18MA, also a 1951 recipient of the University's Outstanding Achievement Award. Dr. Adair is professor emeritus of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Chicago. He is past treasurer and president of the American Gynecological Society and recently was elected to its Hall of Fame.

Dr. Adair has received the Gold Key from the Medical Alumni of the University of Chicago and is the honorary member of many domestic and foreign obstetrical societies. He has contributed many articles and edited several books in his field.

In 1934 Dr. Adair appointed Dr. Potter to the staff of the department of obstetrics and gynecology of the University of Chicago. As teacher, investigator and pathologist to the Chicago Lying-in Hospital, she rose in rank and became a professor in the department in 1956.

From 1934-58 she actively participated in the Chicago Health Department studies designed to reduce pregnancy wastage. She is a consultant to the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology and a member of many national committees; she has lectured extensively on all continents and has a laboratory named for her at the University of Brazil.

She is the author or co-author of several books and has authored more than 100 papers, mostly about perinatal pathology.

Two to Receive OAA At Education Meeting

Dr. Philip Rulon, professor of education at Harvard University, and Walter H. Gaumnitz, rural education specialist with the Office of Education Washington D.C., will receive the University's Outstanding Achievement Award at the eighth annual meeting of the College of Education Alumni Association.

The awards will be presented at the annual dinner meeting on Wednesday, June 26, in the Main Ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union. The meeting will start at 6:30 p.m.

Rev. Robert E. (Bob) Richards, director of the Wheaties Sports Federation, will be the featured speaker.

Rev. Richards won the pole vaulting title in the Olympic games of 1952 and 1956 and was three-times U.S. decathlon champion.

Reservations may be made through the Minnesota Alumni Association, 205 Coffman Memorial Union, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14. Tickets are $3.50 per person.

Area High School Coach

Griak Named Track Coach; Will Succeed Jim Kelly

Roy Griak '49BSEd '50MEd, Minneapolis area high school coach, last month was named to succeed retiring Jim Kelly as the University of Minnesota track coach.

Appointment of the 39-year-old "M" man was approved at the May 10 meeting of the University Board of Regents. His appointment will become effective July 1.

Though a Montanan by birth, he moved to Duluth as an infant. In high school at Duluth Morgan Park he participated in basketball, track, cross country and football.

Following army service from 1944-46 he attended UMD for two years where he participated in basketball and track. In 1948 he enrolled on the main campus. He won a cross country "M" in 1948 and a track "M" in 1949.

Following graduation, Griak taught at Nicollet, Minnesota, High School in 1950-51 and Lincoln Junior High School in Mankato in 1951-52. In 1953 he joined the St. Louis Park High School staff where he has taught and coached for the past 10 years. For two years he taught social studies and coached track and cross country and since 1955 he has concentrated on coaching and teaching physical education.

In 1955 and again in 1962 Griak coached St. Louis Park to state cross country titles and in 1958 and 1962 he coached the track team to a state title. Griak-coached teams also won 'Class L' or "big city" class championships at the 1962-63 Carleton Relays. In addition, Griak served as assistant coach of the St. Louis Park High School 1962 State High School Basketball Championship team.

A past president of the Hennepin County District Minnesota Physical Education Association, he currently is vice president of the track coaches division of the Minnesota State High School Coaches Association.

Commenting on Griak's appointment, his former coach, Jim Kelly, said:

"Roy has done outstanding work in the past and he'll continue to do it in the future.

"When new men are appointed to positions, people always say flowery things.

"But this isn't lip service—I'm very happy. I know my job will be in the hands of an outstanding young man. It makes everything seem worthwhile."

Vice President Stanley J. Wenberg commented that "we are not only getting a coach with an outstanding record, who has his master's degree at Minnesota, but also one who should strengthen high school-college relations."

San Diego President

Art Rivkin '48BA has been elected new president of the San Diego, California Chapter of the Minnesota Alumni Association for 1963-64. Francis Nickerson will serve as vice president and secretary-treasurer is Charles Buckles.

"Experience, Incorporated"

Upper Midwest Alumni Form Management Counseling Service

Ten Upper Midwest executives, economists, scientists and professors—some retired and some still active professionally—have announced the formation of a management counseling service. Eight of the ten founders are University alumni.

The organization, Experience, Incorporated, is incorporated in Minnesota with headquarters in Minneapolis, but operations will be nationwide and even international.

It will offer guidance at the decision-making level to industry, financial concerns, agri-business, government agencies, foundations and universities. Members of the group will be available to serve on boards of directors, conduct seminars, lecture, work with planning committees and otherwise augment management affairs.

Experience, Incorporated expects to enlarge its membership and to advise individual executives as well as companies on retirement plans.

Founders of the organization have come from the grain trade, milling, manufacturing, scientific and economic research, banking and university positions.

The ten founders make up the board of directors and officers with O. B. Jesness '12BSAg, '24MS '28PhD, professor emeritus of agricultural economics at the University, designated as chairman.

Other alumni serving as officers and directors are:

Julius Hendel PhD, retired vice president of Cargill, Inc., and chairman of the board of McNary Management Company and a director and member of the executive committee of the Feed Grains Council. Hendel will serve as president.

Betty Sullivan '22BSChem '35-PhD and Richard L. Kozelka '31-PhD will serve as vice presidents.

Dr. Sullivan is vice president and director of research for Peavey Flour Mills and past president of the American Association of Cereal Chemists.

Kozelka, professor and former dean of the School of Business Administration at the University, is a specialist in statistical methods, business conditions and business policy.

Treasurer of Experience, Incorporated, will be Sherwood O. Berg 51PhD, newly-named dean of the Institute of Agriculture. He is a member of numerous committees and organizations promoting education, agriculture and rural life on state, national and international levels.

Ray Allan Goldberg, assistant professor in the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, will serve as secretary of the organization. He has specialized in government relations and anti-trust implications of business practices as well as in general economics.

Other alumni directors are Clyde H. Bailey MS, dean emeritus of the University's Institute of Agriculture who is known internationally for his specific accomplishments to improve human nutrition, and Arthur Upgren, professor of economics and director of the Bureau of Economic Studies at Macalester College. He has worked in international as well as local financial circles and in a wide variety of academic posts.

New brilliance for records...

Have you ever had trouble with dust clinging to your phonograph records—clogging the grooves, collecting on the needle, and spoiling the most carefully reproduced sound? That happens when a record builds up static electricity and becomes a magnet for dust every time it's played. ► But Union Carbide scientists have found a way to end this nuisance. Into the vinyl plastic developed for records, they have built a special anti-static agent. Already more than 50 million stereo records have been produced from this improved plastic. ► Ever since the creation of the first vinyl phonograph record, Union Carbide has worked closely with the leaders in the record industry to achieve the brilliant high-fidelity available to you today. Vinyl is one of the important family of BAKELITE brand plastics, which includes phenolics, styrenes, epoxies, polyethylenes, and polypropylenes. Pioneers in plastics for more than 50 years, the people of Union Carbide are continuing their research in these useful materials.

Col. Clark

Appointment of Lieutenant Colonel Mildred I. Clark of Clarkton, North Carolina, as Chief of the Army Nurse Corps, effective in September, was announced recently by the Department of the Army.

Colonel Clark, who succeeds Colonel Margaret Harper, is presently chief nurse in the Surgeon's Office, Headquarters, Sixth U.S. Army, San Francisco, California. In this position she is the staff advisor to the Surgeon on all matters related to professional nursing and the Army Nursing Service in the eight western states of the Sixth Army command.

A 1936 graduate of the Barker Sanatorium School of Nursing, Lumberton, North Carolina, Colonel Clark has been certified by the American Board of Nurse Anesthetists. She received her bachelor of science degree from the College of Education at the University of Minnesota in 1953 with a major in nursing education, graduating "with distinction."

She is a member of the American Nurses Association, the National League for Nursing, the Association of Nurse Anesthetists and a number of civic and social organizations.

Colonel Clark will assume her four year appointment and promotion to colonel in September to become the 12th Chief of the Army Nurse Corps.

Powell

Brigadier General Harvard W. Powell '51LLB has retired from active duty Air Force service and accepted the position of assistant to the senior vice president of North American Aviation, Inc., Los Angeles.

For the past three years Gen. Powell, a native of Duluth, has been vice commander of the Space Systems Division in Los Angeles, the Air Force management headquarters responsible for the development of military space systems and for much of the support provided the national space program. In his new position he will have executive responsibilities with North American's corporate offices in Los Angeles.

The 48-year-old general graduated from Duluth Junior College in 1939, enlisted for pilot training and won his wings in 1940. During the war he commanded an anti-submarine squadron, based for a time in Cuba, and later flew 47 combat missions in 14 months as the commander of a B-24 squadron in China.

General Powell's decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with two Oak Leaf clusters, Legion of Merit, American Campaign Medal, Presidential Unit Citation with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with four battle stars.

Wagner

Donald R. Wagner '48BBA was the recipient of the Charles W. Bronstien Youth Education Award, presented for the first time last month by the Sales and Marketing Executives of Minneapolis.

The award will be given annually to the SME Club member who shows outstanding service in educating youth in the importance of sales and marketing in the American way of life.

Wagner was selected as the first recipient of the award based on his activities as professional advisor to the newly-organized sales and marketing professional fraternity, Pi Sigma Epsilon, at the University, for his work as coordinator and instructor of a 16-week course which he originated two years ago, "Success Keys for Sales Management," and for his assistance to high school students in advising them in the business sales field.

The award was made at an Education Day luncheon sponsored by the Club for all educators assisting in the sales and marketing fields.

Wagner is vice president of sales for Spring Company Florida Sales, Minneapolis. A member of the MAA, he also is a member of Grey Friars Honorary Society, Alpha Delta Phi Alumni Fraternity, Pi Sigma Epsilon, Navy League Association and Sales and Marketing Executives Club of Minneapolis.

Blue Cross stays with you... even after retirement

Does your present group hospitalization plan provide these vital continuation privileges? . . . Blue Cross provides continuous coverage when employees retire or leave a Blue Cross group. No loss of coverage for even a day. Even when retired employees reach age 65 . . . 75 . . . and beyond . . . Blue Cross continues to provide protection on a non-group basis. And if the employee dies, the spouse can continue Blue Cross coverage on a non-group basis. This Blue Cross continuation feature is a real "plus" for you in sound employee-management relations . . . it's an indication you care. No wonder more Minnesota groups choose Blue Cross. Blue Cross is:

ALWAYS THERE . . .
WHEN YOU NEED CARE!
