Grants Aid U Research Studies

The University of Minnesota's department of otolaryngology has received a $10,450 grant from the Deafness Research Foundation to study hereditary deafness.

The grant will give investigators the opportunity of studying the pathology of temporal bone specimens. The foundation has awarded more than $197,000 to otological researchers in 21 laboratories and medical centers this year.

Family problem-solving will be studied under a $791,389 grant awarded recently to the University's Family Study Center by the National Institute of Mental Health.

Four investigators from the professorial ranks will carry out several projects in a five-year program designed to help families develop better ways of solving such problems as child-rearing, finances, marital relationships and the loss of family members.

A two-year renewal grant of $675,000 was received from the Ford Foundation by the University for continuation of agricultural production training education in Chile. The grant provides for specialists and consultants from Minnesota to advise the Chilean program, fellowships for Chileans to study abroad and also within their country, study tours abroad, in addition to support for related Chilean institutions to purchase supplies, equipment and library materials.

The original grant, awarded the University in 1964, aided the establishment of a system for transmitting technical production information from the Chilean Research Centers to the farmers. The two-year continuation of the program will allow the time needed to complete the team of specialists, and to begin to help the Chileans establish a staff of provincial production officers.

Volunteer Work for Older Citizens

Men and women 60 years of age and older now have an opportunity to give a few hours of service each week in a volunteer educational aide program.

Recently begun in the Related Arts Division of the School of Home Economics, the program's purpose is to make use of the resources of senior citizens to help with special projects. Many kinds of skills are needed — such as the ability to work with special exhibits.

Currently, a 75-year-old woman goes to the St. Paul campus twice a week to sew and repair costumes used by the costume design classes. A man confined to his wheelchair works out intricate models with wood at a workshop in a retirement center where he is a resident.

Those interested in volunteering to become educational aides should call or write Mrs. Signe Betsinger, School of Home Economics, University of Minnesota, St. Paul 55101, phone 373-1552.

Racial Census Required by Fall

For the first time next fall the University will compile a racial census of students to comply with Title VI of the U.S. Civil Rights Act of 1964 — "Nondiscrimination in Federally Assisted Programs." The Title provides that there shall be no discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance.

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, responsible for determining institutional compliance, issued regulations to implement provisions of the Title and has provided forms which must be filed by November of every year. The University's 1967 report was allowed to be submitted with estimated information. But beginning in September, exact data must be collected if the University is to receive any kind of federal financial assistance, including federal funds for student loans and federal research grants.

A committee of students and staff members has discussed ways by which the required information might best be collected. The committee proposed use of a statistical survey card as part of the fall quarter registration process. Each student will be required to turn in this card but should not identify himself and will not be required to fill out the card.

The blank contains sections for indicating residence, student status, type and amount of financial aid, full or part-time, and predominant ethnic background. The ethnic section specifies American Indian, American Negro, Oriental American, Spanish American, Caucasian, Foreign Student and Other.

Ford Grant Aids Doctoral Studies

The Ford Foundation has granted $300,000 to the University's Department of Political Science for the establishment of a four-year doctoral program. The grant will finance 20 or more fellowships to be awarded over a seven-year period.

"The money will be used for fellowships that will allow the graduate student to accelerate his doctoral program," explained Department Chairman Frank J. Sorauf. "The four-year program, which bypasses the master's degree, is an attempt to put the obtaining of a doctorate on a more predictable schedule."

The first year of graduate study is to include a general introduction into political science research technique and statistical analysis. The student will hold a teaching assistantship either the second or third year to gain classroom experience. The fourth year should be spent writing a dissertation.

Fellowship allotments are first year—$2,000, second or third year—$2,200, fourth year—$2,400. The student is also given his tuition and an additional $400 for each dependent. Part of the grant will be used also to pay special student research costs, to pay for the publication of the thesis and to support summer research projects.

POINTS of VIEW

ED HAISLET
Executive Director

Voting for those whom are to represent us is the American way. You will find in this issue of the Alumni News the list of the nominees to the Board of Directors of the Minnesota Alumni Association — your Association.

I'd like to ask that you turn now to the write-up of the ten alumni who were nominated and who have consented to stand for election. It is a very impressive list. Read the write-ups and then cast your vote for the five you feel will best serve the needs of the Association and University.

The Alumni Board consists of 20 elected by the membership, through ballot in the Alumni News, 5 being elected each year for 4-year terms. Each of the Presidents of the twenty constituent groups are automatically members of the Board, plus the Presidents of the M Club and the Law School Alumni Association which are not constituent groups, as well as the President of the UMD and UMM Alumni Associations.

Recently the Board amended its by-laws to include sixteen at-large members appointed by the Board, fourteen representing the eight alumni regions of the country, and two at-large members from the Twin City metropolitan area to allow the Board to fill a particular need of the Board.

The eight alumni regions are:

Region One — Northeastern — 2 directors — Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, Vermont.

Region Two — Eastern — 2 directors — Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Washington DC, West Virginia.

Region Three — Southeastern — 1 director — Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee.

Region Four — Great Lakes and Upper Midwest — 3 directors — Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin.

Region Five — Great Plains — 2 directors — Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas.

Region Six — Southwest — 1 director — Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah.

Region Seven — Northwest — 1 director — Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington, Wyoming.

Region Eight — West — 2 directors — Alaska, California, Hawaii.

Nominations for at-large members come primarily through the chapters. The at-large members are asked to attend at least one of the three meetings of the Board at their own expense.

So the Board of Directors of your Association has 60 directors — they are the ones who set the overall policy of the Association. They give of their time, effort (and money) because they believe in the work of the Association, in its continuing effort to support the University. Today more than ever before there is need of able, dedicated and interested alumni who will bring their knowledge and experience to bear upon the problems facing our University. While student unrest now demands the attention of our University administrators, it is alumni leadership through its qualified experience, its influence and affluence that in the final analysis the University must turn to for help and assistance to safeguard its teaching, research and service programs.

While we are talking about alumni leadership, why don't you turn to the listing of the present members of the Board, (listed on the masthead page). It is a most distinguished group — long in service to the Association and University.

Your Association is doing many things, supporting many programs. It has 55 chapters in the State of Minnesota, 44 outstate and 20 constituent or college groups; it has Standing Committees on Honors; Investments, Insurance and Office Space. For instance, the last named committee is working on a possible alumni center building on the West Bank — a problem of no small proportion. The Association has alumni representation on three University Senate Committees, Intercollegiate Athletics, ROTC and Student Affairs; has representation on the Union Board of Governors, both East Bank and West Bank and the St. Paul Student Center Boards. The Alumni Club operated by the Association is the only one like it in the Big 10.

In this issue of the Alumni News, you will find the Honor Roll of Annual Giving of the Alumni Fund which is sponsored by the Association. Note the growth of the Fund the past five years — this year from the Alumni Fund we had 12,279 donors and raised $315,449, and a total of alumni giving of 15,310 donors and $1,041,989.

So the Association is doing things that you as a member can point to with pride. The Association is only as strong as its membership, its membership only as good as its leaders — so mark your ballot and send it in today.

Sincerely,

Ed Havelle

MAA Resolution Supporting University Health Sciences

WHEREAS, The University of Minnesota Board of Regents in a statement dated April 19, 1968, did outline a four-step program to expand and advance education for the Health Sciences in Minnesota, and

WHEREAS, The University of Minnesota, in the development of this program has recognized the need for:

1. An increased number of physicians in the State of Minnesota, particularly for physicians who would practice family medicine;
2. Increased numbers of all other individuals in the Health care professions and vocations: dentists, pharmacists, veterinarians, nurses, medical technologists, dental assistants and hygienists, physical and occupational therapists, as well as other personnel; and

WHEREAS, The University of Minnesota has fostered the development of this emerging new concept of a team-approach to health care, which will depend upon the participation and understanding of all the health sciences personnel;

THEREFORE, be it resolved that the MINNESOTA ALUMNI ASSOCIATION supports the University of Minnesota Health Sciences proposal and urges its membership and citizens of Minnesota to give this proposal its full support and understanding.

THE WORLD IN REVOLUTION

As part of the cooperation growing between alumni affairs offices at Minnesota colleges and universities, University of Minnesota alumni are invited — and encouraged — to attend sessions of a series of continuing education lectures: The World in Revolution. These lectures, sponsored by the Twin Cities chapter of the St. John's University Alumni Association, will present knowledgeable opinion on subjects of high current interest.

The sessions, which are listed below with panel comment on their content, will take place from 8:00-9:30 pm. at the Alumnae Center, College of St. Catherine, 2004 Randolph Avenue in St. Paul. There is no admission.

APRIL 18 — THE FAMILY IN REVOLUTION

"Today, the traditional family structure is being threatened by new theories and practices in sexuality, education and religion, to name only a few. As a result of these theories and experiments, will the concept of family and marriage become less important or even obsolete or will these new ideas strengthen and give new dynamism to our present concept of family" — Rev. Brian Millette, O.S.B.

Rev. Millette, St. John's professor of sociology, is one member of a panel which includes the chairman of the St. John's sociology department, a psychiatrist and a St. John's junior sociology major.

MAY 16 — SOCIETY IN REVOLUTION

"Black Power is one of the best hopes for improving and uniting our country. It can be viewed as one of the least expensive revolutions to date." — James Olila.

Mr. Olila, a St. John's professor of anthropology, sits on a panel comprised of a professor of modern languages, a senior history major and a junior philosophy major — all of St. John's. Rev. Michael Blecker, O.S.B., chairman of St. John's Department of Theology, will moderate all of the panels. Questions will be invited from each session.

PROTESTS FOLLOW ARRESTS OF THREE BLACKS IN MORRILL HALL TAKEOVER

THREE University of Minnesota black students were arrested, and arraigned March 5 in Hennepin County District Court on charges resulting from their participation in the January 14-15 takeover of Morrill Hall. Their arrests followed a true bill of indictment handed down March 3 by the Hennepin County Grand Jury.

The three—all members of the Afro-American Action Committee (AAAC)—are Rose Mary Freeman, AAAC president and a General College sophomore; Horace Huntley, College of Liberal Arts sophomore; and Warren Tucker, Jr., General College sophomore. They were released on personal recognizance (no bail) following their arraignments.

The charges against them are:

Aggravated criminal damage to property—that is, that they produced more than $100 worth of damage to University property by “mutilating, defacing, breaking, destroying, tearing, smashing, littering, scattering, piling and barricading” equipment, supplies and the building itself;

Riot—that is, that they destroyed property and took possession of part of Morrill Hall while excluding people from the building by “threats of unlawful force, acts, unlawful force and unauthorized commands . . .”;

Two counts of unlawful assembly—that is, that they took possession of part of Morrill Hall and prevented others from entering the building in a way that disturbed the peace.

The first charge is a felony carrying the maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine; the second is a gross misdemeanor with maximum penalties of one year imprisonment and a $1,000 fine; the third is a misdemeanor with penalties up to 90 days in jail and a $100 fine.

The arrests and arraignments came just one week before the University commission investigating the Morrill Hall incident released its report. An article on this report, which was issued in “censored” form, excluding certain appendices which University President Malcolm Moos said contained “confidential information the release of which could be prejudicial to the rights of individuals and to the established procedures of the University,” will be carried in the 1969 May issue.

The foreman of the Hennepin County Grand Jury received an “uncensored” copy of the commission’s report on March 12. A second such copy is in the hands of President Moos. Moos will not recommend any disciplinary action against the students involved in the takeover because of the three recent indictments.

Grand Jury Acts Despite Pending Release of University Report

The Grand Jury returned its three-page indictment against “Horace Huntley, Rose Mary Freeman, Warren Tucker, Jr., Richard Roe and Jane Doe, and other persons whose identities are to the Grand Jury unknown” in its final meeting of a six-month appointment.

It is reported that the Grand Jury acted as it did, despite the pending release of the University report, because its functions differ from that of the University. The University’s efforts are “separate and distinct from the Grand Jury investigation,” Hennepin County Attorney George Scott said.

The University’s investigation was intended to find evidence of violation of University rules, while the Grand Jury’s was to find evidence of violation of law. The University has no power to prosecute.

The information contained in the University report would not necessarily be used for criminal action unless there was evidence to support such a charge, according to County Attorney Scott.

Also, the Grand Jury reportedly grew tired of waiting for the University report; the time of its appointment was running out.

"We'd been promised this commission report on two different occasions," Grand Jury foreman Olean O. Robbins said. "It wasn't forthcoming."

"They waited and waited," County Attorney Scott said. "And they got no report, although it was finished a long time ago."

The Jury itself initiated an investigation of the Morrill Hall takeover. They met on four days over a month's time to hear nine witnesses and to view other evidence. Among these witnesses were Paul Cashman, University vice president for student affairs; Elmer Learn, executive assistant to the President; Donald K. Smith, vice president for administration; Andrew R. Vernes, assistant director of the University police department; and University patrolmen Donald R. Bonham and James Anderson.

Other witnesses were Philip Upton, a student who injured his back while trying to gain entry to the administration building during the occupation; Garfield Anderson, a department manager for Northwestern Bell Telephone Company; and Charles Smith, a social work aide for the Minneapolis YMCA who acted as an intermediary during the incident.

The indictments were not publicly disclosed until the arrests. The inclusion of "Richard Roe" and "Jane Doe" in them indicates, according to Scott, "that there were others there." For new arrests to be made, however, the indictment would have to be amended to include specific names.

"But I doubt that other names will be added," Scott reportedly said.

Attorneys for the three blacks are Kenneth Tilsen, St. Paul, and Joyce A. Hughes, Minneapolis. The three did not enter a plea at their arraignments. Their attorneys requested and were granted a continuance until April 3.

Students March in Protest Of Blacks' Indictment

On the day of the arraignments about 200 students made a spontaneous march from the University to City Hall, protesting the Grand Jury indictment. The march was reported to be organized by members of Associate Professor Allen Spear's History 94D class (History of Race in America).

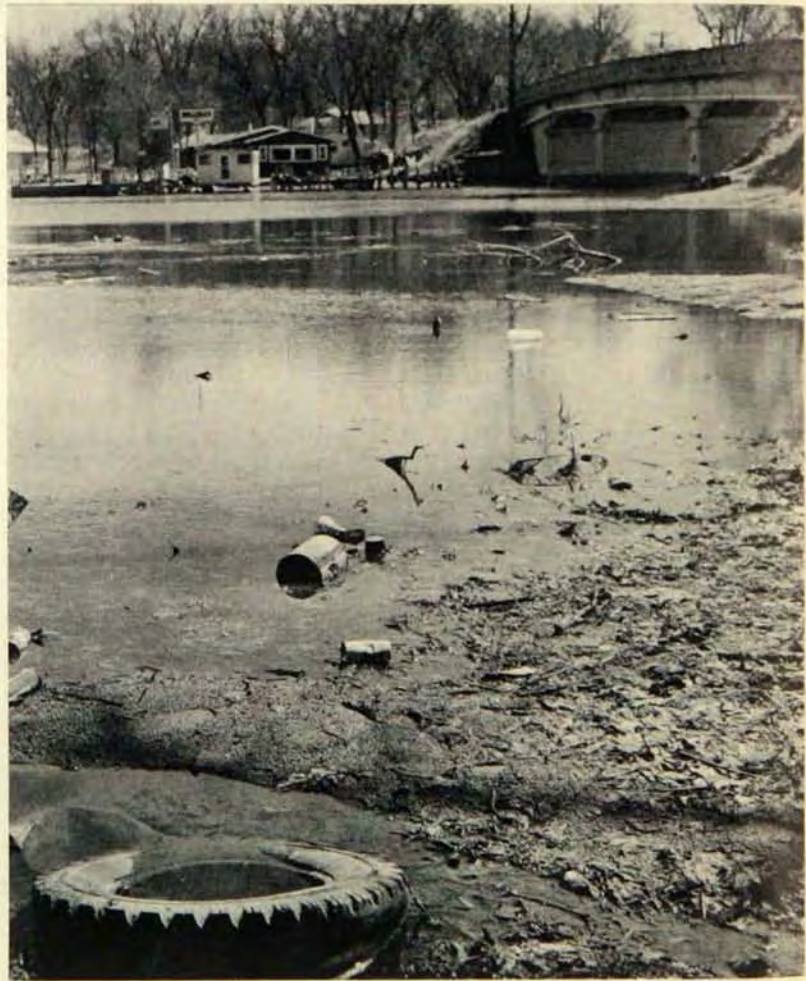

The class decided to march after reading a statement issued by the Minnesota Student Association (MSA) which informed students of the indictment of the three AAAC members and urged them "to make an active decision on this situation." Spear reportedly said that his classes' decision was "not intended to be a protest against the University," but rather a "show of solidarity" and a protest against the Grand Jury.

The marchers appeared disorganized, were silent and observed most traffic lights as they walked down one of the Third Street South traffic lanes to City Hall. When they reached their destination, they decided to hear Rose Mary Freeman's arraignment, and accordingly moved to the fourth floor of City Hall where the proceedings were to take place.

Only 20 to 25 of the marchers were admitted to the courtroom because of space limitations. Yet the entire group remained orderly. After a brief question-and-answer session with County Attorney Scott, during which time the students presented their protest statement, and following the Freeman indictment, the marchers dispersed without incident.

At 4 pm. that evening about 200 students gathered at an MSA meeting in Coffman Union where they outlined plans to picket in protest of the arrests the next day, Thursday, March 6. A resolution was drafted at this same meeting condemning the Grand Jury action as "arbitrary and ill-informed" and stating that the timing of the indictment indicated "the essentially political nature of the endeavor."

Minnesota Lakes: Eyesores

BLUE "eyes" on the land—10,000 lakes reflecting azure skies—is Minnesota to thousands of residents, visitors and tourists who flock to its lake shore and recreation areas annually.

In Minnesota 1969 the "eyes" are clouding over. When they will close completely, no one knows. However, as pollution, sewage disposal and water misuses take their toll, concerned Minnesota citizens feel that "blindness" is only a few years away.

Minnesotans, however, now have a unique opportunity to alleviate water misuse through support of a proposed Freshwater Biological Institute on Lake Minnetonka. The Institute, engaged in all types of freshwater biological studies, will deal with biological functions and problems relating to freshwater while studying the ecology of all forms of aquatic plant and animal life—ecology is the science that deals with the relationships of organisms to their environment. Although there are several institutes in the world designed to study freshwater problems, there has not been one central body in the United States where basic freshwater research could be coordinated in the manner planned for Minnesota's laboratory.

In conjunction with the University of Minnesota, the Institute will have a two-fold purpose: to attack a whole new area of basic research and to train personnel capable of applying this new knowledge nationwide in the solution of fresh water problems. Only recently has there been enough public clamor for solutions to freshwater problems. Research has been done on an individual level publicizing the need for solutions to our freshwater pollution—now a need that a comprehensive Institute can and must fulfill.

The idea-man behind the Minnesota Institute is Richard Gray, Sr. '40GE, president, Zero-Max Industries, Inc. An amateur biologist who can be described as an "outdoor guy," Gray is interested and concerned for the Minnetonka area—its water, problems, pollution and sanitation conditions.

Gray is also a first-class gardener—he has a two-story green house attached to his home where he grows everything from orchids to cactus. As a bird watcher, fisherman and biologist, Gray takes advantage of his home location—at the water's edge of Lake Minnetonka.

Writing as a columnist for the Twin Cities Sun newspapers, Gray verbalizes his love and concern for Lake Minnetonka to his readers. He takes lake water samples from the lake and analyzes them in a basement laboratory. He imparts information on water level, degree of water clarity and temperature, in addition to news of ice and snow depth, kinds of algae in the lake, weather, and bird and wild flower observations in his articles.

After mulling over an idea for such an Institute for several years, Gray seriously formulated plans last July. Two other crusaders, Hibbert Hill '23CE, retired Northern States Power Company vice president for engineering, and Carroll Crawford '51BAJourn, president and publisher of Sun newspapers, joined forces with Gray—and the Freshwater Biological Research Foundation, a fund-raising organization was underway.

As editor of the Sun newspapers, Crawford feels Minnesota's freshwater problems are a major issue needing immediate attention.

"The newspaper can make the public aware of the situation," Crawford stated. "Minnetonka is deteriorating rapidly," he added, "but the issue is more than a clean-up Minnetonka campaign. Minnesota has more lakes than most areas—so we have a big stake in them and their problem; the Institute has long-range and nationwide implications . . . our freshwater solutions can be adopted everywhere.

Hill, a life-time resident of Minnesota, agreed. A swimming enthusiast—in fact, a member of the University of Minnesota's 1922 conference championship swimming team—Hill started skin diving 15 years ago. What he saw below water interested him. He took pictures, wondered what his underwater photographs were all about and became a "part-time biologist."

Lake Minnetonka (TOP PHOTO), a catch-all for sewage disposal, has severe freshwater pollution problems. Gray's Bay (CENTER), a heavily populated area, has a rapidly deteriorating shore line. Accumulation of algae on the water surface (BOTTOM) is another problem the Freshwater Biological Institute hopes to tackle.

CBS Radio showman Arthur Godfrey, an active anti-pollution campaigner, visited Minneapolis during the Freshwater Biological Institute Foundation's kick-off festivities. Dr. Alan Brook, University of Minnesota, (left) presented him with an algae lapel pin as Richard Gray, Sr. (center) looked on.

Studying plant and animal life in fresh water, a weekend hobby until his retirement in 1965, is now a full-time job: a research fellow from the University assists Hill while he works with Dr. Brook, head of the ecology and behavioral biologies, in the ecology department and maintains a home laboratory.

"I became convinced that I was merely scratching the surface," Hill said, "and, more than ever, realized the need for an Institute. The problems here require sophisticated material and experts in the field. Freshwater biology has been neglected in the United States."

Coordinating this citizen's campaign with the University of Minnesota is Dr. Richard Caldecott, dean of Biological Sciences.

"Minnesota lakes are not as polluted as some other areas of the country," Dr. Caldecott stated, "but the problems are important enough to warrant immediate attention. The idea of the Institute is to provide an opportunity to train researchers and develop a large number of freshwater specialists who will become resource material for the state . . . teachers, scientists and laymen who will keep directly engaged in all parts of water research."

University of Minnesota staff are enthusiastic about the project. On December 13, 1968, the University Board of Regents approved the Freshwater Institute plan — its proper location, construction, land area, academic control and funding. When accepting the proposal, President Malcolm Moos stated,

"We share your belief that such a training and research facility can become an asset of great importance not only to our state but to the country. This is surely a time for marshalling understanding of causes of pollution and deterioration in our most valuable freshwater resources."

The Institute building will hold six major laboratories for Universities professors and graduate students and six smaller laboratories set aside for visiting professors and specialized teams. Students, exposed to the finest and most sophisticated apparatus available in their fields through the Institute, will collaborate with area specialists in aquatic studies.

Hoping to have the facilities built and operating by 1971, Gray began his $4 million money-raising drive with kick-off festivities and plans to follow up with literature, speeches, dinners and get-togethers with Minnesota citizens. He and other Foundation members hope to generate interest and involve many citizens in their project.

Why will the Institute be located on Lake Minnetonka? Experts say Lake Minnetonka is ideal because it lies in the center of the state's greatest population where pollution problems are severe. A large lake, Minnetonka has over 100 miles of shoreline, large and small bays, 15 islands and expansive open areas. Convenient to the University of Minnesota, the lake can be observed minute by minute on a year-round basis, and conditions for all forms of freshwater research exist at Lake Minnetonka.

Freshwater research is a complex study of plants and animals interacting in their natural environment. Biological chemistry, microbiology, and the various divisions of the physical, chemical and biological study of freshwater — physical limnology, hydrology, algophysiology, phycology and aquatic ecology — are all areas that will be integrated into the Institute's program.

Several years must be spent gathering data before pollution problems can be curbed and our freshwater areas revitalized. As these goals are reached, the Institute will take on nationwide dimensions: branches will reach into freshwater studies — trained scientists will reinforce new research in public and private fields; the Institute will publish detailed annual reports and share their knowledge with visiting professors and interested participants at science conferences and meetings.

According to Richard Gray, the Freshwater Biological Institute is a worthwhile project for Minnetonka residents, Minnesota natives and all concerned citizens dependent on the nation's freshwater supply.

"This is a chance for the layman world — my world — to become involved with the University of Minnesota in a project essential to the future of the state and with far-reaching application to the entire nation. I am proud," he continued "that the University of Minnesota has taken the lead and initiative in attempting to solve man's biological problems."

Regent raises space-age steaks

A solar-activated barn that borrows tomorrow's sunshine by storing ice tonight is just one more way to beat Minnesota's winter weather, according to University of Minnesota Regent George W. Rauenhorst.

Rauenhorst, who maintains over 1,000 beef cattle on a 1,000-acre farm near Olivia, Minnesota, gives his cattle "space-age" care. Housed in a barn built to capture the sun's rays, the animals give off moisture which freezes onto a special heat exchange surface in the building when the air on the other side of this same surface is extremely cold.

"The next day, when the sun comes out, the rays coming through the glass heat the incoming air enough to dissipate the ice, formed the night before," Rauenhorst said. "About a thousand BTU's from cooling and condensation, plus about 144 BTU's from freezing each pound of water, are collected and used to heat the building."

Rauenhorst's new project, an experimental "first," is a uniquely built barn with a thermal heat exchanger—24 feet high and 160 feet long—running along the south wall of the building. The barn thus uses a heat exchange-heat transfer system which is solar activated and has a jet pressured air distribution system. The sun's rays, entering through outside glass panes, are collected on black insulation material. Over a million cubic feet of air circulates through the building each hour in cold weather and up to 6 million in the summer.

Hot foul air from the cattle is driven to the heat exchange wall with high velocity fans. Here, the heat from this air is transferred to an aluminum sheet which in turn transfers the heat to the incoming fresh air. As a result, warm fresh air continually enters the barn replacing the cold foul air. Winter heating costs are reduced by as much as 80 percent.

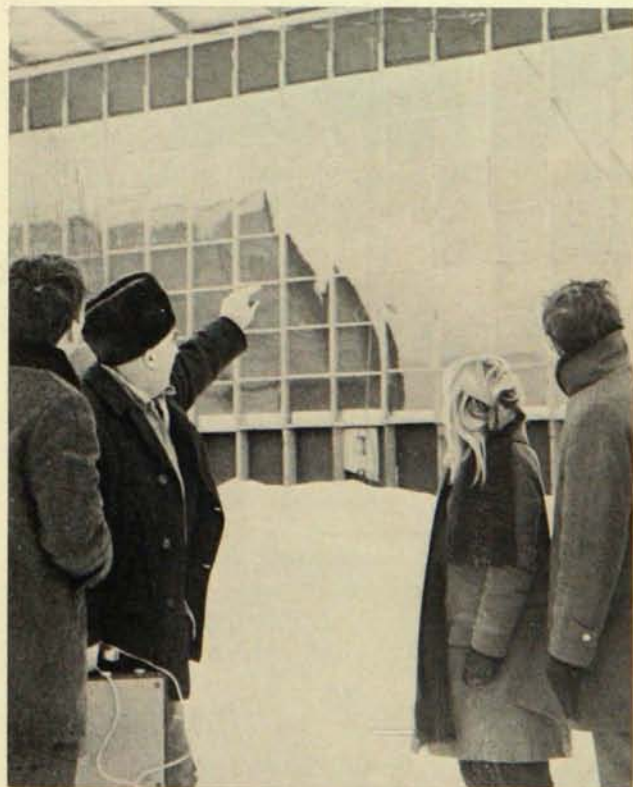

Air circulation, another important feature, dries the barn floor, eliminating the need for frequent manure removal or the addition of straw bedding. In the summer the same air flow system keeps the cattle cool and comfortable by evaporative cooling.

Rauenhorst's cattle never go outside. In not having to face extreme temperature change nor unnecessary exercise, they fatten more readily, become more tender and are ready for market sooner than regular ranch-style stock.

According to Rauenhorst, the cattle benefit, too. Not contending with outdoor elements, they are less susceptible to pneumonia, a common fatal disease among young calves.

"My cattle adjusted immediately," he stated. "Two hours after they entered the barn, they looked as if they had lived there forever. They couldn't be more content."

This experimental solar barn, conceived by Rauenhorst and two of his sons, captured the imagination of the University of Minnesota faculty who, pooling their resources last spring, gave Rauenhorst many of the technical answers he needed. Today, this "steak factory” holds 300 cattle. Eventually, Rauenhorst hopes to increase this number to 600.

“My philosophy is that all civilizations rise and fall with our most basic arts — one of which is agriculture,” Rauenhorst told the Alumni News. “America is a center of agriculture — but as advanced as we are, there are many problems to be dealt with. I’ve wrestled with a few of them here on my farm.”

According to Rauenhorst, the heart of the farm problem is centered around ecology, that is, the branch of biology dealing with the relation of living things to their environment and to each other.

“We started anti-pollution techniques over 20 years ago on the farm,” Rauenhorst stated, “with emphasis on using all waste products to our advantage. The animals are kept under shelter with concrete floors and their waste products are used for fertilizer. All farm products can be used and reused.”

Rauenhorst believes that the rural areas should gear their farms to possible long term repercussions which might occur.

“We try to stay away from polluting the land, air and water. It is more economical and less contaminating to the animals,” he stated.

The solarized barn operates on this principle . . . the foul air is mixed with large volumes of fresh air before being released into the environment again — helping to maintain a natural balance.

Rauenhorst, dressed casually and wearing a Texan wide-brimmed hat, talked about his interest in farming and the exciting innovations coming out of rural America today.

“The vitality of America is in the rural areas,” he said. “These are the areas that are being continually drained of resources. We need new projects to revitalize the farm community.”

Rauenhorst, born and raised in rural Minnesota, is a subject of conversation and controversy at home.

“A lot of people have dropped by to see my barn,” Rauenhorst stated with a relaxed grin, “and I’ve seen mixed reactions to my adventure. Some of my neighbors came out of curiosity and to offer discouragement or support. University officials visit when they get the chance.”

According to Rauenhorst, the solar barn is inexpensive to maintain once the initial investment is made.

TWO HUGE fans in the building will help to make a complete exchange of air every six minutes in the winter months.

“It’s like any business. I invested $60,000 to get started, but, once the barn is operating, I start getting a return on my money.”

The solarized barn is equally applicable to other farm animals. Chicken and hogs, even more susceptible to harsh temperature changes, adapt easily and benefit from an improved environment.

Rauenhorst, actively involved in University affairs, commutes often to Minneapolis for conferences and informal talks with students and faculty members. A Minnesota supporter, Rauenhorst has participated in University courses and is now taking a special reading class.

“There is an exciting and stimulating group of individuals here,” Rauenhorst said, “and I enjoy being a part of it. The young people today are the ones who will lead America in the future. We have a great center of learning at Minnesota.”

Collaborating with Rauenhorst is Professor Clarence

THE HENRY L. WILLIAMS MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP FUND

The Williams Scholarship Fund, named in honor of former Minnesota Football Coach, Henry L. Williams, was established in 1949 for the purpose of aiding qualified young men to attend the University and participate in athletics. Student athletes are awarded Williams Scholarships through their proven ability in the classroom and on the field of competition. By excelling in their academic work — they must maintain a 2.8 average — and by having varsity potential in their chosen sport any student athlete may become eligible for a Williams Scholarship.

This was the greatest year in the history of the Williams Scholarship fund with $70,449.00 being raised due to the fine leadership of Athletic Director, Marshall Ryman. The Department of Intercollegiate Athletics, feel this to be an integral and important part of their over all program, an opportunity for the outstanding student-athletes to receive financial aid who may not otherwise receive a tender.

The annual contributions received since the inception of the Fund in 1949 are:

THE SCHOOL OF DENTISTRY CENTURY CLUB

This important new program started a year ago by the School of Dentistry this year raised $28,967 from 276 dental school graduates and friends.

The Century Club is a special kind of service fund intended to provide the financial resources necessary to ensure that the University of Minnesota's School of Dentistry will maintain leadership in the nation. Its members are the alumni and friends of the School who recognize that this objective can be attained only with substantial and continuing support, and who give at least $100 a year to the Program.

The Century Club Fund is administered by the Dean of the School of Dentistry within the guidelines of the University. After counseling with faculty members, funds will be allocated to worthy projects. The money will be used for activities not supported by the University or granting agencies.

Through the Century Club, graduates of the School of Dentistry will be better qualified to render comprehensive service to their patients by progressively better educational programs.

THE COLLEGE OF PHARMACY

CENTURY MORTAR CLUB

Established in 1968 the College of Pharmacy Century Mortar Club is composed of Pharmacists and friends of Pharmacy who have a genuine concern for the future of pharmacy education. They recognize that state and federal funds are not adequate to provide the resources for education of students in pharmacy. They have set as their goal the support of the College of Pharmacy through continuing substantial contributions so that the College may attain and maintain a position of leadership in the nation.

The Century Mortar Club is a special kind of program which asks each member to contribute a minimum of $100 annually to the College. The Fund is administered by the Dean of the College of Pharmacy. After appropriate counseling with faculty members and observing University guidelines, funds will be allocated for worthy projects. The funds will be allocated for activities not supported by the University or granting agencies. The Fund will be audited by the business office of the University. A report of the activities, accomplishments and expenditures will be made annually to the Century Mortar Club membership.

The goal of the College of Pharmacy has been to improve its programs, Faculty, and facilities so that the College might move into a position of eminence among colleges of pharmacy in this country. The results of such an accomplishment would be apparent in the quality of the graduates from the College. It has become increasingly difficult for the College to accomplish this goal with the funds available.

In its first year the Club had 48 gifts for a total of $7,050. 1969 is the target year for the real funding of the Century Mortar Club.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY CLASS FUND PROJECT

The project started six years ago and encompasses the 15 years between the 35th and 50th year reunions. Each member of each class is asked to contribute a minimum of $10 a year for the 15 years or a total of $150. The class gift is then given to the University at the time of its Golden Anniversary Reunion. The gifts are given for unrestricted purposes and such money ordinarily goes to the Freshman Scholarship Program to help the needy and able students get to the University, or it can be designated for the Endowment Fund which will be allocated to areas of the most critical need at the time the money is turned over to the University during the Golden Anniversary Reunion. It can be in the form of bequests, securities or other forms of property in lieu of cash donations.

The roll call of classes, starting with the Class of 1913, is as follows:

Watch the Golden Anniversary Class Funds grow!

BEQUESTS

The increase in the Alumni Fund this year was primarily because of several large bequests, the Mary O. Walker Estate, $94,760 to the Alumni Endowment Fund which goes to support University Scholarships, and from the Clara Brown Army Estate, $32,978 to the Class of 1913 Golden Anniversary Fund for Scholarships and Loans in the field of Home Economics.

Bequests to the Alumni Fund are a most important way to support your University.

Congress has long recognized the benefits of philanthropy to education and has seen fit to encourage it by means of favorable tax regulations. State supported universities need this help as much as do those who derive little or no revenue from tax monies. To provide the margin of excellence at Minnesota, private gifts are essential.

While tax advantages accrue to those public spirited individuals who make charitable gifts to education, Minnesota sincerely hopes that donors are primarily motivated by concern for the welfare of the University.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR PLACING YOUR GIFT TO MEET CURRENT AND FUTURE NEEDS

The Alumni Endowment Fund: A Perpetual Memorial

The annual income from this Fund is used to support the most pressing current need of the University as determined by the President's Project Advisory Committee.

The Alumni Freshman Scholarship Fund:

To assist worthy but needy entering freshman students who would otherwise be unable to attend the University.

Named Scholarships:

Where the size of the gift is large enough to provide sufficient endowed income to enable several awards to be made on an annual basis the donor may choose the name of the scholarship to memorialize any person of his or her choice. These awards may be either for needy students or a merit award without reference to need.

The Alumni Merit Scholarship:

To award scholarships to those entering students of exceptional talent without reference to need, the top 3 percent. This is renewable provided academic excellence is maintained.

The Alumni Capital Gift Fund:

To aid in the construction and furnishing of the new University of Minnesota Alumni Center which is to be built in the near future. Or, for the capital building funds as deemed necessary by the Alumni Fund Advisory Committee after consultation with the President of the University.

A booklet, Gifts to Minnesota, will be sent on request.

The University of Minnesota Foundation and its Governor John Sargent Pillsbury Fellowship

Playing a vital role in assisting the University in many ways is the University of Minnesota Foundation and its Governor John Sargent Pillsbury Fellowship.

Membership in the Fellowship is composed of alumni and friends of the University who give at least $1,000 annually to the Foundation for 10 years, or who make a deferred gift through a bequest, life insurance agreement, life income contract or annuity. Many members have far exceeded these minimum requirements.

The University of Minnesota Foundation was born of alumni vision for and dedication to the University. It is independent of the University, organized on a non-profit basis, with tax deductibility for contributions. Its sole beneficiary is the University of Minnesota. Its direction and resources are under the management of a Board of Trustees of concerned, dedicated citizens, largely alumni by design, but with constitutional provisions for participation of non-alumni friends of the University. The Foundation's basic purpose is to provide funds to meet certain of these needs of the University for which tax funds are not available. These things are generally concerned with projects or people — or both — essential to the University's continued quest to be of greater service and forever increasing excellence in education.

The membership in the Fellowship is increasing steadily and as of February 1, 1967 consisted of the following:

tinguished law faculty at Minnesota."

Carl A. Auerbach is an expert on constitutional and administrative law. During WWII he was chief counsel in the federal Office of Price Administration. He joined the University faculty in 1961, after serving on the University of Wisconsin faculty from 1947-61. A native of New York City, he graduated magna cum laude from Long Island University and cum laude from Harvard Law School. He began his career as an attorney in Washington, D.C.

In 1965 Auerbach served as visiting professor in the Columbia University Law School. From 1967 to January 1969 he was a member of the federal commission on Marine Science Engineering and Resources. He is currently a member of the American Law Institute, the National Research Council and the National Highway Safety Advisory Committee.

Allan H. McCoid, an authority on torts and on law and medicine, came to the University in 1956 as a visiting associate professor of law. In 1957 he was appointed to the faculty. Originally from Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, McCoid graduated with distinction from Northwestern University and received his law degree magna cum laude from Harvard Law School. From 1953 to 1956 he taught at the University of California, Los Angeles.

McCoid was recently elected to the American Law Institute. From 1963-65 he was a member of the Joint Committee on Cooperation Between the Association of American Medical Colleges and the Association of American Law Schools. University Law School professors Carl A. Auerbach and Allan H. McCoid will receive Professorial Awards, beginning this year, from the Law School Alumni Association's Minnesota Law School Fund. Each will continue to have annual salary supplements of $3,000 each year as long as the funds are available and he remains a member of the Law School faculty, unless he is named a Regents' Professor or is appointed to a named professorial chair.

"The awards are given in recognition of significant contributions to legal research and training," Dean William B. Lockhart said. "This is part of the Law Alumni's effort to attract and retain dis-

Veterinary Medicine Holds "Recognition" Dinner

The Veterinary Medical Alumni Association will honor two men at a "Recognition Dinner" on Saturday, May 3, who have been dedicated professionally and personally to the development of the livestock industry, the veterinary medical profession and the College of Veterinary Medicine at the University — Dr. Willard Boyd and Dr. H. C. H. Kernkamp.

After joining the University faculty in 1911, Dr. Boyd headed the Division of Veterinary Science in 1940 and was named director of the new school of Veterinary Medicine upon its establishment in 1947. A member of the Minnesota Livestock Sanitary Board, he has served as president of the Minnesota and American Veterinary Medical Associations. Boyd did research and extension work in animal health, but his primary concern was with the problems of reproduction and infertility in dairy cattle. In recognition of his contributions to the dairy cattle industry, he received the Borden Award in 1945.

Dr. Kernkamp (Kerny) came to the University of Minnesota in 1914 to continue nationally recognized work in the identification and control of diseases of swine. He served as president of the Conference of Research Workers in Animal Diseases, secretary and president of the Minnesota Veterinary Medical Association, a member of the Executive Board of the American Veterinary Medical Association and as acting director of the School of Veterinary Medicine. Kerny was also known nationally for humorous caricatures which he produced under the pseudonym, "Chester White."

College of Education Alumni Honor Their Outstanding Educators

ARNO J. JEWETT

SISTER MARY EDWARD DOLAN

At the 14th Annual Meeting of the College of Education Alumni Association on April 22 two outstanding educators will receive the University's Outstanding Achievement Award: Arno J. Jewett '32BS '37MA '39PhD and Sister Mary Edward Dolan, PSVM '63PhD.

Dr. Jewett, as a teacher of high school and college English and of English methods, a stimulator of research, a builder of curricula and a leader in the United States Office of Education, is an active contributor to the improvement of English teaching in the United States. A consultant in the U.S. Office of Education, he plans and directs research throughout the nation, sets up institutes and conferences for leaders in English teaching, and promotes an exchange of ideas and materials from one section of the country to another.

Dr. Jewett not only cooperates with the state departments of education and is an innovator in the state and national programs at home, but also in Western Europe and Israel. And he has been known as a leader who serves the gifted and underprivileged with equal zeal. A literary editor and writer of distinction, Dr. Jewett is the author of widely-used textbooks in literature and composition for junior and senior high schools, and is the editor of a series of literary works of international repute.

Sister Mary Edward Dolan combines competence and dedication as a teacher, principal, supervisor, college faculty member and director of government-sponsored programs in reading. She has fused knowledge, skill and enthusiasm into professional work of a high order: she is currently a faculty member and associate dean at Clarke College, Dubuque, Iowa. In the past and among many of a multitude of activities, she has served as chairman of the Elementary Principals Workshop for Presentation Principals in central and Western Iowa, and Eastern Iowa, Illinois and Minnesota, and as a consultant for evaluating Proposals for NDEA Institutes in Reading for the U.S. Office of Education.

In her college teaching she has shown outstanding leadership in designing and carrying out programs for the improvement of reading instruction. A recipient of a "Best Teacher of the Year" award, Sister Dolan was invited in 1967 to serve on the Teacher Education Committee of the International Reading Association.

Also at this dinner meeting two alumni will receive an Education Alumni Member of the Year award from their constituent group. So honored will be Fulton Klinkerfeus '66MA and Eleanor M. Herron '58MA.

Currently assistant principal at John Glenn Junior High School, North St. Paul, Klinkerfeus is active in the state's and nation's professional teachers organizations. He serves the National Educational Association, the Minnesota Educational Association, the Capitol Division of MEA and the North St. Paul-Maplewood Education Association in responsible capacities.

A Special Learning Disabilities teacher in the Division of Special Education of the St. Paul schools, Miss Herron has been an active "citizen-diplomat" as a member of the International Center at the University since returning from a three-year leave of absence to teach at the American Dependent's School on Clark Air Base, Pampanga Province, Philippines. While abroad she was instrumental in initiating a "People-to-People" project whose philosophy she has maintained in her work in the Twin Cities.

A social hour will precede the 7:00 pm. dinner meeting. Prior to the formal program, the 52-member Marshall High School Choir will entertain the group. To make reservations, contact the College of Education Alumni Association, 205 Coffman Union, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455, telephone 373-2466.

MAA MINORITY REPORT

The six members of the Alumni board who did not vote for the resolution regarding the Morrill Hall demonstration passed by the University of Minnesota Alumni Board on January 21, 1969, submitted the following statement:

The resolution did not take note of the fact that a Commission already was appointed to immediately investigate the disturbance and sort out facts from rumors, blame from innocence;

The resolution did not give full credit to the wisdom and restraint with which the University Administration acted during the incident. We believe that the Administration's self control successfully prevented the kind of bloody confrontation seen today on major campuses throughout the world.

Blue Ribbon Panel Endorses Needs of University Health Sciences

A special report prepared by a blue-ribbon panel of experts at the joint request of the University of Minnesota Board of Regents and the Trustees of the Mayo Foundation strongly endorsed the feasibility of an undergraduate medical school at the world-famous Mayo Clinic as a "state-aided private medical school affiliated with the University of Minnesota."

The commission, chaired by former Carleton President Laurence M. Gould, prepared its recommendation regarding the Rochester School with a forceful endorsement of the University's Twin Cities campus Health Sciences Development Program. The report says:

"The Commission . . . makes the strongest possible recommendation that the primacy of the needs of medical education at the University of Minnesota be recognized and given first priority in meeting the needs for medical education throughout the whole State of Minnesota and, indeed, in the Upper Midwest. No second medical school anywhere in Minnesota would substitute for the University expansion program in medical education. This, the Commission strongly believes, must go forward first."

University President Malcolm Moos, in discussion with the University's Board of Regents at a recent meeting, said that this report, along with the James committee report made public last week, is consistent with and reinforces the position taken by the Regents in an April 1968 policy statement.

The James committee report was prepared by a panel of experts appointed by a special Minnesota Senate Subcommittee in Medical Education.

Moos said that the Legislature has before it a request for special planning funds that would finance a study to determine the faculty, building and operating funds needed at Rochester.

"Our planning request also envisions study of all other possibilities identified in the policy statement you approved last spring," he told the Regents.

In addition to the Rochester planning, other possibilities include a second medical school in Duluth, expansion in medical education programs at St. Paul-Ramsey Hospital possibly leading to an autonomous school at that location, and expanded programs at Hennepin County General Hospital.

Members of the blue-ribbon commission were Detlev Bronk, president of The Rockefeller University; Milton Eisenhower, president emeritus of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center; Charles E. Odegaard, president of the University of Washington; Don K. Price, Jr., dean of the Kennedy School of Public Administration at Harvard University; and former Carleton President Laurence M. Gould.

Nearly 900 Students Graduate From U

Nearly 900 students graduated from the University of Minnesota on the Twin Cities campus March 15. Seventy-five doctoral candidates and 213 master's degree candidates were among those who received degrees and certificates from University Vice President Stanley J. Wenberg.

Speaker for the winter quarter commencement was Harris Wofford, president of State University College, Old Westbury, New York.

Wofford, who worked with John F. Kennedy throughout his presidential campaign, was chairman of the sub-cabinet group on civil rights, coordinating all efforts of all federal agencies. While on the White House staff, he worked closely with Sargent Shriver in organizing the Peace Corps and took part in the first negotiating trip for Peace Corps Projects in Africa and Asia.

In 1966 Wofford was appointed president of State University College, scheduled to be the experimental college of the New York State University system. This "school of the world" started as a pilot program for 100 students in 1968. One of its first innovations has been to employ students from the beginning as key members of the planning staff.

National Authority Named to New U Department

Raymond T. Galvin, nationally recognized authority on police-community relations, has been named an associate professor in the University's Department of Law Enforcement Science and Criminal Justice. His appointment is effective next September 16.

At 35, Galvin is currently a visiting professor in the School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York, Albany. He was a member of the faculty of the School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York, Albany; School of Police Administration and Public Safety, Michigan State University, from 1962 to 1968.

"Raymond Galvin is one of the most capable people I have met in the field of police administration," Minneapolis Police Chief Donald Dwyer said. Dwyer studied under Galvin at Michigan last year.

"His great ability to identify with practical problems and his association with various police agencies enable him to give real insight into police problems as they arise. I believe he will be a most valuable addition to the faculty."

Galvin will teach courses in political settings of American police administration, police organization and management, police and community relations, and comparative law enforcement administration.

A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, he received his MA in police science and administration from Washington State College in 1956; he is a candidate for a doctorate in public administration from the University of Southern California.

Galvin was project director for the national survey of police-community relations conducted for President Johnson's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice between 1965 and 1967. He has supervised and directed police management programs in the Midwestern states and has served as a consultant in police administration in some 20 communities throughout the United States.

The Department of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice was approved last June by the Board of Regents. An interdisciplinary program, it is designed to provide high-quality liberal arts education, with an associate in arts or bachelor of arts degree, for law enforcement officers and students who plan careers in the field. There are currently 50 law enforcement officers enrolled in the program anticipated to hold 150 by next fall.

Morris Building New Facility

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new physical education facility at the University of Minnesota, Morris, were held March 30. State Representative Delbert L. Anderson '33-'40 spoke during the ceremonies.

The new facility, part of a long-range physical education development program, will provide a main gymnasium with three regulation basketball courts and an ultimate seating capacity of approximately 4,000; a multi-purpose gymnasium; exercise therapy room; wrestling gymnasium; two handball courts; and lockers rooms; offices and a conference room.

This building is the initial step in development of physical education space for basketball, wrestling and handball, with outside facilities for football, track, tennis and baseball, as well as physical education teaching stations.

University President Malcolm Moos also issued a statement that day, which, while explaining the University administration's contributions to the Grand Jury deliberations, neither approved nor disapproved the indictments. However, it was reported that the tone of the statement sought to assure students that the University had not initiated nor had had any part in handing down the indictment.

About a dozen persons picketed in front of Morrill Hall on Thursday morning.

A Second Protest March On The Hennepin County Courthouse

At noon on the same day approximately 500-600 students and some people from the community joined a rally in front of Coffman Union. Later, many of those at the rally marched the mile and one-half through the campus and down Third Avenue South to the Courthouse, occasionally chanting "Drop the charges, drop them now," or "An injury to one is an injury to all."

Once at City Hall, the marchers moved up the stairway in a long line to County Attorney Scott's office; they were met by City Council President Dan Cohen who was acting as mayor in Arthur Naftalin's absence. MSA President Kroll told Cohen that the group planned a "peaceful sit-in" using "non-violent tactics."

County Attorney Scott was out to lunch. The protestors had intended to present him with petitions carrying the signatures of some 700 students who asked to be indicted too "because we all of us are equally responsible for the same crimes against Rose Mary Freeman, Horace Huntley and Warren Tucker. . . ." When it was apparent that Scott would not return, the group presented the petitions to Alderman Gerard Hegstrom instead.

Representatives of all the protesting groups met Thursday night to map a campaign to maintain the student support that had grown since the indictments were returned against the three blacks.

Student leaders decided to start a 24-hour-a-day sit-in outside Attorney Scott's Courthouse office beginning at noon on Friday, March 7. The sit-in was backed primarily by black students and members of the black community, it was reported.

This sit-in ended two and one-half hours after it had started: about 30 persons, mostly students, sat peacefully in the hallway of the fourth floor of the Courthouse, reading, chatting or studying. By 2:30 pm., when their number had grown to about 75, they voted to leave the building and return to the campus.

During the University's final examination week, which began March 8, and the vacation week which followed, additional protest was more or less suspended except for some minor rallies on the campus.

However, the coalition of disparate groups—among them the MSA, Coffman Union Board of Governors, Young DFL, AAAC, SDS, several fraternities and sororities, and the city's Citizens Community Centers—are welded now by the cause of the three black students. The "Liberation Coalition" continues to work as a new student-community link.

Their goals are to keep their groups together and to launch an appeal for the support of the previously uncommitted student. A "Liberation Week", scheduled to begin on March 31, will run through April 4, with seminars, films, speeches and talks by national leaders in minority rights.

The week will climax with a massive—Matthew Eubanks, controversial militant director of the Citizens Community Centers, has projected a group numbering 10,000—march on City Hall April 3, the date for the hearings of the three indicted students.

Lund '33BME '34MSME who supervised two graduate students from India, Satya Garg and Pradhash Rastogi. Garg and Rastogi spent over 400 hours designing the solar heat exchange system and received credit towards their masters' degree for their work.

"The University furnished the technical data and details for the solar barn," Lund said, "and George Rauenhorst took this information and set up the building construction.

"Our two biggest projects," Lund stated, "were developing the solar heat exchanger and designing air openings for proper circulation. A barn must be dry," he explained, "but it can't be drafty."

Lund would like to see more projects of this type with University support.

"We have created an extremely efficient operation," he commented, "which is applicable to all areas of farming. Right now, by controlling the supply of air and maintaining the proper temperature, we are getting a more efficient weight per pound of heat. The cattle use less of their food for energy—a greater part is converted to weight—and the meat is far more tasty and tender."

Professor Lund's and Regent Rauenhorst's enthusiasm for a project that has produced agricultural quality at lower cost indicates that the University in partnership with Minnesota stands at the threshold of a new, creative era in farming.—Kristie Greve

Kodak offers another kind of professionalism

We have the highest respect for the engineer who sets himself up like a physician or a lawyer. He is scarce and probably represents a special situation.

The old tried-and-true brand of engineering is probably needed more today than ever, even if you don't see many ads for it these days. Let us display our courage, then, by admitting right on this page that we do—in power-handling, for example—welcome into our ranks* engineers who can be relied upon to pick the right equipment from the right vendor and give direction on how to put it together in the right way, then keep it running right.

Some engineers will find that exciting enough. Those so constituted may well prosper with us, particularly if their idea of professionalism does not bar a deepening involvement in the business thinking that supports all the technical thinking. A succession of clients attracted by a shingle on the lawn wouldn't be offering business problems of our scale.

Nor such technical problems either, together with resources for solving them. This would be important to the engineer whose idea of professionalism runs more to keeping current with the technology as it develops after he leaves the campus. When we set about designing systems of digital solid-state logic for on-line process control, when we work out ultrasonics for sealing plastics or splicing aerial film, when we adapt lasers to routine inspection of photographic materials and the control of dirt contamination—that kind of work isn't done by flipping through handbooks and vendors' catalogs. It calls for going into things a little more deeply than most vendors.

Electrical engineers in search of a realistic professionalism—no more or less than mechanical, chemical, or industrial engineers—are cordially invited to drop a note about themselves to

U Planning and Counseling Center Extends Hours

The University of Minnesota Planning and Counseling Center for Women has extended its hours into an experimental evening program. The Center, which serves students above the average 18-to-22 year-old age group, works in response to a need expressed by many people who need information and advice on problems connected with becoming a student. Evening child-care service is also being incorporated into the Center, located on the Minneapolis campus in Room 219 Temporary North of Mines.

The General Extension Division's continuing education for women program is offering spring and summer women's liberal arts seminars as a way of getting accustomed to the University before entering classes next fall.

The seminars, Culture and Society, Arts of Reading, Ideas in America, and New Worlds of Knowledge, are designed to fit a variety of educational needs and carry upper division credits. Held once a week, the seminars will introduce the subjects of working toward a degree, reviewing rusty knowledge, exploring new interests, catching up on new trends and examining basic beliefs in the light of new challenges.

University To Develop Indian Studies Program

An 18-man committee appointed by President Malcom Moos will plan the development of an American Indian Studies program at the University of Minnesota. The committee, composed of faculty, students and members of the Indian community, will prepare a review of present University programs and develop proposals for future programs in admission, curriculum needs and the community. Anthropology professor Frank Miller heads the committee.

POINTS of VIEW

ED HAISLET
Executive Director

Now that our Scandinavia-Russia Alumni Tour 1969 is all wrapped up and ready to go (Section I leaves on July 14 and Section II July 21), we are announcing a special Spring Tour 1970.

In deciding on a 1970 tour, these are the questions we considered:

Should it be a long or short tour? It was decided that a short tour allows many more alumni to avail themselves of the opportunity to participate—so a short tour was decided upon—8 days only at a price that is almost unbelievable.

When to go? In the spring when we are all tired of winter.

Where to go? Someplace warm, someplace sunny, someplace far away and different.

So Mallorca was selected because it is warm and sunny and far away. Mallorca is an island in the Mediterranean, 125 miles off the Spanish mainland, of which it is a province. It has a population of 350,000, a thousand miles of coastline, with beautiful beaches. It is centuries old, with remnants of many cultures and civilizations. There are sights to see and places to go, such as the second largest cathedral in Spain, palaces, castles and towered fortresses, the famous caves of Drach, along with Palma, the cosmopolitan capital of the Balearic Islands, noted for its shopping bargains and night life. Mallorca has everything—the sun, the sea, golfing, horesback riding and all year round sports, besides being famous for its leather and artificial pearl industries.

The dates—depart March 15; return March 22, 1970.

The price—$349 which includes: round trip jet from the Twin Cities, first class A hotel accommodations (2 per room), three meals per day, use of one rental car per room with unlimited mileage, a get together party on arrival, sight seeing tour of Palma and an evening visit to Palma and a night club tour.

Reservations are now open on a first come first served basis, tour limited to 144. All members of the Minnesota Alumni Association and their families are eligible to go.

A down payment of $50 is required with reservation, balance due January 1, 1970.

So if you and your family want to enjoy a spring break, to wonderful Mallorca, so warm, so sunny, so far away, so romantically Spanish, at a price that you can afford, you are invited to join the trip. Hurry because the word is out, and reservations are coming in each day.

Sincerely,

Ed Haislet

OUTSTANDING ACHIEVEMENT AWARDEES

WILLIAM O'SHIELDS '32BSEd '46MA, Cheyney, Pennsylvania, attended the University for three years, lettering in track during each of those years, before leaving school to earn enough money in order to continue his education. He returned to Minnesota in 1930 to complete his bachelor's work with a major in physical education, and later to continue in the postgraduate programs.

From 1932-33 O'Shields worked at the Hallie O. Brown Settlement House, St. Paul, organizing their first recreation program and coaching a football and basketball team in the St. Paul Community League. He then moved to Alabama and the Tuskegee Institute where, as a physical education instructor and track coach, he expanded the school's track program to a national level while developing several national champions.

Eight years later O'Shields was at Fort Valley State College, Georgia, as athletic director and director of physical education. Fort Valley knew a Junior National Champion in the 400 meters and a national championship girls' golf team under Bill O'Shields coaching.

He went to Alabama's Talladega College as director of the physical education department and coach of sports in 1942, until he entered service with the American Red Cross in 1943 as assistant to the Director of Operations for Colored Personnel in the South Pacific.

O'Shields has been at Cheyney State College, Pennsylvania, since he left the Red Cross in 1947, as director of athletics and physical education. At Cheyney he organized the Physical Education Program for Men, coached all sports for 15 years, and was a member of the Constitution Committee which drew up the blueprint for the Pennsylvania State College Athletic Association.

This versatile, never-tiring athletic director will retire in June 1969.

JOHN HENRY ALDES '37MD, F.A.C.S., F.I.C.S., Los Angeles, California, is currently director of the Ben R. Meyer Rehabilitation Center, Cedars of Lebanon Division, Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

ALUMNI SERVICE
AWARDEES

GATES HUNT '20BSEE, Lakewood, Ohio, for 48 years has shown a strong and continuing interest in University alumni work. He has been active in the organization and perpetuation of four different Minnesota alumni chapters across the country over these years — New York (1921-24), Philadelphia (1925-1929), Milwaukee (1929-1935) and Cleveland.

In Milwaukee, where the chapter was active even during the depression days, he served as chairman of membership and of ticket sales.

Working with MAA Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce in 1935, Hunt organized Cleveland's first alumni chapter and was their permanent president — showing constant innovation and energy — until he was transferred to Indianapolis, and later to Atlanta. As an outgrowth of the Cleveland chapter, an alumni chapter for Akron, Ohio was organized.

In 1958 his firm returned him to Cleveland where he became active with the chapter once again. The group reorganized in 1965, and elected Hunt their president for 1966-67. He still works with the alumni.

Following graduation from the University, Hunt joined Cutler-Hammer, Inc., as a student engineer in 1921. He served the organization as manager of merchandise sales, branch manager, district manager and special assistant until his retirement in 1963.

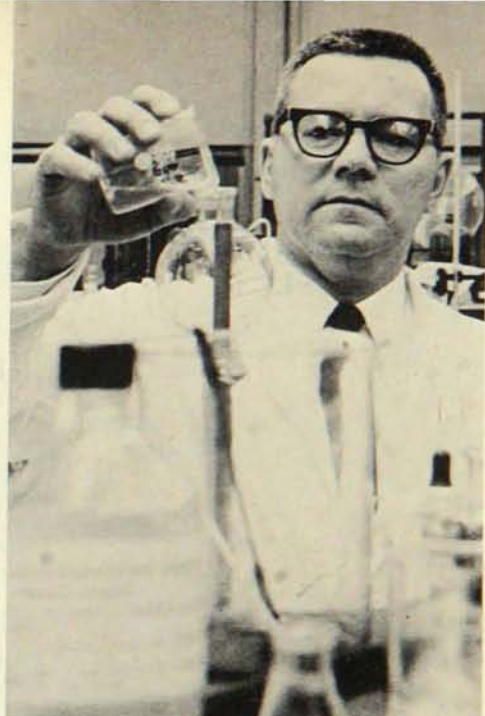

In August of that year Hunt went to work part-time for Man Power, Inc., Cleveland, Ohio, as technical division manager. He still holds this job.

WALDO E. HARDELL '26BSBus, Minneapolis, has been active in University of Minnesota alumni work for 12 years.

He served on the Board of Directors of the School of Business Alumni Association from 1957-61, during which time he also sat on or chaired nu-

ALUMNI NEWS

the affluent

the affluent alumnus

FOR the sixth year the Minnesota Alumni Association asked its membership, through the Alumni News, to fill out a Survey Questionnaire — in an effort to draw a statistical profile of the average Minnesota alumnus.

Again the questionnaire was two pages in length, but with added dimension in querying alumni return to campus and information about joining the Alumni Association itself.

Approximately 948 alumni filled out and returned the sheet. Seven hundred of those returned were used for the tabulated results on the following pages. The Survey drew information from approximately three percent of the Association membership.

And, though this may appear to be a light return, the information gathered from the tabulation showed a young, diversified, affluent membership — traditionally multi-faceted.

All questionnaires tabulated were from only graduates of the University.

And the largest return was from the College of Liberal Arts, the Institute of Technology, the School of Business, the Graduate School and the College of Education — in descending order. Altogether these University units accounted for 65.4 percent of the information gained from the Survey.

Respondents' ages were almost identical with those in the 1968 Survey, again showing a young group. Five hundred and ninety-eight men completed the questionnaire, as opposed to 102 women. Male answers thus accounted for 85.4 percent of the queries.

Yet we would place a female influence on the male responses — 76.9 percent of the respondents were married.

And, in line with the youthfulness of the alumnus, the majority graduated from the University following 1950: a total of 65.4 percent. Sixty-four percent of the graduates earned undergraduate degrees; however, 67.8 percent answered that they had continued their education following initial degree work.

Continuing education included advance degree work, night school, extension and correspondence study, special job training and consequent schooling, military schooling, and home study through the use of professional journals and other materials.

Families have grown larger since last year's polling: 15.2 percent noted one child, 24.1 percent two children, and 22.4 percent three children. These figures account for 61.7 percent of the children among alumni marrieds.

And the number of children who are attending or have attended the University continues to raise — 2.5 percentage points over last year's response.

As regards occupation, 13.6 percent of Minnesota alumni showed jobs in government, 26.6 in business and industry, 21.7 in education, 16.3 in the medical sciences, 6.2 in other sciences, 2.9 in communication, 1.3 in transportation, 1.7 in agriculture and 1.0 in social service. Those in the administrative and executive levels of government, and industry and business rose significantly over 1968. And alumni working in education continue upward — 3.9 percentage points over 1968.

Over 63 percent noted that they were employed in the field of their college training.

The largest number — 18 percent — indicated that they had been with their employers for six to ten years. 15.7 percent had been in the same job for three to five years; and 12.9 percent for more than twenty-five years — an index of alumni job stability.

Over half of the alumni are in a supervisory position, with the greater number — 37 percent — responsible for one to five persons.

The average income level of the typical alumnus is the same as in 1968 in the top two levels: $10,000-$15,000 (25.2 percent) and $15,000-$20,000 (15.3 percent). However, the third level has dropped back to $7,500-$10,000 (13.1 percent) as compared to the $25,000-$49,999 of 1968. This shift could well be indicative of the youthful age of the current graduate.

At the upper and lower spectrums of income, almost 2 percent earned $100,000 or more, and 4.2 percent under $5,000.

Yet a larger number of alumni own their own homes as compared to 1968: 70.7 percent as opposed to 69.1 percent. And though the raise in percentage points is not remarkable, it is stable and heralds the continuing affluence of our young society.

The value of the homes owned has also increased, perhaps with the current inflation. More alumni own homes valued at $30,000-$40,000. A close second are the $20,000-$25,000 homes; and third, the $40,000-$50,000 homes.

Alumni owning one or two cars also raised over 1968, and those owning none or more than two decreased. Only .10 of a percentage point separates those owning one car from those having two.

The newer model cars are more popular this year: 53.5 percent of University alumni have models in the 1967, 1968 and 1969 range. Fords have replaced Chevrolets as the car to own, although the shift is only slight. Pontiac runs third and Oldsmobile fourth.

Continued investment in stocks, bonds, mutual funds and other areas is maintained by the 1969 alumni — with investors remaining the same as in 1968, at 76.3 percent. Stocks and mutual funds are again the most popular form of investment.

Nearly all alumni maintain a checking account, 98.6 percent, while 89.4 have savings accounts.

University graduates are more heavily insured than in 1968 — 23.4 percent noted insurance in the $50,000-$99,999 range, while the $30,000-$49,999 policies ran a close second. The amount of hospitalization carried also continued high — 95.2 percent, .2 percentage points over 1968 — with group insurance being the most popular form of coverage (84.7 percent).

The majority of alumni live in a metropolis, 34.2 percent; while 20 percent live in a small city and 17.8 percent in a medium city. University graduates also tend to stay put, with over 25 percent maintaining residence more than twenty-five years, 14.6 percent from three to five years, and 13.2 percent from eleven to fifteen years. This suggests, that despite the youth of University graduates, they are staying in the Twin Cities metropolitan area for employment.

And Minnesota alumni are staying in Minnesota — 49.4 percent of the respondents. The sunny weather of California once again draws the second greatest number of graduates, 8 percent. Illinois places third in residence popularity, and Wisconsin fourth.

Travel continues to be desirable for alumni, whether in business or for pleasure. 58.7 percent travel up to five times a year for business, 17 percent more than 15 times and 16.2, six to ten times. The airplane has replaced the car as the most used form of business transportation — 52.9 percent prefer to fly, while 39.5 percent drive.

Alumni are also on the go for pleasure — 38 percent at least twice a year, 20.5 only once and 17.8 three times. The automobile remains at the top of the vacationers transportation list: 53.6 percent prefer to drive, while 36.5 percent fly. The use of the train and bus also increases during pleasure trips, an indication of more time available.

Vacations of more than four weeks are more frequent than in 1968, by 8.4 percentage points. 24.7 percent alumni have two-week vacations, and 24.5 have four-week vacations. More are taking split vacations with more time available — 75.2 percent as opposed to 24.8 percent. And two (46.5 percent) and three (35.8 percent) multiple vacations are in the strong majority.

77 percent of our alumni prefer to travel at home while 23 percent visit foreign countries annually.

Minnesotans are active in public affairs. Nineteen percent have held elective or appointive offices on the local, state and national levels, with the largest number working locally.

The Republicans hold the main — 53.6 percent; while 21.3 percent of the alumni listed themselves as Democrats, and 23.8 percent as independents.

In the 1969 election, during which 94.6 percent voted, 60 percent voted for the Republican candidate, 37.6 percent for the Democratic and 12.4 percent for another candidate.

Over 50 percent indicated that they would vote Republican in 1972, 20.2 percent said they would cast their ballot for the Democratic candidate — and 29.4 were undecided.

More than 50 percent of the graduates noted that their political, social and economic thinking was about the same as when they were at the University. The others were nearly equally divided between the more liberal or the more conservative ilk.

The greater number of alumni are Protestant, 65.5 percent, while 16.6 percent are Catholic and 5.3 percent of the Jewish faith. Among the Protestants, Lutherans, Presbyterians and Methodists are in the majority. And only 15.8 percent of the respondents showed that they had changed their religious affiliation since leaving the University.

Football is the most popular spectator sport again this year, with 40.2 percent attending games at the professional, university or high school level. Baseball ranks second at 19.3 percent, hockey third at 15.9 percent and basketball fourth at 15 percent.

More alumni joined the Minnesota Alumni Association to support the University than for any other reason: 45 percent answering this section of the questionnaire. Slightly more than 35 percent joined to support the work of the alumni.

University graduates tend to show an affinity for their alma mater as more than 74 percent indicated that they had returned to campus since graduation. The reasons they gave were: continuing education, to see growth and change, to visit and talk with professors, to use the library and obtain professional information from University personnel, or just to look around.

We see the Minnesota alumnus as an above-income professional with noted stability in his financial, political and home life. How do you see him when you read the respondents' statistics?

Thomas F. Gallagher, retired Supreme Court Justice . . .

A 1919 PERSONALITY TO MEET AT THE GOLDEN REUNION

TUESDAY, May 27, is a golden day for the class of 1919 — a day to become reacquainted, to reminisce when you join your classmates on campus once again.

Among the 1919ers working on the 50th Anniversary Reunion plans is Judge Thomas F. Gallagher, a Minneapolis lawyer with a political-bent who sat on the Minnesota Supreme Court. The Alumni News talked with Judge Gallagher in his "retirement" offices at the Mark Twain Hotel, Minneapolis, in late April about his students days on the Minnesota campus and his career following graduation . . .

He particularly remembered the atmosphere of a smaller campus and a student body that was more interested in finishing their education and making their way in the world of careers than being involved in social issues. But they liked to have fun, too.

"Bernie Bierman was playing halfback on the football team and George Edgar Vincent was president of the University," Judge Gallagher said. "The Vincents drove a very fine carriage with two horses. I often saw them driving through the campus to their home near the University."

It was during the Judge's undergraduate days that the University's football team won national recognition for the first time, and that basketball was still a rock 'em and dump 'em game. And though this writer finds it hard to believe, the Judge could find a good, square meal for ten cents in the area bordering the University now known as Dinky Town.

Judge Gallagher also recalled Owen Wangensteen's students days; they lived in the same fraternity house. The doctor maintained the most rigorous study schedule that the Judge had ever known, and one that apparently destined him for the success he has achieved today.

Between 1921 and 1942 Judge Gallagher practiced law in Minneapolis, and during that time won the nomination as Democratic candidate for governor of Minnesota. In 1942 the Judge was elected to the Minnesota Supreme Court, the first to be without holding a previous gubernatorial appointment to some judicial office.

He was re-elected in 1948, 1954 and 1960, serving for nearly a quarter of a century.

In addition to his work on the court, the Judge continued to distinguish himself in outside arbitration work. Between 1948 and 1950 President Harry S. Truman named him to serve successively on three Presidential Emergency Boards created to avert railway strikes.

A full day of golden activity begins after morning registration: review of the 1969 Cap and Gown Day Procession and attendance of the Convocation; a Golden Anniversary Luncheon with Owen H. Wangensteen '19BA '20BS '21MB '22MD '25PhD, chairman of the 1919 Reunion, speaking for the class, Kenneth C. Glaser '42BBA for the Alumni Association as its president, and President Malcolm Moos '37BA '38MA for the University of Minnesota.

Following the luncheon, reunionees will tour the University campuses by bus, and later join President and Mrs. Moos at their home for tea. The day's events conclude with a social hour and dinner at the University of Minnesota Alumni Club, Sheraton-Ritz Hotel, Minneapolis.

Of a class originally numbering 666, approximately 325 remain. So a sizeable and successful reunion is expected!

In addition to Wangensteen and Gallagher, others of the 1919 Golden Reunion committee include Marie Sundheim Anderson, Harriet K. Apel, Alverta Phillips Coram, Ione E. Corliss, Frances S. Dunning, Sidney A. Frellsen, Frances Ackley Genter, Lucile Ziegelmaier Haertel, John B. Hanley, George H. Hardisty, Theresa Lucius Havey, Otilie Schurr Janneck, Clara E. Krefting, Harold Langland, Annabell Drenckhahn Leberg, Hyman Lippman, Charles E. Olson, Gladys Holt Peterson, Adam M. Smith, Katherine Hartzell Smith, B. Sweetser, Albert L. Thomas, Reuben A. Ulvestad, Erma Knocke Wolston, Milton S. Wunderlich and Marion Wash Zierold.

Additional information on the 1919 Golden Anniversary Reunion can be obtained from the Alumni Office, 205 Coffman Memorial Union, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455, telephone 373-2466.

WE KNOW THEM

CARL C. NELSON, an aerospace Engineer, is an expert in spacecraft electricity. He holds a position with the Space Division of North American Rockwell Corporation, builder of the Apollo spacecraft command and service modules in which three astronauts will journey to the moon.

A Minnesota graduate is one of the spacecraft specialists who make the nation's lunar exploration program possible.

Carl C. Nelson '25BSEE is a specialist in spacecraft electricity. He is a member of the technical staff at the Space Division of North American Rockwell Corporation, builder of the Apollo spacecraft command and service modules in which U.S. astronauts will make a round trip to the moon.

After graduation from Minnesota in 1925, the following year he obtained his Master of Science degree in electrical engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Then he returned to Minnesota and obtained a professional electrical engineering degree.

With this background Nelson is one of the experts who help with the intricate systems that go into the Apollo spacecraft. He analyzes the electric power system of the spacecraft, and the way this system works with other systems. Technically, his work is described as Apollo engineering system analysis and checkout evaluation.

His knowledge contributed to the Apollo spacecraft scheduled to be used in a first manned test later this year. Carrying a crew of three astronauts, the Apollo was launched from NASA's Kennedy Space Center on an earth orbital mission designed to test spacecraft systems under conditions similar to those to be encountered on a lunar trip.

Nelson is confident about America's moon exploration program. "I feel it will turn out to be one of the greatest triumphs in integrated scientific and engineering disciplines in modern history," he said. "I am pleased to be able to contribute my part to this program, the success of which will have a tremendous impact on science and engineering for years to come."

The first manned flight test, known as the Apollo 7 mission, was the sixth flight test of the Apollo spacecraft. The test involved the command module, which is the quarters for the crew, and the service module, which carries supply facilities. Both modules were built by North American Rockwell's Space Division for NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center. They were boosted into an orbit about 100 nautical miles above the earth by a two-stage Saturn launch vehicle.

Nelson, who is married to the former Edith Gordon of Minneapolis, lives in Los Angeles, California.

Spivak Named NARC Vice President

WALTER A. Spivak '33AE, recipient of the University's Outstanding Achievement Award in 1954, has been named vice president—engineering for the aerospace and systems group of North American Rockwell Corporation.

A veteran aircraft engineer and executive, Spivak has played a key role in building many of the nations' major military aircraft, including as chief engineer for the huge 2000-mile-per hour XB-70. He joined the company in 1936, and has worked with almost every type of airplane the company has produced—World War II's most heavily armed bomber, the B-25; the famed P-51 Mustang fighter; and the internationally-used T-6 Texan trainer.

He also helped develop the first four-jet bomber, the B-45; the F-86 Sabre jet fighter of Korean fame, and the F-100 Super Sabre.

Prior to this position, Spivak was executive director—engineering, for research and engineering, and earlier was assistant general manager and chief engineer of the XB-70.

DR. Sarah Nunneley '67MD is probably the first woman physician to specialize in aerospace medicine. She is one of three new residents in Ohio State University's Department of Preventive Medicine who have decided to make aviation and space medicine their careers.

Dr. Nunneley, who finds contemplation of space flight fascinating, reports that she became interested in aerospace events partly because of her family background — her father is a specialist in aviation law.

"We followed aviation and space progress at home in Washington, D.C. and later in Minneapolis," she said. "I have been interested in space flight since before the first Sputnik."

No slouch at flying herself, Dr. Nunneley holds a private pilot's license and flies whenever she can find time away from her busy schedule. Her residency involves a year of general studies, a year of research and a year at an approved location, such as NASA, the FAA or a commercial airline.

A graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, she interned at Kings County Hospital, Brooklyn, following the completion of her studies at Minnesota's Medical School.

"Aerospace medicine is a wide, wide field for both men and women," Dr. Nunneley said. "The selection of people to go up in space and working to overcome medical problems which may occur as a result of space flight — what could be more exciting? And this is just a small part of the field," she added.

Dr. Nunneley confessed that she did not decide to specialize in aerospace medicine without a great deal of thought. "During medical school I became very interested in pediatric cardiology, and had almost decided to specialize in pediatrics, but I found that my interest in aerospace medicine was much stronger, so here I am."

While women physicians are no longer as rare as they once were, Dr. Nunneley did have one problem during her training. "Women physicians look just like nurses in the operating room, so sometimes I would be taken for a nurse by the surgeon in charge. That was about the only problem I ran into because of my sex. I found I was treated with utmost fairness throughout my training."

Dr. Nunneley does feel it takes a "special breed of cat to complete medical training, if you are a woman. It takes energy to be in the field at all, and the training is not keyed for married women."

She looks forward to the time when her studies will be completed and she will be making contributions to the space effort. "There are tremendous possibilities in learning about outer space as a new environment. In fact, any estimates on the amount of progress we will see in the next 15 years may be conservative, since we have progressed so quickly from the time of the first Sputnik.

"I think the amount of progress we make in the space effort depends on the desire of Americans to make investigation of outer space a top priority. I believe we have adequate resources to handle our crucial domestic problems and provide a good space program as well," she said.

"One aspect of aerospace research that few people realize is the adaptability of what we learn to some of our everyday problems. For instance, sensing devices originally developed to monitor astronauts are now used in intensive care units to help save lives of critically ill patients.

"We will certainly benefit greatly from what we learn about the other planets and outer space — in other fields as well as in medicine.

"Yes, I would like to see what it's like to live on the moon."

“HE was a campus politician, who continually combatted complacency. In the 1930's, as one of the founders of the antifascist Jacobin Club, he was instrumental in the abolishment of compulsory military training at the University of Minnesota. As a writer for the campus newspaper, he regularly made a nuisance of himself.

“He was one of ‘Murrow’s boys,’ that brilliant and diversified group of CBS reporters and commentators who were gathered together by Edward R. Murrow just before World War II and who became for the American at home the voices of Britain and France and their sons in the European theater.

“(He) was the last American to broadcast from Paris before it fell to the Germans; the first to report that France was about to capitulate. He was precise, terse, but never dispassionate reporter of the Battle of Britain.

“His life contains the stuff of a Steig cartoon, a child’s Dreams of Glory: that 2,200 mile canoe trip when he was 17 years old, incredible not only because of the distance but the route – Minneapolis to Hudson Bay by water; that month spent in the Assam jungle living with head-hunting savages after having to bail out from a plane that developed engine trouble while flying over the Himalayas; that long trek with the American troops from the south of France across the Rhine and into Germany.

“There have been honors from nations and institutions too numerous to mention. Some of these honors have recognized his professional abilities and accomplishments; others have cited his significant contributions to the world’s best hopes for a better life.

“But the title of his autobiography, Not So Wild A Dream, does not refer to dreams of glory. His dream is and has always been the American dream; his values those of compassion, justice and faith.

“None of this need be explained to even the most occasional viewer of (his) nightly postscript to Walter Cronkite’s Evening News. His commitments are as clear as his style is incisive. He is, as Jack Gould has remarked, the ‘CBS commentator in charge of significance.’

“Significance and – to add a word that is very current among college students today – relevance. (His) presence at Colgate’s one hundred forty-seventh Commencement added to the significance of the occasion; it also testified to the relevance that young men can still find in the life and activities of at least one over-thirty member of the Establishment.”

MILLION DOLLAR ART COLLECTION LOST AT UNIVERSITY

A HANDFUL of very loyal alumni supporters have helped a small art gallery on the University campus overcome seemingly insurmountable physical limitations to expand its services.

The University Gallery, now a part of the Art History department, was formed in 1934—a date recent enough so that many of the University's alumni are ignorant of its existence and its activities.

Yet the University Gallery enjoys a national reputation amidst unhandy disappointments: last fall the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City refused to lend to the Gallery an important collection of pictures and art objects that would have greatly augmented art instruction at every level at the University. They claimed that the Gallery could not guarantee security for the collection nor provide suitable exhibition space.

"Moreover, the Metropolitan Museum was absolutely correct," University Gallery Director Charles Savage told the Alumni News.

This, according to Savage, is the dilemma facing the University of Minnesota today—a shortage of funds, a lack of publicity and deplorable display conditions. The Gallery struggles toward reward through frustration to maintain high artistic quality and expression in an ever-changing University community.

Hudson D. Walker '25-'30NG, the Gallery's founder and first director, is a staunch advocate of art in an academic atmosphere. As art's missionary at the University, he has contributed a meaningful collection to the Gallery, and continues to support its expansion.

Other interested benefactors have joined Walker's crusade. Mrs. Ruth Lawrence, who worked jointly with him in setting up the Gallery, followed Walker as directrix. She spent most of her time drumming up funds and support for the Gallery's expanding program.

Mrs. Emily Abbot Nordfeldt '25BA '26MA, like the Walkers, is a loyal benefactor. In memory of her husband, Bror Julius Olsen Nordfeldt, she has contributed a group of his paintings to the University Gallery and provides the only purchasing funds the Gallery presently has through sales of her husband's artwork in New York.

Funding support is, consequently, spasmodic; and Savage often turns to the off-campus community for help.

"Off-campus supporters are a mixture of housewife, student and civic-oriented people," Savage stated, "concerned over the future of art in the Twin Cities. They are a special breed of about ten people—that's a lot to be interested in this attic—and they often mobilize others as well as donate private funds."

The University Gallery works in conjunction with other museums and galleries across the country. Art materials are often exchanged through a loan system which benefits all parties.

A rental system within the University community itself has also been established. Faculty members can rent an art object for $12 per year—to keep in their offices or homes—and students may borrow original art work at 50¢ a quarter.

Why do we have an art gallery on the University of Minnesota campus when Twin Citians already have access to the Walker Art Center, the Minneapolis Art Institute and the St. Paul Centers?

This inquiry is not unfamiliar to Savage. In fact, it opens discussion for one of his favorite topics—the essential need for art at the University of Minnesota.

"The question," Savage said, "is a very short-sighted one. First, you should consider the enormous audience of young people who attend the University each year. The attitudes formed at the college level will be those taken out to the world of art centers, museums and other civic and cultural institutions. It is on campus and in course work that art and the history of art begins to have some value. The example must be set here.

This original 17th century etching, "Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac," by Pietro Testa was purchased through the Nordfeldt fund.

This 1923 still life with fish and pinwheel by Max Beckmann was given by Ione and Hudson D. Walker.

"Second, as vital as our function is to the future of these existing institutions, so their presence is necessary to us," he continued. "Though we represent a bright, inquisitive yet critical generation, they offer unlimited contrasts and comparisons, timeless visual questions and some answers and a way to understand quality."

The University Gallery, housed on the third and fourth floors of Northrop Auditorium, is often overlooked in the rapid whirl of college affairs. Savage estimates his art audience by dividing half of Northrop's seating capacity by the number of concerts given each year —

"Most people go into the Gallery to smoke during intermissions," he said with a grin, "and, some of them must see something."

Savage changes his temporary displays monthly and always maintains a permanent exhibit on the fourth floor. He selects display objects with the help of departmental experts who serve as contemporary critics.

"I always contact an expert from the Art History faculty or another appropriate department to judge a piece of art that might come into the Gallery. If the professor doesn't think the work is interesting enough or exciting enough to teach with — it is sent back," Savage said.

The University Gallery, an aesthetically pleasing aspect of the campus, is primarily considered a teaching collection. Savage, emphasizing the "academics of art," sees the Gallery as an indispensable instruction unit.

"Instead of old photographs or muzzy slides," Savage said, "the student can observe the prime object. Instead of a grim reproduction of distant monuments, the professor can refer his students to the Gallery's collection. The professor could even conduct a seminar discussion around a specific art object."

The University Gallery has never received campus acclaim. According to Savage, the various shows will excite only those people who have happened to see them. People will come up and say, "That was a nice show"; but it is an individual critique.

"If the location were different," Savage commented candidly, "we might get a bigger reaction. We are slated for a move — tentative plans for a West Bank complex are being considered — but, meanwhile we are wasting away in an over-crowded attic."

It is easy for a visitor to the University Gallery to be disappointed and somewhat disillusioned with what he sees. The permanent display is housed in a coldly bare, whitewashed room — drawing attention away from the art itself, a collection that encompasses every media, including photography and ceramics. The group of prints is probably the most comprehensive, but a study collection of ceramics is being formed and 20th century American painting is strong.

Unfortunately, the visitor sees a conglomeration of artwork and the inexperienced eye is forced to distinguish between different periods of art hung side-by-side in one room. The art layman, consequently, thrown into confusion, suffers.

The temporary displays, reflecting current and historical trends, are sheltered in a separate room. Competing with a bare, uninviting atmosphere, the artwork still speaks for itself and reflects our ever-changing world.

Savage, whose enthusiasm is pushing the University Gallery into the campus spotlight, sees the potential of quality artwork at Minnesota. The Gallery exhibits, now valued at over a million dollars, should be the focal point of conscious and creative thinking on the University campus.

"This is the time," Savage challenged, "to make the student aware of art during several of the greatest learning years of his life. Right now, there isn't a lot we can do to develop tastes and art appreciation when the student only exposes himself to one quick tour.

"I'd like to see the day," he added frankly, "when the commuter will go home, rip off his pistachio-colored blinders, change the color of his living room and watch his plastic flowers melt in the fireplace. Only then has the University Gallery begun to accomplish its purpose."

the MIGRATION of MINNESOTA ALUMNI

ANNUALLY the Alumni Office makes a study of the places of residence of Minnesota Alumni. The national and state maps on this and the following page will give you a state-by-state and within-Minnesota pictorial preview of alumni residence.

As of January 1, 1969, a total of 116,712 graduates or 66.4 percent resided in Minnesota. This is a new high when compared to figures from 1957 through 1968. Of this in-state number, 45.6 percent of the entire alumni body live in the Twin Cities greater metropolitan area (Hennepin, Ramsey, Washington, Dakota, Scott, Carver and Anoka counties). This is 66.1 percent of all the graduates who live within the state.

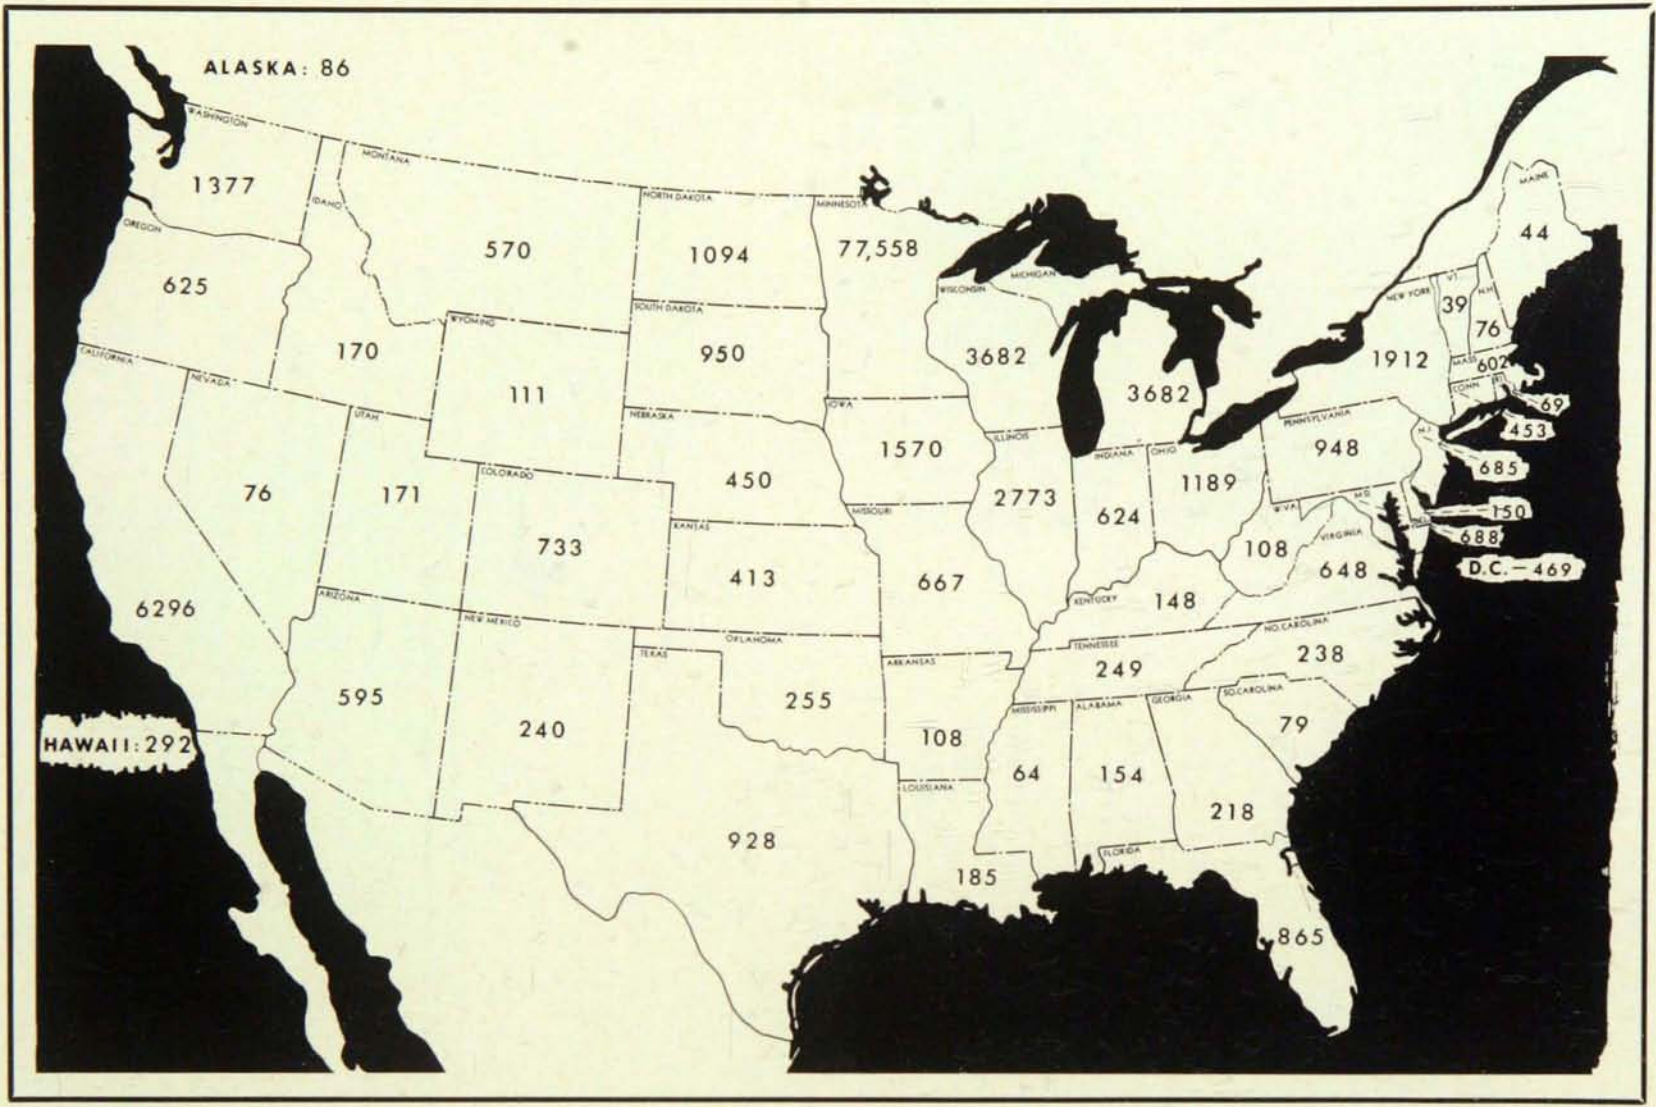

The ten states which rank highest in number of Minnesota graduates in residence are, from highest to lowest, California, Wisconsin, Illinois, New York, Iowa, Michigan, Washington, Ohio, North Dakota and South Dakota. Those states with the fewest number of alumni are, in ascending order, Vermont, Maine, Mississippi, Rhode Island, Nevada, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Alaska, Arkansas, West Virginia and Wyoming.

2.2 percent of Minnesota's graduates live in 68 other countries of the world, with the greatest number in Canada. Overall, these migration studies have shown that more Minnesota graduates are staying in their state, than in previous years.

SPRING SPORTS SHOW STRONG FINISH COMING

ALL four Gopher spring sports teams, plus the varsity football squad in the off-season portion of its agenda, have been hot at it during the spring quarter . . . and even before that.

The baseball, track, tennis and golf squads headed South during the quarter break to compete where the soft winds and sunshine prevailed. Each coach expressed a positive reaction to his team's performance. Getting their respective northern schedules started was not so easy and several outings had to be cancelled due to snow, rain and nippy temperatures. But once they started, each unit proved impressive.

Coach Dick Siebert's baseball team, after posting a 6-7 Texas record where he split his varsity into "A" and "B" squads, came home to post eight consecutive wins and run its record to 14-7. The Gophers had six more nonconference games to go before opening defense of their 1968 Big Ten crown April 25 by hosting Indiana.

Power at the plate has been an early season key for the Gopher nine. Through their first 21 games, Minnesota players blasted 30 home runs out of the park. At this rate a new single season record in four baggers is almost a certainty.

Junior first baseman Mike Walseth is expected to lead the diamond team in its quest for a second straight Conference title. An All-Big Ten selection last year, Mike was hitting near the .500 mark at press time.

Other veteran standouts back this season include third baseman Bill Kendall (Richfield); outfielders Chris Farni (Robbinsdale); Greg Wasick (Richfield), and Bob Nielsen (St. Peter); second baseman Brian Love (Minneapolis) and catcher Marv Menken (Litchfield).

Newcomers expected to add a lot of help include catcher Scott Stein (Richfield), son of head trainer "Snapper" Stein; shortstop Al Kaminski (Minneapolis), a JC transfer; second baseman-outfielder Bob Schnietz (St. Louis, Mo.) and outfielder Noel Jenke (Owatonna).

The latter is no stranger to Gopher sports. He captained the 1968 football squad and has also earned two varsity hockey letters. By lettering in baseball, Jenke would become the first U of M three sports monogram winner in one year since Ken Yackel did it in the same sports in 1954-55. At present, Jenke is tied for the team leadership in home runs with six and is listed as coach Siebert's top right fielder.

Five lettermen head up the pitching corps. And, according to Siebert, the Gophers "could" be stronger than last season "if the veterans play up to their potential and our newcomers turn in strong campaigns. We have a long way to go. 1969 should prove to be a very exciting season."

TRACKSTERS NOT EXPECTED TO REPEAT CHAMPIONSHIP

Another defending Conference titlist is coach Ray Griak's outdoor track team. In 1968 Griak piloted his varsity to the first Conference championship in Minnesota track history. But, unlike Siebert, Griak is not predicting a repeat performance.

"We lost too many blue chip performers and will be too young and not deep enough in 1969," Griak said. "Wisconsin is a prohibitive favorite with only Indiana and Michigan, in that order, rated an outside chance to challenge to Conference honors."

Leading the returnees for Minnesota this season are Steve Eriksson (Minneapolis), 440, 660; Steve Hoag (Anoka), mile, 3-mile; Randy Jones (St. Louis Park), 100, 220, 440; Bill McNee (Roseville), hurdles; Pete Shea (Richfield), 100, 220; Bob Stein (St. Louis Park), discus; Ed Twomey (Minneapolis), 880, and Bob Wagner (St. Louis Park), mile. However, Jones suffered an early season leg injury and his status is doubtful for the entire spring.

Among the top newcomers expected to gain a lot of points for Minnesota are Tim Heikkila (Superior, Wis.), high jump; Don Timm (Burnsville) and Tom Page (Edina), 3-mile and steeplechase; Tom Beltz (Bagley), 660, 880; Greg Lokken (Moorhead), 100, 220 and relay, and Barry Mayer (Fargo, N.D.), discus.

The tracksters competed in two meets on their southern swing and returned North to defeat Northwestern and Bradley in a triangular meet at Evanston, Illinois.

NETMEN COME TO PLAY

Coach Joe Walsh voices pure optimism about his varsity tennis squad. "Although we stand to lose our top player to military service, Paul Krause (St. Louis Park), I still believe in this year's players and think we will do all right," Walsh said. "Now I'm not predicting any Conference title, but I do believe we can break into the first division. Minnesota will come to play."

Top lettermen returning for duty are Bill Drake (Sunnyvale, Calif.); Lew Smolin (Peekskill, N.Y.); Dave Cross (Rockport, Mass.) and Krause. Lost from last year's team, a trio that will be hard to replace, are Denny Chez, Jack Nist and Bucky Zimmerman. Newcomers expected to help during the '69 campaign include Tom Hansel (Willmar), a transfer student; Dave Stearns (St. Cloud) and Dave Winkle (Rochester), another transfer.

The Gopher netters split in their first northern matches after posting a 3-2 record in Texas and Louisiana. Minnesota upset Northwestern 6-3 before bowing to powerful Wisconsin 5-4. Smolin, Drake and Cross looked good for the University in the opening rounds.

Minnesota finished third in the Big Ten last season, but may find it difficult to hold on to that spot in 1969. Walsh rates Michigan as near unbeatable this season.

GOLF SQUAD LOOKS FOR FIRST DIVISION FINISH

Even though Bill Brask, 1968 Big Ten individual champion and third place finisher in the NCAA meet, has been lost, golf coach Les Bolstad says he believes his 1969 team can reach a first division finish after ending sixth in 1968.

"I believe our returning boys gained the experience and poise needed to have a good year," Bolstad said. "But to do this we have to develop consistency."

The links squad lost a dual meet to Houston and finished second and sixth in two invitational meets on its southern swing. Houston, always a national power, won all three events.

Bolstad lists five returning lettermen, three sophomores and one transfer student who are expected to be his key players. The lettermen include Larry Tiziani (Ironwood, Mich.); Bob Hildebrandt (Hastings); Greg Harvey (Coon Rapids); Tom Ihnot (Minneapolis) and Steve Johnson (North Branch). The sophomores are Bill Homeyer (Minneapolis), James Larson (Luverne) and Mark Pittman (Edina), while the transfer student is Gerry Rislove (Preston) who played two years at Augsburg College.

Bolstad lists the eastern schools—Indiana, Michigan State, Michigan and Ohio State—as the Big Ten powers again this season.

GOPHERS MUST BUILD OFFENSIVE & DEFENSIVE LINES

While the spring sports teams are competing for real, coach Murray Warmath's Gopher footballers are engaged in spring drills on the turf of Northrup field. The big problem facing Warmath and his staff is to come up with practically entire new line units . . . both offensively and defensively.

"We were hit harder by graduation than any other team I know of," the head coach said. "We not only have to rebuild both lines, but we also will see almost totally new linebacking and defensive backfield units when we open in the fall. We 'could' have the best running tandem in Minnesota history in the offensive backfield, but even the greatest back can't go anywhere if the holes aren't there. We have a lot of ground to cover and a long way to go before we even think about the 1969 season. I just hope we come up with some quick answers during spring practice."

Warmath greeted 86 players on the opening day of drills. Included were 22 lettermen, but missing were the same number of boys who gained their final letter last year. Of the latter bunch, 14 of these were considered regulars.

During the opening spring drills, Warmath put together a first string backfield of captain Jim Carter (South St. Paul) and Barry Mayer (Fargo, N.D.) as the running backs, Phil Hagen (Eau Claire, Wis.) at quarterback and Terry Addison (Memphis, Tenn.) at flanker back.

Up front the early top offensive line went this way: ends—Leon Trawick (Washington, D.C.) and Ray Parson (Uniontown, Pa.); tackles—Alvin Hawes (Memphis, Tenn.) and John Thompson (Hickory, N.C.); guards—Bill Christison (Grand Forks, N.D.) and John Walsh (Chicago, Ill.); center—Bob Eastlund (Isanti).

Several changes were being made each day on the defensive side, but the opening backfield included Jeff Wright (Edina), Bob Bailey (Montgomery, Ala.), Henry Tasche (Elk Grove, Ill.) and Jeff Nygren (Fullerton, Calif.).

Warmath has scheduled 20 spring practice sessions with the annual intra-squad game set for Saturday, May 3 in Memorial Stadium. The actual final date for spring drills is May 10.

With so many questions to be answered, Coach Warmath would not hazard any predictions about the 1969 season. However, he did say the aim of he and his staff was to once again field a tough, hard-hitting Gopher team, the kind that Minnesota fans are used to. To say the very least, 1969 will be another exciting football season for Gopher fans.

Included in the home schedule are six home dates with a key Saturday on October 18 when Ohio State comes to town. The Gophers also face Ohio University, Nebraska, Michigan, Northwestern and Wisconsin in Memorial Stadium. The annual Homecoming gala is set for the weekend of the Ohio State contest.

THE UNIVERSITY

Imholte Named Acting Provost At Morris Campus

John Q. Imholte '57MA '61PhD, academic dean of the University of Minnesota, Morris, has been named acting provost of the Morris campus. The appointment, made by the Board of Regents, was effective May 1.

Associate Professor Imholte, a member of the original Morris faculty, assumes the responsibilities held by Provost Rodney A. Briggs, who is leaving for a new position in Africa under direction of the Ford Foundation.

Imholte, 39, a native of St. Paul, joined the faculty at Morris as a lecturer and was later named chairman of the division of social sciences. In the summer of 1967 he was named assistant dean, and last year academic dean. A member of a wide range of campus committees, Imholte is also a member of the University Senate, the senate planning committee and the senate library committee.

Active in his own field of research in history, he is the author of a book, The First Volunteers, and a number of historical articles and papers.

Ground Broken For $4 Million

Horticultural Science Building

Ground was broken April 7 for a new $4 million Horticultural Science facility on the University's St. Paul campus. The four-story building will provide classrooms, laboratories and research facilities for the department of horticultural science. Four additional greenhouses and a headhouse will also be built in the campus greenhouse complex to complete new facilities providing for continuing education and public service activities.

The new facility, financed by state and federal funds, is scheduled to be finished in the fall of 1970.

Specialized research laboratories, growth chambers and additional greenhouses are necessary for much of the basic research being initiated in the department. The original Horticultural Science building was built in 1898 to house both the horticulture and forestry departments when both were in their infancy. The present facilities no longer meet the demands required by the department in serving the fruit industry, vegetable production and utilization, floriculture, turf and nursery management, arboriculture and landscape design and services: activities which represent over $300 million a year to the state's economy.

ERRATA

William Peters '10Pharm was inadvertently omitted from the membership listing of The College of Pharmacy Century Mortar Club in the 1969 April issue. The fourth life member of the Club, he has also endowed the William M. and Mildred E. Peters Scholarship in the College of Pharmacy.

Mrs. K. W. Anderson of Minneapolis, Minnesota, was omitted from the 1968 Individual Contributors listing.

Medical Alumni Named To Research Board

Three University Medical School alumni have been named to the board of directors of the National Society for Medical Research. Elected to four-year terms are Dr. Maurice Visscher '25PhD '31MD, Regents' Professor of Physiology and chairman emeritus of the department of physiology at Minnesota; Dr. Norman E. Shumway '56PhDSurg, professor and chief of cardiovascular surgery at Stanford University; and Dr. Bernard Zimmerman '53PhDSurg, professor and chairman of the surgery department at the West Virginia University Medical Center.

Dr. Visscher will begin his second term as president of the Society. Dr. Shumway is known for his pioneer efforts in heart transplantation techniques, and Dr. Zimmerman, a cancer specialist, recently returned from a year with Project HOPE in Ceylon.

UMD Students Draw Major Fellowships

Three national, major science awards for college seniors were given to University of Minnesota, Duluth students recently. The winners, among 81 in the nation, each received a $5,000 national graduate fellowship in chemistry from the National Science Foundation (NSF).

The UMD students, Paul M. Helquist, Michael Walczak and Casmir Ilenda, all of Duluth, scored extremely high—two of them 99.9 percent—in the national graduate record examination. All were recommended for the NSF honor by members of the UMD department of chemistry. All three have participated in the NSF Undergraduate Research Program at UMD since they were sophomores, each working with a faculty member on research projects and each initiating his own research topic.

Dean Williamson Retires After 28 Years As Dean of Students

After 28 years of service, Edmund G. Williamson '31PhD, dean of students at the University of Minnesota, is retiring.

Williamson, who has weathered campus upheaval, transformation and change, successfully guided thousands of students through their academic careers. This year, in reviewing his own career and some of the problems he has confronted since he took the position in 1941, Williamson said that he started out in a bad situation, and, of course, is taking several unsolved problems into retirement with him.

Williamson, guardian of campus law and order, originated the DCO, Disciplinary Counseling Office, to deal with student disciplinary problems. If a student misbehaves on campus, he is turned over to the University Police and then to the DCO.

"The DCO was designed to help students better themselves, not to punish them," Williamson stated, a principle he still maintains.

Keeping student participation and recognition foremost in mind, Williamson helped initiate student participation on faculty Senate committees in 1946. A radical notion at the time, it is now commonly accepted as part of the university system.

"We cannot run a university without student participation — he must be more than a mere subordinate," Williamson commented.

Nearing age 69, Williamson is ready to let someone else shoulder the criticism and praise channeled through his office.

"It's been a lot of fun," he smiled, "but my work is done."

TWO RECEIVE GRANTS

Carlos F. Diaz-Alejandro, associate professor of economics, will do a comparative study of prices and productivity in selected Latin American Industries. And William H. Flanigan, associate professor of political science, will do quantitative studies in political change.

The grants were awarded to 38 faculty members at 29 universities, supporting independent research by young faculty on subjects of their own choosing.

TWO ENGINEERING ALUMNI GAIN NATIONAL RECOGNITION

Two distinguished Minnesota alumni were recently elected members of the National Academy of Engineering, the highest professional distinction that can be conferred upon an American engineer. Recipients William G. Shepherd '33BEE '37PhD, vice president for academic administration at the University of Minnesota, and J. Donovan Jacobs '34BCE were honored for their many significant contributions to engineering theory and practice and noted accomplishments in the pioneering of new and developing fields of technology.

The National Academy of Engineering, established in 1964, is an organization of outstanding engineers, parallel to the National Academy of Sciences responsible for advising the federal government on principal engineering problems of major importance.

Jacobs, president of Jacobs Associates, San Francisco, California, was cited for his invention of a tunnel sliding floor for rapid evacuation. Shepherd, recognized for his development of velocity modulated tubes of a reflex type, was also the 1966 Minnesota Society of Professional Engineers' "Engineer of the Year."

"I feel very pleased and honored to be a member of the Academy," Shepherd told the Alumni News. "The organization has a big responsibility to the government and to the professions—I'm flattered that I can be a part of it."

St. Paul Students Show Varied Milieu

Only 47 percent of the 1968 freshmen students majoring in some area of agriculture at the University came from farm backgrounds, and only 5 percent majoring in forestry and 22 percent in home economics came from farm families.

The remaining freshmen in all three areas were from families where the parents were engaged in non-farm occupations.

This data reflects the increasing challenge and better occupational opportunities in the areas of agriculture, forestry and home economics, made possible through technological and academic developments.

KAPPEL CHAIR ENDOWED AT U

Gabriel Hauge, president of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company, New York, launched the School of Business Administration's Frederick R. Kappel Professorship in Business and Government Relations with two public lectures at the University of Minnesota. Hauge, former special assistant for economic affairs to President Eisenhower, spoke April 21 on "The Economic Man: Is He Changing?" and April 22 on "The Role of Public Policy."

The Kappel Professorship in Business and Government Relations is a half-million dollar endowed chair donated by the University of Minnesota Foundation. It honors Frederick R. Kappel '24BSEE, one of the founding trustees of the University Foundation. Kappel, president of American Telephone and Telegraph Company from 1956-61 and chairman of the board and chief executive officer from 1961-67, is presently chairman of the executive committee. Over 150 donors contributed funds to help endow the chair in appreciation of Kappel's contributions in the area of business-government relationships.

GEO SURVEY AT UMD

A branch office of the Minnesota Geological Survey is being established on the Duluth campus of the University, through a cooperative arrangement in which three members of the UMD geology faculty rotate as representatives of the Minnesota Geological Survey.

The new office will make possible more effective development of Minnesota's natural resources and more readily available geological services to the people and industries of the northern sections of the state. The Minnesota Geological Survey is a department within the University with responsibility at the state level for conducting investigations of the geology of Minnesota. The survey is supported by the Legislature.

Alumnus Named Iowa President

Willard Lee Boyd '49BSL '51LLB, vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculties at the University of Iowa, was recently appointed to Iowa's top educational administrative position — he will assume the responsibilities of the University of Iowa's president beginning September 1, 1969.

Boyd, who believes that a successful man facing the challenge of a changing world must be a "maverick, a dreamer, a tough-minded, impractical realist," reflects this thinking in his work.

"This isn't the time to retreat, to become part of the silent majority or to look for snug harbors," he stated.

Instead, Boyd feels significant progress improving academic processes can be achieved if students, faculty, administrative officials and alumni work together.

Boyd, who received a master of law degree and a doctor of juridical science from the University of Michigan, practiced law in Minneapolis for two years before joining the University of Iowa's faculty in 1954. Working his way up the academic ladder, Boyd was an instructor, assistant professor, associate professor and was promoted to full professor in 1961. In 1964 he served as associate dean of the College of Law.

Boyd insists that human rights are the most fundamental issue of our times: "It is the primary problem underlying our international, national and even local differences."

Serving his philosophy, Boyd was the first chairman of the University of Iowa's Human Rights Committee — an assignment, he said, that was "one of the most rewarding in my 15 years at the University."

Boyd has also been active in both the Iowa and American bar associations as well as the American Association for the United Nations, the Iowa Committee on Educational Coordination, the Committee on Institutional Cooperation (CIC), the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant College and the Iowa City chapter of the United Nations Association.

In addition to community commitments, Boyd has written articles and monographs on international, decedents; estates and workmen's compensation law. Two of the articles received awards of merit from New York City's Consular Law Society.

Believing that student unrest deserves top consideration, Boyd says it is vital to determine the basis of student complaints, which among them are legitimate and which are not.

"Each of us resists change," he stated, "for we dislike trading the comfort of security for the discomfort of the unknown."

ALUMNUS LINKS DNA WITH SPACE

World famed heart transplant surgeon, Dr. Christiaan Barnard '58MSMed '58PhD testified as a star witness before the House Subcommittee on Space Science and Applications to request that scientific medical experiments with DNA, the recently discovered "life building block" substance, be incorporated into the United States' biological satellite research flight program.

Barnard stated before the Subcommittee that important breakthroughs in immunology against diseases might come out of research with DNA in the weightless condition of space. Proposing a program of experiments which could be included in a planned 21-day biosatellite mission, Barnard suggested organ transplants in living mammals during a space flight might lead to new information about DNA.

"If cells in weightlessness lose some of their discrimination in regard to their own character, it is possible that they will discriminate less sharply against cells from another organism. If so, can we then find ways to disturb the integrating influence of gravity on earth. Perhaps we can solve rejection on earth," Dr. Barnard commented.

THE 12th USAF Hospital in Cam Ranh Bay, South Vietnam, would be a dismal place if it weren't for Sharon H. Leverson '67MED, one of four hospital workers assigned by the Red Cross.

Miss Leverson coordinates medically-approved recreation activities such as ping pong, table games and lounge activities for more advanced patients. Sharon and the other Red Cross staff visit the wards daily with refreshments, reading material and attending to special requests.

On occasion Sharon's services are quite special. For example, a patient who had suffered amputation of both arms wanted to read a book. "I rigged up a coat hanger stand on his bed and gave him a pencil," she explained. "We placed the book in the stand and he turned the pages with the pencil in his mouth."

Letter writing is Sharon's biggest job. Many times the patient either doesn't want to write home or doesn't know how to talk about his injury to his parents or wife. In serious cases, the patient sometimes finds it hard to accept the reality of his situation, rejects his illness and is loath to contact his family. This is where Sharon's work begins — to improve morale and relieve the tensions of depression, defeatism and boredom that often accompany illness.

Most of Sharon's patients come directly from the battlefields still wearing their mud-smudged uniforms. Recognizing the need for personal articles, Sharon hands out Red Cross ditty bags and comfort kits in familiar blue and white boxes.

Sharon often receives smiles of thanks and appreciation and grateful GI's long remember her kindness. As one GI wrote after he had been evacuated to Japan:

"My mother always taught me to say thank you. This ditty bag and comfort kit was the nicest thing that has been given to me since I arrived here. I'm sorry I was asleep when you came."
