Wartime readjustments . . . #8

BEFORE MOTHER GOES MARKETING, THE M'ARGLES ALWAYS CALL A KITCHEN CONFERENCE TO FIGURE COUPON POINTS

AMERICANS are willingly adjusting themselves to wartime rationing, but every one will be happier when the need is over.

The burden is heaviest on Mother. She's getting a taste of the severe budgeting that could become permanent, if she were left with inadequate life insurance.

No man wants to ration his family for life—for lack of life insurance. With taxes and War Bonds, money for life insurance may be hard to save—but the effort is doubly worth while in wartime!

For life insurance premium dollars are fighting dollars. Through investment in basic war industries—and in Government Bonds—premium dollars support the war program, combat inflation, and provide protection for American families.

Talk things over today with a New England Mutual representative . . . so your family won't be rationed in the post-war world!

New England Mutual contracts meet present-day needs because:

- 1 DIVIDENDS begin at the end of the first year.
- 2 CASH VALUES begin at the end of the second year.
- 3 A PREMIUM LOAN is available beginning with the second annual premium.

Call another kind of conference!

A little study makes ration coupons go farther—and makes insurance dollars go farther, too.

But you don't need an adding machine, an abacus, and a family huddle to readjust your wartime insurance program. One able underwriter is enough.

A number of them are listed below. They're alumni of your college and they talk your language. They are also trained representatives of the First Mutual Life Insurance Company Chartered in America.

Out of their experience you'll get practical, constructive suggestions. They'll help you make the most of your limited life insurance dollars—help you protect your present policies with premium loans if necessary. Call an insurance conference and check your protection now when you need it most.

Classes Plan Reunions

THE annual Alumni Day program will be held on the campus on Friday, June 11. Cancellation of the occasion this year was considered, but several of the reunion classes indicated a desire to meet on the campus even though the attendance might be cut down by travel limitations and other factors related to the war. The commencement exercises will be held in Memorial stadium on Saturday evening, June 12.

Some of the traditional features of Alumni Day will be eliminated including the general dinner in the evening. In its place, however, a program for all alumni will be held in the Union ballroom at 8:15 o'clock. Judge Paul Carroll '18, will preside and the program will include a talk by President Walter C. Coffey. Preceding this meeting, the members of reunion classes will dine in the Union cafeteria.

The Minnesota Alumnae Club will hold its annual Alumni Day luncheon for members of the earlier classes in the Union. This is always a delightful occasion and well attended. Following the luncheon, the class of 1888 will hold a reunion meeting for which Albert Graber is making arrangements.

The fifty-year class, 1893, has been honored in that a member, Dr. Albert C. Knudsen, dean emeritus of the School of Theology, Boston University, will give the Baccalaureate address in Northrop auditorium on June 6 at 11:00 a.m. General reunion plans for the class are being made by Dr. John Walker Powell. Members of the 1898 Law class will meet for dinner on June 10 at the home of John Cochrane Sweet, 1912 Girard Avenue S., Minneapolis. Other members of the Law committee are Edward Welles Hawley, Charles S. Deaver and William J. Stevenson.

Reunion plans for the class of 1898 are being made by Perley Davis and for 1903 by Mrs. H. S. Lamberton (Elizabeth McVeigh). The class of 1902, of which Paul E. von Kuster and Caroline Crosby are the officers, will hold its annual meeting in the Union on Alumni Day. Rewey Belle Inglis and Arthur Larkin are in charge of the plans for the 1908 reunion while Professor William Anderson is chairman of the 1913 reunion committee. The announcement of the class of 1918 reunion plans appears on page 423. This is reunion year for all classes whose numerals end in three and eight and the plans for the younger reunion groups will be announced later.

Cover

Shown on the cover this month is a view of the color guard of the Naval ROTC. These students are being trained on the campus to assume responsibilities as officers. The men of this ROTC unit marched in the annual Cap and Gown Day procession and served as a cordon of honor through which the lines of seniors in caps and gowns marched into Northrop auditorium on May 13.

Appropriations

THE general maintenance appropriation for the University of Minnesota for each year of the coming biennium was set at $3,390,000 by the state legislature. The measure as originally passed by the House, allowed the University $3,852,275 for each year but this figure was increased in the considerations in the Senate and in the conference committee which reconciled House and Senate differences in figures. The legislature also approved the request for funds for a new Mechanical-Aeronautical Engineering Building.

During the biennium which will end on June 30 of this year the maintenance appropriation of the University has been $3,620,000 a year. In the statement of needs presented to the legislature by the Board of Regents, it was requested that the University be allotted $3,997,000 a year for the coming two-year period to meet the rising costs of operation.

Victory Gardens

The University has made a contribution to the Victory Garden campaign by turning over its property in south Minneapolis near the Dowling School for the use of staff members and residents of the area who wish to raise their own radishes and other garden produce. The 40-acre tract was given to the University by the Eustis family as the site of a hospital for crippled children. Nineteen acres of the area are suitable for cultivation and have been marked off into about 70 individual garden plots.

The arrangements for the allocation of the plots and the preparation of the land have been made by a committee including Harry L. Wilson, engineer in the Buildings and Grounds department; Miles Kersten, instructor in highway engineering; G. Ray Higgins, director of Coffman Union; Beryl Blatt, highway engineer, and Raymond Lasch, instructor in engineering.

The enthusiastic gardeners opened their project with appropriate ceremony at a mass meeting on the site at which Dr. William Holman, the head of Buildings and Grounds, was the speaker. About 50 residents of the area, in addition to the staff members of the University, have indicated their interest in the enterprise.

Delegate

Miss Josephine Schain '07L; '08LL.M., has been designated by President Roosevelt as a delegate to the United Nations conference on food and agriculture being held at Hot Springs, Va. Following several years of newspaper work, Miss Schain became associated with Carrie Chapman Catt in the campaign for woman suffrage and later was director of the department of international relations, League of Women Voters. She has also served as president of the National Council, Girl Scouts of America. Miss Schain is prominent in many women's organizations dealing with international affairs, particularly the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War, of which she is chairman.

1908 Reunion

The Class of 1908 will hold its 35th reunion dinner at the Francis Drake Hotel June 11 at six o'clock, with due opportunity to reminisce, before adjourning to the general alumni program at 8:15. Arthur E.

Larkin is chairman of the committee. Because of travel conditions, letters will be sent to Twin City members only, but anyone in the '08 class is invited to come. Out-of-town members may write to the secretary, Rewey Belle Inglis, 2436 Bryant Ave. South, Minneapolis, if they are planning to attend.

Change

The traditional Mother's Day program on the campus was not held this year because of transportation difficulties and the use of the food service facilities in Coffman Union by the army. Normally, the mothers of students who are guests of the University on this traditional occasion each year attend a banquet in the Union at which the president and other members of the staff are speakers. Civilian use of the dining facilities of the Union is now limited in view of the fact that the several hundred men of the army air force pre-flight school receive their three meals a day in the building. With the formal program cancelled this year, President Coffey sent a personal greeting to the mothers of all students enrolled in the University.

Teachers

Where to find qualified teachers to fill the many positions which are open in the public schools of the state is now the major concern of the Bureau of Recommendations in the College of Education. Last year the bureau, which is headed by Clifford P. Archer, placed 281 members of the graduating class and 393 alumni in teaching positions. Forty-six of these positions were on college faculties. Students and alumni who register with the Bureau of Recommendations are charged four dollars for the service.

The calls for teachers from the schools of the state are now coming in at a rapid rate while the number of available candidates for the positions is limited. The most critical teacher shortages in the order of greatest demand are in (1) industrial arts, trade education, physics and chemistry; (2) men's physical education, commercial education, mathematics, women's physical education, history and social studies, library work, music, agricultural education; (3) elementary education and home economics education.

Education Institute

The Minnesota Alumnae Club is to be commended for its sponsorship of the Institute on Education in a Changing World which was held in the Center for Continuation Study on May 8. Educational and cultural problems of vital importance to the present and the future of the nation were discussed by six outstanding speakers. The speakers were President Walter C. Coffey, Wesley E. Peik, dean of the College of Education; T. R. McConnell, associate dean of the College of Science, Literature, and the Arts; Theodore C. Blegen, dean of the Graduate School, Albert J. Lobb of Rochester, a member of the Board of Regents, and Richard R. Price, director of the General Extension Division.

The chairman of the Institute committee was Mrs. Frank M. Warren, former member of the Board of Regents. The other members of the committee were Mrs. Royal M. Chaoman, Mrs. Walter C. Coffey, Miss Rewey Belle Inglis, Miss Emily Kneubuhl, Mrs. C. A. McKinlay, J. M. Nolte, Mrs. Gunnar H. Nordbye, Dean Wesley E. Peik and E. B. Pierce.

Women Engineers

A second group of women in training as engineering aides will come to the campus in June. At the University for the past several months have been nearly 100 girls who are enrolled in the special training course in aeronautical engineering sponsored by the Curtiss-Wright Corporation. These girls live in Shevlin Hall with their tuition and all expenses paid by the Curtiss-Wright company.

Students take an active part in all the campaigns which are conducted as a part of the war program of the nation. President Coffey officially opened the campus war bond and stamp drive by pinning a corsage of war stamps on one of the workers, Judy Ireland '45.

The group to arrive in June will be sponsored by the Pratt and Whitney aircraft division of the United Aircraft Corporation. The course will extend over 48 weeks after which the women will be assigned to duties in subordinate engineering work in the plants of the sponsoring company. The instruction in these special courses is given in the Institute of Technology.

His wife lives in Dallas, Tex.

Lieut. George Colarich '39Ed, of Coleraine, Minn., one of a group of 15 that shot down 28 Japanese planes over two months ago, figured in a daring rescue after a recent patrol over Burma. Lieutenant Colarich was saved by another Minnesota flier, Capt. John Svenningsen, when his engine failed and he was forced to bail out on a return trip to India. Emergency supplies were dropped to him and he signaled with a Very pistol that he was safe; then he was taken back to the home base. Lieutenant Colarich has been overseas for nine months.

Headlines and History

By PRESIDENT WALTER C. COFFEY

This is a condensation of the address given by President Coffey on the occasion of the farewell dinner accorded Governor Harold E. Stassen '29L, on April 26 by forty-eight organizations in the state. The dinner was held in the ballroom of Coffman Union. On April 27, Governor Stassen resigned his state position to leave for the Great Lakes Naval Training Station to report for active duty as a lieutenant commander in the United States Naval Reserve. He was serving his third term as governor of Minnesota. The toastmaster at the dinner was Johnny McGovern '11L.

IF YOU had been living in the city of Saint Paul during the spring of 1907 you would, in all probability, have gone to your door on Saturday, the thirteenth of April, to pick up your customary newspaper. It had been a hard and trying spring. On that very day, for example, you would have read that the Northwest once more had been caught by a belated winter. "This community," so it stated, "has been grumbling on the weather the past week or so," as if grumbling on Minnesota weather was a news-worthy subject, even in 1907.

Now the remarkable thing is that you would not have found one word about the birth of our guest of honor of this evening! He had been born that day, and not a line of type recorded the fact! Both the Pioneer Press and the Dispatch overlooked completely that a new and vigorous personage had arrived!

As a matter of fact, it was not until a whole week had passed that the Governor first made the press. You'll find the historic item on Monday, April 22, recorded in the birth statistics column of the Dispatch: "Mrs. W. Stasen, boy." No name, no mention that the baby had a suggestion of reddish hair, not even the customary "mother and baby are both doing well"—much less any reference to how the father was doing. And worst of all, the name Stassen was mis-spelled, with only one "s." Thus, in complete anonymity, our friend and associate first appeared in print.

My reference to newspapers in what I have just said was not intended only as a means of light introduction, nor was it merely a matter of chance. Rather, it was deliberately calculated, for I am of the conviction that the lives of men cannot be disassociated from the times in which they live. It, therefore, seems to me appropriate that I should, in attempting to make certain observations that are pertinent to this occasion, look briefly, if sketchily, at the world into which Harold Stassen was born just thirty-six years ago this month. And if we can follow some of the changes that have taken place in that world during three and a half decades, we shall be in a better position to understand and interpret some of the problems that confront us today.

The Legislature of that session was concerned with liquor problems. The House had passed a bill to extend the primary system to all state offices. One other item suggests the relative simplicity of the World of April, 1907. The Legislature was fretting about automobiles, and it heard a report from a special committee on automobile registration. This is the way the Pioneer Press summarized it: "Automobiles must not pass teams, animals, or persons on foot at a greater rate of speed than eight miles an hour. The speed must be reduced at crossings, while passing churches during the usual hours of worship, or while passing schools at school hours. A maximum speed of eighteen miles an hour is provided. . . . Chauffeurs, after running over people, must stop and give their number."

There were but two or three straws in the wind, that get in our eye as we glance backward. A famous English editor, W. T. Stead, was in this country crusading for the cause of international peace, and his fervor had aroused stampede enthusiasm at a meeting in Pittsburgh on the day Harold Stassen was born. A minor item called attention to starving millions in China who needed America's help; and the Kaiser, it was said, had travelled to Denmark to confer with the Czar of Russia.

The years of Harold Stassen's infancy were, taking the nation as a whole, calm and unruffled. Europe existed, but it was a long way off. The Orient was, for most people, as remote as a dream. No radios were undermining national frontiers; no moving pictures brought to mass audiences some conception of a distant world; no airplanes were shrinking the map and building a new geography. There were enough machines and mechanical devices to provide for a comfortable life, but not so many as to complicate the daily round of existence.

The gentility and complacency of life so characteristic of the first years of the century were transformed by the chaos of war. The war was fought, and won. The world, we dreamed, had been made safe for democracy. And yet, somehow, the great Democracy—our United States—failed to grasp the simple truth: That a new kind of world had come into being; a world in which new concepts of time and space were to dominate, and in which a new order of international relations must prevail if peace were to endure. The old order had passed, yet we as a nation resisted the fact. It is one of the tragedies of history that the fundamental truths embodied in the League of Nations idea became merely a noble experiment rather than a glorious reality. For that failure, we see now, meant that the conflicts and struggles of 1914-18 were inescapably to be repeated at a later date.

The year 1923, it seems to me as I look back upon it, might aptly be termed "the year of frustration." Yes, the war had been won, but already the flowers of victory were wilting. Men still refused to face the changes that were transpiring around them. It is, in retrospect, difficult to understand why this was so.

Classes began for Harold Stassen at the University of Minnesota on Wednesday, September 26, 1923. It was unquestionably a momentous day for all of us. This point requires elaboration.

Events of 1923

On Sunday, the twenty-third of September, the world was startled with the news that collapse in Germany was imminent. The struggle in the Ruhr was over—a passive resistance that had cost a hundred billion dollars and was bringing the German republic to the brink of chaos. "Chancellor Stresemann and His Aids," said the headlines, "Yield to Allies to Save Country from Economic Disaster and Revolution." Editorially, too, there were hints that all was not well in Europe or at home. Said the Minneapolis Journal: "Throughout Europe it is the twilight of the emperors, but the dawn of the dictators. The war to make the world safe for democracy does not on its conclusion find that democracy, made safe, spreads."

If on Thursday morning, September 27, as Harold Stassen came to the campus to attend the freshman convocation, he had stopped to buy a newspaper, this is what he would have read: "Dictator Named for All Germany—Gessler Given Wide Powers to Prevent Civil War in Reich—Whole Nation Virtually Placed Under Martial Law as Result of Bavaria Plotting." And then, notice this, "Hitler, Fascist Chief, Plans March on Berlin."

If Harold Stassen did read of these upsurings and rebellions, he must have pondered deeply at the words of Lotus Delta Coffman who spoke that morning to the incoming class. "In these parlous times," said President Coffman, "with the world rent with discord and dissension, and with thousands of panaceas and intellectual nostrums being laid upon the doorstep of institutions of higher learning, as well as advocated for society, it is all the more important that universities rediscover and re-emphasize their true function—truth-seeking and truth-impartment. In this truth-seeking. (President Coffman continued) the university period should be regarded as an integral part of life, the part in which the habits, standards of judgment, and attitudes of mind shall be so developed in truth-seeking that students shall remain truth-seekers for life."

On the following day the world learned, and I quote the Journal, that "a hundred attempts by Herr Hitler's fascisti to assemble in the specified beer halls of Munich were broken up by the police."

On the following day one also learned that three members of the United States senate, who had spent a summer in Europe, had returned to the country, declaring that while they had originally supported the covenant of the League of Nations, their trip abroad had brought them to a point where they had much less enthusiasm for it. America, it was implied, might be better off to let the rest of the world alone.

Changing World

This was the changed world, then, in which Harold Stassen began his academic career. The other day I went to the office where our student records are kept, and drew forth the folder labelled Harold Stassen. I was curious to know what courses a boy would choose who had entered the University of Minnesota at a time when international stability was starting to crumble. Perhaps you are curious, too, and while we do not ordinarily divulge publicly the records of a student, under present circumstances I do not feel I violate any confidences. These are the subjects Harold Stassen took—mark them well: Rhetoric, Public Speaking, Argument and Debate, Spanish, English, Introduction to Political Science, American Government, Administrative Law, Municipal Government, Financial Systems, International Organization, World Politics. And, of course, Physical Education, and ROTC, basic and advanced. The grades I won't tell you, beyond saying that they were good ones, and, with me you will not be surprised that in Argument and Debate, Financial Systems, and Administrative Law, the record was one of straight A's. (There were many other A's, too.)

These courses were, to be sure, in preparation for further study in Law;

but they were more than that, for as time has shown, they were preparation for understanding the world in which we are living, and the kinds of problems that world is now thrusting upon us. And the study of books, it is well to point out, was being supplemented by contact with the work-a-day world through jobs that brought to the young student a practical understanding of how men and women earn a living.

Three days before Harold Stassen received his bachelor of arts degree, Lindbergh returned home in triumph, and Chamberlin and Levine landed in Berlin in their non-stop flight from New York. Lindbergh was not the first man to fly the Atlantic, but his achievement dramatized the new possibilities that lay ahead in transoceanic communication. It should have been a symbol of new things to come, of old barriers removed, of new bonds drawing the nations of the world together. But it was primarily to a feat of personal courage and daring that the country responded with unbounded admiration. It worshipped a new hero, rather than searched for the true significance of his heroism. This is not surprising, for it was in all things an era of enthusiasm and expansiveness. "Crop Prospects Soar in the Northwest," headlined the Tribune. United States Steel was listed at 133, the market had a "tone of confidence." Calvin Coolidge, leaving Washington for a vacation in the Black Hills, urged "constructive thrift." A New York brokerage firm rewarded a former messenger boy with a $220,000 seat on the New York stock exchange.

Tensions

But there were clouds. Inside Russia there were deep-down murmurings that were to be reflected in purges. Harold Stassen received his degree on Monday, June 13, 1927. On that same day one read: "The Soviets Executed 28 More in New Terror." And the Soviet War Minister publicly charged that England had so stirred feelings against Russia that a class war loomed. The newspapers, too, were telling of attacks by one Colonel William Mitchell on what he termed Navy conservatism in the failure to see that the airplane completely changed the strategy of naval warfare and the importance of the battleship.

You will find the full name, Harold Edward Stassen, in the printed list of graduates. That, at least, was better than the announcement of his birth! Yet perusal of the newspapers of the day suggests that although the commencement address on the subject of "Personal Honor," was delivered by a distinguished educator, what he had to say probably made little impression upon the volatile throngs who were cheering "The Lone Eagle." "Personal honor," said Dr. Suzzallo, "is a trait most necessary to the safety and continuation of democratic society." The world should have listened, and heeded; but the world was too excited, too enmeshed in its own superlatives, too pre-occupied with other values. It went on cheering Lindbergh; it did not take to heart even what he had had to say. "I feel," warned Lindbergh, "that America would do well to study earnestly the present high state of European aviation." The country was in no mood for warnings, in no mood to regard the signs that were pointing to troubles ahead. Wrote the editor of the Tribune, "The opening of the 45th session of the League of Nations Council, which occurred this week at Geneva, found the world unexcited." Unexcited indeed! The whirlwind was already gathering momentum!

Harold Stassen returned to the University to study law. When he completed that training in 1929, Herbert Hoover was president of the United States. It had just been announced that Ramsay MacDonald would visit Washington in the interest of armament reduction.

It was only the voice of the president of the University, speaking to the graduates, that gave hint that not all was as perfect with the world as might be. "One has only to look about him," said President Coffman, "to realize that in this new world there is a conflict of great intensity and vast proportions. It is the conflict between freedom, initiative and independence on the one hand, and direction, submission, and control on the other. It is the conflict between the individual and the organization, and it presents a dilemma as old as the human race, but raised now to a magnitude and power never before witnessed by men. What the future holds is largely a question of the attitude of mind."

Those were prophetic words, as time was to prove. The spirit that animated the truth that President Coffman spoke was contagious; that may have left its impression. At least the career of the man we are honoring tonight has progressed in the tradition of that spirit.

Of that career little needs to be said, for it is recent history. I would merely recall that the world in which that career was being fashioned, was becoming week by week more confused, unsettled and disturbed. As the citizens of this state went to the polls in November of 1938, to elect Harold Stassen governor, events were happening elsewhere that chilled men's souls. "Nazi Storm Palace of Munich Cardinal" wailed the headlines. "Nazi Mobs Fire, Loot Jewish Stores." "The democracies," shouted Hitler, who was now in power, "are not to be trusted." "I speak," he continued, "as a peace-loving man, and I have decided to give the Reich a defense force that will be conducive to peace being kept."

But not even the fact that the Quintuplets were to be seen in a film at a Saint Paul movie house on that election day could completely distract attention of the serious reader of the daily press from the tensions the world was engendering. "Japanese Blast Deeper into China." "Paris Shooting Rouses Germany." "Spanish Loyalists Repulse Insurgents." "Ford Fights NLRB." These headlines were on the same pages that told of Harold Stassen's victory.

What of the Future?

And now, in 1943, the Governor becomes the Lieutenant Commander, and lays down the cares and responsibilities of the highest office in this state.

It does seem to me that this story of the past that I have been recalling, linked as it was at every stage with the life of our guest, contains significances that should not be overlooked. There is a lesson to be learned, and which must be learned if we are not to repeat again the mistakes and the follies of the past three decades. Truly, as President Coffman told Harold Stassen's graduating class, "What the future holds is largely a question of the attitude of mind." When Harold Stassen was born, the airplane was but a toy. When Harold Stassen graduated, the nation went wild because one man had flown alone across the deep expanse of the Atlantic. As Harold Stassen leaves his high office, 500 trans-oceanic transport flights a week are routine occurrences. The world into which Harold Stassen was born is gone forever. So also is the world of the year he graduated from the University. Do we, in our attitudes of mind, comprehend this fully? Do we, in thought and action, strive to adapt ourselves to the multitudinous and all-pervasive changes that have taken place? Or do we blindly resist? Who can doubt how fundamental those changes are when he surveys, even as briefly as I have done this evening, what has been happening since the early years of the century? Yet the danger is that the minds of men—those attitudes which President Coffman stressed—have not undergone a parallel adaptation and adjustment. The problems of 1943 cannot be resolved successfully by minds steeped in the attitudes of 1907 any more than 1907 automobiles can meet the automotive transportation requirements of 1943. Unless men as individuals are sensitive and alert to the transformations that have created the new environment in which they live, they will fail in their attempts to live successfully. Unless groups of men, especially those groups we call nations, likewise recognize that new conditions necessitate new ways of cooperation, we shall be doomed to endless years of bitter struggle and chaos. Nations today can be great only as their collective attitudes are tolerant, only as their outlook is inclusive, and only as they are characterized by cooperative-mindedness. It was failure to recognize and act on these simple, but now fundamental, premises that led to the failures after the last world war. It is the possibility that once more we shall fail to accept these simple truths that fills my heart with dread today. To understand the meaning and the significance of the changes in the world in which we have lived, is to my mind the paramount obligation of the modern citizen. The key to successful living in the future is a thorough understanding of the past out of which we have emerged. I believe this may be achieved in some measure by a device as simple as I have employed this evening, whereby the life of one man has been set against the panorama of history, and studied in terms of the impact of history upon that life.

What I am saying, stated in another way, is that our social salvation, individually and collectively, in the last analysis is dependent upon the possession of a sound historical perspective. It is not heresy to suggest that those who now talk glibly about post-war planning should, as basic preparation for the tasks they are setting themselves, become thoroughly grounded in life as it has been lived. It is not enough to cry, "The past is dead; long live the present," much less, "Long live the future." Flexibility of mind comes not with throwing off the shackles of the past; paradoxically, it is acquired by a mastery of the past. Only in this way can the indispensable perspective be achieved in terms of which sound plans for the future are to be laid. History does not repeat itself, but its lessons have application in meeting what lies ahead.

These observations are not irrelevant to our purposes this evening, for it has always seemed to me that among the qualities that characterize the man we are honoring are the understanding and the sensitivity of mind that prevail because he possesses a perspective that enables him to see the problems of today in the light of the past, and hence in the light of the probable future. He possesses what might be termed an imaginative insight into our course of history.

Stated in the most general of terms, two great problems face this country, and the world. On our ability to cope with them successfully depends the future hope of this nation, and of all nations.

First, is the problem within our country of reconciling the tendency toward centralization of control over human life with the traditional freedom that democracy assumes for the individual. A thousand examples in the governmental sphere alone will suggest themselves to your minds. How, we ask, can we remain free men when the logic of regulation presses with irresistible compulsion toward further and further regulation? The proverbial island on which the inhabitants made a living by taking in each other's washings has a modern equivalent in the danger we face that half of our people will ultimately be engaged in policing the regulations that are imposed upon the conduct of the other half of us.

The second problem is merely a counterpart of the first on an international scale. How is the world to reconcile the incompatibilities inherent in the two ideologies now struggling for domination? How can the kind of a world free men want be achieved when half of the world is not free?

I merely raise the questions, and I shall not attempt to answer them. But I would suggest that the answers are dependent upon two things—and this brings me to the moral and conclusion of all that I have been saying.

Integrity and Leadership

Two things are indispensable if we are to surmount the difficulties now confronting us. First, there must be knowledge, there must be facts, there must be understanding, there must be comprehension of the nature of the problems. If you but know the truth, the truth shall make you free. There is no substitute for knowledge of the truth. Forever, it must be the blood and breath of freedom itself. As I go from my office each day, I like to look up and read the inspiring inscription cut in the stone facade of Northrop Memorial Auditorium:

*The University of Minnesota
Founded in the Faith That Men Are Enobled by Understanding
Dedicated to the Advancement of Learning and the Search for Truth
Devoted to the Instruction of Youth and the Welfare of the State.*

We should be proud those words are on a building of the state university of Minnesota—your university. But in a symbolical sense they are found on every college and university in this country, for it is upon the achievements and accomplishments of education from the kindergarten to the university, that we must ultimately rest our hope for attaining a better world. "I think," wrote Thomas Jefferson, "by far the most important bill in our whole code is that for the diffusion of knowledge among the people. No other sure foundation can be devised for the preservation of freedom and happiness." It is not without significance that the schools, and especially the colleges and universities, are among the first institutions destroyed by the dictator countries in the course of their conquests and subjugations. Ignorant men, they know, can be enslaved; but education is the safeguard of freedom. No investment yields a dividend more precious than that which the democratic countries have made in their schools, for freedom is a priceless dividend.

Our second need is for enlightened leadership, and this is a matter not unrelated to the need for continuous support of education. For, from what sources do leaders come forth? We can personalize the answer to this question. We are talking tonight primarily of Harold Stassen. His was a fine endowment by birth, but the abilities, the capacities, and the potentialities that came to him by inheritance required discipline and training. In the home, in the church, a part of that process was carried forward. But it was in the schools of this state that the foundations of knowledge were laid that have made his distinguished career possible. There is nothing in which a democratic people should take more pride and satisfaction than in the fact that through their support of public education the quality of leadership has been nurtured and developed in such a man as Harold Stassen. We mention him particularly, because we are honoring him this evening; but in a more significant sense he is but the example, or the symbol, of the larger truth that upon education and good leadership our future as a nation depends. We do not know what that future will be; nor can we foretell what part Harold Stassen will play in fashioning it. From the pages of the past I have quoted newspaper headlines that have told of the world as it has been thus far during Harold Stassen's lifetime. I will now leave it to your imaginations to write the headlines as they are to be from this time forward. But of this we can be certain—that wherever the future may find Harold Stassen, the imprint of his personality, his training, and his experience will be felt. The University of Minnesota is proud to number him among its graduates. The people of Minnesota are proud to regard him as one of them. We can admire him for all that he has accomplished thus far in life, and for the decision he has now made to enter the service of his country in time of war. And as he enters the Navy and leaves the state he has served so well, we can join in saying, Good-luck, and Godspeed!

Class of 1918 Will Meet on June 11

WHEN Brigadier General John Ernest Dahlquist '18, former deputy chief of staff in the headquarters of General Dwight Eisenhower in London, visited Minneapolis in April, he was entertained at the Minneapolis Club by a group of his classmates. At the picture, left to right, are Seeman I. Kaplan, Jr., Frank Mayer, General Dahlquist, Charles M. Denny, Ward H. Olmsted and Ralph Beal.

Other members of the class present were Paul Dunnavan, Charles L. Grandin, Jr., Paul Jaroscak, Clare I. Long, Irving Luger, Fred Ossanna, John M. Regan, Mildred Way, Harold Wood and Arnold D. Wyman. Also present were Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce, Professor Edward S. Bade of the Law School, Earl J. Blackburn, Eugene B. Hanson, Reed Hickerson, John Tillotson, Frank Tupa and Arnulf Ueland.

This reunion of several members of the class which left the University twenty-five years ago this spring served as a preliminary to the Twenty-fifth reunion of the entire class which will be held in Coffman Union on Friday, June 11. There was a question as to whether reunions of classes would be held in connection with the annual Alumni Day program on the day preceding commencement this year. Members of the committee of the class of 1918, however, decided that modified reunion plans should be made. By tradition, the twenty-five year group is in charge of the plans for the general Alumni Day program.

Ralph B. Beal is general chairman of the reunion committee and other officers are Ruth Reisberg Shafer, vice-chairman; Clarence Finger, treasurer, and Muriel Fairbanks Steward, secretary.

Because of the food and service situation the traditional class luncheon will not be included in the program for the day. The dinner in the evening will be served in the Union cafeteria rather than in banquet style in the ballroom. The program beginning at 2:30 will include tours of the campus and a bowling contest in the Union. At 3:30 there will be a reception for the alumni of the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics in the Union at University Farm. At 4:00 o'clock a tea and general get-together will be held in the Fine Arts Room in Coffman Union and from there the class members will go to the cafeteria for dinner at 6:00. At 8:15 the members of the reunion group will join other alumni at the general alumni meeting in the ballroom. The program will include a talk by President Walter C. Coffey. Judge Paul Carroll '18, will preside. On Saturday afternoon, June 21, a Class of 1918 golf tournament will be held at the University golf course.

Interesting is the class Military Affairs Committee which includes Brigadier General Dahlquist, Brigadier General Stanley R. Mickelson '18, and Captain Floyd H. Emery '18.

First Woman Professor Is Honored

A BILL providing for the installation of a bust of the late Maria L. Sanford, member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota from 1880 to 1909, in Statuary Hall in the national capital in Washington was passed by the state legislature and signed by Governor Harold E. Stassen on April 14. She was one of the best known women of her time and attained national recognition as an educator and a public speaker. Through this action of the legislature she will be memorialized in the national capital along with other great Americans who have made lasting contributions to the life of the nation.

Sanford Hall, residence for women students on the campus, was named in her honor. Her name is engraved on the memorial tablet in the foyer of Northrop auditorium as one of the "Builders of the Name" of the University of Minnesota. In 1909 when she retired from active teaching at the age of 72, she was invited by the senior class to deliver their commencement address and it was said to be the first time that a woman had been asked to make such an address at a major university. Perhaps the memorial which this truly great woman would have prized the most is the influence of her teaching and her life which persists in the minds and hearts of thousands of Minnesota students who were privileged to sit in her classes.

The late Oscar Firkins '84, professor of comparative literature in the University, once wrote of her:

Maria L. Sanford, who was a learner and a teacher in America for eighty years, had a temperament the precise opposite of all that one would naturally associate with learnership and teachership in that time and in that country. She had a jubilant, turbulent spirit, fitted to guide a crusade or head an insurrection, about as circumspect as a projectile and about as tamable as a prairie fire; a poet could have pictured her as joining the dance of the Maenads on Mount Cithaeron or the descent of the dauntless Valkyrie from the clouds to the corpse-strewn battlefield.

A nature of this mould was born in Connecticut in 1836, born to poverty, to work, to family prayers, to austere manners, to a puritanic and inexorable code, born, finally, to sixty years of subjection to a teacher's routine and a teacher's decorum in the exacting and censorious

America of her day. What was the result? This woman embraced her limitations, turned restraint into opportunity, made wings out of fetters, found escape and room for her swift and daring spirit in those very elements of her destiny in which others of the same breed would have seen only handicap and bondage. In a college faculty she was almost the most orthodox member, and she was absolutely the most riotous.

Here is one verse of an original poem to Miss Sanford written by Professor Firkins on the occasion of her eightieth birthday in 1916 when she was honored at an all-University convocation:

"What name, said you? No, not 'Mary,'
Debonair, sedate, and chary,
Not 'Marie,' demure and wary,
Fits the presence I acclaim;
No, the thing I chant is bigger,
It is impetus and vigor,
Truculence it is and rigor,
It's a crisp and couchant trigger,
And 'Maria' is its name."

When the memorial tablets in Northrop auditorium were dedicated on February 16, 1933, the following tribute to Miss Sanford was given by Miss Gratia A. Countryman '89, former librarian of the Minneapolis Public Library:

She was called the best loved woman of Minnesota. Men respected her courage and integrity; women loved her gentle spirit and ready sympathy. Everyone admired and enjoyed her keen intellect and her delicious sense of humor. Our memory of her today is vivid. . . . She had a fixed belief that education should prepare one for living; that it should be as much concerned with character as culture.

She had a remarkable personality of vitality and vigor, a voice of rare purity and power, and a remarkable memory, especially for poetry. Her mind was stored with it. When she chose to spend the class hour repeating poem after poem in her musical voice it awakened in students their latent appreciation not only of poetry but of things high and noble. It was the genius of a great teacher that she could awaken and inspire her students.

Her marvelous voice was a great asset. All of her force, her earnestness, her humor, penetrated to her audience through the thrilling sweetness and power of her voice. She was in great demand as a speaker, and accepted lecture engagements throughout the State. She was a University Extension Department in her own person and doubtless contributed to the phenomenal growth of the University in the 80's and 90's. This enlargement of her sphere of teaching carried her influence far and wide. To do it she had to endure hardship and fatigue. But that was another of her outstanding characteristics, she never counted the cost to herself. Her students always found her ready to devote time and training, at whatever self-sacrifice of personal plans or needed rest. So selfish we were of her and so generous she was to us. Her abundant reward was in our successes.

Miss Sanford was born in Saybrook, Conn., December 19, 1836. Following graduation from a normal school, she taught in the public schools of that state for ten years before going to Coatesville, Pa., as superintendent of schools. For ten years she taught history, elocution, and rhetoric in Swarthmore College and was made professor. She came to the University of Minnesota in 1880 as assistant professor of rhetoric and elocution and was promoted to a full professorship in 1881. She retired from her formal teaching duties in 1909 but continued a schedule of speaking engagements until the time of her death in April, 1920, in Washington, D. C. She had been called to Washington to give an apostrophe to the flag at the opening of the congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Two days after her appearance before the D.A.R., she passed away in the home of Senator Knute Nelson.

Women in Education

Taking part in the state convention of Delta Kappa Gamma, society for women in education, held at The Leamington in Minneapolis on March 31, were Dr. Dora V. Smith '16; '19MA; '23Ph.D., professor of education, University; Dr. Marie Lien, assistant professor of art education, University; Margaret Thomson '12, Miller Vocational high school; Dr. Ella Callista Clark '29Ed; '30MA, '40Ph.D., Winona State Teachers' College; and Margaret Skinner '30-Ed. International understanding through education was the theme of the convention.

Birdella Ross '26Ed, of Edison high school, is state president of the group, which now has four chapters in Minnesota. Chairman of the convention was Mrs. Harington Beard, the former Eleanor Gardner, '20. Lenore Linehan '38Gr, of Roosevelt high school, was social chairman in charge of the birthday luncheon.

Minnesota Women

New Social Adviser . . .

. . . at Coffman Memorial Union on the campus is Hazle M. Chapman '32Ed, who is filling the vacancy in the social program consultants office left by Mrs. Mary Hamilton De Lapp '40MA, who left the University the first of May.

While a student at the University, Miss Chapman, whose home is Wolf Point, Mont., was president of Sanford Hall and active in WAA activities. After being graduated, she taught physical education for a number of years at the Itasca Junior College in Greenway, Minn.

In 1936, she became director of a girl's summer camp in the Adirondack mountains. She has also directed camps in Wyoming, Montana, Minnesota, Wisconsin and New York. In 1941 she returned to the University as director of the Union on the Agricultural campus. Last summer she was made superintendent of physical education and camping in the St. Louis county, Minn., schools.

First Commissions . . .

. . . as dietitians in the United States army went to Vivian Ory '34HE, formerly assistant dietitian in the University hospitals, and Helen M. Jberke '35HE, on March 6. Both young women, now second lieutenants, are the first dietitians in the army. Lieutenant Ory went to Camp Cook, Calif. She was formerly a dietitian for the state sanitariums at Hastings and Anoka. Her home was in Glendive, Mont.

"A Handbook for Women . . .

. . . going into war industries" is her description of the book Wanted: Women in War Industry, written by Mrs. Laura Nelson Baker '33Jour, of 1925 Colfax Ave. S., Minneapolis, and published by E. P. Dutton and Company.

Information in this volume on what to expect in war jobs, what to train for, how to dress, and where to find the best available jobs will help women who are thinking of entering war work. Beginning her book a few months ago, Mrs. Baker obtained her information for prospective women war workers by visiting war plants and quizzing representatives of various government bureaus. By arising at 5:00 a.m. daily to type out material and wedging a few paragraphs in between household duties, the book was written.

In North Africa . . .

. . . as a hospital recreation worker with the American Red Cross is Florence T. Stanton '33Ed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Stanton, 3532 Stevens Ave., Minneapolis. Word of her safe arrival was received recently. She had been in social recreation work for several years in New York and was in a group of 12 Red Cross workers who arrived at their overseas stations in North Africa.

Mrs. Coffey's Recognition Tea . . .

. . . on April 29 honored approximately 500 campus women outstanding in activities and scholarship. Sponsored by Cap and Gown, AWS senior council, this annual event was held at the home of President Walter C. Coffey.

With Mrs. Coffey in the receiving line were Mrs. Lotus D. Coffman, Second Officer Kathryn McWilliams '39Ag, of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, is assigned to the public relations office at First WAAC Training Center, Fort Des Moines, Iowa. Her rank is the equivalent of first lieutenant in the army. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. McWilliams of South St. Paul.

wife of the former University president; Elizabeth Johns, campus YWCA executive secretary; Barbara Clark '41Ed; '43Gr, assistant to the dean of women; and the presidents of the main and Ag campus women's organizations.

Music was provided by a string trio composed of Margaret Tanquary '43, Ellen Powell '44HE, and Sally Lee '45.

Hostesses were members of the AWS board and Mortar Board. Members of Cap and Gown assisted Mrs. Coffey with the arrangements. LaVonne Wagner '44B, was general chairman. In charge of invitations and the reception line were Martha Kennon '44, and Helen Dytere '44. Publicity was handled by Carol Burns '44.

On a Radio Program . . .

. . . in New York recently, Doris McFerran '35, was in a group of women who matched wits with an equal number of men. Miss McFerran, who is now doing magazine editorial writing, is a former president of Delta Phi Lambda, honorary creative writing fraternity, at the University.

At a Meeting . . .

. . . of the Twin Cities Alumnae Association of Kappa Delta sorority on April 10, Mrs. Donald K. Bacon (Willette Brandt '25), read a play. The committee in charge included Dorothy Strike '43, and Mmes. Earl M. Andereck (Leone Warmington '13), Tracey F. Tyler and Fred E. Nugent.

Newly elected officers of the association are Mrs. Tyler, St. Paul, president; Charlotte Smith '10Ed, and Miss Helen Forsyth of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Harold W. Krinkie (Frances Bendixen '37Ed), of St. Paul.

First Minneapolis Mother . . .

. . . to join the army nurse corps since rules were changed to permit women with children to enlist was Mrs. Casimira Specht '32, of 1101 West Twenty-eighth St. Mrs. Specht, who has been associated with the American Red Cross for 20 years, was to report for duty May 4 as a second lieutenant. A graduate of the Minnesota College of Law, Mrs. Specht has a son, George R. Specht '46, attending the University. Her husband, Capt. George A. Specht, is stationed at New Orleans, La.

1200 Seniors to Graduate

THE graduation season for the 1,200 members of the senior class was formally opened on May 13 with the holding of the annual Cap and Gown Day exercises. The senior leaders in the traditional Cap and Gown procession across the campus were Robert A. Larsen, senior class president, and Mary Boone, president of the Cap and Gown council of the Association of Women Students.

The Naval ROTC members formed a cordon of honor through which the seniors and the faculty marched into Northrop auditorium. The presentation of the class was made by its president, Robert A. Larsen, and the annual Cap and Gown Day address was given by President Coffey. President Coffey announced the election to honor societies and the other senior awards.

The baccalaureate services will be held in Northrop auditorium on Sunday, June 6 at 11:00 a.m. The address will be given by Dr. Albert C. Knudsen '93, dean emeritus of the School of Theology, Boston University. Commencement exercises for the class of 1943 will be held in Memorial Stadium on the evening of Saturday, June 12.

The senior class of 1943 will just barely get off the campus in time to make room for an incoming group of freshmen. Several of the major colleges of the University will admit their freshmen at the beginning of the Summer Session and current high school seniors who have planned to enter the University in September are urged to take up their college training in June. The commencement exercises will be held on Saturday, June 12, and the Summer term registration will begin on Monday, June 14 with classes scheduled to start on June 16.

The College of Science, Literature, and the Arts, the Institute of Technology, the College of Education, the School of Dentistry, the School of Nursing and the department of Medical Technology are among the units that will begin the year three months early for some or all students. With the expected arrival of a considerable number of freshman men for the Navy V-12 program and the probable assignment of Navy engineers for training at Minnesota, this program will cause a large increase in summer enrollment.

The School of Nursing is not admitting this year's high school graduates until fall but is taking college graduates for a special two and one-half year war curriculum, graduate nurses who wish to prepare for nursing administration, teach and supervision, and postgraduates who wish to take the one-year course in clinical procedure.

Law School

At one time there were 131 students in the Law School class which will be graduated in June but now there are only 10. Most of the 80 students who continue to attend classes in law are freshmen and sophomores and the school is now operating on the quarter system. Previously, all final examinations were taken at the end of the school year. Classrooms in the Law building are being used by army trainees.

Leaves Staff

Mrs. Jane S. Miller, director of the nine Cooperative student rooming houses for women on Beacon and Harvard Streets for the past three years, has resigned to take a new position in Washington, D. C. Through Civil Service, she received an appointment as director of one of the 12 new federal residences for women government workers in Washington. Mrs. Miller has three sons in the armed forces.

Officers

Laura Mae Peterson '44, is the new president of the Minnesota Foundation, student activity organization. Other officers are Jean Blomquist, secretary, and George Thompson, treasurer. Under a new constitution, the members of the board of directors are appointed by the all-University council.

Become Inactive

The petitions of 10 campus organizations to be declared inactive were approved by the Senate Committee on Student Affairs in April. The list includes five fraternities, Theta Xi, Zeta Psi, Chi Phi, Phi Sigma Kappa and Omega Psi Phi. The other organizations were Collegium Musicum, American Management Association, Scabbard and Blade, Mortar and Ball and the Cadet Officers Club.

A co-ed billiard team sponsored by the Union Board of Governors competed this month in the intercollegiate telegraphic meet for women arranged by the Association of College Unions. Left to right, Phyllis Wilkes, Mary Dealy, Manager Don Wright, Bob Christine, supervisor of the billiard room in Coffman Union, Polly Trost and Helen DeWar. In the men's competition a month ago, the Minnesota team won the national title.

Sports

IT IS certain that the program of intercollegiate sports competition will be greatly modified during the next school year with the possibility that regular schedules will be discontinued or, at least, drastically revised. The number of eligible men students is limited and travel facilities are restricted. Several of the larger schools in the country have already announced the discontinuance of regular intercollegiate competition and some Big Ten schools have considered such a move.

The Minnesota football squad has held its regular spring practice session under the direction of Dr. George Hauser and Lowell Dawson. On May 22, the final day of the training period, the annual spring game was held in Memorial stadium with the gate receipts going to the Red Cross. In the line-ups were 15 veterans who will be available for competition next fall unless they are called into service before that time. In the "Army" backfield directed by Coach Dawson were such well-known performers as Bob Sandberg at quarter, Vic Kulbitski at fullback and Red Williams and Herman Frickey at the halves. Veterans in the "Army" lines were Paul Mitchell, Dick Burk, Bill Aldworth, Bob Graiziger, Dick Jewett and Bob Solheim.

In his "Navy" backfield, Coach Hauser had two veterans, Bill Garnas and Bill Johnson, while the line included three lettermen, Captain Cliff Anderson, Chuck Dellago and Johnny Perko. Working with these veterans were several reserves and freshmen who will help to give Minnesota a good representation on the gridiron next fall if they are still in school.

Baseball

The activities of all Minnesota teams this spring has been marked by fine spirit. There has been plenty of hustle and fire and the Gopher athletes in intercollegiate competition have more than held their own in all sports.

The baseball team under Coach Dave McMillan has had a successful season and here are some interesting facts on the squad as prepared for the Alumnus by Jerry Kolander who

The Captains Cup, a national award, is spending its second year in Minnesota. It was awarded to Bruce Smith, 1941 Gopher football captain, and at the end of the 1942 season, Captain Dick Wildung was named the recipient. Recently, Lucius Smith '14, of Faribault, father of Bruce, turned the award over to Dick Wildung, as Dr. George Hauser looked on. (Minneapolis Star Journal Photo) is both athlete and sports writer: Unique in college baseball is the fact that Minnesota has three first-string catchers, the veterans Casey Dowling and Stuart Olson, and Freshman Hudson Mealy of Faribault.

The entire infield is composed of former high school and varsity basketball stars while the outfield is patrolled by former high school and Gopher football players. Leo Shields at first base, Howie Schutz at third and Butz Lehrman at shortstop, were all members of Coach Nordly's basketball team of this past winter, while Bob Johnson at second base, won his numerals in freshman basketball.

The football outfielders include Herb Hein, regular Gopher end; Earl Bruhn, freshman football numeral winner, and Jerry Kolander, Gopher reserve halfback. Pitching in front of this versatile group are Seniors Stan Kaess and Norm Gallup and Sophomore Gene Kelly. These three athletes form one of the best pitching staffs in the conference.

The Gophers have a record of eight won, three lost and one tie. The three losses are all in conference competition and give the Gophers a .500 average in the Big Ten standings.

In the season's opener, the Gophers drubbed Carleton college 16-1, but in the next two games, which were "road" games, they suffered from a case of Big Ten jitters and dropped a pair of games to Illinois.

The Gophers came back strong, however, and ran up a string of five victories over strong teams from Luther college, Iowa State college and Iowa University, last year's conference co-champions. Then Augsburg college caught the Gophers on a rainy day and held them to a seven-inning 0-0 tie.

At Wisconsin, the Gophers failed to hit in the clutches and lost the first game of a two-game series 2-1. The boys came back the next day, however, to knock the Badgers out of first place in the conference race by beating them 3-2 in a beautifully pitched four-hit game by Stan Kaess.

Sea Duty for Bierman

It has been announced that Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman will report for sea duty in June. Since entering upon active duty in the Marine Corps in January, 1942, the former Minnesota coach has been concerned with the setting up of a physical fitness program for naval air corps men. He has been in charge of the athletic program at the pre-flight training school at Iowa City. During the fall of 1942, he also had the assignment of coaching the football team which represented that school in competition with other training schools and with college elevens. During the early part of the season before graduation of personnel brought weekly changes in the line-ups, the Iowa pre-flight team was considered the outstanding service eleven. Lieut. Col. Bierman has already arranged a schedule for the team for the 1943 season including a game with Minnesota in Memorial stadium on November 27.

Two of his Gopher assistants at Iowa City last fall, George Svendsen and Stan Kostka, are now on sea duty while others including Dallas Ward, Babe LeVoir and Mike Gary, have been placed in charge of the physical education programs at other pre-flight training schools.

Track

In a "little Big Ten meet" on May 1 at Evanston, the Minnesota track team finished second, only six points behind Indiana. Other teams competing were Wisconsin, Chicago, Purdue and Northwestern. Minnesota's first three places were won by Floyd Foslien in the two-mile, Jim Peterson in the pole vault, and Fortune Gordien in the discus. Ralph Pohland was second in both the half mile and the mile.

Selected by Coach Jim Kelly to compete in the Big Ten meet on May 14 and 15 were Fortune Gordien, Frank Adams, Dick Kelley, Harry Covey, Bruce James, Ralph Pohland, Ralph Ferrin, Floyd Foslien, Carl Ekberg, Ray Tharp, Roger Morris, Charles Hosfield and Jim Peterson.

Golf and Tennis

The best average scores for the season on the Gopher golf team were made by Jim Teale with 77, Bob Krogh, Lyle Robertson, Louis Lick, John Williams, Rod Larson, Wayne Windahl and Tom Jorde.

Minnesota tennis players selected by Coach Phil Brain to compete in the annual Big Ten meet were Christie Geankoplis, Joe Keselik, Jack Pfister, Dave Warner, Bob Bruce and Melvin Mark.

WLB presents these three members of the faculty in regular weekly programs. From left to right, Ernest S. Osgood, associate professor of history, whose lectures on American history are heard on Fridays, 8:30 to 9:20 a.m.; Alburey Castell, assistant professor of philosophy, discusses "Humanities in the Modern World," Fridays, 5:30 to 6:00 p.m., and Robert Penn Warren, professor of English, who reads and discusses familiar literary masterpieces, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 7:00 to 7:30 p.m.

Radio Station Marks Anniversary

THIS month the University radio station, WLB, is celebrating the fifth anniversary of one of the important events in the growth and development of the station. In May of 1938, WLB was granted additional time on the air and its frequency was changed from 1250 kilocycles to 760 which later was shifted to its present frequency of 770.

Since the spring of 1939, WLB has been broadcasting from new and modern studios on the ground floor of Eddy Hall which may be better known to some alumni as the old School of Business Administration building and to others as the Mechanic Arts building.

WLB, through its predecessor, 9XI, was one of the first stations in the country to do radiotelephone broadcasting on a regular basis. Market and weather reports were being broadcast in the spring of 1921 and in the fall of that year, reports of Minnesota's home football games were put on the air. The games were played on Northrop Field at that time and a relay of student helpers carried play by play notes from the field to the 9XI room where the information was put on the air. The facilities were expanded in 1923 but the station continued largely as an experimental venture. By 1929 the station was broadcasting a regular schedule of programs on a time allotment of eight and one-half hours a week in addition to the play-by-play broadcasts of the football games and other athletic events.

The change in 1938 brought a greatly expanded schedule of programs with increased time on the air. A bigger staff and modern broadcasting facilities made possible a variety of fine programs. Last year WLB programs were given four first-place awards by the Institute for Education by Radio. Through its Minnesota School of the Air, the station prepares and broadcasts special programs for reception in school classrooms throughout the Northwest. For the past three years these programs and also the WLB football broadcasts have been carried over the stations of the North Central Broadcasting System. The WLB football broadcasts have also been carried over the nation by the Mutual Broadcasting System.

The oldest continuous program broadcast by WLB is the Music Appreciation feature prepared and presented by Burton Paulu who is now the director of the station. WLB cooperates with the schools and colleges of the Twin Cities and other educational groups in planning and presenting programs of special interest. One of its most popular features is the broadcast of the weekly convocation program from Northrop auditorium each Thursday at 11:30 a.m. The director of the School of the Air is E. W. Ziebarth, who, together with Mr. Paulu, has been a member of the staff since the expanded broadcasting program was inaugurated five years ago.

Minnesotans Are War Correspondents

MINNESOTA alumni have what it takes to become war correspondents. Less than five years after their graduation from the School of Journalism at the University of Minnesota, two young men have found themselves dodging bombs in two of the hottest war news centers and sending back stories to the newspapers of America—like seasoned veterans. A third, while stationed in a quieter area, is an active foreign correspondent.

The first two are Graham Hovey '38Jour, and William W. Wade '39Jour, both International News Service war correspondents whose by-line stories have been appearing in the American newspapers in recent months—Hovey's from North Africa, Wade's from London.

The third, Bjorn Bjornson '33Jour, has been correspondent for the National Broadcasting Company in Reykjavik, Iceland, since August, 1941. He is a former Minneapolis Tribune staff member. After graduation, he became editor of the Minneota (Minn.) Mascot, owned and published by his father, Gunnar B. Bjornson. He also spent a year as head of the department of journalism at the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks.

The stories of Graham Hovey and William Wade are very much alike. Both are in their mid-twenties. Both are out-of-state boys. Wade came to the university from Teaneck, N. J., and Hovey from Cedar Falls, Iowa. They worked together on the Minnesota Daily. And both had decided while they were in high school that they wanted to be foreign correspondents.

When Hovey was graduated from the University in 1938 he already had newspaper experience under his belt. He had worked two summers as a reporter on the Waterloo, Iowa, Daily Courier. Upon graduation he returned to the Courier, first as commercial reporter and later as general assignment man. He joined the Detroit staff of INS in the summer of 1940, to find himself at the start of a series of rapid promotions.

Hovey had always had an interest in sports writing—he won varsity letters as a half-miler in college—and Detroit's Tigers were winning an American League pennant that summer. Hovey was assigned to covering the Tigers, and INS sports editor Lawton Carver liked his work so well that he took the young staff man with him to cover the 1940 world series. That led to a brief assignment to the Kansas City bureau and then a job as INS Southwest sports director in Dallas. In a few months he was made bureau manager at Tulsa, Oklahoma, and then promoted again, this time to a spot in the Chicago bureau.

Then came Pearl Harbor. Hovey asked for transfer to INS headquarters in New York, to work in the cable department as final training for a war correspondent's berth, and the request was granted.

Last May found him aboard an army transport with a body of American soldiers bound for a secret destination. It turned out to be Liberia; but for six months he could tell no one of his location, and he filed no stories, for the presence of American troops in Africa had not been announced.

After the invasion of North Africa, however, he was reassigned to the fighting zone. His arrival there was delayed by an emergency appendectomy. But he has been in Tunisia with American troops since the start of the current drive, and many of his dispatches have appeared in the Star Journal and Tribune.

Ernie Pyle, Tribune columnist, in a recent dispatch describing American correspondents at the North African front, called Hovey "one of my favorites . . . because he is quiet, undemanding and sensitive to the beauties as well as the horrors of war."

Wade's career has been similarly colorful, and his climb even more rapid. After graduation from the University with Phi Beta Kappa rank, he joined the New York INS staff in August, 1939. He covered Wendell Wilkie's campaign in New York in 1940, and originated the INS Weekly News Roundup, sent by the news service to all clients each weekend.

In early 1941 Wade was sent to the Chicago bureau as general assignment reporter. There he worked briefly with Hovey. Like Hovey, he asked for foreign service after Pearl Harbor, and his request, too, was granted.

He was at once assigned to Iceland, and was one of the first reporters to don an American war correspondent's uniform after this nation entered the war. In Reykjavik he scored a scoop over his competitors on the only important story during his stay—the Nazi bombing of Iceland. When the London INS office needed men to replace those sent with the North African invasion forces, Wade went to the British capital. It was Bjorn Bjornson who took his place at Reykjavik.

Wade thinks his career as a war correspondent is jinxed. The ship that was to take him to Iceland, disabled in Newfoundland, brought him back to New York and he had to start all over again. And early this year, when he embarked on a Flying Fortress setting out to bomb Berlin—he was one of eight American correspondents given special high altitude flight training—the big plane developed motor trouble and turned back before it had crossed the channel. "Nothing ever happens to Old Bill Wade," wrote this 24-year-old correspondent in his next dispatch to the United States.

But both Wade and Hovey have crowded more excitement into their brief careers than most men manage in a lifetime.

Teach Soldiers

Three University professors are teaching foreign language courses at Fort Snelling. They are Dr. Lynwood G. Downs, assistant professor of German, who teaches German; Professor Edward H. Sirich, professor of romance languages, who gives instruction in French; and Mr. James A. Cuneo, instructor of romance languages, who teaches Spanish.

Courses at Fort Snelling were started at the request of Fort authorities, following the emphasis by the army's high command of foreign language study in army camps. Classes, which meet once a week for a two-hour session, are open to both officers and enlisted men.

The purpose of the courses at the Fort is to enable men to converse with prisoners, ask questions, give orders, establish relations with civilians in the occupied countries, and to issue commands.

Elect New Dean of Agriculture

THE Board of Regents at its meeting on May 14, voted to extend President Walter C. Coffey's term as head of the University to June 30, 1945, and elected Dr. Henry Schmitz, professor and chief of the division of forestry, to the deanship of the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics to succeed Dean Edward M. Freeman '98; '05Gr, who will retire on June 30.

Under the retirement regulations of the University, President Coffey would be retired on June 30, 1944, for he will reach the retirement age of 68 before that date. President Coffey became acting president of the University on July 1, 1941, succeeding Dr. Guy Stanton Ford, and he was elected president on November 22, 1941. Dr. Coffey was director of the University Department of Agriculture from 1921 until he assumed the duties of president in 1941.

Dr. Schmitz has been chief of the division of forestry in the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics since 1925. A graduate of the University of Washington and with a Ph.D. degree from Washington University in St. Louis, Dr. Schmitz is nationally known for his grasp of the practical and scientific aspects of forestry and as a research scholar in plant physiology and pathology. This year he is president of the Society of American Foresters and he has been the editor-in-chief of the journal of that organization for many years. He is also active in the American Wood Preservation Association in which field he is a recognized authority.

He has been active on committees at University Farm having to do with student life as well as with education and is widely known in Minnesota forestry work.

In recommending the appointment to President Walter C. Coffey, Dr. C. H. Bailey, dean of the department of agriculture of which the college is a part, said Dr. Schmitz "has been effective in maintaining the high standards of scholarship in the field of forestry education for which the University of Minnesota has been distinguished."

Dr. Freeman, who has reached the retirement age, has been dean of the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics since 1917. He first became a member of the faculty of the University as an instructor in botany and pharmacognosy in 1898 and held an assistant professorship in botany from 1902 to 1905. He was pathologist in charge of diseases of grain crops in the United States Department of Agriculture for two years and in 1907 he was appointed professor of botany and plant pathology in the University. He has made many valuable contributions to the study of plant diseases beginning with his authoritative treatise, "Minnesota Plant Diseases" in 1905.

The Board of Regents accepted a grant of $50,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation for the promotion of creative work in connection with the study of Minnesota and the Northwest; its history and present day life, its culture, its people and its problems.

The grant is for a three-year-period and will be used particularly to aid writers of books or shorter studies, histories and biographies which will offer interpretations of regional life past and present.

An advisory University committee will aid Theodore C. Blegen, dean of the Graduate school, in passing upon applications for grants and in determining upon projects to be subsidized by the University under this grant.

Leslie Schroeder, ticket manager, was given permission by the board to serve as acting commissioner of the state department of aeronautics from May 1 to June 30.

Officers elected by the Board for the next two years are: Fred B. Snyder, first vice president and chairman; George W. Lawson, second vice president and representative on the state investment board; W. T. Middlebrook, secretary, and Julius Schmah, treasurer.

Alumni Entertain Service Men

WAR conditions have stimulated rather than retarded the activities of the Minnesota Alumni Club of Seattle.

In March the club invited all the wounded service men in Seattle to be its guests at basketball games between Washington and Southern California. A total of 241 men gratefully accepted the invitation. The cost to the club was $120.50 and this amount was oversubscribed by eighteen dollars by the club members. The balance was immediately applied on the purchase of a piano to be sent to a service group in the Aleutians.

The program at the monthly meeting of the organization includes talks on work and developments in their particular vocations by Minnesota alumni in the community. At the April meeting, Dr. Albert C. Feaman '21Md, discussed the causes, effects and treatment of arterial sclerosis hypertension and L. F. McKenzie '09, explained the oxyacetylene process. At the May meeting, H. L. Hussey '28, showed a motion picture entitled "Copper from Mine to Market."

Dentists in Service

There are 71,000 dentists in the United States and 22,000 of these will be needed in the armed forces by the end of 1943, according to the Procurement and Assignment Service. This means that nearly all dentists who are under 39 and physically fit will be taken from civilian practice. At present there are 15,000 dentists in the armed forces.

A specialized training program for dentists is now being planned by the army to meet the increasing need for graduates. It will probably go into effect about July 1 and it is expected that all the dental schools in the country will be offered a chance to participate in the training program, according to Dean W. F. Lasby.

Under this program, pre-dental and dental students who are in the enlisted reserve of the medical administrative corps will be inducted into the army and then sent to college for the completion of their training. It is possible that students already in dental schools will continue until graduation in the schools in which they are now registered. Upon completion of their training, these men will receive appointments in the army dental corps.

A Final Word or Two

Mrs. Walter A. Soderlind (Gertrude A. Markusen '23Ed), of Lake Benton, was elected president of the Southwestern Minnesota alumni unit at a meeting in Tyler on May 14. The other officers are Horace E. Frisby '34Ed, of Ivanhoe, vice president; Dr. C. P. Johnson '36Md, of Tyler, secretary-treasurer; Frank A. Olson '24B, and Victor L. Siverson '29Ph., directors.

More than 60 were present at the meeting at which the guest speakers from the campus were Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce and Charles Bird, professor of psychology. Professor Bird discussed the problems of civilian morale in wartime while Mr. Pierce reviewed the current activities of the University.

Alumni Invited

Alumni are invited to attend a reception and coffee hour in honor of Dean Edward M. Freeman '98; '05G, which will be held in the Union at University Farm on June 1, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. The event is being sponsored by the Ag Union and the Ag Student council. He will retire on June 30 as dean of the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics.

Scholarships

The annual scholarship tea was given by the Minnesota Alumnae Club in the College Women's Club on May 15. In addition to the scholarship for freshmen which the association has given for several years, a scholarship has been added for nurses who have finished their three-year nursing course and want to continue for the additional two years.

Evelyn Barrett '36Ed; '40MA, St. Paul, was general chairman for the tea. Dr. Dorothea F. Radusch '24D; '38MS, Minneapolis, was ticket chairman, and Agnes Aga '35Ed, was in charge of table prizes.

New board members elected include Evelyn Barrett, first vice president; Lois Loveless '38B, assistant treasurer; Mrs. W. J. Klein (Myrtle Jamison '27DH), recording secretary; Helen Blaisdell '96, corresponding secretary; Susie Huff '14Ed, assistant corresponding secretary; Marian Boggs '33Ed, third director; Marjorie Spaulding '37, fourth director, and Dorothy Campbell '40, fifth director.

Headquarters

A sign at the front entrance of Pioneer Hall bears the information that this student dormitory is now the headquarters of a pre-meteorology training unit of the army air force technical training command. Most of the trainees have already had some college training and upon the completion of their special courses they are scheduled to become air force weather officers. The one-year course given in the special training program at the University is divided into four 12-week quarters. More than 30 regular members of the University faculty give instruction in classrooms in Folwell Hall, Murphy Hall, Physics Building, Law Building and Vincent Hall.

Fifty Club

Nine new members of the Minnesota State Medical association's Fifty Club were honored at the annual association dinner at the Minikahda Club, Minneapolis, on May 18.

These doctors, who entered medical practice in 1893, are Drs. G. C. Haggard '93Md, and C. M. Kistler '93Md, of Minneapolis; H. S. Nelson '93Md, Excelsior; H. B. Aitkens '93Md, Le Center; H. W. Reiter '93Md, coroner of Scott county, Shakopee; E. L. Stephan '93Md, Hincley; J. S. Kilbride, Canby; Peter Kraft, Duluth, and W. H. Rumpf, Faribault.

Ag School

At the annual meeting of the alumni association of the School of Agriculture which was held at the time of the school graduation exercises in March, William H. Dankers, assistant professor and extension economist in marketing, was elected president. The other officers are Frank White, first vice president; Robert Guelker, second vice president; Truman Nodland, secretary-treasurer, and C. P. Bull, representative on the board of the General Alumni Association. Andrew Boss was made a member of the executive committee and Vincent H. Bailey was elected to the committee to serve out the term of his father, the late J. V. Bailey.

The term of the School of Agriculture closes in March and the young men and women students return to their farm homes to put into practice during the spring and summer the things they have learned in the classrooms and laboratories. J. O. Christianson is superintendent of the School of Agriculture which is a unit of the University Department of Agriculture.

Manpower Director

George Selke '16Ed, president of the St. Cloud Teachers College, is doing double duty these days, for he retains his responsibilities as head of the college while serving as Minnesota state director of the War Manpower Commission. He was appointed to the post in January by Frank M. Rarig, Jr. '31L, regional director of the WMC. From 1935 to 1939, Mr. Selke was NYA director for Minnesota.

As state director, he will supervise the programs of the War Manpower Commission's constituent agencies in Minnesota including the United States Employment service, the National Youth Administration, the training within industry and apprenticeship training, and will also coordinate selective service operations with the other manpower programs.

Conference Medal

At the Cap and Gown Day convocation on May 13, the Conference Medal was awarded to Christie J. Geankoplis '43IT, of Minneapolis, star of the Minnesota tennis team during the last three seasons. This award is made each year to the senior, who through four years of college, has the highest degree of achievement in his athletic, as well as his scholastic, work.

Last-minute Mail

THE ALUMNI office mail is heavy these days with letters from former students now serving in the armed forces in all parts of the world. This page has been kept open until press time in order to make note of letters and information which have arrived since other regular departments of the magazine were made up. Under the new monthly schedule of publication adopted by the Board of Directors of the alumni association, no issues will be published during July and August.

Captain James E. Barnard '41, business manager of the 1941 Gopher, writes from England that he is receiving his copies of the alumni magazine there. He has been on overseas duty with the Eighth Air Force since August, 1942, and is now in charge of all Automotive Supply for the Air Force in England. On July 4, 1942, he married Ceva Bryan of Merced, California. He says that one of the first things he is going to do after he gets back "will be to take the wife up to the University and try to give her some idea of the pleasant four years I spent there. My only hope is that there won't be too many gaps in the row of familiar faces."

When the commanding officer of Ellington Field, Texas, decided that a major landscaping job should be done so that Ellington would become neither a dust bowl nor a mud hole, he called upon a Minnesota faculty-member-on-leave, Lieut. Robert A. Phillips, to plan and supervise the job. Before entering the army air corps, Lieut. Phillips was a member of the staff of the botany department and the division of horticulture. Under his guidance, Ellington Field is reported to be taking on a greatly changed appearance and "before and after" pictures which have been received in this office substantiate that report. Valuable sod and grass by the acre has been offered to the field by citizens of nearby Houston.

Captain Gustav A. Neuberger '36M, has been named adjutant general of the Second Bomber Command at Fort Wright, Washington. He was called to active duty in July, 1941, and has been stationed at Fort George Wright since August, 1941. . . . Lieut. Kenneth D. Ruble '33, former reporter and columnist on the Minneapolis Tribune and the Minneapolis Daily Times, is in the Marine air corps and his address is: Marine Fighting Squadron 312, Page Field, Parris Island, South Carolina. . . . Ensign Vern Wolcott '42, has charge of assembly and repair at the Naval Air Station, Peru, Indiana. . . . Major Edward A. Rosen '35Ed, is base personnel officer, La Junta Air Field, La Junta, Colorado.

Brig. General Robert W. Grow '16E, has assumed command of the Sixth Armored Division at Camp Cooke, Calif. . . . Col. Peter E. Skanse '16, of the army air corps, back in the United States after 15 months overseas, is the new commanding officer of the 96th Service Group now in training at Selfridge Field, Mich. He has been in the army since 1917 and holds the rating of Command Pilot. From June 1942 to May 1943, Col. Skanse was the Chief of Air Staff, Base Section, at one of General MacArthur's embarkation points in Australia, and was also commanding officer of a replacement depot.

Promotions: To Major—Capt. Maurice W. Dale '33, army air forces in Hawaii; Capt. Bernard Street '38Md, army medical corps, transferred to Douglas, Wyo.; Capt. Edward M. Wiik '39ME, in South Pacific; Capt. William W. Moir '39Md, regimental surgeon, Fort Benning, Ga. . . . To Captain—Lieut. Robert J. Blotcky '38B, Camp Edwards, Mass.; Lieut. G. H. Soulen '39Ag, camp training officer, Bowie, Texas; Lieut. Robert Hawley '42, marine corps, in the South Pacific. . . . To lieutenant (j.g.) in Navy—Ensign Eugene Ecklund '42IT, Bureau of Aeronautics, Washington, D. C.

Lieut. William B. Campbell '40, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for exceptional achievement against the Japanese in the South Pacific. Recently promoted to first lieutenant, he was commissioned last June at Corpus Christi, Tex., and sent overseas last August.

Karl G. Kobes '38, USNR, U. S. Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J.

John A. Lilygren '39, Capt. Hq. Btry., 101st C. A. Brig (AA), Columbia Square, San Francisco, Calif.

Edwin C. Nelson '41, Pvt., 39255669, Co. D, 107 Med. Bn., APO 32, c/o Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.

A pleasant note from Dr. DeWayne Wohlleb '42D, Yard Dental Clinic, Mare Island, Calif., informs us that the Minnesotans stationed there greatly enjoy the Minnesota Alumnus. Other members of the dental class of 1942 who have completed their period of indoctrination there and expect orders for foreign or sea duty soon are Drs. D. W. Bongard, L. B. Nelson, D. Stenberg and A. Merrill.

"Those of us who have had the opportunity to secure garden plots on the University property near the Dowling School deeply appreciate the action of the University of Minnesota in making this land available to residents of the area," writes Martin Carlson, a resident of the area. "We also appreciate the courtesy and the cooperation of Dr. Holman and the garden committee and we are especially grateful to Harry Wilson of the buildings and grounds staff who has given freely of his time and energy in promoting the success of the project."

Leroy W. Ellickson '42B, former campus band leader, recently was commissioned an ensign in the United States naval reserve at Corpus Christi, Tex. Ensign Ellickson was married on June 5 to Jayne E. Burch '40GC. The couple will be at home at Norfolk, Va.

Earl Larson '35L, former Minnesota golfer, twice runnerup in the Big Ten, has been commissioned a lieutenant, junior grade, in the USNR and is to report for indoctrination at Quonset Point, R. I., some time in August. A year ago he went to Washington, D. C., where he was associated with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Regents Appoint Two University Vice Presidents

CHANGES were made in the administrative organization of the University by the Board of Regents at a meeting on June 12, with the creation of two new administrative offices: vice president, academic administration, and vice president, business administration. To the first of these the board, on the recommendation of President Walter C. Coffey, named Malcolm C. Willey, who has served for ten years as University dean and assistant to the president; to the second the board named William T. Middlebrook, University comptroller for the past eighteen years.

The changes were announced by President Coffey in the following statement:

MALCOLM M. WILLEY

"The general administrative task of the University on both the academic and the business side has increased enormously in recent years and with it has come an ever greater burden on the President. The actual organization of the University to meet the changes in complexity and growth has not kept pace with the changes. This has been true of other large universities also, and at some of them administrative reorganization has been undertaken that parallels in large measure the steps that have now been taken here. For many years, in fact dating back to the administration of President Coffman and continuing with President Ford, the Regents have been aware of the problem, and from time to time it has been the subject of discussion. It has been recognized by the Board that an educational institution is as much in need of sound organization as any other large institution. The changes which the Board has approved will, it is believed, provide a better definition of the duties and functions that the new officers have been performing and will continue to perform. The eventual result will be to free the President personally from an enormous and almost overwhelming burden that now comes to his desk and consumes effort that might be spent more advantageously in developing other aspects of the University's program. It will give the President more time for general educational leadership, and for developing a better understanding with the public of the work of the University which is so important in a state university.

"It is the expressed will of the Regents that the creation of two vice presidencies shall not modify the lines of relationship now existing between the President and the educational departments. The deans and directors of the several colleges and schools, as well as University Senate committees, will continue to be directly responsible to the President. There are, however, many separate offices and unattached University units which, as time goes on, can become a responsibility of the vice president of academic administration. The academic vice president will also be able to assist the President as a staff officer in many matters relating to the internal functioning of the University. Likewise on the business side there are changes that seem desirable and which will achieve a greater economy of effort, and also permit on the part of the vice president of business administration greater time for consideration of the many questions involving general financial policy. No complete blueprint of organization has been prepared. Rather, it is my intention to study the many problems that are involved in a better integration of our internal administrative machinery as it directly involves the President's office, and present them to the Board for consideration.

"I am confident that the changes which the Board has made come at an opportune time. Our administrative problems grow more difficult every day, in part because of the natural growth of the University, and more immediately because of the war programs that are now being carried for the Army and the Navy. Furthermore, we must look forward to the time when the war is over and we are suddenly called upon to meet administrative problems of even greater complexity and magnitude. Neither the Board nor I has felt that we were organized to meet these effectively or efficiently. The action of the Board on Saturday in creating two vice presidencies, both responsible directly to the President, provides an administrative framework within which we can gradually get ready to undertake the post-war job we shall be called upon to do, and at the same time it will permit us to move with greater surety in meeting the problems we face in our present day-to-day activities."

Honorary Degree

The University awarded an honorary degree of doctor of music to Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, at the commencement exercises in Memorial stadium on June 12. He was presented to President Walter C. Coffey for the degree by Professor Paul M. Oberg '24, head of the department of music. Professor Oberg reviewed the career of the world-famous musician who first came to this country seven years ago from the Athens Conservatory to serve as a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra. When Eugene Ormandy left Minneapolis to become conductor of the Philadelphia orchestra, Mrs. Carlyle Scott, then the manager of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, brought Mitropoulos to Minneapolis. During the past two winters he has been guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra in addition to his regular duties with the Minneapolis orchestra which presents its concerts in Northrop auditorium.

He was cited by President Coffey as "a man of genuine, universal human qualities which are the very soul of the sublime music you give mankind." The degree was bestowed especially "for your unparalleled contribution to the musical life of the state."

Twelve hundred seniors received degrees at the seventy-first commencement exercises. In delivering the charge to the class of 1943, President Coffey said:

"Today, as you graduate, the university is a war institution; the campus has become an enormous training center. Those of you who have been here these recent months are fully aware of the extent to which the army and navy are using our staff and our physical plant in instructing the men they need for carrying on the war.

"It is a tribute to the people of this state, and to the legislature that represents them, that there is available an educational institution of such competence that the army and navy can turn to it in their great hour of need for trained personnel.

"Nor are our training programs confined to men in uniform. There are industrial needs that also must be met and in our laboratories and classrooms the university has continued—and will continue—to offer civilian instruction that produces trained men and women who, through subsequent employment in war industries, are backing up the fighting men."

Navy Program

The University of Minnesota has been designated as a training center in the V-12 program of the Navy. Starting about July 1, several hundred students in engineering and pre-medicine will be assigned to the special navy training program on the campus. Approximately 80 per cent of the men assigned to this training will be students who are now in college who are enlisted in the V-1 or V-7 programs or who hold probationary commissions in the U. S. Naval reserve, or who are enlisted in the marine corps or coast guard reserve corps with navy preference. Twenty per cent of the quota will be made up of entering students selected on the basis of the nation-wide army-navy tests given on April 2.

All instruction will be given by members of the University staff and the University assumes the responsibility for the housing and feeding of the navy men in training.

This month, pre-medical and pre-dental students on the campus were put in uniform, either of the army or the navy. They have been assigned quarters in Motley school on River Road just beyond Pioneer Hall and take their meals in Coffman Union.

Appointments

The Regents of the University at their meeting on June 12 named successors to Dr. Richard R. Price, director of the General Extension Division, and Frank K. Walter, University Librarian and director of the Library School, who have reached the age of 68 and are retiring at the end of June.

The new director of the extension division will be Julius Nolte who has been head of the Center for Continuation Study on the campus for the past six years. He is a graduate of Yale University and received his law degree from Minnesota in 1937. For several years he taught University extension classes in Duluth and in 1935 became librarian of the Municipal Reference library.

Errett Weir McDiarmid, assistant director of the University of Illinois library school, will succeed Mr. Walter as University Librarian. He holds two degrees from Texas Christian University, one from Baylor, and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Chicago. He was librarian at Baylor University before going to Illinois. He is managing editor of the periodical, "College and Research Libraries," and chairman of the constitution committee of the American Library Association.

Court of Honor

The annual Minneapolis Court of Honor banquet for scholastic leaders in the senior class of the University was replaced this year by a quarter-hour radio presentation over stations WCCO, Minneapolis, and KDAL, Duluth, on June 10. This was the eleventh such event sponsored by the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, the Minneapolis Junior Association of Commerce, and the Council of Civic Clubs.

The speakers on the radio program were Thomas Moore, president, Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association; Paul Foss, president, Minneapolis Junior Association of Commerce; Charles Huebsch, president, Minneapolis Council of Civic Clubs, and President Walter C. Coffey of the University. Miss Mildred Nolte '43, spoke on behalf of the members of the senior class who were honored for outstanding scholastic achievement.

Religion As Spiritual Leaven

By ALBERT C. KNUDSON '93

I NEED not say that I count it a pleasure and a very high privilege to be with you today and to speak to you at this baccalaureate service.

Having been away from the University for fifty years I am naturally tempted to begin by saying something about the past and comparing the University of 1893 with the University of 1943. But that would hardly be fitting on such an occasion as this. I do, however, wish to record my great pride in the marvelous growth of the University, in the distinguished leadership it has had through the years, and in the notable contributions it has made to the cultural life not only of this State but of the nation. To be a graduate of such an institution is a distinction of which one may justly be proud. For about the richest thing, it seems to me, that our civilization has to offer a young man or woman is a thorough college or university education. And as a native of this State, trained in its schools from childhood up, I share with all students of the University, past and present, a deep sense of gratitude to the State for the very liberal provision it has made for the higher education of its youth. We have all been to a marked degree beneficiaries of its generosity.

In speaking at this religious service I shall take as a Scriptural basis for what I have to say Jesus' Parable of the Leaven. This parable is found in Matthew 13, 33 and Luke 13, 21, and reads, as you recall, thus: The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened. What this parable seems clearly to teach or at least to imply is that religion and particularly the Christian religion is not an escape mechanism, not a flight from reality, but a leavening power in the world and that as such it has a universal destiny. Its methods of operation may be hidden from view, as is true of material leaven, but its effects are not. They stand in the clear light of day and form part and parcel of our common life. Christianity began its history with what Nietzsche called a "transvaluation of all ancient values." And this process of transvaluation, according to our parable, is to continue until the universal realm of human values is transformed by it. This is the mission of spiritual religion in the world. It is leaven put into human society and destined to be kept there till the whole is leavened.

It is religion in this sense of the term, religion as a vital factor in the stream of human life, that confronts us all, and confronts us in such a way that we cannot disregard it. For one thing, its very magnitude commands our attention. Religion bulks too large in human life to be overlooked. Gladstone used to say that there are only two great subjects in the world, religion and politics; and of these the former, he held, was the greater.

Imperatives

But it is not only with its magnitude that religion confronts us. It confronts us with moral and spiritual imperatives, with imperatives that we cannot altogether disregard, no matter how much we may try to do so. As the little boy said, "there is something inside me that I cannot do what I want to with." And this something is the moral imperative of religion. Religion speaks to each of us with an inner note of authority. It commands us. And in this personal sense as well as objectively it is for us all an inescapable reality. We cannot be wholly indifferent to it.

Nor can we treat it as a purely private affair. Merely as citizens, as responsible members of society, we have obligations to religion as truly as we have to the state. We are under obligation to support it. And more particularly we are under obligation to direct and guide it into more fruitful channels. For religion, like every other fundamental human interest, has often gone astray. It has been a fertile field for fanaticisms and belated dogmatisms. It has often lagged behind the higher intelligence of the community. And I fear this is still true in many instances. As educated young people you have, therefore, a special duty to religion. It is your task to join with others in moralizing and spiritualizing religion and thus augmenting its leavening power in the community and in the world. And this, it seems to me, you may best do by emphasizing, as you have opportunity, those elements in spiritual religion that are most essential and fundamental. Four of these I shall single out for brief consideration.

The first is what may be called the naturalness of religion. It has been customary since early times to associate religion with the marvelous and the miraculous and to disassociate it more or less from the ordinary and familiar events of life. The latter were taken for granted. They seemed to call for no special explanation. They were natural events and hence did not need to be referred to a divine source. The natural and the divine came thus to be more or less opposed to each other. This was a common view in the past, and it still persists. It is, indeed, still the great heresy of popular thought respecting religion. The natural is regarded as undivine, and the divine as unnatural.

This popular religious dualism has not been absolute. It has not excluded the divine altogether from nature. But it has tended to give to religion a certain note of unreality, at least so far as our common life is concerned. In the great crises of life men have usually recognized the naturalness and inevitability of religious faith. Of late we have, for instance, heard it frequently said that there were no atheists among the American soldiers in the fox holes of Bataan. And people generally were recently profoundly moved by the radio address of Captain Rickenbacker in which he testified to the extraordinary power of religion in his own experience and in that of his six or seven companions as they drifted helplessly on a rubber raft in the open sea without food and with very little prospect of being rescued from a watery grave. Such testimonies as these have the ring of reality to them. They bear striking witness to the fundamentally religious nature of man in the face of mortal peril. But impressive as they are, they seem after all rather remote from anything that is likely to befall most of us. And in the long run that only seems truly real which enters into and forms a constituent part of our common life.

In this connection it may be noted as a significant fact that Christianity originated, not in a time of national crisis, but in a time of peace. If it had owed its origin to a national emergency or to some catastrophic experience in the life of the nation, it very likely would have lost its significance when the crisis was over. What gave to Christianity its permanence was the fact that it arose in a period of comparative quiet. It was from the outset a response to the common and normal needs of men, and hence was by its very nature fitted to have a permanent place in the natural and ordered life of human society.

It was this fact that the Church Father Tertullian had in mind when he said that the human heart is naturally Christian. It was this fact that Augustine had in mind when in one of his prayers he said, "O Lord, thou hast made us for thyself, and our hearts are restless till they rest in thee." It was this fact that Jesus had in mind when in the most fundamental of all his parables, the parable of the soil and the seed, he said, "The earth beareth fruit of itself." Just as the soil is adapted to the seed, so human nature is adapted to religious truth. It bears fruit of itself. It has a native capacity for religion. And because of this fact it may be said that men are naturally religious, or "incurably religious," as some have put it.

It is, therefore, a serious error to oppose religion to nature. True religion does not denature humanity. It does not encourage an artificial religiosity nor a sectarian ethic. It is not an appendix to human nature. Nor is it an elective course in the school of life, a snap course that you may take or not, as you choose. It is a required course, a course imposed by nature as well as by the divine will. Only as this is realized, only as religion is seen to be the crown of nature, not its negation, can it fulfill its proper place in our personal life and in organized society.

But while this is true, while it is important that religion should not be allowed to denature our common human life, it is also true that we should not allow culture or any other secular agency to denature religion. There is always danger of this, danger of our diluting religious faith to such an extent that it loses its distinctive character and degenerates into a mere cultural decoration or a Pharisaic propriety. More and more people are coming to realize this; and hence there is in this country at present in high intellectual circles a widespread reaction against what is, I think, unfortunately, called "liberalism" in religion. There is a growing conviction that when it comes to religious belief we might as well believe something worth while. In the long run a robust faith will commend itself to men more than a weak and halting faith. If we reduce religious faith to virtually a naturalistic basis and call all things divine, we lose a great deal more than we gain. It would, of course, be nice if on the farm and in other hard manual labor we could wear our Sunday clothes every day. But then if we did that we would before long be found wearing our everyday clothes Sunday.

We need the distinctive faith and the distinctive experiences of religion, to keep alive its pristine power. "To the spiritual aesthete," some of these experiences such as conversion may, as Bishop Barnes says in his Gifford Lectures, "seem somewhat vulgar; any deep and strong emotion may offend those who prefer superficial amenities. But churches die of respectability just as they become a nuisance through superstition. Conversion takes a man so fully into the realities of the spiritual world that it ignores respectability and has no need of superstition." These impressive words from one of the most learned of the English Bishops we do well to take to heart. Religion, if it is to fulfil its function in the world, must be true to its own nature as well as to human nature. In this double sense we need to emphasize the naturalness of religion.

A second characteristic of religion that needs to be emphasized is its essential simplicity. As there has been a mistaken tendency to denaturalize religion in the ways I have indicated, so there has been a mistaken tendency to make it unduly complicated by multiplying its requirements and over-refining its beliefs. This tendency has manifested itself in the whole history of religion, and it still persists with us. The result has been an undue emphasis on non-essentials, an emphasis that has blinded people to the underlying unity of religious faith, that has confused their thinking on religious subjects, and that has divided the church into numerous rival sects. These different sects or denominations, numbering over two hundred in this country, have seriously weakened the church and prevented it from presenting a united front against the organized evils of the world. The fact is, as Bishop Brent said some years ago, the world is too strong for a divided church, at least for a church so divided as it is in this country. These divisions have occasionally been justified on the ground that they are an application of the principle of democracy to religion. But if so, it is, as someone has said, "democracy gone mad." A greater degree of religious unity than we at present have is necessary if the church is to exercise the influence that it ought on the spiritual life of the nation and of the world.

So as a corrective of the divisive tendency in American Christianity I am urging the importance of emphasizing the essential simplicity and unity of religious faith. In doing so we but echo the teaching of the prophets and of Jesus. It was their fundamental simplification of the requirements of religion that brought about the most significant developments that religion has undergone in its entire history. "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" These words of the prophet Micah give us the quintessence of the prophetic teaching. And it is but the same truth in a more concrete and intensified form that we have in the two commandments in which Jesus summed up the Old Testament Law: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself.

Such a simplification of religion as we have in these great historic utterances is a perennial need of the church. For there is always a tendency on the part of religion, when left to itself, to break up into divergent sects with complicated and irrational rituals and theologies. And the only way effectively to resist this irrational and divisive tendency, it seems to me, is to bring out the basal unity and simplicity of spiritual religion. If this were done, if people generally could be made to see that the truly religious person is simply one who is always trying with the divine aid to be something better than he is, if this could only be clearly understood, the leavening power of spiritual religion would certainly be greatly increased.

A third characteristic of religion that the educated person will tend to emphasize is its social character. In one respect spiritual religion is profoundly individualistic. One of our most distinguished living philosophers has said that religion is "what the individual does with his solitariness." And that this is a fundamental and perhaps the most fundamental aspect of religion can hardly be denied. It is religion that gives permanent meaning to the life of the individual. It is religion that affirms the sacredness and infinite worth of every human soul.

But this doctrine is not merely individualistic. It is the foundation of all high social ethics. It is the worth of the individual that alone makes brotherly love, and especially sacrificial love, rationally obligatory. It is the sacredness of the individual that alone makes the love of neighbor a sacred duty. Christian individualism has thus always been profoundly social in its implications. But it is only in comparatively recent times that these implications have begun to be applied in a thorough-going way to the structure of society and to international relations. This has opened a new field of religious interest, and made even the common man world minded. It has put a moral veto on isolationism, both national and religious, and is calling for such a new type of leadership both in state and church as the college man and college woman are best qualified to furnish.

And this leads me to venture a prediction. I believe that the socializing of religion will eventually mean a modification of our traditional attitude toward the relation of church and state to each other. The principle of strict separation, which we have advocated, has seemed to be required by the religious heterogeneity of our population and by the right of religious freedom. But in actual practice the separation has never been absolute. And as religion gradually loses its sectarian character and our conceptions both of church and state become more thoroughly moralized and socialized, it seems to me inevitable that the cooperation between church and state will become closer than at present, especially in the field of education. Here, I believe, is an impending development in our civil and ecclesiastical policy, which will challenge the best thought of our educated young men and women during the next two or three generations.

Moral Dynamism

Thus far I have spoken of three aspects of religion: its naturalness, its simplicity, and its social character. Each of these is an important factor in the leavening power of spiritual religion. But the most important remains yet to be mentioned, namely, its absoluteness or its moral dynamism. This is the most distinctive characteristic of spiritual religion and the most potent source of its influence in the world. For the truly religious person puts obedience to the moral will of God above every other consideration.

But in doing so it should be noted that he does not run counter to the natural moral law. For "man is not wholly made up of common sense and self-interest: such is his nature that he does not think life worth living if there is not something for which he is ready to lose his life."

(E. Halevy, The World Crisis of 1914-18, p. 57). These are the words of a distinguished secular historian, and they manifestly coincide with the moral facts of life. To say that man is purely and wholly a selfish being, as some economists, psychologists, and even theologians have affirmed, is a manifest libel on human nature. There is something in normal human nature everywhere that makes the self rise above itself. War, terrible and barbarous as it is, offers overwhelming evidence on this point. There is something in life so sacred that we ought, if necessary, be willing to sacrifice our lives for it.

The Supreme Court of New York State once handed down a decision in which it was stated that we have the highest possible authority for the saying that "skin for skin, yea all that a man hath will he give for his life" (Job 2:4). The next morning the New York Sun in an editorial pointed out that it was Satan who made this remark. Now, said the Sun, we know whom our Supreme Court regards as the highest possible authority. Well, whatever we may think of Satan as an authority on human nature, he missed it at this point. Man in his moral nature transcends the physical level. What he most desires is not the pleasures of sense. Unless he has sunk to the purely animal plane, what he most wishes is to enjoy the feeling of his own worth as a person among persons. Personal or moral worth is the only satisfying goal in human life.

And the validity of this goal is based on what is essentially a religious faith, faith in the sacredness of personality and the consequent faith in the absoluteness of the moral law. It is this faith that has given to spiritual religion its moral supremacy in human life and in our day made it the center of spiritual resistance to human tyranny. You have probably all heard or read the oft-quoted words of Einstein with respect to conditions in Nazi Germany. "Only the church," he said, "opposed the fight which Hitler was waging against liberty. Till then I had had no interest in the church, but now I feel great admiration for and am attracted to the church, which has had the persistent courage to fight for spiritual truth and moral freedom. I feel obliged to recognize that I now admire what I used to consider of little value." This confession on the part of one of the most distinguished scientists of our day has found an echo in the hearts of multitudes of others throughout the world. By virtue of its heroic resistance to tyranny in Germany, Norway, and elsewhere, the church has won the admiration of the enlightened conscience everywhere. And not only that, it has symbolized to the whole world the fact that it has in its religious faith a unique source of sustained moral strength. It is the moral absolutism of spiritual religion that is the abiding inspiration of man's noblest moral endeavor, and it is in it alone that high civilization has a secure foundation.

Our culture, if it is to endure, must, as a leading sociologist has recently urged with prophetic passion, cease to be predominantly "sensate" and become predominantly "spiritual." Only as a religious culture can it be a saving leaven in human society and a divine instrument for the healing of the nations. To promote such a culture is, therefore, your high task. And in carrying it out you need to remember that you are a privileged class. Your education has made you such. You have been literally bought with a price. And because this is so, you have greater social obligations than the less fortunate members of society. It is pre-eminently your mission, as educated young people, not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give your lives in willing service to the common good.

Alumni Meetings

About 50 alumni greeted President Walter C. Coffey and Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce at a dinner meeting in Redwood Falls on May 28. Guests were present from Granite Falls, Worthington, Bird Island, Hector, and Albert Lea. Dr. William A. Brand '04Md. is president of the alumni unit at Redwood Falls.

The class of 1942 was well represented at the dinner meeting of the Minnesota Alumni Club of Seattle held on June 8, with 17 present. The program included campus reminiscences by four past-presidents of the club. The regular monthly luncheon meetings of the Seattle group will not be held during the summer but the program of activities will be resumed in the fall.

Classes Meet on Alumni Day

THE MODIFIED wartime Alumni Day program on June 11 brought more than 400 alumni back to the campus for the reunions of several classes and the general alumni meeting in the evening in the ballroom of Coffman Union. The traditional alumni dinner was omitted and the members of the reunion classes served themselves in the cafeteria of Coffman Union. At eight o'clock they moved to the ballroom for the special program which had been arranged by Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce with the cooperation of the reunion committee of the class of 1918.

The only luncheon meeting held in the Union was the annual luncheon given for the members of the older classes by the Minnesota Alumnae Club of which Mrs. C. A. McKinlay '21, is the 1943 president. The chairman of the luncheon committee was Mrs. Estelle Ingold '24. This is always one of the pleasant occasions of the year for members of the earlier classes.

Special tables in the cafeteria were arranged for the five-year reunion classes from 1888 to 1938. During the afternoon, reunion meetings in the Union were held by the classes of 1918, 1888, 1893, 1902, 1903 and 1898.

The Thirty-fifth Reunion dinner of the class of 1908 was held on June 11 at the Francis Drake Hotel. Following the dinner the members of the class who were present attended the general alumni meeting in Coffman Union.

The toastmaster at the alumni meeting was Judge Paul Carroll '18, and he was presented by Ben W. Palmer '11; '13L, president of the General Alumni Association. The singing of Minnesota songs was led by Oscar Jerde '16, of St. Cloud. Entertainment features included the singing of army songs by a group of men of the army air corps pre-flight training unit on the campus, a one-act play presented by the University Theater, and a group of piano solos played expertly by eight-year-old Buddy McKay, son of Jack McKay, first trombonist in the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and Mrs. McKay (Rhoda Pierce '32Ed). The youthful artist is the grandson of Alumni Secretary E. B. Pierce.

President Coffey told the alumni guests of the wartime program of the University and described the many contributions being made by the institution to the victory effort of the nation. He emphasized the fact that in the midst of its accelerated war program the University must also have under consideration the post war educational needs of the youth of the state.

Ralph Beal, chairman of the class of 1918 committee, introduced three distinguished members of his class who had come from distant points to be present at the reunion. These men, each of whom spoke briefly, were Everett Dirksen, Congressman from Illinois; Walter Greaza of New York, star of the stage and radio, and James Wick of New York, newspaper publisher and correspondent.

Speaking for other reunion classes were Dr. John Walker Powell, 1893, the honored fifty-year class; Albert Graber '88, and Judge Andrew Holt, 1880. Judge Holt received the award as the member of the earliest class represented at the meeting. The award for largest numerical attendance went to the class of 1918; and for largest proportional attendance to 1893. Mrs. Gertrude Gibbs Meier '93, of Woodland, Calif., received the award given annually to the alumnus who comes the greatest distance to attend. Present from San Francisco was Nels Jensen '93.

MRS. C. A. MCKINLAY

Alumni in the News

TWO members of the class of 1893, which held its fiftieth anniversary reunion on Alumni Day, took part in the baccalaureate services in Northrop auditorium on June 6. The baccalaureate address was given by a distinguished member of the class, the Rev. Albert C. Knudson, dean emeritus of the Boston University School of Theology while other parts of the service were in the capable hands of Dr. John Walker Powell, former member of the staff of the University, and now pastor of the Como Avenue Congregational church. Dr. Powell was chairman of the class of 1893 reunion committee.

Dr. Knudson, who was born in Grand Meadow, Minnesota in 1873, has been an outstanding figure in Methodist education for 38 years. Following his graduation from Minnesota he obtained his Ph.D. degree from Boston University, studied abroad, and taught for several years in non-theological colleges in this country.

In December of 1905 he was installed in the chair of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis at Boston University. He became professor of systematic theology in 1921 and in 1926 was appointed dean of the School of Theology. He retired from the deanship in June, 1938.

Alumni Records

Completing a special war service file of the more than 6,000 alumni of the University who are now on active duty in the armed forces of the nation is one of the tasks confronting Mrs. Herbert Joesting (Lora Davidson '29), who assumed her new duties as head of the Alumni Records office in Coffman Union on May 20. This involves the addition of new names from day to day and the constant revision of addresses as the men and women in uniform are moved from one assignment to another. An effort is being made to keep a complete service record for each alumnus including promotions, honors, and various assignments at home and abroad.

The Alumni Records office maintains a card file of all the men and women who have attended the University of Minnesota. In addition to the master file including the names and addresses of all who have registered as students, there is a listing by classes of all who have received degrees; a geographical file, and a listing by colleges.

For several years, Mrs. Joesting was secretary in the office of the chairman of the department of physics. She is the wife of Herb Joesting, former Minnesota all-American fullback.

National Academy

Dr. Calvin P. Stone '21Ph.D., a former instructor in psychology at the University of Minnesota, and now professor of psychology at Stanford University, has been elected to the National Academy of Science. Dr. Stone, who last year was president of the American Psychology Association, is well known for his experimental studies of instinct, sex behavior and genetic psychology.

Retires

John W. Dye '04, retired from foreign service on February 28 and is now living in Santa Barbara, Calif., at 11 La Vereda Road, Montecito, Santa Barbara. Before retiring, Mr. Dye was United States consul at Nassau, in the Bahamas.

DR. JOHN W. POWELL

Willard J. Dye '39ME, is with the U. S. Steel Export Company in New York City. George W. Dye '39, is in the army assigned to special study in administration and personnel work at Washington and Jefferson University, Washington, Pa. Philip C. Dye '41, is now a lieutenant in the U. S. naval reserve. He has been on active service somewhere in the Atlantic for two years and will soon be in command of his own ship.

Ambassador

William Dawson '06, United States ambassador to Uruguay, returned to Minnesota early in June to visit his mother, Mrs. William Dawson, 963 Goodrich Avenue, St. Paul. He was appointed United States minister to Uruguay in 1937 and became ambassador in 1941 when the legation at Montevideo was raised to an embassy. Mr. Dawson entered the consular service two years after graduation from the University and his first assignment was in St. Petersburg, Russia. Later he served as consul at Montevideo and in Germany and returned to Washington in 1924. He joined the embassy staff in Mexico City in 1928, became minister to Ecuador in 1930, and was appointed minister to Columbia in 1934. He has also held an assignment in Panama.

Heads Montana Colleges

Dr. Ernest O. Melby '28Ph.D., president of Montana State University, will assume new duties on July 1 as chancellor of Montana's system of higher education. His office in Helena will have jurisdiction over six units: Montana State University, Missoula; Montana State College, Bozeman; State Normal College, Dillon; School of Mines, Butte; Eastern Montana State Normal School, Billings, and Northern Montana College, Havre. Freshmen

The student Freshman Week committee traditionally goes into action during the week set aside for first year registration just before the opening of the fall quarter. This month, however, the members of the committee were on hand to assist the newcomers who started their college careers at the beginning of the Summer Session. The executive council of the committee conducted a two-day indoctrination period on Monday and Tuesday, June 14 and 15. This year the Freshman Week executive council is made up of representatives of various campus organizations. Members of the council are Jean Danaher, chairman, Nancy Reid, Laur Mae Peterson, Mary Teberg, Mort Barron, Gladys Stewart, Sally Sjöelius, Verne Peck, Janet Burley, Jeanne Vollbrecht, Virginia Taylor and Marilyn Witte.

Coordinate Campus Service Programs

Robert E. Summers, associate professor of mechanical engineering, has been appointed by President Coffey to serve as coordinator of the Navy V-12 which will begin at the University on July 1. For the past year, Professor Summers has been coordinator of the naval training school (machinists mates) at University Farm.

Coordinators of the several armed services programs now on the campus are Horace Morse, associate director of General college, army air forces, pre-flight; Raymond W. Brink, chairman of mathematics, army air forces, pre-meteorology; Edward S. Loye, administrative assistant, army specialized training program, advanced engineers; Robert E. Summers, navy college training program, and U. S. naval training school (machinists), and Elmer Johnson, associate professor of electrical engineering, U. S. naval training school (electrical).

Army Duty

Dr. Clifford P. Archer, director of the Bureau of Recommendations in the College of Education, has been commissioned a major in the army educational division. He left the University the last week in May to report for training at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va. Dr. Archer is a past president of the Minnesota Education Association and for many years he has been active in the general school program of the state. Before coming to the University he was on the faculty of the Moorhead State Teachers College. Replacing him as head of the Bureau of Recommendations will be Dr. Anton O. Thompson '42Gr, of the State Teachers College, Flagstaff, Ariz.

Accepts New York Post

Dr. John W. Paige, instructor in individual orientation, who has been assisting with the administrative work of the General College of the University, left the University shortly before June 15 to join the research division of the New York State Education department. He has been appointed to direct research activity which will investigate the effectiveness of the education program in New York state.

Doctor Paige is president of the Minnesota chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, national professional education fraternity. He was recently elected to the honorary psychology fraternity, Psi Chi. He is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Hemp in Minnesota

The University of Minnesota through its Agricultural Extension Service is assisting with the program of growing hemp in Minnesota. Hemp has become a strategic war crop in this country because outside sources of supply have been cut off. Several years ago, A. C. Arny, associate agronomist at University Farm, experimented with the production of hemp in Minnesota soil and he was called in as a consultant when the government made plans for the growing of the crop in Minnesota. In central and southern Minnesota, 44,000 acres of hemp have been planted.

Foreign Language Need

The general decrease in the teaching of modern foreign languages in high schools was criticized as a serious situation in a statement issued on May 29 by a group of faculty members representing 20 different departments of the University. It was pointed out that this decrease is being allowed to occur "at the very moment when global war is taking great numbers of young men and young women into other countries."

Spanish is the only modern language showing a healthy growth. Many schools have dropped the teaching of French and there is a decreased enrollment in German and little or no Italian is being taught. For men going overseas, a knowledge of these languages is important for the war effort and for their own personal safety.

The report also declared that in the period of postwar rehabilitation, language knowledge will be essential on the part of American workers, and a comparison was noted between the policy of the high schools and that of the army, which is establishing special schools with languages as major subjects, to train officers for the so-called "foreign-area program."

Sigma Xi Officers

Dr. J. W. Buchta, head of the department of physics, has been elected president of the Minnesota chapter of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific fraternity. Other officers who will serve during the coming year are Dr. H. K. Wilson, professor of agronomy, vice president, and Dr. H. H. Barber, associate professor of chemistry, secretary-treasurer. Named to the board of electors were Walter M. Lauer, C. E. Mickel and G. A. Thiel. F. R. Immer, director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, will serve as chairman of the symposium committee for 1944.

Red Cross Staff

Dr. Willis E. Dugan '39MA, assistant professor and director of student personnel in the College of Education, has been appointed assistant to the director of insular and foreign operations of the American Red Cross and he assumed his new duties this month in Washington, D. C. He was granted a leave of absence by the Board of Regents. This year he was president of the Minneapolis Vocational Guidance Association and formerly was administrative assistant in the National Youth Administration program in Minnesota.

Leave Campus

Dr. John G. Darley '37Ph.D., director of the University Testing Bureau, left the campus late in May to take a position with the War Department. His first assignment was at the Southern Signal Corps School, Camp Murphy, Fla. Gordon V. Anderson '43Gr, will be acting director of the Testing Bureau during Dr. Darley's leave which will extend to June, 1944.

Helen U. Phillips '37Gr, lecturer and supervisor of field training for group workers at the University since 1936, will leave the faculty July 1 to organize a new group work department at the University of Pennsylvania.

Ten Faculty Members to Retire

TEN members of the faculty of the University have reached the retirement age of 68 and will retire at the end of this month. They are Edward M. Freeman, dean of the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics; Frank K. Walter, University Librarian; Richard R. Price, director of the General Extension Division; Frederic H. Bass, professor and head of the department of civil engineering; Dr. Peter J. Brekhus, professor of dentistry.

Arthur H. Ruggles, professor of entomology and economic zoology; Algernon H. Speer, head of the correspondence study department, General Extension Division; Muriel B. Carr, assistant professor of English; Dr. Samuel Amberg, associate professor of pediatrics in the Mayo Foundation, and Dr. Jean Taylor, clinical instructor in the department of preventive medicine and public health.

Dean Freeman has taught botany or plant pathology in four different colleges of the University and has held his present position since the position was created in 1917. He has been connected with the University since he entered as a student in 1894 with the exception of one year of study at Cambridge University in England and two years, 1905-07, when he was with the Department of Agriculture in Washington. He was graduated in 1898 and received his doctor of philosophy degree in 1905. Following a distinguished teaching and research career in plant pathology, Dr. Freeman became the first dean of the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics when the University Department of Agriculture was reorganized in 1917. He published his "Minnesota Plant Diseases" in 1905 and he also wrote Minnesota's first seed law.

Dr. Richard R. Price, who was born in Wales, holds degrees from the University of Kansas and Harvard. He organized the General Extension Division of the University in 1913 and became its director. He was a pioneer in this field and had organized a similar division in the University of Kansas in 1909. In connection with the extension work of the University, Dr. Price organized the League of Minnesota Municipalities. Professor Frederic Bass came to Minnesota in 1901 following graduation from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was engineer and director of the engineering division of the State Board of Health from 1907 to 1915, has been a member of that board since 1931, and from 1936 to 1939 was

Winners of Conference Athletic Medal

By CORTLAND PETERSON '43

WHEN the Conference Athletic Medal this year was awarded to tennis player Christie J. Geankoplis, it was the first time in 12 years that the annual award for high proficiency in scholarship and athletics had not been given to a senior whose name had been prominent either in football or basketball. Back in 1931 the winner of the medal was Lowell Marsh, championship swimmer.

Winners of the award are not selected by whim or chance. Committee members carefully judge the ranking of senior athletes through the application of a special scoring system. This year Geankoplis won because he rated highest in the scoring and not because the committee purposely aimed to encourage athletes in sports other than football and basketball.

Here is how the committee makes its decision:

Athletic points: Fifty points are awarded for each athletic "M" earned; up to 25 points in each sport are awarded for cooperation and teamwork; up to 25 points in each sport are awarded for sportsmanship; 25 points are awarded for being elected captain of a team.

Scholastic points: Honor point ratios are computed for credits completed. The normal requirement for graduation, 180 credits, is used as a base which is multiplied by the honor point ratio. Then the scholastic and athletic totals are added to get the individual athlete's final standing.

It can be seen that the weighting greatly favors the man who takes part in more than one sport since up to 250 points can be gained in each sport. This explains why 19 of the 29 winners of the medal have been two or three sport men. Two factors enabled Geankoplis to break the monopoly that two-sport men have had on the medal for the past several years. One is that for the first time in many years, there is no two-sport athlete in the graduating class. The other is that Geankoplis' excellent scholastic average of 2.6 in chemical engineering gave him points enough to equal the total of a good two-sport athlete.

Referring to Geankoplis and Marsh as minor sports competitors is technically incorrect, since all varsity sports are recognized on the same level and by the same "M" award at Minnesota. However, football, basketball, baseball and track have the greatest popular following and it so happens that the medal winners have been heavily concentrated in these sports.

First Award in 1915

To illustrate the emphasis, 21 of the 29 medal winners played football. All but two competed in one or more of the major sports and Geankoplis and Marsh are the two exceptions. Bob Tanner rolled up a tremendous total in winning the award in 1930, for he won three letters in each of three sports, football, basketball and baseball.

The first presentation of the medal was made in 1915 after the Board of Directors of the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic Association (the Big Ten) had suggested such an award and set aside a sum for the endowment of the medal at each conference school in 1914.

The initial winner at Minnesota was a star football center, Dr. Albert Boles (Boles Rosenthal). Among the early winners of the award were two men who were to attain future prominence in Minnesota athletics, Bernie Bierman in 1916 and Dr. George Hauser in 1918.

Six of the winners of the medal were students in the Medical School while competing in athletics. Included in this medical group are Dr. Albert Boles, who is now on active duty in the naval medical corps; Dr. Erling Platou, basketball; Dr. Rudolph Hultkrans, basketball; Dr. Malvin Nydahl, baseball, basketball and football; Dr. George Hauser, football, and Dr. Robert Tenner, all-conference end on the 1935 national championship football team, who is now on active duty in the army medical corps.

Other famous football names on the list of the medal winners are Arnold

Oss in 1922, Earl Martineau in 1924, Marshall Wells in 1934, Glenn Seidel in 1936, Bud Wilkinson in 1937 and Harold Van Every, George Franck and Eugene Flick from 1940 through 1942.

Among the top basketball names are those of Norman Kingsley in 1920, Earl Loose in 1932 and John Kundla in 1939.

Winners of the Conference Medal who are now known to be on active duty in the armed forces, in addition to the ones mentioned above, are Bernie Bierman, George MacKinnon, Marshall Wells, Bud Wilkinson, Harold Van Every, George Franck and Gene Flick.

By a special endowment, the Western Conference has insured the permanence of this annual award to the outstanding scholar-athlete in the graduating class of each conference school. By such action the directors have indicated their keen interest in the well-rounded development of all students, intellectually as well as physically. Stone replicas of the two sides of the circular medal are to be seen on the walls of the lobby in Cooke Hall on the campus.

Winners

Here is a complete list of Minnesota's Conference Medal winners: 1915, Dr. Albert Boles (Boles Rosenthal); 1916, Bernard W. Bierman; 1917, Joseph M. Sprafka; 1918, Dr. George Hauser; 1919, Dr. Erling Platou; 1920, Norman Kingsley; 1921, Neal Arntson; 1922, Arnold Oss; 1923, Dr. Rudolph Hultkrans; 1924, Earl Martineau; 1925, Louis Gross; 1926, Raymond F. Rasey; 1927, Roger Wheeler; 1928, Dr. Malvin Nydahl; 1929, George MacKinnon; 1930, Robert E. Tanner.

Wilkinson; 1938, Dominic Krezowski; 1939, John Kundla; 1940, Harold Van Every; 1941, George Franck; 1942, Eugene Flick, and 1943, Christie J. Geankoplis.

Track Team Breaks Records

THE Minnesota track team became a power in the Big Ten this spring, scoring 33¼ points in the annual conference championship meet at Evanston in May. This was the largest total ever scored by a Minnesota team in the Big Ten track championships. The Gophers won four firsts. Michigan won the team title, Illinois was second in total points, and Minnesota placed third.

A Gopher freshman, Fortune Gordien of Minneapolis, was a double winner with firsts in the discus and the shotput. His mark in the discus was 151 feet, four inches, while he pushed the shot 46 feet, nine and three-quarter inches. Jack DeField, one of the country's ace pole vaulters, was declared eligible for another season of competition on the day of the meet, and he came through with a first place in his specialty with a leap of 13 feet, 10 inches. Floyd Foslien won the two-mile run in the time of 9:49.3. This victory was unexpected because, although Foslien is regarded as one of the best distance runners in the conference, he has been ill this spring.

Ralph Pohland came back strong to place second in the half mile event after he had been thrown off stride in a collision early in the race. Other Minnesota points were won by Harry Covey with a fourth in the 440; Frank Adams with a third in the 220 low hurdles, Carl Ekberg with a fifth in the discus; Jime Peterson with a fifth in the pole vault, and the mile relay team which placed third.

National Meet

The Minnesota track team coached by Jim Kelly placed fifth in the national collegiate track and field championships at Evanston on June 12. It was the highest rating ever achieved by a Gopher team in that sport. Every one of the six Gophers entered scored points to give Minnesota a higher total than any other Big Ten team. The first four finishers in order were Southern California, 46; California, 39; Rice, 36, and New York University, 32. Minnesota scored 31 points.

The Minnesota point-winners were Jack DeField, first in the pole vault with a leap of 14 feet, one inch; Fortune Gordien, second in the discus; Ralph Pohland, third in the half mile; Dick Kelley, fourth in the 100; Frank Adams, fifth in the 220 low hurdles, and Floyd Foslien, sixth in the two-mile.

Baseball

The Minnesota baseball team had one of its best seasons in years with seven victories and three defeats to finish in second place in the Big Ten. The men coached by Dave MacMillan closed the campaign with a 12 to 0 win over Chicago on Northrop Field. Jerry Kolander, Gopher right fielder, had a big day for himself with a home run, triple, double and single, while Pitcher Stan Kaess allowed the Maroons only two hits. At the end of the season, Stew Olson of Zumbrota, senior first baseman, was elected honorary captain.

Letters Awarded

There were seven freshmen among the 41 Minnesota athletes who were awarded letters by the Senate Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics for their participation in spring sports. Fifteen letters were awarded in track, 14 in baseball, six in tennis and six in golf. Three of the letter-winners in track have already reported for duty in the armed forces. They are Chuck Fleenor, miler; Harry Covey, quarter-miler, and Jim Fitzgerald, hurdler.

The freshmen who won letters in intercollegiate competition were Fortune Gordien, Ralph Ferrin and Jim Peterson in track, Gene Kelly, Earl Bruhn, Bob Johnson and Hudson Mealey in baseball.

The list of winners:

Tennis—Christie Geankoplis, captain, Dave Keselik, Dave Warner, Jack Pfister, Bob Bruce and Mel Mark.

Golf—Jim Teale, John Williams, captain, Bob Krogh, Lyle Robertson, Louis Lick and Rod Larson.

Baseball—Stuart Olson, captain, Casey Dowling, Hudson Mealey, Norman Gallup, Stanley Kaess, Eugene Kelly, Leo Shields, Bob Johnson, Butz Lehrman, Howard Schutz, Jerry Kolander, Herbert Hein, Earl Bruhn and Stan Graiewski, manager.

Golf

Jim Teale of Minnesota and Ben Smith of Michigan tied for the golf championship of the Big Ten in the conference tournament held at Chicago in May. Each man finished with a total of 311 for the 72 holes. It was the first time in the 22-year history of the meet that a tie had occurred. The Big Ten athletes encountered difficult playing conditions and the meet was moved from one course to a second when the first course was flooded. Michigan successfully defended its team title, finishing with a team total of 1,289. Minnesota was fourth in team scoring with 1,302. Other Minnesota individual scorers were Louis Lick, Jr., 328; Robert Kogh, 328; Lyle Robertson, 335, and John Williams, 347.

1943 Football

Faculty representatives of the Western Conference have approved four weeks of football practice at Big Ten schools this summer with the reservation that only one week may be spent in contact drills. The practice may be held at any time determined by the individual coaches. Only students enrolled in the summer school will be eligible to take part in the summer practice sessions and this will give coaches an opportunity to become acquainted with freshmen who start their college careers in June.

Also approved was the starting of fall practice three weeks in advance of the first scheduled game or on September 1, whichever time is earlier. Incoming freshmen may play in the early-season games even though the fall quarter may not have yet started.

In the annual spring game in May, the "Army" team defeated the "Navy" team, 7 to 0. In the navy starting lineup were Captain Cliff Anderson and Halenkamp at ends, Bush and Rallis at tackles, Dellago and Peterko at guards, Spewak at center, Garnaas at quarter, Johnson and Avery at the halves, and Prola at fullback. The army starting lineup included Edwards and Burk at the ends, Aldworth and Mitchell at tackles, Graiziger and Jewett at guards, Solheim at center, Sandberg at quarter, Williams and Frickey at the halves, and Kulbitski at fullback. The one touchdown was scored by "Red" Williams.

The start of the Navy training program in colleges on July 1 will take a large number of the Minnesota lettermen from the campus. Nineteen members of the squad are in the Marine Corps enlisted reserve and these men will be assigned to colleges which are selected as Marine training schools.

Following is the Minnesota football schedule for the 1943 season:

- Sept. 25, Missouri at Minneapolis.
- Oct. 2, Nebraska at Minneapolis.
- Oct. 16, Camp Grant at Minneapolis.
- Oct. 23, Michigan at Ann Arbor.

its president. Some 40 municipal sewage reduction plants or water systems in Minnesota and elsewhere have been installed under his direction.

Frank K. Walter has been University Librarian since 1921 and in 1928 he initiated the Division of Library Instruction which has attracted 2,000 students from 40 states. The University Library now has about 1,250,000 record volumes.

Dr. Peter Brekhus was born in Norway. He has been on the dental staff ever since he was graduated from the School of Dentistry in 1910. He was the first winner of the William J. Gies prize for research awarded by the American College of Dentists.

Minnesota Women

Nurses' Training

A special wartime class for college graduates was admitted to the University School of Nursing on June 14. This class was formed as a result of the urgency of the war program for recruiting 65,000 students in nursing this year.

The usual three year nursing curriculum at the University is being shortened for this group to two and one-half years, part of which may be spent in military hospitals.

College women are needed for positions which involve ability, leadership, and maturity. They are especially sought for administrative, teaching, and supervisory positions both in institutional and public health nursing.

Nurses

A service flag honoring the 115 graduates of the School of Nursing who are now serving with the armed forces was dedicated at a party given recently for the members of the senior class by local alumnae of the school. The party was held in Powell Hall and took the place of the annual alumnae-senior banquet.

Home Economics

Appointment of 33 home economics seniors as dietetic interns in major hospitals throughout the United States has been announced by the department of home economics. Appointments this year total the largest number ever placed by the University.

Training received by appointees is comparable to that taken by medical students after completion of University training.

Twenty-fifth

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the installation of Sigma Beta chapter of Kappa Delta sorority at the University was marked on May 25 with a dinner at The Leamington for alumnae and active chapter members.

A program featuring events in the history of the sorority was directed by Mrs. Charles Leemhuis (Celeste Carney '22Ed), and Mrs. Carl I. Pohlson (Ethel Erickson '18). Mrs. Harold Sommer (Agnes Thorvilson '28; '30MA; '39Ed), served as toastmistress. Mrs. Harold W. Krinkie (Frances Bendixen '37Ed), was in charge of reservations and general arrangements.

Climax of the program was the burning of the mortgage on the chapter house, 1025 Sixth St. S. E.

Birthday

Alpha Delta Pi sorority alumnae, actives, and pledges commemorated the ninety-second anniversary of the founding of the national organization and the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the local chapter with a traditional breakfast May 16 at the Curtis Hotel in Minneapolis.

Mrs. L. T. O'Brien (Wanda Fundberg '32B), in charge of arrangements, was assisted by Mmes. Robert K. Gillard (Margaret McFarlane '31B), Raymond A. Rice (Mary Sperry '30Ed), Frank Hertel, Gregg Hames, Norton Breiseth (Joyce Porter '30), and Misses Dorothy Duckett '36B, and Ruth McMahon '32.

Clara Rue '28, served as toastmistress at the breakfast. On the program of toasts were Mrs. Norton Breiseth, Margaret Turnquist '43HE, Mrs. Norman Engebretson, and Mrs. Frank Hanafin. Ferne Crispin '45, was in charge of the active chapter's part of the program.

TO HIT 'EM H-A-R-D-E-R

We've all got to Raise our Sights!

THE year 1943 promises to be the grimmest, hardest year this country has ever faced. Every effort, and every dollar of national income not absolutely needed for existence, should go into war work and War Bonds.

In the Pay Roll Savings Plan, America finds a potent weapon for the winning of the war—and one of the soundest guarantees of the preservation of the American way of life!

Today about 30,000,000 wage earners, in 175,000 plants, are buying War Bonds at the rate of nearly half a billion dollars a month. Great as this sum is, it is not enough! For the more dollars made available now, the fewer the lives laid down on the bloody roads to Berlin and Tokio!

You've undoubtedly got a Pay Roll Savings Plan in your own plant. But how long is it since you last checked up on its progress? If it now shows only about 10% of the gross payroll going into War Bonds, it needs jacking up!

This is a continuing effort—and it needs continual attention and continual stimulation to get fullest results.

You can well afford to give this matter your close personal attention! The actual case histories of thousands of plants prove that the successful working out of a Pay Roll Savings Plan gives labor and management a common interest that almost inevitably results in better mutual understanding and better labor relations.

Minor misunderstandings and wage disputes become fewer. Production usually increases, and company spirit soars. And it goes without saying that workers with substantial savings are usually far more satisfied and more dependable.

And one thing more, these War Bonds are not only going to help win the war, they are also going to do much to close the dangerous inflationary gap, and help prevent post-war depression. The time and effort you now put in in selling War Bonds and teaching your workers to save, rather than to spend, will be richly repaid many times over—now and when the war is won.

You've done your bit

Now do your best!
