

Can you drop into a mail box Saturday for me?

Louis Pomerantz, right, art restoration specialist with the Chicago Art Institute, works on the surface of one of <sup>22</sup> ~~the~~ works by ~~99 paintings in the~~ Western Hemisphere ~~works~~ painters on exhibit in Tweed gallery, 2531 East Fifth street. The ~~restorer~~ restorer was engaged by the UMD art department by request of the exhibition owner, IBM Corp., to repair and clean the paintings after months ~~on~~ on tour of U. S. galleries. The Tweed showing will continue through Wednesday. In the group, from left, are Richard Deaton, Duluth, art major and junior, and Arthur E. Smith, department head.

Louis Pomerantz, right, art restoration specialist with the Chicago Art Institute, works on the surface of one of 22 works by Western Hemisphere painters on exhibit in Tweed gallery, 2531 East Fifth street. The restorer was engaged by the UMD art department by request of the exhibition owner, IHI Corp., to repair and clean the paintings after months on tour of U. S. galleries. The Tweed showing will continue through Wednesday. In the group, from left, are Richard Deaton, Duluth, art major and junior, and Arthur E. Smith, department head.