DULUTH--High school wind and percussion players and their directors will attend the first annual UMD Summer Band Workshop June 20-25.

Maurice McAdow, director of bands and associate professor of music at North Texas State College, Denton, Texas, will be the workshop clinician. McAdow, known across the nation for producing award winning bands, will rehearse the workshop band each day and will offer sessions on conducting plus a daily seminar for directors.

James R. Murphy, director of bands at UMD, will be the workshop manager. Other staff members include Robert E. Beverley of UMD and Clarence Schultz of West Junior high school, Duluth.

Workshop registrants will live on campus and along with the music classes will take part in swimming, volleyball, bridge, picnics, movies and other summer session activities.

Interested players or directors should contact Murphy at 231 Humanities building, University of Minnesota, Duluth 12. There are still some openings available for the workshop.
