“No Place for Hate” Tuesday, September 5

By Elizabeth Tollefson on Friday, August 25, 2017

Professional musicians and race-relations experts Arno Michaelis (photo, left) and Daryl Davis (photo, right), once performed on stages that were ideologically worlds apart. But, now, the former racist skinhead and the race relations expert are breaking the rules of racism. They will bring their message to the University of Minnesota Crookston in their presentation, “No Place for Hate” on Tuesday, September 5, 2017, at 7:30 p.m. in Kiehle Auditorium. The event is free and all are welcome to attend. Refreshments will follow the evening’s presentation and parking permits are not required.

“No Place for Hate” serves as a guided tour through the minds of those who want to hurt others for having a different skin color. Together as brothers on stages across the U.S. and abroad, Michaelis and Davis embrace and support each other’s passionate and effective efforts to bring peace to society. Through captivating storytelling and thoughtful conversation, these two former rivals demonstrate the possibility of reconciliation and human kinship. Having lived such proof of concept, they engage audiences with a message of hope and humanity when it is most sorely needed. To
