Papers and Presentations

---(2000) Presentation discussing Hubbs Center class and research investigating the function of outreach within a multicultural educational paradigm.

---Panel: Implementing Universal Instructional Design in the Writing Intensive Classroom. CRLA Conference. Sparks, NV.

delMas, R. (2000). "Teaching nontraditional courses to nontraditional students: The case of statistics". Paper presented at the annual conference of the National Association for Developmental Education (NADE), Biloxi, MS. Presentation was an extension of a paper presented at the 1999 Annual Meeting of the Minnesota Association for Developmental Education, Brooklyn Park, MN.

Kinney, D.P. (1999). "Developmental Mathematics and Distance Education". Pre-session at the International Conference on Technology in Collegiate Mathematics. San Francisco. One of four invited panelists for a day long pre-session where I was asked to represent developmental mathematics.

Lee, A. (1999). "Composing Pedagogies" - paper presented and workshop facilitated at NCTE Annual Convention. I was an invited speaker, and given a 75 minutes session, which I used to both present from my book and to lead a roundtable discussion with audience members. This resulted in my sending out bibliographies and course materials (from SUNY and GC courses) to colleagues from universities around the country. (New Mexico State University, University of Missouri, and Purdue University, among others.)

---(1999) "Resisting Composition." Conference on College Composition and Communication, Atlanta. Paper selected in competitive proposal review process (fewer than 50% of proposals accepted that year).

---(1999) "Fossilization and fossil morphology" Geological Society of Minnesota, Lecture Series. Minneapolis, MN.

Other Research-Related Activities

Albrecht, L. Book manuscript reviewer, Modern Language Association, Queer Composition(s): Queer Theory in the Writing Classroom.
---Editorial reader - Journal of Advanced Composition - reviewed several articles about critical pedagogy and composition for JAC during the past year.

Amram, F. Lent more than 75 artifacts, dozens of slides, posters, and photos to the Patent and Trademark Museum, Washington, D.C.

Bruch, P. (2000). Legacies for a Multicultural Future: Literacy and Democracy in the 21st Century. Conference on College Composition and Communication.- Wrote this panel proposal, accepted by selective blind peer review, and will chair the panel and present my paper, Multicultural literacy and liberal democracy: The past and future of interdisciplinarity.
---Disability studies and curriculum transformation in a basic writing program. National Council of Teachers of English, Milwaukee, WI. - Primary co-author of this proposal and will participate as a panelist. Selection subject to blind peer review.
---Composing new technologies: listening to the laboring forces of a basic writing program. The Thomas R. Watson Conference on Rhetoric and Composition, Louisville, KY. - Primary co-author of this proposal and will chair and participate as a panelist. Selection subject to blind peer review. Highly selective professional conference.
---Universal instructional design: enhancing learning for all students. CRLA/NADE Joint Symposium. Breckenridge, CO - Invited participant on this panel, accepted by blind peer review.
---Constructs of multiculturalism in developmental education. College Reading and Learning Association. Reno. - Co-authored this panel proposal and will chair and present on the panel subject to selection by blind peer review.
---Freire, critique, and reconstruction in basic writing. Pedagogy and Theater of the Oppressed Conference. St Paul. - Primary co-author of this proposal and will participate as a panelist. Selection subject to blind peer review.
---Working with Rashne’ Jehangir on connected classrooms facilitating individual and collaborative research into learning communities and the connections between education and social justice. We are currently involved in literature review and curriculum design.
---Participated in the CTAD training workshop and am planning a research project investigating philosophical links between strands of disability studies and democratic social theory.

Brothen, T. Worked closely with Piers Steel, a GRA psychology student to complete a data analysis and manuscript on a very large study of student procrastination. The manuscript has been accepted for publication. Also working with him to complete his doctoral dissertation study in GC 1281.

Camacho, D. Worked as an advisor during the summer of 1999 in the McNair Scholars Program.

delMas, R. Under NSF grant DUE-9752523 I and my colleagues (Joan Garfield, University of Minnesota and Beth Chance, University of the Pacific) continue to develop materials for our website titled "Tools for Teaching and Assessing Statistical Inference" (http://www.gen.umn.edu/faculty_staff/delmas/stat_tools/index.htm). The grant has been extended through the end of 2000. Spent most of the summer developing Microsoft Windows versions of the software developed for the Macintosh.
---Several research projects planned with respect to student performance and progress in GC 1454, Statistics. Most of these studies will compare the behavior of General College students with non-General College students. Manuscripts will be submitted in fall 2000 of the research findings to several journals.
---Along with Joan Garfield - developing a stage model that depicts stages in students thinking as they develop statistical concepts. The stage model is based on current theoretical frameworks in information processing and cognitive development. Plan to conduct problem-solving interviews with students late this spring and during the summer. If the research progresses in a satisfactory manner, the findings will be presented at either the Joint Mathematics Meetings or the Joint Statistical Meetings next year.

Ghere, D. E-mail exchanges with several graduate students working on New England Indian topics.

Gidmark, J. Supervised graduate students Mira Dock and Mark Robinson on research (Mira on research only; Mark on teaching and research) in support of Encyclopedia (editor). Advised and edited the writing of several senior graduate students who compiled entries.
---Attended the University of North Dakota’s Writers Conference March 22-24. The conference theme was Writing War and the speakers included Ha Jin, Helen Fremont, Tessa Bridal, John Balaban, Eavan Boland, Barbara Sonneborn, Arnold Isaacs, Robert Olen Butler, and Louis Simpson.

Howarth, H. Currently advising Wendy Leo Moore, Ph.D. Candidate in the department of sociology and third year law student. Outside member of her committee until Ph.D. is completed.
---Supported Cori Manley, my 1999-2000 teaching assistant in the Fall 1999 Web Certification Program and assisted the creation of a Web Site for my 1211 course.

Jacobs, W. During the spring of 2000, taught basic ethnographic methods to Jocelyn Gutzman and David McDonnell, the teaching assistants for spring 2000 gc1211 classes.

Jensen, M. Eysha Saddiq and Gail Thoen conducted a research study on technophobia that was based on the foundation work that Gena Guttschow and I put together. Eysha interviewed me and Gail talked with Gena a few times.
---Marcie Hill is helping Gena and I put together a few papers on technophobia.

Kinney, P. In February 1999, received a Technology Enhanced Learning Grant with Doug Robertson titled "Developmental Mathematics Via the Internet". This project has used graphics tablets and NetMeeting as means of communicating with students at a distance, both with free-hand writing and voice, about mathematics. A small number of students are also using the Academic Systems software to study mathematics in a distance learning format. This number is likely to expand in the coming year as Academic Systems moves to browser-based software and a distance learning guide is written specifically for this software (this will be much briefer than the guide for a textbook based course). Current distance learning offerings incorporate only textbooks.

---A TEL grant presentation was made at the University of Minnesota on February 8, 2000. The Digital Media Center is in the process of creating a website for TEL grant recipients. Pictures will be included of a demonstrating the use of a whiteboard. The questions were asked by the Digital Media Center and I wrote the responses.

Lee, A. Worked with Christine Howell in helping her develop an article about basic writing and multicultural education for publication in a Composition journal. This has entailed reading drafts, providing critique/response, discussing revisions, and helping her identify and write for an appropriate venue.

---Currently serving on three doctoral committees for students with whom I worked at SUNY-Albany and sat on two doctoral exam committees (including written papers and orals), for Hyojein Yoon and Shari Stenberg, in May and June, 1999. Also sat on a dissertation committee for Pete Gray, who completed his dissertation in October.

Lundell, D. "Intentional Meeting on Future Directions In Developmental Education" - October 4 - 6, 2000 o Minneapolis, Minnesota o Radisson Metrodome

---"K-12/GC Transitions Study" - with Dr. Richard Beach and Hyang-Jin Jung, 1998 - present

---"CTAD-Curriculum Transformation and Disability" - Research Associate

---Monthly CRDEUL Forums - national and local research in developmental education

Pedelty, M. Collaborator for Scarleth Lever's Undergraduate Research Opportunity Program (UROP) application. If awarded, Ms. Lever (a General College student) and I will work on "translation as a means of cultural interpretation," through active translation of Carlos Fuentes' Ceremonias del Alba, and the creation of a prototypical bilingual one-act play for use in my intercultural education project in Mexico.

---Near the implementation stage of a survey project with Elaine Yacoub (GRA) concerning grade performance and media consumption among GC and CLA students. This work will be submitted to the Journal for Developmental Education in the summer.

---Directing a documentary film project along with Elaine Yacoub in collaboration with the students of GC 1285: Introduction to Cultural Anthropology. The students have interviewed a diverse range GC students, crafted monologues, and will perform and videotape these in April. Selected pieces will be included on a documentary film concerning the lives and cultural worlds of General College students. Excerpts will be included in presentations at the Pedagogy and Theatre of the Oppressed Conference in Minneapolis (June) and the College Reading and Learning Association Conference in Reno, Nevada (November). The film itself will be expanded and refined over subsequent offerings of the course, until a finished copy is completed.

---Co-Presenter (with Murray Jensen), Faculty Research Seminar, General College. Spring Semester, 2000.

Robertson, D. In February 1999, received along with Pat Kinney a Technology Enhanced Learning (TEL) grant titled "Developmental Mathematics Via the Internet". The grant sought support for Kinney's research on using the Internet as the vehicle for students being able to interact with instructors using ordinary writing when asking math questions. This will be coupled with Independent and Distance Learning courses for GC 0721 (authored by myself) and GC 0731 (authored by Kinney). We plan to disseminate what we learn with the hope that others will be able to use this resource to help developmental math students who must learn this difficult topic from a distance.

---and Kinney, P. made a TEL presentation on 8 February in a discussion series produced by the Digital Media Center.

Thoen, G. Faculty mentor for Ayesha Siddiq who has been awarded a full UROP grant for her innovative, original research design.
---Currently co-authoring a manual with Siddiq (senior author) on how to undertake a research manual from an undergraduate's perspective. Plans for possible dissemination are being discussed. Reviewing other models for possibilities for class use as early as fall, 2000.
---With my encouragement and guidance, Ayesha has also submitted a proposal to present her research findings at the National NCUR/UROP conference to be held in Montana, Spring, 2000. She has been notified of formal and funding for all related expenses at this writing.
---Human Subjects Committee Approval for my own research; and assisted Ayesha Siddiq with learning all the fundamentals of doing research and shepherded her successfully to gain Human Subjects Approval for her winning UROP/NCUR grants.
---Visited a Professor at the University of Hawaii, Winter Semester, 2000. This invitation, extended by Dr. Ronaele Whittington, is based on our joint research project described elsewhere in this report and to be presented at NADE in March 2000. At this writing she is arranging a number of informal presentations for me at the U. of Hawaii with her colleagues (including former Chair, Dr. John Engel) and students based on my various sabbatical research activities.
---Selected by GC Spring 1999 Ct. to participate in a workshop on "transition to semester." Participated for three days with my peers and was paid an honorarium for this activity.

Yahnke, R. Continued as Audiovisual Editor for The Gerontologist through most of 1999-2000.

Recognition Received, Research-Related
Albrecht, L. Located seven citations of work in ISI Citation Database Search. It is important to note that since my work appears in the "alternative" press, there's no way to count the times I've been cited, since there's no citation database for the alternative press. Since my book, Bridges of Power has gone out of print, I receive approximately 5-8 requests per year to copy articles from the book for classroom use.

Amram, F. Book From Indian Corn To Outer Space: Women Invent In America was recommended by the Women's History Project. The book has received numerous kudos and awards.
---Invited to be a scholar-in residence at the Anderson Center for Interdisciplinary Studies. (2000 patent records of inventors, 2500 graphics documenting women and their inventions, and 350 artifacts documenting women's inventions from 1840 to the present).

Anderson, M. 1999 nonfiction winner of the Gessell Award for Excellence in Creative Writing. This award is open only to U of M Creative Writing MFA students.

Brothen, T., Wambach, C. The Criterion Model paper published in 1990 was cited in the latest Journal of Developmental Education and praised by the editor.

Brothen, T. "A computerized application of psychology's top 100" was just reprinted in the 2nd ed. of the Handbook of demonstrations and activities in the teaching of psychology, (Vol. 2).
Bruch, P. The blind peer review of my article "Critical Literacies and Basic Writing Textbooks" commented: On the whole, I like this article a great deal. It's well-written, it's smart, and it makes some sensible connections between theory and practice, directing our attention to textbooks, a subject that we simply don't talk about enough as a professional community. And it's provocative—I think people who read this article will have varying responses to it, and that's good. We should be publishing things that will get people talking. [T]his is an important piece, and I recommend publication. Readers won't be able to make a textbook selection in quite the same way again after reading this—and especially at the time of year when textbook reps prowl the hallways, it's good to see a smart discussion of the relationship between theory, teaching practices, and textbook selection at this level. I enjoyed this piece very much.

---In formal written reviews of my presentation at NADE, audience members unanimously gave the presentation an "overall evaluation" of "Excellent" and rated its "value to developmental education" "Excellent." Written comments included: "Best presentation at the conference! smart and fun," and "I appreciated both the way that you introduced important ideas and that you also facilitated the discussion." Given a scale of 1 to 4, two audience members penciled in higher rankings to indicate their high enthusiasm for the session.

---Received two requests for copies of my NADE presentation. One verbal request at the conference and one email request included in the research appendices.

---Reviewers of my Summer Research Fellowship called it "very clearly designed and written" and "important both in the academy and in the larger society."

Ghere, D. Note from Gary Nash describing success of "Causes of the American Revolution."

---Three email contacts concerning "Barriers to College Participation in Minnesota"

---Two email contacts concerning publications in American National Biography.

Gidmark, J. Essay "How I 'Earned My Oars,' Or, Nautical Passage at Fifty" selected for Honorable Mention in the annual contest of the Society for the Study of Midwestern Literature.

---Article that appeared in Melville Society Extracts, Feb. 2000: "Mystic 1999: The Second International Conference on Melville," by Lyon Evans. In surveying the conference which I co-chaired, Evans says that the Society owes "a huge debt of gratitude to the conference co-chairs" whom he calls "the two Graces of Mystic," and called my flute solo of Debussy's "Syrinx" at the opening reception "ethereal" and "charming."

---With the CLA Scholarly Events Fund Grant that Lisa Norling (Dept of History) and I co-authored last year and was funded, we brought to campus in October the folklorist/balladeer/feminist author Dianne Dugaw (University of Oregon). Her work on maritime balladry and cross-dressing sailors and soldiers nicely addressed both my research and teaching. Dugaw did lecture/presentations in all three sections of my course GC 1365 and gave a public performance in the Ferguson Recital Hall that Norling and I had arranged.

---As a member of the Bibliographic Committee of the Society for the Study of Midwestern Literature, I develop annotated bibliographic citations for primary and secondary works of Midwestern authors appearing in several periodicals every year. These are submitted to the Society's librarian, compiled, and published each year in an annual bibliography.

---Received many letters and notes of congratulations from conference attendees following the Melville conference in Mystic Seaport that I co-chaired. At the final banquet, I was presented with a poster of the conference signed by all the participants and with a framed cover of the conference program (featuring a whale drawing by a chanteyman/illustrator of Mystic Seaport).

Hatch, J. Best Poster state meeting.

---4 invitations to appear on expert panels

Higbee, J. Hunter R. Boylan Outstanding Research/Publication Award, National Association for Developmental Education: Conferred at the Annual Conference of NADE in Detroit, MI, February, 1999.
Jacobs, W. In the October 1999 issue of Teaching Sociology, Heather Hartley published "What's my Orientation? Using the Teacher-as-Text Strategy as Feminist Pedagogical Practice." This article is based on a teaching technique I published in a 1998 issue of Teaching Sociology, but analyzes general social change research implications of the technique in addition to specific pedagogical practices.

Lee, A. Book was chosen by NCTE as one of their "feature" publications for this year. It was selected on the basis of anticipated audience and because they believe the issues it takes up are particularly of relevance/interest to a broad range of teacher-scholars in Composition.

Jensen, M. Received Honorable Mention for a Technology Enhanced Learning - Innovation Award in the spring of 1999. The focus of the application was the work done with Robert Diggins on the Electronic Cooperative Quiz.

Sirc, G. I was asked (and accepted) to be one of the featured speakers at the Watson Conference, which has become one of the most select, cutting-edge conferences in the field of composition. Twelve research stars were chosen to address the theme of technology, labor and composition.
---I was also asked (and accepted) to give one of the plenary speeches for the all-day Research Network Forum at this year's Conference on College Composition and Communication.
---I was asked-twice-to participate as an expert in an on-line course on how to use email in teaching writing. People from around the country (even a few international teachers) paid for this course, offered through the Each expert was the on-line presider for a week.

Thoen, G. Awarded a plaque and certificate of appreciation from the Minnesota Association for Marriage and Family Therapy, January 20, 2000 at the Annual Meeting. Recognized for co-founding and conducting four pioneering interviews for the Oral History Project. This project focuses on capturing pictorial, video, and oral histories of the founding (and aging) mothers and fathers of this revolutionary field, the majority of whom were University of Minnesota professors in related fields.
---Recognized at the annual meeting of the Minnesota Psychological Association with a certificate and letter of appreciation for service as a member for a second and final/terminal elected term by my peers on the board of directors (completed June, 1999).

Wambach, C. Invited to consult with faculty and administrators at IUPUI (Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis) about future directors for their University College program. The invitation was based on an article (Wambach & delMas) in the NADE Monograph series.

---Work in gerontology was recognized by a reviewer in The Gerontologist, who wrote a review of the film Dying, in a column published in 1999: "An indispensable pedagogical adjunct to this documentary is the section in Robert Yahnke's The Great Circle of Life: A Resource Guide to Films and Videos on Aging (Baltimore, Wilkins & Wilkins, 1988). Yahnke's resource materials (pre-viewing notes and activities, summary of scenes, discussion questions, and sample worksheets) provide a careful and sensitive examination of the film's themes. This resource would be useful in analysis of the film in introductory gerontology courses, a course in thanatology, specialized seminars for health-care professionals, or personalized learning activities for students.”

---Quoted in an advertisement from Terra Nova Films. The one-page ad, which appeared in the newsletter of AGHE, May/June 1999, was for the film Flowers for Charlie. Excerpts of my review of the film, published by The Gerontologist in 1999, were cited: "Not since the classic film Peege (1973) has there been a film that delivers such powerful emotional in such a small package. . . . Here is a film guaranteed to trigger discussion about aging, the mutual benefits of intergenerational friendships, and the rewards and risks of intimacy and emotional commitment in old age.”

---Stacey Clawson, a designer/instructor at the Digital Media Center, asked for permission to show one of her classes the web site featuring The One-Minute Movie Book. She sent the following e-mail: "Thank you for allowing me to use your GC 1374 class as an example. My class was very impressed with the site and commented about how it is an ideal use of the technology! For your records: Stacey Clawson, Digital Media Center, presented GC1374 spring semester as an example of the use of Quick Time © digital video for instructional purposes in Learn the Multimedia Process: Web short course offered week of 3/6/00."

Yahnke, R. E. (1999). Filmmakers to Watch: A List of Directors & Their Films. This web site consists of an introduction to filmmakers who have made at least two recommended films, usually within the past ten years, and who may become great directors in the next two decades. I provide a list of more than 20 directors and a viewing list of over 50 films from those directors. URL: http://www.gen.umn.edu/faculty_staff/yahnke/film/new-dirs.htm

---(2000) The One-Minute Movie Book. This digital text contains six chapters: The Art of the Shot, Editing, Lighting, Movement, Acting, and Sound. This is the primary text in my introductory film class, GC 1374. Pages of the web site are arranged in two frames. The narrow left frame holds a Quick-Time Video © clip of a scene (about one minute long), and the other frame contains commentary I wrote on film technique (primary and secondary categories) in that video clip. Ninety-one video clips are included in the web text. Commentaries range from several paragraphs to more than a page of text. URL: www.gen.umn.edu/faculty_staff/yahnke/movie-1/.
