A Russian film biography of Mikhail Glinka, founder of the Russian classical school of music, will be shown at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (May 12) at 4 and 8 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium. The film entitled "The Great Glinka" will be presented as the fifth in the University Film society's spring series of foreign motion picture offerings.

The role of Glinka in the development of Russian music is often compared to the role of Pushkin in Russian literature. Glinka was the composer of the famous nineteenth century operas, "Ivan Susanin" and "Ruslan and Ludmila".

A picture of the composer's life from birth to the completion of his greatest opera, "Ruslan and Ludmila", "The Great Glinka" brings to the screen scenes of his childhood, his student days in St. Petersburg, his debut into the artistic society of the period, his close relationship with the poet, Pushkin, his unfortunate marriage and his work in composing his first opera, "Ivan Susanin".

Playing the leading roles in the picture are Boris Chirkov as Glinka and Valentina Serova as Glinka's wife. The role of Glinka as a child is played by Sasha Sobolyev, an eleven-year-old pianist, composer and student at the Moscow School of Music.

Admission tickets for the film may be purchased at the Downtown Ticket Office, Minneapolis; the Field-Schlick ticket office in St. Paul and Room 3 Wesbrook hall on the Minneapolis campus. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door.

The story of strife, murder, flight and retribution in nineteenth-century Russia will be told in the German film "The Brothers Karamazov", based on the novel of the same name written by Feodor Mikhailovich Dostoevski, noted Russian author, to be shown at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (May 5) at 4 and 8 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

In the film Dimitri Karamazov, an officer in the Russian army, takes leave from his regiment to attempt to collect his mother's inheritance from his father. Frustration, struggle and tragedy follow.

Admission tickets for the film, a presentation of the University Film society, may be purchased at the Downtown Ticket Office, Minneapolis; the Field-Schlick ticket office in St. Paul and Room 3 Wesbrook hall on the Minneapolis campus. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door.

Minneapolis, May - The forty-eighth annual convention of the Society of American Bacteriologists will be held Monday through Friday (May 10-14) at the Nicollet hotel in Minneapolis. Minnesota bacteriologists will be hosts to the 1,200 scientists from the United States and Canada expected to attend the meetings.

President of the society is Dr. H. J. Conn of the New York agricultural experiment station. Directing the committee arranging for the convention is Dr. H. O. Halvorson, acting head of the department of bacteriology in the University of Minnesota medical school.

The convention program will include technical papers and round table discussions on general bacteriology, medical bacteriology, comparative pathology, physiology, agricultural and industrial bacteriology. The meetings will be open to all persons interested in bacteriology whether or not they are members of the society.

A highlight of the program will be the society's annual banquet Wednesday evening (May 12) at 7 p.m. at which the $1,000 Eli Lilly award will be presented to a man under 35 years of age who has made a record of outstanding achievement in bacteriology. The banquet will be held in the main ballroom of the Nicollet hotel following a reception in the East room for President Conn.

The society's annual lecture for 1948, the Oswald T. Avery lecture, will be delivered by Dr. Rene Dubos of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York, at 9:30 a.m. Thursday (May 13). His topic will be "Cellular Structure and Function Involved in Parasitism".

Dr. Henry E. Allen, coordinator of students' religious activities at the University of Minnesota, is attending the National Conference of Chaplains and Directors of Student Religious Life this week (May 4 - 7). The conference, the first of its kind, is being held at Yale Divinity school, New Haven, Conn.
Minneapolis, May 5 — Within a week, three awards resulting from nationwide contests have been presented to KUOM, University of Minnesota radio station, Burton Paulu, manager of KUOM, announced Wednesday (May 5). Two were presented by Billboard magazine and one by the Institute of Education by Radio.

At a meeting in Columbus, Ohio, last Saturday (May 1), the institute gave honorable mention to the University station for its dramatization of "All the King's Men", presented a year ago and based on the work by Robert Penn Warren, professor of English.

The awards presented by Billboard were announced in the May 8 issue of the magazine. A special award in the public service category was made to KUOM for the series "The University Reports to the People", prepared by the University station especially for University of Minnesota Week, Feb. 15 to 21. Also awarded was an honorable mention for KUOM's March 19 broadcast of a Minneapolis Symphony orchestra rehearsal session, devoted to the Symphony No. 1 by James Aliferis, associate professor of music at the University.

A new time has been set for the broadcast of "Man In Society", a program prepared and broadcast by KUOM, University of Minnesota radio station as a part of its University of the Air series. Formerly broadcast from 4 to 4:15 p.m. each Friday, the program will now be on the air from 7:15 to 7:30 p.m. each Friday.

Guest speaker this week (May 7) will be Errett W. McDiarmid, university librarian and director of the division of library instruction. He will talk on "Man and Wealth" and will give a book review on "The Marshall Fields" by John Tebbel.
College graduates between 19 and 25 years old, and wishing to have a career in the United States Navy may enter a new program which will give them an indoctrination course of from one to four months, 18 months of flight training in Pensacola, Florida, and a commission in the regular Navy, according to Capt. Walter C. Holt, professor of naval science.

After two years' total service, officers who successfully complete flight training will be permitted to request retention in the regular Navy as career officers. Prior to completion of three years of service, applicants will be considered by a selection board. If selected for retention and found physically qualified, they will be promoted to the grade of lieutenant. Those not requesting retention or not selected for retention, will be promoted to the grade of Lieutenant (JG), United States Navy Reserve, but will be required to remain on active duty for the period of their contract.

Candidates failing flight training will have their commissions revoked and will be discharged from the Naval service except that, upon their own request, they may be considered for retention in the general line of the regular Navy.
Also eligible for the new program are reserve officers on active or inactive duty and reserve officers on inactive duty who have the status of Naval aviator, but in most cases these people will be required to take refresher courses deemed necessary in each individual case.

Any reserve officer appointed under the program regardless of his previous rank or date of rank, will be given an original appointment as ensign with a new date of rank specified in his new commission. In such a case, the applicant's previous service will count only for pay and longevity benefits.

Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps contract students should submit their applications for the program to Captain Holt. Reserve officers on active duty should submit applications to their commanding officers. All others should apply to their nearest office of Naval officer procurement, Naval Air station or Reserve Naval Air station. Anyone wanting to be considered for the first group which will be ordered to active duty about July 1, should make application to the Navy department no later than May 15.

Minneapolis, May — The largest Cap and Gown Day procession in the history of the University of Minnesota is scheduled Thursday (May 13) when 3200 graduating seniors will march through the campus to Northrop Memorial auditorium for the annual Cap and Gown convocation.

Leading the traditional procession, which will originate from the quadrangle near the Center for Continuation Study about 10:15 a.m., will be the University band in full dress uniform. Garbed in academic costumes, long black gowns and black mortarboard caps tasseled in the colors of their colleges, the seniors will follow the band.

At the rear of the procession will be the University faculty, President J. L. Morrill and the Board of Regents.

Army and Navy ROTC students will serve as guides and ushers. Official University marshals will meet the procession at the entrance to Northrop auditorium and will lead the marchers into the building.

Dean Everett Fraser of the University Law school will address the seniors on "The Reign of Law".

Elections to honor societies, awards of scholarships, fellowships, prizes and medals and names of those students who have maintained high scholastic records in the various colleges and classes will be announced at the convocation by President Morrill. Edward G. Graves, president of the Senior cabinet, will speak for the class of 1948.

The graduating seniors will be guests of President and Mrs. Morrill at a Cap and Gown Day reception in the Campus club in Coffman Memorial Union from 3 to 5 p.m. Many of the seniors will wear their caps and gowns to the reception.

Minneapolis, May - Edmund G. Williamson, dean of students at the University of Minnesota, will deliver the principal address at the University Mothers Day banquet Saturday evening (May 8) in the grand ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union.

The banquet will be a part of the annual Mothers Day celebration on the campus. At the dinner, Billie B. Hull, president of the Associated Women Students, will welcome the mothers on behalf of the students, and Mrs. A. V. Barquist, 1860 Stanford avenue, St. Paul, will respond for the visiting mothers.

Master of ceremonies will be Dr. J. O. Christianson, director of agricultural short courses and superintendent of the University's school of agriculture. A male octet under the direction of Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will sing during the dinner.

In addition to the banquet, other events planned for the day include noon luncheons at sororities, fraternities, dormitories and other campus organizations, and open classes which the mothers will visit. The mothers will also have an opportunity to talk to instructors after the class sessions.
Minneapolis, May - The first in a series of annual public lectures sponsored by the University of Minnesota Social Science Research center will be presented May 14, 21 and 27 at 8 p.m. in Nicholson hall auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

Central theme for the series of talks to be given by University staff members will be "People and Resources in the World of Today".

The first lecture on Friday, May 14, will be delivered by Dr. Lowry Nelson, professor of sociology and head of the rural sociology section. He will talk on "Changing Growth and Distribution of Population" and will review the facts and implications relating to changing sex ratios, changing age distributions and selective migration with reference to regions, rural-urban differences, social and economic institutions and standards of living.

Dr. Nelson will also point out the current population trends in the United States. Presiding chairman will be Dr. Theodore C. Blegen, dean of the graduate school.

"Population Pressures and Food: Will the World Starve?", will be the topic of Dr. O. B. Jesness, chief of the division of agricultural economics, in the second lecture in the series. Among the problems he will consider will be whether science and technology can continue to provide increasing quantities of food for a constantly expanding world population and the present needs and future prospects of the population. Presiding as chairman will be Dr. Edgar B. Wesley, professor of education.

The final lecture in the 1948 series, "Population Pressures and Politics", to be given by Dr. Herbert Heaton, professor of history, will deal with basic population problems underlying contemporary international frictions and population in relation to politics, national and international.

Dr. Lloyd M. Short, director of the public administration center and professor of political science, will preside as chairman at the last lecture.

Minneapolis, May - Compiled by staff members of the Industrial Relations center at the University of Minnesota an "Industrial Relations Glossary" has just been published by University of Minnesota Press.

The glossary, the result of a three-year study, defines hundreds of terms in current usage in the field of labor-management relations.

"In part," states Dr. Dale Yoder, director of the center, in the foreword to the glossary, "the study has been undertaken on the assumption that since some industrial disputes and misunderstandings reflect differences in usage of terminology, uniform usage may contribute to greater clarity, understanding and industrial cooperation.

"Probably most important, however," continues Dr. Yoder, "is the intention to explain and interpret these terms to lay readers and thus to aid in developing accurate public understanding of current thinking and practice in the industrial relations field.

"The definitions...given have been carefully considered and represent preferable usage as illustrated in a wide range of recent industrial relations literature and as reflecting the best judgment of the center staff."

Examples of definitions contained in the glossary follow:

Agreement, master. A substantially identical contract signed by a large number of employers in an industry.

Agreement, sweetheart. Statement in a collective agreement expressing the desire and intention of both union and management to maintain harmonious relations.

Boycott, secondary. Coercion exerted by a union in a labor dispute to prevent third parties not directly involved in the dispute from patronizing the employer or handling his products.

Cold-storage training. Training of employees for higher level jobs in advance of the need for them in such positions.

Featherbedding. A term applied to the labor practice of creating additional jobs or of spreading work.

Goon. A person hired by a union or employer to incite violence during a strike.

Yellow-dog contract. Employment contract in which an employee agrees not to belong to any union for the duration of his employment.

Minneapolis, May — The great works of Johann Sebastian Bach will again be performed by the University of Minnesota Bach society at the eighth annual Bach festival in Northrop Memorial auditorium Tuesday, May 18, Wednesday, May 19 and Friday, May 21, at 8:30 p.m.

Assisted by members of the University orchestra, Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and Arthur B. Jennings, University organist, the program will be conducted by Donald H. Ferguson, professor of music and director of the Bach society.

The society, organized in 1923, when a group of student singers banded together for the expressed purpose of studying and performing the works of Bach, offered its first festival in 1940. Originally consisting of 52 voices and an orchestra of 12 pieces plus organ, the society has now grown to include approximately 100 members including University students, faculty members, Twin City working and professional people, Twin City high school students and amateur and professional musicians. Each Monday at 8 p.m., these people come to Room 105 Northrop Memorial auditorium to sing and play the works of Bach.

Overture No. 1 in C for two oboes, bassoon and strings, concerto for two pianos in C minor and the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in B minor will be the program offered at the Tuesday evening concert. Oboes for the overture will be played by Rhodamae Angelson and Kenneth Ahola and the bassoon will be played by William Santusco. Pianists Eva Kvardahl and Thelma Hunter will play the concerto.
An organ recital by Arthur E. Jennings, University organist, will comprise the program for Wednesday evening. He will play Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor, Allegro from the First Trio Sonata, Sarabande from the Pastoral Suite, Concerto No. 2 in A Minor, the choral preludes, "O Mensch, bewein dein Sünde gross" and "Nun freut euch, lieben Christen gottes", and the Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor.

The Friday evening offerings will consist of the cantatas, "Christ Lag In Todesbanden", the Concerto for Two Violins in D Minor and the Credo, Sanctus and Agnus Dei from the Mass in B Minor. Soloists for the mass will be Emilee Hokanson and Lois Clark, sopranos; Klaine Dahlgren Schmessler and Phyllis Stranger, contraltos; Roy Schmessler, Bass; and Hollis Johnson and Vern Raindollar, tenors.

Tickets for the concert, open to the public, may be purchased in Room 105 Northrop Memorial auditorium, or at the door the night of the concert.
Dr. Lowry Nelson, professor of sociology and head of the rural sociology section at the University of Minnesota, will talk on "Changing Growth and Distribution of Population" Friday (May 14) at 8 p.m. in Nicholson hall auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

Presenting the first in a series of public lectures sponsored by the University Social Science Research center, Dr. Nelson will review the facts and implications relating to changing sex ratios, changing age distributions and selective migration with reference to regions, rural-urban differences, social and economic institutions and standards of living.

Dr. Nelson will also point out the current population trends in the United States and will stress the factors that influence the rate of population growth such as economic, religion, occupation and rural or urban residence. In addition, Dr. Nelson will point out the characteristics of growth population in the metropolitan Twin Cities area.

Publications written by Dr. Nelson include "Population Trends in Minnesota", "Education of the Farm Population in Minnesota" and "Minnesota Farm Population Prospects".

Presiding chairman at the lecture will be Dr. Theodore C. Blegen, dean of the graduate school.

Two other lectures included in the 1948 social science series are scheduled for May 21 and 27. They will be given by Dr. O. B. Jessness, chief of the division of agricultural economics, who will talk on "Population Pressures and Food: Will the World Starve?", and Dr. Herbert Heaton, professor of history, who will talk on "Population Pressures and Politics."

All lectures will be open to the public without charge.
Minneapolis, May - Winner of the 1948-49 Northwest Daily Press association $100 scholarship, was announced at the University of Minnesota Cap and Gown Day convocation today (May 13). He is Gerald W. Kloss, 102 Sixth avenue North, Hopkins, who will graduate from the University this June.

An honor student majoring in journalism, Kloss is the editor of Ski-U-Mah, campus magazine, and columnist for the Minnesota Daily. He served in the army for three years and during that time, edited a service newspaper and magazine.

The scholarship was awarded to Kloss on the basis of scholastic ability and promise of future success in the field of journalism.

Also at the convocation, Lowell D. Mills, a native of Montevideo, holder of the 1947-48 Northwest Daily Press association scholarship and now news editor of the Hutchinson Leader, was named the outstanding senior man of the past year in journalism by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity.

Winners of Sigma Delta Chi awards for placing among the top ten per cent of journalism seniors in scholarship during the current year included four newsmen. They are, John C. McDonald, Minneapolis Tribune; John A. Crampton, Winona Republican-Herald; Wallace Lindell, New Ulm Daily Journal; and Cyril G. Smith, station WTAQ, Green Bay, Wisconsin.

Asher N. Christensen, associate professor of political science at the University of Minnesota, will deliver an address Thursday evening (May 13) at a meeting of the Institute of Latin American Studies at the University of Texas. He will talk on "Political Events and Governmental Changes in Argentina, 1945 to Date".
"There ought to be a law." These words come naturally to our lips whenever we see human conduct which shocks our sense of justice. They denote our belief in the need for law to regulate the conduct of men and our faith in the efficacy of law to accomplish this purpose. In our eagerness to achieve our desired end, we are apt to forget the conditions necessary in order that law may be an effective means of social control.

Law in its broad sense is the regulation of human relations. It includes government in all its branches and subdivisions; the agencies that make the rules, legislative, executive, and judicial; and the agencies which administer them. These are the instruments designed to promote the public welfare, to enable men to live together in peace, man with man, group with group, nation with nation. All these institutions national and international are within the compass of law.

The progress of the law is a good measure of the progress of civilization. Man's early days on earth were days of the most rugged individualism. There was little or no government and few rules for human conduct. There prevailed "the simple plan, that he should take who has the power, and he should keep who can." This was akin to the law of the jungle, the law of the tooth and the claw. The law of the jungle remains unchanged, but man, the thinking animal, has progressed to better law.
The unit of government, beginning with the family, enlarged to the blood kin, the tribe, the kingdom, the empire, the federation. The governors of these units, patriarch, chief, king or emperor kept a measure of peace within his unit.
But tribe fought with tribe, kingdom with kingdom, and empire with empire.

Within each unit the individual was restrained. The mere existence of even the crudest of governments implies a restraint on the natural freedoms of the governed. The first restraints were of physical force. A man should be privileged to swing his arms, but not when his fists will come in contact with the body of another man. The restraint of A is for the protection of B. These restraints and protections are reciprocal. B too is restrained for the protection of A.

The objective of the law is protection. Restraint is only the means to achieve this end. The law does not restrict the natural freedom of the individual except as it conceives restraint necessary for the protection of others. This is a thought to remember when you are speeding on the highway or when you see the amber light at the crossing.

The great problem of the law is the determination of what should be protected and how far protection should extend. Every person has desires which he wishes to satisfy, which in our legal terminology are called interests. So long as the interests of one do not conflict with the interests of others there is no problem. But when the interests of the one do conflict with the interests of others a problem arises. The determining criterion is society's standards of values. On many matters these standards are definitely determined. With respect to physical violence, theft, and fraud there is no doubt. One's interests in freedom of his body from harm, of his property from theft or fraud are unhesitatingly protected from the desires of those who would invade these interests. Likewise, on the other extreme, one's interest in freedom of his feelings from hurt are not protected from the interest of another in hurting them.
You may indulge your desire, if you are that kind of a person, to make faces at another, to thumb your nose at him, or say nasty words to him. The law does not encourage such acts, but the hurts are too trivial for protection. But between these extremes in respect to many human desires the choice is not between black and white, but between shades of grey. Society's standards of values hesitate between them. An example in modern law is the conflict between the individual's desire for privacy and freedom of the press. For strange though it may seem, there are persons who do not wish their pictures to be published. The law had to make a choice between these conflicting desires and in general has made it in favor of freedom of the press.

So far I have spoken of the protection which the law gives to individuals and the correlative restraints which it imposes upon individuals. These protections it gives to each and so to all; and these restraints it imposes upon each and so upon all.

The crux of the problem of applying law to the regulation of human relations lies in the uncertainty of the standards of value according to which protections are to be determined and restraints are to be imposed. For us, some interests are deemed of such paramount importance that the sovereign people have themselves declared through our constitutions that they shall be protected. Freedom of speech, of worship, of assembly, of petition, freedom from imprisonment without trial and other freedoms are not left in doubt. Those interests of individuals are protected not only as against other individuals, but against government itself. The value of these interests is not left to the determination of legislatures or courts. But many interests of men are left to be so determined, and uncertainty prevails as to the standards that should be applied to them. These standards must be determined before the problems can be brought within the demain of law.

There are other conditions that must be satisfied before the law can be extended to new areas of control. Law can not be effective unless it is supported by the preponderant opinion of those who are subject to it. Law is the expression of the life of a people, it does not mold that life. The human spirit, the human will, are stronger than any law. Laws prematurely enacted may defeat the purpose of those who enact them. The prohibition law is an illustration. Upon the enactment of the prohibitory law educational efforts stopped and reliance was placed on the law. But the people asserted their right to do as they pleased. Conservation would lead one to believe that there is a greater per capita consumption of intoxicating liquor now than there was before prohibition was enacted.

One must approve the purpose, but he may well doubt the wisdom, of proposals in the Congress to enact certain laws designed to affect certain practices in Southern states. These proposals relate to matters that have been regulated by the states, and the laws of Congress would be regarded as "foreign." They would run counter to strong feelings of many persons in those states. For these reasons, they may create attitudes of resistance not only to the laws themselves, but also to the process of education in respect to the practices to which the laws relate. Laws cannot replace education.

There are under discussion today two ideas for the extension of control by law in which the public are intensely interested. They relate to labor relations and to international relations.

The law does not require that labor controversies be submitted to courts or other governmental agencies for final decision. It does require that certain procedures be followed, but in the end the parties may resort to the lockout and the strike. These are methods of self help, somewhat analogous to private wars, which have long since been forbidden in other types of controversies. Why, it is being asked, does not the law forbid these practices, and require the parties to submit their disputes to courts?

There is reason for the question. The losses to the parties involved arising from lockouts and strikes are large. The losses to the public are widely distributed and less visible, but they are likewise large. In some cases, such as the railroads, coal mines, or steel industry, a prolonged cessation of work would amount to a national disaster. These losses could be prevented and everyone would be better off, if the law could take control as it has in other cases and require the parties to submit their controversy to a public tribunal and to abide by its decision. No man should be judge in his own cause, yet the law shrinks from requiring the parties to labor controversies to accept the decisions of others.

This hesitancy, it is submitted, is not due to any constitutional obstacle, but arises from the nature of the controversies. Labor disputes are in respect to wages, hours and conditions of work, and society has no clearly defined standards of values by which these questions may be determined. At present one may suspect they are being determined by degrees of pressure and resistance rather than by any nicely graduated standards of values. Again, the interests involved are vital, particularly for the laborers, and the outcome affects their way of life and their very livelihood. These vital interests may be analogized to the vital interests of nations which are withheld from the jurisdiction of international judicial tribunals. Finally large numbers are usually involved in these controversies. In most cases decided by courts, the parties are individuals or small groups, and the decisions do not affect large numbers of persons at one time. The large numbers involved in labor controversies create a solidarity in maintaining their vital interests and makes enforcement of decisions exceedingly difficult, and in extreme cases perhaps impossible.

Whether these are the reasons or not, it is clear that there is strong opposition at the present time to committing the final decision in labor disputes to judicial tribunals. So long as this attitude continues, it would be unwise to attempt such a control by law. But labor relations are in a transitory stage.
The process of education is going on; men are learning by costly experience. There is no greater threat to the continuance of free enterprise, and this includes free labor, than these private wars. Control by law will come some day.

It may be that the time has already come for setting up a court of labor relations to which the parties may voluntarily resort when other means have failed. Such a court should consist of men of outstanding ability, integrity, training and experience in labor relations. To such a court should be committed the task of working out principles and standards for the determination of such controversies. It would differ from an arbitration board which acts upon the principle of split the difference. Such a court might in court of time win the confidence of employers and laborors, and lead them to accept the rule of law and forgo the use of force.

The other current idea for extending control by law relates to the charter of the United Nations. Various proposals are being made to revise the charter so as to eliminate the veto power, or at least to curtail it. This, it is urged, should be done with the consent of Russia, if possible, but without it, if necessary.

This is dangerous impatience. The United Nations provides a world forum where the nations may express their ideals, their hopes and their fears. The debates in this forum are educating the world to the need for effective world controls. They are marshalling world opinion for right and freedom. No nation can remain unaffected by this process. It is education that is needed now, a long arduous process of education. The forum should be preserved for this purpose.

Law can do much for the welfare of peoples. But law alone is not enough. Its effectiveness depends upon the character of the peoples. This character is formed by the home, the school, the church and the University. It is upon the foundation which these provide that the law must rest.
Clear weather this evening (Friday, May 14) will mean that the University of Minnesota observatory atop the Physics building will be open to the public. Everyone who would like to see what the stars and planets look like through the University's big telescope is invited to visit the observatory during the evening, according to Walter Johnston of the astronomy department staff. The observatory will open at 8 p.m.

Minneapolis, May — Consisting of lectures, demonstrations and clinical practice, a postgraduate course in periodontology for practicing dentists of the Northwest, will be held Monday (May 17) through Friday (May 21) at the University of Minnesota. Cooperating with the University in sponsoring the course is the W. K. Kellogg Foundation, Battle Creek, Mich.

Among the subjects covered in lectures and demonstrations will be X-ray interpretation, charting and treatment of periodontal disease, histology and pathology of supporting structures, nutrition and home care.

All sessions of the course, under the general direction of Dr. Raymond E. Johnson, chairman of the division of periodontia, will be held in the school of dentistry in the Medical Sciences building on the Minneapolis campus.

Another dentistry program beginning Monday (May 17) is a postgraduate course in denture prosthesis, open to the same group and sponsored by the same agents.

The two-week denture prosthesis course which will last through May 28, will consist of a series of lectures on various phases of complete denture service and technical procedures in denture construction. Instructors will also demonstrate to participants the construction of dentures for patients under various technics.

Each member of the class in the two-week course, will construct a set of artificial dentures.

The denture prosthesis course will be given by Dr. Carl O. Flagstad, clinical professor of denture prosthesis and chairman of the division of dentistry, Dr. Roy M. Jernall, clinical associate professor of denture prosthesis, and associates. All sessions will be held in the school of dentistry.

Minneapolis, May  - Approximately 60 representatives from teacher training institutions in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, will gather at the University of Minnesota Saturday (May 15) for a one-day meeting sponsored by the National Association for Student Teaching in cooperation with the University college of education.

Purpose of the meeting, according to Dr. Paul R. Grim, director of student teaching, and member of the executive committee for the association, is to organize a regional unit of the National Association for Student Teaching.

The morning program will consist of talks on student teaching in the teaching education institutions of Minnesota, based on the results of a study by a subcommittee of the Minnesota Advisory Committee on Teacher Education and the 1949 Yearbook of the Association for Student Teaching, "The Evaluation of Student Teaching.

Dean W. E. Peik of the college of education, will give a talk on the program of the Association for Student Teaching at a luncheon at 12 noon.

Major findings and recommendations in the study of professional laboratory experiences will be reported by Margaret Lindsey, research associate for the sub-committee of the American Association of Teachers Colleges, during the afternoon meetings. A business meeting, election of officers and plans for the 1948-49 regional association meetings, will conclude the conference.

All sessions will be held in the Center for Continuation Study on the Minneapolis campus.

Three nationally famous musicians will serve as visiting staff members in the University of Minnesota music department during the 1948 summer session, according to Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the department of music.

Elie Siegmeister, composer and author from New York, will be at the University both terms, from June 14 to July 23 and from July 26 to August 27. Paul Christiansen, composer, noted choral conductor, and son of F. Melius Christiansen, organizer of the St. Olaf choir, will teach during the first term, and William H. Schempf, director of the music department at Lehigh university, Bethlehem, Penn., will teach during the second term.

Siegmeister, who will offer a course in American music and will teach advanced theory, orchestration and composition, was a fellow at the Julliard School of Music for a number of years, and has lived and studied in Paris, Vienna and Berlin. He is noted as a composer of orchestral and stage works on native American Themes. His works have been performed by Stokowski, Toscanini, Dimitri Mitropoulos, the New York Philharmonic orchestra, National Broadcasting company, and the Philadelphia, Detroit and Minneapolis Symphony orchestras. Siegmeister organized the American Ballad Singers in 1939, a group which appeared on the University's Artist's Course in 1944.

In addition to teaching a class in advanced harmony, Christiansen will conduct the University chorus during the first term. At present, Christiansen is chairman of the music department at Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn., and is noted as a composer as well as choral conductor. Many (More) of his orchestral compositions have been played by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and choral organizations throughout the country have sung his choral works. Christianson received his master of music degree from the Eastman School of Music.

Music theory will be taught during second term by Schempf. A graduate of the University of Wisconsin and the Eastman School of Music, where he was director of the Madrigal A Capella chorus, Schempf will also conduct the University chorus during the second term. After receiving scholarships to the Berkshire Music Center, Schempf studied advanced conducting under Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and Stanley Chapple, former director of the London Symphony orchestra.

The internationally famous Budapest string quartet will be on hand to teach violin, viola and cello, and a class in chamber music playing. The quartet will also play five chamber music recitals on the Minneapolis campus during the first term.

In addition to the three visiting professors and the string quartet, regular music staff members will be in residence during the summer session to teach all phases of music theory and music history on the graduate and undergraduate level.

The great works of Johann Sebastian Bach will again be performed by the University of Minnesota Bach society at the eighth annual Bach festival in Northrop Memorial auditorium Tuesday, May 18, Wednesday, May 19 and Friday, May 21, at 8:30 p.m.

Assisted by members of the University orchestra, Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and Arthur B. Jennings, University organist, the program will be conducted by Donald N. Ferguson, professor of music and director of the Bach society.

The society, organized in 1933, when a group of student singers banded together for the expressed purpose of studying and performing the works of Bach, offered its first festival in 1940. Originally consisting of 52 voices and an orchestra of 12 pieces plus organ, the society has now grown to include approximately 100 members including University students, faculty members, Twin City working and professional people, Twin City high school students and amateur and professional musicians. Each Monday at 8 p.m. these people come to Room 105 Northrop Memorial auditorium to sing and play the works of Bach.

Overture No. 1 in C for two oboes, bassoon and strings, concerto for two pianos in C. minor and the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in B minor will be the program offered at the Tuesday evening concert. Oboes for the overture will be played by Rhadames Angelucci and Kenneth Ohola and the bassoon will be played by William Santucci. Pianists Eva Knardahl and Thelma Hunter will play the concerto.

An organ recital by Arthur B. Jennings, University organist, will comprise the program for Wednesday evening. He will play Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor, Allegro from the First Trio Sonata, Sarabande from the Pastoral Suite, Concerto No. 2 in A Minor, the choral preludes, "O Mensch, bewein dein Gunde gross" and "Nun freutevch, lieben Christen g'mein", and the Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor.

The Friday evening offerings will consist of the cantata, "Christ Lag In Todesbanden", the Concerto for Two Violins in D Minor and the Credo, Sanctus and Agnus Dei from the Mass in B Minor. Soloists for the mass will be Eunice Hokenson and Lois Clark, sopranos; Elaine Dahlgran Schuessler and Phyllis Stranger, contraltos; Roy Schuessler, Bass; and Hollis Johnson and Vern Teindollar, tenors.

Rickets for the concert, open to the public, may be purchased in Room 105 Northrop Memorial auditorium, or at the door the night of the concerts.

The University of Minnesota music and music education departments will be hosts to the annual convention of the Minnesota Music Teachers' association June 14 and 15 in Scott hall on the Minneapolis campus.

Outstanding lecturers, composers, conductors, performers and music educators from New York, Kansas and Minnesota will appear on the two-day program which is open to Minnesota teachers in all branches of music including piano, violin, voice, harp, and organ.

Subjects other than music which will be covered include: "Psychology of Learning" by Dr. G. Lester Anderson, associate professor of education; "Anatomy of the Hand and Arm" by Dr. Bernard G. Lammin, clinical instructor in surgery; and "Audio-Visual Aids" by Prof. James Nickerson, University of Kansas.

A demonstration will be given of the English and Flemish bell system soon to be installed at the University. The bell system is a gift to the campus.

Elia Siegmeister, noted American composer from New York who will be on the summer session staff of the University's music department, will speak on "A Composer's Evaluation of American Folk Music" and will participate in the session devoted to the teaching of music theory in college.

In addition, a paper for the college music theory session will be read by Paul Christiansen, noted choral conductor, composer and chairman of the music department, Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn., who will also be a music department staff member for the first summer session.

Monday, at 8:15 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium, a special 10-piano recital, open to the public without charge, will be given by student winners of the Minnesota Music Teachers' Association piano contests.

The final event of the convention will take place Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. in Scott hall auditorium, when Prof. Felix Witzinger, Carleton college, presents a piano recital.
Dr. John T. Tate, research professor of physics at the University of Minnesota, will speak on "The Search for Truth" at 8:30 p.m. June 1, in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union on the Minneapolis campus.

Sponsored by the University chapters of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi, the lecture will be open to the public without charge.

Formerly dean of the college of science, literature and the arts at the University, Dr. Tate played an important role in allied and national defense during World War II as a member of the National Defense Research committee. For his work during the war, Dr. Tate received from President Truman the Medal of Merit and from King George VI the King's Medal "for service in the cause of freedom".

The University of Minnesota departments of history and classics with the cooperation of the Minnesota society of the Archaeological Institute of America, will present the color sound film "Triumph Over Time" Monday (May 24) at 8:30 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

Made recently in Greece under the auspices of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, the film shows the work of American archaeologists at various ancient sites in Greece. Scenes include the excavations in Corinth, the marketplace in Athens, the Homeric site of Pylos and many views of modern Greek life.

A display of archaeological material in the University library this week (May 17-24) supplements the film showing, which will be open to the public without charge.
Royal R. Shumway, assistant dean for students' work in the University of Minnesota's college of science, literature and the arts, will be honored by his colleagues at a farewell dinner at 6:30 p.m. today (Wednesday, May 19) in the dining hall of the Center for Continuation Study on the Minneapolis campus.

Dean Shumway will retire June 30, after 45 years of service to the University. He has held the post of assistant dean for students' work in the arts college since 1920, moving to that position from a professorship in the mathematics department.

Presiding at the farewell dinner will be Dean T. R. McConnell of the college of science, literature and the arts. Speakers will include J. W. Buchta, assistant dean of the senior college of the arts college; August C. Krey, professor of history; R. W. Brink, professor of mathematics; and Asher N. Christensen, associate professor of political science.

Dr. O. B. Jesness, chief of the University of Minnesota's division of agricultural economics, will speak on "Population Pressures and Food: Will the World Starve?" Friday (May 21) at 8 p.m. in Nicholson hall auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

In the second in a series of free public lectures sponsored by the University Social Science Research center, Dr. Jesness will consider the problems of whether science and technology can continue to provide increasing quantities of food for a constantly expanding world population and the present needs and future prospects of that population.

Dr. Jesness was appointed to his present position at the University in 1928. Additional offices he holds include: member of the board of directors, Midland National bank, Minneapolis; member of the board of the Minnesota Institute of Governmental Research; member of the advisory council for the agricultural committee of the American Bankers' association; director of the American Country Life association; and member of the council of the American Association of University Professors.

He is the author of "Cooperative Marketing of Farm Products", co-author of "The American Farmer and the Export Market" and co-author of "A Program for Land Use in Northern Minnesota".

The final lecture in the 1948 social science series will be given May 27, by Dr. Herbert Heaton, professor of history at the University. He will talk on "Population Pressures and Politics", following the central theme for the 1948 series: "People and Resources in the World of Today".

Minneapolis, May — Memorial Stadium at the University of Minnesota will be the scene of the annual military review of the University's Reserve Officers Training Corps unit Tuesday (May 25) at 4:30 p.m.

In the reviewing stand will be Betty Borin of Chisholm who has been designated "Sweetheart of the Regiment" and her attendants, Jean Turnquist and Patricia Taylor of Minneapolis.

Also reviewing the ROTC troops will be Colonel H. B. Bramlet from headquarters of the Fifth Army, Chicago; Dr. Malcolm M. Willey, academic vice president of the University; S. S. Gillam, president of the Minnesota department of the Sons of the American Revolution; Colonel Robert P. Bell, officer in charge of the Minnesota military district; and Colonel Raymond R. Tourtillott, senior Organized Reserve instructor for the State of Minnesota.

Following the review, the ROTC unit will hold a banquet at 6 p.m. in Coffman Memorial Union. Delegates to the national convention of the Sons of the American Revolution to be held in the Twin Cities next week will be guests at the review and the banquet.

Tuesday's review and banquet will highlight the annual inspection of the University's ROTC unit which will be conducted Monday (May 24) through Wednesday (May 26) by a Fifth Army inspection team headed by Colonel Bramlet.

Minneapolis, May — A Scandinavian Area Studies program, designed to meet the needs of students interested in careers in public service, journalism, foreign commerce and business, and those preparing for scholarship and teaching, will be continued at the University of Minnesota during the 1948 summer session, according to Lawrence D. Steefel, director of the program.

This enlarged program of study of the Scandinavian countries, open to both undergraduate and graduate students, was first established in the fall of 1947.

"The celebrating of the 'Swedish Pioneer Centennial' this summer gives the University greater opportunity to get special lecturers for the summer program", said Steefel.

One of the visiting lecturers will be Karl Arne Herbert Andersson, Sweden, who will teach a course in "Social Legislation and Social Institutions of the Scandinavian Countries" during the first term, June 14 to July 23. Andersson received his master of social sciences degree from the University of Stockholm in 1942. Since 1946, he has been a member of a committee in the Royal Swedish department of Social Affairs and has written several articles on social work and social legislation.

A new course to be offered first term this summer will be Modern Methods of Teaching the Scandinavian Languages which will be taught by Einar Ingvald Haugen, professor of Scandinavian languages at the University of Wisconsin. Haugen, who taught an army specialized training program from 1943 to 1944, will lecture on modern methods on teaching a language, with special reference to those developed and perfected in the army intensive language training programs.

Other first term courses will consist of beginning Norwegian, Swedish, Danish and Finnish and Government and Politics of the Scandinavian Countries.

Courses offered second term, July 26 to August 28, include beginning Norwegian, Swedish, Danish and Finnish, Kierkegaard and Scandinavian Philosophy, History of the Scandinavian Countries since 1814, the Contemporary Scandinavian Novel and Strindberg and the Drama in Revolt and Transition.
SPECIAL TO THE FERGUS FALLS JOURNAL

Betty J. Jorgenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Jorgenson, Fergus Falls, who is a sophomore in the college of science, literature and the arts at the University of Minnesota, was recently elected one of the queen candidates for the institute of technology's annual Engineers' Day.

Miss Jorgenson was sponsored by the University's institute of aeronautical science.

The Engineers' Day was observed May 21 and 22 with a program of parades, open houses, dances, and a field day in Como park, St. Paul. Senior students in the institute of technology were initiated into the Order of St. Pat at a knighting ceremony as a part of the celebration.

UNIVERSITY REGENTS
MAKE FIVE MAJOR
STAFF APPOINTMENTS

Minneapolis, May - Acting to reinforce the University of Minnesota academic staff, hard-hit by the retirement this year of several key figures, Regents of the University in their May meeting approved five major appointments including one dean and a new basketball coach.

Appointed to succeed Everett Fraser, retiring dean of the law school, is Maynard E. Pirsig, University professor of law. Pirsig received his bachelor of law degree from the University of Minnesota in 1925. Appointed instructor in January, 1926, he was named associate professor in 1930 and professor of law in 1933.

From 1931 to 1933, the new dean-elect was given a leave of absence from the University to develop a course in judicial administration for undergraduate law students. This course is now being introduced into several other law schools in the country. In 1942, Pirsig served as chairman of the State Bar association's committee on the Youth Correction Act and as chairman of that committee, helped prepare and write the "Youth Correction Act" which was passed by the Minnesota Legislature in 1947.

On leave of absence from the University from October 1942 to January 1943, he served as associate justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court. He is the author of "Pirsig's Dunnell on Minnesota Pleading" and "Cases and Materials on Judicial Administration".

James Gray, author and literary editor of the Chicago Daily News, was made a professor in the department of English, his appointment to become effective July 1. During the first two and one-half or three years of his professorship Gray will devote full time to writing a book on the history of the University which will be published by the University of Minnesota Press as a part of the school's centennial celebration in 1951.

After his graduation from the University in 1921, Gray joined the staff of the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch as an editorial writer, dramatic critic and literary editor. He has written several books about Minnesota, both fiction and non-fiction, and two years ago, he was appointed literary editor of the Chicago Daily News.

E. William Ziebarth, educational director of radio station WCCO, was named chairman of the speech department succeeding Frank M. Rarig, Sr., who will retire June 30. The 38-year-old educator, who received his doctor of philosophy degree from the University last March, has served in various capacities on the University staff since 1936, and will take up his duties in September with the rank of associate professor.

Named to succeed Darrel H. Davis, retiring professor and chairman of the department of geography, is Jan O. M. Brock, formerly of the University of Utrecht, Holland. Brock, whose appointment becomes effective in September, was born in Utrecht in 1904, and received his doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Utrecht in 1932. He also studied at the London School of Economics and the University of California. Brock has held teaching positions at the University of California, the Naval School of Military Government, Columbia University, the University of Ohio, and for the past two years, the University of Utrecht, Holland.

Another major appointment was that of Osborne Cowles, basketball coach at the University of Michigan, to succeed David MacMillan, who resigned as head basketball coach at the end of the last cage season. Cowles is a graduate of Carleton college, Northfield, where he was a four-letter man in football and basketball and a three-letter man in baseball. He has held coaching positions at Iowa State Teachers college, Carleton college, River Falls, Wis., Teachers college, Dartmouth college and the University of Michigan. He will hold the rank of associate professor.

How the science of linguistics can provide a fundamentally new approach to the problems of learning language will be explained by Dr. Charles C. Fries, professor of English and director of the English Language institute at the University of Michigan, in a public lecture, "Linguistic Science and Language Learning", at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday (May 26) in the auditorium of the Minnesota Museum of Natural History at the University of Minnesota.

Long recognized as one of the nation's outstanding scholars in the English language, Professor Fries has now become the leader in the movement to apply the methods of linguistics to the teaching of English as a foreign language. In 1940, he organized the English Language institute, which has been the parent organization for several similar institutes at other universities here and in Latin-American countries for the purpose of training persons to teach in this field.

Professor Fries was the first editor of the "Dictionary of Early Modern English" and, from 1936 to 1940, was the director of the Linguistic institute. He has been president of the National Council of Teachers of English and also of the Linguistic Society of America.

Two of Professor Fries' books, "The Teaching of the English Language" and "American English Grammar", effected extensive changes in textbooks and in teaching because of their stand against adherence to grammatical rules which lack validity in actual usage. His recent publications, "The Teaching of English as a Foreign Language" and, in collaboration with others, "The Teaching of English to Latin-Americans", already have influenced methods of teaching English to non-native learners.

The lecture is sponsored jointly by the University department of English and the department of linguistics and comparative philology.

A talk on "Democracy in Higher Education" will be given by Horace T. Morse, dean of the general college of the University of Minnesota, over KUOM, University radio station, Thursday (May 27) during the usual 11 a.m. convocation hour.

Dean Morse's talk will be presented as a part of the Minnesota University of the Air series.

After acting as teaching assistant in the University history department from 1928 to 1931, Dean Morse took a position in the high school and junior college in Ironwood, Mich. In 1936, he rejoined the University to serve on the faculty of the college of education. Appointed assistant director of the general college in 1940, he became director in 1945 and dean in 1946.

Dean Morse is the co-editor of "The Gopher Historian", published for junior historical societies in Minnesota.

Minneapolis, May — Outstanding orchestral and choral works written by composers from the Midwest will be played by the University of Minnesota Composers' Forum orchestra Sunday (May 23) at 4 p.m. in Northrop Memorial Auditorium in a free public concert.

The concert will conclude the week-long activities of the Composers' Forum sponsored by the University's music department as a means of stimulating interest in original musical compositions.

Composers from all over the country have submitted their scores to Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department. The Forum has given them an opportunity to hear their works played by a professional orchestra of approximately 70 pieces.

The tentative program for Sunday's concert will include: a work for chorus and orchestra entitled "Peace" written by William Latham, Teachers college, Cedar Falls, Iowa; the first movement of the " Violin Concerto in D Minor" with the composer Ilza Niemack, Iowa State college, Ames, Iowa, as the featured violin soloist; the "Overture on a Romantic Theme" by the Minneapolis composer, Robert Allen; a symphonic poem by Dr. Dale Miller, chairman of the fine arts division at the University of Minnesota, Duluth branch; some movements of a "Symphony for Strings and Brass" by Robert Kurka, Columbia university, New York; and an "Overture" by L. R. Bassett, Michigan.

The Budapest String Quartet, one of the foremost chamber music organizations in the world, will be on the University of Minnesota campus June 20 through July 23, where its members will instruct a class in chamber music and offer private lessons in violin, viola and cello.

Any musician in the United States is eligible to enroll in the class in chamber music or for private lessons or both, but is advised to make reservations as soon as possible with Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the University's music department.

But the public will also have an opportunity to hear the quartet when at least one of the six concerts it will present will be open to the public without charge. The other concerts will be open to University students and faculty members.

Among famous recordings by the Budapest string quartet are those of works by Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms.

Present members of the quartet are: Josef Roismann, first violin; Edgar Ortenberg, second violin; Boris Kroyt, viola; and Mischa Schneider, violoncello.
Harold C. Knutson, 3816 Forty-third avenue S., Minneapolis, freshman in the college of science, literature and the arts at the University of Minnesota, was recently named one of the winners in the Minnesota state college French contest open to all students of French in Minnesota colleges and universities.

Winners of the contest, which consisted of a written composition on any theme connected with French and a final oral examination, were awarded medals presented by J. J. Viala, French consul general stationed at Chicago.

The University of Minnesota music and music education departments will be hosts to the annual convention of the Minnesota Music Teachers' association June 14 and 15 in Scott hall on the Minneapolis campus.

Outstanding lecturers, composers, conductors, performers and music educators from New York, Kansas and Minnesota will appear on the two-day program which is open to Minnesota teachers in all branches of music including piano, violin, voice, harp, and organ.

Subjects other than music which will be covered include: "Psychology of Learning" by Dr. G. Lester Anderson, associate professor of education; "Anatomy of the Hand and Arm" by Dr. Bernard G. Lannin, clinical instructor in surgery; and "Audio-Visual Aids" by Prof. James Nickerson, University of Kansas.

A demonstration will be given of the English and Flemish bell system soon to be installed at the University. The bell system is a gift to the campus.

Elie Siegmeister, noted American composer from New York who will be on the summer session staff of the University's music department, will speak on "A Composer's Evaluation of American Folk Music" and will participate in the session devoted to the teaching of music theory in college.

In addition, a paper for the college music theory session will be read by Paul Christiansen, noted choral conductor, composer and chairman of the music department, Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn., who will also be a music department staff member for the first summer session.

Monday, June 14, at 8:15 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium, a special 10-piano recital, open to the public without charge, will be given by student winners of the Minnesota Music Teachers' association piano contests.

The final event of the convention will take place Tuesday, June 15, at 8:15 p.m. in Scott hall auditorium, when Prof. Felix Witzinger, Carleton college, presents a piano recital.

Minneapolis, May — Three nationally famous musicians will serve as visiting staff members in the University of Minnesota music department during the 1948 summer session, according to Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the department of music.

Elie Siegmeister, composer and author from New York, will be at the University both terms, from June 14 to July 23 and from July 26 to August 27. Paul Christiansen, composer, noted choral conductor, and son of F. Melius Christiansen, organizer of the St. Olaf choir, will teach during the first term, and William H. Schempf, director of the music department at Lehigh university, Bethlehem, Pa., will teach during the second term.

Siegmeister, who will offer a course in American music and will teach advanced theory, orchestration and composition, was a fellow at the Julliard School of Music for a number of years, and has lived and studied in Paris, Vienna and Berlin. He is noted as a composer of orchestral and stage works on native American Themes. His works have been performed by Stokowski, Toscanini, Dimitri Mitropoulos, the New York Philharmonic orchestra, National Broadcasting company, and the Philadelphia, Detroit and Minneapolis Symphony orchestras. Siegmeister organized the American Ballad Singers in 1939, a group which appeared on the University's Artist's Course in 1944.
In addition to teaching a class in advanced harmony, Christiansen will conduct the University chorus during the first term. At present, Christiansen is chairman of the music department at Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn., and is noted as a composer as well as choral conductor. Many of his orchestral compositions have been played by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and choral organizations throughout the country have sung his choral works. Christiansen received his master of music degree from the Eastman School of Music.

Music theory will be taught during second term by Schempf. A graduate of the University of Wisconsin and the Eastman School of Music, where he was director of the Madrigal A Capella chorus, Schempf will also conduct the University chorus during the second term. After receiving scholarships to the Berkshire Music Center, Schempf studied advanced conducting under Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and Stanley Chapple, former director of the London Symphony orchestra.

The internationally famous Budapest string quartet will be on hand to teach violin, viola and cello, and a class in chamber music playing. The quartet will also play five chamber music recitals on the Minneapolis campus during the first term.

In addition to the three visiting professors and the string quartet, regular music staff members will be in residence during the summer session to teach all phases of music theory and music history on the graduate and undergraduate level.
Dr. Charles C. Fries, professor of English and director of the English Language institute at the University of Michigan, will explain how the science of linguistics can provide a fundamentally new approach to the problems of learning language Wednesday (May 26) at 3:30 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History at the University of Minnesota.

Title of his lecture will be "Linguistic Science and Language Learning". The public is invited to attend.

Professor Fries, one of the nation's outstanding scholars in the English language, organized the English Language institute in 1940. Based on this organization, several similar institutes at other universities here and in Latin-American countries for the purpose of training persons to teach in the field, have now been established.

Two books written by Professor Fries which have effected extensive changes in textbooks and in teaching because of their stand against adherence to grammatical rules which lack validity in actual usage, are, "The Teaching of the English Language" and "American English Grammar".

The lecture is sponsored jointly by the University department of English and the department of linguistics and comparative philology.
Dr. Herbert Heaton, professor of history at the University of Minnesota, will deliver the final lecture in the 1948 series sponsored by the University Social Science Research center, Thursday (May 27) at 8 p.m. in Nicholson hall on the Minneapolis campus. He will talk on "Population Pressures and Politics".

Following the central theme for the 1948 lecture series: "People and Resources in the World of Today", Dr. Heaton will present some of the basic population problems underlying contemporary international frictions and population in relation to politics, national and international.

Dr. Heaton was born in Yorkshire, England, and came to the United States in 1927. That same year he was appointed professor of history at the University of Minnesota. Prior to his coming to the United States, Dr. Heaton lectured at universities in England, Australia and Canada.

Offices Dr. Heaton holds include: secretary of the committee on research in economic history for the Social Science Research Council; fellow of the Royal Historical society; member of the Royal Economic society, American Historical association, Minnesota Historical society, the American Association of University Professors and the American Philosophical society.

Dr. Heaton is the author of: "Welfare Work", "Yorkshire Woolen and Worsted Industries", "Modern Economic History, with Special Reference to Australia", History of Trade and Commerce, with Special Reference to Canada", "The British Way to Recovery" and "Economic History of Europe".

Dr. Lloyd M. Short, director of the public administration center and professor of political science, will preside as chairman at the lecture which will be open to the public without charge.
The story of the tragic effect of the war on two young Roman bootblacks who cast all their frustrated love upon a horse is told in the Italian film "Shoe Shine" to be shown at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (June 2) at 4 and 8 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Discovered by Vittorio De Sica, director of the film, when they were shining G. I.'s shoes on the streets of Rome, the 12 and 14-year-old boys who play the leading roles are not professional actors but two small boys who were living in the degenerate atmosphere of the Italian metropolis.

In their longing to buy a beautiful dappled horse from a riding academy, the boys become involved in black market dealings, imprisoned, turn into real criminals, and are made to hate and betray each other. When the boys are thrown into prison and are treated brutally, the authors of the screen-script do not present the jailers as unkind, but simply as people who have ceased to be human in their wanton scheme for the corruption of their innocent charges.

Admission tickets for the film, the last in the spring quarter series presented by the University Film society, may be purchased at the Downtown Ticket Office, Minneapolis; the Field- Schlick ticket office in St. Paul and Room 3 Westbrook hall on the Minneapolis campus. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door.

Two outstanding art exhibitions will be on display at the University of Minnesota Gallery in Northrop Memorial auditorium during most of June.

An exhibition of 100 modern drawings selected for tour by the Museum of Modern Art from its collection of approximately 240 works will be on display Saturday (May 29) through June 25.

Consisting of five different sections, the exhibition will include European drawings, drawings by artists from Latin America and the United States, works of the Cubists, selections of fantastic and surrealist drawings and a group of sculptors' drawings.

Beginning June 3 and continuing through June 24, a retrospective exhibition of Ben Shahn's paintings, drawings, posters and sketches for murals will be on display. Also circulated by the Museum of Modern Art, the exhibition consists of easel paintings ranging in date from 1931 to 1947, a selection of the artist's drawings, posters Shahn has made for governmental and private agencies and a small group of Shahn's photographs. In addition, a selection from the Sacco Vanzetti series will be shown.

Born in Kaunas, Russia, in 1898, Shahn arrived in the United States in 1906 and lived with his family in Brooklyn, New York. After studying at several schools in the United States, he made two trips to Europe in 1925 and 1927 when he traveled in France, Italy, Spain and North Africa. While in France, Shahn was influenced by the school of Paris Masters, particularly Rouault.
Returning to the United States in 1929, Shahn had his first one-man exhibition at the Downtown Gallery, New York, in 1930. In 1931, he turned away from the theory of art as "pure" expression and decided to use his pictorial talents for story-telling and social commentary, as men like Hogarth and Daumier had done before him. Within seven months after deciding on this change of style, Shahn completed his famous series of 23 gouache paintings on the trial of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the American-Italian anarchists who were executed in August, 1927.

From 1933 to 1944, Shahn completed several works for the governmental agencies and during that period continued easel painting and was represented by 11 paintings in the Museum of Modern Art's American Realists and Magic Realists exhibition in 1943.

Gallery hours for the exhibitions will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The presentation of Robert Penn Warren's short novel "Prime Leaf" on Saturday, June 5 at 7 p.m. over KUOM, University of Minnesota radio station, will officially open the third annual Summer Drama Festival, a series of nine hour-long radio dramatizations of American novels.

Written and produced by staff members of KUOM and the University Radio Guild, the dramatizations will be broadcast each Saturday at 7 p.m. beginning June 5 and ending July 31.

The novels which have been chosen for the 1948 series represent the American scene with plays of regional settings taking the spotlight. Novels of social significance were selected for the 1946 series and novels of inter-cultural significance were selected for the 1947 series.

Preceding each Saturday evening dramatization a member of the University faculty will give a 15 minute talk on the novel and author. This talk will be given on the program "Tonight At Seven" which is aired at 5:45 p.m. the day of the dramatization.

Novels to be presented during the 1948 series include: House of Seven Gables, Huckleberry Finn, Wolf Song, The Victim, Studs Lonigan and The Big Money.
The University of Minnesota Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will present its annual public senior commencement recital Friday (May 28) at 8:30 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Accompanied by the orchestra, the music students who will participate as soloists and their selections are as follows:

Minneapolis, May - Something new in the way of subject matter will be offered at the University of Minnesota high school during a special summer session, June 14 to June 23, open to any seventh through twelfth grade student in the Northwest.

Rather than hold fast to the traditional "readin', writin', and 'rithmetic" approach, staff members of the school will present courses designed to enrich and supplement students' work of the regular school year, according to Dr. Minard W. Stout, assistant professor and principal, University high school.

Emphasizing advanced techniques of instruction and personalized attention to the student, the courses will include several different departments such as art, commercial, English, home economics, languages, mathematics, music, science and social studies.

Aspiring journalists and lovers of literature will have an opportunity to enroll in a journalism workshop, creative writing class or a course in contemporary literature which includes the study of magazines, newspapers and current best-seller books.

A study of national elections with special emphasis on issues involved in the coming elections and the 1948 presidential candidates, will also be included in the summer session. The social studies department will offer a course on the United Nations with a review of the charter, countries in the United Nations and United Nations and world peace. The course in local government being offered will have as its text the proposed Minneapolis charter and will include a study of the areas, organization, legal status, powers and responsibility of local government.

In addition to the special courses being offered, classes in courses held during the regular school year will be included in the summer session curriculum, Dr. Stout said.

Final date for registration without penalty is June 15.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

BACCALAUREATE TO OPEN U. OF M.
COMMENCEMENT WEEK ACTIVITIES

Minneapolis, May — University of Minnesota alumni and students alike will participate in a round of spring commencement activities beginning with the Baccalaureate service on Sunday, June 6, and continuing through graduation night on June 12, when approximately 3,200 degrees will be awarded.

On Sunday, after completing the traditional march from the knoll to the steps of Northrop Memorial auditorium, the graduating seniors garbed in academic costumes, will enter the auditorium for the 11 a.m. baccalaureate service where they will hear the Rev. Jacob R. Perkins of Council Bluffs, Ia., talk to them on the subject "Mankind Tomorrow".

The Rev. Perkins is the author of several books including the widely-read "The Emperor's Physician" and "Antioch Actress". He has also written a play, "The Money Changers".

Invocation will be delivered by the Rev. George P. Conger, head of the University's philosophy department.

Taking the spotlight on Alumni Day, June 11, will be the classes whose numerals end in three or eight, ranging all the way from the class of 1883 to the class of 1943. The returning classes will have their separate luncheons at noon in Coffman Memorial Union. In the afternoon, the "old grads" will make tours of the campus noting the changes and reviving memories of their own "campus days".

The Alumni dinner at 6 p.m. in the main ballroom of Coffman Union will mark the climax of the day. Approximately 600 alumni are expected to attend, according to E. B. Pierce, director of alumni relations. Thomas William Phelps, New York broker, who received his bachelor of arts degree from the University in 1923, will act as master of ceremonies. Highlighting the evening, Arthur R. Hustad, president of the general alumni association, will award each member of the 50 year class (1898) present at the dinner, a special diploma entitled "graduate emeritus".

As far as some 3,200 graduating seniors are concerned, the main event will occur Saturday, June 12, at 8 p.m. when they will be awarded their diploma certificates at commencement exercises in Memorial stadium. Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University, will preside over the exercises and will deliver the charge to the class. Deans of the various schools will then hand the diploma certificates to candidates from their divisions.

University marshals will present academic hoods to those who are receiving doctor of medicine and doctor of philosophy degrees. The Rev. George P. Conger will deliver the invocation.

Minneapolis, May  -- Roy G. Blakey, University of Minnesota professor of economics who will retire June 30, will receive the Alpha Kappa Psi Silver Service award, signifying outstanding achievement in his field and service to the school of business administration, at a testimonial dinner Thursday (June 3) at 7 p.m. in the junior ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union.

Approximately 150 are expected to attend the dinner, sponsored by the Alpha Eta chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi. Lawrence S. Clark, vice president and secretary of the Twin City Hardwood Lumber company, will act as toastmaster. Four speakers will be included on the program; Richard L. Kozelka, dean of the school of business administration; Frederic B. Garver, professor of economics; Henry W. Larson, Flour City Press, Minneapolis; and Raymond F. Tarkman, past president, Alpha Eta chapter, Alpha Kappa Psi.

Professor Blakey received his doctor of philosophy degree from Columbia University in 1912 and was appointed to the University of Minnesota staff in 1919. He has acted as consultant on tax matters at the federal, state and local level. Among the tax systems he has helped set up are those of North Carolina, West Virginia and Utah. He has served as an economic analyst for the United States Treasury department and from 1935 to 1937 was chief of the economic research division of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

From 1939 to 1942, Professor Blakey served as a consultant for the National Resources Planning board and is an ex-president of the Minnesota State Tax association. He was also director, co-editor and co-author of various studies and publications of the United States Department of Commerce from 1935 to 1937. He is the author and co-author of several books including "The United States Beet Sugar Industry and the Tariff", "Taxation in West Virginia", "Taxation in Minnesota" and "Studies in State and Local Finance". Dr. Blakey is a charter member of Alpha Kappa Psi.
Katharine J. Densford, director of the University of Minnesota school of nursing, several of her associates and approximately 30 University student nurses, will attend the biennial nursing convention Monday (May 31) to June 4, in Chicago.

More than 10,000 registered professional nurses are expected to attend the convention which is sponsored jointly by the American Nurses' association, the National Organization for Public Health Nursing and the National League of Nursing Education, according to Miss Densford, who will preside at the convention.

Theme of the convention will be "America's Nursing Care - A Professional Challenge and a Public Responsibility". Participants will propose solutions to solve the present nursing crisis which threatens the nation's health standards.

Also at the convention, an election will be held to name a successor to Miss Densford as president of the American Nurses' association.

Minneapolis, May - The Budapest String Quartet, one of the foremost chamber music organizations in the world, will be on the University of Minnesota campus June 20 through July 23, where its members will instruct a class in chamber music and offer private lessons in violin, viola and cello.

Any musician in the United States is eligible to enroll in the class in chamber music or for private lessons or both, but is advised to make reservations as soon as possible with Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the University's music department.

But the public will also have an opportunity to hear the quartet when at least one of the six concerts it will present will be open to the public without charge. The other concerts will be open to University students and faculty members.

Among famous recordings by the Budapest string quartet are those of works by Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms.

Present members of the quartet are: Josef Roismann, first violin; Edgar Ortenberg, second violin; Boris Kroyt, viola; and Mischa Schneider, violoncello.

The University of Minnesota Faculty Dancing club will conclude its social season of the current school year with a formal dinner-dance Saturday evening (June 5). The dance, from 9 p.m. to midnight, will be held in the grand ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union preceded by the 6:30 p.m. buffet dinner in the Campus club dining room.

During intermission, from 10:30 to 11 p.m., the nominating committee consisting of Professors Charles V. Netz, John L. McKelvey and Alfred O. C. Nier, will report, and officers for the coming year will be elected.

With many members planning to bring guests, a record attendance is expected for the last dance of the season, according to Tracy F. Tyler, president of the club.

In charge of entertainment for Saturday evening's dance is Professor Francis M. Boddy. In addition to President and Mrs. Tyler, executive committee members responsible for this year's successful season consist of the following professors and their wives: Edward S. Loyo, secretary-treasurer; Ralph A. Piper, music chairman; William S. Howell, refreshments; Millard H. La Joy, hospitality; Alfred O. C. Nier, arrangements; Edmund A. Nightingale, Bryce L. Crawford, Jr., Colonel Richard A. Ericson, Robert A. Phillips and Clayton O. Rost.

The Italian film "Shoe Shine", the last in the spring quarter series of foreign films presented by the University of Minnesota Film society, will be shown Wednesday (June 2) at 4 and 8 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

"Shoe Shine" is the story of the tragic effect of the war on two young Roman bootblacks who, in their longing to buy a beautiful dappled horse from a riding academy, become involved in black market dealings. The boys eventually become imprisoned, turn into real criminals and are made to hate and betray each other.

Discovered by Vittorio De Sica, director of the film, when they were shining G. I.'s shoes on the streets of Rome, the 12 and 14-year-old boys who play the leading roles are not professional actors but two small boys who were living in the degenerate atmosphere of the Italian metropolis.

Admission tickets for the film may be purchased at the Downtown Ticket Office, Minneapolis; the Field-Schlick ticket office in St. Paul and Room 3 Westbrook hall on the Minneapolis campus. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door before each performance.

Minneapolis, June — Dr. Joseph Warren Beach, retiring head of the University of Minnesota English department, will be honored by his colleagues and friends at a luncheon Thursday (June 3) at 12 noon in the junior ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union. A specially bound copy of "Forms of Modern Fiction", a book of 23 essays collected in his honor and published by the University of Minnesota Press, will be presented to the veteran educator at the luncheon by Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University.

Principal speaker at the luncheon for Dr. Beach will be James Gray, literary editor of the Chicago Daily News, whose recent appointment as professor of English at the University, will become effective July 1.

Copies of "Forms of Modern Fiction", edited by William Van O'Connor, assistant professor of English at the University, and published as a tribute to one of its most distinguished professors, will go on sale at all book stores and will be placed in libraries throughout the country on Thursday (June 3).

The book contains critical studies by outstanding authors of forms and techniques carried on by modern novelists. A considerable portion of the criticism has been written by Dr. Beach, and some of the essays reprinted in this volume are extensions of his specific work.

At 10:45 a.m. Friday (June 4) Dr. Beach and Dr. O'Connor will be interviewed by Helen L. Mac Donald, sales manager of the University Press, over KUOM, University radio station.

Minneapolis, June — Something new in the way of awards will be presented to a University of Minnesota senior dental student at the school of dentistry's annual Honor Day program Thursday (June 3) at 10 a.m. in the amphitheater of the Medical Sciences building.

Proving that the virtue of cleanliness has its reward, Spencer Ferguson, building caretaker, known affectionately to his friends in the school of dentistry as "Fergy", will present a $10 janitor's award to the senior dental student who has kept his equipment and working space in the neatest order.

More traditional awards which will be bestowed during the program include the presentation of three keys by Omicron Kappa Upsilon, honorary dental fraternity.

These keys will go to Kiyoshi Iseki and Kenneth S. Ozaki, both of Honolulu, Hawaii, and Wayne C. Romberger, Abilene, Kansas. They were selected on the basis of scholarship and outstanding promise in their field.

Harvey B. Washburn, St. Paul, president of the American Dental association, will be initiated as an honorary member of Omicron Kappa Upsilon.

Subscriptions to dental journals will be awarded to four seniors whose names will be read at the program.

Dr. William H. Crawford, dean of the school of dentistry, will act as master of ceremonies and will read off a list of students, freshmen through seniors, who have a "B" average or better.

Dr. Franklin C. McLean of the department of physiology, University of Chicago, who is noted for his work in the general field of calcification and bone growth, will deliver the annual Elias P. Lyon lecture Friday (June 4) at 7:30 p.m. in the amphitheater of the Medical Sciences building on the University of Minnesota campus. He will talk on "Calcification and Ossification".

The Lyon lectureship was established in November 1937, following the death of Dr. Lyon who was dean of the University medical school from 1913 until his retirement in July 1936. Dr. Lyon's widow still resides in the family home at 321 Union street, S. E., Minneapolis, and is an important contributor to the University hospital library.

Anyone interested in the subject of the lecture is invited to attend, according to Dr. Harold S. Diehl, dean of medical sciences.

Minneapolis, June - Two German broadcasters, Otto Herr, chief of the news and politics departments of Radio Frankfurt, and Peter Kehm, program director of Radio Stuttgart, will visit the University of Minnesota campus during part of June where they will observe radio operations at KUOM, the University radio station.

Herr will be in Minneapolis from June 12 to June 17, and Kehm will make his visit from June 17 to June 23, according to Burton Paulu, manager of KUOM. While in Minneapolis, the German broadcasters will also visit other Minnesota radio stations, Paulu said.
George Kildon Michaelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Michaelson, Lawrence, who is a sophomore in the college of science, literature and the arts at the University of Minnesota, was recently rewarded for "unselfish service to the University band" when Gerald R. Prescott, bandmaster, presented him with the 1948 Band Appreciation Day scholarship.

Michaelson, who has been band manager during the current school year, was also presented a band manager's key awarded to him on the basis of three quarters of service to the band in that capacity. He has played the tuba in the band ever since he came to the University, and the scholarship provides that he will serve as band manager again next year.

In presenting the scholarship and key, Prescott praised Michaelson for his dependability, attitude, sense of humor, ability to work with other students, staff and University officials, and his loyalty to the band.

Michaelson, a pre-law student, is a master of Phi Sigman Phi, honorary band fraternity.
Phi Delta Kappa, national honorary and professional fraternity for men in the field of education, initiated 26 graduate students and faculty members of the University of Minnesota Wednesday (June 2) at the University Grove home of the fraternity's faculty sponsor, Dr. Tracy F. Tyler, associate professor of education.

Seventy-five members and initiates assembled at an outdoor picnic dinner, which had been prepared and served by a committee of the fraternity, immediately following the initiation.

Dr. Robert J. Keller, assistant professor of educational research, installed the following officers for 1948-49: president, Manfred H. Schrupp, University high school instructor; membership vice president, Ellsworth M. Gerritz, assistant in educational administration; program vice president, Keith N. McFarland, instructor and assistant to the dean of the college of agriculture, forestry and home economics; secretary, John E. Free, Jr., teaching assistant in education; treasurer, Howard F. Nelson, University high school instructor; historian, Ellis Schweickhard, principal, Burroughs and Kenwood schools, Minneapolis; and faculty sponsor, Dr. Tyler.

Weekly luncheon meetings on Wednesdays have been planned by the fraternity for the University's summer session. The first meeting is scheduled for June 16. They will be held in 307 Coffman Memorial Union at noon.

Minneapolis, June - Registration for the summer session at the University of Minnesota will be conducted in Norris gymnasium rather than in the fieldhouse as previously announced, True E. Pettengill, University recorder, stated Thursday (June 3).

The summer session registration period will be June 14 and 15, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

Students in all colleges will begin their registration procedure by reporting to the registration desks in Norris gymnasium, Pettengill explained.

Summer session classes will start at 8 a.m. June 16.
Minneapolis, June - Student delegates and chaplains from more than 400 Newman clubs throughout the United States and possessions, will attend the thirty-fourth annual convention of the National Federation of Newman Clubs September 3 through 5 at the University of Minnesota, the Rev. Leonard P. Cowley, chaplain of Catholic students at the University announced Thursday (June 3).

"The Social Responsibility of the Catholic Student", the theme chosen for the convention, will be discussed in panels and informal meetings.

Purpose of the convention, according to Father Cowley, is to integrate the activities of all Newman clubs, which have been established to supplement education at secular universities and colleges, with principles of Catholic life.

Convention headquarters will be the University Newman hall, 1228 Fourth street, S. E., and the Radisson hotel, Minneapolis.

"The Ten Million Dollar Debtor" will be the subject of the Baccalaureate address to be delivered to the 1948 June graduating class at the University of Minnesota Sunday (June 6) by Dr. John M. Phillips, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Duluth. The Baccalaureate services will be held in Northrop Memorial Auditorium at 11 a.m. following a procession of the graduating class and faculty, galbed in academic costume, from the Knoll to the auditorium.

A native of Illinois, Dr. Phillips was educated at Illinois college, the Boston University School of Theology and at Harvard University. He served as acting dean of Babson's Institute of Business Administration and for four years headed the department of religion at the University of Omaha. He also held the position of secretary of the Rotary club of Boston for four years.

Dr. Phillips has served pastorates at Lynn, Mass.; Manchester, N. H.; Akron, Ohio; Hartford, Conn.; and Omaha, Neb., as well as at Duluth.

DULUTH MINISTER
TO SPEAK SUNDAY
AT "U" BACCALAUREATE

Minneapolis, June — Dr. John M. Phillips, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Duluth, will speak to the largest graduating class in the history of the University of Minnesota Sunday (June 6) at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium, when he delivers the annual spring baccalaureate address. His subject will be "The Ten Million Dollar Debter".

Before entering the auditorium for the services, the 3,226 candidates for degrees and faculty of the University, dressed in academic costume, will assemble on the knoll at 10:30 a.m. to make the traditional march from the Knoll to the auditorium entrance. Leading the procession will be the University band in full dress uniform.

A native of Illinois, Dr. Phillips was educated at Illinois college, the Boston University School of Theology and Harvard university. He served as acting dean of Babson's Institute of Business Administration and for four years, headed the department of religion at the University of Omaha. He was also secretary of the Rotary club of Boston for four years.

Before going to Duluth, Dr. Phillips served pastorates at Lynn, Mass., Manchester, N. H., Akron, Ohio, Hartford, Conn. and Omaha, Neb.
Minneapolis, June — A new outlet for box inlet drop spillways which will prevent swirling water from digging large holes and eating away soil-saving dams and highway fills during floods, is described in a report just released by Soil Conservation Service research engineers working at the University of Minnesota's St. Anthony Falls Hydraulic laboratory.

The report, written by Charles A. Donnelly, hydraulic engineer for the Soil Conservation service, and published by the United States Department of Agriculture, describes the studies on the outlet which were conducted over a two-year period at the St. Anthony Falls laboratory. The report also tells in detail how to design the new outlet.

A box inlet drop spillway, with which this outlet is used, is a rectangular box-shaped structure, open at the top and the downstream end, according to Dr. Lorenz G. Straub, director of the hydraulic laboratory and head of the civil engineering department at the University. The spillway is set in a gulley, a drainage ditch, or irrigation ditch, and water is directed into the box by dikes. The outlet is attached to the open end of the box to carry the water harmlessly into the gulley or ditch, Dr. Straub further explained.

Soil Conservation district cooperators are already using the new drop spillway exit to admit water to their drainage ditches without damage when draining farm land so that larger crops can be produced. Engineers who must control the flow of irrigation water and devise means of preventing gulleys from destroying our soil resources also are using the new outlet, Dr. Straub said.

The study on the new outlet is one in a series of studies to develop better soil conservation structures being carried on at the St. Anthony Falls laboratory in cooperation with the agricultural experiment station of the University, and the research office of the United States Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation service.

Discoveries made at the laboratory are used all over the United States since this is the only location where the Soil Conservation service is studying ways of improving structures used in the Soil Conservation Service soil and water conservation program, Dr. Straub said.

Recent visitors at the laboratory have included conservationists from several other countries including Sweden, New Zealand and China.
U. OF M. TO GRADUATE 3,226,
LARGEST CLASS IN HISTORY

Minneapolis, June - The largest June graduating class in the 97-year history of the University of Minnesota will join the ranks of Minnesota alumni Saturday (June 12) when diploma certificates will be presented to 3,226 students at commencement exercises in Memorial Stadium.

With Saturday's record-breaking commencement, the University will have conferred a total of 6,359 degrees during the 1947-48 school year, according to R. E. Summers, dean of admissions and records. Of the 6,359 students receiving degrees during the year, more than 3,500 are veterans of World War II, according to the dean.

In the June class, the college of science, literature and the arts rates first place with 683 candidates for degrees. The college of education falls in second place with 377 candidates, and the institute of technology is a close third with 373 candidates. The school of business administration takes fourth place with 339 candidates. Doctor of medicine degrees will be awarded to 51 students.

Interesting sidelights on the June graduation include a husband and wife team and a mother and son team. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Diefenbach, who met in an operating room at University Hospitals, will walk across the stage together Saturday night when they both receive their bachelor of medicine degrees.
Following graduation, they will serve a year of internship at Northwestern hospital, Minneapolis, and then will go into practice in Minneapolis. He intends to specialize in obstetrics, she in pediatrics.

The mother and son who will graduate together are Mrs. Richard Hart and Richard Hart, Jr., Moose Lake. The son will receive his law degree, and his mother, a bachelor of science degree in home economics.

Mrs. Hart's attendance at the University has not been quite as regular as that of her son's, however. When her husband served as representative in the state legislature in 1941, and they lived in St. Paul, she attended the University the winter quarter, followed up with a correspondence course, and did the same thing in 1943 and 1945. This winter, she spent her last quarter in residence and gained enough credits for graduation. Mrs. Hart has enough honor points to graduate magna cum laude, but student residence rulings may deny her that privilege.

Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University, will preside over the commencement exercises and will deliver the charge to the class. Deans of the various schools will then award diploma certificates to candidates from their academic divisions.

University marshals will present academic hoods to those who are receiving doctor of medicine and doctor of philosophy degrees. The Rev. George P. Conger will deliver the invocation.

Alumni Day at the University of Minnesota will be celebrated Friday (June 11) with special emphasis on paying tribute to three distinguished alumni, who by their accomplishments, have brought honor to their alma mater.

The University's "Builder of the Name" medal, established by the Board of Regents in 1947, will be awarded to E. B. Pierce, retiring field secretary and director of alumni relations, at the Alumni Day dinner at 6 p.m. in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union. President J. L. Morrill will present the gold medal to Pierce in recognition of his many years of enthusiastic and untiring service to his University.

It will be the second occasion on which the medal has been awarded. The first "Builder of the Name" award was presented to Fred B. Snyder, chairman of the Board of Regents, last February during University of Minnesota Week.

Pierce also will be honored by the award of a special scroll which will be presented to him at the dinner by Arthur R. Hustad of Minneapolis, president of the General Alumni association.

The text of the scroll states, in the opening paragraph:

"In appreciation of his 45 years of devoted service to the University of Minnesota as an administrative officer and as executive secretary of the General Alumni association, the graduates and all former students of the University of Minnesota present this scroll to Ernest Boynton Pierce '04".

The scroll also recites how Pierce's unselfish work has added to the stature of the University and his service and devotion have made a lasting impression on the life of the institution.

The two other alumni to be honored at the dinner are H. W. Wilson of New York, president and founder of the H. W. Wilson company, and Dr. William W. Will, distinguished general practitioner at Bertha, Minnesota. They will receive "Outstanding Achievement" medals which also will be presented by Dr. Morrill. This medal, also established by the Regents in 1947, has never before been awarded.

Wilson is especially known for his work in compiling, copyreading, proofreading, and mailing in 1898, the first issue of the Cumulative Book Index, now known in the book world as the "C.B.I.". The Wilson firm, which today occupies three buildings and two warehouses on the east bank of the Harlem river in New York, had its beginnings in a bookstore near the University, where Wilson took orders from students and delivered the books in person.

Dr. Will, recently nominated by the Minnesota State Medical association for the American Medical association's award for an outstanding general practitioner, has practiced at Bertha continuously since his graduation in 1905. Originally having very few places to work other than his patients' homes, Dr. Will now has a 20-bed hospital in Bertha. He is recognized for his surgical skill and his interest in internal medicine, tuberculosis and other health problems.

Classes whose numerals end in three or eight, ranging all the way from the class of 1883 to the class of 1943, will take the spotlight. Among distinguished alumni/will be on campus for the occasion will be: Henry Scandrett, class of 1898, retired president of the Milwaukee railroad and football star while at the University; M. J. Luby, lawyer from Spokane, Wash., class of 1898, who was the first paid manager of athletics at the University; and Major General John E. Dahlquist, class of 1918, who is with the Department of the Army in Washington.

Another highlight of the evening will be the presentation by Hustad to each member of the 50-year class present at the dinner, a special diploma entitled "graduate emeritus".

Tickets for dinner should be purchased by writing to the General Alumni association, Coffman Memorial Union, University of Minnesota.
Minneapolis, June — As the 1948 class memorial, graduating seniors at the University of Minnesota have decided to make a $500 donation to the University of Manila in the Philippines.

The Class of 1948 memorial gift will be presented specifically for the partial outfitting of the Manila university library. The institution was leveled by the Japs, and all of its books were carried away or destroyed during the war.

Minneapolis, June 4 - Approximately 75 people from the Northwest who are interested in conserving mental health will attend the institute in mental hygiene for lay leaders Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday (June 7, 8, 9) at the University of Minnesota.

Presented by the University with the cooperation of the Minnesota Mental Hygiene Society and the Minnesota Department of Health, the purpose of the institute is to inform lay leaders of state and community mental health problems and resources, and to acquaint them with the technique of public education and securing of community action.

The three general topics which will be considered at the conference are: the nature and extent of the mental health problem, what Minnesota is doing now about mental health and what more needs to be done for mental health.

The feature speaker at the three-day institute will be Governor Luther W. Youngdahl, who will talk at 10 a.m. Monday on "A Modern Mental Health Program for Minnesota".

Other speakers will include University staff members and mental health workers from throughout Minnesota.

All sessions will be held in the Center for Continuation Study on the Minneapolis campus.

Minneapolis, June  -- Dr. David State, director of the University of Minnesota's Cancer Detection Center today issued an appeal to applicants for examination who cannot report on the day of their appointments to notify the center at least four or five days before the appointed date.

Some men and women who have applied for examinations are cancelling their appointments only a day or two before the appointed date, Dr. State reported, which is too late to permit the center to fill the schedule with replacements. These cancellations run as high as three to five for each examination day.

"We have had more than 8,000 applications for admission to the Cancer Detection Center," Dr. State said today, "and it does seem a pity that many people are being denied the examination privileges because of lack of time, and yet some individuals are cancelling out without notifying us in sufficient time for us to replace them."

Since the Cancer Detection Center was opened at the University March 1, approximately 450 men and women over 45 years of age have been examined for evidence of cancerous or pre-cancerous conditions. Examination days at the center are Tuesdays and Thursdays with Tuesdays reserved for women and Thursdays for men.

Western Canadian farmers' movements are analyzed and compared to similar organizations in the midwestern United States in "The Agrarian Revolt in Western Canada" by Paul F. Sharp, published today (Thursday, June 10) by the University of Minnesota Press.

According to Sharp, an assistant professor of history at Iowa State college, Ames, Ia., and former University of Minnesota staff member, the forty-ninth parallel has been a far more formidable barrier to historians than to the men and movements they wrote about.

Farmers moving unhampered across the border to the Canadian West, Sharp points out in his book, carried with them farming experience which had been developed under similar conditions in the American West. Ideas typically western took root in the prairie provinces and combined with eastern Canadian and British tradition.

The agricultural frontier lingered on in western Canada after it had disappeared in the United States, the author recalls, thus the influence of a frontier region on American agriculture continued for many years after the American frontier had officially passed away.

Sharp was raised a few miles from the international line and has traveled extensively in the Canadian West. During World War II, he served as an American liaison officer with the Royal Navy.
Gold nursing pins will be received by 100 University of Minnesota graduating student nurses at a pinning ceremony Thursday (June 10) at 8 p.m. in the recreation room of Powell hall on the Minneapolis campus.

The oval shaped pins, with the University emblem in the center, signify that the student has earned her degree of graduate of nursing.

Mrs. Myrtle H. Coe, assistant professor of nursing, will act as master of ceremonies, and Katharine J. Densford, director of the school of nursing will deliver an address on "Team Work in Nursing".

The pins will be presented by Ruth V. Johnston, assistant professor of nursing at the University; Georgia Nobles, superintendent of nurses, General hospital, Minneapolis; Margaret Filson, superintendent of hospitals, University of Minnesota; and Margaret Dodds, superintendent of nurses, Charles T. Miller hospital, St. Paul.

Dr. Tracy F. Tyler, associate professor of education, was elected to a third term as president of the Faculty Dancing Club of the University of Minnesota at the Club's ninth and final party of the 1947-48 academic year, a buffet dinner-dance Saturday evening, (June 5) in Coffman Memorial Union. More than 150 couples, including members as well as guests from the Campus Club and from off-campus, attended this finale of the club's most successful year marked by the largest membership in its 40-year history.

Edward S. Loyo, associate professor of mathematics and mechanics was returned for a second term as secretary-treasurer. Re-elected to a second two-year term on the executive committee was Dr. Ralph A. Piper, associate professor of physical education, and chairman of the Club's Music Committee.

New members elected to the Executive Committee for two-year terms were John R. Wolff, Jr., instructor in mechanical engineering; John O. Roning, instructor in physical education; and Dr. Richard C. Jordan, professor and assistant head of mechanical engineering.

Executive committee members holding over for another year include Bryce L. Crawford, Jr., Colonel Richard A. Ericson; Millard H. La Joy; and Robert A. Phillips. These, together with the immediate past-president, Dr. Clayton C. Rost, the president, the secretary-treasurer, and their wives constitute the eleven-couple executive committee.

Dr. Roy G. Blakey, professor of economics, and Ernest B. Pierce, director of alumni relations, who retire from the University staff this month, and their wives, were given honorary life memberships in the Faculty Dancing club during the intermission Saturday evening.
A reception for the first University of Minnesota graduating class in the new practical nursing program will be held Wednesday (June 9) at 8:15 p.m. in the Powell hall lounge on the Minneapolis campus.

Mrs. Alma Harvey, instructor in the program, will present the graduates their nursing caps, and Katharine J. Dansford, director of the school of nursing, will award the certificates. A vocal solo will be offered by Mrs. Dorothy Hines, one of the graduates from Minneapolis.

Students completing the program in addition to Mrs.
Hines who lives at 1021 South fifth street, are: Mrs. Rao Erickson, 4148 Oakland avenue, Minneapolis; Lenore Hedo, 3128 Hennepin avenue,
Minneapolis; Beverly Fischer, 1370 Lafond avenue, St. Paul; Kathryn Koenig, Zumbrota; and Helen Hardisty, Thief River Falls.
Dr. C. Gilbert Wrenn, professor of educational psychology at the University of Minnesota, will serve on the staff of the University of Hawaii during the 1948 summer session. He will direct the Hawaii university's first established workshop in personnel work.

Dr. Wrenn and his family will travel by air to Hawaii. They will leave Friday (July 11) and will arrive back in Minneapolis on August 12.

Minneapolis, June — More than 200 medical technologists from throughout the United States are expected to attend the continuation course in hematology Thursday and Friday (June 10,11), sponsored by the University of Minnesota. Sessions will be held in the main ballroom of the St. Paul hotel.

Some of the problems to be discussed at the two-day institute are the technical aspects and clinical applications of hemorrhagic diseases, erythroblastic anemias with particular reference to the RH factor, anemias of infancy, bone marrow as a diagnostic aid in clinical pathology and brucellosis of the bone marrow.

Faculty for the course will include: Israel Davidson, director of the department of pathology, Mount Sinai hospital, Chicago; Dr. Armand J. Quick, professor of biochemistry, Marquette university school of medicine, Milwaukee, Wis.; Dr. Emil Schleicher, hematologist, Minneapolis General hospital; Dr. A. J. Hertzog, pathologist, Northwestern hospital, Minneapolis; Dr. George N. Aagaard, director of postgraduate medical education, Dr. Howard L. Horns, clinical instructor in medicine, Dr. Edward N. Nelson, research associate in pediatrics, and Dr. Dorothy Sundberg, assistant professor of anatomy, all of the University of Minnesota staff.
Minneapolis, June — The thought of Homer's Iliad, Dante's Divine Comedy and Milton's Paradise Lost often leads to the statement, "It's too deep for me". If you're one of those people who think such books would make good reading if they could understand them, the University of Minnesota correspondence study department can help you.

Under the direction of University instructors, a new correspondence course entitled "Adventures In Good Reading" is now available. Designed to improve reading skill for understanding and enjoyment, the course consists of 12 individual lessons covering 12 books of classical literature.

With all the lessons and contact between the student and instructor going through the mails, no formal classroom contact is required for the course, and the student can progress at his own rate of speed.

The course is open to anyone in the United States. Registration material may be acquired simply by writing or calling the Correspondence Study department, Nicholson hall, University of Minnesota.
The Minnesota Summer Session orchestra, a 20-piece professional orchestra sponsored by the University of Minnesota Summer Session in cooperation with the Minneapolis Musicians' Association and under the general direction of the University's Department of Concerts and Lectures, will present six summer concerts in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

Each concert, open to the public without charge, will feature a guest artist. Dr. Paul N. Obey, chairman of the University music department, will conduct the orchestra.

Featured soloist at the first concert Friday, June 13, at 8:15 p.m., will be Gunnar Kuusinen, violinist and conductor, who was born in Oslo. He studied at the State Academy of Music in Berlin and with Professor Gustav Havemann, Berlin.

Kuusinen will play the Overture to Egmont by Beethoven, Symphony No. 8 in F Major, Opus 93, by Beethoven and Brahms's Violin Concerto in D Major.

After making his debut in 1926, Kuusinen was appointed to the Radio Orchestra and the Philharmonic Society's orchestra, which positions he held until 1938. After that date, he was conductor of the Stavanger Radio Ensemble and formed the Stavanger Town orchestra, which he conducted until he was arrested by the Germans in 1944. He was confined first in the Gestapo celler in Stavanger and then at the Grini concentration camp.

While in the Grini concentration camp, Kuusinen formed the Grini orchestra. As an expression of thanks for the secret concerts he gave during the imprisonment, Kuusinen's Grini comrades presented him with a Carlo Bergonzi violin made in 1735.

Dates for the other concerts by the Minnesota summer session orchestra are June 23, July 9, July 26, August 9 and August 23.

Soloists in the order of their appearance, will be: John Gurney, baritone; Leonard Kimes, pianist; Leslie Chabey, tenor; Anne Hollinger, soprano; and Evalyn Sacks, contralto.

Minneapolis, June - Enrollment, course preparation and research projects are ahead of schedule for the new course in flour mill engineering being offered by the University of Minnesota, John M. MacKenzie, assistant professor of mechanical engineering and head of the University's milling engineering division, reported Tuesday (June 8).

The University's new program in milling engineering, to be supported in large part by an annual $10,000 grant from the Millers' National federation, was created by the Board of Regents last July as a division of the department of mechanical engineering in the institute of technology.

MacKenzie announced that the board of directors of the Miller's National federation at its recent annual meeting voted an annual $10,000 a year commitment for six years to the support of the course.

The new five-year milling engineering curriculum will train engineers for the flour milling industry through a combination of basic courses in mechanical engineering and the agricultural sciences and specialized courses in milling design.

Professor MacKanzie reported that 15 students are already enrolled in the course which emphasizes basic engineering subjects during its first three years. Specialized classes in flour milling equipment design and milling practice follow in the fourth and fifth years.

The first graduates of the five-year University course will receive their degrees in 1951. A total enrollment of 150 students is anticipated for 1952.

Classes in milling subjects, originally scheduled for their first offering in 1949, are available now for mechanical engineers in their final year, according to Professor MacKenzie. Seven mechanical engineering senior students are enrolled in these classes. Two of the seniors are employees of companies servicing the flour milling industry.

"Summer employment of all students enrolled in the full curriculum is anticipated," MacKenzie reported. "Flour milling companies in Minneapolis are cooperating with the University in placing the students during their vacation periods. The interest of both the students and the milling companies in summer work will give first-year students the opportunity of four full summers of work in the industry before graduation."

"Flour Mill Dusts - Their Characteristics and Control", has been selected as the first of a series of research projects in milling engineering. These projects are intended to provide basic information for instruction and practical application.

Information about the flour mill engineering course can be obtained by writing to Assistant Professor John M. MacKenzie, Mechanical Engineering Department or to the Dean of Admissions and Records, University of Minnesota.

Minneapolis, June — More than half of the 419 persons, 219 men and 200 women, who have been examined in the University of Minnesota's new Cancer Detection Center during the first three months of its operation were found to have abnormalities calling for medical attention, Dr. David State, director of the center, reported Wednesday (June 9).

Referred to their personal physicians for treatment after examination at the center were 216 persons, some of whom, according to Dr. State, were suffering from two or even three different conditions requiring medical service.

In examining the 419 men and women who visited the center during March, April and May, University medical specialists discovered: nine definite cases of cancer, 27 "suspicious" tumors requiring further diagnosis, 95 pre-cancerous lesions or sores, 51 benign (non-malignant) tumors and 88 non-tumorous conditions, such as high blood pressure, requiring immediate attention by a physician.

Doctors assigned to the detection center found that 203 of the 419 persons examined were in good health and not in need of treatment. However, these currently well patrons were advised to return to the center every six months in order to assure themselves that they are still free of cancerous or pre-cancerous conditions.
More than 8,000 applications have been received for admission to the center, Dr. State reported, and at the present rate at which the center is able to operate, it will require several years to examine all applicants. Anyone who has made an appointment date and who cannot report on the day set is asked to notify the center at least four or five days before the appointed day so that a replacement can be made.

The center is open to men and women of Minnesota in the age bracket in which cancer occurs most frequently, 45 and over, who are currently without symptoms of cancer. Located on Church street just west of University Hospitals, the center is operated on an appointment basis, and examinations are conducted on Tuesdays for women and Thursdays for men.

Each person examined is asked to pay a $5 registration fee, but if the patient is unable to meet the charge, he is asked to pay as much of the fee as he can.

A project of the University's medical school, the Cancer Detection Center is financed in part by the Minnesota state division of the American Cancer society, the National Cancer institute of the United States Public Health service and the University's malignant disease research fund, Minneapolis, June  --"The Press and the Constitution", a study of events involving freedom of the press between 1931 and 1947, written by Dr. J. Edward Gerald, University of Minnesota journalism professor, was published today (June 10) by the University of Minnesota Press.

The book tells the story of the effect upon the press of vastly increased governmental activity in social and economic fields during the New Deal and war periods. It presents an exhaustive survey of events from the Minnesota gag law case of 1931—which first applied the first amendment of the Constitution against the states in matters of press freedom—to enactment of the Taft-Hartley law.

Dr. Gerald covers increasing legal restraints upon newspapers in the fields of anti-trust law, newspaper taxes, wage and hour legislation, censorship, picketing, licensing and contempt of court powers.

The book analyzes a series of cases decided by the United States Supreme Court from 1931 to 1947. Included are discussions of such cases as the Chicago Sun-Chicago Tribune anti-trust case, the Esquire postal regulation case and the Jehovah's Witnesses cases.

Dr. Gerald points out that recent press history developed at two levels. Newspapers and radio became involved in the political contest between forces of traditionalism and reform in the 1930's, as agencies of mass communications. At the same time, legal and constitutional rights were affected whenever general legislation was passed involving the press as a business.

The author has been a professor of journalism at the University of Minnesota since 1946, and received his doctor of philosophy degree in political science and journalism from the University. He formerly was on the staff of the University of Missouri journalism school, and served as manager of the Missouri Press association. He has worked for the United Press and several newspapers.
Dr. Paul R. Wautt, director of the audio-visual education service at the University of Minnesota, will attend a conference on audio-visual education June 21 to 23, at the University of Colorado, where he will serve as a discussion leader and consultant.

Minneapolis, June   - Established in 1947, the Minneapolis Advertising club loan fund at the University of Minnesota has been swelled to $1,000 by a $900 gift from the club accepted today by the University Board of Regents.

The fund was set up for students specializing in the study of advertising in the school of journalism, the school of business administration or the University college. An initial contribution of $100 from the club treasury paved the way for the establishment of the fund.

Included in the $900 gift made through the Greater University fund and accepted by the Regents today was $591 in contributions from club members and a second allocation from the club treasury in the amount of $309.

Minneapolis, June     - The University of Minnesota's 1948 graduating class, 3,226 strong, will receive diploma certificates Saturday evening (June 12) in Memorial stadium on the Minneapolis campus.

The largest graduating class in the history of the University will assemble on Northrop field at 7:30 p.m. and will begin marching into the stadium at 8 p.m., led by the University band.

For 45 minutes prior to the start of the procession, Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will play a recital of college songs on the University's new electronic English bells recently installed in Northrop Memorial auditorium. A gift to the University from H. Rowatt Brown of Minneapolis as a memorial to his late wife, the bells, electrically amplified, can be heard several miles from the campus.

At 8:15 p.m., the presentation of the colors will open the commencement exercises. The audience will join in the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner", and the Rev. George P. Conger, chairman of the philosophy department, will deliver the invocation.

Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University, will preside over the exercises, and will present the commencement address. His topic will be "Worthy To Be Free".

Deans of the various schools will present diploma certificates to candidates from their divisions and University marshals will present academic hoods to those who are receiving doctor of medicine and doctor of philosophy degrees.

The singing of "Hail Minnesota" and the playing of taps will conclude the exercises.

Minneapolis, June — Gold medals will be awarded to three distinguished University of Minnesota alumni at the annual Alumni Day dinner Friday (June 11) at 6 p.m. in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union.

The "Builder of the Name" medal will be presented to E. B. Pierce, retiring field secretary and director of alumni relations, and "Outstanding Achievement" medals will be awarded to H. W. Wilson, president and founder of the H. W. Wilson company, and Dr. William W. Will, veteran general practitioner at Bertha, Minnesota.

Pierce will be the second person ever to receive the "Builder of the Name" medal, established by the Board of Regents in 1947 for presentation to individuals who have assisted materially in the building and development of the University. The first was awarded to Fred B. Snyder, chairman of the Board of Regents, last February during University of Minnesota week.

Pierce has served on the staff of the University continuously since his graduation in 1904, a total of 45 years. He was registrar from 1905 to 1920 and has held his present position since 1920.

Presented for the first time Friday evening, the "Outstanding Achievement" medals also were authorized by the Board of Regents in 1947 as awards to former students of the University who have achieved signal success in their chosen fields.

Wilson is especially known for his work in compiling, copyreading, proofreading, and mailing in 1898, the first issue of the Cumulative Book Index, now used in libraries all over the world. Dr. Will, recently nominated by the Minnesota State Medical association for the American Medical association's award for an outstanding general practitioner, is recognized for his surgical skill and his interest in internal medicine, tuberculosis and other health problems.

All three medals, which bear the seal of the University of Minnesota, will be presented by Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University.

Pierce also will be honored by the award of a special scroll to be given to him at the dinner by Arthur R. Hustad of Minneapolis, president of the General Alumni association. Hustad will present the scroll on behalf of all University alumni.

Starting at 5:45 p.m. and continuing intermittently until everyone is seated at the dinner, Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will play a recital of college songs on the University's new electronic English bells recently installed in Northrop Memorial auditorium. This will be the first time the bells will be used for a recital.

H. Rowatt Brown, 432 Sixth St., S.E., Minneapolis, who presented the bells to the University as a memorial to his wife, the late Frances Miller Brown, has been extended a personal invitation by Dr. Morrill to attend the dinner.

Each member of the 50-year class (1898) present at the dinner will receive an "honorory degree" of "graduate emeritus".

The dinner is staged for all alumni of the University, but classes whose numerals end in three or eight will take the spotlight. Distinguished alumni from those classes who will return to the campus include: Henry Scandrett, class of 1898, retired president of the Milwaukee railroad and football star while at the University; M. J. Luby, lawyer from Spokane, Wash., class of 1898, who was the first paid manager of athletics at the University; and Major General John E. Dahlquist, class of 1918, who is serving with the Department of the Army in Washington.

Tickets for the dinner may be purchased at the General Alumni association office, Coffman Memorial Union.
Minneapolis, June — Dr. Lorenz G. Straub, director of the St. Anthony Falls Hydraulic laboratory and head of the civil engineering department at the University of Minnesota, has been elected president of the International Association for Hydraulic Structures Research at a meeting of the association in Stockholm, Sweden, it was learned Thursday (June 10).

Dr. Straub flew to Europe May 24 to attend several scientific meetings and to confer with and lecture to groups of European engineers. He went first to Paris where he spoke at the centennial meeting of the French Society of Civil Engineers and before the Association des Ingenieurs-Docteurs de France at the Sorbonne.

Following the international convention of hydraulic engineers in Stockholm, Dr. Straub will visit Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and the United Kingdom before returning to the University early next month.

Ruby Engstrom of Gladstone, Mich., graduating senior in the University of Minnesota medical school, Thursday (June 10) received a $500 check as winner of the Borden company's undergraduate research award in medicine. The check was presented by Dr. H. S. Diehl, dean of the medical sciences.

The award went to Miss Engstrom in recognition of her outstanding research work as an undergraduate student in the field of experiments on the therapy of mouse leukemia.

Minneapolis, June — Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University of Minnesota, will address the largest graduating class in the University's history at commencement exercises Saturday evening (June 12) in Memorial stadium. His topic will be "Worthy To Be Free".

In order to accommodate cars of relatives and friends of the 3,226 graduates, University parking lots will be open at Oak street and Washington avenue, Fourth street and Seventeenth avenue and Fourth street and Nineteenth avenue.

Led by the University band, the graduating class will begin marching into the stadium at 8 p.m., and at 8:15 p.m., the presentation of the colors will open the commencement exercises.

For 45 minutes prior to the start of the procession, Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will play a recital of college songs on the University's new electronic English bells recently installed in Northrop Memorial auditorium. The bells are a gift to the University from H. Rowatt Brown of Minneapolis as a memorial to his wife.

Six of the eight living graduates of the University of Minnesota's Class of 1888, whose average age is 82, will be present at the annual Alumni Day dinner at 6 p.m. today (June 11) in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union.

E. B. Pierce, retiring field secretary and director of alumni relations, predicted that this 60-year class will have the largest proportional representation at the dinner although the 25-year class (1923) will probably turn out the largest numerical attendance. Pierce also predicted that Fred B. Snyder, Class of 1881 and chairman of the Board of Regents, will be the oldest graduate present.

The General Alumni association will award four prizes at the dinner. They will go to the class with the largest attendance in proportion to living members, the oldest class represented, the alumnus traveling the longest distance to attend the dinner and the class having the largest numerical attendance at the dinner.

Prizes will consist of cups or pennants to the winning classes and the choice of one of the outstanding books published by the University of Minnesota Press to prize-winning individuals.

Perry Moore, Class of 1923, Minneapolis attorney, will act as master of ceremonies at the dinner. Individuals will be grouped at tables according to classes, and one member of each five year class, ranging all the way from the class of 1883 to the class of 1943, will give a brief sketch of life on the campus during his "college days".

Still another feature of the dinner will be a violin solo by Sabina Godfredson, 16-year-old violinist and University high school student. Miss Godfredson has been studying violin since she was eight years old and was the winner of a $50 prize on the radio program "Stairway To Stardom" in 1947. She is the youngest person ever to be admitted to full membership in the Minneapolis Thursday Musicale organization, Miss Godfredson is also a singer and dancer.

Major event of the evening will be the presentation by Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University, of gold medals to three distinguished alumni who by their accomplishments have brought honor to their alma mater.

Pierce will be awarded the University's "Builder of the Name" medal, and "Outstanding Achievement" medals will go to H. W. Wilson of New York, president and founder of the H. W. Wilson company, and Dr. William W. Will, general practitioner at Bertha, Minnesota.

On behalf of all University alumni, Arthur R. Hustad of Minneapolis, president of the General Alumni association, will present to Pierce a special scroll commending his 45 years of service to the University.

Each member of the 50-year class (1898) present at the dinner will receive an "honorary degree" of "graduate emeritus".

MINNEAPOLIS, June — Minnesota residents near Spring Valley, Zimmerman, Orr, Roseau, Granite Falls, Eggleston and Red Wing may find out a lot about the previous inhabitants of their communities when a University of Minnesota anthropology professor and five students start digging into old Indian mounds and village sites this summer.

Dr. Lloyd A. Wilford, associate professor in the University's anthropology department, and five of his students left Minneapolis this week to conduct an archeological field trip. While digging into the long-forgotten Indian mounds and village sites, they hope to discover much about the life of the Woodland Indians, one of the oldest culture horizons of Eastern United States, and especially, Minnesota.

The Woodland tribes came to Minnesota about 1,000 A.D. and stayed here until the beginning of the American historic period, according to Wilford. They maintained their existence by a practical type of agriculture and made crude, but useful pottery.

The explorers' life during the weeks of digging, will resemble the pre-historic Indian cultures. The men will camp in two large tents, cook their own meals and make certain they camp near a river or a lake where they can swim.

Spring Valley will be the first place Wilford and his students will pitch their tents and start digging. Here they will dig into the mounds on the bank of Deer Creek.

"We are not sure what we will find but we do know that they are Woodland burial mounds", Wilford said.

The second digging will take place at Elk lake, near Zimmerman, where a very large mound is located.

"The mound, 82 feet in diameter and 15 feet high, is too large to dig, but we will go into the outer edges of the mound where the Indians deposited an enormous quantity of bear jaws and teeth," Wilford said. He explained that the burial of bear jaws and teeth were apparently connected with the religion of the Woodlands.

Approximately three weeks will be spent on the Indian reservation at Nett lake near Orr. There the expedition will live on the reservation and will dig a village site rather than a burial ground.

A culture other than the Woodland culture will be explored on the Minnesota river bank Southeast of Granite Falls and on the Yellow Medicine river bank Southwest of Granite Falls. Here the expedition will dig into a fortified village site belonging to Upper Mississippi and Plains culture. These cultures in Minnesota came after the Woodland culture and display a more highly developed agriculture and more sophisticated pottery, according to Wilford.

The last place Wilford and his students will visit will be the Red Wing area on the South end of Prairie Island near Eggleston. Wilford expressed a great interest in this area because of the presence of highly developed shell-tempered pottery in a village site which belonged to the Mississippi culture. This village site containing the pottery, is found close to a large mound group, although the village site may not belong to the same culture as the mounds, Wilford explained.

The reason for not digging Prairie Island at the beginning of the trip, Wilford said, is because the village site and mounds are located in a field, and the group cannot dig until after the harvest season.

The five University students who will work with Wilford are: Glen Heckman, St. Paul; and from Minneapolis, Francis E. Nickerson, Robert Ernest, Merle Broberg and Eldon O. Johnson.

The students will each receive eight University credits for the archeological summer session field trip. The group will return to Minneapolis on August 28.
Helen Clapesattle, editor and acting director of the University of Minnesota Press, and Margaret S. Harding, director, now on sabbatical leave, will attend the annual convention of the American Association of University Presses June 18 through 21 on the Berkeley campus of the University of California.

Miss Clapesattle will leave Minneapolis Sunday (June 13) and Mrs. Harding will arrive at the convention from Pasadena, California, where she has been doing research work in the Henry E. Huntington library for the last three months.

Purpose of the convention, according to Miss Clapesattle, is to discuss the problems, aims and achievements of university presses.

After the convention, Miss Clapesattle will spend a few days before returning to the University, visiting writers, editors and book sellers on the West coast.

Minneapolis, June - Dr. Kurt von Schuschnigg, one-time chancellor of Austria, will talk on "Problems of Central Europe" at the University of Minnesota first summer session convocation Thursday (June 17) at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Shortly after the assassination of Chancellor Dolfuss in July, 1934, Schuschnigg was appointed chancellor and remained chief of the Austrian government until March, 1938, when the Nazi S. S. troops marched into Austria and placed him in solitary confinement. He was rescued seven years later (1945) by the American Fifth and the British Eighth armies.

Before becoming chancellor, Dr. Schuschnigg's record included that of artillery lieutenant during the first World War, lawyer at Innsbruck, Tyrol, deputy of the Christian-Social party to the Vienna Parliament, minister of justice and minister of education in the Austrian government.

Dr. Schuschnigg arrived in the United States for his first lecture tour in February 1947, and returned to Europe in April of that same year. He came back to the United States last September to begin his present extensive tour.

Books written by Dr. Schuschnigg include "My Austria" and the recently published "Austrian Requiem".

Convocation, open to the public without charge, will be broadcast over KUOM, University radio station.

Minneapolis, June — Commencement exercises for 79 University of Minnesota students receiving certificates in the University extension course in applied mortuary science will be held Friday (June 18) at 7 p.m. in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union on the Minneapolis Campus.

Hubert H. Humphrey, Minneapolis mayor, will speak to the graduating class on "Participating Citizenship in Your Community".

Julius M. Nolte, dean of the University's general extension division, will preside at the exercises and will confer the certificates.

Highpoint of the evening will be the announcement of the outstanding student and leader in the class who will be honored with an award of merit given by the Minnesota Funeral Directors association.

As part of the exercises, the graduating class will present a monetary contribution to the William A. O'Brien Memorial fund. Dr. O'Brien, director and professor of postgraduate medical education until his death last November, was influential in maintaining and aiding the course in applied mortuary science and was for many years, the annual commencement speaker.

Following the commencement exercises, a reception for the graduates and their guests will be held in the women's lounge of Coffman Union.

Graduating with high honors are Stanley A. M. Carlson, Cambridge, and Eugene M. Larson, St. Cloud. Receiving their certificates with honors are Ross W. Bauer, Weyauwega, Wis.; Walter F. Kinder, Deer River; and Eugene F. Mackin, Hastings.

Samuel Martí, Mexican violinist and Camilla Nilsson, American pianist, will present a Latin-American concert at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (June 20) at 8:15 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

Martí, known as the "Musical Ambassador of Goodwill" between the Americas, is recognized as Mexico's foremost violinist. He is the founder and manager of "Conciertos Martí", an organization which operates a concert circuit in the provinces and cities of Mexico under a plan which introduces American artists to Mexican audiences, and arranges tours of the United States for outstanding Mexican musicians. Martí studied in Chicago, New York, Madrid and Paris before returning to Mexico where he founded and conducted the symphony orchestra of Mexico.

Miss Nilsson, Marti's wife, was born in Minnesota. She spent her youth in Sweden, however, and after graduating from a Swedish conservatory as a concert pianist, traveled through Mexico, offering piano recitals and performing the works of American composers before audiences of the Rio Grande.

The concert, open to the public without charge, is sponsored by the University summer session in cooperation with the department of concerts and lectures.
John Gurney, American bass-baritone who has sung nine seasons with the Metropolitan Opera association, will be the guest artist at a free public concert given by the University of Minnesota summer session orchestra Friday (June 25) at 8:15 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

While attending Harvard University, Gurney sang with the Harvard glee club under the direction of Dr. Archibald Davis. Following a year of study in Paris under Jean Mauron, Gurney was engaged to sing with the American Opera company, where he performed the roles of Nephitephile in Faust, Escamillo in Carmen, and Figaro in The Marriage of Figaro.

The diversified engagements of Gurney include sorties into vaudeville, a season with the Ziegfeld Follies, performances with the Russian Opera company, the Cincinnati Zoo Opera company and operatic appearances as guest star in most Leading cities of the United States.

Gurney will be accompanied by Elena Laura Paura Giere.

Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will conduct the orchestra, a 30-piece professional orchestra sponsored by the University of Minnesota summer session in cooperation with the Minneapolis Musicians' association and under the general direction of the University's Department of Concerts and Lectures.
Minneapolis, June — Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University of Minnesota, will present Certificates of Merit to 42 retiring University staff members at a special ceremony Wednesday (June 16) at 4 p.m. in the fine arts room of Coffman Memorial Union.

The certificates, authorized by the Board of Regents, and presented to retiring staff members in recognition of their many years of service to the University, will be awarded to 16 members of the academic staff and to 26 civil service employees.

The former chancellor of Austria, Dr. Kurt von Schuschnigg, who was a prisoner in Nazi concentration camps for seven years, will speak on "Problems of Central Europe" at University of Minnesota convocation Thursday (June 17) at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Dr. Schuschnigg became chancellor of Austria shortly after the assassination of Chancellor Dolfuss in July, 1934. He remained head of the government until March, 1938, when the Nazis S. S. troops marched into Austria and placed him in solitary confinement. He was rescued by the American Fifth and the British Eighth armies in 1945.

This is Dr. Schuschnigg's second lecture tour in the United States. He made his first speaking trip through this country in 1947.

Books written by Dr. Schuschnigg include "My Austria" and the recently published "Austrian Requiem".

Convocation, open to the public without charge, will be broadcast over KUOM, University radio station.

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
NEWS SERVICE
JUNE 15, 1948
FOR RELEASE 9 P.M. WED.
JUNE 16.

Want to become an air hostess or stewardess and at the same time get a University of Minnesota degree? This goal can now be attained through a new University program, Horace T. Morse, dean of the University's general college, announced Wednesday (June 16).

In announcing the program, sponsored by the general college and scheduled to start fall quarter, Dean Morse explained that the two-year curriculum combines general education with specific technical training. He went on to say that air line officials have endorsed the proposed courses and have cooperated with the administrative personnel of the college in planning the technical aspects of the program.

Dean Morse emphasized, however, that although any girl who can meet the entrance requirements of the University may register for the course, girls will not be accepted for employment with air lines until they have reached the age of 21. Other requirements for employment as air hostesses or stewardesses are that they be unmarried, not more than 28 years of age, between five feet, two inches and five feet, eight inches in height, and have good vision without the aid of glasses. Girls must also be able to meet the personality requirements of the air lines.

"Even though a girl may decide not to enter the employment of an airline, the related and elective courses in the program are of such a broad, general nature, that they provide a valuable education", Dean Morse said.

Proposed courses for the first year of the program include, principles of physics, practical applications of psychology, general geography, first aid and principles of child care.

Two courses offered the second year are "Flying Orientation" and "Hostess-Stewardess Duties and Procedures". The first includes such topics as civil air regulations, theory of flight, meteorology, air navigation and aircraft familiarization. "Hostess-Stewardess Duties and Procedures" includes topics relating to the use of cabin equipment, in-flight procedures, meal services, control systems, illness and accident procedures and comportment.

Special laboratory equipment for use in the technical courses has been installed in Wesbrook hall, the General college building on the Minneapolis campus. Class work will be supplemented with field excursions to local airports, Dean Morse said.

Further information on the program may be obtained by writing to the general college, University of Minnesota.

James Kater Thompson, card manipulator, magician, entertainer and humorist, will give a demonstration-talk on "Cheating Cheaters" at the University of Minnesota Thursday (June 17) at 8:15 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium.

During his performance, Thompson will use a special table to show how gamblers who cheat, work in various kinds of games of chance such as cards, dice and machines of all types.

The program, sponsored by the University summer session, is open to the public without charge.
Minneapolis, June — Anna Mae Idzal of Minneapolis, a University of Minnesota junior, will be awarded the national Hillel foundation's King Gustav scholarship for her contributions to the promotion of inter-faith relationships on the University campus, Friday (June 18) at a special ceremony in the main studio of KUOM, University radio station.

Presentation of the $300 scholarship by Dr. J. L. Morrill, president of the University, on behalf of the Hillel foundation, Jewish student organization, will be broadcast over KUOM at 12:25 p.m.

Established in honor of King Gustav of Sweden for his work in sheltering refugees from the Nazis during World War II, the scholarship is awarded annually by the Hillel foundation to the junior University student, regardless of race, color, creed or citizenship, who has made the greatest contribution to inter-faith relationships on the campus.

In choosing Miss Idzal for this honor, the scholarship committee reported:

"In all her contacts Miss Idzal creates genuine respect among people of different faiths. The emphasis in all she does is toward eliminating discrimination. Her own understanding of differences is keen and she works untiringly to gain information for herself and the groups with which she works."

Majoring in the pre-social work curriculum, Miss Idzal is president of the University YWCA and formerly served as intercultural program chairman for this group. She is also a member of the University Human Relations council. Because of her contribution in the discussions of interfaith and intercultural problems among sorority members, she has been recommended as the next chairman of the Pan-Hellenic Human Relations Camp council. Miss Idzal is a member of the 1948 University SPAN group (Student Project for Amity Among Nations), and will sail for Czechoslovakia soon after the presentation.

Minneapolis, June — Enrolment for the first term of the 1948 summer session at the University of Minnesota totaled 11,604, including 7,209 veterans of World War II, at the close of registration Tuesday, T. E. Pettengill, University recorder, reported Wednesday (June 16).

Included in the figure are 633 students registered for the term at the University's Duluth Branch, 281 of whom are veterans.

Enrolment is 11 per cent below that recorded at the close of registration a year ago when 12,342 students had signed up for classes, Pettengill pointed out.

All figures are based on fees paid, the recorder explained, adding the prediction that late registrations will bring the total enrolment by the close of the second week of the term to approximately 13,000 as compared with 14,658 at that time last year.

Although an enrolment decline was noted in all other colleges, the college of education and the graduate school showed a marked increase over last year's first summer term. Registered in education were 1,599 students as compared with 1,170 last year, while 1,978 had signed up for graduate courses as compared with 1,408 a year ago.

Enrolment by colleges at the close of registration was as follows:

attended an institute in mental hygiene for lay leaders at the University of Minnesota June 7-9.

Presented by the University with the cooperation of the Minnesota Mental Hygiene society and the Minnesota department of health, the purpose of the institute was to inform lay leaders of state and community health problems and resources, and to acquaint them with the technique of public education and securing of community action.

Three general topics considered at the conference were: the nature and extent of the mental health problem, what Minnesota is doing now about mental health and what more needs to be done for mental health.

University staff members and mental health workers from throughout Minnesota spoke at the three-day institute which was held in the Center for Continuation Study on the Minneapolis campus.

SUMMARY OF RELIGIOUS COORDINATING WORK AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

By Dr. Henry E. Allen,
Co-ordinator of Students' Religious Activities

In September 1947, the Regents of the University of Minnesota voted to create the position: Coordinator of Students' Religious Activities to become a functioning agency in the Office of the Dean of Students. The position also carries with it the faculty rank of Associate Professor. As a symbol of public interest in this pioneering work, interested church men in St. Paul and Minneapolis agreed to contribute to the University sufficient funds to defray the expenses of the program during its first two years. Edmund G. Williamson, Dean of Students of the University of Minnesota, acting in close cooperation with the directors of religious foundations on the campus, called to the position Henry E. Allen, Ph.D., of Bronxville, New York, former President of Keuka College, Keuka Park, New York.

The University made it clear that it had no intention of undertaking any program of its own since it did not feel that a state university should sponsor a chaplaincy nor a chapel program which would appear to show favoritism to any particular religion nor which would compete with or overlap campus programs already underway sponsored by church groups. The coordinator selected is not a clergyman, but has specialized in comparative religions, stressing particularly a sociological approach to religious matters.

By creating the post of coordinator, the University of Minnesota expresses to its constituency its conviction that religion is important for student development. Recognizing the wide diversity of the religious background of its students, it encourages the activity of those religious groups which wish to serve their young people in attendance at the University. A total of twenty-one such foundations exist on the Twin City campuses. On the St. Paul (Agricultural) campus these groups are: Catholic, Congregational-Presbyterian, Lutheran, Methodist, Minnesota Christian Fellowship (Inter-Varsity), Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. On the Minneapolis campus there are fourteen groups: Baptist, Catholic, Christian Science, Congregational, Episcopalian, Jewish, Lutheran, Missouri Synod Lutheran, Methodist, Minnesota Christian Fellowship (Inter-Varsity), Presbyterian, Tri-U (for Unitarian and Universalist students), Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. Functioning as directors of these twenty-one organizations are thirty individuals, nearly all full-time workers, who function together cooperatively on each campus as the Minnesota Councils of Religion. During a typical week of the academic year, more than 150 regularly scheduled meetings, study groups, and worship services are held.

Of major significance are the Student Councils of Religion made up of two representatives from each participating religious organization. It is their task to promote inter-faith understanding and to carry on such religious activities as may be common to all participating groups. Unless a project is agreed to by every member organization, it cannot claim sponsorship of the Student Council of Religion. The experience provided the students of varying faiths in working together while recognizing the right to be different appears to be a most valuable first-hand experience in democratic living. These student leaders are encouraged to take the greatest possible initiative in the planning and implementing of policies and programs. This is regarded as vitally important in the preparation for responsible citizenship after they leave the University.

The University, of course, places no pressure on the students to compel religious participation. It does, however, avoid the accusation sometimes leveled at state universities that it is indifferent or hostile to the cultivation of sound churchmanship. The University administration supplies Religious Census Cards which are filled out voluntarily by the students and distributed through the coordinator's office to the proper religious organizations.

During the past year steps have been taken to relate the activities of religious foundation directors more closely to the University's Counseling Bureau. Joint seminars have been held, and the religious workers have had opportunity to develop their skills in counseling and to put these skills to use in aiding students who are in need of religious guidance.

Great stress is laid upon the value of these student religious organizations in assisting students to find friends and become introduced to the University community of 27,000 individuals.

While no department or school of religion as such exists at the University of Minnesota, courses are offered in the departments of philosophy, sociology, the humanities and elsewhere which give objective information in the field of religion, and the University catalog lists a sequence of courses appropriate for students planning to enter graduate theological schools.

The above program demonstrates that education sponsored by public agencies can find methods of proper encouragement for wholesome student religious growth instead of ignoring the matter and giving the impression that a person may be properly educated while his religious understanding is atrophied.

Minneapolis, June — Changes in admission policies for the University of Minnesota nursery school, kindergarten and elementary school were announced Thursday (June 17) by Dr. Elizabeth M. Fuller, principal of the three divisions.

Increased demands, changed population trends, projected research plans, needs in teacher training programs and an attempt to unify admission policies at all levels in the school necessitated the changes which will be effective July 1, when students for the fall quarter are selected, Dr. Fuller said.

In general, the new policies are that applicants for full day attendance will take precedence over those for half-day attendance, children already in attendance will be continued on enrolment lists through the sixth grade, children will be selected in the order of application dates, but attention will be given to proposed length of enrollment, and children applying for short periods will be admitted only when needed to fill the enrolment quota.

Dr. Fuller explained that in order to keep the size of the age groups constant, children are chosen from the waiting list on an age basis rather than from the waiting list as a whole, and an equal number of boys and girls are chosen for each group.

Limiting factors in the new policy are: no child will be admitted who has not been vaccinated against smallpox and immunized against diphtheria, who has a marked mental or physical handicap requiring special care, serious food allergies requiring special attention, a behavior problem constituting a hazard to other children or requiring extra supervision, or who has any kind of handicap requiring change of regular schedule.

Dr. Fuller explained that the primary functions of the campus school are research, parental and pre-parental education, demonstration, teacher training and experimentation in the education of typical children.

"In carrying out research projects in progress and proposed research projects for the future, short term enrollments cannot be defended and research projects also require that some effort be exerted to admit children representing as nearly as possible a cross section sample of the population," said Dr. Fuller. She added, "It is hoped that these policies and will permit the school will equalize opportunities for all groups to attend the school to fulfill its functions more smoothly and productively."

Fall quarter will be the first time a second grade has been offered. A first grade was established last fall, and the plan is to add one grade each year in the elementary school until six grades have been established, Dr. Fuller explained. This means that a child, providing he meets the admission requirements, can enter the University nursery school at the age of two and continue through elementary school, University high school and college.
Gunnar Knudsen, Norwegian violinist and conductor, will be the featured soloist at the University of Minnesota summer session orchestra's first concert Friday (June 18) at 8:15 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Knudsen, accompanied by Laura Forde Giere, will play the Overture to Egmont, Opus 84, by Beethoven, Romance by Sinding, Nigun (Improvisation) by Bloch, Symphony No. 8 in F Major, Opus 93, by Beethoven and Brahms Violin Concerto in D Major.

Educated at the State Academy of Music in Berlin and by Professor Gustav Havemann, Berlin, Knudsen made his debut in 1928. Following his debut, he was appointed to the Radio Orchestra and the Philharmonic Society's orchestra, which positions he held until 1938. Before being arrested by the Germans in 1944, he was conductor of the Stavanger Radio Ensemble and the Stavanger Town orchestra, which he founded.

During his imprisonment in the Grini concentration camp, Knudsen formed the Grini orchestra. As an expression of thanks for the secret concerts he gave, Knudsen's Grini comrades presented him with a Carlo Bergonzi violin made in 1735.

The summer session orchestra, a 50-piece professional orchestra sponsored by the University's summer session in cooperation with the Minneapolis Musicians' association and under the general direction of the University's department of concerts and lectures, will present six summer concerts. Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will conduct the orchestra.

Each concert is open to the public without charge.
U. OF M. CONFFERS
6,359 DEGREES
DURING 1947-48

Minneapolis, June — Two University of Minnesota graduating seniors sat on the stage of the old Academy of Music on the corner of Washington and Hennepin avenues June 19, 1873, and received degrees conferred by Dr. William Watts Folwell, first University president.

At the 1948 spring commencement exercises June 12 in Memorial stadium, President J. L. Morrill conferred a record-breaking 3,226 degrees bringing to 6,359 the total number of degrees awarded during the 1947-48 school year at five commencements.

Starting with that first graduating class of two candidates back in 1873, and up through this year's huge crop of June graduates, the University has granted a total of 87,184 degrees.

Of the 6,359 degrees awarded during the 1947-48 school year, the college of science, literature and the arts leads with 1,174 while the college of medical sciences is in second place with 989.

Degrees earned in the other colleges of the University during the year are as follows: graduate school, 846; school of business administration, 729; institute of technology, 697; college of education, 649; general college, 494; college of agriculture, forestry and home economics, 295; law school, 293; university college, 95; school of dentistry, 66; college of pharmacy, 32.

"U" WILL PROVIDE
SOCIAL CENTER
AT VET VILLAGE

Minneapolis, June — To provide recreational and social facilities for some 908 married World War II veterans and their families living in University Village at the University of Minnesota, a recreational center soon will be erected at the huge temporary housing area.

South of the main engineering building on the Minneapolis campus is a war surplus navy barracks which is no longer being used. A large section of this structure will be moved soon to a site at the village and will be converted into a recreational center which should be ready for use in early fall.

Facilities in the new union building will include a canteen equipped with a soda fountain, a nursery for the veterans' children, sewing room, study rooms and a lounge which, by removal of the chairs, can be converted into a ballroom.

Four children's playgrounds, financed by funds raised by the villagers, also are under construction. Each playground will consist of a two-room roofless "maize", two telephone poles raised two feet off the ground to be used as play "horses", a set of wooden railroad tracks, a sunken sand pile, a canvas tent and two sections of cement culvert.

Minneapolis, June — Methods for attacking significant problems in local labor markets are set forth in the book "Local Labor Market Research" published Monday (June 21) by the University of Minnesota Press.

The book is the result of a survey conducted in 1940-42 by the Employment Stabilization Research institute at the University of Minnesota of the labor market problem in St. Paul, Minn.

According to Dr. Herbert G. Heneman, Jr., editorial coordinator of the book, the St. Paul study is the only large-scale labor market research which has been done during the war period.

Faced with high level relief expenditures during a time of increasing employment and concerned about other similar problems, a special committee on unemployment appointed by the mayor of St. Paul, asked the assistance in 1940 of the University's Employment Stabilization institute in analyzing local labor market conditions.

Under the co-direction of Dr. Dale Yoder, now director of the University's Industrial Relations center, and Donald G. Paterson, professor of psychology, the requested study was undertaken. Funds provided by the Rockefeller foundation permitted a pilot study in 1940-41 and a more detailed analysis in 1941-42.

The research was carried on by a staff of some 40 persons including social scientists from various fields: psychology, economics, sociology and business administration. Before the final report of the study could be completed, the war and conclusion of foundation support dissolved the research staff.

During the war period, data from the St. Paul study was applied to the nation's labor market problems particularly in working out priorities on employment and estimates of potential war workers.

Formed in 1945, the University's Industrial Relations center undertook, as one of its first projects, the compilation of a complete report on the St. Paul study. Through this project, "Local Labor Market Research" was published.

"Because St. Paul is typical in many salient respects," Dr. Heneman pointed out, "the discussion in this book of how the labor market problems were met and solved there is extremely pertinent to other labor markets."

Samuel Marti, Mexican violinist, and Gunhild Nilsson, American pianist, will present a Latin-American concert at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (June 23) at 8:15 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium.

Selections on the program will include the Sonata for Violin and Piano, No. 1 by Beethoven, Suite for Violin and Piano by William Grant Still, Sonatina Ritmica Para Piano Solo by Rogue Cordero, Nigun by Ernext Bloch and Indian Lullaby, a traditional Seri folksong. The three concluding numbers will be Serenata Mexicana by Manuel M. Ponce, De San Domingo by Arthur Benjamin-Primrose and Danza Espanola by Falls-Kreisler.

Marti, known as the "Musical Ambassador of Goodwill" between the Americas, is recognized as Mexico's foremost violinist. He is the founder and manager of "Conciertos Marti", an organization which operates a concert circuit in the provinces and cities of Mexico under a plan which introduces American artists to Mexican audiences, and arranges tours of the United States for outstanding Mexican musicians. Marti studied in Chicago, New York, Madrid and Paris before returning to Mexico where he founded and conducted the symphony orchestra of Yucatan.

Miss Nilsson, Marti's wife, was born in Minnesota. She spent her youth in Sweden, however, and after graduating from a Swedish conservatory as a concert pianist, traveled through Mexico, offering piano recitals and performing the works of American composers before audiences of the Rio Grande.

The concert, open to the public without charge, is sponsored by the University summer session in cooperation with the department of concerts and lectures.
John Anderson and Constance Doss, New York vocalists, will sing the title roles in the chamber opera "The Maid Becomes Mistress" at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (June 30) at 8:15 p.m. in Northrop Memorial Auditorium.

Written by Giovanni Battista Pergolesi in 1733, the opera is a melodic unfolding of a plot by which a servant girl tricks her employer into marriage so that she may be mistress of the household.

Known also as "La Serva Padrona", the opera will be sung in English and presented in costume with piano accompaniment.

"The Maid Becomes Mistress" is sponsored by the University of Minnesota summer session in cooperation with the department of concerts and lectures and will be open to the public without charge.
John Gurney, American bass-baritone who has sung nine seasons with the Metropolitan Opera association, will be the guest artist at a free public concert given by the University of Minnesota summer session orchestra Friday (June 25) at 8:15 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

The first half of the program will include the selections:
Prairie Legend by Siegmeister; O tu Palermo, from "Sicilian Vespers" by Verdi; Piff, Paff, Pouff, from "The Huguenots" by Meyerbeer; and The Farewell and Death of Boris from "Boris Godunoff" by Moussorgski.

In addition to the Symphony in D minor by Franck, the program after intermission will consist of The Floral Dance, arrangement by Moss, The Abbot of Derry by Weaver, The Old Black Mare by Squire and De Glory Road by Wolfe.

While attending Harvard university, Gurney sang with the Harvard glee club under the direction of Dr. Archibald Davison. Following a year of study in Paris under Jean Mauran, Gurney was engaged to sing with the American Opera company, where he performed the roles of Mephistopholes in Faust, Escamillo in Carmen, and Figaro in the Marriage of Figaro.

The diversified engagements of Gurney include performances with vaudeville, the Ziegfeld Follies, the Russian Opera company, the Cincinnati Zoo Opera company and operatic appearances as guest star in most leading cities of the United States.

Gurney will be accompanied at the concert by Laura Forde Giere.

Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the music department, will conduct the orchestra, a 50-piece professional orchestra sponsored by the University of Minnesota summer session in cooperation with the Minneapolis Musicians' association and under the general direction of the University's department of concerts and lectures.
Joseph L. Blau, assistant professor of religion in the department of philosophy at Columbia university, will speak on "Recent Philosophic Importations" at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (June 23) at 3 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium.

Blau, visiting lecturer in philosophy at the University of Minnesota during the first term of summer session, is the author of "The Tradition of the Cabala in the English Renaissance" and editor of "American Philosophic Addresses".

The lecture, open to the public without charge, is sponsored by the University summer session in cooperation with the department of concerts and lectures and the American Studies program. KUOM, University radio station, will broadcast the talk at 4 p.m., one hour after presentation.
open to the public without charge

The lecture, sponsored by the University of Minnesota, will be Friday, April 15, 1983 at 2 P.M. in the Levine Center of Performing Arts. All members of the university community are invited to attend.

Professor Peter J. Spengler, a member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, will present a lecture on "Modern Poetry in the Modern World." He is a professor of English and has contributed to the development of the "new poetry." His lecture will be on a topic of interest to all those who have been interested in the development of poetry and prose.

Hedley Hepworth, celebrated English actor of the platform, will present his impersonations of "The Immortal Characters of Dickens" at University of Minnesota convocation Thursday (June 24) at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Among the characters he will impersonate are: Wilkins Micawber, Uriah Heep, Ebenezer Scrooge, Sydney Carton, Grandfather Smallweed and Sergeant Buzfuz.

Considered one of Britain's foremost authorities on Dickens, Hepworth has performed on platforms all over the United States, throughout the British Isles and in many Canadian theatres.

By impersonating a British stevedore, Hepworth was of great aid to the British Secret Service during the war. He shifted from one coastal town to another and turned up valuable information regarding leaks in shipping information. Hepworth is credited also for helping uncover one of England's worst black market operations.

During his program, Hepworth makes rapid changes in costume and make-up to represent the characters he portrays.

Alice Marble, tennis star who was originally scheduled as convocation speaker, is unable to appear due to illness.

Convocation, open to the public without charge, will be broadcast over KUOM, University radio station.

Minneapolis, June - In a letter to alumni of the University of Minnesota this week, E. B. Pierce, retiring alumni secretary, called for support of the Greater University Fund.

"For years," Pierce told University alumni, "other colleges and universities have appealed to their alumni annually for certain types of assistance which would provide those refinements and enrichments of their educational programs not made possible by the normal budget.

"We at Minnesota are now facing the challenge," he added. "The Alumni Board has set up the Greater University Fund through which all contributions will channel. Some of these gifts will be for specific purposes, others unrestricted. The appeal is going to our alumni annually. Small gifts and large gifts are being sought without pressure campaigns. Giving to the University through wills and other devices also is being encouraged...I know we can count on you."

More than 300 gifts have already been made to the University through the Greater University Fund, which was established last year, according to Stanley J. Wenberg, fund director. The fund's opening solicitation for gifts will close July 15, Wenberg reported.

Mailing of 25,000 copies of a folder, "Growing Out of the Soil of Democracy", which explains the purposes of the fund, to alumni and friends of the University has just been completed by Wenberg's office.
Conservative members of the British Parliament will discuss their party's program for the next election on "London Forum" over KUOM, the University of Minnesota radio station, Tuesday (June 29).

The speakers will be John Boyd Carpenter, MP for Kingston-upon-Thames, and Robert Boothby, MP for East Aberdeenshire. W. J. Brown, an independent MP for Rugby, will moderate the discussion.

"London Forum", a program of the "University of the Air" series, is transcribed weekly by short wave from the British Broadcasting corporation. It features guest speakers in discussions of vital topics of interest to listeners in Great Britain and the United States.

"London Forum" is heard every Tuesday from 7 to 7:30 p.m. over KUOM.

is one of the 100 University of Minnesota school of nursing students who received gold nursing pins at a recent ceremony held at the University.

The oval shaped pin, with the University emblem in the center, signifies that the student has earned her degree of graduate of nursing.

Mrs. Hyrtle H. Coe, assistant professor of nursing, acted as master of ceremonies, and Katharine J. Densford, director of the school of nursing, delivered an address on "Team Work In Nursing".

The pins were presented by Ruth V. Johnston, assistant professor of nursing at the University; Georgia Nobles, superintendent of nurses, General hospital, Minneapolis; Margaret Pilson, superintendent of hospitals, University of Minnesota; and Margaret Dodds, superintendent of nurses, Charles T. Miller hospital, St. Paul.
Serafim Strelkoff, Russian bass-baritone, will be heard in a music recital "Around the World for a Song" Wednesday (July 7) at 8:15 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium at the University of Minnesota. The concert will be open to the public.

Called the singing globe-trotter, Strelkoff was born in the Urals mountains, spent the period of the Russian revolution in Siberia, and eventually made his way to America. In Gary, Indiana, where he was working in a steel mill, he participated in a vocal contest and attracted the attention of an opera director with his singing of "The Volga Boatman". From then on he became a serious student of the vocal art, and eventually found his way to Hollywood where he sang in several films which had Russian settings.

Globe-trotting in earnest began for Strelkoff when he set out with ten dollars in his pocket to sing his way around the world. An international press book full of clippings about his activities attests to the success of his unorthodox tour, the story of which will appear in book form under the title, "Around the World for a Song".

Earle Spicer, New York baritone and nationally famous singer of ballads, will return to the University of Minnesota Thursday (July 8) to present a program of English and American ballads at a convocation at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

The convocation will be open to the public, and Spicer's songs will be broadcast from the stage of Northrop auditorium by KUOM, the University radio station.
The title of this week's "Lost We Forgot - The American Dream" program on KUOM, the University of Minnesota radio station, is "Arrow in the Air", to be heard Wednesday (June 29) at 7 p.m. The broadcast will deal with the subject of discrimination against people of Polish descent, and will star Victor Jory, well-known Hollywood and Broadway actor.

"Lost We Forgot - The American Dream" is transmitted by the Institute for Democratic Education, and is broadcast as part of KUOM's "University of the Air" series.
John Anderson and Constance Dose, New York vocalists, will sing the title roles in the chamber opera "The Maid Becomes Mistress" at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (June 30) at 8:15 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium.

Written by Giovanni Battista Pergolesi in 1733, the opera is a melodic unfolding of a plot by which a servant girl tricks her employer into marriage so that she may be mistress of the household.

Known also as "La Serva Padrona", the opera will be sung in English and presented in costume with piano accompaniment.

"The Maid Becomes Mistress" is sponsored by the University of Minnesota summer session in cooperation with the department of concerts and lectures and will be open to the public without charge.
Stephen Spender, one of England's foremost writers of poetry and prose, will present a lecture on "Modern Poetry in the Modern World" at the University of Minnesota Thursday (July 1) at 3 p.m. in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History on the Minneapolis campus.

Spender, who has been singled out by American critics as a leader in a beginning international renaissance, is the author of "Poems of Dedication", "European Witness" and "Returning to Vienna, 1947". He is a member of a group of European writers whose interests are international.

"I came to America," Spender says, "partly in fulfillment of what I believe to be a European mission, to be a European and to understand America, because such an understanding is so essential at this time."

A founder and editor of the English literary review, "Horizon", Spender left this work in 1942 to join the National Fire service. During lulls in the blitz of London, he helped organize an extensive education scheme in the Fire Service which was run entirely by firemen without rank.

Towards the end of the war, Spender worked in the political intelligence branch of the Foreign Office. In 1945, he was sent on a special mission to Germany to report on the nature of intellectual life in that country after the war.

When Spender first published his poems in 1933, they were generally reviewed as part of a poetic movement associated with W. H. Auden, C. Day Lewis and Louis Mac Neice. As an undergraduate at Oxford university, Spender became a friend of Auden, whose criticisms influenced the development of his early poetry.

During the past year, Spender has acted as resident lecturer and adviser in literary and philosophical studies at Sarah Lawrence college, Bronxville, New York. His visit was made possible by a grant-in-aid from the Rockefeller foundation.

The lecture, sponsored by the University summer session, will be open to the public without charge.

Listener coverage of the "University of the Air" series on KUOM, the University of Minnesota radio station, is being extended to northern Minnesota.

Bob Boyle, director of the series, announced yesterday that one of the "University" adult education programs is being re-broadcast by station WREX in Duluth.

"WREX, one of the largest stations in Duluth with its 10,000 watts, will help us cover the north part of the state with the 'Mental Hygiene' program," Boyle said. "This program is made up of interviews and talks by prominent Minnesota psychiatrists and psychologists," he said.

Boyle said plans are underway for re-broadcasts of other "University of the Air" programs on stations located outside of KUOM's immediate listening area.

"This expansion of coverage, like KUOM's night time frequency modulation broadcasting, will do a lot to increase the listenership of the series," Boyle said. "While the re-broadcasts will assure coverage in outlying areas, FM will enable us to put on more 'University of the Air' shows for the evening audience," he said.

is one of the 79 University of Minnesota students who received certificates in the University extension course in applied mortuary science the evening of June 18 in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union on the Minneapolis campus.

Hubert H. Humphrey, Minneapolis mayor, spoke to the graduating class on "Participating Citizenship in Your Community".

Julius M. Nolte, dean of the University's general extension division, presided at the exercises and conferred the certificates.

As part of the exercises, the graduating class presented a monetary contribution to the William A. O'Brien Memorial fund. Dr. O'Brien, director and professor of postgraduate medical education until his death last November, was influential in maintaining and aiding the course in applied mortuary science and was for many years the annual commencement speaker.

Students who were graduated with high honors were Stanley A. M. Carlson, Cambridge, and Eugene M. Larson, St. Cloud. Certificates with honors went to Ross W. Bauer, Weyauwega, Wis., Walter F. Kinder of Deer River, and Eugene F. Hackin of Hastings.
Dr. Errett W. Haldeman, University of Minnesota librarian and president of the American Library association, will discuss the topic, "Men Working Together: The United Nations" on the program "Men in Society" over KUM, the University radio station, Friday (July 2).

"Men in Society" is heard every Friday from 7:15 to 7:30 p.m., following "News Report", an interpretation and analysis of current news events by Graham B. Deyo, former Washington correspondent, now a lecturer in the University's school of journalism. Both programs are part of the "University of the Air" series.
Leonard Eisner launched his formal concert career on Thanksgiving day, 1946 with a recital in Town Hall, New York. Critics of that city's press were uniformly enthusiastic in their reviews of his concert, mentioning in particular the vigour and maturity, as well as the technical proficiency, of his performance.

One of the most promising and interesting newcomers to the concert world. He started studying at an early age, attracting the attention of Walter Damrosch. He is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music in New York and a winner of the Morris Loeb Memorial Prize.

For a period of three years Eisner saw active service with the Army Signal Corps, culminating with his receipt of a special citation from the Military Intelligence Division of the War Department. His New York recital followed his return to civilian life.
