Minneapolis, April - The work of Dr. Suad A. Niazi, medical fellow in surgery at the University of Minnesota, is described in "Blueprint for Understanding", the recently published 30-year review of the Institute of International Education, New York.

In 1947, Dr. Niazi, a physician in the Royal Medical college in Baghdad, Iraq, came to the University of Minnesota medical school under a state department fellowship administered through the institute.

The story of Dr. Niazi, who in 1949 won a Damon Runyon Clinical Fellowship from the American Cancer society for further research, was used in the institute's publication as an example of important work being done by foreign students who are studying in the United States.

STRAUB NAMED
BEACH EROSION
BOARD MEMBER

Minneapolis, April - Dr. Lorenz G. Straub, director of the University of Minnesota's St. Anthony Falls Hydraulic laboratory, reported Tuesday (April 4) that he has accepted an appointment as a civilian member of the beach erosion board of the Corps of Engineers.

The appointment was made by Major General Lewis A. Pick, chief of engineers in the Department of the Army. In his letter offering the appointment, General Pick wrote to Dr. Straub:

"The high order of your professional attainments and your personal interest in hydraulic and allied problems eminently qualify you for membership and will contribute much to the valuable technical service which the beach erosion board renders to the nation."

Created in 1930 by the Seventy-first Congress, the beach erosion board has jurisdiction over the American shores of the Great Lakes, the two oceans and the Gulf of Mexico.

Dr. Straub, who also is head of the department of civil engineering in the University's institute of technology, will succeed General Richard K. Hale, director of the division of waterways in the department of public works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who recently resigned. The appointment is for four years.

As engineering consultant to the division of waters of the Minnesota department of conservation, Dr. Straub meets the legal requirement for the appointment which specifies that a member of the board must be a member of a state agency charged with beach erosion and shore protection, General Pick explained.

SWEDISH FILM
WILL BE SHOWN
AT 'U' APRIL 12

A Swedish film that tells the story of seven homeless children will open the University of Minnesota Film society's spring quarter series.

The movie, "The Children", will be shown at 4 and 8 p.m. Wednesday (April 12) in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the University campus.

"The Children", at the death of their mother, decide that they do not want to be sent to a county home. They start out, with their goat, Gullspira, to see if they can make some other arrangement for themselves.

During the winter, they travel throughout the countryside, hiding in an effort to escape their legal guardian; and by spring each of them has found a satisfactory place to live.

U. OF M. PROFESSOR
WILL HEAD LAW
SCHOOL IN CANADA

Minneapolis, April - Professor Horace Emerson Read of the University of Minnesota law school faculty has been appointed dean of the Dalhousie university school of law at Halifax, Nova Scotia, Dean Maynard E. Pirsig of the Minnesota school announced Tuesday (April 4).

When he takes over the Dalhousie deanship in June, Professor Read will be returning to the school which awarded him his first law degree in 1924 and in which he taught law for nine years.

A professor of law at the University of Minnesota since 1934, Read pioneered the development in the Minnesota law school of an undergraduate course in legislation. The first course of its kind in the country, its methods of instruction have now been copied by leading law schools in the United States, and research and drafting done in the course have been used by the State Legislature, the Minnesota State Bar association and other organizations in preparing proposed legislation.

Professor Read is author of "Cases and Materials on Legislation", the leading casebook now in use by students of legislation in most American law schools.

"We deeply regret losing Professor Read from our faculty," Dean Pirsig said Tuesday, "but we well realize the great opportunities which await him in his important new position.

"The great work he has done for our law school during the last 16 years cannot be overestimated," continued the dean. "The effects of that work will live on as a constant reminder of his outstanding service to Minnesota."

(More)

Born in Port Elgin, New Brunswick, Professor Read received his bachelor of laws degree from Dalhousie university in 1924, and then joined a law firm in Truro, Nova Scotia. The same year he went to Harvard university as a Pugsley fellow in international law and was awarded the master of laws degree from Harvard in 1925.

He returned to Dalhousie university where he served successively as lecturer, instructor, assistant and associate professor, professor and finally George Munro professor of law, a post which he attained in 1931.

Returning to Harvard as a research fellow, Professor Read took his doctorate in law degree in 1934. Since that time he has been professor of law at the University of Minnesota.

During World War I, Professor Read served overseas with the 219th Battalion, Nova Scotia Highlanders and later was transferred to the Royal Flying corps as a pilot officer. Again in uniform in World War II, he commanded the Minnesota Wing of the Civil Air Patrol in 1942 and 1943 before entering the Canadian navy as a commander in 1943.

In 1946, he was awarded the Order of the British Empire by the Canadian government in recognition of his services in directing a complete revision of Canada's naval regulations during the period 1943-45. He also drafted the Naval Service act of Canada in 1944.

In addition to his casebook on legislation, and two other casebooks, one on equity and another on property, Professor Read is the author of "The Recognition and Enforcement of Judgments in the British Commonwealth" and has contributed many articles to legal publications.

An active member of the Canadian Legion, the dean-elect recently was general chairman of the Great Lakes command of the Legion. He is also a past commander of the St. Anthony post of the American Legion in St. Paul.

STATE DISTRICT
MUSIC CONTESTS
NOW UNDERWAY

District music contests in which more than 20,000 high school music students are participating are underway throughout the state and will be followed by regional contests April 28 through May 6.

The contests are being sponsored by the Minnesota Public School Music League, headed by A. M. Wisness, superintendent of schools at Willmar, president, and Dr. Paul M. Oberg, chairman of the University of Minnesota department of music, executive secretary-treasurer.

The 20,000 students, almost one-fourth of all senior high school students in Minnesota, are competing for honors in band, orchestra, chorus, glee club, various instrumental and vocal ensembles and solo work.

Final contests for Region I honors will be held April 28 at Waseca and April 29 at Northfield. The Region II and III contests will take place April 29 at Mankato State Teachers college. Regions IV, V, VI and VII will meet April 28 and 29 on the University of Minnesota campus. And Region VIII contestants will compete May 6 at Thief River Falls.

Solo and ensemble winners will be awarded keys, while the larger music groups will be given trophies.

U GALLERY
TO EXHIBIT
GUSTON WORK

An exhibition of paintings, drawings and photographic reproductions of murals by Philip Guston, noted American painter and visiting artist at the University of Minnesota, will open at the University Gallery Monday (April 10).

Guston, who will go to New York University this fall as adjunct professor of fine arts, has been the painter of murals for a number of the nation's public buildings.

Included in his University Gallery show will be photographs of murals from the Queensbridge housing project, New York; the Social Security building, Washington, D.C.; and the WPA building facade at the New York World's Fair.

Among the 16 paintings to be shown is "Performers", painted in 1947 and recently purchased by the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Another is "If This Be Not I", a 1945 work which received the jury's recommendation for purchase at the First Summer Exhibition of Contemporary Art at the State University of Iowa.

"The Pouch", for which he received the purchase prize in 1948 at the University of Illinois' Exhibition of Contemporary American Painting, will also be exhibited.

Guston, who in 1948 was awarded a $1,000 grant by the American Academy of Arts and Letters, has recently returned from Italy, where he studied under a fellowship from the American Academy in Rome.

The exhibition will continue through May 12.

Orchesis, the modern dance group of the University of Minnesota will present a program of dance compositions Thursday evening, April 20th at 8:30 p.m. in Northrop Auditorium.

The program will be most interesting in its variety and choice of themes. There will be a series of group dances developed in a humorous vein based on Emily Post's "Etiquette". A Pavanne, "Noblesse Oblige", presented as a group dance depicts the feeling and style of a dance originally performed as a court dance in the 16th century. Jewish Holiday, based on the celebration of Chag Purim and Matra Pictures, a group of dances featuring Hungarian themes will add a new and fresh approach to the use of folk materials in modern dance.

One of the outstanding features of the program is that the University Chambers Singers will assist the Orchesis group in several of its numbers with choral accompaniments.

REPORTS RESULTS OF FIRST 2 YEARS

Minneapolis, April - Physical abnormalities requiring medical attention were found in more than one-half of the 3,265 examinations conducted in the University of Minnesota's Cancer Detection Center during the first two years of its operation, Dr. David State, director of the center, reported today.

Cancer in some form was detected in 34 visitors to the center, 15 men and 19 women, Dr. State disclosed. Thirty cases of cancer were diagnosed on the first visit, while four persons were found to have developed a malignancy when they returned to the center for their prescribed annual recheck.

In the 1,732 examinations (53 per cent) which revealed ailments or physical defects requiring medical attention, doctors assigned to the center found, in addition to the 34 definite instances of cancer: 776 pre-cancerous conditions which, if not promptly treated, might turn into cancer; 564 benign (non-malignant) tumors; and 2,149 instances of abnormal medical conditions, non-cancerous (such as high blood pressure and hemorrhoids) but calling for immediate treatment.

Most common of the pre-cancerous conditions found at the center, Dr. State reported, was rectal polyps which accounted for 369 of the 776 instances of pre-cancerous lesions.

Many of the persons in whom abnormal conditions were discovered, the director pointed out, were found to be suffering from two, three or more different ailments. For instance, the 2,149 instances of various non-cancerous trouble were detected in 705 persons.

However, large numbers of the center's patrons were sent home reassured that they were free of cancer and other bodily ailments as 1,533 examinations during the two-year period failed to disclose any abnormal conditions.

Included in the 3,265 cases handled by the center's staff during the initial two years of their work were examinations of 2,226 first-time visitors of whom 1,026 were men and 1,200 women. The remaining 1,039 examinations, 510 of males and 529 of females, were repeat check-ups. Every center patron is urged to return one year later for a re-examination and is given an appointment for his next visit.

"Results of our first two years of operation have been better than we anticipated," Dr. State said today. "Apart from the fact that we were able to detect 34 cancers, we were able to catch most of them extremely early, and, accordingly, treatment of these tumors was more successful than the average.

"Without discounting the importance of detecting these cancers," the director continued, "we feel that it was of much more practical value that we found such a large number of pre-cancerous lesions which are relatively simple to treat. Their adequate treatment at the time of discovery undoubtedly eliminates their possible development into cancer in the future."

Dr. State indicated that he and his staff have been surprised at the large number of center patrons who have pre-cancerous conditions particularly at the number with polyps of the rectum and large bowel.

The center is open to Minnesota men and women in the age bracket in which cancer occurs most frequently, 45 and over, who are unaware of any symptoms of cancer in themselves. A fee of $10 per examination is charged those who are able to pay.

Opened in March 1948 as a project of the University's medical school, the center is located in a temporary barracks-type building on Church street just west of University Hospitals in Minneapolis. Its operation is financed in part by the Minnesota state division of the American Cancer society, the National Cancer institute of the United States Public Health service and the University's malignant disease research fund.

Staffed by the director and 18 doctors who serve on a part-time basis, the center is now open four days each week, Monday and Wednesday for the examination of men, and Tuesday and Thursday for women. The average examination load is 15 per day and 60 per week, according to Dr. State.

Admission to the center is by appointment only, the director explained, and to date more than 21,000 applications for appointments have been received.

SPRING QUARTER
ATTENDANCE AT 'U'
REPORTED 21,658

Minneapolis, April - Spring quarter attendance at the University of Minnesota totals 21,658, 1,889 fewer students than attended the University's winter quarter and a decline of 2,463 from spring quarter a year ago, True E. Pettengill, University recorder, reported Monday (April 10).

Pettengill said that the decline represented the normal drop expected from winter to spring quarter and was in line with University estimates made last fall.

Winter quarter attendance this year totaled 23,547, and students attending last year's spring quarter numbered 24,121.

While the total University attendance was less than that of a year ago, nine colleges and divisions of the University reported an increase in the number of students in classes. These are the medical school, physical and occupational therapy, nursing, public health, dentistry, pharmacy, education, the graduate school and veterinary medicine.

The largest increase was that of the graduate school with an attendance of 3,457 students, 286 more than the 3,171 of spring quarter 1949. The college of education was second with 2,059 or an increase of 153 over last spring's 1,906 total.

On the other hand, attendance in the University institute of technology declined 1,273 from a total of 4,047 students last spring to a total of 2,774 this quarter. In the college of science, literature and the arts there are 1,029 fewer students or a decline from 6,633 to 5,604. It is in these two colleges that the veteran enrollment took the biggest drop.

For the University as a whole, Pettengill reported a decline of 4,063 from last spring in the number of veterans attending the University under G. I. benefits and a drop of 1,292 from winter to spring quarter this year. Veterans now attending the University under G. I. benefits number 8,555 while last spring's total was 12,618 and last quarter's total was 9,847.

The all-University spring quarter total of 21,658 students includes 20,005 students on the Minneapolis and St. Paul campuses and 1,653 at the University's Duluth branch.

Of the number attending classes in Minneapolis and St. Paul, 15,244 are men and 4,761 are women. The Duluth total includes 1,221 men and 432 women.

Pettengill said that the figures were those for the close of the second week of the quarter.

Minneapolis, April - Equipment that makes possible experiments in such varied fields as children's hearing and poultry freezing for storage is purchased through contributions to the University of Minnesota's Greater University Fund.

The fund, sponsored by the Minnesota Alumni association, handles contributions for research in the University's various departments as well as for student scholarships.

During 1949, $5,305 worth of new research equipment was purchased, Stanley J. Wenberg, fund director, disclosed in his annual report just released.

Among the new pieces of equipment is a device that tests the influence of the rate of freezing on the quality of turkey meat.

Another is a $375 audiometer used in the University child study center for such projects as research involving the relation of specific hearing losses to particular types of reading difficulty experienced by school children.

A third is a special recording camera used by the University's department of physical medicine to study the action of the various muscles in the human body. The machine permits the observation of the exact action of any group of muscles and is used in the diagnosis phase of the rehabilitation of the physically handicapped.

In addition to the money used for these and similar pieces of research equipment, a sum totaling $42,554 was given through the fund for specific research projects at the University designated by the donors.

OLD FASHIONED FARM KITCHEN
KEY TO MODERN HOME PLANNING

Minneapolis, April - Modern home planning can profit from the study of the old-fashioned farm house kitchen, according to Harlan E. McClure, associate professor of architecture in the University of Minnesota's institute of technology.

Home planners are getting away from the idea that the kitchen should be a small mechanical laboratory, McClure said, and are beginning to think of it as a room that can serve many purposes.

The big farmhouse kitchen--the center of the whole household's activities and serving as kitchen, dining room and playroom for children--is a good illustration of the modern theory that every foot of space should be used to the best advantage, he said.

On the other hand, he added, the farmhouse's traditional "best parlor"--used by the family only on special occasions--is an example of wasted space caused by the Victorian era's attempt to divide the home into special compartments.

McClure said that efficient use of space is especially important to people living on farms because the rural home, isolated from other houses, is usually used more continuously than the urban home--especially during the winter months when outdoor activities are at a minimum.

He stressed the planning of the farmhouse so that sunlight is used to advantage at all times of the year and so that the prevailing breezes blow odors from other buildings away from the farmhouse in summer.

Because of the greater use of the kitchen at harvest time, he said, the kitchen should be flexible enough to accommodate large numbers of people if necessary. He suggested, as in modern urban homes, the use of such devices as movable partitions.

One especial feature needed by the farmhouse, he said, is a "mud room" near the entrance so that those who have been working can clean up before coming in to dinner.

As in the planning of any house, he said, the major problem in farmhouse planning is to decide what features will be most important to the whole family. "It is possible that money spent on a dishwasher might be more profitably spent on a screen porch."

U. OF M. HOSPITAL
PLAN BENEFITS
WILL BE UPPED

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, April - Benefits under the University of Minnesota group hospitalization service plan will be increased from $5 per day for hospital board and room to $9 per day effective Sunday (April 16), President J. L. Morrill announced Friday (April 14).

Higher costs of hospital rooms and services made the larger benefits desirable, President Morrill explained after the Board of Regents had approved the advance in benefits.

The increase in benefits involves an increase in premium rates from $12 to $16.20 annually for individual members of the plan and from $24 to $37.80 per year for members with dependents.

A recent survey of the more than 3,000 University staff members who subscribe to the hospitalization plan showed that a large majority favored the increase in benefits and premiums, President Morrill reported.

ABSTRACT OF ADDRESS ON AMERICAN GRADUATE EDUCATION BY DR. THEODORE C. ELEGEN, DEAN OF THE GRADUATE SCHOOL, UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA, BEFORE NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON HIGHER EDUCATION IN CHICAGO, APRIL 17, 1950.

*Teaching
Along
P. P.
Lack

Dean Elegen called for better preparation of college teachers, emphasizing a broad "total education," with breadth running through college and into graduate years. Giving specialized training for a specialized age, we have paid too high a price for our specialization. We must put new emphasis upon relating specialization to supporting fields of knowledge and basing it upon the humane foundation of a liberal education. Schools and colleges searching for teachers give too much thought and too much recognition to degrees as such, and too little to the character and quality of a person's education and his evidence of achievements and potential service. We need to turn from over-emphasis upon degrees to a basic emphasis upon quality and character.

Graduate education today is in ferment, in adjustment to the changing needs of a world different from the yesterdays in which it was brewed and facing yet different tomorrows. It is deeply concerned with citizenship, leadership, teaching, professional competence, and service in a critical time of history and faces a great opportunity to strengthen and enrich American education and through it perhaps to have greater impact on American life.

Dean Elegen reported the findings of a special conference on the improvement of the preparation of college teachers recently held under his chairmanship. This conference advocated special fellowships for prospective college teachers, broadened concepts of research, studies cutting across the boundaries of established departments and fields, supervised apprenticeships, and flexible, individual programs of training. It underlined the search for truth as the responsibility of all people dealing with ideas and teaching young people. They must know the problems involved in seeking out truth, in discovering and interpreting facts.

Dean Blegen advocated differentiation in higher education to meet different needs, and he predicted that if college work of high quality is to be maintained while we also meet the mass educational task that we face, significant changes will be needed in the functions of many colleges. He urged colleges not to spread themselves too thin, but to concentrate upon their central objectives, doing what they can do very well. Many kinds of accreditation are practiced and proposed. In the long run, the best kind is the character, competence, achievement, and standing of the men and women who have studied in a school's classrooms and laboratories and have come under the influence of its teachers.

U. OF M. TO OFFER
AMERICAN STUDIES
SUMMER COURSE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, April - The American way of life will be evaluated at the University of Minnesota this summer by a number of experts in various fields of American culture.

The experts, from colleges and universities throughout the country, will participate in the University's Program in American Studies at both University summer sessions--June 12 to July 22 and July 24 to Aug. 26.

An anthropologist, for example, will present a course on the pattern of contemporary American culture and a second course in the status of the country's minority peoples. A sociologist will examine the impact of atomic energy on national life and will report on cultural changes in America. A second sociologist will analyze America's urban life and a third the rural life. A political scientist will outline American political thought while another will define American democracy.

This summer's Program in American Studies, which will use also the resources of such other departments as history and humanities, will have "American Civilization from 1900 to 1950" as its theme.

Chairman of the program, Tremaine McDowell, professor of literature at the University, points out that "mature Americans living abroad have observed for many years that citizens of other countries are usually better informed concerning their own culture than are Americans. During the last century, this American ignorance of America produced confusion chiefly at home, but today it can be disastrous to the whole world".

(More)

"Thus," he said, "the purpose of the Program in American Studies at Minnesota is to develop critical self-knowledge in the United States as a contribution to world understanding."

To extend the program to the community, several of the guest professors will participate in a series of lectures interpreting American life for the general public.

During the first term Carl Bridenbaugh, director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture, will lecture on the arts in 18th Century America; Linden Mander of the University of Washington will speak on national culture and the world community; Willard Thorp of Princeton will discuss Trollope's America; Margaret Thorp, author of "America Goes to the Movies" will talk on the novel and the motion picture; and George Axtelle of Columbia university will present developments in democratic theory.

Second term lectures will include Hornell Hart of Duke university on America's contribution to world order; Hortense Powdermaker of Queens college on the movies as a social institution; George Whicher of Amherst college on sidelights of Emily Dickinson; Oliver Field of Indiana university on Utopia, USA; and Alfred Kazin of the New School for Social Research on the obligations of the artist.

OPERA COURSES
DURING SUMMER

Minneapolis, Apr. - Courses in opera production will be offered at the University of Minnesota for the first time next summer.

The University department of music and the University Theatre will cooperate in the presentation of an opera workshop made up of two courses, an opera production lecture course and an opera production laboratory.

The workshop will be held during the University's first summer session, June 12 through July 22.

The opera production lecture series has been designed to acquaint the student with the history of opera, the various theatre techniques essential to stage production of opera, the use and values of opera in the high school and college curriculum and the value of operatic experience to the vocalist, actor and instrumentalist.

Laboratory sessions will be devoted to practice in organizing and conducting various groups involved in the production of opera as well as to practical training in such technical skills as lighting, costuming, make-up and scenic design. Students will participate in musical productions of the University Theatre.

The workshop will deal with the lighter opera works, from musical comedy to chamber opera, rather than with grand opera.

Teaching the courses will be Frank M. Whiting, associate professor of speech and director of the University Theatre, James Aliferis, associate professor of music, and other members of the music and theatre staffs.

Minneapolis, April - "The Crisis in American Education" will be discussed by Dr. Benjamin Fine, education editor of the New York Times, at the University of Minnesota convocation Thursday, April 27.

Dr. Fine, who recently represented the United States at the International Education conference in Germany, will speak at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium. His talk will be broadcast over KUOM, the University radio station.

For a recently published report of his six months' nationwide survey of the country's schools and colleges, Dr. Fine was awarded a citation by the National Education association and by the New York state board of regents, the first award of its kind ever made by the latter group.

Another series of Dr. Fine's articles won the Pulitzer prize "for the most disinterested and meritorious public service rendered by an American newspaper during the year".

Dr. Fine has been with the New York Times for 10 years, covering educational events that included the UNESCO conferences on education in London and in this country.

In his recent book, "Our Children Are Cheated", Dr. Fine pointed out that teacher morale is low, and that conditions in education were at an ebb. He based suggestions for action on his recent surveys. Other books he has written include "A Giant of the Press", "Educational Publicity" and "Democratic Education".

He is a member of the New York Academy of Public Education and the board of directors of the World Education Service council.

'U' SPECIALISTS GIVE CONTINUING CARE
TO POLIO VICTIMS TO LESSEN CRIPPLING

(FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, APRIL 27)

Minneapolis, April - The polio work of the University of Minnesota Hospitals doesn't end with the late summer polio season. It doesn't even end when the individual polio patient is discharged from the hospital.

University Hospitals polio patients from as far back as 1942 are still being checked at the University's polio clinic. Doctors in the clinic, headed by Dr. Frederic J. Kottke, associate professor of physical medicine, examine each victim of the disease for a period of at least five years—and people who are disabled for a longer period.

The purpose of the prolonged examination period by the clinic, which was established after the 1946 polio epidemic, is to cut polio crippling to a minimum.

Many patients who were treated before the clinic's establishment are also receiving periodic checkups. They were contacted through a careful check of records and the cooperation of state agencies.

The patients seen by Dr. Kottke and his staff of physical medicine specialists include both those who have been disabled and need treatment and those who have not been disabled but must guard against possible future effects of the disease.

Established for purposes of research as well as to help persons who have already had polio, the clinic includes among its functions the study of the long range aspects of polio and the development of new methods of treatment as a result of what clinic specialists learn.

Minneapolis, April - Two-year courses that will qualify students as technical aids in engineering drafting or as industrial technicians will be offered at the University of Minnesota fall quarter.

The courses, for which registration will be limited, will be conducted by the University institute of technology.

They are designed for those who find it inconvenient to spend the time required for a full engineering course but who can spend two college years preparing to become engineering aids.

Both courses include English and a thorough grounding in mathematics.

Giving two years of training in all phases of engineering drawing, the drafting course also has courses dealing with shop operations and problems of production.

The course for industrial technicians trains students as laboratory workers and testers and includes training in the setting up and testing of laboratory equipment.

The courses will prepare students, who must be graduates of an accredited high school and have taken two years of high school mathematics, for positions as assistants to shop supervisors, as inspectors and as aids to contractors and consulting engineers.

MENTAL HEALTH
INSTITUTE AT 'U'
OPENS WEDNESDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, April - Aspects of child welfare that are of special interest to the courts will be discussed by judges, psychiatrists and child welfare specialists in a two-day mental health institute for judges Wednesday and Thursday (April 26 and 27) at the University of Minnesota.

The institute will be held in conjunction with Minnesota's Mental Health Week observances and will meet at the University's Center for Continuation Study. It is being presented by the center in cooperation with the University institute of child welfare and the Minnesota department of health.

Dr. Louis Jacobs, regional mental health consultant of the U.S. public health service, Chicago, will give a talk on, "What Do We Mean By--?", in which he will give a definition of psychiatric terms and conditions.

Dr. Dale B. Harris, University institute of child welfare professor, will discuss "The Road to Delinquency", emphasizing behavior characteristics tending to lead toward delinquent behavior in children and young people.

"The Child in Court" will be discussed by District Judge Gustav Loevinger, St. Paul; and Harriet Blodgett, instructor in the institute of child welfare, will speak on "What the Psychologist Can Contribute to the Court".

"What Makes the Child Tick" will be the subject of a talk by Dr. John E. Anderson, director of the institute of child welfare. Dr. Donald Brieland, institute research associate, will discuss the effect of community attitudes on children's behavior.

How the courts can best make use of psychiatric facilities will be pointed out by Dr. Reynold A. Jensen, associate professor of pediatrics and psychiatry.

As a part of the state-wide observances of Mental Health Week, the Thursday afternoon program will close with the presentation of "A Preface to A Life", a picture recently released by the National Mental Health Film board. The film illustrates the influence of parental attitudes and family environment on the emotional development of children.

NEW YORK TIMES
SCHOOL EDITOR
TO SPEAK AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dr. Benjamin Fine, education editor of the New York Times and United States representative at the recent International Education conference in Germany, will speak at the University of Minnesota convocation Thursday (April 27).

Dr. Fine will discuss "The Crisis in American Education" at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium. His talk, the keynote address for the University college of education's Education Day, will be the subject of an Education Day panel discussion at 12:30 p.m. in the great hall of the University YMCA.

In his recent book, "Our Children Are Cheated", Dr. Fine dealt with what is wrong with American education, basing his suggestions for improvement on recent surveys he had made.

For his report on a six months' nationwide survey of the country's schools and colleges, Dr. Fine was awarded a citation by the National Education association. Another citation, by the New York state board of regents, was the first of its kind ever made by that group.

Dr. Fine, who has been with the New York Times for 10 years, is also the author of a series of articles which won for the Times the 1943 Pulitzer award "for the most disinterested and meritorious public service rendered by an American newspaper during the year". While with the Times, he has covered educational events that included the UNESCO conferences on education in London and in this country.

Among his publications are included "A Giant of the Press", "Educational Publicity" and "Democratic Education". He is a member of the New York Academy of Public Education and the board of directors of the World Education Service council.

His convocation talk will be broadcast over KUOM, the University radio station.

TWO DOCUMENTARY
FILMS SCHEDULED
WEDNESDAY AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Two documentary films, one American and the other Belgian, will be shown by the University of Minnesota Film society Wednesday (April 26).

They are "The Quiet One", to be shown on the University campus for the second time, and "Rubens", a film on the work of the 16th century Flemish painter, Peter Paul Rubens.

The story of a Harlem youngster who is rescued by the Wiltwyck School for Boys after he is rejected by his family, "The Quiet One" was chosen as the best picture of the year by the New York Newspaper Guild and cited for a Page One award. It was also winner of the first annual prize of the City College of New York Film institute.

"Rubens" shows the relation of the painter's work to that of such other artists as Breughel, Delacroix and Renoir. Made for the Belgian government, the film gives closeups of the brushwork on Rubens' paintings as well as presenting the massive compositions themselves.

The movies will be shown at 4 and 8 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the University campus.

Minneapolis, April - Raymond K. Parker, instructor in art at the University of Minnesota, is one of three young American artists whose work is included in an experimental exhibition which opened Friday ^{April} ~~May~~ 28) at the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

The exhibition is the first in an experimental series designed to show the work of younger artists who have not yet been given major exhibitions in New York.

Parker, 27, whose paintings have won first prizes in a number of local shows, will have seven paintings in the exhibition. The paintings, none of which have been exhibited before, all were painted in 1949 and 1950.

The other two artists exhibiting with Parker are Seymour Drumlevitch, painter, and William D. King, sculptor, both of whom are now studying in Italy.

Parker has been on the University staff since 1948. A native of South Dakota, he received his art training at Sioux City, Iowa, Art center and the State University of Iowa. In addition to teaching at the University of Minnesota, he has taught at the State University of Iowa.

His work received first prizes in the annual Exhibition for Twin-City Artists at the Minneapolis Institute of Arts in 1948 and 1949, in the Dayton Company competition "Centennial Minnesota" in 1949 and in the Walker Art Center Biennial in 1949. His paintings have been purchased by the Minneapolis Institute of Arts and the Walker Art center.

'U' SWITCHBOARD
OPERATORS HANDLE
4,000 CALLS HOUR

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, - If a prize were offered for the busiest telephone switchboard in the Midwest, the University of Minnesota switchboard would probably win it.

The board's seven daytime operators handle 4,000 calls every hour—or more than 500 calls each every 60 minutes.

According to Mrs. Adeline Melcher, chief switchboard operator, only about 10 per cent of the people making these calls have all the information the operator needs to connect them with the right party.

Because very few callers know the extension number of the person they are calling, the operators have to memorize the extension numbers of every staff member on the campus who has a phone. This means that the operators have to carry almost 2,000 telephone numbers in their heads.

Therefore the University doesn't change telephone operators very often. Most of the 12 operators that keep the switchboard open day and night have been with the University many years—the record is held by Myrtle Gable who has 28 years of service. Mrs. Melcher, herself, has been at the board for 20 years.

Numbers, however, aren't the only information that the operators must have available. Because someone at the University can usually find the answer to almost any kind of question, the operators are often asked such questions as "Who is the ambassador from Spain?" The operator must be able to connect such inquirers with the staff member or department most likely to know the answer to the question. In this case, the question was answered by the department of romance languages.

Sometimes, however, the switchboard—which is the clearing house for all incoming and outgoing University calls—gets calls which the operators feel are a little outside of the University's field. One man recently wanted to know how the University ranked in size with other colleges and universities. The question was a legitimate one—but he needed the answer to settle a bet.

WEEKLY EDITORS
TO ATTEND SHORT
COURSE AT U. OF M.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, - A two-day discussion of the current status of weekly newspaper publishing in Minnesota will be combined with talks on pressing questions of public affairs at the 33rd annual Editors' Short Course to be held at the University of Minnesota, Friday and Saturday (May 5 and 6).

The gathering is sponsored by the University's school of journalism and department of agriculture. Sessions will be held in Murphy hall on the Minneapolis campus.

J. Russell Wiggins, managing editor of the Washington Post, will speak at dinner May 5 on "The Press and the Peace." Wiggins is a former Minnesota weekly newspaper editor (Luverne) and was executive editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch.

Also returning to the state will be Paul C. Johnson, former University agricultural publications editor, who is now editor of the Prairie Farmer in Chicago. Johnson will analyze national farm programs and legislation at the May 5 luncheon.

M. A. Johnson, publisher of the Blue Earth Post and president of the Minnesota Editorial association, will preside at the luncheon, and Dr. Ralph D. Casey, journalism school director, at the dinner. Both events will be held in the junior ballroom of Coffman Memorial union.

Five weekly publishers and editors will discuss the problem of adjusting newspaper operations to meet 1950 costs, at a panel meeting. They are Frank A. Douglass, Lakefield Standard; Martin McGowan, Jr., Appleton Press; Ed J. Morrison, Morris Sun and Tribune; Russell C. Mills, Cambridge North Star, and George A. Rossman, Grand Rapids Herald-Review.

Another panel of three editors will speak on questions involved in the completeness of news publication, and avoidance of pressures brought upon the newspaper. They are Frank E. Bargon, Hutchinson Leader, Grace A. Dunn, Princeton Union, and Oliver M. Mattson, Warren Sheaf.

Three members of the Minnesota State Columnists' association will answer the question, "Are Columnists People?" Speaking will be George Fisher, Hibbing Daily Tribune, president of the group, Charles Rathe, Sauk Centre Herald, and William B. Sweetland, Wheaton Gazette.

Other speakers include Ralph W. Keller, manager of the Minnesota Editorial association; John W. Garberson, Marshall Messenger; Fred W. Hill, publisher of the Hamburg, Iowa, Reporter and past president of the National Editorial association; Mark E. Cramer, co-publisher of seven Nebraska and Iowa weeklies; John R. Immer, assistant professor of industrial management at the University; Richard A. Graves, assistant professor of economics and insurance at the University; and C. M. Carnahan, Eastman Kodak representative, Minneapolis.

GREATER 'U' FUND
DRIVE TO OPEN;
GOAL UNLIMITED

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, - The University of Minnesota's Greater University Fund will begin its fund-raising campaign Monday (May 1) with an expanded program of scholarships, fellowships, research and related projects as its aim, according to Carl W. Painter, national campaign chairman.

Painter said that although no total program goal has been set, at least $25,000 is needed in unrestricted gifts alone to meet project commitments. The fund is sponsored by the Minnesota Alumni association.

In addition to the unrestricted gifts, or money given without conditions governing its use, gifts to a number of the University's trust funds are promoted and handled through the Greater University Fund.

Because of the increased demand for undergraduate scholarships, Painter said, the fund hopes to increase the amount available for 1951-52 scholarships by 25 per cent. At present, 40 University undergraduates are being aided by scholarships made possible by the 1949 campaign. These scholarships range from $150 to $500, depending on the student's need.

Painter said that during the school year 1951-52 the fund also hoped to give five instead of three fellowships to students working for advanced degrees in the University's graduate school.

In addition to fellowships and scholarships, Painter said, the fund also receives many requests for research assistance.

(More)

"It is hoped that next year a project at the University Child Study Center in the area of children's hearing and reading difficulties may be expanded to include service to needy pre-school children," Painter said.

He said that the fund also hoped to make possible a grant of $1,000 that will enable the University speech clinic to make further use of successful studies, carried on with fund money, on the effects of therapy through motion pictures on stuttering.

The fund, he said, also contributes a limited sum of money to such projects as the vital nerve research program being conducted by the department of bio-physics.

TWELVE WRITERS

(FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, APRIL 30, 1950)

Minneapolis, - Award of University of Minnesota regional writing fellowships for 1950-51 to 12 writers has been announced by President J. L. Morrill.

The fellowships comprise the second series of awards by the University under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation for the encouragement of written interpretations of or creative work dealing with life in the central Northwest. Applications of both new and established writers were considered.

Selected by a graduate school committee headed by Dean Theodore C. Blegen, the fellowship winners with the subjects of the projects on which they will be engaged are as follows:

1. Mrs. M. Dwight Bell of Minneapolis: a biography of Stella Louise Wood.
2. David C. DeJong of Providence, R. I.: a novel dealing with life among immigrants from Holland in the Middle West.
3. Archer B. Gilfillan of Deadwood, S. D.: a book of essays interpreting South Dakota life.
4. Carl Hennemann of St. Paul: a novel, entitled "The Golden Seeds", on life in Minnesota.
5. Thelma Jones of Wayzata: an informal interpretation of the Lake Minnetonka region.
6. Dr. John I. Kolehmainen of Tiffin, O.: the story of the Finnish farmer in the Middle West.
7. Truly Trousdale Latchaw of White Bear Lake: "Trousdale Brothers Tonight", the story of a traveling theatrical troupe in the Middle West.

(More)

8. Josephine Lutz Rollins of Stillwater: illustrated interpretations of life in Minnesota and the Upper Midwest at the mid-twentieth century.

9. Sister Helen Angela Hurley of St. Paul: "Minnesota Takes the Veil", the story of the Sisters of St. Joseph in Minnesota.

10. Mrs. Susie W. Stageberg of Red Wing: an informal history of the Farmer-Labor party by a participant.

11. Eric Thane of Helena, Mont.: a book on "The Empire of Wheat" in the Northwest.

The earlier Minnesota regional writing project, initiated in 1943, has resulted in the completion and publication of the following volumes: "Land of the Dakotahs" by Bruce Nelson; "Snowshoe Country" by Florence and Francis Jaques; "Historic Midwest Houses" by John Drury; "The Chosen Valley" by Margaret Snyder;

"Around the World in St. Paul" by Alice Sickels; "Singin' Yankees" by Philip Jordan; "This Is the Year" by Feike Feikema; "The Threshers" by Herbert Krause; "Wanda Gag, the Story of an Artist" by Alma Scott; and "The White Pine Industry in Minnesota" by Agnes Larson.

Many of these books were published by the University of Minnesota Press, Dean Blegen pointed out adding that other books sponsored by the first writing project will be published in the near future.

PISTON TO WRITE 'FOURTH SYMPHONY'
TO MARK MINNESOTA 'U' CENTENNIAL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, - The noted American composer, Walter Piston, has been commissioned to write a major orchestral work that will mark the one-hundredth anniversary of the University of Minnesota.

The announcement of Piston's acceptance of the commission was made by President J. L. Morrill of the University.

Piston, professor of music at Harvard university, has agreed to complete the work by January, 1951, in time for performance during the University's centennial year, Morrill said.

The work, to be composed for full orchestra, will be given its world premiere in the University's Northrop Memorial auditorium by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, whose conductor, Antal Dorati, was instrumental in interesting Piston in the commission.

Morrill said that the first performance of the composition would occupy the major portion of one of the programs in the orchestra's regular concert series. He added that a second performance, limited to the University campus and a campus audience, would possibly be held.

Piston has not yet announced the theme of the work but has said it will be his "Fourth Symphony".

The composer of chamber music and numerous orchestral works, Piston has been on the Harvard faculty since 1926. He received his A. B. degree summa cum laude from Harvard in 1924 and was awarded the John Knowles Paine fellowship from Harvard for 1924-26 and a Guggenheim fellowship in 1935. He has studied musical composition in Paris, chiefly with Nadia Boulanger.

Piston, the author of several books on harmony and counterpoint, is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and Phi Beta Kappa.

HENRI BARZUN,
FRENCH AUTHOR,
TO SPEAK AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dr. Henri Barzun, noted French author and lecturer, will discuss the question "Is a European Federation Possible?" at 2 p.m. Thursday, May 11, in the Museum of Natural History auditorium on the University of Minnesota campus.

Dr. Barzun will speak in French on "Literary Masters I Have Known", at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 11, at a meeting of the Twin City Alliance Francaise in Coffman Memorial union on the campus.

His schedule will also include an address to the Tuesday meeting of the University French club and a talk at 4 p.m. Wednesday, May 10, at Macalester college in St. Paul.

Dr. Barzun was co-founder with Duhamel, Vildrac and Romains of the literary Abbaye group of Paris. In 1930, he founded the quarterly, The French Forum, which made the work of the Abbaye group better known in this country.

As early as 1920 he proposed the first post-war plan on record for an economic federation of Europe and a world government.

Prior to serving as a press envoy for cultural relations between France and the United States, Dr. Barzun was attache to the French secretary of labor, was staff secretary to the military governor of Paris during the first World War, and in 1918 was appointed by Clemenceau as editor of his daily newspaper, "L'Homme Libre".

Barzun is a member of the American Association of University Professors and has held lectureships at Lehigh university, Fordham graduate school, New York City college, Penn State college and the Universities of Maryland, Iowa, Kansas City and Utah.

His lecture on a European federation will be open to the public and will deal with American, British, French, European and Russian viewpoints on the subject and the possibilities of reconciling conflicting economic and ideological doctrines. The talk will be sponsored by the University departments of romance languages, political science and concerts and lectures.

MINNESOTA 'U' AWARDS THREE GREATER UNIVERSITY FELLOWSHIPS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --Three University of Minnesota graduate students have been announced as winners of Greater University Fellowships for 1950-51.

They are Howard Murray Robbins of Mantorville, Francis Edward Rourke of Hamden, Conn., and Glenn E. Tyler of 427 Dayton avenue, St. Paul.

Dean Theodore C. Blegon of the University graduate school, who announced the names of the winners, said that they were chosen from approximately 90 applicants.

Funds for the scholarships were provided by the Greater University Fund, which is now conducting its campaign for donations to provide graduate fellowships and undergraduate scholarships and research projects for the 1951-52 school year.

This is the second year that the scholarships, $1,200 each, have been awarded. In addition, a fund of $300 per fellow is retained by the graduate school to finance tuition and incidental expenditures involved in the winners' graduate work.

"I cannot too strongly emphasize my own gratification as dean of the graduate school in the establishment of the Greater University Fellowships, which make possible such concrete encouragement to high talent that will ultimately be of service to our state and country," Dean Blegon said.

"At the same time," he added, "let me voice my hope that it will be possible to increase the number of such fellowships available in view of the very large numbers of highly competent candidates who are seeking out these fellowships".

(More)

Robbins, who is working on his Ph. D. in physics with a minor in mathematics, was born in Dodge Center. He graduated from Mantorville high school in 1942 and received his B. S. with high distinction in 1947 and his M. A. in 1948 from the University of Minnesota. He was an Atomic Energy commission fellow in 1949 and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Rourke is working on a Ph. D. in political science with a minor in economics. Born in New Haven, Conn., he received his B. A. in 1947 and his M. A. in 1948 from Yale university. From 1944 to 1946 he was a meteorologist for the army and has served as statistician for an oil firm and as research assistant and teaching assistant in the University department of political science.

Tyler, who received a B. S. with distinction in 1932 and an M. A. in 1947 from the University of Minnesota, is working toward a Ph. D. in history with a minor in the history of science. A native of Bayfield, Wis., he is a graduate of Virginia, Minn., Technical and Vocational high school. From 1930 to 1933, he served as a department supervisor in the First National bank of Minneapolis and was with the U. S. Army from 1943 to 1945.

MINNESOTA PRESS
TO PUBLISH STORY OF INDEX FIRM

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --The story behind the development of such publications as the "Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature" and the "Cumulative Book Index" is told in a new book to be published Friday (May 12) by the University of Minnesota Press.

The book, "The H. W. Wilson Company", is the history of the bibliographical index company's 50 years of operation, beginning in a building across from the University's main campus entrance and moved to New York in 1913.

"The H. W. Wilson Company" has several further ties with the University of Minnesota. It was written by the newspaperman and researcher, John Lawler, who was graduated from the University in 1939. H. W. Wilson, founder of the company, is also a former University student and operated the bookstore in the University's "Old Main" building in the 80's and 90's. And the company's vice president, Howard Haycraft, is a 1929 graduate of the University, a former managing editor of the Minnesota Daily and a former staff member of the University Press.

The book's foreword was written by Errett W. McDiarmid, University of Minnesota librarian.

Illustrated with pictures of the people and places important in the company's history, the book includes photographs of the "Old Main" bookstore as well as of the company's Minneapolis building.

In order to write the book, Lawler spent weeks in studying the company's actual operations, interviewing staff and officers personally and examining all of the company files.

He tells how the company grew from a staff of one person, Mrs. Wilson, to an enterprise employing 375 people and supplying information to approximately 45,000 libraries, business firms and individuals.

RESEARCH AWARD
IN JOURNALISM GIVEN TO 'U' PROFESSOR

(FOR RELEASE TUESDAY, MAY 9, 1950)

Minneapolis --Dr. Edwin Emery, assistant professor of journalism at the University of Minnesota, has been named recipient of the annual Sigma Delta Chi distinguished service award for research about journalism.

The award, top national honor in the field of journalism research, was for his book, "History of the American Newspaper Publishers Association," published by the University of Minnesota Press.

Dr. Emery is the third Minnesota journalism school professor to win the award in the last four years. The University Press has published the winning book for two consecutive years.

Last year's winner was Dr. J. Edward Gerald, author of "The Press and the Constitution." Dr. Ralph D. Casey, school director, was honored in 1947 for "Propaganda, Communication and Public Opinion: A Comprehensive Reference Guide," co-authored with Harold D. Lasswell and Bruce L. Smith.

Dr. Ralph O. Nafziger, now director of the University of Wisconsin journalism school, received the award in 1937 while a member of the Minnesota faculty.

Sigma Delta Chi is the national professional journalism fraternity. The award, a bronze medallion and a certificate, will be presented at a ceremony in New York May 18 honoring award winners in various journalistic fields.

Dr. Emery's book tells the history of the trade association of daily newspaper publishers and estimates the association's impact upon national affairs through its conflicts and adjustments with labor unions, communications competitors, advertisers, newsprint makers, and the government.

The judges for the research award commented: "The book is a thorough piece of research. Dr. Emery gives evidence of an exhaustive job of running down all the source material. His interpretation is highly intelligent and his presentation of material and assignment of emphasis was excellent."

Statement by Seymour H. Knox, Chairman of the Council, University of Buffalo:

"The Council of the University of Buffalo has chosen Dr. Thomas R. McConnell as our chancellor. We feel that the University is exceedingly fortunate in having obtained a man of his recognized ability, intellectual distinction, and educational reputation to become its leader.

"The University, now an institution of 14 divisions and more than 10,000 students, has made tremendous strides, both in the educational world and in our own community, during the 23-year tenure of Chancellor Samuel P. Capen. It has gained wide attention as a pioneering, far-sighted, progressive and liberal agency of higher education.

"The committee charged with the task of selecting a successor to Chancellor Capen faced an almost impossible challenge. It searched far and wide for a man who could carry on in the tradition, in the genius, and in the dynamic spirit of Chancellor Capen.

"In Dr. McConnell, we believe we have found the foremost educator in the United States for the post. He has the background, the experience, the personality, the youth, the determination, and the drive to lead this institution to new and greater heights of educational leadership and of service to our community."

"In electing Dean Thomas R. McConnell to the chancellorship, the Council of the University of Buffalo has made a singularly wise and fortunate choice. He comes to Buffalo after a conspicuously successful service as dean of one of the largest and most progressive University colleges in the country. But his familiarity with the principal problems of university administrators has not been derived solely from this experience. As a member of various important national boards and commissions, he has had an opportunity to study the operation of colleges and universities throughout the country.

"In all of these undertakings, he has impressed his associates by his keen insight, his sound judgment, and his intellectual integrity. Both through these services and through his writings and addresses, he has won an unchallenged place among the leaders of higher education in the United States.

"The University of Buffalo is to be congratulated that a man of such proved ability and distinction has consented to assume the direction of its affairs."

SUMMER MODERN LANGUAGES
INSTITUTES PLANNED AT MINNESOTA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --For six weeks this summer students attending the University of Minnesota's modern languages institutes will forget they know English.

While participating in the institutes, to be held during the University's first summer session, June 12 through July 22, the students will speak only the languages they are studying—even at meals and during recreation hours.

The institutes, in French, German and Spanish-American language areas, will be held in special houses where students will attend classes, sleep, eat their meals and participate in planned recreation programs. Even newspapers, magazines and phonograph records used in the houses will be in French, German or Spanish American.

In the Spanish-American house, for instance, each student will be given a name containing sounds that are usually difficult for English-speaking people to pronounce.

In addition to regular classes, each house will conduct evening round-table discussions on aspects of contemporary life and culture. The social program will include picnics, group singing, plays, dances and films. Open house parties, in which all three of the language area groups will participate, will also be held.

The program has been set up especially for teachers or potential teachers of Spanish, German or French; students who wish to satisfy University language requirements; those planning to apply for Fulbright or SPAN scholarships or other foreign study groups; and those training for positions with the government, international organizations, or private business.

The Spanish-American institute has been held at the University of Minnesota since 1942, but the French and German institutes are new this year.

Coordinator for the entire program is James A. Cuneo, associate professor of romance languages, who is also director of the Spanish-American institute. Jacques A. Fermaud, associate professor of romance languages, will be director of the French institute; and Emma Marie Birkmaier, assistant professor and chairman of foreign languages at University high school, will direct the German area.

'U' FISHING EXPERT PREDICTS GOOD SEASON
DESPITE COLD WEATHER, FLOODS

(FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1950)

Minneapolis --The cold weather and floods that hit Minnesota this spring haven't spoiled the chances of good catches during the fishing season which opened Saturday (May 13).

In fact, a smaller food supply in Minnesota's lakes may make the fish hungrier than usual, according to Dr. Samuel Eddy, professor of zoology at the University of Minnesota and co-author of the book "Northern Fishes" published by the University Press.

Because of the floods and cold weather, he said, there isn't half as much food now as usually exists in Minnesota's lakes at this time of the year. He predicted the fish will be hungry at least well into July.

He added that the food shortage is not dangerous to the fish, however, because fish can sometimes go for as much as two months without eating.

Although the cold weather is affecting the spawning time of some varieties of fish, Dr. Eddy explained, Minnesota lakes usually contain more fish than could be caught by fishermen anyway.

Northern and walleye pike, he said, ordinarily spawn in water of about 38 degrees and are spawning now--even in lakes that are still covered with ice.

He added, however, that sunfish, crappies and black bass, which spawn in warm water and usually build their nests in May haven't begun to spawn yet and in some areas may not begin to do so until the fishing season is well underway.

Dr. Eddy predicted that Minnesota's fishermen would not take to the lakes as early as usual this year because the lakes are still high and muddy.

U. OF M. TO MARK
TRADITIONAL CAP
AND GOWN DAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --Two University of Minnesota professors of music who will retire in June will take part in the University's annual Cap and Gown Day convocation Thursday (May 18).

They are Donald N. Ferguson, who has been with the department of music for 37 years, and William Lindsay, a music department faculty member for 29 years.

Ferguson will speak on "The School of Experience", and Lindsay will play two piano selections, Chopin's "Etude in E Major, Opus 10, No. 3" and "Etude in C Minor, Opus 10, No. 12".

The convocation, at which student honors for the year will be announced, will be held at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the University campus. It will climax the traditional Cap and Gown Day academic procession, this year to be participated in by almost 3,000 graduating seniors.

The seniors, wearing caps and gowns, will march over the University's mall from Coffman Memorial union to the auditorium. They will be followed by University faculty members and members of the senior cabinet.

Dr. E. G. Williamson, dean of students, will preside at the convocation, and the invocation will be given by the Rev. Alvin G. Lewis, member of the Minnesota Council of Religion and adviser to Lutheran students on the University's St. Paul campus.

Following the address by Ferguson and Lindsay's musical presentations, President J. L. Morrill of the University will present honor students whose names will be announced at the convocation. He will be assisted by Dr. E. W. Ziebarth, chairman of the department of speech.

Also participating in the program will be Arthur B. Jennings, University organist, and conducted by Gerald R. Prescott. Edward Berryman, instructor in music, will play the University's Flemish bells as the processional is being formed.

Faculty marshals for the convocation will be Dean Henry Schmitz of the college of agriculture, forestry, home economics and veterinary medicine; Dean Julius M. Nolte of the general extension division; and Dean Horace T. Morse of the general college.

SCHOOLMEN TO MEET
AT 'U' SATURDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis —A group of Minnesota high school teachers, superintendents and principals will have a chance to find out first-hand Saturday (May 20) how their programs have helped to prepare students for further education.

They will talk over student problems with their own former pupils at the University of Minnesota's high school-University conference on the problem of high school-University transition.

The one-day conference, the first of its kind to be held at the University, has been planned to identify some of the problems confronting students, to develop procedures for assisting in the solution of these problems and to determine the value of this kind of conference.

It will be sponsored by the University Senate's committee on relations of the University to other institutions of learning in cooperation with the Association of Secondary School Principals, the Minnesota Council of School Executives and the state department of education.

Already accepting University President J. L. Morrill's invitation to attend the conference are school men from Albert Lea, Austin, Crosby-Ironton, Edina, Faribault, Farmington, Forest Lake, Hutchinson, Litchfield, Mankato, Montevideo, Mound, Northfield, Owatonna, Red Wing, Rochester, St. James and White Bear.

Each of the schools will send two or three representatives.

Following the opening meeting, scheduled for 10 a.m. in Murphy hall auditorium on the University campus, the representatives will meet in small, informal groups with their former students who are now registered at the University. The questions raised in these meetings will be given further discussion during a question and answer period between high school representatives and representatives from the University's various colleges and departments.

High school representatives will be given an opportunity to discuss the problems individually with University staff members at a coffee hour at 3:30 p.m. in the men's and women's lounges of Coffman Memorial union.

After the conference each of the high school representatives will be sent a summary of questions and answers and of new procedures stimulated through the discussions.

3,000 TO MARCH
IN 'U' CAP, GOWN
RITES THURSDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis —Two University of Minnesota music professors will share the limelight with graduating seniors at the University's annual Cap and Gown Day convocation Thursday (May 18).

Donald N. Ferguson, who will retire from the University in June after 37 years on the faculty, will give the convocation address on "The School of Experience". And William Lindsay, retiring after serving as a faculty member for 29 years, will play two Chopin piano selections, "Etude in E Major, Opus 10, No. 3" and "Etude in C Minor, Opus 10, No. 12".

The convocation, at 11 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the University campus, will climax the traditional Cap and Gown Day academic procession in which some 3,000 graduating seniors will march over the University's mall to the auditorium.

Presiding at the convocation will be Dr. E. G. Williamson, dean of students. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Alvin G. Lewis, member of the Minnesota Council of Religion and adviser to Lutheran students on the University's St. Paul campus.

Honor students, whose names will be announced at the convocation, will be presented by University President J. L. Morrill. Assisting will be Dr. E. W. Ziebarth, chairman of the department of speech.

CAP, GOWN DAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --Approximately 30 members of the University of Minnesota class of 1900 will take part in the University's annual Cap and Gown Day festivities Thursday (May 18).

The graduates of 50 years ago will be seated at the entrance to Northrop Memorial auditorium, where the procession of seniors, beginning at Coffman Memorial union and crossing the campus mall, will end.

The approximately 3,000 seniors, dressed in academic costume, will begin their procession at 10:30 a.m. preceding the Cap and Gown Day convocation in Northrop auditorium at 11 a.m.

During the convocation University President J. L. Morrill will present the University's honor students.

The main portion of the convocation program will be given by two retiring University professors of music, Donald N. Ferguson and William Lindsay. Ferguson will discuss "The School of Experience" and Lindsay will play two Chopin piano selections, "Etude in E Major, Opus 10, No. 3" and "Etude in C Minor, Opus 10, No. 12".

Dr. E. G. Williamson, dean of students, will preside, and the Rev. Alvin G. Lewis, member of the Minnesota Council of Religion and adviser to Lutheran students on the University's St. Paul campus, will give the invocation.

(More)

Opening on Cap and Gown Day will be the three-day 1950 Alumni Reunion celebration. Thursday afternoon alumni will attend campus tours and open house at various fraternities, sororities, dormitories, departments and colleges.

The class of 1900 will hold its Golden Anniversary luncheon at 12:30 p.m. in Coffman union.

Special classes and groups will hold reunion dinners in the evening.

Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, will be the main speaker at the alumni banquet scheduled for 6:30 p.m. in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial union on Friday, Alumni Day. At the banquet Stassen, three times governor of Minnesota from 1939 to 1943 and captain in the U. S. navy during World War II, will be awarded the Alumni Day outstanding achievement award. He received a bachelor of arts degree in 1927 and a bachelor of laws degree in 1929 from the University.

The class of 1925 will hold its Silver Anniversary luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Friday in the union junior ballroom. The class of 1935 will meet from 4 to 6 p.m. in Charlie's Cafe Exceptionale. And a student-faculty-alumni tea will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in the union women's lounge.

The Minnesota Alumni association will announce the names of its new board members on Saturday and will hold a dinner meeting of its board of directors at 6 p.m. Saturday in the union. An executive committee will be elected at the dinner.

INTERFAITH AWARD
MADE TO 2 SENIORS
AT MINNESOTA 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --Two University of Minnesota seniors will share this year's King Gustav scholarship, awarded annually since 1944 by the National Hillel Foundation to the student making the finest contribution to interfaith understanding on the campus.

They are Dale Maciver of 5613 West Eighth street, Duluth, and Hobart Banks of 3628 Clinton avenue south, Minneapolis.

The scholarship was established to commemorate the rescuing of thousands of Jews from Poland early in World War II by King Gustav of Sweden. A similar scholarship, honoring King Christian of Denmark, is awarded yearly to a University of Wisconsin student by the foundation.

The presentation was made by Dr. Marcia Edwards, assistant dean of the University college of education and chairman of the awards committee. She said that permission had been received from the foundation to divide the scholarship this year because "the committee members felt there were two seniors who had made contributions so noteworthy that they should be recognized if possible". Each of the students will receive $150 of the $300 scholarship.

Banks was general chairman of the University's 1950 "Brotherhood Week", is the founder of an interracial fraternity on the campus, and has served as chairman of the Minneapolis Committee on Racial Equality. During his University career, he has served as president of the YMCA, Freshman camp chairman and has been a member of the All-University Congress, Iron Wedge, the senate committee on student affairs, Interfraternity council and Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity. He is a senior in the college of science, literature and the arts.

Maciver has led efforts to eliminate discriminatory clauses in constitutions of fraternities and serorities; has served as chairman of the human relations committee for the Interfraternity council; and has written two reports for national distribution--"The Minnesota Story" in 1949 and "With Understanding Among All Peoples" in 1950. A law school senior, Maciver worked on Brotherhood Week, is a former president of Acacia fraternity and a member of the senate committee on student affairs.

Rabbi Lewis Milgrom, member of the Minnesota Council of Religion is director of Hillel foundation at the University.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --The University of Minnesota will be the center this summer of discussions on the problems of peace and war by well-known educators in various fields.

The problems will be attacked from the standpoint of cultural relations in the University's summer session course, "Cultural Relations: Instrument of Peace or War?".

The course, to be given from June 14 through July 22, during the University's first summer session, is being directed by Werner Levi, associate professor of political science at the University.

Lecturing will be Hans Kohn, professor of history at the College of the City of New York; Linden A. Mander, professor of political science at the University of Washington; Louis Wirth, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago; Allen L. Edwards, professor of social psychology at the University of Washington; and Robert F. Spencer, assistant professor of anthropology at the University of Minnesota.

Each of the lecturers will discuss the problem of cultural relations from the viewpoint of his own field. Emphasis will be placed upon the effect of differences in national cultures, especially in ideologies, as they relate to the maintenance of peace and the avoidance of war.

Dr. Levi said that the course would also aim to assist in the evaluation of present-day world organization by indicating its accomplishments, shortcomings and prospects.

Kohn will open the course with six lectures on culture applied to the broad movements in world history. Mander's lectures will deal with colonialism as an example of conflict of cultures. How national cultures can be adjusted to each other will be the subjects of Spencer's talks. The psychological aspects of culture, and especially propaganda, will be dealt with by Edwards.

Cultural attaches from the Indian and French embassies in the United States will also speak to those taking the course.

In addition to their scheduled lectures within the course, some of the visiting professors will also speak at public meetings.

SCARLET Tanager
STUDENTS' CHOICE
FOR STATE BIRD

(FOR RELEASE 11 A.M. TUESDAY, MAY 23, 1950)

Minneapolis --Minnesota's school children, by an overwhelming vote, have nominated the scarlet tanager for selection by the 1951 Legislature as the official state bird.

Dr. W. J. Breckenridge of Minneapolis, chairman of the commission created by the 1949 Legislature and appointed by Governor Luther W. Youngdahl to poll Minnesota school children on their choice of a state bird, reported today (Tuesday, May 23) that the scarlet tanager received 60,214 votes out of 163,444 cast for the eight-bird slate.

Runner-up in the poll was the rose-breasted grosbeak which netted 19,615 votes, while the wood duck placed third with 18,805 votes.

Other birds on the slate faired as follows in the balloting, according to Dr. Breckenridge: mourning dove, fourth, 16,646 votes; loon, fifth, 15,560; belted kingfisher, sixth, 13,851; killdeer, seventh, 10,795; and pileated woodpecker, eighth, 7,958.

There were many other write-in candidates named on the ballots returned, Dr. Breckenridge reported. The eight-bird slate was selected by the governor's commission from an original list of 20 popular Minnesota birds.

On the basis of the ballot results, the commission will recommend to the State Legislature, when it convenes next January, that the scarlet tanager be adopted as the official Minnesota bird.

Serving on the commission with Dr. Breckenridge, who is director of the Minnesota Museum of Natural History at the University of Minnesota, are: Harvy L. Gunderson of St. Paul, assistant scientist at the museum and past president of the Minnesota Ornithologists' union, vice chairman; Joel K. Bronoel of Duluth, also a past president of the union; Milton D. Thompson of Minneapolis, director of the science museum at the Minneapolis public library; Dean M. NICHOLSON HALL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --The University of Minnesota's general college will have a new home next fall in Nicholson hall, President J. L. Morrill announced Wednesday (May 24).

Since its founding in 1932, the general college has been housed in Westbrook hall. Postwar expansion of the college student body has resulted in an overflow into temporary wooden buildings moved to the campus.

President Morrill explained that the consolidation of all of the units of the general college on the first and second floors of Nicholson hall will be effected as soon as the new Ford hall is completed and can accommodate units of the college of science, literature and the arts now occupying those floors—political science, sociology and social work.

Ford hall, the University's new social science building, is being erected at Washington avenue and Church street, southeast.

Space in Westbrook hall vacated by the general college will be occupied by miscellaneous departments of the University badly in need of larger quarters, President Morrill stated.

The University Press and Nicholson bookstore, now located on the ground floor of Nicholson hall, and the general extension division offices in the east wing of the building will retain their present locations, the president added.

"On behalf of the faculty and student body of the general college," Dean Horace T. Morse of the college said Wednesday, "I wish to express our sincere appreciation for the opportunity to move into Nicholson hall. It is a pleasant building, and its arrangement will permit a more efficient functioning of our program. I am looking forward eagerly to the move, anticipating that it will improve the status as well as the physical situation of the college."

The original brick and stone structure of the building now known as Nicholson hall was erected in 1890 as the University's chemistry building. The west wing was added in 1923, the east wing in 1925 and the auditorium in 1947.

In 1914, when the present chemistry building was completed, the structure was remodelled into a men's union building and served that purpose until 1940 when Coffman Memorial union was occupied.

Known as "The Battleship" during World War II, it housed the United States Naval Training school for electrician's mates. After the war, the present tenants moved into the building.

The University's Board of Regents named the building Nicholson hall in 1945 honoring Edward Everett Nicholson, former dean of student affairs, who died June 28, 1949.

MINNESOTA 'U' PROGRAM JUNE 1 - 2
TO CELEBRATE NEW BOOK ON STARVATION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis - Biological and medical research based on work with human "guinea pigs" will be the theme of a two-day program at the University of Minnesota June 1 and 2.

Since 1941, the University's Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene, directed by Dr. Ancel Keys, has been conducting biological and medical studies on many men who have volunteered to act as subjects in scientific experiments and observations.

Attention will be focused on the results of one of these research projects during the two-day program in a celebration of the forthcoming publication by the University of Minnesota Press of "The Biology of Human Starvation", a two-volume work by Dr. Keys and his associates.

The book, a systematic and critical digest of the world's recorded knowledge of human starvation including evidence derived from the famous Minnesota starvation experiment conducted in the Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene from 1944 to 1946. Serving as human "guinea pigs" in this exhaustive experiment were 32 volunteer conscientious objectors, a number of whom will return to the University for the celebration of the book's publication.

Already being hailed as a great contribution from Minnesota to the world, "The Biology of Human Starvation" will be published sometime this summer. Sir Jack Drummond, Britain's principal scientific adviser to the Wartime Ministry of Food and a leader in the relief of the World War II famine in the western Netherlands, predicts about the book: "It will be a classic from the day it is published".

In compiling the 1,400-page study, Dr. Keys and his associates delved into the story of human starvation as far back as the beginnings of recorded history and examined the literature on the subject in 15 different languages. Some 125 persons were involved in the six-year project which included the two-year controlled starvation experiment in the physiological hygiene laboratory in the University's Memorial Stadium.

The two-day program will open June 1 with a scientific conference on the after effects of nutritional injury which will attract a large number of experts in the field of human nutrition from all over the United States.

At the close of the conference on the afternoon of June 2, a public reception will be held in the laboratory from 4 to 6 p.m. Visitors will be shown through the laboratory and will have an opportunity to examine the intricate equipment used in the various research projects.

Following the open house, a dinner will be held in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union at 6:15 p.m. Principal speaker at the dinner will be Dr. A. J. Carlson of the University of Chicago, dean of American physiologists, whose topic will be "Our Food and Our Future". Dr. Carlson pioneered research work in the field of hunger and appetite.

At the dinner, several of the former starvation experiment "guinea pigs" will be presented. Many of the human "guinea pigs" currently participating as subjects in long-range studies on heart disease will be present. University Vice President Malcolm M. Willey, who is one of the current human "guinea pigs", will preside.

Distinguished guests will include representatives of the U. S. Public Health service, the American Medical association, the Surgeon General of the Army, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the National Research council, and the Universities of Wisconsin, Illinois, Nebraska, Manitoba, Cincinnati and Amsterdam.

Dr. Russell M. Wilder of the Mayo Clinic points out that the studies on starvation have very wide significance because every hospital has many patients who, because of disease or injury, are literally starving. Many severe or prolonged diseases produce at least some degree of starvation.

The present research in the Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene is on the ageing of the heart and blood vessels. This program had its inception in observations on changes in the blood pressure and circulation induced by starvation.

The laboratory housed under the University Stadium is fully air-conditioned and elaborately equipped. During World War II, when the Laboratory was developing Army rations (including the K ration), the need for more space forced the move from Millard Hall to the Stadium. The laboratory is a division of the School of Public Health and is devoted to the study of the effects of the mode of life on the health and behavior of man.

The senior staff includes Drs. Austin Henschel, Josef Brozek, Henry Longstreet Taylor, Ernst Simonson, Carleton B. Chapman, and Joseph Anderson, in addition to the director, Dr. Keys.

U. OF M. TO CONFER
DEGREES ON 3,400

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --More than 3,400 candidates for University of Minnesota degrees will take part in commencement exercises Saturday, June 10, in Memorial Stadium on the University campus.

The commencement exercises, beginning at 8 p.m., will herald the University's Centennial celebration which will begin July 1 and continue for a year. The University was chartered in 1851.

Addressing the group will be President J. L. Morrill of the University.

From 7 to 7:30 p.m., while guests are assembling in the stadium, Edward S. Berryman, instructor in music, will play the University's Flemish bells.

The University Concert band, which will also play during the commencement exercises, will give a prelude concert from 7:30 to 8 p.m. Conducting the program of music by Delibes, Schubert and Strauss, will be Gerald Prescott, bandmaster.

The candidates for degrees, marching into the stadium at 8 p.m., will be followed by University faculty members and Regents, who will sit on the stage during the commencement program.

Giving the invocation will be the Rev. Alfred S. Wagner, assistant director of Newman Foundation on the campus and a member of the Minnesota Council of Religion.

(MORE)

Dr. Malcolm M. Willey, University vice president in charge of academic administration, will introduce the deans of the University's various colleges who will confer the degrees upon their students.

All members of the graduating class will march to the stage in columns of four to receive their diplomas.

Graduates for the degree of doctor of philosophy will be presented individually by Dr. Theodore C. Blegen, dean of the graduate school, to President Morrill, who will confer their degrees.

In case of rain, the commencement exercises will be held in Williams Arena instead of in the stadium.

A banquet for seniors and their guests will be held at 5:30 p.m. commencement day in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial union.

Baccalaureate services for those receiving degrees will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 4 in Northrop Memorial auditorium on the campus. The Rev. John Seville Higgins, rector of St. Martin's Episcopal church, Providence, R. I., will speak on "The Myopia of Modern Man".

'U' CHILD STUDY CENTER TO TEACH
YOUNGSTERS HOW TO IMPROVE READING

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis --Youngsters of all ages will learn to read better and faster at the University of Minnesota this summer.

The University's child study center will hold its third annual summer remedial reading course beginning June 19 for pupils from grade school through high school whose reading problems are beyond the training of the average teacher.

Dr. Harold A. Delp, director of the center, said that last year the average youngster attending the course advanced one year in his ability to read. One student, he said, gained almost five years during the five-week session and four others each gained more than two and one-half years.

The course, which was initiated in 1948 with one class of 22 students and last year was expanded to three classes with a total of 56 pupils, will be held during two five week terms--the first from June 19 to July 21 and the second from July 24 to August 25.

Classes will meet from 9 to 12 a.m. Monday through Friday.

During the first term, Dr. Delp said, the students will be divided into two groups, one for elementary students and the other for those attending junior and senior high schools. At least one class will be operated the second term and will be attended by those desiring to continue the training as well as by those who have not attended the first session.

Dr. Delp said that all of the work of the course would be adjusted to meet the needs of the individual student, with each student receiving approximately one hour daily of detailed individual instruction outside the class group.

(MORE)

He stressed that a complete diagnosis of each child's case must be made by the center as long before the opening of the course as possible. This is necessary, he said, to determine what specific difficulties are involved in each child's reading problems and to determine whether a child's inability to read well is actually a reading problem or stems from some other cause.

The youngsters attending last year's classes came from Canada, Wisconsin and North Dakota as well as from the Twin Cities and nearby communities and ranged in age from seven to 19 years. They were retarded in their reading ability from one-half year to six and one-half years.

One child, Dr. Delp said, came to the course one and one-half years behind his school grade in reading ability and, after the five weeks' course, had gained enough so that he was one year ahead of his class.

During the course, a high school girl wrote to her father that she had just finished reading a book. Her father wrote back to the center that, to his knowledge, it was the first book she had ever read of her own accord.

The progress is not always this obvious, however, Dr. Delp added. In some cases, he said, children attending the center do not appear to be going ahead as quickly as they actually are because, before new reading habits can be built up, the old ones must be broken.

Minneapolis --John Torrence Tate, research professor of physics at the University of Minnesota and former dean of the University college of science, literature and the arts, died Saturday, May 27. He had been on the University staff since 1916.

Coming to the University as an instructor, Dr. Tate received the rank of assistant professor in 1917, associate professor in 1918 and professor in 1920.

He was appointed dean of the college of science, literature and the arts in 1936. While on leave during World War II to do investigation in physics for the U. S. Office of Scientific Research and Development, Dr. Tate requested that, upon his return, he be relieved of his duties as dean and was named research professor of physics by the University board of regents.

In 1947, he was among four American scientists to be awarded the Presidential Medal of Merit, the nation's highest civilian award.

Dr. Tate was one of the founders in 1931 of the American Institute of Physics and served on its governing board and as editor of its publication, "Reviews of Modern Physics" and "Physical Review".

He was director of the Argonne laboratory, Atomic Energy Commission research unit in Illinois, and later served on the laboratory's council of representatives.

He was a past president of the American Physical Society and a member of Sigma Xi, Phi Beta Kappa and the National Academy of Science.

Born July 28, 1889, on a farm near Essex, Iowa, Dr. Tate moved to New York in 1900. He returned to the Midwest to take his undergraduate work at the University of Nebraska. He received a bachelor of science degree in 1911 and a master's degree in 1912 from the University of Nebraska, a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Berlin in 1914, and the degree of doctor of science in 1938 from the University of Nebraska.

Wilder, for many years head of the department of medicine at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester; Dr. Samuel Soskin, dean of the postgraduate school of Michael Reese hospital, Chicago; Dr. William J. Darby, professor of medicine and biochemistry at Vanderbilt medical school, Nashville; and Dr. Ancel Keys, director of the University of Minnesota's Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene.

Drs. Wilder, Darby and Keys are members of the 18-man food and nutrition board of the National Research council.

The Chicago Round Table discussion is a weekly sustaining feature of the National Broadcasting company. Next Sunday's broadcast, which will originate in the KSTP studio by special arrangement, will coincide with the University of Minnesota celebration of the forthcoming publication by the University Press of "The Biology of Human Starvation", a two-volume book by Dr. Keys and his associates.

The celebration of the book's publication includes the conference on the after-effects of nutritional injury being held Thursday and Friday (June 1-2), a public reception in the Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene in Memorial Stadium from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday and a dinner at 6:15 p.m. Friday in the main ballroom of Coffman Memorial Union.

Principal speaker at the dinner will be Dr. A. J. Carlson of the University of Chicago. His subject will be "Our Food and Our Future".

SPECIAL TO THE MINNESOTA LAKE TRIBUNE

"Although our schools today teach a larger proportion of the school-age boys and girls for a larger proportion of their lives than was the case a generation ago, the two other important educational agencies, the home and the church, have been declining rapidly in influence," Dr. Tracy F. Tyler, associate professor of education at the University of Minnesota, told the graduating class at Minnesota Lake high school Thursday evening (June 1).

Speaking on the topic, "Who Are Our Teachers?" Tyler noted that "young people today are learning too large a proportion of their attitudes and patterning too much of their conduct from a new and emerging group of teachers - the comics, the movies, the radio, and, more recently, television".

He viewed "with greatest alarm the effect television was having in homes now reached by the approximately 100 television stations now operating".

He pointed out that "a recent survey made in Washington, D. C., showed that children in television homes went to the movies only half as much as they had gone before they had a television receiver. Their magazine reading was down 18.9 per cent; book reading 33.7 per cent; newspaper reading 4.7 per cent; and radio listening 23 per cent in daytime and 93 per cent at night. Attendance at sports events had dropped from 30 per cent in the case of football to 53.7 per cent for wrestling and boxing".

"These new teachers - comics, movies, radio and television - are not necessarily bad in themselves. The danger always is that they will usurp the time which the child needs to devote to other things - outdoor play, reading, manual skills - which are necessary for his wholesome and well-rounded development. But their content often, even, today, leaves much to be desired. For example, a recent survey made in Los Angeles revealed that murders, hold-ups, kidnappings, thefts, arson, suicides, and blackmail were so common on the television stations there as to constitute a serious problem for children.

"All of us will agree, I am sure, that steps must be taken immediately to eliminate crime and filth from our mass communication agencies," Tyler said. "But the permanent cure can only be the development on the part of the entire present generation of discrimination in the selection of comics, movies, radio, and ~~television~~ television. In this important educational endeavor the parents and the school must cooperate. This essential training must begin at home before the youngster goes to school and must continue through his entire school career.

"When we have a generation of discriminating listeners, readers, and viewers, undesirable materials will disappear because there will be no market for them. Then these other teachers - the comics, the movies, the radio, and television - which have so much potentially to offer, will become the willing servants of our school teachers in today's complex job of advancing our civilization through education," Tyler concluded.
