200 TO ATTEND
12TH MEDICAL SCIENCES DAY AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Dr. Victor Johnson, director of the University of Minnesota's Mayo Graduate School of Medicine, Rochester, will speak on "Expanding Vistas of Medical Education" as a highlight of the 12th annual observance of Medical Sciences day Saturday (March 5) at the University.

More than 200 prospective medical students have registered to attend the day's program and tours of medical facilities at the University, according to Dr. Raymond N. Bieter, director of the College of Medical Sciences' special educational services.

The program, presented annually by the Medical Student Council to acquaint the visiting students with the disciplines in medicine and the medical-biological sciences, will include discussions of admission requirements and policies, study, loan and scholarship opportunities and practice, and research and teaching in medicine.

The morning program, commencing at 9 a.m., will be held in Mayo Memorial auditorium. Following a noontime sandwich lunch for the visiting students and faculty in the Mayo foyer, members of the student council will act as tour guides for afternoon trips through the University Hospitals and the Medical Center.

"Prose Styles: Five Primary Types" by Huntington Brown is the first volume of a new series to be published by the University of Minnesota Press.

The series is called "Minnesota Monographs in the Humanities." Volume I will be available in bookstores March 12. The author, Professor Brown, retired from the University's English department in June, 1965.

In the book, Brown identifies five broad types of written or spoken discourse that have been conspicuous in the western world from ancient times. He names these as the deliberative, the expository, the tumbling, the prophetic and the indenture, and he gives examples of each that range from the very old to the modern, from such works as the Sermon on the Mount, "Beowulf," and yesterday's sports page. The work is intended not just for writers, but for anyone who reads, particularly students and teachers of literature.

The open-ended series is being edited by Gerhard H. Weiss, associate professor of German. It grew out of a long-felt need/for a place to publish monographs in the general area of the humanities. (A monograph is a treatise on a single subject which generally runs between article length and book length.)

The idea for a monograph series was originated during discussions within the Advisory Council in the Arts and Letters. Funds for publishing the first few books were made available by the Graduate School Research Center. It is hoped that later the books will become self-supporting.

Manuscripts --- which need not be in English --- are sought from any fulltime faculty member of the University. If a manuscript is accepted, the author receives $150, with no royalties. Manuscripts are read by an editorial board which consists of Sarah Youngblood, associate professor of English; History Professor Clarke Chambers; Professor Robert Sonkowsky, chairman of classics; Russell G. Hamilton, assistant professor of Romance languages, and Marion J. Nelson, associate professor in Scandinavian.

Minneapolis---Safety will be the watchword this Saturday (March 5) during a special safety program to be conducted by the School of Chemistry of the University of Minnesota on the Minneapolis campus. The program will be held in Room 225 of the Chemistry building by representatives of the Minneapolis Fire Department, the Minnesota State Health Department, and the University Health Service.

The purpose of the program is to demonstrate to faculty and students in the School of Chemistry the proper use of special equipment recently donated to the School.

The program will get under way at 9 a.m. with a lecture on the use of self-contained breathing masks, fire reflective suits and fire extinguishers by Captain Melvin Semler of the Minneapolis Fire Department. Following the lecture, practice sessions in a smoke-filled room will demonstrate problems faced by rescuers in finding persons lost in such situations.

Mrs. Martha Lundgaard, consultant in anesthesiology for the Minnesota State Department of Health, will present a two-hour training program in mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and closed chest heart massage, starting at 1 p.m.

Norman D. Steere, safety engineer and instructor in the University's Division of Environmental Health and Safety, is directing the program for the School of Chemistry.

The equipment to be used in the program was purchased by a special $2,500 grant given to the School of Chemistry by Clarence Moyle, research scientist with the Dow Chemical Company.

The equipment includes three self-contained breathing masks, two fire reflective suits, a special exhaust device for emergency ventilation, and two large fire extinguishers.

'U' FILM TO SHOW
BIRD MIGRATION
RESEARCH, QUESTIONS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Research into bird migration will be the subject of a color film to be shown at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Minnesota Museum of Natural History, narrated by Professor W. J. Breckenridge, museum director. The program will be free and open to the public.

The movie, made by Breckenridge, will illustrate "a lot of the rather remarkable abilities birds have in performing their migrations and some of the research being done on this, aimed at trying to find out more exactly what the birds are doing and how they do it," Breckenridge said.

He will tell how such techniques as bird banding and radio and radar tracking have contributed to the field of knowledge, and also will describe how rapid strides in technology may affect the field in the future. There is the possibility, for instance, of tracking an individual bird by satellite, with instruments taking a reading on the bird's position every time the satellite circles the globe.

Such a procedure might give some answers to a number of questions which puzzle the researchers now. For example, a certain type of bird is known to summer in Nova Scotia and in autumn, to fly to South America. However, it is not a bird that can land on water, and it is not known to alight anywhere in between its two habitats. The researchers would like to know if it actually flies the entire distance without pausing.

Minneapolis---The city of Sardis, capital of fabled King Croesus---antiquity's richest man---will be the subject of this year's Guy Stanton Ford Lectures at the University of Minnesota.

The annual lecture series honoring Ford, the University's sixth president, will be presented Thursday and Friday, March 28 and 29, in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium and will be open free to the public. The series is sponsored annually by the Arts and Letters Council of the University's Graduate School Research Center and by the department of concerts and lectures.

This year's Ford lecturer will be George M.A. Hanfmann, professor of fine arts at Harvard university and curator of classical art at Harvard's Fogg Art Museum. He also is the field director of a joint Harvard-Cornell expedition which has been working on the excavation of the site of Sardis for several years. His two talks will be titled "Excavating the City of Croesus" and "The Ancient Synagogue of Sardis."

The Guy Stanton Ford Lectures are an outgrowth of the wish of a group of friends and associates of President Ford to express in permanent form their admiration for him and their appreciation of his services to the University. The endowment for funding the lectureship was started immediately following the former president's retirement in 1941, and sufficient funds were collected to present the first lecture in 1957. In recognition of the wide interests of President Ford, the lecturers have been selected to represent varied fields of knowledge and achievement.

Distinguished scholars who have given past Ford Lectures and their fields of interest include: Percival Spear, University of California, history, 1958; Herbert C. Pritchett, University of Chicago, political science, 1959; Kingsley Davis, University of California, sociology, 1960; Victor Lange, Princeton University, humanities and Germanic criticism, and Harold Jantz, Johns Hopkins University, German and American culture, 1961-62; Kenneth Boulding, University of Michigan, economics, 1963; Siegfried Giedion, Harvard University, architecture, and Fritz Fischer, from Germany, history, 1964; and Bernard Weinberg, University of Chicago, Romance language, 1965.

Earning Degree in Sociology---
ST. PAUL MOTHER OF 2 TAKES
'U' CORRESPONDENCE COURSE NO. 150,000

NEWS SERVICE-220 MORRILL HALL

MARCH 4, 1966

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mrs. Connie Price of 813 Dayton ave., St. Paul, is many things: a psychometrist at Lino Lakes Rehabilitation Center, mother of two children, active civil rights worker, part-time student at the University of Minnesota.

She also happens to be the 150,000th person to register for a University correspondence course.

She earned this distinction when she signed up, in February, for her fourth correspondence course: Sociology 141: The Family, taught by Professor Arnold Rose.

She also has taken many evening classes through the General Extension Division and a few daytime classes; enough, all together, to be short just five credits toward a bachelor of arts degree. She hopes to receive the degree this June, with a major in sociology. She currently is also taking a class on Wednesday nights, "Social Organization," from Harvey A. Farberman, teaching associate.

Mrs. Price is one of the many women who interrupt their college work to get married, then later decide to go back to school for their degree. In her case, she had attended the University for about a year and a half back in the late 40's.

"I always wanted to finish," she said, so in 1961, having raised two children to the ages of 6 and 8, she joined a cousin in taking a beginning sociology course at night, through the General Extension Division. She was encouraged by getting an A, so began taking daytime classes. In March 1962 she joined the Minnesota Plan for Women's Continuing Education, which gives advice and assistance to women who have postponed or interrupted their college education.

Mrs. Price says she had long been active in community activities involving either children or civil rights work. She had worked at a cooperative nursery school in St. Paul, had been a Brownie leader and a Cub Scout den mother, had served on Scout committees, was in the Urban League Guild and the NAACP. College work forced her to cut down on these activities.

Then in September, 1963, she took a full-time job at the Lino Lakes diagnostic center for disturbed and delinquent children. After two months as a cottage counselor, she was asked to learn psychometry: group educational and psychological testing. She has been at it ever since and has enjoyed it, somewhat to her own surprise, "because I had never worked with teenage youngsters before, just the younger children."

The full-time job further cut down on time available for outside interests, and two illnesses in 1965---hers and her son's---also caused her to revise her timetable for getting a degree. Her son, now 11 years old, has rheumatic fever, and after "pushing myself too hard all summer, taking care of him and going to class and working," Mrs. Price was hospitalized all of September, 1965, with asthma and emphysema.

She says she now feels fine, but had to give up all outside activities---except that recently she did get involved in forming an ad hoc committee to try to assist people in Alabama. "Around Tuskegee there are people starving and living in a tent city," she says, adding, "things really haven't changed too much in the South."

In the past, she was active on the NAACP governing board and was chairman of the Freedom Fund for a year. She took part in the historic civil rights march on Washington, D. C., in August of 1963. A year earlier she had made her first visit to the South to attend an NAACP convention in Atlanta, Ga., and, as a Negro, found it "quite an experience."

She adds that she longed to make the 1965 march from Selma to Montgomery, Ala., but her family commitments prevented her. And she has come to feel that there are many ways she can work to "change things right here at home." When she has the time and does not hold a civil service job, she would like to become more active in local politics. Her daughter is now 13; Mrs. Price has been divorced for 3 years.

In the correspondence study department, Mrs. Price represents not 150,000 separate students to register for courses, but rather 150,000 registrations---with some of these registrations, obviously, representing the same individual taking more than one course. Perhaps significant is the fact that the department was formally organized in 1913 and had its 100,000th registration as recently as 1958.

The department offers an excellent way to start or continue a college education for persons who live too far away to commute to the campus or whose schedules do not permit them to attend regular daytime or evening classes. It offers a great variety of courses in many different fields, for credit toward a degree or non-credit, at beginning or more advanced levels, and allows the student to work at his own speed and convenience.

PAINTINGS DEPICTING AIR FORCE IN ACTION
TO BE SHOWN AT 'U'

The bleak and barren waste of a U. S. Air Force base in Greenland, emergency repairs during an air battle in Japan and the view of Texas from a supersonic trainer---these are some of the sights depicted in an exhibition of 43 oils, "Air Force on Canvas," to be shown at the University of Minnesota Tuesday (March 8) through March 18.

The paintings are from the USAF Documentary Art Program and are being brought here by the Orientation Group, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, according to Lieutenant Colonel James Suttie, commanding officer of the University's AFROTC unit, co-sponsors, with Coffman Union Board of Governors, of the free, public exhibition.

The exhibit will be held in Coffman Memorial Union game room and will be open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. each day. Members of the University's Arnold Air Society and the Angel Flight group will act as attendants during the show and will answer questions about the pictures, Col. Suttie said.

The works in this contemporary display are part of the approximately 2,500 paintings in the U. S. Air Force's collection which was begun in World War I and now includes valuable historical works recording the exploits of aviators during World War II and afterward, up to the present.

The works to be shown here are some of those painted and donated to the Air Force by artists of the Society of Illustrators of New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco. To record on canvas the contemporary life of the U. S. Air Force, they were flown to all parts of the world.

Some of the works from the Air Force's collection hang regularly in the White House, the Pentagon, at the Air Force academy in Colorado and in the Air Force museum at Wright-Patterson AFB.

Minneapolis----William E. Wright, University of Minnesota associate professor and a specialist in the history of Central Europe, has been named to serve as acting chairman of the University's Immigrant Archives Committee. He succeeds Professor Timothy L. Smith, who has served as chairman during the last three years.

Professor Smith will go to Europe and, during April and May, will work in the archives of the World Council of Churches, at Geneva, Switzerland, under a grant from the American Philosophical Society. He will study the relationship of the council to congregations, clergymen and ecclesiastical officials of Eastern Orthodox and Byzantine Rite Roman Catholic churches in Central and Eastern Europe.

He will then travel in Yugoslavia, Romania and Hungary under grants from the University of Minnesota's International Studies Program and the U.S. Department of State, searching for materials on the religious background of Eastern European migration to the United States. He will return to the United States late in July.

During the fall of 1965, major gifts were received by the Immigrant Archives from a wide range of individual scholars and ethnic groups. Joseph Pavlicek, of St. Paul, Minn., contributed numerous books, pamphlets and periodicals published in the United States, to the Czech collection.

Miroslav Krek, of Milwaukee, Wis., provided the Slovene section with incomplete sets of 30 different periodicals published in the Old World and the New, as well as numerous pamphlets. Professor Mirko Geratic of Chicago, Ill., and Father Bertrand Kotnik of St. Mary's Seminary, Lemont, Ill., added numerous items to their earlier contributions.

The Lithuanian section received extensive gifts. The Rt. Rev. Francis M. Juras of Lawrence, Mass., sent several boxes of books, pamphlets and music. Vitalis Zukauskas, of Brooklyn, N.Y., provided incomplete sets of 18 Lithuanian newspapers, and numerous books and pamphlets. Another extensive collection of books, pamphlets, newspapers and periodicals came from A. Vadopalas, of Chicago, Ill.

Recently, also, Professors Smith and Theofanis G. Stavrou launched an extensive effort to secure materials pertaining to the history of Eastern Orthodox and Byzantine Rite Roman Catholic churches in America.

In response to their appeals, Ernest Villas, director of the department of the laity of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America, presented numerous issues of Greek-American periodicals, pamphlets, books and programs of Greek Orthodox churches in America. Miss Mary Johns, of Boston, Mass., placed in the library a wide-ranging collection of pamphlets, books and periodicals pertaining to Eastern Orthodox churches in the United States. These represented the parts of the library of the late Archbishop Fan S. Noli which did not pertain to the history of his own communion in America, the Albanian Orthodox Church.

These collections, like the recently acquired extensive libraries of Ukrainian materials, are undergoing initial organization so as to be ready for scholarly use in the near future.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The sixth Choral Arts Institute, musical offering of the University of Minnesota Summer Session, will be presented July 1-10 this year, directed by two outstanding musicians, according to Willard L. Thompson, dean of the Summer Session.

The heart of the 1966 institute will be the intensive study and analysis of the choral works of Mozart. The workshop will be climaxed by a concert on Sunday, July 10 which will feature not only workshop participants but also the Summer Session chorus, for a total of 200 voices, and the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Participants in previous years have come principally from the midwest, including Iowa, the Dakotas, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Nebraska, Kansas and Indiana; but also have come from as far away as California, Florida, New York, Texas, Wyoming, Idaho, Mississippi, Massachusetts, and the Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Hugh Ross, conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York City and founder of Tanglewood Music Festival's choral department, and Julius Herford, Life Professor at Indiana University and distinguished musicologist, will conduct the workshop, joined by faculty members of the University music department.

According to Professor Roy M. Schuessler, acting chairman of the music department Herford will direct the intensive theoretical investigation of Mozart, including his "Mass in C Minor" and "Requiem Mass" and shorter works such as the "Mass in F." Herford, who has taught such notables as Robert Shaw, has taken part in the Choral Arts Institute in several previous years. His lectures will be given in Nolte Center for Continuing Education.

Ross will do the actual conducting of the orchestra and chorus in their concert performance, Schuessler said, in addition to some lecturing. The July 10 concert will feature Mozart's "Mass in C Minor" and Ralph Vaughan-Williams' "Tudor Portraits."

Regular Summer Session credit is now available for qualified participants in the institute, which also may be taken for non-credit. The fee in either case remains the same as in previous years, $60. Last year 30 persons were enrolled.

Anyone interested in attending may write to Choral Arts Institute, Dean of Summer Session, 6644 Johnston Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

Minneapolis---Thirteen University of Minnesota seniors have been awarded Woodrow Wilson National Foundation fellowships for first-year graduate study toward careers in college teaching, according to an announcement today (Thursday, March 10) from the foundation.

The fellowships are awarded to graduating seniors in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Panama and the Canal Zone to finance a year's tuition, fees and living allowances. The new recipients come from 380 colleges and universities and represent 24 fields of study.

Woodrow Wilson fellows receive one academic year of graduate education, a living stipend of $2,000 and allowances for their dependent children. The graduate school they choose to attend receives an additional grant of $2,000 from the foundation.

Twelve of the University of Minnesota students receiving the fellowships are enrolled on the Minneapolis campus, while one is at the University of Minnesota, Morris.

They are (Minneapolis campus): Stephen J. Adams, 4745 16th ave. S., Minneapolis, English; Dianne L. Alstad, White Bear Lake, French literature; Robert C. Amundson, 3416 Girard ave. S., Minneapolis, linguistics; Martha E. Andresen, 4332 Mackey ave., Minneapolis, English; James W. Bjorkman, Roseau, political science; James L. Connor, 700 10th ave. S.E., Minneapolis, psychology; Richard R. Erickson, 3629 24th ave. S., Minneapolis, astronomy; Reginald C. Haines, 6136 11th ave. S., Richfield, mathematics; Larry G. Johnson, 4616 W. 56th st., Edina, German; Stephen A. Kaufman, 4330 Minnetonka boulevard, St. Louis Park, Ancient Near East languages and literature; Paul F. McCarthy, 1 Wentworth ct. East, Minneapolis, Japanese studies; and Robert L. Wheeler, 4029 Ewing ave. S., Minneapolis, mathematics. At the University of Minnesota, Morris: Roger A. Drewicke, Graceville, English.

The Woodrow Wilson Foundation fellowships were established nine years ago by a Ford Foundation grant of $24,500,000 to launch students in college teaching careers. Students who accept the fellowships "assume a moral obligation to complete at least one year of graduate studies and to give serious thought to a career in college teaching," according to Sir Hugh Taylor, foundation president.

Fellowship winners who have selected the University of Minnesota for their year of graduate work will not be known until after the 1966 fall quarter registration is completed, according to the University's Graduate School office.

CIC ANNUAL REPORT OUTLINES ATTACK ON EDUCATION PROBLEMS

MARCH 8, 1966

Minneapolis---A broad attack on specialized problems in higher education is outlined in the 1964-65 annual report of the Committee on Institutional Cooperation (CIC), a voluntary association of midwestern universities which includes the University of Minnesota.

The report states that, after seven years of successful operation, the CIC stands today as "one of education's multilateral forces for the creative confrontation of change" in modern society.

More than 40 joint projects are under way, in every major academic area, the report says. In addition, the 11 universities are cooperatively conducting programs in course content improvement, honors, graduate student exchange, and the relationship of university resources to economic growth.

The report indicates that such cooperative programs frequently grow out of informal meetings of small groups of faculty members; for this reason, the CIC has pioneered the use of the seed grant---a small sum of money to enable a group to get together and exchange views.

Stanley J. Wenberg, University vice president for educational relationships and development and the University's representative to the CIC, says that "the seed grants are a starter mechanism, relatively new to the educational scene. They often generate exceptionally effective ideas because these ideas are arrived at by the cooperative thinking of people from several institutions."

The report notes that the CIC has proved of interest to both educators and government officials, since it serves as an intermediary agency in shaping strong cooperative proposals before these are submitted to funding agencies.

Among its most productive projects is the CIC Traveling Scholar program, whereby graduate students can earn credit at their own school while studying on the campus of another CIC institution which offers unique facilities such as a library collection, outstanding laboratory or noted professor. In 1964-65, the report states enrollment in the Traveling Scholar program reached 108, or double the previous year's number.

The CIC was established in 1958 as a means of strengthening higher education through the pooling of resources and the sharing of expensive facilities among the members, which are the universities of Chicago, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State, Purdue and Wisconsin.

RUSSIA FROM 1894 TO 1914 WILL BE TOPIC OF '66 SPRING LECTURE SERIES

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
MARCH 9, 1966

(FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, MARCH 13)

Was a corrupt czarist regime in its final throes, so that following the 1917 revolution the Communists would have to start from scratch? Or was the foundation being laid for constructive change and industrialization, so that Russia might have evolved satisfactorily into a modern society on the western model had it not been for World War I?

These major questions, coupled with the firm belief on the part of some Russian scholars that the latter is the case, provides the format for a spring lecture series to be held at the University of Minnesota.

The series will be titled "Russia's Golden Age: 1894-1914?" and will run every Tuesday night from March 29 through May 17, featuring eight leading authorities on Russian history, economics and culture from all over the United States. It will be sponsored by the General Extension Division's World Affairs Center, headed by Professor William C. Rogers.

Moderator will be Theofanis G. Stavrou, associate professor at the University who teaches Russian and Near Eastern history and is the author of a book, "Russian Interests in Palestine, 1882-1914." Stavrou did research at the University of Leningrad during 1963-64 as a cultural exchange participant, and will return there this summer.

The lectures will be given from 8 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays in Mayo Memorial auditorium, with a question-and-answer period following each talk. Some of the speakers differ with one another in their interpretations of certain issues, which "will add to the usefulness of the series," Stavrou said.

"We chose this period for study," Stavrou said, "because it is a crucial one in Russia's history. One must understand these two decades in order to understand both the revolution of 1917 and the evolution of the Soviet regime."

This was not a dormant period, Stavrou emphasized. For one thing, Russia was experiencing "the first pangs of industrialization." Economic expansion was under way in both industry and agriculture.

In the second place, there was considerable political ferment. "Conservative and radical ideas were simultaneously reaching a crescendo, and in 1905, Russia experienced its first major revolution in modern times, a sort of dress rehearsal for 1917."

Third, Stavrou mentioned attempts to introduce constitutional, or representational, government. And fourth, the period was one of "cultural flowering in all the arts---literature, painting, drama, ballet," he said.

"Thus it appears that even with all their backwardness and their problems, Russians in this period had made serious leaps forward," Stavrou said. "Russia was still an underdeveloped country, but one which made some gains during the reign of Nicholas the Second."

The speakers, Stavrou said, all have "contributed greatly to the growth of Russian studies in this country." Lecture titles and speakers will be as follows:

March 29: "Dilemmas of Imperial Russia" by Arthur Mendel, history professor at the University of Michigan and the author of a book well known to Russian scholars, "Dilemmas of Progress in Czarist Russia."

April 5: "Conservative Thought in Russia 1894-1914" by Robert F. Byrnes, history professor at Indiana University. Byrnes, a specialist in 19th-century Russian conservative thought, developed and has directed the Russian and East European Institute at Indiana University, and has played a key role in the cultural exchange program between the United States and the U.S.S.R.

April 12: "Radicalism in Russia 1894-1914" by Donald W. Treadgold, history professor who has long been associated with the Russian and Far Eastern Institute of the University of Washington, Seattle. Treadgold "has done significant scholarly work on the period under consideration," Stavrou said. His best-known book is "Lenin and His Rivals."

April 19: "Witte and the Problem of Industrialization in Russia" by Theodore H. Von Laue, history professor at Washington University, St. Louis. "Von Laue is a recognized authority on Sergei Witte," said Stavrou, "who as Russian finance minister (1892-1903) was the man chiefly responsible for the industrialization of Russia at the turn of the century."

April 26: "Literature and the Arts" (changed from the brochure), with speaker to be announced.

May 3: "Russian Constitutional Developments" by Thomas Riha, University of Chicago history professor, who is "an authority on Paul Miliukov, the leader of the Constitutional Democratic Party (Cadets) in Russia."

May 10: "Science in Russia, 1894-1914" (changed from the brochure), by Alexander Vucinich, sociology professor at the University of Illinois and author of numerous books, among them "The Soviet Academy of Sciences" and "Science in Russian Culture: A History to 1860."

May 17: "The Imperatives of Russian Foreign Policy" by Roderick E. McGrew, University of Missouri history professor, the author of several articles and a monograph on Russian history and also a University of Minnesota alumnus who received his doctor of philosophy degree here in 1955.

For the general public, the series of eight lectures will cost $12.50; for University staff and students, $7.50. Tickets are available in person or by mail from Room 150 Nicholson Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455. In addition, tickets for single lectures will be sold after 8 p.m. each lecture night for $2.50.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Six liberal arts seminars for women will be offered during the 1966-67 academic year by the University of Minnesota's General Extension Division, as part of the Minnesota Plan for Women's Continuing Education.

These courses are planned to fit the schedules of women who have responsibilities which make it difficult for them to go to the campus several times a week, according to Mrs. Louise Roff, seminar program coordinator. In addition, the seminars serve for many women as a first step back to college after several years away from studying.

Five of the seminars will meet every other week from late September until June, generally from 9:30 a.m. to noon. In an innovation, the sixth course (on art and perception) will be scheduled in more concentrated periods with several all-day sessions and possibly no campus meetings during the winter months, so that women who live a great distance from the University will be able to participate more easily.

Three of the courses will carry nine credits apiece, if the course is taken all three quarters. All of them may also be taken for no credit. Taught by many University faculty members, all the seminars will emphasize methods of research or critical analysis and the unifying concepts that underlie fundamental problems.

Applications are now being received, with a first deadline of Tuesday (March 15). (Those who apply later will be placed on a waiting list.) Seminar members are chosen by Minnesota Plan counselors, with a limit of about 20 women per course. The only requirement is the ability to do college-level work.

Tuition for the year is $99, and every member is expected to do all reading and write all papers. Those who wish credit for the course will be assigned extra work.

Seminar topics will be as follows:

"New Worlds of Knowledge": a nine-credit humanities course to be given on alternate Wednesdays. This covers a wide range of topics from the physical and biological sciences through the social sciences to art, music and literature, with primary emphasis on the last 15 to 20 years in each field.

(MORE)

"The Arts of Reading": a nine-credit humanities course scheduled for alternate Thursdays. In the first part of the course, expository writings of different types will be analyzed and discussed with the aim of developing critical understanding. In the second half, imaginative literature including novels, short stories, poetry and plays will be studied.

"Culture and Society": a nine-credit social science course, set for alternate Tuesdays. A number of ancient and modern societies will be studied to increase understanding of the terms "culture" and "society" and to give better perspective on current problems. Faculty members will come from the departments of anthropology, classics, geography, history, political science and sociology.

"The Arts and Problems of Perception": a non-credit course to meet on Thursdays but with a flexible schedule, which will be determined only after applicants are consulted on their preferences. Examples of great works of art will be used to help sharpen the members' perception, with emphasis placed on the links between one's sense of vision and one's ideas and emotions, and on the ways in which cultural views as well as personal ones are reflected in art. The course, which is taught mainly by members of the art department, uses examples in photography and architecture as well as painting and sculpture.

"Ideas in America": scheduled for alternate Thursdays; not yet an accredited course but may become so. Basic ideas which have conditioned Americans' political thinking, and the art and literature which have influenced how they see and interpret social experience will be studied in a historical context. Old issues and controversies will be discussed in the light of their continuing effect. Faculty members come mainly from the departments of English, history and political science.

The sixth seminar has not been offered before and is still in the planning stage. It will be open only to previous seminar members, and will deal with some of the social implications of modern developments in science and technology, emphasizing the responsibility of the citizen for understanding these implications in such matters as air and water pollution, space exploration, etc. It is tentatively scheduled for Tuesdays.

Further information is available from Mrs. Louise Roff, at 309 Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455; telephone 373-5166.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minnesota can be proud of its robust business climate, according to a trio of reports being issued at no cost by the University of Minnesota Graduate School of Business Administration. Although these reports are only 7 to 8 pages long, they contain an extraordinary amount of information on wholesaling, retailing, and selected services, respectively.

Written by two professors of marketing, the reports analyze sales and employment figures for the three types of businesses; they show county-by-county growth trends; and they compare Minnesota's performance with that of neighboring states and of the nation as a whole during the period between 1958 and 1963.

Authors are University Professor Robert J. Holloway and Professor Marcus Alexis of the University of Rochester (N.Y.) who taught at the University for one year recently.

Commenting on these studies, the authors observe that wholesaling is one of Minnesota's growth industries. The state's unusually large and growing share of the wholesale markets in the five-state area and in the rest of the nation indicates vigor and initiative on the part of its wholesalers.

They point out that the structure of the retail trades has undergone drastic changes in recent years and that Minnesota's retailers have shown adaptability in adjusting their marketing techniques to meet changes in economic conditions, shifts in population, changes in consumer demands, and improvements in transportation and technology.

Selected services include many things that people do not do for themselves. Holloway and Alexis explain that services for consumers are represented by such things as barber shops, mortuaries, auto repair shops and hotels. Examples of services to businessmen are advertising agencies, management consultants and independent research laboratories. As personal income in Minnesota has continued to rise, they conclude, the percentage of personal income spent on selected services also has risen, and the percentage spent on necessities such as food has decreased.

These three reports may be obtained free upon request from the Division of Research, Graduate School of Business Administration, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

Minneapolis---Twenty-one faculty members at the University of Minnesota will retire in June with a total of 679 years of service to the University.

The combined length of service of five of these faculty members---each with more than 40 years---totals 223 years. University retirement is optional at age 65; mandatory at 68.

Senior among those retiring, with 48 years, is Professor Charles V. Netz, associate dean of pharmacy, who joined the University staff in 1918.

Next in the top five in longevity, with 46 years, is Elizabeth Nissen, associate professor of Romance languages. A close third with 45 years at the University is Professor Leah M. Lewis who teaches interior design in the evening classes of the General Extension Division.

Numbers Four and Five on the forty-year-plus list are Lloyd J. Quaid, assistant professor, mechanical engineering, 43 years, and Dentistry Professor Harold C. Wittich, 41 years.

Those retiring with more than 30 years at the University include: Dr. H. L. Mason, professor of physiological chemistry, Mayo Graduate School of Medicine, Rochester, 38 years; Ledru O. Guthrie, associate professor, English, 37 years; Troy M. Currence, professor, horticultural science, 36 years; Dr. A. H. Bulbulian, associate professor, medical education, Mayo, 35 years; Dr. G. J. Thompson, professor of urology, Mayo, 34 years; Dr. E. H. Rynearson, professor of medicine, Mayo, and Mykola H. Haydak, professor of entomology, both 33 years; and Mitchell V. Charnley, professor of journalism, 32 years.

Twenty-year veterans at the University who will retire include: Willard J. Hadley, professor of pharmacy, 28 years; Dr. Gerald T. Evans, professor of laboratory medicine, and Dr. E. L. Foss, instructor, plastic surgery, Mayo, both with 27 years; Dr. Ernst Simonson, professor in the School of Public Health, 22 years; and Wesley N. Herr, associate professor of chemistry, 20 years.

Dr. Victor Johnson, professor of physiology and director of the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine since he joined the University faculty, and Dorothy D. Smith, associate professor of education and psychology at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, both have served 19 years.

Dr. Robert A. Merrill, associate professor of veterinary medicine, with 16 years as a faculty member, is the "anchor man" of the retiring class of 1966.

In addition to faculty, approximately 52 civil service staff members of the University representing 799 years of employment also will retire in June. All faculty and staff retirees have been invited to a retirement party to be held May 26 in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

FILMS SET SUNDAY ON ANCIENT GREECE,
EGYPT; CAVE ART

Two color films on the ancient Mediterranean region will be shown at 3 p.m. Sunday (March 13) at the Minnesota Museum of Natural History, University of Minnesota. The program will be free and open to the public.

The movies will be "Journey Into the Past," dealing with the geography, history and archeology of Egypt, Greece and Rome, with mention of the Phoenicians, the Minoans, and other ancient peoples; and "Prehistoric Images," on the Paleolithic cave paintings found in France and Spain.

A member of the museum staff will give a short introductory talk. (The films will substitute for the regularly scheduled program which was to have dealt with the late Bronze Age in Greece, by Prof. William McDonald.)

The following week's free Sunday program will be "Sand Country Wildlife" by W. J. Breckenridge, museum director.

GEMINI-8 ASTRONAUT
WILL TAKE PICTURES
FOR PROF. NEY OF 'U'

(FOR RELEASE MARCH 15 or the launch date of Gemini-8 if launch is postponed)

Minneapolis---The Gemini-8 spacecraft launched today from Cape Kennedy carries with it equipment and plans for two University of Minnesota scientific experiments. The experiments are to be conducted on early orbits, possibly the first and second.

The experiments will be conducted by Astronaut David R. Scott, who will take pictures for Edward P. Ney, University of Minnesota physics professor, in continued studies on sky phenomena.

Astronaut Gordon Cooper took a series of sky photos for Professor Ney on the one-man Mercury flight in May of 1963, and again last August on Gemini-5. He used an automatic camera designed by William F. Huch, physics research associate. The camera carried in today's Gemini-8 spacecraft also was designed by Huch.

The photographs taken today or tomorrow by Astronaut Scott will be a continuation of those earlier experiments.

The two experiments conducted by Scott and Command Pilot Neil Armstrong will be of the sky phenomenon called airglow, a dim and somewhat mysterious light band above the earth's horizon. This faint nighttime glow in the sky is apparently caused by the upper atmosphere release of energy absorbed from the sun.

One of the astronauts' experiments is to take pictures which will establish the geographical extent of the airglow. Astronaut Scott will begin taking pictures with the special camera at sunset. He will vary the schedule of exposures during the night, but the exposures will all be 15 seconds in length. Approximately two-thirds of the film will be used in this experiment.

While Scott is taking pictures, Command Pilot Armstrong's job is to keep the spacecraft carefully oriented with respect to the earth, and pointed at the airglow.

The second experiment will be a continuation of the first. It is an attempt to discover why the astronauts in their previous flights have not been able to see the stars during daytime. There is no known reason why they shouldn't, and calculations indicate that airglow couldn't be bright enough to obscure vision of the stars. The second set of pictures will try to photograph this extra illumination in the daytime sky.

The astronauts will take these pictures on the edge of day and night in the southern hemisphere. They will take pictures while they are on the dark side of the earth (to eliminate sunlight glare on the spacecraft window). The subject will be the southern cross starfield (one bright star in this field is Rigil Kentaurus) on the daylight side of the earth.

DEAN HORACE MORSE WILL BE COMMENCEMENT
SPEAKER MAR. 19 AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Professor Horace T. Morse, dean of the General College at the University of Minnesota, will be commencement speaker at the University when approximately 829 students are graduated in Northrop Memorial auditorium Saturday, March 19.

He will speak on "The Returns on the Investment."

Commencement exercises will begin at 8:30 p.m. and will include the awarding of 577 undergraduate degrees, 188 master's and 64 doctorate degrees. A reception for the graduates, their families and friends following the ceremonies will be held in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

Dean Morse, who received his bachelor, master and doctorate degrees from the University, joined the faculty in 1929 as a teaching assistant in history. In 1939 he was named assistant to the dean of the University's Graduate School and assistant professor of education; in 1940, assistant director of General College, and, in 1945, professor and director of the college. In 1946 he was named dean.

He is a member of the executive board of Viking Council, Boy Scouts of America, the American Historical Association, the American Association of University Professors, the National and the Minnesota Education Associations, the National Collegiate Players and the Minnesota Historical Society.

MAC PHAIL COLLEGE AND SCHOOL OF MUSIC IS GIVEN TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The MacPhail College and School of Music today (Friday, March 11) was entrusted to the University of Minnesota Board of Regents as a gift from the MacPhail Board of Trustees.

Included in the gift was the college, its school of music and all its properties, located at 1128 LaSalle ave. and 52 S. Twelfth st., Minneapolis. The gift will become effective July 1, 1966.

Spokesmen for the University and MacPhail emphasized that the present program of private music instruction at the MacPhail School will be continued at the present location, with the same teachers.

On accepting the gift, the Regents passed a memorandum enumerating the University's plans for making use of the gift. These include:

- (1) The University will incorporate the functions of the MacPhail College of Music within its department of music, and the functions of the MacPhail School of Music within the General Extension Division.
- (2) Students now enrolled in the MacPhail College will be given the opportunity to transfer to a degree program at the University.
- (3) The University will propose to establish in the General Extension Division a MacPhail Center for the Performing Arts, to be housed in the present MacPhail building. The General Extension Division will assume management of the building and may develop programs of extension work there in other fields besides the performing arts.
- (4) "In order to preserve the traditions of service to music which the MacPhail name represents," the University will propose a new chair in the music department, to be named the MacPhail Chair of Music. Arrangements for funding the chair will be undertaken under the Regents' policies on named chairs. The chair is to be filled by "a person distinguished in music performance and instruction," as soon as an appropriate candidate is selected.

(5) Two leading MacPhail officials will be invited to join the University faculty: President William G. MacPhail as director of the new University of Minnesota MacPhail Center for the Performing Arts; and Dean Adrian Lauritzen as associate professor of music, both positions to begin this fall.

At the Regents' meeting, University President O. Meredith Wilson presented to the Regents a resolution by the MacPhail Board of Trustees which stated that they were entrusting to the University not only the school and college, but also "its good will, its reputation, traditions and 60 years of musical heritage...to the end that the cultural development of the City of Minneapolis and State of Minnesota may be enhanced."

President William G. MacPhail and Verne Moss, the college's attorney and a trustee, attended the Regents' meeting and concurred in the statement that the school's transfer would be "to the mutual interest of the University and the MacPhail College and School, in order to develop music and music education of the highest quality." The transfer, they said, had been under discussion for two years.

The University's memorandum added the expectation that the move "will add to the growing national reputation of Minnesota as a state committed to excellence in the arts."

Arrangements have been made for all those who are now seniors in the college to receive their degrees there. Other college students will be counselled as to the appropriate program they might enter at the University. Programs available would lead to the bachelor of arts degree in music, the bachelor of fine arts degree in music, or the bachelor of science degree in music education.

The University's General Extension Division will maintain and develop the preparatory and continuing education division of the MacPhail College. "In addition to continuing the present program of private music instruction, the Extension Division will inaugurate a program of credit and non-credit evening classes at the Center," said Willard L. Thompson, dean of the General Extension Division.

"This is a fine opportunity to expand our services to the people of the community, making evening classes more readily accessible to those employed in the downtown area. With the rapid growth in continuing education, these added facilities will meet a critical need." The division now has extension centers in downtown St. Paul and Robbinsdale.

William MacPhail, father of the current president, started the school in 1907 under the title "MacPhail School of Violin." At first it was housed in the Metropolitan Music building at 43 S. Sixth st., but moved to its present LaSalle-street location in 1923.

While the program was limited and the faculty small for the first few years, faculty members more than tripled (to 37) in 1916, and the name was changed to "The MacPhail School of Music and Dramatic Art." Instead of just violin and piano, the offerings ranged from voice to guitar to double bass and percussion, with music history as well, plus a full course in dramatic art. For the first time, graduates could receive teaching certificates. In 1916 also, the school's first articles of incorporation were filed.

In 1917, the MacPhail School acquired the Northwestern Conservatory of Music. Some 42 years later, in 1959, MacPhail acquired the Minneapolis College of Music.

In 1940, MacPhail College came into being. Bylaws were adopted ensuring "a nonprofit institution for instruction in music, art and expression, dancing, dramatic art and languages; to grant degrees, diplomas and certificates..." The college operated side by side with the School of Music.

Then a year ago, in March 1965, the two were legally consolidated and the School became a part of the College. Currently, the MacPhail faculty numbers around 100, and more than 2,500 students are enrolled.

William MacPhail Sr. was a native of Scotland who came to Minneapolis at the age of five. He was a proficient violinist who joined the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra in 1903, the year it was founded, and in 1904 went to Europe for three years of intensive musical study. It was on his return from Europe that he founded the MacPhail School of Violin. Later he was, for 22 years, the conductor of the Apollo Club Male Chorus and long served on the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra board of directors. He died in 1962.

2 ASSOCIATE DEANS
NAMED IN 'U' SCHOOL OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The creation of two new positions of associate dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of Minnesota was announced today (Friday, March 11) by the University Board of Regents.

Named as associate dean for academic affairs in the business school was Professor George Seltzer, of the school's Industrial Relations Center. Professor Nicholas A. Glaskowsky, Jr., director of the undergraduate programs and professor of management and logistics, was named associate dean for administration.

In requesting the two new positions, Paul V. Grambsch, dean of the School of Business Administration, outlined them as follows:

Associate dean for academic affairs---to act as coordinator between the faculty and department chairmen, to help facilitate research and to serve as acting dean in the absence of the dean; and associate dean for administration---to supervise recruitment, scheduling, enrollment and counseling of students, and the administrative functions of the school.

A native of Chicago, Professor Seltzer received his bachelor and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Chicago and joined the Minnesota faculty in 1954 as a visiting lecturer in the School of Business Administration. He was named professor in 1959. Previously, he had served as a research assistant in the University of Chicago's department of economics, 1941; as a junior economist in surplus marketing, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and as labor consultant and economist, Office of Labor Production, War Production Board, 1941-45. He was a business economist in the antitrust division, U.S. Department of Justice, 1945-51, and economist in the U.S. Department of Commerce from January to June, 1951.

Professor Seltzer is a member of Phi Beta Kappa; has been public member and secretary of the Minnesota Commission on Tax Withholding since 1955; and is a member of the American Economics Association and the Industrial Relations Research Association. In 1962 he was on leave at the University College of Rhodesia and Nyasaland in Southern Rhodesia.

Professor and Mrs. Seltzer and their four sons, ages 6, 10, 12 and 16, live at 1917 East River road, Minneapolis.

The new associate dean for administration, Professor Glaskowsky, graduated from Harvard University and received the master of business administration and the doctor of philosophy degrees from Stanford University. He was an instructor in the school of business administration at Menlo College, Menlo Park, Calif., 1954-55; lecturer and assistant director of the transportation management program and case editor, Graduate School of Business, Stanford University, 1956-57, and came to the University in 1957. He has been director of the business administration undergraduate programs since 1964; and was executive officer for management development programs, 1961-63.

Professor Glaskowsky is the author of a number of books and monographs, writes a monthly column, "Computer Applications to Problems of Transportation and Distribution Management," in "Transportation and Distribution," is co-author of two computer simulations---Minnesota General Management Game and Business Logistics Decision Simulation---and is consultant to a number of business firms on problems of management organization and economic research.

Minneapolis---Dorothy M. Reid, prize-winning author and children's librarian of Fort William, Ontario, will be the featured speaker at a Librarian's Conference on the University of Minnesota's Minneapolis campus Monday, April 4.

Approximately 200 Minnesota librarians are expected to attend the conference in Mayo Memorial auditorium, according to Frederick Wezeman, associate professor of the University's Library School and conference moderator. The program will start at 9 a.m. and will conclude with a noon luncheon during which Mrs. Reid will tell children's stories. (She has, for the past five years, conducted a weekly radio program of stories for children.)

Also speaking on the program will be Mrs. Willard Donahue, Owatonna public librarian, who will discuss "Books for the Homemaker," and Gilford Johnsson, Nobles County librarian, Worthington, who will talk on important travel books. These talks will emphasize basic book titles and will be followed by a question-and-answer discussion period, Professor Wezeman said.

Mrs. Reid, head of the children's department of the Fort William public library, received one of two bronze medals the Canadian Library Association awards yearly for the best children's books produced in Canada in English and in French. The Madame Rollet Herbert medal was presented to Mrs. Reid for her "Tales of Nanabozho" published by Oxford Press.

The Librarian's Conference is sponsored by the University's Library School. A complete program and reservation forms may be obtained by writing or phoning Miss Sandra Youngdahl, Room 7 Walter Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455.

CHILDREN'S ART
CLASSES TO START
MARCH 26 at 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Twin Cities-area children between the ages of 5 and 9 who are interested in art will be welcomed as members of a Saturday-morning art class at the University of Minnesota during spring quarter, according to Professor Clifton Gayne, art education department chairman.

The classes, open to children who have not been registered in them previously, will be held from 9 to 11:30 a.m. on the 10 Saturdays from March 26 through June 4, not including Easter Saturday, April 9. Classes will meet in the Institute of Child Development building on the Minneapolis campus, and will be taught by graduate students of the University's art education department.

The purpose of the class, Professor Gayne said, is to provide children with experience in a variety of art media---from "real" clay to oils to water colors and even "that new medium, marking pens;" to permit art teachers to enjoy the advantages of experimental approaches to ideas, materials and methods; and to provide a group of children for the purpose of investigating such topics as children's interests, perceptions and motivations.

"The Saturday-morning children's art classes provide a unique opportunity for youngsters to learn about art while child research specialists are learning about children," Gayne said.

"The classes have demonstrated their value to the extent that the possibility of similar classes is being explored in other communities."

Registration forms and information regarding the classes, sponsored jointly by the Institute of Child Development and the department of art education, may be obtained by calling or writing Mrs. Sylvia Rosen, art class coordinator, Room 134-D, Institute of Child Development, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455. (FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Walter W. Heller, University of Minnesota professor of economics and former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, will give the 1966 Godkin lectures at Harvard University on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings (March 15-16-17).

Heller, who is now a consultant to the Executive Office of the President, will speak on "Advice and Consensus in Economic Policy-Making" on Tuesday (March 15); "The Promise of Modern Economic Policy" on Wednesday (March 16); and "Strengthening the Fiscal Base of Our Federalism" on Thursday (March 17).

The Godkin Lectures are given annually under the auspices of the Harvard Graduate School of Public Administration. They were established in 1903 as a memorial to Edwin Lawrence Godkin, editor of the New York Evening Post and of "The Nation" magazine. The Lectures traditionally are published by Harvard University Press.

Professor Heller, who served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers from 1961-64, joined the University staff in 1946. From 1955-1960, he was also tax adviser to the governor of Minnesota. In earlier post-war years he served as chief of internal finance for the U.S. military government in Germany, and as consultant to the Committee for Economic Development, the U.S. Treasury Department, the United Nations and King Hussein of Jordan.

He is the author of a U.N. study, "Taxes and Fiscal Policy in Under-Developed Countries" and (with Clara Penniman) of "State Income Tax Administration." He edited (with F.M. Boddy and C.L. Nelson) "Savings in the Modern Economy."

A native of Buffalo, N.Y., he earned a bachelor of arts degree from Oberlin College and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Wisconsin. He holds honorary degrees from Oberlin and Kenyon College.

Minneapolis---Two young scientists at the University of Minnesota were named today to receive unrestricted grants for basic research from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation.

The two scientists, both on the Minneapolis campus, are Allen M. Goldman, assistant professor of physics, and James R. Bolton, assistant professor in physical chemistry.

The grants, which begin in September, 1966, are for fundamental research and cover a two-year period.

Goldman joined the University of Minnesota last fall after seven years at Stanford University. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Harvard and a doctor of philosophy degree from Stanford. He is working in the area of low temperature physics, doing experimental work on the quantum properties of superconductors. The Sloan grant provides $10,000 per year for two years to be used by Goldman in any manner.

Bolton, a native of Swift Current, Saskatchewan, received his bachelor of arts (magna cum laude) and master of arts degrees from the University of Saskatchewan, and his doctorate from Cambridge University (England). Bolton's research concerns the study of structure of unstable molecules called free radicals, using magnetic resonance techniques. The Sloan grant gives Professor Bolton unrestricted use of $7,500 per year for two years.

The Sloan grants are given to young scientists to use on an unrestricted basis in order to encourage creative thinking on scientific problems, in contrast to the traditional method of supporting established research projects.

'SAND COUNTRY' FILM
SUNDAY TO SHOW AREA NEAR TWIN CITIES

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Sand Country Wildlife" is the title of a movie made in Anoka, Chisago and Sherburne counties, which will be shown at 3 p.m. Sunday (March 20) in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History, University of Minnesota.

The program will be free and open to the public. The film was made over a period of years by Professor W. J. Breckenridge, museum director, who will narrate it Sunday.

"Many people don't know about this sandy region to the north and northwest of the Twin Cities," Breckenridge said. "The conditions there are very close to actual deserts, and some very interesting plants, animals and insects can be found, the type that can survive in hot, dry country. The film follows the life history of insects that burrow into the sand, and others. These are very different from the plant and animal life found elsewhere in this area."

Some of the dunes and hills are 50 to 60 feet high, Breckenridge said, and are still shifting around. They were developed after the last glacier, and the history of their development is explained in the film.

Following this Sunday's film, the museum will have two more public programs in its Sunday series. On March 27 the topic will be "Winter on Superior's North Shore," and on April 3 it will be "Wilderness Day," dealing with the Boundary Waters Canoe Country.

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A $24,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to the University of Minnesota for a five-week summer institute in economic methods and education was announced today by Roman F. Warmke, director of economic education at the University and executive director of the Minnesota State Council on Economic Education.

The institute, scheduled for the first summer session (June 13 to July 16), will draw 30 selected high school teachers to the Minneapolis campus, most of them from Minnesota and bordering states.

The institute will be conducted in cooperation with the Minnesota State Council on Economic Education and the national Joint Council on Economic Education.

"The 'tools of a working economist' will be the theme emphasized throughout the institute," said Warmke. "We hope to explain to the teachers the various methods economists use in making judgements about economic life. Armed with these tools, a teacher will be able to approach economic data and translate it into significant issues."

The specific objectives of the institute are threefold:

- (1) to supplement and strengthen the economics background of the participating teachers,
- (2) to strengthen and expand high school economics courses and programs, and
- (3) to build in this region a nucleus of teachers qualified to help design, develop and test economics courses and materials.

Assisting Warmke in operating the institute will be John Welmberger, resident economist for the economic education project in the Minneapolis public schools.

Included in the institute will be a three-credit economics course taught by Harlan Smith, associate professor of economics. Also, a number of distinguished economists and economics educators will serve as visiting lecturers for the institute.

Others on the staff will include Leonid Hurwicz, professor of economics and statistics, and E. Daniel Eckberg, social science instructor at Hopkins high school. Eckberg will teach a special summer course for selected high school students which will be conducted concurrently with the institute.

Participants in the institute and the student course have already been selected.

'U' CHEMISTRY PROF
TO GO TO INDIA
ON SUMMER PROGRAMS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Professor Robert C. Brasted, chairman of the general chemistry program at the University of Minnesota, will leave April 1 for a two-month stay in India. Brasted will be working with the universities of India in advising on the establishment of the annual math-science summer institute programs for the summer of 1966.

The India summer institutes, funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development, are designed to help teachers in Indian colleges and universities keep abreast of modern developments in their subjects.

The programs help provide an improved subject-matter background for the teaching of university courses. Through seminars, attention is paid to problems relating to subject matter of courses and curricula.

Institutes are held for college instructors of chemistry, mathematics, biology, geology, physics and science education.

Brasted has served two previous years as science consultant to Jadavpur University, Calcutta, and Poona University, Poona. Professor Paul R. O'Connor, associate chairman of the department of chemistry, also has taught in the India institute program for the last two years.

The institutes are organized and coordinated by Ohio State University.

ELLIOTT LECTURE AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Professor David C. McClelland of the Center for Research, Harvard University, will deliver the 11th annual Richard M. Elliott Memorial lecture at the University of Minnesota this year, according to Professor John G. Darley, chairman of the University psychology department.

McClelland, staff chairman of the Harvard psychology center, will speak on "The Development of Achievement Motivation" in the special lecture at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 23, in Mayo Memorial auditorium. The lecture, sponsored jointly by the University psychology department, the Institute of Child Development and the department of concerts and lectures, will be open free to the public.

Before joining the Harvard psychology center, Professor McClelland had taught at Connecticut College for Women, Wesleyan University and Bryn Mawr College, and was deputy director of the Behavioral Sciences Division of Ford Foundation.

The Elliott Memorial lecture series was established at the University in 1956 upon the retirement of Psychology Professor Richard M. Elliott, who had been department chairman for many years.

Frank A. Beach, psychology professor at the University of California (Berkeley), delivered the 1965 Elliott lecture, speaking on "First Steps Toward a Comparative Psychology."

MEET AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Around 30 city managers from throughout Minnesota will attend the annual City Managers Conference, to be held Monday and Tuesday (March 21-22) at the Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota.

The Monday-morning speakers (March 21) will talk on the topics, "Decision Making in Primitive Societies" and "Problems Facing a Community Contemplating Integration." Michael Salovesh, University assistant professor in anthropology and social science, will give the first talk; Walter D. Warfield, assistant director of the State Commission Against Discrimination, will give the second.

Monday afternoon's session will be devoted to a report on the activities of the International City Managers Association, given by Robert Morse, city manager from Glencoe, Ill., and vice president of the International City Managers Association. Conference participants will attend the annual managers' dinner at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Ronald M. Brown, assistant professor of rhetoric in the University's Institute of Agriculture, will speak at 9 a.m. Tuesday (March 22) on "Talking With People." At 10:45 a.m., Sociology Professor Arnold Rose will discuss "Extremism in America." The afternoon session will be on "Local Planning Commission in Transition," by Jerome Kaufman, assistant director of the American Society of Planning Officials, Chicago.

7 TELEVISION COLLEGE COURSES FOR 'U' CREDIT
OFFERED SPRING QUARTER

MARCH 17, 1966

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Seven freshman- and sophomore-level courses will be offered by Television College at the University of Minnesota during spring quarter, three of them open to anyone and the other four requiring previous courses.

The courses, which earn credit toward a University degree, are shown two evenings a week over KTCA-TV, channel 2. Students also must attend a discussion or laboratory section of the class in a neighborhood center once a week (except for the psychology course).

The neighborhood centers are located throughout the Twin Cities area. Television College is a part of the University's General Extension Division, which offers many different types of continuing education throughout the state.

Registration is now open and will continue through March 25. Anyone interested may write to Television College at 325 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455, or telephone the Television College advisor from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 373-5030.

The three courses open to anyone who feels he is able to do college work are as follows:

Modern Literature: three credits, shown from 7:40 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays beginning March 30, with discussion sections from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. Mondays or Wednesdays (depending on the neighborhood center). The course, taught by Professor and Associate Dean John D. Hurrell, deals with major drama readings, mainly by British and American 20th-century playwrights.

Medieval and Renaissance History: three credits, shown from 7:40 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays starting March 29, with discussion sections from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesdays or Thursdays. The course, taught by Professor Robert S. Hoyt, will take up the history of the later Middle Ages and early Renaissance, and the rise of national monarchies, art, learning and literature.

(MORE)

Social Statistics: five credits, shown from 6:50 to 7:40 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning March 22, with discussion sections from 8 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays or Thursdays. Sociology Professor Roy G. Francis will teach the class, which introduces statistical methods used in the analysis of social data. Methods include measuring central tendency, dispersion, the significance of differences and correlation.

The four Television College courses which have prerequisites are the following:

Beginning French 3: four credits, shown from 6 to 6:50 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays, beginning March 30, with discussion sections from 8 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays or Thursdays; prerequisite French 2. The primary concern of the course, taught by Mireille R. Rydell, is to give students the ability to speak French, in the belief that reading and writing skills will follow.

Historical Geology 2: four credits, shown from 10 to 10:50 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning March 29, with laboratory section from 10 a.m. to noon Saturdays in Room 45 Architecture building, Minneapolis campus; prerequisite Physical Geology. Associate Professor Robert E. Sloan will teach the study of the evolution of the earth from its origin to the present, with special attention to the succession of physical and biological events of the past 600 million years.

Beginning German 3A: four credits, shown from 6 to 6:50 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, beginning March 29, with discussion sections from 8 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays or Thursdays; prerequisite German 2A. Taught by Associate Professor Wolfgang F. Taraba, the class uses the active approach to German, which stresses learning the language through becoming familiar with basic patterns of speech and later through the reading and analysis of material.

General Psychology 2: three credits, shown from 10 to 10:50 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays; no discussion section; prerequisite Psychology 1. Professor David L. LaBerge will continue the discussion of the basic principles of psychology with emphasis on the more complex processes such as language, personality, conflict, adjustment and behavior.

Spring-quarter registration is now open for University of Minnesota evening classes, which are taught on the University's Minneapolis campus, in the downtown St. Paul Extension Center, and in Robbinsdale High School.

Anyone interested in taking evening classes--which range from business administration to liberal arts to engineering--may attend simply by registering and paying the tuition and fees, according to Professor Albert M. Fulton, director of evening classes. There are no entrance requirements other than course prerequisites, and the student need not be enrolled in a program leading to a degree. However, most of the courses are for University credit, and can lead to a bachelor's degree. Some courses carry graduate credit for qualified students.

Most of the classes are held one night a week. They meet for different lengths of time depending on how many credits they carry; a three-credit course, for example, would meet for two hours and 40 minutes.

Tuition is $11 per credit; there may be an additional fee for laboratory or other materials.

Registration will close March 25. Anyone interested in evening classes may register or obtain class schedules and additional information at the following places and times, weekdays only:

Room 57 Nicholson hall, Minneapolis campus: 8 a.m. to noon; 1 to 8 p.m.

St. Paul Extension Center, Ninth and Exchange: 8 a.m. to noon; 1 to 8 p.m.

690 Northwestern Bank building, Seventh and Marquette, Minneapolis: 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.; 1:45 to 4:45 p.m.

Robbinsdale high school (for courses taught there, only): 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.
The high school will have additional registration hours from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday (March 21, 22 and 23).

The department of evening classes is part of the University's General Extension Division.

Arabic---the predominant language of the Middle East and the native tongue of approximately 90 million Muslims---will be taught in an intensive course this summer at the University of Minnesota, for the first time.

The class is open to anyone, and can be used to help fulfill a student's language requirements.

The course will deal with beginning written Arabic: grammar, vocabulary and the reading of easy texts, with constant drill and laboratory aids. A 15-credit course, it will cover an entire year's work, so those who take it will be able to enter the second year of Arabic in the fall, if they wish.

Two courses for juniors or seniors also will be offered this summer. During the first Summer Session, June 12-July 16, advanced students who wish to work on special problems can take a directed-readings class. During the second session, July 18-Aug. 20, they can take an individual research honors course.

The courses are offered in the newly formed department of Middle Eastern languages, which now offers a major in Arabic, according to Anwar G. Chejne, who just became head of the department.

Describing Arabic as "the Latin of the Muslim community," Chejne says it is the sacred or liturgical language of the 500 million Moslems throughout the world, and is spoken daily by 90 million people living in Morocco, Algeria, Egypt, Tunisia, Libya, The Sudan, Lebanon, Syria, Iraq and the entire Arabian peninsula.

"The department aims to acquaint the student with Middle Eastern languages, in order to enable him to read and do research in these languages and their literatures to equip him with a speaking knowledge of at least one Middle Eastern language; and to acquaint him through original texts and English translations with the culture of the peoples of the Middle East," Chejne has written.

The department also offers courses in Hebrew, taught by Assistant Professor Jonathan Paradise, and a few other Middle Eastern courses. Hachemi Saada is an instructor in the department, which was one of three formed last fall from the old University department of Slavic and Oriental languages. The department hopes to offer a major in Hebrew within two years.

Professor Chejne, who joined the University faculty last fall, spent the previous year as a visiting lecturer at the University of Puerto Rico. He spent four years at Wayne State University, Detroit, one of them as acting chairman of the department of Near Eastern languages and literatures, and has taught Spanish and mathematics in the Philadelphia public schools. He also has served as an interpreter and translator for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, and has tutored pupils of Arabic, Spanish and French.

A native of Lebanon, Chejne earned a bachelor of arts degree in languages from the Colegio del Rosario in Bogota, Colombia, studied medical subjects in Bogota at the Universidad Javeriana, earned a master of arts degree from the Asia Institute, New York City, and a doctor of philosophy degree in Islamic studies and history from the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of many articles and in addition to speaking fluent English, French, Spanish and Arabic, he has a reading knowledge of Persian, Syriac, Latin, German and Italian.

Minneapolis-----Twenty-nine high schools in the Twin Cities area each have at least five recent graduates on the College of Liberal Arts (Lower Division) Dean's List at the University of Minnesota for fall quarter (1965).

To be named to the Dean's List, a student must have a better-than-B average on a minimum of 12 credits for the quarter, CLA Assistant Dean Roger Page explained. No grades of incomplete are allowed.

Minneapolis high schools and the number of Dean's List students are: Edison, 6; Henry, 5; Marshall, 6; North, 10; Regina, 7; Roosevelt, 18; St. Anthony of Padua, 6; St. Margaret's academy, 7; Southwest, 11; University, 8; Washburn, 22; and West, 13.

St. Paul: Archbishop Murray Memorial, 6; Central, 17; Highland Park, 11; Johnson, 7; and Our Lady of Peace, 6.

Suburban: Anoka, 7; Brooklyn Center, 5; Edina-Morningside, 12; Minnetonka, 5; Hopkins, 14; Academy of Holy Angels, 5; Mounds View, 5; Richfield, 11; Robbinsdale, 11; St. Louis Park, 33; Alexander Ramsey, 15; and White Bear Lake, 10.

In his congratulatory letter to the principals of the high schools from which these honor students came, Dean Page said:

"Such achievement reflects not only the ability and persistence of the student, but also the background and attitudes learned from his high school teachers. I hope you will relay to your staff our appreciation. Such students are sorely needed in higher education and can especially benefit from the broad resources and stimulating opportunities of their state University."

NEW NATIONAL GROUP OF TEACHERS ELECTS
'U' PROF AS PRESIDENT

Harold B. Allen, professor of English at the University of Minnesota, has been elected president of a new national organization composed of teachers who teach English as a second language. The group, formed by 900 such teachers at a meeting Friday and Saturday (March 18-19) in New York City, calls itself Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages, or TESOL.

Professor Allen was a surprise write-in candidate for president. For a number of years, he has been associated with groups and committees concerned with the problems of inadequacy in textbooks and also in teacher training in the field of teaching English as a second language. He currently is completing a two-year study of the status of English to non-English speakers in the United States, a project supported by the U.S. Office of Education.

In a preliminary report of his findings to the new association Saturday (March 19), Allen said that 64 per cent of the elementary and secondary school teachers who have non-English-speaking students lack any preparation for this special teaching. These students occur in such regions as Texas, where more than half a million school children come from homes where English is not spoken, and other South-west areas; and eastern urban centers, primarily New York City.

He also pointed out that one-third of all high school teachers with mixed classes ---both English-speaking and non-English-speaking students---give no special attention to the latter; another one-third give them no more than one hour a week special attention.

A desperate need exists, Allen said, for beginning textbooks for culturally distinct groups, especially Indian children and the Spanish-speaking children of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Allen's study is co-sponsored by the University of Minnesota and the National Council of Teachers of English.

Elected first vice president of TESOL was Robert Lado, dean of the school of languages and linguistics of Georgetown University. Second vice president and program chairman is David Harris, director of the American Language Institute at Georgetown University.

"Winter on Superior's North Shore" is the title of a color film to be shown at 3 p.m. Sunday (March 27) at the Minnesota Museum of Natural History, University of Minnesota. The program will be free and open to the public, and is the next-to-last in this year's series of Sunday Museum programs.

The movie will be narrated by Donald K. Lewis, Museum audio-visual adviser, who says it tells the story of what one would find during an average winter on the North Shore, beginning at Duluth and going north: the ice formations on Lake Superior, winter bird and mammal life, the taconite and pulpwood industries, skiing, and winter fishing.

"The film is a good example of one that has grown and changed over the years," Lewis says. "It was first begun back in 1947, but anyone who saw it then would find it very different now. As conditions have changed, we have added and changed parts of the film, so it is almost entirely different from the original.

"Taconite has come in; the pulpwood industry has increased, as have skiing and other recreation areas; the national monument at Grand Portage has gone up; and winter fishing has changed considerably: when we first shot film, it was a very good industry; then the lamprey came in and almost destroyed it; and now it's coming back again."

The final Sunday program will be a color, sound film titled "Wilderness Day," at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 3, in the museum.

GRANT GIVEN TO AID
RESEARCH BY 'U'
NURSING FACULTY

TELEPHONE: 373-2137
MARCH 22, 1966

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A $34,836 grant for a faculty project for strengthening research competence was announced today by Associate Professor Isabel M. Harris, assistant director of the school of nursing at the University of Minnesota.

The grant, from the U.S. Public Health Service, covers a three-year period. It is the third grant for this project, bringing the total support since 1960 to $94,928.

"The purpose of the grant," said Miss Harris, "is to increase the research competence of our faculty in whatever ways we can. The point of the project is to stress the importance of research to our faculty, and encourage them to initiate their own projects."

There are 26 persons on the faculty of the school of nursing. Miss Harris and Professor Edna L. Fritz, director of the school, both hold doctor of philosophy degrees. The others, who teach in baccalaureate or master's programs, hold master's degrees.

The grant supports three areas at the University, Miss Harris said: (1) nursing research in the behavioral and biological sciences; (2) salary support of members of the faculty, and (3) in-service education.

"Nurses could contribute valuable research abilities in the behavioral sciences, such as sociology, psychology, anthropology and education," she said. "This is a natural field for most nurses, and many of us have our advanced degrees in this area.

"The biological sciences also are natural areas, but not nearly enough research has been done here by nurses. For example, what happens to the patient physiologically when he gets a bath?...or any other of the many kinds of nursing care? Maybe a bath puts a patient's heart under great stress, and, for a heart patient, this could be serious. Another valuable research study for nurses would be the reproducibility of blood pressure. There is now little consistently accurate, indirect measurement of blood pressure. There are simply too many variables. How can they be controlled?"

The school of nursing now has five faculty research projects under way. One concerns the degree of creativity in graduate nursing students. "One interesting fact has turned up already in this project," said Miss Harris. "The two least creative students---according to our tests---dropped out of graduate programs. This might indicate we should change our basis of selection, to put more emphasis on creativity."

A second project, similar to the first, is a study of creativity and other characteristics in undergraduate students.

A third project concerns itself with patient-student perception of the effectiveness of nursing care. This involves making taped interviews with both patients and student nurses after a period during which the student has given care to the patient.

"For example," said Miss Harris, "after a student nurse has provided care for several hours, we'll interview the patient to find out how well---in his opinion---the care was given. Then we'll interview the nurse to get her opinion. The difference of opinion on this point can be very interesting, and, after considerable data of this type is collected, worthwhile in improving nursing techniques."

A career survey of graduates from the school is also in progress. It hopes to find answers to such questions as: How long do nurses practice after graduation?... Why do they quit?...How many return to work?...How long are they out?

Another survey project is being made on applicants to the school. "The national attrition rate in schools of nursing is about 33 per cent," said Miss Harris. "It's much too high, so we're looking at the idea of changing our acceptance criteria from strictly academic achievement to include such factors as personality and creativity."

The grant also is used to give salary support to the faculty of the school. This is used to replace faculty members when they are on leave. Frances Dunning, assistant professor in the school, is now on leave at Teacher's College, Columbia University, taking training in research methodology. She is studying research design applicable to nursing education.

In-service education programs take the form of scheduled seminars for the faculty. Marvin D. Dunnette, professor of psychology, has lectured on the empathy between supervisors and workers; Joan Aldous, assistant professor in the Family Study Center, has had a seminar on the effect of parents in developing creativity in children; Dr. Elizabeth Reed, formerly of the Dight Institute for Human Genetics, has discussed a study of the genetic relationships in mental retardation.

"We're primarily interested in encouraging independent research," said Miss Harris, "but hopefully there's also the area of collaborative research with doctors and other health personnel.

"In any event, there is a good deal of research on nursing that should be done by nurses. It should be done to help improve nursing service and education, but, perhaps even more important, it should be done to help health services in general."

2 Ford Lectures at 'U'
ARCHAEOLOGIST TO DESCRIBE
KING CROESUS' ANCIENT CITY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Highlights of 3,000 years of the cultural and artistic ebb and flow through the ancient city of Sardis will be illustrated in color slides and discussed when the 10th annual Guy Stanton Ford Lectures are presented at the University of Minnesota Monday and Tuesday (March 28 and 29).

Harvard University Professor George M.A. Hanfmann, curator of classical art at Harvard's Fogg Museum and field director of a joint Harvard-Cornell University expedition which has been working on the excavation of Sardis for several years, will deliver the two lectures at 8:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium.

The lectures, "Excavating the City of Croesus" on Monday, and "The Ancient Synagogue of Sardis" on Tuesday, will be open free to the public.

The annual lecture series honoring Ford, the University's sixth president, is sponsored by the Arts and Letters Council of the University's Graduate School Research Center and by the department of concerts and lectures.

Sardis, capital city of fabled King Croesus, antiquity's richest man, is located in Western Turkey and also is famous as one of the "Seven churches which are in Asia" ---one of the earliest Christian communities.

On Monday, Professor Hanfmann will present illustrations of many of the expedition's discoveries which range from prehistoric huts through masterpieces of Greek, Roman and Byzantine architecture, sculpture and mosaics. He also will describe and picture the extraordinary cemetery of the Lydian kings and the tunneling the expedition is undertaking in one of the royal mounds.

In the Tuesday evening lecture he will discuss "The Ancient Synagogue of Sardis," the largest as well as one of the earliest preserved edifices of this type. This building was one of the surprising discoveries made by the Harvard-Cornell expedition. The architecture of the building---the length of an American football field---its gorgeous interior decoration and its inscriptions present a totally new picture of the Jewish communities under the Roman Empire in Asia Minor, he says.

A native of Russia, Professor Hanfmann was educated in Lithuania, Germany and the United States. He studied classics and archaeology at the Universities of Berlin and Johns Hopkins, obtaining a doctorate degree from each. He became a member of the faculty at Harvard in 1935. In addition to research in Italy and Greece, he took part in the expedition to Tarsus (1947-48) and has directed the Sardis "dig" since its inception in 1958.

As curator of classical art at the Fogg Museum, Professor Hanfmann has organized notable exhibitions on Greek Art and Life, Arts of the Ancient Near East, Ancient Art in American Private Collections, The David Moore Robinson Bequest and The Beauty of Ancient Art.

He has lectured in Greece, Italy, Germany, France, England and Switzerland as well as in the United States. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; the Academy of Arts and Sciences, Mainz, Germany; the Istituto di Studi Etruschi, Florence, Italy; the Royal Society of Antiquaries, London; the Academie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, France, and is an active officer of the Archaeological Institute of America, the American Schools of Oriental Research and the American Research Institute in Turkey.

During the war, Professor Hanfmann served as editor and section chief with Radio Division, U.S. Office of War Information, in New York and London.

LATIN INSTITUTE FOR TEACHERS SLATED
AT 'U' THIS SUMMER

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
MARCH 25, 1966

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A summer institute in Latin will be offered at the University of Minnesota this year, designed primarily for teachers from grades five through nine. Latin teachers from grades 9-12 who can help initiate junior-high or elementary Latin also may apply. The six-week institute will run from July 12 to Aug. 20.

The only federally supported Latin institute in the country, it will be based upon the University's national pilot program in grades 5-9 and will assist the participants in acquiring the background, materials and techniques necessary for introducing Latin instruction at the fifth, sixth or seventh-grade level as a first step toward a six-year classical curriculum.

The institute will be directed by Professor Robert P. Sonkowsky, chairman of the University classics department. Funds for the institute were granted by the National Foundation for the Arts and Humanities, a federal creation "designed to some extent as a counterpart in the humanities to the National Science Foundation," according to Professor Sonkowsky. The funds are administered by the U.S. Office of Education.

"Our institute is a very practical recognition of the fact that our classical heritage is important to all levels of culture and education in this country, and to our entire national life," Sonkowsky commented.

"The modern languages have long had the support of the National Defense Education Act and as a result, they are already being taught at the early grade levels. Now, with the help of this new federal act, we plan to teach Latin and Greek in new ways that will be meaningful to youngsters, and to formulate a six-year program that will enrich their lives and their subsequent education."

The institute will be limited to 40 participants. Each participant will be eligible for a stipend of $75 a week plus $15 a week for each dependent, under the federal grant. No tuition will be charged, but participants will pay their own room and board. Those who attend from outside the University area will live and eat in a University residence hall which will cost about $185 for the entire period.

The Latin institute will offer eight courses, taught by Professor Sonkowsky; Associate Professor Margaret M. Forbes, who has pioneered the use of new techniques in the teaching of Latin and particularly Latin in the elementary grades; Gerald M. Erickson of the University classics department and Edina-Morningside high school, who has worked extensively on the Latin pilot project in grades 5-9; and William B. Thompson, a lecturer in the teaching of classics from the University of Leeds (England), who has lectured and published extensively on new approaches to the classics in the modern school.

Noted visiting lecturers also will appear for short periods, among them Professor John F. Latimer of George Washington University, president of the American Classical League and executive secretary of CAUSA, a new group of Classical Associations in the U.S.A.; and the Rev. Henry Gardocki, S.J., a Cleveland teacher who for four years has been directing a program of Latin classes on Saturdays throughout Cleveland with conspicuous success.

The eight offerings will be as follows: (1) Structure of the Latin Language:

the findings of linguistic science and their application to teaching Latin; the use of oral Latin as an instructional technique; and a critique of materials produced in the writing seminar; (2) The Classical Voices of Poetry and Prose: training in the interpretive oral reading of Latin literature;

(3) Proseminar for Seventh-Grade Latin: intensive work on methods, techniques and materials developed in a pilot program; (4) Selected Readings: Latin works chosen for their intrinsic interest and suitability for younger students, with emphasis on increasing the participants' speed and comprehension in reading Latin; (5) Writing Seminar: participants will work on individual or small-group projects in consultation with the staff and other participants;

(6) Audio-Visual Techniques: demonstrations and talks on practical aspects of the effective use of audio-visual media; (7) Humanities Colloquia: a series of talks and discussions relevant to the broad area of the humanities; and (8) Classical Humanities Colloquium: an address by a distinguished visiting lecturer.

Qualified participants may earn 9 graduate credits in Latin and 3 graduate credits in education. Those who apply must have a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university, must have two years of college Latin or its equivalent, and must be employed in a public or non-profit private school for the year 1966-67.

Anyone interested in additional information and registration forms should write to Professor Sonkowsky, Classics Department, 309 Folwell Hall, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455.

THAILAND'S UN DELEGATE TO ADDRESS OPENING OF MODEL UN AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Anand Panyarachun, First Secretary of Thailand's permanent delegation to the United Nations, will address some 500 student-delegates to the Model United Nations, meeting in assembly Thursday through Sunday (March 31-April 3) at the University of Minnesota.

The student-delegates will assemble from the eight states---Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska and Michigan---that make up the North Central Regional Model U.N. Conference, according to Kirby Titus, 5038 Garfield ave. S., Minneapolis, Model U.N. Secretary General and conference moderator, and a University sophomore majoring in psychology. Each of the school delegations will represent a country of its choice, and act as that nation does at the actual United Nations.

"Many of the countries were spoken for at the conclusion of last year's conference", Titus said. The delegation from Jamestown College, Jamestown, N.D., requested the U.S.S.R. last spring, and the group from Hamline University asked for Cuba at the same time. These groups have been observing and studying the thinking and actions of "their" countries since then.

"All the 'controversial' countries were spoken for long ago, and we now have only a few nations unassigned," Titus said.

This will be the ninth annual Model U.N. Assembly to be held at the University, but this is the first year that it will be sponsored exclusively by the Coffman Union Board of Governors. All meetings, General Assemblies and the closing banquet will be held in Coffman Memorial Union. Delegates from out of the Twin Cities area will stay at the Curtis hotel, Minneapolis.

"The U.N. and Southeast Asia" will be Panyarachun's topic at the opening General Assembly at 1:30 p.m. Thursday (March 31) in Coffman Union main ballroom. He will discuss the effect of the worldwide situation on the United Nations--- whether it will strengthen or weaken the U.N.

Some 40 to 50 University students and Twin Cities-area delegates will present a "Preview of the Model U.N. at the University" from 9 to 10 p.m. Tuesday (March 29) over station KTCA-TV, channel 2. The live program will open with a General Assembly meeting and will follow a motion as it is carried from the floor, through committee meetings and maneuvers and returned to the floor. The results of the final votes of the delegates will be shown, Titus said. As the Secretary General, he will preside, but has "no idea what will happen."

-U N S-

NOTE TO EDITORS: A news conference for Mr. Panyarachun will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday in Room 234 Coffman Memorial Union. Titus and several out-of-state delegates representing some of the more controversial countries also will be present.

Minneapolis---"Racial Differences: Where and How to Intervene" will be discussed by a psychologist from the University of North Carolina in the annual Donald G. Paterson Memorial lecture Wednesday (March 30) at the University of Minnesota.

Professor W. Grant Dahlstrom, alumnus of the University and currently psychology professor at the Chapel Hill, N.C., institution, will speak at 8 p.m. in Mayo Memorial auditorium on the University's Minneapolis campus.

The lecture, open free to the public, will be sponsored by the University's department of psychology, the Institute of Child Development and the department of concerts and lectures.

The annual Paterson lecture in psychology was initiated in 1962 by Psi Chi, honorary psychology society at the University.

Professor Paterson was a nationally renowned pioneer in research on individual differences and the application of psychology to human problems. He served on the University faculty 39 years, from 1921 to 1960, during which time he became noted among psychologists throughout the state and the nation for his research, scholarship, teaching and administrative accomplishments.

Professor Dahlstrom received his bachelor's and doctorate degrees from the University, where he was an instructor from 1946-48. He has taught at Ohio Wesleyan and the State University of Iowa and joined the North Carolina faculty in 1953 where he has served as director of Psychological Services; associate professor in the psychology department, and clinical associate professor and professor in the department of psychiatry since 1960. He also is research professor, Institutional Research, Social Sciences. He specializes in diagnosis, personality theory and psychosomatic relations.

OKLAHOMA PROF
TEACHING 'U' BUSINESS COURSES THIS SPRING

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Ronald B. Shuman, research professor of management at the University of Oklahoma and curator of the Harry W. Bass Collection in Business History, is serving as guest professor in the University of Minnesota's Graduate School of Business Administration spring quarter.

He is teaching an advanced seminar in Theory of Organization and Administration, and a course in History of Managerial Thought.

Professor Shuman, a native of Owatonna, Minn., holds a master of arts and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Minnesota, a bachelor of arts degree and an honorary LL.D. from Hamline University. He joined the faculty of the University of Oklahoma in 1935 and has been a visiting professor of management at both Columbia University and the University of Illinois. He is past president of the National Academy of Management and former national vice chairman of the research committee of the Society for Advancement of Management.

He was a professor of business policy for seven years in Oklahoma's Executive Development Program and has been visiting professor in such programs at Indiana University, Georgia Tech and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. He was a consultant for six years in the Combat Development department of the U.S. Army Artillery Center, Fort Sill, Okla.

Professor Shuman has written two books, "The Petroleum Industry" and "The Management of Men."

Two distinguished visiting scholars are offering courses in the University of Minnesota department of Romance languages during spring quarter, which began today (Monday, March 28).

They are Professor Bernard Weinberg, who is the Hill Family Foundation Distinguished Visiting Professor, teaching two courses in the department of Romance languages and one in comparative literature; and Professor Jacques L. Salvan, of the University of Arizona, teaching three French courses.

In addition, Professor Jacques Dubois of the University of Liege, Belgium, will continue as a visiting professor in Romance languages for spring quarter. He taught winter quarter also.

Professor Weinberg, chairman of the department of Romance languages at the University of Chicago, was a Guy Stanton Ford lecturer at the University of Minnesota in January, 1965.

His interests include modern French poetry, literary criticism in France and literary theory in Renaissance Italy. In addition to numerous articles, he has written four books, "French Realism: The Critical Reaction, 1830-1870;" "Critical Prefaces of the French Renaissance;" "A History of Literary Criticism in the Italian Renaissance," and "The Art of Jean Racin." Weinberg earned a doctor of philosophy degree at the University of Chicago.

He is teaching French 150, Introduction to Formal Analysis, and French 170: Rabelais; and also Comparative Literature 195: Sources of the Renaissance in Italy and Its Development in Europe.

Professor Salvan, formerly of Wayne State University, is a native of France who earned a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Michigan. He is widely known for articles and books on contemporary French literature, French-English literary relations, and existentialism; one of his recent books deals with the philosophy of Jean-Paul Sartre.

Salvan is teaching French 62, French Civilization and Culture; French 111, 19th Century Drama; and French 252, a seminar on Sartre and Existentialist Literature in France.

Arthur Mendel, associate professor of history at the University of Michigan, will be the first of eight reknowned scholars in Russian history to appear at the University of Minnesota during spring quarter in a lecture series entitled "Russia's Golden Age: 1894-1914?"

Mendel will speak at 8 p.m. Tuesday (March 29) in Mayo Memorial auditorium, and the lectures will be given for eight consecutive Tuesdays, ending May 17. The series is open to the public and series tickets will be available at the door Tuesday evening. Also available will be tickets to individual lectures, to be sold at the door after 8 p.m. each Tuesday. Series tickets are $12.50 for the general public, $7.50 for University students and faculty; individual tickets are $2.50.

The World Affairs Center, a division of the University's General Extension Division, is sponsoring the series. Moderator every Tuesday will be Theofanis G. Stavrou, University associate professor who teaches Russian and Near Eastern history.

Professor Mendel will talk on "Dilemmas of Imperial Russia." He is the author of a book well known to Russian scholars, "Dilemmas of Progress in Czarist Russia," and has edited another book, "Essential Works of Marxism." He has spent two years in Helsinki on a Fulbright scholarship and later spent a summer in the Soviet Union with a fellowship from the Social Science Research Council. He holds a doctor of philosophy degree from Harvard University.

The visiting professors will examine the 20 years before World War I, considering the basic question of whether Russia might have evolved satisfactorily as a modern nation on the western model if the war had not erupted. The speakers will consider various aspects of Russia's development up to 1914: industrialization, foreign policy, conservative and radical thought, literature and the arts, etc.

The eighth speaker and a slight change in schedule have been announced for the series. The lecture on "Literature and the Arts" will be given on May 10 by Gleb Struve, professor of Russian literature at the University of California, Berkeley, while the lecture on "Economic Developments in Russia" will be presented on April 26.

Struve, who is internationally known for his publications, had his early education in Petrograd and is a graduate of Balliol College, Oxford University (England). He has taught at the University of London and Harvard University and has written many books, including "Soviet Russian Literature From 1917 to 1950."

EIGHT NAMED AS MCKNIGHT THEATRE
FELLOWS AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Eight University of Minnesota McKnight Foundation Graduate Theatre Fellowship winners were announced Tuesday (March 29) by Professor Kenneth L. Graham, University speech and theatre arts department chairman and head of the McKnight Foundation fellowship selection committee.

Eight outstanding students in theatre arts from throughout the nation have been named recipients of the foundation's awards for graduate study at the University of Minnesota and possible internship in the Minnesota Theatre company of the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre, Minneapolis.

The winners of the two-year fellowships will spend the 1966-67 academic year and the fall and winter quarters of 1967-68 in graduate study at the University, Professor Graham said. They may begin internship at the Guthrie theatre in the spring of 1968.

Walter Trennery of St. Paul, McKnight Foundation president, stated that the goal of this fellowship program is to provide an opportunity for outstanding graduate students to continue advanced work related to both educational and professional theatre.

The winners---awarded fellowships varying from $1,200 to at least $2,700---were selected from 120 applicants from among 159 nominees chosen by their college or university theater directors. Final selection of the actors was determined through personal auditions before the selection committee composed of staff members from the Minnesota Theatre company and the University Theatre.

The winning playwright and the designer were selected through submitted samples of their work and by their references, Professor Graham said.

Minneapolis----Noted speakers in the field of sex education will highlight the second Sex Education Institute, to be held at the University of Minnesota next fall.

The institute is scheduled for Sept. 28 and 29, 1966, in the Nolte Center for Continuing Education, part of the General Extension Division.

Evelyn M. Duvall and Helen Manley are two well-known sex educators who will take part. They will be joined by Richard Hey, University associate professor in the Family Study Center and director of post-doctoral training for marriage counselors, and others.

The first such institute, held at Nolte Center last fall, drew more than 350 participants from all over the state, including teachers in many fields; school and public health nurses; social workers; ministers, priests and other religious educators; recreation-group leaders; guidance counselors, principals and other school personnel, and just plain parents. Those who attended were divided almost equally between men and women.

The theme of this year's institute will be "Sex Education in the Home, School, Church and Community." The first day will be spent considering children of elementary-school age, while the second day's sessions will take up today's teenagers.

Helen Manley will be in charge of the first day's program, which will include "the what, when and how of sex education in the home, church and school" for different elementary-grade levels; a panel discussion on what is being done in Minnesota in parent education; and a demonstration of how to present a unit on human reproduction for sixth-grade boys and girls.

Mrs. Manley is the executive director of the Social Health Association of Greater St. Louis, Mo., and for many years directed the sex education program in the St. Louis schools, "one of the earliest and most successful such programs in the country," according to Mrs. Elizabeth Peterson, coordinator of parent and family life education for the General Extension Division. Mrs. Manley initiated the sex education program in the public schools of University City (a suburb of St. Louis) in 1930. She is the author of a curriculum guide in sex education.

The second day's program will feature Evelyn M. Duvall of Chicago, a family life educator who speaks all over the United States and Canada to church, school and parent groups. She will cover the psychosexual development of adolescents at the junior high and senior high school levels.

Mrs. Duvall's two best-known books are "Love and the Facts of Life" and "Why Wait for Marriage?" and she has written a new book which will be available this summer, "Today's Teen-Agers." Mrs. Duvall, who has appeared in Minnesota many times, has worked with the National and the World Councils of Churches, and for 10 years was director of the Adolescent Study Course for the PTA Magazine.

The institute also will show a new film, "Girl to Woman," a companion to the widely known "Boy to Man," which has been shown to sons and fathers through PTA, church, YMCA and other groups.

Anyone interested in more information on this fall's institute should write to Mrs. Elizabeth Peterson, 217 Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455.

Minneapolis---Some 25 practicing physicians from all over Minnesota will attend a two-day course on "Trauma, The Management of the Acutely Injured," this Friday and Saturday (April 1-2) in Mayo Memorial auditorium in the University of Minnesota Medical Center.

The course includes lectures on the diagnosis and management of acute emergencies, covering the gamut from ingestion of foreign bodies to the therapy of tetanus. It is designed to bring the practicing physician up to date on the handling of acutely injured patients.

The course is under the direction of Dr. John H. Moe, clinical professor and director of the division of orthopedic surgery, and Dr. William J. Kane, assistant professor of orthopedic surgery, both of the University of Minnesota College of Medical Sciences.

Fifteen persons are on the faculty for the course. Dr. George E. Williams, associate professor of psychiatry and public health, will talk on the "Promonitory Signs in Potential Suicide," at 1:30 p.m. Friday (April 1). Dr. Williams will point out the extent of the problem of suicide in the United States today. According to Dr. Williams, there are 25,000 known suicides per year in the United States, but the actual number of undetected suicides might run as high as 200,000. Also, it is the third leading cause of death among teenagers.

Dr. James G. Garrick, an orthopedist with the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and director of the national ski safety research program, will talk on ski accidents, at 10 a.m. Saturday (April 2).

Dr. Garrick has spent the past two years gathering information for a statistical study of skiing injuries. Meaningful statistics on ski injuries are meager, he point out. His current study of accident factors at five well-known U.S. ski resorts will be expanded during the 1966-67 season to cover a representative 15 to 25 areas, and a final report will be published in book form.

The course will be sponsored by the University's General Extension Division through the Nolte Center for Continuing Education.

FRENCH COOKING
FOR AMERICANS
TV SHOW SUBJECT

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

French gourmet cooking will be the subject of a new television series which will start Friday (April 1) on the University of Minnesota Television Hour, over KTCA-TV, channel 2.

The series, "The French Chef," will be shown from 9:30 to 10 p.m. Fridays for 13 weeks, with Mrs. Julia Child doing the cooking and demonstrating.

Mrs. Child will emphasize French techniques used in an American kitchen with ingredients purchased from any supermarket.

Mrs. Child, of Boston, learned to cook the French way at the Cordon Bleu in Paris, where she discovered that every dish is based on fundamental principles that are quick and easy. Once these are learned, she says, anyone can prepare all the French delicacies with the complicated names.

Mrs. Child was a founder of Paris' "Ecole des Trois Gourmondes," with Simone Beck and Louisette Bertholde, and all three women later collaborated on a cookbook, "Mastering the Art of French Cooking," which is used on the TV program to be seen here.

"The French Chef", tailored for the American housewife, was produced and directed by Russ Morash of WGBH-TV, Boston, Mass.

The 13 programs will deal with the following subjects: breast of chicken; vegetables the French way; veal scallops; French salads and mayonnaise; chicken livers a la francaise; roast duck a l'orange; chocolate mousse; pates; aspics; bouillabaisse; lobster a l'americaine; French crepes and French crepes suzettes.

A short course for persons at the middle-management level that will deal with the relationships between superiors and subordinates will be held at the University of Minnesota Saturday (April 2).

Peter Rosko, assistant professor of finance and director of continuing business education for the General Extension Division, says registration is still open for the course, which will be held in Room 150 Physics building, Minneapolis campus. The purpose of the course, Rosko says, is to "expose to middle-management people some concepts in dealing with problems in supervisory leadership." He sums it up thus:

"How often have you observed or been involved in superior-subordinate misunderstandings that you thought could have been handled differently or avoided entirely?"

All the sessions, which will run from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., will be conducted by Allen R. Solem, professor of management in the University's Graduate School and a nationally known authority and consultant in management and industrial psychology. He previously has taught at the Universities of Michigan and Rochester (N.Y.).

Some 250 registrations have been received so far, according to Rosko, indicating widespread interest in the subject. Because of this interest, he plans that Saturday's meeting will be the first in a series of seminars on inter-personal problem solving.

Two of the four sessions Saturday will focus on "a laboratory analysis of a typical management problem" and "discussion, critique and selection of recommended solutions."

Those interested can send applications to Rosko at the Graduate School of Business Administration, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455. The fee of $20 includes all sessions plus reading materials and reserved parking in the ramp at Washington and Union, but not lunch.

Minneapolis---Some 450 college and university ROTC students from six states---members of the Second Regiment, Pershing Rifles---will gather in Minneapolis Friday (April 1) to take part in the organization's annual Second Regiment Assembly at the University of Minnesota Saturday (April 2).

Assembly host and sponsor this year will be the University ROTC's Pershing Rifle unit, Company E-2, according to Robert Childress, Mora, unit public information officer, junior in liberal arts and member of the University's Army ROTC unit.

The national organization of Pershing Rifles is made up of students enrolled in Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC units in colleges and universities who have banded together to foster fellowship, leadership training and knowledge of military service.

Pershing Rifle companies from the universities of Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Minnesota, St. John's University, Collegeville; Marquette University, Milwaukee; and Ripon College, Ripon, Wis., make up the membership of the Second Regiment and will take part in the assembly-review. All the review events will be open to the public.

Major General Charles J. Timmes, Washington, D.C., currently director of Remote Area Conflict, Advanced Research Projects Agency, U.S. Department of Defense, will be the reviewing officer and also the speaker of the evening at the regimental banquet Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Nicollet hotel. His topic---"Experiences in Viet Nam"---will be based upon his previous position, Commanding General, USMAAG (United States Military Assistance Advisory Group). He was in Viet Nam from 1962-64.

During World War II General Timmes commanded a battalion of the 507th Parachute Infantry regiment which participated in two combat jumps---Normandy and the crossing of the Rhine. He served in Korea, 1956-58, and was assistant division commander of the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., from 1959 until he was sent to Viet Nam.

Following unit and individual registration from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday at the Nicollet hotel, the units will practice in Williams arena on the University campus where the major parts of the assembly will be held Saturday.

8 a.m.----- Infantry Drill (Squad)
9:15 a.m.----- Infantry Drill (Platoon)
9:45 a.m. - noon----- Individual drill and exhibition teams
1:30 - 3 p.m. ----- Exhibition teams.

The rifle teams will fire on the University rifle range, ground floor, Armory, from 8 a.m. to noon.

Minneapolis---Many shapes, sizes and patterns of modern pottery, jewelry, rugs and fabric samples will be seen in a unique traveling exhibit to be displayed in various towns and cities throughout Minnesota beginning April 10.

The first-of-its-kind exhibition will include 70 individual works by 30 artists, all members of the Minnesota Craftsmen's Council---an organization of professional craft artists such as potters, woodworkers, weavers and metalworkers.

The display, which will stay in each town on its schedule for three to four weeks, will open April 10-30 in Mankato, in the city hall quarters of Fine Arts, Inc. All arrangements are being made by Huldah Curl, University of Minnesota arts coordinator, a joint appointment of the University's General Extension Division and Agricultural Extension Service.

Included in the exhibition will be pottery in many varied forms: vases, pots, cups, teapots, bowls; silver pendants in interesting designs and figures; a wooden table made of small squares and pieces of different woods; two unusual rugs; and fabrics in great variety, for many purposes: woven place mats, wall handings, room dividers, large swatches of material died by the silk-screen process, and other samples made by the tie-dye and the batik (wax-resist) processes.

Following its stay in Mankato, the exhibit will move to Waseca, May 2-22; Anoka, May 24-June 13; Owatonna, June 16-July 7; Montevideo, July 9-30; Sleepy Eye, for part of August; and Worthington, Sept. 4-Oct. 2.

It then will continue to other sites throughout the school year 1966-67, and into the summer of 1967. Further information or bookings for towns not yet scheduled can be had by contacting Miss Curl at Nolte Center for Continuing Education, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn. 55455. Rental fee for three weeks is $50.

The Minnesota Craftsmen's Council, organized in April 1965 and affiliated with the American Craftsmen's Council, has a professional membership of 36 artists, most of them located in the Twin Cities area. President is Peter Leach of Mendota, a potter; Elizabeth Anderson, a St. Paul weaver, is vice president; Betsy Bryant, Minneapolis potter, is secretary, and Warren MacKenzie, a Stillwater potter, is treasurer.

Minneapolis---Some 20 professional persons concerned with employment security will attend a six-day "Conference on an Active Manpower Policy," to be held at the University of Minnesota in May.

The conference, scheduled for May 22-27, will feature 10 major speakers who will take turns presiding during morning and afternoon sessions. The meeting will be sponsored by the U.S. Bureau of Employment Security, which will select top employment personnel to participate. John F. Henning, the U.S. undersecretary of labor, will welcome participants on Sunday, May 22.

Goals and objectives of policies on manpower will be discussed and clarified during the first day's sessions. On succeeding days, ways to obtain those objectives will be discussed.

James Tobin, Sterling professor at Yale University, will speak the morning of Monday, May 23, on "Economic Objectives of the Federal Government." The afternoon meeting will be on the topic "Manpower Policy---Its Concepts and Goals," with E. Wight Bakke, also Sterling professor and director of Yale's Labor and Management Center, as speaker.

The morning of May 24, the subject of "Patterns and Determinants of Labor Force Utilization" will be discussed by Sar Levitan, research professor of labor economics at George Washington University and economic consultant to the Upjohn Institute for Employment Research. That afternoon, Harold Goldstein, assistant commissioner of the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, will talk on "The Essential Role of Adequate Manpower Forecasting."

On May 25, Professor Edward Gross of the University of Washington sociology department, will speak on "The Sociology of Work---Cultural Values." That afternoon, Lloyd L. Lofquist, psychology professor, and Rene V. Dawis, professor of industrial relations, both of the University of Minnesota, will speak.

William G. Bowen, Princeton University professor and consultant to the President's Council of Economic Advisers, will discuss "Human Investment and Education" the morning of May 26, while that afternoon, Professor Jack Stieber, director of the School of Labor and Industrial Relations at Michigan State University, will talk on "Manpower Adjustments to Automation and Technological Change in Western Europe."

The conference will close following a May 27 morning session on "An Active Manpower Policy---What Should It Be and Why?", discussed by Economics Professor William Haber, dean of the College of Literature, Science and Arts at the University of Michigan.

Each session's speaker will be followed by a panel of two persons who will react to the talk and lead discussion.

'U' SLATES SEMINAR FOR BUSINESSMEN AT MANAGERIAL LEVEL

(FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, APRIL 3)

A five-part "Management Development Seminar," taking up problems and decisions a businessman at the managerial level must deal with, will be presented by the University of Minnesota during April and May.

Each of the five sessions will occupy a Wednesday afternoon and evening, and a Thursday morning. Dates of the meetings are April 20-21; April 27-28; May 4-5; May 11-12; and May 18-19. All meetings will be held at the Thunderbird Motel, Bloomington.

Faculty members will be drawn from many places in the United States and Canada, and have been selected "because of their specialized knowledge in each of the areas of management and their consulting experience, plus the fact that they have previously directed seminar groups of this type," according to Peter Rosko, University assistant professor of finance and director of continuing business education.

Applicants must be nominated and recommended by their company. The program is designed for managers who have recently assumed increased responsibilities in their organization, or who might be expected to assume them soon.

Anyone interested in attending should apply soon, Rosko said. Applications received by Friday, (April 8) will be given preferential treatment.

The program is designed to be useful for persons from small to very large firms of any type---manufacturing, service, etc.---and is intended to give participants the latest information on business management. Those attending will be instructed in preparing a company for change, coping with conflict, sharpening their decision making and delegating tasks and responsibilities, Rosko said.

"A business game will run throughout the seminar to simulate a number of typical decisions a manager must make, with participants involved in role-playing situations," he added. Computers in business and the impact of union and government policies upon business also will be dealt with.

Sessions will run from 1:15 p.m. each of the five Wednesdays till around 9 p.m. Participants will reconvene at 7:30 a.m. Thursday mornings and continue till noon. With this schedule, Rosko pointed out, the participants will be able to spend part of each seminar day at their offices.

The 10 topics to be taken up at the 10 days' meetings are management of conflict management of change; management of personnel; investment decision making; control and delegation; management and computers; management and social change; management and unions; management and government; and a computerized business game.

Faculty members will include Paul V. Grambsch, dean of the University School of Business Administration; Robert A. Willson, dean of the Banff School of Advanced Management, Banff, Alberta; Edward Gross, professor of sociology, University of Washington; Howard Schaller, professor of business economics and business policy, Indiana University; Francis W. Hayes, senior associate in R.A. Willson Associates, Minneapolis; Edward A. Kappus, instruction manager with IBM Education Center, Minneapolis; and various University personnel.

The seminar will be presented by the University's Graduate School of Business Administration and General Extension Division, in cooperation with the management development committees of both the Minneapolis and the St. Paul Area Chambers of Commerce.

Anyone who wishes further information or registration forms should write to Peter Rosko, School of Business Administration, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455; or telephone 373-3680.

'ETERNAL ROME'
TO BE SHOWN AT 'U' THURSDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Eternal Rome," a color film narrated by the producer, Nicol Smith, will be presented as a convocation Thursday (April 7) at the University of Minnesota.

The film will be shown at 11:30 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium, open free to the public. The University Convocations committee is the sponsor.

Of special interest this week will be the sections of the film showing the Vatican City on an Easter Sunday. Also included in the films at the Vatican are shots of the Pope and cardinals at the crowning of a new saint and pictures of the Swiss guards taking their oath.

Pictures of the famous fountains of Rome and many of the architectural wonders of the ancient city are included, according to Smith.

'U' WORLD AFFAIRS SURVEY COMPARES PUBLIC OPINION, 'KNOWLEDGEABLE' OPINION

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
APRIL 4, 1966

Minneapolis---"People who are really knowledgeable about world affairs hold very different opinions from the mass public; and, even more important, very different opinions from the college graduates who we thought were well in advance of the rest of our citizens."

That statement describes the major findings of a just-released booklet comparing opinions of Minnesotans on world affairs in the years 1960-61. The statement was made by William C. Rogers, director of the University of Minnesota World Affairs Center, who prepared the booklet along with Barbara Stuhler, assistant director of the center, and Donald Koenig, former research assistant.

The booklet is titled "A Comparative Study of Informed Opinion and General Public Opinion in Minnesota on Selected Issues of U.S. Foreign Policy" and is Research Report No. 3 from the University's General Extension Division.

The study compares the findings of the Minnesota Poll, conducted among the general public by the Minneapolis Tribune, with the findings of a survey among 79 persons considered to be very knowledgeable in world affairs.*

Questions used by the Minnesota Poll were sent to the 79 persons during the 13-month period from early August 1960 to late September 1961. Ten questionnaires asking 67 separate questions were sent out to the 79 individuals during this period, with a high rate of return on every questionnaire.

An example of the booklet's findings are the responses given by the two groups to the question, asked in early May 1961 after the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, "Do you approve or disapprove of the way the United States government has dealt with Fidel Castro and his government in Cuba?" The World Affairs Center panel registered 12 per cent approved, compared with 55 per cent of the general public. The panel showed 73 per cent disapproved, compared with 28 per cent of the general public. The panel registered 15 per cent gave "other answers" and nobody had "no opinion;" whereas, the general public gave no "other answers" and 17 per cent held "no opinion."

Another example is a question asked in September 1961, at the time of the Berlin crisis during which the Communists built the Berlin Wall: "Do you think the United States should or should not risk war with Russia over Berlin?" The World Affairs Center panel registered 79 per cent "Yes," 8 per cent "No," and 13 per cent "other opinion." The general public answered, in contrast, with 51 per cent "Yes," 40 per cent "No," 1 per cent "other opinion" and 8 per cent "no opinion."

Using the latter example and others, the authors of the study concluded that "the panel was conciliatory during what looked like prime negotiating time and firm when the vital interests of the Western world were menaced. The general public reacted oppositely."

While the authors remark that they had not really expected the general public to agree with the panel of "knowledgeables," they were surprised and worried by the evidence that whenever the general public sampling was broken down according to the subjects' degree of education, the college-educated segment of the population tended to agree much more with the public as a whole than with the panel.

"Answers from both the Minnesota Poll respondents and the college-educated respondents tended to be vague and sporadic," the authors write. The authors also suggest that "the fact of college education is not enough. Many forces must be brought into play to endow citizens with wisdom in world affairs, including adult education and continuing education.

"The task is not an easy one," they conclude, "but the consequences of failure might be extremely serious."

-U N S-

*The 79 world affairs "knowledgeables" were selected by a rigorous process by personnel from the World Affairs Center and the International Relations Center, with help from the director of the Minnesota Poll and certain educators and businessmen. Out of a final list of 90 persons, only six failed to reply to the invitation to participate and five more declined to participate.

Each of the 79 was judged to have "a sound and broad knowledge of world affairs, a good measure of analytical and interpretive ability, acknowledgement by his peers as a knowing person in this field, and a position of potential influence on the actions or opinions of others."

The participants included 28 educators (mostly teachers of the social sciences in colleges), 22 business and professional persons, 12 voluntary organization leaders, nine journalists, five ministers and three political leaders. Of the 79, 67 came from the Twin Cities metropolitan area, 12 from eight other communities; 64 were men, 15 women.

'U' ART FACULTY TO SELL WORKS FOR SCHOLARSHIP FUND

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Sculpture, painting and prints done by 17 artists---all members of the University of Minnesota art department faculty---will go on sale Wednesday (April 6) at the University Gallery in Northrop Memorial auditorium. Proceeds of the sale will go to the department's student scholarship fund.

Included in the sale are works by such well-known artists as Malcolm Myers, Katherine Nash, Herman Rowan and Walter Quirt as well as many pieces by newer faculty members.

"Many of these artists exhibit and have their things for sale in New York and West Coast galleries," Miss Betty Maurstad, gallery curator, pointed out. "And the prices charged there are far higher than we have marked the items for this sale."

Prices for the gallery sale will range from $2 (for a set of Warren MacKenzie's mugs) to several thousand dollars for some of the oil paintings.

Opening of the sale-show will be held from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in Room 305 Northrop. The sale will continue through April 26. The gallery is open school hours on weekdays.

CANADIAN SURGEON TO GIVE O'BRIEN
LECTURE AT U OF M

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The William O'Brien Lectureship this year brings to the University of Minnesota a noted Canadian surgeon, Dr. T.H.C. Barclay, senior clinic associate of the Allan Blair Memorial Clinic, Regina, Sask.

Dr. Barclay is acting as visiting professor to the University's College of Medical Sciences for the first two weeks in April. He will give a formal lecture entitled "Cancer of the Stomach," at 4 p.m. Wednesday (April 6) in Room 125 Mayo.

Dr. Barclay is a highly respected surgeon, according to Dr. Joseph B. Aust, University professor of surgery, and also directs therapy for cancer treatment in the province of Saskatchewan. He is a Scotsman, and took his medical training in Glasgow. He also took post-graduate training in surgery at the University of Minnesota.

The lectureship was established in memory of Dr. William O'Brien, well-known director of the University's Continuing Medical Education Program and first president of the Minnesota division of the American Cancer Society, which sponsors the lectureship.

'FACES OF FREEDOM'
PAINTINGS TO OPEN
WEDNESDAY AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---"Faces of Freedom"---40 paintings by leading American artists of events and personalities that have made America great---will be shown at the University of Minnesota Wednesday (April 6) through April 17.

The show, presented by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance company in cooperation with the universities of the Intercollegiate Conference (Big Ten), will be on display from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. in Coffman Gallery in Coffman Memorial Union. It will be open free to the public.

University President O. Meredith Wilson will join with Admiral John L. McCrea, USN (Ret.), vice president of the John Hancock company, in the exhibit's presentation ceremony at 3:30 p.m. Thursday (April 7).

"Faces of Freedom" began its national tour at Independence National Park in Philadelphia on July 4, 1962, and since has been seen by more than seven million Americans at the New York World's Fair, the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry and the Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, Mich. The exhibit's current visit to schools in the Big Ten marks the first time the paintings have been shown throughout a major academic system.

Portrayed in the exhibit are leaders of our nation's colorful past, including statesmen, military heroes, authors, inventors, explorers, scientists, composers, athletes and national figures in education, law and medicine.

'TRAILS WEST'
TV SERIES WILL FOLLOW PIONEERS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---"Trails West," a television program designed to help today's vacationing-camping "pioneers" rediscover the country covered a hundred years ago by their ancestors, will be presented this spring on the University of Minnesota Television Hour, a service of the General Extension Division.

The series of 13 programs will begin Thursday (April 7) with "Preparations for the Great Trek West" and will be shown at 9 p.m. every Thursday through June 30 by KTCA-TV, Channel 2.

"Trails West" host will be Rodney C. Loehr, University history professor. His guests will be these members and staff of the Minnesota Historical Society: Richard B. Dunsworth, Jeanne Dunsworth, Russell W. Fridley, Robert C. Wheeler, Alan R. Woolworth, Neil Mattson, Arthur L. Larsen and Helen White.

As the history of the westward movement across the continent from the "taking off place"---Independence, Mo.---is given, Professor Loehr said, the original trail will be shown and related to modern highways. Famous landmarks; highways and back roads that lead to out-of-the-way places; camp grounds and the most interesting places to stop and camp; all will be shown. In addition, pertinent reading material for young and old will be suggested and the original stories of the pioneers will be told as the scenes unfold.

Professor Loehr and his guests have prepared a "Trails West Tour Guide" illustrated with 19 maps to facilitate either actually making the trip, or to increase enjoyment of watching the program. The guide may be obtained by sending 25 cents, to cover postage, handling and material, to Trails West, University Television, Minneapolis, 55455.

(MORE)

While the first eight programs on "Trails West" will deal with the emigration to California and Oregon, Professor Loehr points out that Minnesota too was "West" for many of the settlers who came from New England, New York and Pennsylvania and settled in this part of the country. For this reason, the last five programs in the series have been prepared specially by the staff of the Minnesota Historical Society to show the exploring that was done in Northern Minnesota. The Voyageurs' highway and the Red River Oxcart trail----still visible as it wends its way northward across the plains----will be traveled again via these television programs.

The "Trails West" broadcasts:

- April 7 -- "Preparations for the Great Trek West"
- April 14-- "The California-Oregon Trail: The First Month Out"
- April 21-- "On to the South Pass: Leaving the Plains for the Mountains"
- April 28-- "The Road to Oregon"
- May 5 -- "Through the Mountains to Oregon"
- May 12 -- "The California Trail: From Parting of the Ways to Donner Pass"
- May 19 -- "To the Gold Fields: From Donner Pass to Sutters Fort"
- May 26 -- "The Santa Fe Trail"
- June 2 -- "The Voyageurs' Highway"
- June 9 -- "Minnesota Waterways"
- June 16 -- "The Red River Oxcart Trail"
- June 23 -- "Overland Trails West: From Minnesota"
- June 30 -- "Minnesota's Early Road System"

SOLID GOLD CHECK

Minneapolis---A solid gold check for 1.1 million dollars will be the star in a giant Victory Jubilee celebration at the University of Minnesota Tuesday, April 19.

The check will be presented by Minnesota Masons to University officials, marking the successful completion of a one-year fund drive among state Masonic Lodges. The money is being used to double the size of the University's Masonic Memorial hospital. Dedication of the two-story hospital addition will take place this fall.

The Victory Jubilee will be held at 8:30 p.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium, which will be filled with Masons and their wives from all over the state for the occasion, along with University doctors, nurses, scientists and officials who have a special interest in cancer research and activities.

Before the ceremonies begin, the University Concert Band Ensemble will play. A mace bearer, faculty marshals in costume, and the presentation of the colors by University ROTC members also will lend festivity to the occasion.

Mortimer B. Miley, Grand Master of Minnesota Masons, will make the opening remarks, followed by Clyde Hegman, president of Masonic Memorial Hospital Fund, Inc., and campaign chairman, who will tell what the campaign has meant to Minnesota Masons. Miley and Hegman then will present the solid gold check to University President O. Meredith Wilson and to Dr. Charles W. Mayo, chairman of the University Board of Regents, each of whom will speak briefly on what the gift means to the University.

Dr. B. J. Kennedy, who heads the Cancer Research committee at University Hospitals, will be introduced to the audience and will introduce others seated on the stage. In addition to those named previously, these will include Gertrude Gilman, director of University Hospitals; Dean Robert B. Howard of the University Medical School, Regents of the University and other hospital and Masonic officials.

A highlight of the evening will be a half-hour color documentary film on the Masonic Memorial Hospital, prepared by WCCO-TV, which will be shown to the Northrop audience at approximately the same time as it is being telecast to the public over Channel 4, at 9:30 p.m. April 19. The documentary is being prepared under the supervision of James Dooley of the WCCO-TV news staff.

HEALTH MATERIALS
TAPED IN MANKATO, USED IN AUSTIN COURSE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A state college and a junior college in Minnesota are cooperating in presenting a health course to some of their students via video tape.

The project is part of a statewide television feasibility study being made for the State Legislature, directed by Paul H. Cashman, a University of Minnesota assistant vice president.

The course is called "Healthful Living" and is taught at Mankato State College by Professor Einar Olsen, chairman of Mankato's department of health education. The course was video taped and now is being presented at Austin junior college, where two health instructors are using the tapes.

The instructors---Winifred Leonard and Rex Sala---each teach two sections of health: one using their regular lecture-demonstration methods and one utilizing the Mankato tapes. Both courses carry two credits for students. The tapes also are being used in an evening adult education program.

The television feasibility project provided Austin junior college with the set of tapes, television receivers and video playback equipment. Austin students are operating the equipment.

The feasibility study is concerned with all elements and problems relating to the inter-institutional use of courses and materials via television in the state of Minnesota.

PURE MATHEMATICS
RESEARCH GRANT
GIVEN 2 'U' PROFS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A $43,100 grant from the National Science Foundation for research in pure mathematics at the University of Minnesota was announced today by Professor Heinrich W. Guggenheimer and Assistant Professor William F. Pohl, both of the School of Mathematics in the University's Institute of Technology.

The grant provides salary support, travel expenses, publication fees and funds for student research assistantships. The research project is titled "Integral and Differential Geometry."

"We're both working on similar problems," said Professor Pohl, "but we use different methods. We won't be working as a team, but we will talk to each other."

Guggenheimer came to Minnesota in 1960 as an associate professor. He did his undergraduate work at the University of Basel, Switzerland, and graduate work in Zurich, and has taught at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and Bar Ilan University at Ramat Gan, Israel.

Pohl received his bachelor of arts and master of science degrees at the University of Chicago, and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of California at Berkeley in 1961. He joined the University of Minnesota faculty in 1964.

"Evaluation of Personnel in the School Organization" will be the theme of an inservice workshop for school administrators to be held April 12-14 and 19-21 in Coffey hall on the St. Paul campus, University of Minnesota.

Participating in this workshop will be 25 metropolitan-area elementary and secondary school principals and central office administrators.

The workshop will be sponsored by the Educational Research and Development Council of the Twin Cities Metropolitan Area, Inc. (ERDC), and the University's General Extension Division.

Using the technique of simulation, the workshop participants will be placed in the role of an administrator in fictitious "Jefferson School District," and during the six sessions will explore recent research and theory related to evaluation, personal self-evaluation as administrators, and the relationship of research on human behavior to educational administration.

Faculty for the workshop will include Assistant Professor Neal C. Nickerson, Jr., and Associate Professor Ronald T. Lambert, both of the University's department of educational administration.

The ERDC, a non-profit corporation with 38 participating school districts, has its headquarters at the University. LeRoy V. Norsted, superintendent of the Osseo schools, is president; Van D. Mueller, assistant professor of educational administration, serves as executive secretary.

The 38 member school districts of the ERDC are Anoka, Bloomington, Brooklyn Center, Burnsville, Centennial, Chaska, Eden Prairie, Edina-Morningside, Farmington, Forest Lake, Fridley, Golden Valley, Hopkins, Inver Grove-Pine Bend, Lakeville, Mahtomedi, Minneapolis, Minnetonka, Mound, New Prague, North St. Paul-Maplewood, Orono, Osseo, Prior Lake, Richfield, Robbinsdale, Rosemount, St. Anthony, St. Francis, St. Louis Park, St. Paul, Shakopee, Spring Lake Park, Stillwater, Waconia, Wayzata, West St. Paul and White Bear Lake. Alexandria is an associate member; Hennepin county schools and University high school also are represented.

DUTCH ARTIST
TO TALK AT 'U' ON ARCHITECTURE

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Two different lectures on "The Concept of Space-Time" by Joest Baljeu, editor of "Structure" magazine and authority of Mondrian and Theo van Doesburg, will be presented at the University of Minnesota Monday (April 11) and Wednesday (April 13).

Baljeu, currently teaching three-dimensional design at the Minneapolis School of Art, will speak on "Cubism, Neo-Plasticism and Constructivism" in the lecture on Monday and on "The Architecture of the De Stijl" in the Wednesday lecture.

Both will be given at 3:30 p.m. in Room 25 Architecture building on the Minneapolis campus, and both will be open free to the public.

A native of Holland, Baljeu attended the Amsterdam Institute of Design and began painting in 1940. In 1955 he turned to massive reliefs, followed by spatial constructions in 1956. Parallel with this last development he began engaging in architectural designs. From 1957-61 he collaborated with Dick van Woerkom on studio-houses.

He has had several exhibitions and his work appears in private collections and in museums. He has had two books published: "Mondrian or Miro" and "Attempt at a Theory of Synthesist Plastic Expression."

In 1958-59 Baljeu lectured at the University of Saskatchewan, Canada, and he is now a member of the faculty of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts, The Hague.

The talks will be sponsored by the University's School of Architecture.

CLOWNS, CAN-CAN LINES REHEARSE FOR
'U' CAMPUS CARNIVAL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis----Cavorting clowns, can-can line rehearsals and chatter about "props" and "hit that baby spot" on the University of Minnesota Minneapolis campus herald the coming annual performance of the University Campus Carnival Friday and Saturday, April 15 and 16.

The two performances of the 53rd Campus Carnival will be held from 7 p.m. to midnight in the University Field House, University and 19th aves. S.E., Minneapolis.

Tickets at $1 will be sold at the door. Proceeds will go, as usual, to University scholarship funds, according to Anna Marie Huston, Student Activities Bureau counselor for the carnival. "We are aiming to top the 1965 high of more than $10,000 net proceeds," she said.

Funds from "Carny" will be allocated to SPAN (Student Project for Amity Among Nations), the International Student Exchange Scholarship, Project Awareness scholarships and the Social Service Council's general scholarship fund, Miss Huston explained.

While from 200 to 300 University students appear as barkers, pitchmen, dancers, chorus girls, actors in skits and participants in running the food and the game booths, some 2,500 students actually work at the affair, Miss Huston said. "They do the behind-the-scenes work of carpenters, scene painters, electrical crews, costumers, scene designers, script writers and musicians and musical directors," she pointed out.

A total of 58 student groups---from fraternities, sororities, residence units, religious foundations, special interest groups and governing boards---frequently combine forces (one men's group plus one women's group) in presenting the carnival games and skits.

Currently scheduled for appearances at this year's "Carny" are clowns, ballyhoos and musical "combos;" a variety of food concessions---hot dogs, near beer, pizza and popcorn; such games as table tennis, a "computer" game, archery and "Take Your Draft Board to Court;" and special shows such as "Super Skier," a Wild West show, Shakespearean take-offs and a parody on what happens when Columbus meets the Minnesota Vikings.

Some 16 clown acts are scheduled to enliven the campus scene during the pre-Carny week and will appear at several children's hospitals in the Twin Cities area.

AT UMD APRIL 15

The Board of Regents of the University of Minnesota will meet at 9:30 a.m. Friday, April 15, in the Campus Club of the University of Minnesota, Duluth.

ROGERS TO ATTEND
MEETING AT OXFORD

Professor William C. Rogers, director of the World Affairs Center of the University of Minnesota's General Extension Division, will be one of 20 participants in a colloquium at the University of Oxford (England) on the Promotion of International Understanding Through Adult Education. The meeting, from April 24-29, will include adult educators from Denmark, The Netherlands, West Germany, France and Switzerland, as well as England and the United States.

'U' PROFS' BOOK
SUMMARY BEST-SELLER

The Small Business Administration has reported to the University of Minnesota's School of Business Administration that a four-page summary of a book by two University professors, "The Franchise System of Distribution," is one of its all-time best-sellers. The SBA had distributed 62,755 copies of the summary as of Jan. 1, 1966; 16,881 of those were in 1965. The book was written by Professors Edwin H. Lewis, chairman of marketing, and Robert S. Hancock, marketing.

'U' ARCHITECTURE
GRAD WINS PRIZE

A University of Minnesota student who earned a bachelor's degree in architecture in 1963 has been chosen as one of 16 winners of Rome Prize Fellowships, awarded by the American Academy in Rome. The one-year grant, which carries the possibility of renewal, begins Oct. 1, 1966, and provides $3,650, free residence and studio, and use of the Academy facilities, in an attempt "to encourage promising young American artists and scholars by enabling them to pursue their interests independently in Rome." The University winner is Austris J. Vitols, a native of Latvia, who studied architecture at Massachusetts Institute of Technology last year and currently is a designer with a Cambridge, Mass., architectural firm.

U OF WASHINGTON
PROF TO TALK ON
'RADICALISM IN RUSSIA'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Donald W. Treadgold, University of Washington history professor, will deliver the third in a series of eight lectures on "Russia's Golden Age" at 8 p.m. Tuesday (April 12) in Mayo Memorial auditorium, University of Minnesota.

Admission is by series ticket or individual tickets sold at the door.

Treadgold will discuss "Radicalism in Russia 1894-1914." The series, sponsored by the World Affairs Center of the University's General Extension Division, is exploring the subject of what Russia was like during the last two decades before World War I, in the dying years of the czarist regime.

Treadgold, who joined the Washington faculty in 1949, has been chairman of the Russian and East European faculty seminars since 1955. He was an exchange professor in the U.S.S.R. at the Academy of Science's Institute of History in 1965, and a visiting professor at the National Taiwan University in 1959.

He has written the books "Lenin and His Rivals" and "The Great Siberian Migration" and a textbook, "Twentieth-Century Russia," as well as contributing to various scholarly journals and other magazines, and from 1961-65 he was managing editor of "Slavic Review." He is a member of the board of directors of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies.

Professor Treadgold was a Rhodes scholar in 1947 and has held a Guggenheim fellowship. He earned a doctor of philosophy degree from Oxford University (England) and a master of arts degree from Harvard University.

ON OPERA MUSIC

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Edward Downes, critic, music historian and quizmaster of the Metropolitan Opera Saturday-afternoon radio broadcasts, will deliver two convocation talks on phases of opera music at the University of Minnesota Tuesday and Wednesday (April 12 and 13).

"The Power of Symbols in Religious Music" will be his topic at the 11:30 a.m. combined music hour-convocation Tuesday in Scott hall auditorium.

Wednesday he will speak on "The Love-Death Theme in Romantic Opera" at 10 a.m. in the North Star ballroom in the St. Paul campus Student Union.

Both talks will be open free to the public, sponsored by the University Convocations committee.

Downes, who was an assistant professor of music history at the University from 1950-56, writes the New York Philharmonic Symphony program notes and is a faculty member of the Wagner Festival Master Class of Bayreuth, West Germany. He has taught college music history at Harvard University and at Wellesley College, and was the music critic of the Boston Transcript and assistant critic for the New York Times and the New York Post.

He was trained at the Manhattan School of Music, Columbia College, the University of Munich, the University of Paris, and at Harvard University where he received a doctor of philosophy degree in music history.

FERRIS WHEEL
TO WHIRL AT 'U'
CAMPUS CARNIVAL

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

A 40-foot ferris wheel will blaze out a welcome to the annual Campus Carnival at the University of Minnesota Friday and Saturday (April 15 and 16).

The traditional carnival attraction---seldom seen at Campus Carny---will be placed on the lawn of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, 1821 University ave. S.E., just across University avenue from the Field House, site of "Carny," according to A.T.O. members who decided to do their part to publicize and contribute to "Carny" this year.

Weather permitting, the giant wheel---provided, operated and insured by the O'Neil Amusement company---will be erected late Wednesday evening and will operate during the moving-in and setting-up operations of "Carny" on Thursday.

Ferris wheel rides will cost twenty-five cents, with all profits contributed to the "Carny" fund for University scholarships.

BENNINGTON PROF
LECTURE THURSDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Professor Howard Nemerov of the literature and languages department, Bennington College, Bennington, Vt. will discuss "Speculative Equations: Poems, Poets, Computers" in the eighth annual Joseph Warren Beach Memorial lecture Thursday (April 14) at the University of Minnesota.

The free public lecture will be given at 8 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium.

The annual Beach Memorial lectures---started in 1959---were endowed by the family and friends of Professor Beach, former chairman of the University's English department who died in 1957. They were to deal "preferably on a subject having to do with poetry, fiction or criticism."

Professor Beach, who had been chairman of the English department from 1938 until his retirement in 1948, was an alumnus of the University who first joined the faculty immediately after his graduation in 1900. He taught here, as an assistant in rhetoric, for four years before going to Harvard University where he received master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees. He returned to the University faculty and to the English department in 1907 as an assistant professor of English and was named professor in 1924.

Professor Nemerov, who was a visiting lecturer in English at the University during the 1958-59 year, is a poet and novelist who won the award for the novel from the National Institute of Arts and Letters for 1961. He has been a member of the Bennington faculty since 1948.

BAVARIAN THEATRE
DRAMATIST TO SPEAK
AT 'U' ON OPERETTA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The "Splendour and Decline of Operetta in Europe---Aspects of the History and Social Significance of Light Musical Theatre" will be discussed in a University of Minnesota convocation Thursday (April 14).

Fritz Andr'e Kracht, actor, director, writer, resident-director and head of the department of dramaturgy at the Bavarian State Theatre, Munich, Germany, will speak at 11:30 a.m. in Northrop Memorial auditorium. The convocation, open free to the public, is sponsored by the University Convocations committee.

Kracht, one of the first German students to come to the United States after World War II, entered Yale University drama school in 1950. After receiving his doctor of philosophy degree there, he worked as a stage and television actor and director in both the U.S. and in Germany.

He has been resident-director and head of the department of dramaturgy at the Bavarian State Theatre on the Gärtnerplatz (the Opera Comique) in Munich for many years. This theater, together with the East-Berlin "Komische Oper," is Europe's most distinguished institution in the field of comic opera, operetta and musical.

Kracht now is engaged exclusively in directing musical productions and plays and translating American and British stage works for the German theater. He has produced a German version of Noel Coward's comedy, "Fallen Angels," and directed Herb Gardner's comedy, "A Thousand Clowns," in Munich. He has just returned from Salzburg, Austria, where he directed Jacques Offenback's Operu buffa "La Belle Helene."

HIGHER EDUCATION

(FOR RELEASE TUESDAY, APRIL 12)

E. W. Ziebarth, dean of the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Minnesota, today (April 12) was named to a six-man team of American educational leaders to make an intensive study of the organization of German higher education.

The Foreign Office of the Federal Republic of Germany made the announcement. The team will undertake its mission in late June and July, 1966. Others on the team will be deans or presidents of five major American colleges of arts and sciences.

Dean Ziebarth, who was named to the U.S. National Commission on the Arts and Sciences in January, also will do research related to international communications, especially on the use of the electronic media for propaganda purposes in both East and West Germany. Many of his international-affairs analysis programs have been beamed to East Germany and the Soviet Union by the Voice of America over a period of years and he has received international recognition in this field.

Minneapolis---In response to a large number of requests, the first part of a course on the Uniform Commercial Code, which will become effective in Minnesota July 1, will be repeated in one session at the University of Minnesota.

Part I of the course has been presented to lawyers and bankers throughout the state. The extra session, for those who missed it, will be held on June 4 in Mayo Memorial auditorium. Part I deals with Articles I through X of the new code, except for Article IX.

Part II of the course, which deals with Article IX alone, is being offered in nine sessions around the state during April. These sessions, all of which start at 9:30 a.m., will be in the following places on these dates:

Minneapolis: Mayo Memorial auditorium, University of Minnesota, Saturday

Moorhead: Holiday Inn, Saturday (April 16)

Grand Rapids: Rainbow Inn, April 22

St. Cloud: Germain Hotel, April 22

Duluth: Hotel Duluth, April 23

Montevideo: Hotel Hunt, April 23

Mankato: Inn Towne Motel, April 29

Rochester: Kahler Hotel, April 30

Minneapolis: Coffman Memorial Union, University of Minnesota, April 30

Registration fee for both Part I (June 4) and Part II is $40, which pays for the course plus a bound copy of the speakers' outlines, the Minnesota Uniform Commercial Code Deskbook (available only to registrants of this course), and a choice of one of the following two publications: "Banks and the Uniform Commercial Code" by Carl W. Funk or "Secured Transactions" by Oscar Spivack.

The course, taught by law professors and lawyers experienced in the Code's operation, is being presented by Continuing Legal Education, a joint department of the University of Minnesota General Extension Division and the Minnesota State Bar Association. Further information is available from Austin Anderson, director of Continuing Legal Education, 338 Nolte Center, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455, or telephone (Area 612), 373-5386.

2 STUDENTS FIRST
CHURCHILL SCHOLARS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Two University of Minnesota science students have been chosen for the first time as Winston Churchill scholars, it was announced today by Francis M. Boddy, associate and acting dean of the University's Graduate School.

The two students are David B. Kittelson, 320 13th ave. S.E., and Richard R. Erickson, 3629 24th ave. S., both of Minneapolis. Kittelson is a second-year graduate student in mechanical engineering, and Erickson will receive a bachelor of arts degree in astronomy this June.

"Only ten students throughout the United States are selected," said Richard L. Meyer, assistant to the dean of the Graduate School, "so we are extremely pleased that two of these ten are from Minnesota."

The Churchill scholarships provide $3,000 for each student to spend one year studying at Churchill College, Cambridge University, England. The purposes of the scholarships are to provide American students a year of free study in another land, to further train scientists to meet the growing needs of science and technology, and to pool the knowledge and techniques of science as developed in different countries.

Churchill scholarships are given annually, but institutions are asked to submit candidates only every other year. The University of Minnesota has been participating in the Churchill program for three years, and these are the first students selected from the University.

MENTAL RETARDATION

Minneapolis---Some 80 public health nurses from throughout Minnesota will attend a two-day course on "Mental Retardation for Public Health Nursing" Thursday and Friday (April 14-15) at the University of Minnesota.

The course is the first of a two-part program, with the follow-up session to be this fall. The spring course is designed to offer background knowledge in causes of mental retardation, current philosophy of treatment, available resources for evaluation and treatment, and home training techniques for the young retarded child. The fall course will focus on nursing skills in working with the mentally retarded and their families.

Dr. Henry Leland, coordinator of professional training, education and demonstration at Parsons State Hospital in Parsons, Kansas, will be a special guest lecturer. Dr. Leland will speak at 9 a.m. and at 1 p.m. Thursday on, respectively, "What is a Mentally Retarded Child?" and "Basic Ideas on Current Philosophy of Treatment" for mentally retarded children.

The course is sponsored by the Minnesota Department of Health through the Nolte Center for Continuing Education of the University's General Extension Division. All sessions of the course will be held in Nolte Center.

U OF M ALUMNUS
HONORED FOR WORK IN ATOMIC ENERGY

Minneapolis---Paul R. Vanstrum, member of the technical management staff of the Oak Ridge gaseous diffusion plant for the Union Carbide Corporation, has been named to receive the Ernest O. Lawrence Memorial Award for 1966. Vanstrum is a 1942 graduate of the University of Minnesota with a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering.

Vanstrum is one of five young American scientists honored, according to Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, for recent meritorious contributions in the field of atomic energy. Each will receive a medal, a citation and $5,000.

The award was established by the AEC in December, 1959, in honor of the late Ernest O. Lawrence, inventor of the cyclotron and director of the radiation laboratory at the University of California, Berkeley and Livermore. Five scientists were presented with the award in 1960 and five scientists have received the award annually since that time.

'U' SPRING-QUARTER
8% OVER YEAR AGO

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Spring-quarter attendance at the University of Minnesota totals 36,799, or 2,737 more than the 34,062 students who were attending classes during the spring quarter a year ago, according to R. E. Summers, dean of admissions and records.

The increase for the spring quarter, which opened March 28, over the corresponding quarter in 1965 is 8 per cent, Summers pointed out. Fall and winter quarter enrollments this school year ran 10 and 9 per cent, respectively, ahead of those of the corresponding terms of last year.

Although these percentage figures might suggest some slackening of University growth, possibly due to controls established in the fall of 1965, Dean Summers noted that decline from the winter to the spring term, 1966, was just over 7 per cent, as against a normal drop of 8 per cent. This may suggest a greater holding power on the part of students, Summers observed.

The current student total includes 24,376 men and 12,423 women, indicating a further decline in the ratio of men to women in the total student body, a possible trend first noted in the spring of 1965. A year ago, 22,885 men and 11,177 women were enrolled.

This quarter there were 308 new freshmen and 406 new advanced-standing or special students, whereas a year ago 311 freshmen and 440 others matriculated for the first time.

At the Morris campus the spring quarter attendance has held up unusually well, Summers said, being 911 now as against 984 last fall. Duluth campus attendance, 3,775 plus 60 graduate students, is up 10 per cent from a year ago but has fallen a bit faster from the fall quarter than enrollment at other campuses (from 4,405 and 64 graduate students last fall). Otherwise, the fall-to-spring declines are less than normal.

Attendance by colleges and divisions of the University for spring quarter of 1966 and 1965 were reported by the recorder's office as follows:

Minneapolis---Hospitals directly affiliated with medical schools are the most popular choice for internships by members of the University of Minnesota's 1966 graduating medical class. Sixty-three per cent of the graduates have chosen medical schools which are noted for their major teaching activities.

Dr. H. Mead Cavert, associate dean of the University's College of Medical Sciences, recently announced results of the 1966 National Internships Matching Program, under which medical students all over the country are matched according to their preference of hospitals for the one-year internships, and the preference of hospitals for interns. The University will graduate 133 medical students in June.

Fourteen per cent of the class picked private hospitals, and 11 per cent chose general county or city hospitals not affiliated with medical schools. The armed services and the United States Public Health Service will get 12 per cent of the graduates.

Illinois, West Virginia, New York and Oregon will get 14 per cent, with the rest of the University graduates distributed around the country.

Rotating internships, which give experience in the major specialty areas of medicine, were selected by 71 per cent of the class. They were preferred by most students who intend to go into general practice, and by others who wanted broad clinical experience before training in a specialty.

Mixed internships, which provide extensive experience in two major fields such as surgery, pediatrics or obstetrics-gynecology, attracted 8 per cent of the class. The remaining 21 per cent picked a straight internship, concentrating in one major clinical field.

For Peace Corps,
'U' ALUMNUS IN LIBERIA
NEEDS OLD MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

Got any used trombones, dented Sousaphones, split reeds on your old oboe? How about those musical scores---too busy to tape them together?

Louis Paff, a former member of the Men's Glee Club at the University of Minnesota who now is working with the Peace Corps in Liberia, has hollered for help from his former musical buddies at the University.

He needs musical instruments---any kind, any condition. "We'll fix them so they work, somehow---just get them to us," he says. He needs musical scores---folk, rock, grand opera---"these kids will sing anything, and love it!" And, he needs money---money to repair and replace what they have, money to buy reeds and scores and instrument stands.

Current members of the Men's Glee Club and their director, Johannes U. Dahle, University music department instructor, have made the Liberia request their project for this quarter, according to Tom Patterson, 2335 Angell road, St. Paul, club member charged with publicizing the need.

"Instruments, scores AND money," Patterson said, "may be sent to 'Operation Instruments,' care of the music department at the University. We are working with the Peace Corps representatives on this project and arrangements are being made for the corps to handle the transportation problems."

BANK PRESENTS FUNDS TO 'U' FOR SCHOLARSHIP

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---The University National Bank today (Thursday, April 14) presented a check for $1,000 to the University of Minnesota as the first step toward an annual scholarship in banking to be awarded to a sophomore in business administration.

The presentation was made at a luncheon in Coffman Memorial Union, where Russell L. Stotesbery, Jr., president of the bank, presented the check to Stanley J. Wenberg, University vice president for educational relationships and development; Laurence R. Lunden, vice president for business administration, and Paul V. Grambsch, dean of the School of Business Administration.

The $1,000 will be used for two scholarships of $500 each, and the bank will continue to give another $1,000 each spring for an indefinite period, perhaps for the next 10 years. The money will go to students who intend to concentrate their studies in banking and finance.

The student who wins the award as a sophomore, for use in his junior year, will be able to carry the award during his senior year as well, if he continues making satisfactory progress. Thus each year the $1,000 will be divided in two for a continuation of funds for the previous year's winner and $500 for a new winner.

Stotesbery explained that the scholarship is a part of the bank's celebration of its 50th year of operation. "We have had a very good relationship with the University during these years, and we felt it was a good time for us to do something of an academic nature, to recognize this relationship," he said.

"We are delighted that the University National Bank is establishing this scholarship," said Vice President Wenberg, "because it is a cooperative venture that will benefit everyone concerned---the student who receives it, the School of Business Administration and the banking profession."

Students who might be eligible for the award should apply to the Bureau of Student Loans and Scholarships. Stotesbery noted that "because we are principally interested in attracting able students into banking careers, we regard the considerations of academic ability and interest in banking to be superior to those of need." For this first year of the scholarship, $500 will be given to both a sophomore and a junior.

'ETHICS AND MARKETING'
SYMPOSIUM SLATED
AT U OF M TUESDAY

Minneapolis---Three speakers will talk on aspects of "Ethics and Marketing" in the second annual Merrill Cohen memorial symposium, to be held beginning at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday (April 19) in Room 10 Classroom building, West Bank area, University of Minnesota. The meeting is free and open to anyone interested.

Joseph W. McGuire, dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of Kansas and author of a book on business ethics titled "Business and Society," will speak first on "Business Ethics With Specific Reference to Marketing." He will be followed by Earl A. Clasen, vice president of the Pillsbury Co., Minneapolis, talking on "Controlling Marketing Behavior in a Large Firm." Third speaker will be Robert B. Pile, vice president of Campbell-Mithun, Inc., Minneapolis, on "Some Problems of Ethics in Persuasion."

After the three talks, the speakers will answer questions from the audience, beginning at around 3:45 p.m.

Last year's ethics symposium was attended by some 150 business and professional people from the Twin Cities area and students and faculty from the School of Business Administration and other University departments and schools.

The symposium, sponsored by the Merrill Cohen Memorial Fund and the Graduate School of Business Administration, is intended to stimulate discussion of ethical issues in business practice. It honors Merrill Cohen, a leading Minneapolis businessman and chairman of the board of governors of the National Association of Securities Dealers at the time of his death in 1963, who was greatly concerned with ethical behavior in the securities market during his lifetime.

Chairman of this year's conference is Robert J. Holloway, professor of marketing and president-elect of the American Marketing Association. Dean Paul V. Grambsch of the School of Business Administration will speak briefly at the start of the symposium.

INDUSTRIALIZATION OF RUSSIA AROUND 1900
TOPIC OF TALK TUESDAY

The industrialization of Russia around the turn of the century is the topic to be considered at this Tuesday's lecture (April 19) in a spring-quarter series on "Russia's Golden Age: 1894-1914?", being held at 8 p.m. Tuesdays in Mayo Memorial auditorium.

The speaker will be Theodore H. von Laue, professor of history at Washington University, St. Louis, and "the nation's leading authority on Sergei Witte," according to Theofanis G. Stavrou, associate professor of history at the University and moderator of the series. Witte, Stavrou explained, was Russia's finance minister from 1892 to 1903 and the man chiefly responsible for the industrialization of Russia in that period.

Von Laue will talk on "Witte and the Problem of Industrialization in Russia." He has written a book on the same topic and also two other books: "Leopold Ranke, the Formative Years," and "Why Lenin? Why Stalin?" as well as numerous articles for professional journals.

Von Laue, who has lived in the Soviet Union, received a doctor of philosophy degree from Princeton University and went on to earn a certificate from the Russian Institute at Columbia University in 1948. He taught at the University of California at Riverside before joining the Washington University faculty.

Admission to Tuesday's talk is by series ticket or by individual tickets sold at the door. The series is sponsored by the World Affairs Center of the General Extension Division.

'U' STUDENT, FACULTY MEMBER RECEIVE
FULBRIGHT AWARDS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A University of Minnesota faculty member and an undergraduate student who will return to the University for the spring quarter, 1967, to receive his degree, are recipients of Educational Exchange grants (Fulbright) for foreign research and study.

Josef A. Mestenhauser, 5621 Fifteenth ave. S., Minneapolis, assistant professor and assistant director of the University's Office of the Adviser to Foreign Students, will go to the Ateneo de Manila University, University of the Philippines, Manila, to conduct research in international relations. He and his family will leave for Manila June 15 and will spend a year there.

David C. Bruce, 19 East Oaks road, St. Paul, left the University at the close of the winter quarter, March 19, and now is in Montevideo, Uruguay, where he will spend a year studying political science and economics at the University of the Republic.

Fulbright awards are made under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, known as the Fulbright-Hayes Act. Purposes of the act are "to increase mutual understanding...by means of educational and cultural exchange...to strengthen the ties which unite us with other nations...and thus to assist in the development of friendly, sympathetic and peaceful relations between the United States and the other countries of the world."

Under this act, grants are made annually to about 2,500 United States citizens to go abroad and to about 6,000 foreign nationals to come to this country. Since adoption of the original Fulbright Act in 1946, more than 28,500 Americans and more than 70,000 foreign nationals have participated in the program.

700-900 SCHOLARSHIPS

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
APRIL 18, 1966

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Between 700 and 900 new scholarships for University of Minnesota students who show "exceptional financial need" will be awarded for fall quarter, 1966, utilizing approximately $350,000 in federal funds, it was announced Monday (April 18).

The announcement was made by George B. Risty, director of the Bureau of Student Loans and Scholarships, and Martin Snoke, associate dean of students, who said the funds were authorized by the Higher Education Act of 1965. The scholarships, titled Educational Opportunity Grants, are for undergraduates only, in good academic standing.

Approximately $58 million has been distributed to some 1,100 institutions of higher learning around the United States, Risty said. The University's share of about $350,000 is for the Minneapolis-St. Paul campus only. The Duluth campus received around $29,000 and Morris, $31,000.

Each student who qualifies will receive from $200 to $800 a year from the federal funds. In addition, the federal law requires that the University provide the same amount of money for each student, in the form of scholarships, loans, work opportunities, or a combination of these. Thus, if a student needs $400 additional money per year, he will receive $200 from the U.S. grant and $200 in some form of University aid.

The amount each student needs to help complete his education will be determined by a complex federal formula which takes into account his family's total income and the number of other dependent children, among other factors. The formula will compute how much money the family should be able to contribute to the student's college costs, and this will be deducted from his estimated needs.

Because many factors will affect a student's eligibility, anyone who feels he might be qualified is urged to apply. Those who apply by May 15 will receive first priority.

High school students who wish to apply for one of the grants, or who would like more information, should contact their high school counselor or principal.

Students who are already enrolled and attending classes at the University will have a chance to hear explanations of the new grants at one of five meetings scheduled for the Minneapolis campus this week and next. The meetings will be held at 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. Tuesday (April 19), in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History; at 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. Wednesday (April 20), also in the museum; and at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 26, in Nicholson hall auditorium.

Anyone who cannot attend one of those meetings can get more information from the Bureau of Student Loans and Scholarships or from Pierre Meyer, coordinator of the Work-Study program, 108 Temporary North of Mines. Meyer, Risty and Snoke will speak at the meetings.

Risty said that any entering freshman who has completed an application for the 1966-67 Freshman Scholarship program should not re-apply for an Educational Opportunity Grant. He explained that all such applications are being reviewed automatically to see whether or not the student would qualify. However, students who have applied to the Bureau of Student Loans and Scholarships for any other type of grant for the coming year should inform the bureau if they wish to be considered for the federal grant.

Emphasizing that to determine whether any individual student has "exceptional financial need" according to the government's formula is very complicated, Snoke gave the following figures as the maximum incomes for families with varying numbers of children, adding that "it is an oversimplified guideline, giving only an approximate idea of who might be eligible."

Number of dependent children	1	2	3	4	5	6
Family income	$5,300	$6,200	$7,300	$8,200	$9,000	$9,600

Students who have applied for admission to the Duluth or Morris campuses of the University, or who are attending one of them should contact the Financial Aid Office on either campus for information.

FOREIGN STUDENT FESTIVAL SET AT
'U' APRIL 23-24

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Approximately 350 foreign students at the University of Minnesota, representing countries from all over the world, will sing, dance, act in skits, cook favorite dishes from their homelands, model their native dress in a fashion show and exhibit textiles, jewelry and sculpture from their native lands in the eighth annual International Spring Festival Saturday and Sunday (April 23-24).

The festival is sponsored by the University's International Student Council, the Coffman Memorial Union Board of Governors and the department of concerts and lectures, in cooperation with the Minnesota International Center for Students and Visitors and the office of the dean of students.

University members of student-American clubs from 23 different countries will take part in the Pageant of Nations in Northrop Memorial auditorium Saturday at 8 p.m. Adult tickets at $2 and $1.50 ($1.00 for students) may be purchased at the door.

Sunday's International Dinner will be served from 12:30 to 5 p.m. in Coffman Memorial Union cafeteria. The menu will feature African chick-pea soup, Korean beef, Spanish paella, Pakistani subzi (vegetables), Scandinavian salad, Lebanese bread, Japanese anmitsu (dessert) and Indian tea. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1.25 for children under 12, and may be purchased at the cafeteria door.

Sunday afternoon will be highlighted by three special activities of this year's international festival, according to Roy Sikstrom, Canadian graduate student and this year's publicity chairman. All will be open free to the public.

Treasured objets d'art brought especially from their homelands by the students for this annual exhibition will be displayed Sunday from noon until 5:20 p.m. in Coffman Union main ballroom.

The international fashion show under the direction of Miss Conchita Tan, Filipino graduate student and the University's first International Queen, will compare current and historic examples of native dress from many of the 86 countries whose students attend the University. The models will parade at 1:15 and at 3:30 p.m. in Coffman Union main lounge.

Colored slides from Africa and Latin America will be shown and discussed at 2 p.m. and students from Asia, Europe and the Middle East will show slides from their countries from 4 to 5 p.m. in the men's lounge.

Finale of this year's festival will be a repeat of the "hit" of the 1965 affair---crowd participation in folk songs and dances in the main lounge of the Union. A pinata will be broken at 6 p.m., with lucky crowd members playing "finders-keepers" with the foreign stamps, coins, dolls and toys that it contains.

Tickets to the many events in the International Spring Festival may be obtained in advance at the Office of the Adviser to Foreign Students, 717 E. River road, Minneapolis; the University's department of concerts and lectures, Room 105 Northrop auditorium; and at all of the Dayton's ticket offices in the Twin Cities area.

Forrest G. Moore, director of the Office of the Adviser to Foreign Students, and Josef A. Mestenhauser, assistant director, are faculty advisers for the festival.

Two University of Minnesota alumni will receive the University's highest honor, the Outstanding Achievement Award, when the College of Education Alumni Association holds its annual meeting at 6 p.m. Friday (April 22) in the Campus Club, Coffman Memorial Union.

To be honored are Mrs. Irvamae Applegate, dean of education at St. Cloud State college and president-elect of the National Education Association and F. E. Heinemann, director of teacher personnel in the Minnesota State Department of Education.

The alumni meeting will start with a social hour at 6 p.m. with dinner at 7 p.m. The awards will be presented after dinner by William G. Shepherd, University vice president for academic administration. Dean Robert J. Keller of the College of Education will discuss recent developments in the college, and Mrs. Applegate will speak on "The Edge of Tomorrow."

Mrs. Applegate is a past president of the Minnesota Education Association who has worked for years with public and professional groups to raise standards of teacher education and certification, as well as teacher income, tenure and retirement. She is a national as well as a state leader in the effort to increase the public's recognition of the importance of teachers and education in our society.

She earned a master of arts and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University and holds a bachelor of science degree from North Dakota State University. She has worked as a classroom teacher and was supervisor of student teachers at St. Cloud State college before being named dean of education. She is a member of numerous professional organizations, local, state and national.

Heinemann also is noted for his work in teacher education, having brought teachers, administrators and college personnel together for a cooperative attack on problems of teacher education. After 26 years in Minnesota public schools as teacher, principal and superintendent, he joined the State Department of Education as director of graded elementary and secondary schools, and in 1955 became director of teacher personnel.

"As executive secretary of the State Advisory Committee on Teacher Education, he has exerted courageous leadership in raising the level of requirements for both elementary and secondary teachers," according to Dean Keller. "He has been one who helped bring about needed changes, who used the rules and his power to advance Minnesota schools."

Heinemann holds a bachelor of arts degree from Carleton College and a master of arts degree from the University, is a member of various education associations and is vice president of Minnesota Council School Administration.

ROBERT ANDERSON,
NEW YORK PLAYWRIGHT,
TO SPEAK AT 'U'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

New York playwright Robert Anderson, author of "Tea and Sympathy," will address a University of Minnesota convocation audience just hours before his new play, "The Days Between," opens at the University Theatre.

Anderson will speak on "The American Playwright in the American Theatre" at 11:30 a.m. Thursday (April 21) in Northrop Memorial auditorium; his play will open at 8 p.m. that evening in Scott hall auditorium.

The convocation, sponsored by the University Convocations committee, is open free to the public. Tickets for the play may be purchased at the Scott hall box office.

A native of New York City, Anderson received bachelor, master and doctorate degrees from Harvard University where he wrote plays and musicals and acted in the productions before entering the U.S. Navy during World War II. On his return from the service in 1946 he received a Rockefeller-National Theatre Conference fellowship and studied playwrighting under John Gassner at the New School for Social Research.

He has taught playwriting courses at the Professional Training Program of the American Theatre Wing and has written for radio and television.

Plays written by Anderson include "All Summer Long," "Tea and Sympathy," "Silent Night, Lonely Night" and "The Days Between"---first play of the American Playwrights Theatre project.

Minneapolis---The "child in trouble" is the theme of an upcoming institute on pediatric nursing for some 50 nurses from the metropolitan area this Wednesday and Thursday (April 20-21) at the University of Minnesota.

The institute is designed to bring into focus some of the recently developed concepts of emergency child care, whether emotional or physical.

On Wednesday Dr. Warren R. Lawson, supervisor of the poison control center of the Minnesota Department of Health, will talk on "Fumes and Inedibles" (9 a.m.), registered nurse Inez Westphalen, supervisor of maternity and burn units at St. Paul-Ramsey County Hospital, will speak on "A New Dimension in Burn Treatment" (10:20 a.m.), and several speakers will consider "Difficulties in Respiration" (1 p.m.).

Phenylketonuria (PKU), tetanus, and the battered child will receive attention on Thursday.

The institute is co-sponsored by the Minnesota Department of Health and the Nolte Center for Continuing Education of the University's General Extension Division. All sessions of the institute will be held at the Nolte Center.

'U' PROF KOLTHOFF
DELIVERS PRIESTLEY
LECTURES AT PENNSYLVANIA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---I. M. Kolthoff, professor emeritus of analytical chemistry in the University of Minnesota's department of chemistry, is delivering the 40th annual Joseph Priestley Lectures this week (April 18-22) at Pennsylvania State University, University Park, Pa.

Professor Kolthoff will deliver two lectures over the five-day period, both on technical subjects. They are "Induced Reactions" and "Acid Base Equilibria in Non-Aqueous Solvents."

Kolthoff was born and trained in The Netherlands but has been at Minnesota since 1927. At 72, he has received many prizes and medals and is considered one of the world's foremost analytical chemists.

In World War II he worked in his campus laboratory on artificial rubber--- and developed a process that led to a new "cold rubber" to make synthetic tires that last longer than natural rubber tires.

The Priestley Lectures were started in 1926 in honor of Joseph Priestley, English chemist and the discoverer of oxygen. They are sponsored by the Mu chapter of Phi Lambda Upsilon, a national honorary chemistry fraternity. Recently, Harold Urey of the University of California delivered the lectures.

SURVEY SEEKS TO MATCH
WOMEN, PART-TIME 'U' JOBS

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
APRIL 19, 1966

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mrs. Barbara Mantini of the University of Minnesota's placement office is playing matchmaker in a big way these days.

What she is trying to match up is part-time professional jobs on the campus with women in the Twin Cities area who are able and willing to fill them. The effort has never been made before.

Within the last few weeks, questionnaires have been mailed out to approximately 5,000 women, all members of (1) the Faculty Women's Club (for wives of faculty members, or (2) the Minnesota Plan for Women's Continuing Education.

The questionnaire asks for their college degrees if any, special skills such as technical, office, mathematics, writing or library skills, etc., foreign languages spoken, and whether or not they would be interested in a part-time or temporary job at the University.

As the answers come in, personnel in the Minnesota Plan office will set up files on the replies. The result, hopefully, will be to place women who are interested in a part-time professional job with professors and others on the campus who need their particular skills in research projects and in other ways.

"We have to give credit to Arnold Lazarow (professor and head of anatomy) for the original idea," Mrs. Mantini said. "It was his observation that he could not find the part-time research workers he and others in his department needed, and he also felt that many faculty wives would be glad to have the chance to put their talents to use, if such jobs could be tailored to the hours these women could get away from home!"

Mrs. Mantini, who helps place Minnesota Plan women who seek work, designed the matchmaking effort, titled the "Untapped Talent Survey." She adds that they would like to hear from any woman who might be interested in such a working arrangement, even though she is not a member of either of the groups which received the questionnaires.

Mrs. Mantini emphasizes that "these are not volunteer jobs we're trying to fill--- they are salaried positions at the professional level in some highly specialized fields. Of course, no one is obligated to accept any job, but we will contact the people who have answered us whenever a particular job comes along that seems to fit their training and available time."

The jobs that need filling, she says, require all kinds of different talents and can last anywhere from a few days to a year or more. Anyone interested should write to Untapped Talent Survey, Women's Continuing Education Program, 219 Temporary North of Mines, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455.

University faculty members who have openings for such women are urged to contact that office as well.

John A. Shellenberger, head of the department of flour and feed milling industries at Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kan., will receive an Outstanding Achievement Award, the highest alumni honor, from the University of Minnesota on Saturday (April 23).

The award will be presented at the eighth annual meeting of the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics Alumni Association, in the St. Paul Campus Student Center. The meeting will begin with a coffee hour from 4 to 6 p.m., with dinner at 6:15 p.m. in the North Star ballroom.

University President O. Meredith Wilson will present the award to Shellenberger, which will cite him for his distinction as a "skilled biochemist and expert agricultural scientist, devoted to advancing research and education at home and abroad, and as an international consultant of great renown."

Donald K. Smith, assistant vice president of academic administration, then will tell the alumni group about the University's expansion plans and what they will mean for the St. Paul campus.

Shellenberger, who has headed the flour and feed milling department at Kansas State since 1944, also has long served as collaborator for field crops research for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He has been a consultant in milling and baking technology to various foreign countries, including Peru, Puerto Rico, Argentina, Costa Rica, Paraguay and Chile, and has participated in many international meetings on cereal chemistry, cereal research and similar subjects.

He is currently vice president of the International Association for Cereal Chemistry and received the first Gold Medal presented by the Association of Operative Millers for outstanding contributions to the milling industry. His publications run into the hundreds.

Shellenberger, 66, earned a doctor of philosophy degree at the University of Minnesota in 1933. He holds a master of science degree from Kansas State and a bachelor of science degree from the University of Washington. He is a native of Moline, Ill.

An institute for leaders in parent and family life education will be presented at the University of Minnesota Wednesday and Thursday, April 27-28. Most sessions will be held in Mayo Memorial auditorium.

The institute is one of four being held at various parts of the state, co-sponsored by the University and the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers. Planning and participating in the institutes are Mrs. Elizabeth Peterson, coordinator of parent and family life education for the University's General Extension Division, and two representatives of the state organization: Mrs. Franklyn Hansen, chairman of parent and family life education, and Mrs. James Wall, chairman of preschool service.

"Our goal is to help adults increase their effectiveness, self-confidence and enjoyment in their roles as parents," said Mrs. Peterson. "There are no easy answers to the problems of school dropouts, increased juvenile delinquency, teenage marriages and illegitimacy, but in Minnesota nearly 1,100 PTA units do have an opportunity to help a membership of around 250,000 to understand better their changing roles as parents, and the growth and development of their children."

Sessions on April 27 will include a symposium on "Programs That Have Worked" at 9:45 a.m.; a film, "Dance Little Children," at 11:30 a.m., followed by small group discussions; and afternoon talks on how to plan a good parent and family life education program, the father's role in today's family, and effective use of films and tapes. Three films will be shown beginning at 3:30 p.m. for those who wish to see them: "Rebellion Part II," "Boy to Man" and "Girl to Woman."

On April 28, Kenneth Berg, principal of Highland Park high school, St. Paul, and a group of his students will demonstrate the use of a tape, "Problems of Adolescence," at 9:30 a.m. Mrs. Peterson will talk at 10:30 a.m. on the role of the mother in today's family. At 2:30 p.m. a film, "Who Cares About Jamie?", will be shown, followed by a panel giving reactions.

Faculty members will include personnel from the University and from various PTA units.

Minneapolis---Fifty clergymen from around the state will spend next week (April 24-28) in Owatonna, boning up on financial matters.

They will attend the fourth annual Clergy Economic Education seminar, presented by the University of Minnesota's General Extension Division, Students' Religious Activities bureau and Economic Education center, in cooperation with the Minnesota State Council on Economic Education and the National Clergy Economic Education foundation.

Meetings will be held at the Inn Towne motel, Owatonna, beginning with registration from 4 to 5 p.m. and dinner at 6 p.m. Sunday (April 24) and ending with a 1 p.m. address on Thursday, April 28.

Purpose of the conference will be to strengthen the knowledge of economic matters on the part of the clergymen. "Often they have no background in this subject from their seminary training," said Roman F. Warmke, director of economic education at the University. "But as community thought leaders, they are called upon almost daily to make decisions that have economic implications. People look to them for leadership and advice on financial matters."

Two major participants will be Nat J. Goldfinger, director of research for the AFL-CIO, Washington, D.C., and James L. Hamilton, director of economic education for the National Association of Manufacturers, New York City, both talking Wednesday in a symposium on labor-management relations. Third member of the symposium will be Professor John G. Turnbull, associate dean of the University's College of Liberal Arts.

"Resident economists" who will participate in the entire program will be Rufus T. Logan, chairman of the economics and business department of Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter, and Harlan M. Smith, University associate professor of economics. Also speaking more than once will be James S. Rausch, instructor at Cathedral high school, St. Cloud. Rausch and Logan will give the final talk on "Economics and Ethics"

John Chisholm, president of Olmstead County Bank and Trust Co., Rochester, will talk on "The Role of Commercial Banks" during a five-part presentation on personal and family finance which will deal also with the roles of credit unions, consumer finance companies, insurance and advertising.

Sherwood O. Berg, dean of the University's Institute of Agriculture, and Professor George Donohue, head of sociology on the St. Paul campus, also will speak.

The seminar has "a broad base of financial support," according to Warmke. "Fourteen sponsors, representing business, labor and agriculture, each have contributed $400." Financial chairman for the seminar is L. L. McBurney, treasurer of the Minnesota State Council on Economic Education and chairman of the board of Tescom Corp., Minneapolis.

Minneapolis---Forty new graduates from medical schools throughout the United States will begin one-year internships at University of Minnesota Hospitals starting July 1, 1966, according to Gertrude M. Gilman, hospitals director. Six of the interns will be from the 1966 graduating class of the University's medical school. Seven will be from Harvard university medical school.

The straight internship---i.e., concentration in one major field---at University Hospitals will be held by 15 interns in surgery, 14 in medicine and 11 in pediatrics.

Dr. H. Mead Cavert, associate dean of the University's College of Medical Sciences, noted that "on July 1, 1966, the State of Minnesota will receive 105 doctors coming into the state from medical schools around the country."

These doctors will serve their one-year internships in the Twin Cities metropolitan area or in Duluth. They will join with 37 University medical school graduates for a total of 142 doctors serving their internships in Minnesota.

"While 96 of our University of Minnesota graduating doctors will leave the state for internships elsewhere, the State of Minnesota actually will have a net gain of nine newly graduated doctors," Dr. Cavert pointed out.

Other hospitals in the Twin Cities assured of receiving interns are Hennepin County General, St. Mary's and Northwestern in Minneapolis, and St. Paul-Ramsey, Bethesda, and Miller in St. Paul. St. Mary's and St. Luke's in Duluth also will receive interns.

The scheduled internships are part of the 1966 National Internships Matching Program, under which medical students all over the country are matched according to their preference of hospital, and the preference of hospitals for interns.

Internships at University Hospitals will be filled by graduates from 26 universities and medical schools.

DANISH AUTHORITY TO SPEAK AT 'U' ON SEX IN SCANDINAVIA

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Dr. Kirsten Auken, chairman of the Royal Danish Commission on Sex and professor of social psychiatry at the University of Copenhagen, will speak at the University of Minnesota Monday (April 25).

She will discuss "Marriage and Sex in Scandinavia" in a special lecture at 8 p.m. in Mayo Memorial auditorium sponsored jointly by the University's Council of Religious Advisers, the Minnesota Family Study Center and the department of concerts and lectures. The talk will be open free to the public.

Dr. Auken came to the United States to take part in the program of the Groves Conference on Marriage and Family held April 18-20 in Kansas City, Mo., and is filling a number of speaking engagements before returning to Copenhagen, according to Professor Gerhard Neubeck, chairman of the Family Study Center.

In speaking of Dr. Auken, David R. Mace, director of the American Association of Marriage Counselors and president of the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, says: "Denmark is the only country in the world whose government has openly and officially appointed a committee of inquiry to study the sex life of its people and to make appropriate recommendations. When this bold move was taken about five years ago, no one was particularly surprised that the prime minister appointed Dr. Auken to be president of the commission.

"As a working physician she became interested in the sex problems of girls and married women, and she embarked upon a study of the sex life of a group of women which has perhaps no equal in the depth and detail it has covered."

AUTHORITY ON NEGRO
TALK AT 'U' MONDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---August Meier, professor of history at Roosevelt University, Chicago, will speak "On the Role of Martin Luther King" at the University of Minnesota Monday (April 25).

The talk, open free to the public, will be held at 3:30 p.m. in Room 10 Classroom Building, West Bank area, Minneapolis campus. Sponsors are the University departments of history and concerts and lectures.

Professor Meier is a leading authority on the history of the Negro in the United States, according to Professor W. Donald Beatty, assistant chairman of the University history department. He received a doctor of philosophy degree from Columbia University and taught at Tougaloo College, Tougaloo, Miss.; Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and at Morgan State College, Baltimore, Md., before joining the Roosevelt faculty in 1964.

He is the author of "Negro Thought in America, 1880-1915," a study of Negro leadership and ideology in the age of Booker T. Washington, and is the co-author of a recently published volume of documents, "Negro Protest Thought."

In addition, Professor Beatty points out, Professor Meier has played an active role in the civil rights movement---both as a participant and as an observer. His reflections on current Negro protest have been published in "Crisis," "New Politics" and other journals.

DIVERSITY, BIOPHYSICS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Professor John R. Platt of the Mental Health Research Institute, University of Michigan, will deliver two special lectures at the University of Minnesota on Tuesday and Wednesday (April 26-27).

He will speak on "Diversity" (the need for diversity in science, education and government) at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Minnesota Museum of Natural History auditorium.

His Wednesday topic will be "What Is Biophysics?", to be given at 3 p.m. in Murphy hall auditorium. Both addresses will be open free to the public.

Sponsors of Professor Platt's talks are the University's departments of chemistry, physiology and concerts and lectures and the College of Biological Sciences.

Professor Platt, who received master's and doctorate degrees from Michigan State University, was a Rockefeller Foundation Project fellow at the University of Minnesota in 1941-43, and was a University physics instructor in 1943. He has taught physics at Northwestern University and at the University of Chicago, where he also was a professor of biophysics until 1965 when he assumed his current position with the University of Michigan.

He has made numerous contributions to the analysis of the visible and ultra-violet spectra of polyatomic molecules, according to Professor Robert Livingston, chief of the physical/^{chemistry}division of the University's School of Chemistry. Recently, Livingston pointed out, Platt has made valuable contributions to the application of physics to biological problems as well as a number of general papers including one on "Strong Inference" in Science, 1965.

Minneapolis---"Social Issues and Education"---a program relating the University of Minnesota to the community and to the social issues of the day---will be presented at the University Wednesday (April 27).

The pioneer project by the Minnesota Student Association (MSA) will examine the role of the University in social change and the implications which follow from increased involvement on the part of students and faculty.

Approximately 500 college and university students and high school seniors from throughout the state have been invited to attend the program, according to Judith E. Young, College of Liberal Arts junior and chairman of the MSA Educational Affairs committee. "The general public also will be most welcome," Miss Young said.

Professor Glenn Terrell, dean of faculties at the University of Illinois Chicago Circle, will deliver the keynote address at 8 p.m. in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom. Two University faculty members, Professor Robert H. Beck, chairman of the philosophy of education department, and Thomas Walz, instructor in the School of Social Work, will make up a discussion panel following the talk.

The program is jointly sponsored by the MSA and the University's department of concerts and lectures.

University students will be invited to take part in a series of seminars on "Social Issues and Education" during the week after the public meeting, Miss Young said. Faculty members will open their homes to the students for discussion on such specific issues as the moral and legal-political implications and the implications for student activities, student government and curriculum.

Students may sign up for one or several of the seminars in the MSA office, Room 213 Coffman Memorial Union, on or before April 28.

Minneapolis---Twenty-five social workers from 21 countries will arrive at the University of Minnesota Thursday, April 28, to take part in the fourth annual training program for social workers conducted by the Twin Cities International Program for Youth Leaders and Social Workers, Inc. (TCIP).

They will attend the special TCIP classes in social work and American institutions conducted by the University's School for Social Work for six weeks beginning May 2. Then they will become visiting staff members of social service agencies in the Twin Cities area for 10 weeks, according to Mrs. Leonard O. Langer, Jr., University coordinator for TCIP, at 909 Social Science building, West Bank area.

"These people are brought to the United States and their tuition is paid by the U.S. State Department," Mrs. Langer pointed out. "The University is one of five schools in the country taking part in this program; others are held in Cleveland, Philadelphia, Chicago and San Francisco.

"On completion of their class work here, each member of the group is assigned to work with the local agency corresponding to the one with which they work in their own country. Some of the agencies that will have TCIP people working with them are the St. Paul Boy Scouts, the Minneapolis Jewish Community Center, the Minnesota Department of Corrections, Rochester, Gillette State Hospital for Crippled Children, Bar-None Ranch, Anoka, and the Hennepin County Department of Court Services."

Two countries---Sweden, and Germany---each have two TCIP representatives this year; India has three. The others come from France, Yugoslavia, British Honduras, Spain, Brazil, United Arab Republic, Greece, Trinidad, Uganda, The Netherlands, Panama, Finland, Denmark, Poland, South Africa, Lebanon, Switzerland and Cyprus.

Richard J. Henze, who works with mentally retarded adolescents at Glen Lake, has been promoted to project director of this education program by the Educational Research and Development Council (ERDC).

The five-year, cooperative program for the education of mentally retarded adolescents is sponsored by the ERDC in cooperation with the State Departments of Education and Public Welfare, and is funded by $1.25 million in federal, state and local funds.

(The ERDC is an organization of school systems in the Twin Cities metropolitan area with the purpose of sharing common problems and exploring new ideas in school administration. Its director is Van D. Mueller, assistant professor of educational administration at the University of Minnesota.)

Since last July 1, Henze has served at Glen Lake as program director. The previous year he was director of the Minneapolis School-Rehabilitation Center, a joint project of the Minneapolis school system and the state education department's division of vocational rehabilitation.

He served as coordinator for Project 681 in the Minneapolis public schools, a project involving the development of special occupational training services for high-school-age mentally retarded students, which was designated a national prototype of cooperative school-rehabilitation programs.

He has worked with the University's department of child welfare, the Minnesota division of vocational rehabilitation and as an instructor and psychologist at St. Cloud State College, and is a member of numerous professional organizations.

Schools represented in the ERDC include 38 active members in the seven-county metropolitan area. These schools are Anoka, Bloomington, Brooklyn Center, Burnsville, Centennial, Chaska, Eden Prairie, Edina-Morningside, Farmington, Forest Lake, Fridley, Golden Valley, Hopkins, Inver Grove-Pine Bend, Lakeville, Mahtomedi, Minneapolis, Minnetonka, Mound, New Prague, North St. Paul-Maplewood, Orono, Osseo, Prior Lake, Richfield, Robbinsdale, Rosemount, St. Anthony, St. Francis, St. Louis Park, St. Paul, Shakopee, Spring Lake Park, Stillwater, Waconia, Wayzata, West St. Paul and White Bear Lake. Alexandria is an associate member; Hennepin County schools and University high school also are represented.

DR. W. D. ARMSTRONG
RECEIVES DENTAL RESEARCH AWARD

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Dr. Wallace D. Armstrong, professor and head of the University of Minnesota's biochemistry department, recently received the 1966 award for Basic Research in Biological Mineralization from the International Association for Dental Research (IADR).

Dr. Barnet Levy, president of the IADR, noted that "Dr. Armstrong has devoted the greater part of his active research in unravelling some of the secrets of biological mineralization. He has contributed directly to our knowledge of the chemistry of the hard tissues...and directed his talents to intensive studies on the metabolism of fluoride as it relates particularly to fluoridation."

The IADR honor for Basic Research in Biological Mineralization is sponsored by the Lever Brothers company. The award consists of $1,000 and a certificate.

Dr. Armstrong joined the faculty at the University of Minnesota in 1929 as an assistant in physiology. He has been head of the biochemistry department (formerly physiological chemistry) since 1946. Dr. Armstrong has contributed over 100 papers in the area of mineralization and received an honorary degree of Doctor of Odontology from the University of Stockholm in 1955 for his contributions to dental research.

Dr. Symington's talk will be on "Some Problems of Endocrine Pathology." (Endocrines are any of the ductless glands, such as the adrenals, the thyroid, the pituitary, whose secretions pass directly into the blood stream.) Dr. Claude R. Hitchcock, University of Minnesota surgery professor, said "Dr. Symington is an international known researcher on endocrine problems, and in particular, on perfusion of the adrenal gland." Dr. Symington has combined several different techniques in his studies of the adrenal glands, including pathological, biological, biochemical, and physiological methods.

RUSSIAN SCIENCE
TOPIC OF 'U'
LECTURE TUESDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Professor Alex Vucinich of the sociology department at the University of Illinois will deliver the fifth lecture in the spring quarter lecture series, "Russia's Golden Age: 1894-1914?" at the University of Minnesota.

He will speak on "Russian Science Between 1894-1914" at 8 p.m. Tuesday (April 26) in Mayo Memorial auditorium.

Professor Vucinich's talk has not previously been announced in the schedule of Tuesday night lectures at the University. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

The World Affairs Center, a division of the University's General Extension Division, is sponsoring the series. Moderator every Tuesday is Theofanis G. Stavrou, University associate professor who teaches Russian and Near Eastern history.

"Professor Vucinich is exceptionally well qualified to speak on this subject," Professor Stavrou said. "He received the bachelor of arts degree from the University of Belgrade, the master of arts degree from the University of California (Berkeley) and the doctor of philosophy degree from Columbia university. In addition to his work in sociology, he also has worked in cultural anthropology and science and in economics."

A prolific writer, his books include "Science in Russian Culture", "The Soviet Academy of Sciences" and "Soviet Economic Institutions: The Social Structure of Production Units". He also has written articles for many professional journals.

BARITONE TO SING
AT 'U' CONVOCATION
IN COFFMAN UNION

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Baritone Gordon Myers will sing "Songs of Early Americans" at a University of Minnesota convocation Thursday (April 28) in Coffman Memorial Union main ballroom.

The program, open free to the public, will be presented at 11:30 a.m. and at 12:30 p.m. and is sponsored by the Coffman Union Board of Governors and the University Convocations committee.

Professor Myers, currently head of the department of music at Columbia College, South Carolina, spent six years (1957-63) as baritone soloist with the internationally famous New York Pro Musica. He played the part of King Darius in the group's production of the 12th-century production, "The Play of Daniel," which was sent on a 10-week tour of Europe in 1960. He also traveled with them on a concert tour to Holland, Spain, Israel and Yugoslavia during the summer of 1963.

A native of Iowa, Professor Myers graduated from Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, and received a fellowship to Julliard graduate school in New York. His work there was interrupted after one year when he spent four years in military service during World War II. It was during these years that Gordon Myers, infantryman, was selected to sing the world-premiere performance of Frank Loesser's balad, "Rodger Young" on NBC's "The Army Hour."

Returning to civilian life, Myers attended Teachers College, Columbia University, and received a master of arts degree, then became program director and general manager of a New York radio station.

PROF. FROM YUGOSLAVIA
TO DISCUSS BALKANS
AT U OF M THURSDAY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

"Movements and Ideas in the Balkans of the '60's and '70's of the 19th Century" will be discussed by a Serbian scientist and historian, Dr. Dimitrije Djordjevic, at the University of Minnesota Thursday (April 28).

Dr. Djordjevic, professor in the Historical Institute of the Serbian Academy of Science, Belgrade, Yugoslavia, will speak at 3:30 p.m. in Room 5 Classroom Building, West Bank area, Minneapolis campus. His talk, open free to the public, is sponsored by the University's departments of history and of concerts and lectures.

Of Dr. Djordjevic, Professor W. Donald Beatty, acting chairman of the history department, says, "He is a leading Yugoslav scholar in the study of Balkan intellectual and social history of the 19th and early 20th centuries. He is visiting in the United States to participate in the International Conference on the Problems of Nationalism in the Habsburg Monarchy (held April 2-7 in Bloomington, Ind.) and to travel and lecture.

"His work has taken him throughout the Balkans where he has taught at the Institute for Balkan Studies at Salonika. His work has been in the area and time of great ferment and of great significance in European history; his treatment of the period and problems has been widely published and acclaimed."

MR. PETTENGILL
HONORED AT MEETING OF REGISTRARS

True E. Pettengill, who was the University of Minnesota recorder for 24 years until his death last February, was one of four persons honored at a meeting last week of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

The organization gave a posthumous Honorary Membership to Mr. Pettengill during the banquet program at its 52nd annual meeting, held at Phoenix, Ariz. The meeting was attended by more than 1,000 college and university representatives from throughout the United States, including R. E. Summers, University dean of admissions.

Mr. Pettengill's citation reads, in part, "With a long span of service almost unparalleled among collegiate registrars of the nation, True E. Pettengill served the University of Minnesota and the Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers as a most dedicated and loyal servant. Through his leadership, special competence, devotion to duty and particular interest in serving students, he made a place for himself unique in Minnesota higher education."

Others who received Honorary Memberships (not posthumous) were William G. Bowling of Washington University, Florence N. Brady of Occidental College, and Robert E. Hewes of the University of Connecticut.

MRS. RAMSAY PRESENTS
$5,000 TO RARE BOOKS
SECTION OF 'U' MED LIBRARY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---A presentation of $5,000 was made to the University of Minnesota's bio-medical library today (April 25) by Mrs. Joseph Gales Ramsay III. The gift, to be used for the history of medicine and rare books division, was made in the reception area on the fifth floor of Diehl hall on the Minneapolis campus.

Dr. Robert B. Howard, dean of the University's medical school, and Dr. Owen H. Wangensteen, chairman of the surgery department, accepted the gift from Mrs. Ramsay.

"Dr. Wangensteen has been the moving force in building this very fine division of our library," said Glen Brudvig, assistant professor and librarian of the bio-medical library, "and we are very pleased Mrs. Ramsay has decided to help in this effort."

The history of medicine and rare books division was started in 1964 with $100,000 from John S. Pillsbury, Sr. Since that time close to $150,000 has been contributed toward the division. It includes a closed-stacks area for rare books, a history of medicine lecture room, conference rooms, an exhibit and reception area, and offices for a history of medicine professor and official curator. Sole support for the division has been through contributions.

"The really outstanding aspect of this division," said Brudvig, "is its facilities for teaching, study and research all combined into one integrated surrounding. Everything that is needed for work in the history of medicine can be found in one place."

The library contains 12 books published around 1500, and some 6,000 volumes published before 1850. A current exhibit, titled "From Imhoteb to John Hunter," traces the history of surgery from ancient Egypt (4000 B.C.) to the beginnings of modern surgery (1800).

ARAB-AMERICAN WEEK

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis---Talks by a Jewish rabbi and a native of the United Arab Republic (Egypt) will highlight the annual observance of Arab-American Week at the University of Minnesota, according to Ibrahim Mohamed Oweiss, University graduate student from Alexandria and Arab-American Club event chairman.

Events of the week---May 2-6---will be held in Coffman Memorial Union on the Minneapolis campus, and, with the exception of the annual banquet Thursday (May 5) will be open free to the public. University sponsoring groups include the Arab-American Club, the Minnesota Student Association and the Union Board of Governors as well as the Twin Cities chapter of the American Friends of the Middle East.

Farouk el Mawlawy, director of the Arab Information Center, San Francisco, will speak on "The Palestine Problem and the Arab-Israeli Conflict" at 7:30 p.m. Monday (May 2) in Coffman Union men's lounge. Refreshments and Arab pastries will be served.

Rabbi Elmer Berger, executive vice president of the American Council for Judaism, New York City, will address the banquet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday (May 5) in Coffman Union junior ballroom. Tickets are required for the banquet, but the public is invited to attend Mr. Berger's speech afterward. He will speak on "An American Views the Middle East and American Interests." The banquet is being given for the benefit of Palestinian refugees. Tickets at $2.50 may be obtained by calling Mary Rush, 373-2890, or Mrs. John Des Laurier, 774-3178.

During the observance of Arab-American week, the student club is sponsoring noon programs about the Arab world on Monday and Wednesday in Coffman Union main ballroom and a week-long exhibit of Arab clothing, jewelry and objets d'art in the international lounge on the mezzanine of the Union.

JOHN H. WILLIAMS LABORATORY TO BE NAMED IN MEMORIAL CEREMONY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis--The John H. Williams Laboratory of Nuclear Physics will be dedicated Tuesday (May 3) in official ceremonies at the University of Minnesota.

The laboratory, honoring the University's noted nuclear physicist who died on April 18, will be formally named in a memorial dedication ceremony at 2:30 p.m. in Mayo Memorial auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

Glen T. Seaborg, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, will attend the dedication. Following the ceremony, the invited guests will visit the laboratory on the east bank of the Mississippi river.

The official ceremonies will center around the completion of one new building---housing the University's third and most expensive atom smasher, a 3-million-dollar machine known as a tandem Van de Graaff generator (nicknamed by its makers, the "Emperor").

Two other buildings nearby, which house the University's other atom smasher---a straight line accelerator completed in 1955 and dubbed "Linac"---with its offices and shop facilities, also are included in the John H. Williams Laboratory of Nuclear Physics.

The entire complex, including the two accelerators and support facilities, represent an investment in nuclear research in Minnesota of nearly 6 million dollars by the University and the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) with some funds also from the National Science foundation. The AEC also will contribute close to a million dollars a year to keep the entire operation running.

The new building housing the "Emperor" accelerator and receiving special attention Tuesday was constructed at a cost of $750,000. The cost of installing the "Emperor" on its throne is about $250,000.

Note to Editors: The "Emperor" accelerator building will be opened specially for reporters and photographers from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, before the visitors arrive.

'FLOOD!' FILM
HYDRAULIC LABORATORY

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

The Minnesota river floods of one year ago this month may never be duplicated in the lifetime of those who witnessed them.

But the unprecedented flooding was filmed by the St. Anthony Falls Hydraulic Laboratory of the University of Minnesota, and the half-hour color, sound film is now available for rental.

Titled "Flood! The Minnesota River, April 1965," the movie was recently completed and has been showing to technical groups such as engineers, and to the general public. Both groups, of course, find it interesting for different reasons, according to the Hydraulic Laboratory staff.

Both ground and air views of the Minnesota river basin are shown with the water level at its peak and again after the river had returned to normal. Included are scenes from the areas of Mankato, St. Peter, Chaska, Savage and St. Paul.

The movie was prepared under the direction of Professor C. E. Bowers in cooperation with the division of waters of the Minnesota Department of Conservation. Anyone interested in renting it should contact the Hydraulic Laboratory at 373-2782.

5-STATE REGIONAL EDUCATIONAL LABORATORY
COMES INTO EXISTENCE

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA 55455
TELEPHONE: 373-2137
APRIL 27, 1966

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis, Minn.---The five-state Upper Midwest Regional Educational Laboratory came into legal existence this week with the signing of articles of incorporation for the corporation which will administer the laboratory.

The non-profit corporation was established by a 50-member board of trustees from Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Its major purpose will be to support programs for the improvement of elementary and secondary education in the region. It is visualized as an organization which will assist schools, colleges, state departments of education and education-related groups in the five-state region to carry out programs for educational improvement.

The corporation is seeking funding from the U.S. Office of Education for a series of programs in curriculum development, teacher and educational-specialist education, and educational research and policy studies. If funds are granted, the laboratory will begin operation July 1.

Acting as incorporators for the board of trustees were Duane Mattheis, Minnesota commissioner of education; Brother Gregory Robertson, president of St. Mary's College in Winona; and Stanley B. Kegler, associate dean of the College of Education at the University of Minnesota. The articles of incorporation were signed Monday, April 25.

At an organizational meeting April 15, the first board of trustees elected as its chairman Donald K. Smith, assistant vice president for academic administration at the University of Minnesota. Max Goodson, co-director of the Research and Development Center at the University of Wisconsin, was elected vice chairman. Stanley B. Kegler, who has served as the director of the program development project for the laboratory, will serve as interim director for the laboratory and as executive secretary for the board of trustees.

In addition to Smith and Goodson, the board of trustees elected seven other members to serve on a nine-member executive committee for the corporation:

Alfred A. Schwartz, dean of the College of Education at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa; Harry Dykstra, professor of school administration at the University of South Dakota, Vermillion; Allan W. Sturges, chairman of the department of education, College of Education, University of North Dakota, Grand Forks; C. Gordon Nelson, executive secretary of the Associated School Boards of South Dakota; Howard Jones, dean of the College of Education, University of Iowa, Iowa City; D.W. MacArthur, vice president of the microfilm products division, the 3M Company, St. Paul; and Howard Knutson, assistant dean of instruction at State College of Iowa, Cedar Falls.

The Program Development Project which organized the Upper Midwest Regional Educational Laboratory began operation Feb. 15, funded by a $90,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Education, under a contract with the University of Minnesota on the basis of a prospectus prepared by a committee of Minnesotans. An interim report to the U.S. Office March 30 described the needs of the area, proposed a number of programs, and outlined the corporate structure for the laboratory. Recently the project was extended beyond its original April 30 closing date to May 31.

Five members of the executive committee of the board of trustees are now engaged in a search for a permanent director and key staff for the laboratory. Kegler will continue as interim director until a director is found.

According to Smith, the laboratory is visualized by its organizers as a decentralized operation with a central office in the Twin Cities and field offices throughout the five states. The interim report asks for $2 million for the first year of the laboratory and $15 million for a projected five-year program.

Members of a Midwest Panel for the U.S. Office of Education spent Friday, April 22, at a meeting with representatives of the proposed laboratory to assess the progress which has been made and gather information for a report to the U.S. Office which will determine whether the laboratory will be funded and how great the funding might be for the first year of operation.

The panel has responsibility for three proposed laboratories in the Midwest, including operations centered at Kansas City and St. Louis in addition to the Upper Midwest Laboratory. Recommendations of various panels will guide the U.S. Office of Education in awarding funds to 11 proposed laboratories throughout the United States.

Members of the Midwest Panel who represented the U.S. Office in the April 22 site visit were Paul Briggs, superintendent of schools at Cleveland, Ohio; John Hope Franklin, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago; Nathaniel Gage, professor of education at Stanford University, Palo Alto, Cal.; Ole Sand, National Education Association, Washington, D.C.; Ben Nichols, professor of engineering, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.; and Loren Woodby, midwest coordinator of laboratories for the U.S. Office of Education.

EUROPEAN INTEGRATION

Minneapolis---German journalist Alexander von Hase will discuss "Germany--France--European Integration" in a special lecture Monday (May 2) at the University of Minnesota.

His talk, sponsored by the University's departments of history and concerts and lectures, will be given at 3:30 p.m. in Room 130 Classroom Building, West Bank area, Minneapolis campus. It will be free to the public.

Berlin-born von Hase is the son of Lieutenant General von Hase, one of the German generals involved in the conspiracy against Hitler in 1944. Von Hase, then 19, was held in the SS-jail, Berlin-Moabit, until after his father's execution, according to the German Information Center.

He has studied German literature, history, philosophy and education at the University of Muenster (Westphalia) where he graduated in 1952. He was a freelance journalist until 1955 when he became one of the leaders of the "Arbeitsgemeinschaft Demokratischer Kreise" in Bad Godesberg, an organization which, in cooperation with the Federal Press Office, conducts public relations for the German Federal Government.

In 1958 he visited the United States on a visitors' program conducted by the U.S. Department of State and he has lectured, for the German Press Office, in England, France, Italy and the Benelux countries.

'E-DAY' AT U OF M TO INCLUDE
TOURS, CONVO, PARADE, DISPLAYS

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Minneapolis--Open-house tours of University engineering facilities and industrial displays of engineering materials and equipment, a convocation address on the controversial XB-70 supersonic transport plane, a parade and the knighting of this year's "St. Pat" will highlight the 52nd observance of Engineers' Day ("E-Day") Thursday and Friday (May 5-6) at the University of Minnesota.

"E-Day" actually has grown far beyond a single 24-hour day, according to Frederick Merry, New Brighton senior and "E-Day" general co-chairman, along with Sally Ahola, Coleraine senior, of the annual event.

"Events for 'E-Day' will start at 9 a.m. Thursday (May 5) with open-house tours for Minnesota high school students and our annual special convocation in Northrop Memorial auditorium," Merry explained. "The tours in the Architecture Building and opportunities to view and discuss the University's various engineering facilities in the engineering complex with faculty members will be continued through 10 p.m. so that the public can become acquainted with our operations.

"Friday (May 6) we will continue with the open-house tours for students from the state's 14 junior colleges as well as for the general public, and we will start our customary 'fun' day with a campus parade at 11:30 a.m., our royalty crowning ceremonies and announcement of both student and faculty awards at 12 noon, and our picnic. We will close our celebration with the 'E-Day' Brawl Saturday night at the Brookview Country club."

E-DAY

Walter A. Spivak, assistant general manager and chief engineer of the B-70 division, North American Aviation, Los Angeles, will speak on "The XB-70, A Large Creative Laboratory for Progress" at the "E-Day" convocation at 11:30 a.m. Thursday in Northrop Memorial auditorium. The program is open to the public.

Special exhibits by the Institute of Technology's departments of aeronautics and engineering mechanics, agricultural engineering, civil and hydraulics engineering and the electrical and the mechanical engineering departments, as well as "open doors" in many of the other engineering departments and schools, will be a highlight of the open-house displays.

Exhibits, including a mock-up of the Apollo rocket command system and color films of the Gemini space-walk, rocket engines, a ham radio station and a display of medical applications of electronics are examples of industrial and professional group displays open for public viewing, Merry said.

Bands, floats, marchers and student St. Pat and Queen Colleen candidates will make up Friday's "E-Day" parade through the campus at 11:30 a.m.

Following the parade, the traditional St. Pat ceremonies will be held at 12 noon in the court east of Main Engineering building. Dean Athelstan Spilhaus of the Institute of Technology will "knight" St. Pat for 1966, salute the new Queen Colleen and announce winners of student and faculty annual awards.

NOTED ATTORNEY ON CIVIL RIGHTS CASES TO TALK AT 'LAW DAY'

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Joseph L. Rauh, Jr., a Washington, D.C., attorney noted for his efforts in the field of civil rights, will speak at the observance of "Law Day--USA" at the University of Minnesota Law School.

He will talk at 2:30 p.m. Monday (May 2) in Room 101 Fraser hall on the Minneapolis campus on "The Lawyer's Responsibility to Defend Unpopular Causes." The talk, free and open to the public, will be followed by a coffee hour in Rottschäefer lounge.

An active advocate in many cases involving basic civil rights and civil liberties, Rauh at present serves as general counsel for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and also for the United Auto Workers of America and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

In a noted Supreme Court decision, Rauh secured a reversal of the conviction of labor organizer John T. Watkins for contempt of Congress, in a case that has had far-reaching effects on the power of congressional investigating committees. Another of his major civil-liberties victories concerned playwright Arthur Miller, who had refused to name persons involved with him in previous political associations. Miller's conviction was reversed by the Federal Court of Appeals.

One of the chief lobbyists for the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Rauh is a graduate of Harvard Law School and has served as law secretary to Supreme Court Justices Cardozo and Frankfurter and as counsel to the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Department of Labor, the Federal Communications Commission and the Lend Lease administration. Since 1947 he has had a private law practice in Washington.

AT 'U' ALUMNAE MEET

(FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE)

Mrs. Irene B. Taeuber, senior research demographer at the Office of Population Research, Princeton University, will receive the highest alumni honor of the University of Minnesota, the Outstanding Achievement Award, on Saturday, May 7.

University President O. Meredith Wilson will present the citation at the annual honors meeting of the Minnesota Alumnae Club in the Sheraton Ritz hotel, Minneapolis. The meeting will start with a brunch at 11 a.m. in the Alumni Club. After-lunch speaker will be William Mindak, University associate professor of journalism, on "Why Women Buy." In addition, the University Chamber Singers, directed by Charles F. Schwartz of the music department, will present a program of madrigals.

Mrs. Taeuber, of Hyattsville, Md., is an internationally recognized authority on population control and has made extensive studies of the populations of most regions of the world, including the Soviet Union, Europe, Japan, parts of Africa and Latin America, and China before she was forced to leave when the Communists came to power.

She has been with the Office of Population Research since 1934, shortly after she received her doctor of philosophy degree in sociology from the University of Minnesota. A native of Meadville, Mo., she had received a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Missouri and a master of arts degree from Northwestern University.

She also has served as visiting professor in maternal and child health at Johns Hopkins University, as a consultant in international statistics for the U.S. Bureau of the Census (1940-50), and on the manpower panel research and development board of the U.S. Department of Defense (1947-53). She directed the census library project of the Library of Congress and the Census Bureau (1941-44) and since 1955 has been a consultant demographer for the Pacific Science Board.

Elio D. Monachesi, chairman of the sociology department of the University of Minnesota, who was a student at both Missouri and Minnesota at the same time as Mrs. Taeuber, states that she "is a distinguished demographer with an international reputation for her excellent scholarship. Her contribution to this field has been truly outstanding. In my opinion, she is unquestionably one of the best scholars that the department of sociology of this University has ever graduated."

The author of many books and hundreds of articles and papers, Mrs. Taeuber also belongs to numerous professional organizations and in 1953-54 served as president of the Population Association of America. She has been honored by Missouri and Northwestern universities, made a fellow of the American Statistical Association (1960) and received honorary doctorate degrees from Smith College (1960) and Western College for Women (1965).
