COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT — A POSITIVE SOLUTION

Should your company's health care premium cover the cost of paper work?

thinks so...

Yes, Blue Cross thinks so. And it's no minor convenience. The fact that Blue Cross does handle all the paper work of your health care program saves you time and costly personnel . . . this translates into money.

First, when Blue Cross handles all the paper work, it saves the expense of office space, files, supplies and expensive man hours. (This cuts your overhead and frees personnel to handle other important tasks.)

Second, when Blue Cross processes claims, you have a staff of professionals working for you. They audit every bill . . . an efficient check and balance on the money you're spending for a health care program.

(Incidentally, last year Minnesota Blue Cross processed over 200,000 hospital claims.)

This efficiency of administration does not mean you're getting less for your health care dollar. In fact, year after year, Blue Cross returns over 90 cents of every health care dollar to members in the form of benefits.

Shouldn't you expect your health care premium to include the cost of paper work? Blue Cross thinks so.

Why not call the man from Blue Cross? He's an expert in designing health care programs.

Self-Starter

It took a human self-starter to eliminate the crank. General Motors engineers have been inspired by that example ever since. They have kept to the trail laid down by a genius named Charles F. Kettering.

Back in 1910, the experts told Mr. Kettering that a practical electric starter for automobile engines was an impossibility. It took him six months to develop one. His self-starter eventually eliminated the dangerous hand-crank, revolutionizing motoring and putting women in the driver's seat. His record of scientific achievement in the decades that followed is without parallel.

And like this remarkable man's most famous invention, today's GM engineer is a self-starter—one who doesn't wait to be asked, who seeks out the tough problems and sets out to solve them.

They're a vital group, these men of science who follow the Kettering flame—restless, curious and devoted to the idea that nothing is so good it can't be improved. Their collective contribution to GM's progress over the years is beyond measure.

Put yourself in Pedro's place and decide what you would do!

Pedro Rodriguez is a resourceful 8-year-old who lives in New York City.

Last spring, Pedro went to spend his Easter vacation with relatives in Boonton, N. J. A few days later, he grew homesick, so he slipped away on the bicycle he had with him and started for New York.

After seven long hours of pedaling through strange streets and towns, he realized he was hopelessly lost. It was ten o'clock at night and he had only 15¢ in his pocket.

Through the darkness, Pedro saw the friendly light of a phone booth, dropped his lone dime in the slot and dialed "Operator." Mrs. Anna Appleton, Night Chief Operator in Bloomfield, N. J., took over the handling of his call.

Pedro knew few English words and Mrs. Appleton couldn't understand his frantic Spanish. But her calm voice reassured the boy and she held him on the line while she enlisted the help of a Spanish-speaking student at a nearby college. Patiently, they pieced together Pedro's story.

But how do you find a boy in a booth who has no idea where he is? Mrs. Appleton knew only that the call must be coming from one of five adjacent communities. In quick succession, she called the police in each town and asked them to check.

The Fairfield police found Pedro in a booth only a block from their headquarters. His mother came to get him and the story had a happy ending—thanks to a boy who knew enough to dial and an operator who lived up to the Bell System's long tradition of serving and helping, whatever the need.

Have you trained your children how to dial "O for Operator" in case of emergency?

SUBJECT: What's in a Name

A most precious possession is our name. To be called by one's name is pleasing; to have one's name mispronounced or misspelled is irritating.

A person's name takes on meaning as he makes his impact in the world. It often becomes the symbol of office, position, profession, or status. The name of a Bronko Nagurski conjures the image of the mighty athlete; a Frederick Kappel as the corporate giant; a Wangensteen that of great surgical skill — and so it goes.

At the very center of an effective alumni association is its lists of graduates — the record of names, addresses, year of graduation and college. In its 115 years of existence the University of Minnesota has granted 184,000 degrees. Presently on the alumni list are the names of 155,000 living alumni.

It is policy to keep the alumni addressing list at about 110,000 names. To keep any list of 110,000 names is in itself a difficult task even though no address changes are made. College graduates are more transient than the national average of about 20% who change their address each year. They move often during the first years after graduation and graduates of the Institute of Technology move more often than other degree holders. The complexity of the problem of maintaining a correct address list becomes plainly visible when one realizes between 25-30% of college graduates change their addresses each year. In 1948 the Alumni Office installed a sixty-selector addressograph system in order to better cope with the problem; in 1958 the change was to punch-cards and in 1962 to magnetic tape and computer.

In order to make the best use of the 110,000 names on the list, the magnetic tape and computer system allows for selection of multiple elements, singly or in any combination as follows: By Class (51 active classes are carried); By college (15 different colleges); By Department (58 of the 136 departments); By degree (168 different degrees); Geographically (all 50 states, all U. S. Territories, 68 foreign countries, every post office station in the United States.) (Zip codes are now being added at a cost of $4000.)

The original record system was set up for the specific purpose of addressing, with only limited selection. Selectivity was increased with each new system. Added to the original purpose of addressing has been cash receipts for Association membership, the Alumni Fund, and the Alumni Club, as well as all billings and the mailing of membership cards.

So we have problems but not like a University we know about that in using their new computer system for the first time mailed 1,736 copies of the alumni magazine to one alumnus. By that standard our problems are minute, but occasionally duplicate mailings do result. If you receive duplicate mailings, please let us know so we can do something about it.

Part of our problem stems from the fact we have so many identical as well as similar Scandinavian names.

According to the United States Social Security record of 165,986,723 names, the most common are:

Rank	Surname	No.	Rank	Surname	No.
1	Smith	1,678,815	11	Harris	524,895
2	Johnson	1,263,266	12	Taylor	486,339
3	Williams	1,079,986	13	Moore	485,247
4	Brown	951,320	14	Thomas	474,616

7	Davis	729,371	17	Jackson	432,440
8	Martin	678,850	18	Clark	385,206
9	Anderson	589,676	19	Robert	367,206
10	Wilson	552,676	20	Peterson	344,124

The Alumni List of 110,000 graduates of the University of Minnesota is a quite different listing than the above:

Rank	Surname	No.	Rank	Surname	No.
1	Johnson	2023	17	Jenson	211
2	Anderson	1419	18	Jones	211
3	Nelson	1007	19	Wilson	202
4	Peterson	921	20	Martin	201
5	Olson	772	21	Lee	198
6	Smith	584	22	Lund	191
7	Larson	582	23	Swenson	172
8	Carlson	570	24	Meyer	172
9	Erickson	437	25	Berg	171
10	Hanson	435	26	Benson	171
11	Miller	432	27	Davis	168
12	Swanson	357	28	Gustafson	168
13	Thompson	327	29	Hill	156
14	Brown	323	30	Clark	155
15	Hansen	228	31	Christianson	162
16	Williams	223

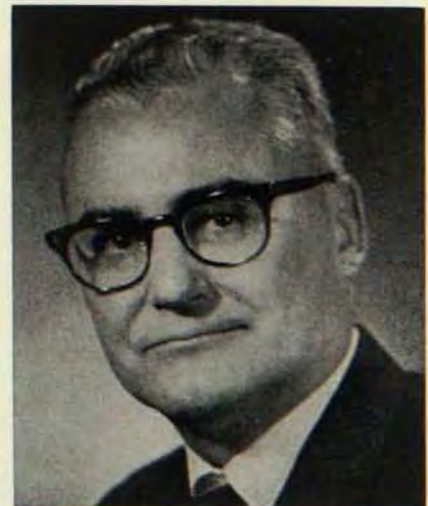

Part of our trouble is that not only are so many surnames identical but the first two initials or names are likewise identical.

Your name is important to us. We want your name and address to be correct. If there is a mistake, let us know. If you move, send us your new address. Ours is a fast growing alumni body. More alumni have received degrees in the last fifteen years than in the prior one hundred. By the year 2000, only 34 years from now, another 241,000 graduates (estimated) will have been added.

If we make a mistake in your name or address, we are sorry. We ask that you help us correct it. On the roll of Minnesota graduates your name and address should be correctly listed.

Sincerely,

Ed Havelop

“Hectic Times of Dreaming Dreams”

Education for Understanding

“The months that followed were hectic times of dreaming dreams and facing tough realities. The realities were X number of students to be taught a battery of courses in September; a miniscule budget; the necessity to make up our own staff by teaching ourselves . . . and by persuading deans and chairmen to let us borrow, without compensation, some of their best teachers. We had to make over battered old Wesbrook Hall just evacuated by Dentistry, cluttered with pipes and wires, broken plaster and splintered floors. Our dreams were of a new and better kind of general education, suited to the times and the students, most of them hitherto neglected, and to be taught by master teachers.

“To bring these dreams into actuality and to build on our slim realities we read up on past and current literature of general education, especially the reports of the Committee of Seven and their sources. We reviewed the experimenting institutions—Wisconsin, Columbia, Stephens, Sarah Lawrence and Bennington. We kept close touch with Chicago where Boucher was struggling, as we were, to shape that university’s general college. We thought back over our own education asking ourselves such wicked questions as: Which of all the courses we took contributed much, some or none to our general education? to our understanding of ourselves and others and our ability to communicate with them? to our zest for living? to our appreciation of art, music and literature, film and drama? to our faiths, beliefs, value systems that enabled us to grapple with crises and adapt to change? to our concepts of history, politics, economics and sociology of America and the privileges they gave us and the duties they demanded from us? to our understanding of the wonderful world of science, invention and technology and the radical shifts they made in the world of work and the kinds of education these shifts required. Our conclusion was that much of our schooling had been downright wasteful.

“We asked these same questions of the president, deans, many faculty and students, hoping they would tell us what studies they wished they had that they didn’t get and what they got they wished they hadn’t. In many cases we got answers and conclusions like our own.

“Out of all this emerged our first formulation of a curriculum in general education. We rejected the Wisconsin plan, convinced that our freshmen would be lost in a year of Greek culture. We turned down Boucher’s plan at Chicago as being no more than massive syntheses of traditional academic materials welded into five divisions—the biological, physical and social sciences; the humanities which Boucher defined as ‘everything left over from the sciences;’ and the tool subjects of math and English. That curriculum was, moreover, fashioned by faculty psychology on the basis of ‘Papa knows what is best for you.’ Instead, we determined to fashion the General College at first on our hunches and then on research into the needs of youth tempered by studies of the kinds of educational products our society needed in all their wonderful variety. We assumed that we could not really know what, how or when to teach until we knew both whom we were teaching and the emerging world in which they were being taught. These views were our guide through the ensuing eight years. We saw that they implied thorough testing by such instruments as were available or could be devised, expert counseling, and continuous evaluation to find out what we were getting for what we were doing.”

And so, described by Dr. Malcolm Shaw MacLean, its first administrative head, did the University’s General College come into being—“an experiment, an adventure in the field of higher education,” as President Lotus D. Coffman glowingly reported in a 1932 edition of the Daily.

When the General College was started in 1932, it was hailed as one of the most interesting experiments on the American educational scene. There were statistics to show that almost half of those students who entered the traditional four-year college as freshmen never completed the work for their degree.

The question was raised: Why not arrange for these thousands of young men and women a special course which will give them at least a view of broader educational and cultural horizons?

If they can spend just two years in college, why should they be compelled to take a series of elementary courses which are designed primarily as introductions to more advanced and specialized courses?

The answer was triggered by Robert Maynard Hutchins, brilliant young president of the University of Chicago, whose recent educational revolt in his own institution gave heart to educators everywhere by demonstrating that heresy against tradition is not followed inevitably by disaster and dissolution.

One line in Hutchins' report struck a particularly responsive chord. Under the new Chicago plan, he said, "graduation from the college, without distinction, will mean an honorable exit for the man who wishes only a general education."

Was this, then, not the key to a satisfactory answer?

"An honorable exit for its large group of similar students was exactly what the University of Minnesota was seeking," writes Historian James Gray in The University of Minnesota 1851-1951. "Such a young man was likely to enter the Arts College, flounder unhappily through a year or two of work for which he was ill-prepared, and then return to civilian life haunted by a sense of having been cheated of his democratic birthright because he had little to show for his effort.

To the Committee of Seven [Walter Coffey, dean and director of the Department of Agriculture; Guy Stanton Ford, dean of the Graduate School; Everett Fraser, dean of the Law School; John B. Johnston, dean of the Arts College; Melvin Haggerty, dean of the College of Education; Elias P. Lyon, dean of the Medical School; and James Lawrence, assistant to President Lotus D. Coffman] it seemed to be a fantastic waste of the student's time, of the teacher's effort, and of the university's facilities to require indifferent students to labor through courses in languages, in the laboratory sciences, in the 'tool' studies which they would never use. Unrelated fragments of scholarly beginnings cluttered the minds of many a housewife and many a citizen; they kept these things merely as souvenirs of a frustrating experience. What did a slightly painful glimpse of the viscera of a frog, incident to a beginning course in zoology, contribute to the usefulness in after life of the potentially useful rearer of children? What did the hazy recollection of the maddening whims of irregular verbs add to the perceptions of a man who was destined to earn his living in one of the many nonspecialized services of society's daily life? The Committee of Seven realized that, in its relations to many a student, the university had laboriously piled together stepping stones that led to nothing at all; it had distributed tools of study that could only be tucked away to rust in mental attics.

"The Committee of Seven recommended therefore in February 1932 that the regents create a new unit to experiment with the techniques of general education. For those students whose needs were met by no existing service of the university, an entirely new effort was to be made."

This was the task to which MacLean was committed, and what he produced in the end was something quite unique, a curriculum to which the best creative minds of the university had contributed their finest insights into the fundamentals of their fields.

Essential to his program was his hope of getting the best teachers in the University to participate in the experiment—a task in which he was eminently successful. Another purpose was to experiment with new techniques of instruction. Then—as now—all aids of the eye and ear were employed.

But those excitingly-successful early years were difficult.

"We battled for room space, for supplies, equipment, academic and clerical assistance, for counseling as an integral part of the work . . . for visual education men and machines to illuminate our general education and for budget allowances to support them all. And we ran into a multitude of problems, whipped many, made passes at others and left others still unsolved."

Those early years encompassing the six-year period from the establishment of the College in 1932 until 1938, are described by Dean Horace T. Morse as the Years of Initiation and Development. It was during those early years, and largely through MacLean's efforts, that a new program of general education courses was devised, and that these courses were taught by some of the most distinguished members of the University faculty.

It is a well-deserved tribute to Dr. MacLean's persuasiveness to note that courses were offered in the General College by faculty members representing almost every other college in the University. These were "borrowed" faculty in a very real sense, because the first budget of the College had only two incumbents, a director and a secretary.

The second phase was a brief but important one. This was the period from 1938 to 1940 which Morse calls the Years of Revision and Evaluation.

It was during this period that the curriculum was more formally divided into comprehensive areas, of which the four basic ones were Social-Civic, Home Life, Vocational, and Individual Orientation.

The first had as its purpose that of relating the individual to society, not as a vague abstraction labeled "good citizen of the world" but more modestly as a sound member of a group. The second was designed to reveal to the student the rich potentialities of his immediate environment. The third tried to discover to the nonspecialist with no vivid interest in any professional or creative pursuit, a means of earning a living that lay within the range of his gifts. The last of these, supported by the College's elaborate and extensive counseling system, undertook to reveal the student to himself.

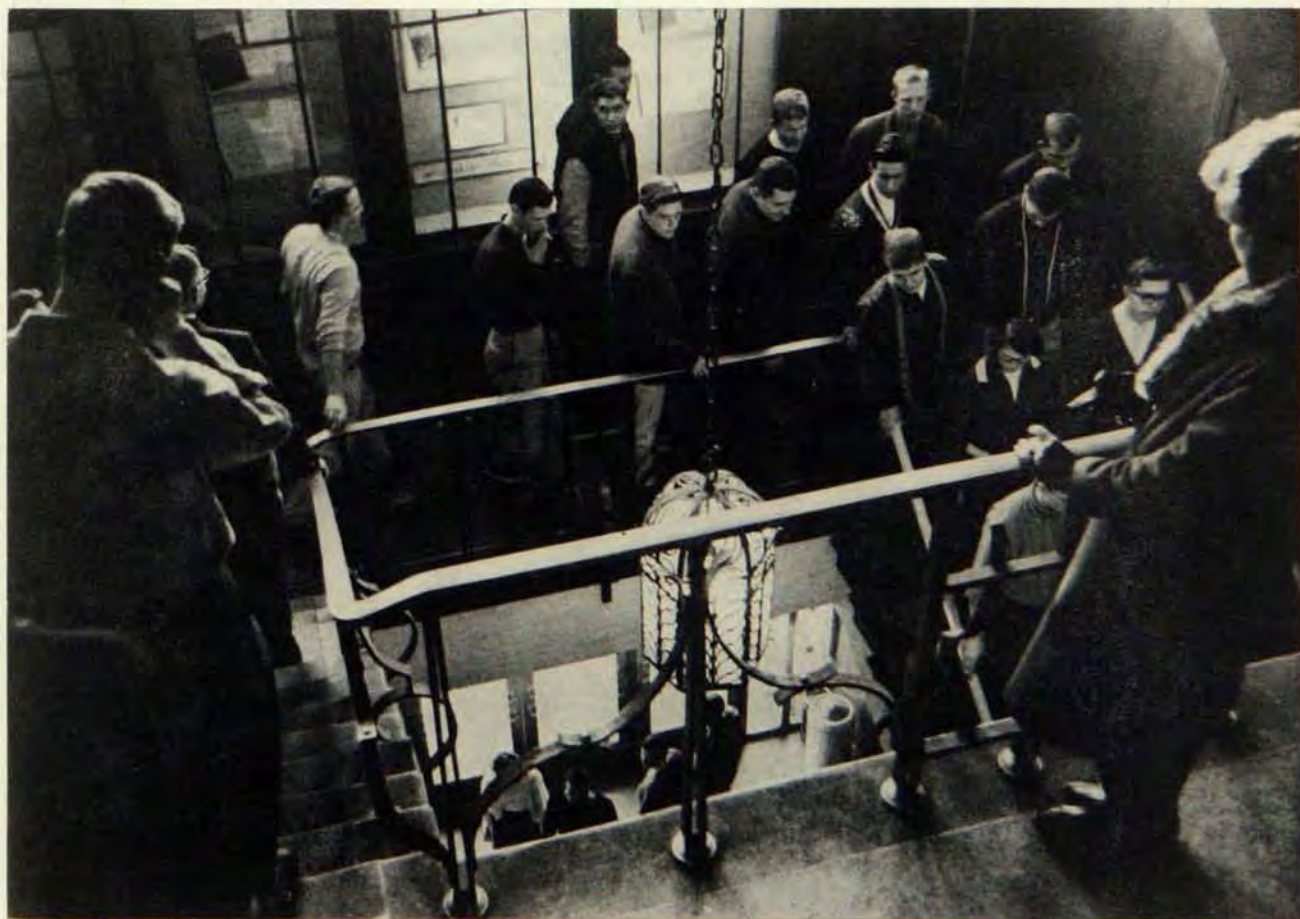

This organization of a college curriculum into "functional" subject matter areas, in part was a new and daring concept at the time.

Along with the reorganized program, an ambitious evaluation of its outcomes was devised and executed. The study, one of the first of its kind, probing all aspects of students' learning experiences and reactions, was directed by Dr. Ruth E. Eckert (who subsequently joined the faculty as professor of higher education) and published as Outcomes of General Education.

The ensuing ten-year period is categorized by Morse as the Years of Anxiety and Strain.

The war years depleted resources, student body and faculty alike. Enrollment shrank to 250 students, (the doors of Wesbrook Hall had opened wide to 489 students in the fall of 1932, 700 in 1933, and by 1936 enrollment had reached the 1,000-mark), and quiet but serious conversations were held among members of the University's central administration about the advisability of closing out the General College as an independent enterprise and absorbing its students and faculty into other colleges of the University.

But the war finally ended, and with it came another frenzied period of stress and strain, with the return of the veterans. Enrollments increased almost ten-fold in a dramatically short period of time, and only the heroic efforts of faculty and staff and the good-natured and obliging acceptance of adaptations by the returned veterans kept the whole enterprise from exploding and collapsing in grand style.

A new administrative team of Morse and Alfred L. Vaughan had taken over the operation of the College after the departure of Dr. MacLean in 1940. Morse '28BA '30MA '39PhD was a scholar and assistant in the department of history from 1928 to 1931. After teaching at Ironwood, Michigan, he returned to the University in 1936 as an education instructor. Then successively he was director of the Bureau of Recommendations, assistant to the dean of the Graduate School and, in 1940, as associate director of the General College. He was 41 when he assumed his present position in 1946, the first to bear the title of dean.

Although the nucleus of a "core" faculty had been recruited and retained by 1940, most of the instruction in the College was still provided by "borrowed" faculty.

In 1940, also, two grants from the General Education Board and the Carnegie Foundation came to an end, their termination resulting in a considerable reduction in resources and personnel available to the General College. University administration decided to retain the fledgling college, but on a more restricted basis. Accordingly, a sizeable proportion of appointments in the General College budget were part-time only, and all of them were at the lower ranks.

There were, nevertheless, some advantages which accrued to the College during the uneasy years of this third phase. The new administrative team decided upon several long-term objectives.

The first of these was to specify and give uniformity to certain procedures. Explicit requirements for the two-year Associate in Arts degree were determined; channels of communication between College committees and the faculty as a whole were established; course accreditation and numbering were restructured; the relationships between individual courses and comprehensive examinations were clarified; and transfer requirements to the four-year colleges were regularized.

The second was to consolidate part-time positions and to recruit additional members for the permanent faculty of the college as replacements for the so-called "borrowed" instruction, some of whom by this time had understandably lost their first flush of enthusiasm.

The third major objective was to upgrade the faculty of the College in rank and salary. All of these objectives had to be pursued while still maintaining a heavy service commitment to increasing numbers of students and carrying forward experimentation and research with a growing and changing curriculum.

The fourth phase of the College, while not sharply differentiated from the latter years of the third, is termed by Morse as the Years of Consolidation and Growth, lasting from 1950 to 1965.

One of the most important facets of this period was the development and refinement of the general comprehensive examination.

The purpose of these tests—which are required three times during the student's two years in college—is much less to determine the actual amount of factual information a candidate for the Associate in Arts degree has acquired than to determine the extent to which he has matured in the course of his instruction. Quite as much as such examinations measure the strengths and weaknesses of the individual student, they measure the strengths and weaknesses of the system.

As the great reservoir of questions and answers is explored again and again, it is hoped that new techniques will suggest themselves to meet new needs, in new situations. In keeping with this, the faculty recently voted to revamp the comprehensive examination into a more effective and imaginative instrument.

It was during these Years of Consolidation and Growth, too, that the curriculum and student body were expanded considerably (the latter to almost double its previous total number, during the frantic "veterans' bulge"), the divisional organization of the college was completed, more physical space was made available to the College, procedures were stabilized for the adding of new courses and their systematic evaluation, further consolidation of faculty positions on the budget of the College were made, most of the remaining instruction provided by "borrowed" staff was taken over by regular members of the College faculty, and the position of Coordinator of Research was added.

Ninety-five per cent of all General College courses now are taught by General College faculty members who number 160, including 88½ full-time instructorship or above positions. Of the 44 persons holding rank of assistant professor or above, two-thirds have doctorates, and most of those at the rank of instructor are working toward that degree. Probably no junior college faculty in the nation has comparable academic training or functions in such intimate relation with parent academic departments on a university campus.

Perhaps the greatest strength of the College, according to Dean Morse, comes from its teachers. There is probably more emphasis on effective teaching in General College than anywhere else in the University, according to Morse.

“We are able to promote and upgrade faculty members on the basis of good classroom performance, weighted by teacher effectiveness,” Morse reports and adds that he feels the enthusiasm and personal interest of the teachers are a bonus of this system. Courses, partly because of the methods and stimulating use teachers make of educational materials, are used by students in other divisions of the University with good results. Each course is relatively self-contained and designed to help a student integrate and retain knowledge.

The idea of providing “as far as possible, the very best program for an individual student, a program he could get nowhere else” has, according to Dean Morse, remained the primary objective of the College since its inception. This is the basis for its curriculum.

In many ways, the mission of the General College today is even more vital than it was in 1932. Professional schools are moving steadily toward serving a smaller proportion of an increasing student population. Liberal arts colleges are becoming more specialized in nearly every department. Knowledge is expanding and dividing at a dizzy rate. Rising entrance requirements are steadily shutting the door to the baccalaureate degree to more and more persons.

At the same time, the society of plenty has come into being, and the society of automation lies just ahead. The high school graduate finds it increasingly difficult to find employment promising any future advancement. Retraining for new jobs is the order of the day, because whole categories of jobs are disappearing. Cities are learning bitter lessons in the dangers inherent in large groups of improperly educated and unemployable young men and women.

Granting that the needs of these young people must be served by continuing to develop a meaningful program of education beyond high school, should this development take place at the University?

The student body served by the General College is characterized by diversity of preparation, ability, outlook and goals. Because the college is large, it has been able to develop a program having many facets. But in addition, it has always been able to register qualified students in courses taught in the other colleges of the University. Moreover, the students find especially valuable the libraries and laboratories, the cultural and educational events, the rich extracurricular life, and all the special services only a large university can afford to maintain.

Furthermore, the state university by the very fact that it is the state university, should stand in a position of leadership in all aspects of higher education. The General College has maintained its national position of leadership in large part because its students are an integral part of a larger body, its faculty an integral part of a larger faculty, and both share the intellectual stimulation which is part of the atmosphere of a university. More specifically, the sympathetic attention and direct cooperation of colleagues in other parts of the University have greatly assisted the work of General College.

In the coming academic years, it would appear that the General College is on the threshold of a new phase. For the first time in its history, the College's enrollment will be limited.

As soon as other institutions, such as the new Metropolitan Area Junior Colleges, can expand their facilities, the General College will scale down its admissions from the all-time high of 3,767 in the fall quarter of 1965, to a continuing ceiling of 3,000. This cutback will be made over the next three years.

Dean Morse, in presenting a detailed explanation of the College's program and methods to the Board of Regents last month, told them he resented any implication that the College is a “salvage operation” to absorb students who fail in other units at the University or who are recommended by counselors for General College enrollment because they placed low in their high school graduating class.

“Largely, they are persons who have difficulty conforming to the regular educational process,” he said. “But if you stand them

"We of the University family should take notice of and pleasure in the recent founding of the University Community Development Corporation. In this venture the University joins private educational institutions and hospitals in its immediate community to look together at the physical and social health of the area and to plan together for its improvement." From The President's Page in The Minnesotan — The University Staff Magazine of February 1966 by President O. Meredith Wilson.

The University of Minnesota is a restless creature — an organic entity, continually growing and changing in response to the demands that society places upon it. This pace of change is concurrent with those amazing breakthroughs in knowledge that have come to characterize our age of scientific and social revolution.

From an economic standpoint the University and the city has been a symbiotic one. But the relationship between town and gown is not always harmonic. There has been a history of conflict on several counts.

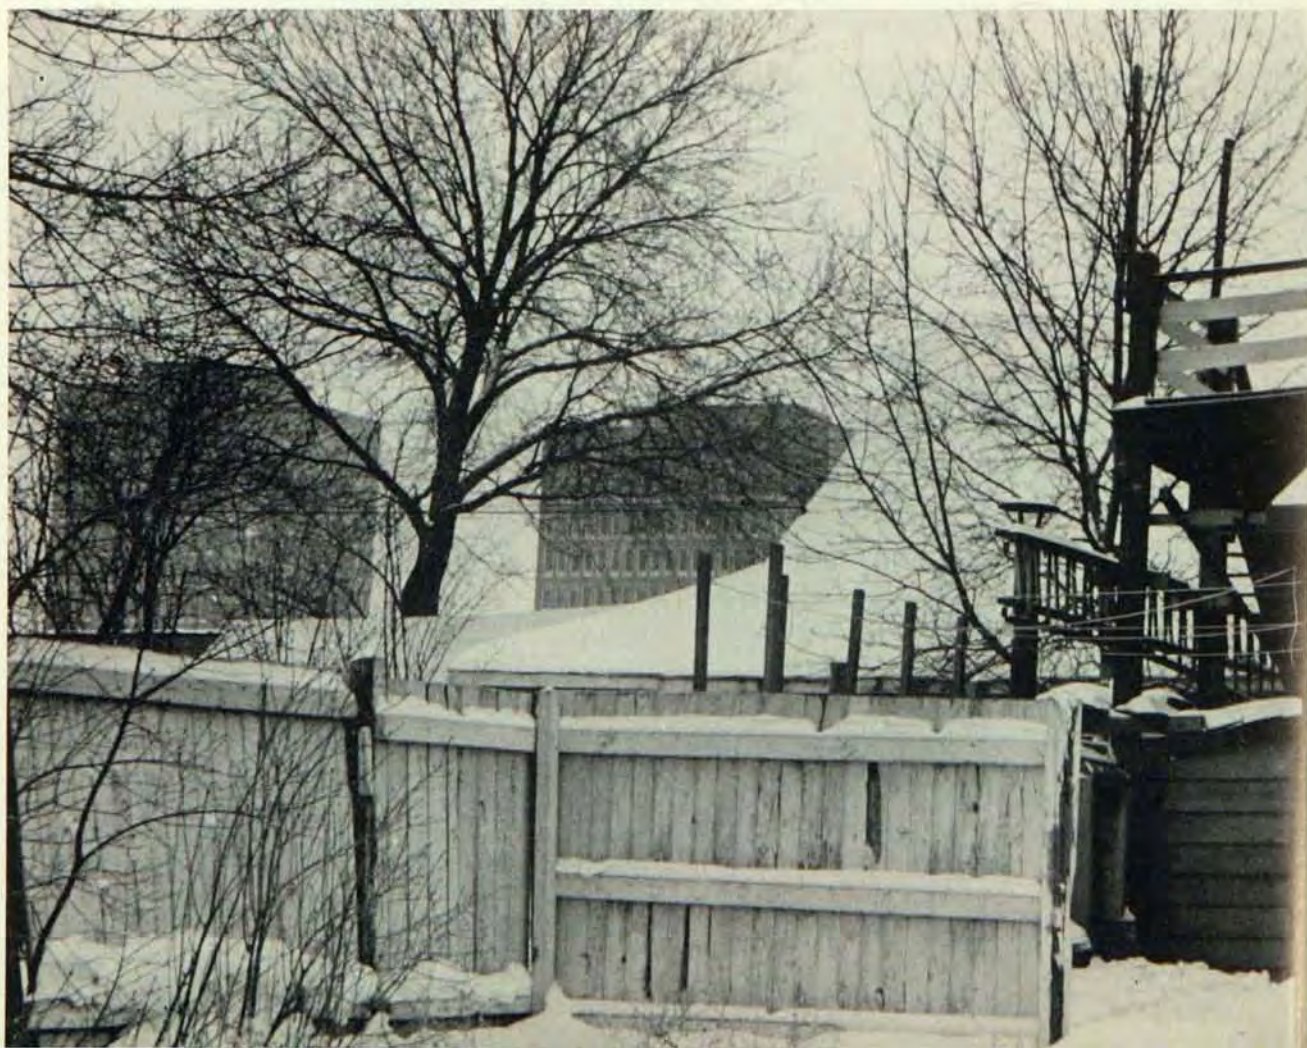

A major one has been the University's expansion and growth. A booming student population — it has doubled in the last 20 years — has placed a severe strain on its capacity to grow and on the community around it. As the face of the University has changed, so has the face of the community.

The problem is familiar to most American universities in major cities. College neighborhoods are susceptible to decline. And a major fact of twentieth century life in the United States is center-city deterioration and collapse.

The University's decision to join in forming a community development corporation is solid evidence of its concern for the future. The University Community Development Corporation was founded by officials from the University, Augsburg College, St. Mary's Hospital, St. Mary's Junior College, Fairview Hospital, Luther Seminary and the State Agricultural Society (State Fair) after they came to the belief that the problems of their institutions were also community problems. It was formed to guide physical development of the area bounded roughly by Snelling Avenue on the east, University Avenue and the proposed new freeway I-94 on the south, Cedar Avenue on the west and Roselawn Avenue and East Hennepin Avenue on the north. It encompasses the Cedar-Riverside area, University district, Como district, Prospect Park, St. Anthony Park, the Village of Lauderdale and the west end of the Village of Falcon Heights.

A new look at an old problem

University Community Development Corporation

In this five-mile-long area there are occasional instances of serious deterioration; other areas are threatened.

According to President Wilson, "The corporation seeks positive solutions to problems, but the method or means of solution will be varied and are not predetermined. It is a cooperative effort of citizens in the community, and its goals are not destructive, but creative. Fine institutions and wholesome residential, commercial, and recreational areas need protection. From a practical point of view, we need to work together to make the most effective use of our limited space. The health and physical well-being of the University and its neighbors must make us all concerned about traffic, commerce, housing, and recreation."

In January, John S. Pillsbury Jr., president of Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, Minneapolis, sent letters to St. Paul and Minneapolis officials, planners and other leaders, inviting them to a founding dinner. He wrote, in part:

"The University Area Development Corporation is to be a non-profit organization with the purpose of promoting sound development of the area anchored by the St. Paul-Minneapolis Campus of the University of Minnesota. Its formation reflects a concern that the public and private investments within this area, and those to be made in the future, cannot achieve their full potential for the betterment of the total metropolitan community and for the state of Minnesota without more effective planning for, and organization of, the entire area."

According to Pillsbury's letter, "the idea of such a corporation is now new — for example, similar organizations exist in Philadelphia and Cleveland."

He also wrote that "we believe that this area, with its institutional base, is so important to the metropolitan community, to the state, and to the upper Midwest that opportunities inherent in its further development are unexcelled."

The articles of incorporation state that the purposes of the Corporation will be to compile and disseminate data on the area; to encourage the exchange of information among residents, organizations and public officials regarding area problems; and to recommend "such action to organizations, residents, citizens and to public bodies as may be deemed necessary or appropriate for community conservation, rehabilitation or improvement and taking action to those ends, including the acquisition, improvement, management and resale or other disposition of land, buildings or other interests in property to or in behalf of such corporations as are organized and operated exclusively for charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes."

President Wilson, as main speaker at the founding dinner, told the more-than-400 guests that he was "a spokesman for an idea, not the University" and told them the plans that the Corporation has for protecting the University community area "from the canker of blight" that was creeping in.

He said although Twin Cities residents "have never failed to take interest in and care of the advantages provided their cities by nature . . . it's time we serve our community as well as having it serve us."

Oscar A. Anderson, president of Augsburg College, lauded Wilson for his "vigor, enthusiasm and capability" in playing a major role in the building of the Corporation.

The corporation must possess a spirit of "genuine cooperation . . . to break down all the barriers that hinder the orderly, healthful development of this area," Anderson said, and also needed were "a deep sense of responsibility as well as enlightend self-interest" and "a vision of beauty."

"Sometimes today beauty becomes secondary if not irrelevant. We must make our metropolis a magnet. Let us give ourselves to the agony and the ecstasy of this creative endeavor.

Formation of the Corporation already has touched off fireworks with some of the area commercial associations, particularly in the Cedar-Riverside area (which includes Seven Corners), who charge that the Corporation was formed "behind our backs" without consulting with residents of the community.

Elmer W. Learn, assistant to President Wilson who is specifically charged with the University's long-range planning, denies this and stresses that the group has no plans for sweeping renewal of the area and will not act without consulting with residents of the community.

"It is not a planning corporation. It should serve a fact-finding, advisory role to the City Planning Commission.

"The idea of the Corporation is not to replace existing organizations, but to lend a supporting hand, to create a vehicle that will reflect the broad range of interests that are concerned about the development of this area."

He also adds that the University's future areas of expansion already have been charted and that the "goal of the Corporation is to insure that the health of the community is such that it will protect this tremendous investment, as well as protecting the neighborhood."

The development group hopes to function along the lines of the West Philadelphia Corporation, which has been a prime mover for community development around the State University of Pennsylvania, and the South East Chicago Commission, which has been a leader in obtaining $40 million for improvement of the University of Chicago's Hyde Park neighborhood.

Both the West Philadelphia Corporation and the South East Chicago Commission have been committed to the so-called University City planning concept. This concept calls for the creation of pleasant, residential neighborhoods around institutions of higher learning.

The University's decision to join in the formation of the Corporation is solid evidence of a quiet revolution in the institution's regard for long-range planning and involvement in city affairs.

Involvement of the University in planning for an integrated university community is a marked departure from the past, where the institution and City Hall over the years have cultivated a mutual hands-off policy.

Traditionally the land-grant universities have operated without a flinch in providing expertise as institutions in the area of agriculture, primarily with their extension programs.

It is now being suggested that these same schools turn their focus on urban life, if for no other reason than the urban problems have dramatically outstripped rural problems in urgency in these states.

A leading proponent of university involvement in urban affairs is J. Martin Klotsche, chancellor of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

In The Urban University and the Future of Our Cities, just published by Harper & Row, he writes that "the urban university that accepts the challenge of its location can be instrumental in shaping the future of our cities."

It is his feeling that the entire university must become involved in the problems of urban society; it is not enough of a commitment to simply permit individual faculty members to go their own ways as individuals. It is time, he feels, for the universities to put their prestige on the line in urban America.

The University community for many years has recognized the University-city mutual non-intervention policy.

In 1960 Arnold Rose, professor of sociology, wrote: ". . . The city government has had a 'hands-off' policy with regards to the University area, while the University — for the past 25 years at least — has considered its surroundings of no concern to it.

"The result is that problems affecting the University community have been allowed to grow unchecked and will soon create crisis both for the University and for the city."

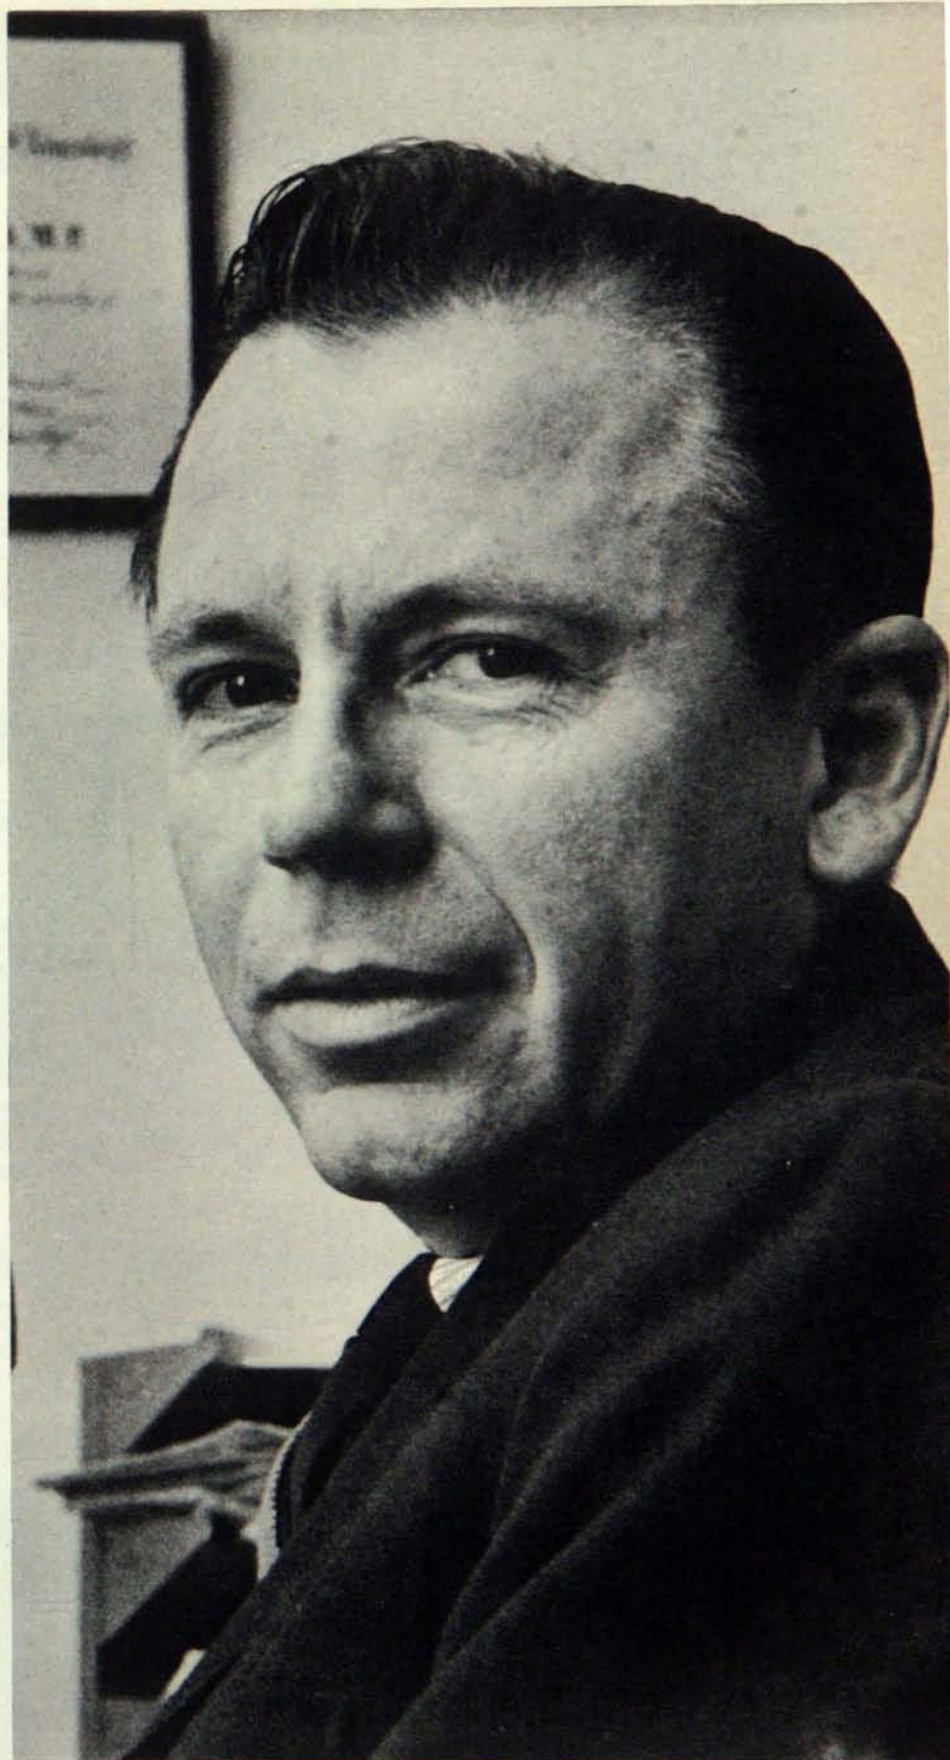

At still another point in his article in Inform, publication of the University Chapter of the American Association of University Professors, Rose wrote:

"The city government and the University continue their traditional policy of mutual forbearance, and

FACULTY CLOSE-UP

DR. HUGH A. STORROW, a Californian who recently arrived at the University by way of Kentucky, has two major interests: improving diagnostic evaluation of learning theory to psychiatric evaluation and treatment. A professor in the department of psychiatry and neurology, his latest project is preparation of a book dealing with the latter, "Scientific Psychiatry, a Manual for Behavioristic Diagnosis and Treatment." Basically, he says, his idea is to apply psychological learning theory to psychiatric diagnosis and treatment. It is an idea he has been working on for about three years and about which he has published three papers. Currently teaching full time, he later will have a private practice and will put more emphasis on research. One research project he has in mind is an attempt to classify the different therapeutic techniques used by psychiatrists, and then set up studies of the effects of the varying techniques. Since 1960 Dr. Storrow has been associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Kentucky Hospital, Veterans Administration Hospital and the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital in Lexington. He has taught at Yale University School of Medicine and the University of California in Los Angeles in addition to maintaining a private practice. Both his bachelor of arts degree and doctor of medicine degree are from the University of Southern California. He, his wife and three children now live in Edina, a Minneapolis suburb.

THE UNIVERSITY

Board of Regents Approves Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree

A Bachelor of Fine Arts degree for students majoring in art, music and theater was passed unanimously last month by the University's Board of Regents.

The board approved the new degree following an explanation of its purposes by E. W. Ziebarth, dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Ziebarth told the Regents the establishment of the degree "is a move to catch up with other institutions; we are the only school in the Big Ten, for example, that doesn't grant a professional degree in music."

Ziebarth added that in the past the only departments in the College of Liberal Arts offering professional training were the schools of journalism, library science and social work. This is the first time the College has offered anything other than a Bachelor of Arts degree.

Candidates for the new degree will meet the requirements for the College of Liberal Arts and meet the all-University distribution requirements defined by the Council on Liberal Education. The candidates, however, will not have to meet all the requirements for the BA degree.

It is anticipated that the BFA degree will be awarded to a relatively small number of students, those who wish to become performing actors, musicians or artists and who are felt to be capable of such achievement.

At least 110 other institutions of higher education, including all members of the Big Ten, and most of the major universities throughout the country offer a degree in applied music, such as a bachelor of music or a BFA.

NCAA Hockey Tourney Slated at University

The University this month will play host to the collegiate hockey event of the year, the NCAA Tournament, which will be played at Williams Arena Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 17 through 19.

In addition, the National Hockey

Coaches Association will hold its annual convention in conjunction with the tourney. The convention, which will bring the elite of the nation's college and high school coaches to the Twin Cities, will headquarter at the Curtis Hotel, downtown Minneapolis.

Semi-final games will be played Thursday and Friday night with one eastern team playing one western squad each night. The consolation game is scheduled for Saturday afternoon and the championship game that night.

Borchert Named Special Assistant

John R. Borchert, professor of geography, has been named special assistant to Stanley J. Wenberg, vice president for educational relationships and development.

Borchert will serve as the University's liaison with many developing state programs, particularly with the Minnesota Outdoor Recreation Resources Committee and the new State Planning Office created by the 1965 state legislature.

Borchert, who joined the University faculty in 1949, was chairman of the geography department from 1956-61.

Faust Named Tour Counselor

Paul Faust, captain of the 1965 Gopher football team, has been selected by Parade Publications, Inc., as one of seven college students who will serve as counselors on Parade's "Young Columbus" European trip for 84 newspaper carrier boys next month.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

have allowed the forces of change and expansion to deteriorate the area.

"Their shortsightedness will gradually allow the residential character of the community surrounding the University to be destroyed; and when the University ultimately faces the consequences of the processes now going on, it will have to promote an extremely costly urban renewal program."

Such programs were eventually forced on the University of Chicago and the State University of Pennsylvania.

Both universities became the motivating force behind private development corporations and both pushed hard for federally-financed redevelopment projects to rehabilitate their surrounding neighborhoods.

Neither university acted in time and, as a result, an urban renewal program in Chicago's Hyde Park neighborhood has used bulldozers for major clearance, resulting in the dislocation of many hundreds of persons.

Undoubtedly the University's new commitment has been prompted by the fact that it is now engaged in building the West Bank Campus in the midst of what one Twin Cities newspaper has called "a virtual slum - Cedar-Riverside, including the Seven Corners area."

In addition, formation of the Corporation reflects a similar concern among the other institutions in the area who are, likewise, faced with the problem of expanding in a neighborhood that has been allowed to deteriorate for years.

Its deterioration has been well documented by recent City Planning Department surveys, which note that Cedar-Riverside housing conditions are the worst of any neighborhood in the city which is not presently scheduled for urban renewal.

Finally, the institutions realize that there is also a necessity for some kind of master land-use plan to be formed for the University and its Minneapolis and St. Paul neighbors. With all these institutions growing in the same general neighborhood, it is quite likely that some land-acquisition plans will conflict unless they band together and agree on lines and boundaries of future growth.

It must be remembered, however, that other neighborhoods besides Cedar-Riverside surround the University and will be included in the Corporation's plans.

The Minneapolis Planning Commission's staff has been working on developing a comprehensive plan for the West Bank area along with the Cedar-Riverside Area Council. The University and its neighboring institutions have been active members of the council for more than a year.

While no plans have yet been developed for the area, it is felt that any notion the Planning Department is likely to come up with will almost certainly call for urban renewal, at least in part. The department, in a Community Improvement Program report last December, noted that poor housing conditions "leave little doubt that drastic action is necessary to restore this section of Riverside (the portion west of Cedar Avenue) to a desirable area of our city."

1,606 Foreign Students On University Campuses

Ninety-six nations are represented in the current directory of 1,606 nationals of foreign countries affiliated with the University during the current school year, according to Forrest G. Moore, director of the University's Office of the Advisor to Foreign Students. They are enrolled, or working in, 151 major fields of study.

While totally, this is an increase of only two over the 1,604 listed in last year's directory, actually, the number of new students - 423 this fall, as compared with 310 last fall - has risen. In addition, 171 more students completed their work at the University last year and returned to their homelands than did so in the previous year.

The directory is prepared as a part of the nationwide annual census of "foreign students, staff members, doctors of medicine and persons engaged in training in the United States." This census is sponsored by the Institute of International Education, the U.S. Department of State, the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs and the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

Because it is compiled in connection with these national programs, with reporting categories established nationally, the directory does not represent official University registration figures, Moore pointed out. Many persons listed in it may not be registered at the University if they satisfy their legal status in other ways.

In its "Directory of Nationals of Other Countries," Moore's office uses two types of classifications: students affiliated with the University and foreign nationals affiliated with the University on special programs.

Of the 96 countries represented,

Taiwan has the largest group - 173. Following in line, others in the "top ten" are India, 147; Canada, 107; Korea, 65; Philippines, 49; United Arab Republic, 38; Pakistan, 29; Iran, 27; Japan, 22; and Israel, 19.

The 20 countries each having only one national affiliated with the University are Afghanistan, British West Indies, Central African Republic, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Macao, Morocco, Nepal, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Sudan, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago, U.S.S.R., Upper Volta, West Cameroons and Zambia.

Also included in the directory are lists of the 19 foreign student organizations which make up the International Student Council and information about international affairs representatives of other campus and off-campus groups interested in or affiliated with foreign student work at the University.

Symphony Will Participate In Summer Session Program

Stansilaw Skrowaczewski and members of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra will join with the faculties of the departments of music and music education at the University this summer in a unique program in music education.

The orchestra, under the direction of Skowaczewski, will become a teaching instrument during the first term of the 1966 Summer Session at the University, June 13 to July 10.

The project is the first in a series of steps which will lead to the establishment of an Upper Midwest Center for Music Arts.

This first summer the orchestra, as a unit, and its members, individually, will be available to the Summer Session as teachers and performers, participating in a wide-ranging series of workshops, institutes and Summer Session courses. In addition, a number of distinguished guests will serve as visiting faculty.

Hugh Ross, founder of the Tanglewood festival choral department, will direct the sixth annual Choral Arts Workshop. In addition, Ross will make use of the orchestra in air-conditioned Northrop Memorial auditorium, presenting a music appreciation course which will be open to the public as well as to students enrolled in the Summer Session.

Milton Babbitt, professor of music at Princeton University and a leading American composer, will serve as co-director, with Skrowaczewski, in a week-long Contemporary Music Workshop.

Taking part in the summer program will be 100 gifted high school choral, orchestra and band musicians from throughout Minnesota, who will be in residence for four weeks of intensive instruction in music theory, introduction to musical composition, applied music and chamber music. The young musicians will rehearse with the symphony under the direction of the symphony's music director and his assistant conductor. The choral group also will participate in the Choral Arts Workshop. Graduate courses in music education will be correlated with the instruction offered to the high school students.

Highlighting the project will be a series of public presentations in Northrop auditorium.

Plan Coordinator

Kathryn Scott Randolph, formerly associate dean of students at the University of North Dakota, has been appointed coordinator of the Minnesota Plan for Women's Continuing Education at the University.

Mrs. Randolph, whose position is under the Office of Dean of Students and who also was named an assistant professor, succeeds Vera M. Schletzer who has become director of counseling for the General Extension Division.

Prior to her North Dakota position, which she held just one semester before coming to the University, Mrs. Randolph taught in the School of Education and the Elementary Curriculum Laboratory at Indiana University. For two years prior to that, she was coordinating counselor at Bradley University. She holds a doctor of education degree in higher education and guidance from Indiana and an MA in education from Bradley.

From 1950 when she received a BS degree from the University of Illinois, until 1962, she taught a wide variety of subjects in elementary, junior and senior high schools in Illinois. Previously she had worked as a chemist and she also served in the U.S. Marine Corps Women's Reserve.

Mrs. Randolph has received a number of honors and awards, including the Phi Mu National Scholarship Award in 1964.

against the wall with other students, I defy you to separate them."

He said that many of the 25 per cent who go on to other colleges at the University, or to other schools, for a full four years after the two years in General College, would never get a college education were it not for General College.

In order that the population in the college will continue to be as similar as possible to that obtained during all previous years, admission will be on a lottery basis.

With a reduction in student enrollment the College will, however, be permitted to retain a proportionately larger number of faculty positions, using the academic year 1964-65 as a base, when enrollment was 3,672. Thus the student-faculty ratio will be reduced, which should provide greater flexibility in the use of faculty time and talents.

As a consequence, it may be anticipated that the experimental and research mission of the College will receive greater emphasis, so that in time the college may more nearly assume the function of an educational pilot plant.

One of its major purposes may well become that of providing additional training and internship experiences for prospective college teachers.

Other directions of future development include the expansion of offerings in General College courses, increased cooperation with the junior colleges, and addition of more occupational training programs.

In 1940 a wide study of the problem of vocational courses began and presently, despite the adverse conditions produced by the war, the first of such sequences were introduced. With these the College experimented actively, undertaking to respond to any new need in business or the professions.

Some were successful—practical nursing, dental assisting, retailing and selling—while others were not —among them an airline hostess course and one in library assistant training. Nevertheless the College continues to try the untried, estimating new needs, attempting to meet them, abandoning the effort if it proves unproductive and trying something else.

Presently on the drawing boards, with the advent of Medicare, are expanded offerings in the medical technician fields.

At Minnesota the experiment in general education was conducted under a strong spotlight, and the history of its development has affected the development of many another similar institution, including Ohio State University, the University of Utah and the University of Florida at Gainesville.

Minnesota may well be proud that its University is unique in establishing and supporting a college devoted to an important segment of youth which is usually brushed off or ignored. It is conserving human resources. Without the opportunity the General College offers, part of these resources would be largely wasted—wasted to our social life, to our economic life, to our democratic commonwealth. The welfare of our nation is in direct ratio to the welfare of the people who inhabit it and who constitute, in fact, the nation. As the one prospers and fulfills its potentialities, so does the other.

At 34, the General College is still a young institution; yet it feels the pride of accomplishment. This pride is based upon three contributions to the theory and practice of education.

First, for the student who has lost his way, General College provides a place to recover faith in his abilities; second, for "the people about whom the politicians speak," as Dean Morse defines them, it gives immediately useful instruction; and, finally, through counseling and development of new techniques in instruction and examination, it continues to give the student a sense of himself as an individual, and of his important share in society.

Notice to the Membership

New Bylaws of the Minnesota Alumni Association adopted at a meeting of the Board of Directors January 25, 1966.

Edwin L. Haislet
Executive Director

MINNESOTA ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

ARTICLE I Membership

Section 1. Regular Members. Any graduate or former student of the University of Minnesota, including the University of Minnesota Duluth and University of Minnesota, Morris, shall be eligible for membership upon the payment of $5.00 annual dues, or if having graduated less than six years before applying for membership, upon the payment of the following dues:

1st year out	Regent's membership (free)
2nd year out	Membership fee of $1.00
3rd year out	Membership fee of $2.00
4th year out	Membership fee of $3.00
5th year out	Membership fee of $4.00
6th year out	Membership fee of $5.00
Thereafter	Regular membership fee as determined by the Bylaws of the Association

For the purpose of this section a "former student" is anyone who has completed fifteen credits of work in either day or night school or extension, but excluding correspondence courses.

A husband and wife may become members upon payment of the following dues:

- Annual: Upon payment of additional $1.00 or a total membership fee of $6.00
- Five-Year: Upon payment of additional $0.50 a year ($4.00) or a total membership fee of $24.00
- Life: Upon payment of an additional $25.00 or a total membership fee of $125.00

Section 2. Faculty. Whether or not a graduate or former student, if associated with the University of Minnesota as a member of the Board of Regents, as a person holding a full-time faculty academic appointment or as an administrative officer, upon the payment of $2.50 annual dues.

Section 3. Life Memberships. Any of the foregoing may become life members upon the payment of $100.00.

Section 4. General. All members shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of membership, including the subscription to the ALUMNI NEWS, the official publication of the Association.

ARTICLE II Organization

Section 5. Board of Directors. The government of the Association shall be vested in a Board of Directors which shall have control over its property and the general direction of its affairs, subject to review by the membership as hereinafter provided. The Board of Directors of the Association shall consist of the following members:

- Twenty (20) members selected by the general membership
- Six (6) members at large appointed by the Board of Directors
- One (1) member from each of the duly constituted constituent societies
- The presidents of such other special alumni groups as authorized by the Board of Directors

The number of members of the Board of Directors representing the constituent societies and the special alumni group shall not exceed nineteen (19).

Each Director, whether elected or appointed as a member at large, shall serve one term of four years or one or more short terms not exceeding four years and shall thereafter be ineligible for further membership on the Board. In case of a vacancy on the Board other than a vacancy occurring because of expiration of a term of office, the appointee shall serve only for the balance of the term.

Section 6. Eligibility. Any active member of the Association in good standing shall be eligible to be a member of the Board of Directors or an officer of the Association.

Section 7. Honorary Members of the Board. Every Past President of the corporation and of the Minnesota Alumni Association shall be an honorary member of the Board of Directors, and additional honorary members may be elected from time to time by the Board of Directors. Honorary members shall be notified of meetings of the Board of Directors, but the failure to notify the honorary members of any meeting shall not invalidate said meeting. Honorary members shall have the right to attend and speak at said meetings, but shall have no vote, nor shall the number of honorary members be considered in determining whether or not a quorum of the Board of Directors is present.

Section 8. Special Members of the Board.

Presidents of special alumni groups, the membership of which cross over college and departmental lines, thus prohibiting constituent status, are eligible for ex officio membership on the Board of Directors of the Association, provided they are nominated by at least three members of the Alumni Board and elected by a three-fourths vote of same.

Section 9. Quorum. At all meetings of the members at least fifty (50) members in good standing and actually present shall be necessary to constitute a quorum. Eleven of the regular members of the Board of Directors shall constitute a quorum. At committee meetings a majority of the committee shall constitute a quorum. At any meeting a majority of the quorum present shall be entitled to carry on business and adopt resolutions. Voting by proxy shall not be permitted at any meeting.

Section 10. Order of Business. Except as herein otherwise provided at all meetings of the Association or any of its component parts, Roberts Rules of Order will govern.

ARTICLE III

Officers

The officers of this Association shall consist of a President, a First Vice President, a Second Vice President, each of whom shall be an ex officio. The First Vice President shall succeed with voting rights, a Secretary and a Treasurer, each to be elected by the Board of Directors for a term of one year or until his successor is elected and qualified. The Second Vice President shall succeed the First Vice President in office. The First Vice President shall succeed the President in office.

Section 11. President. The President shall be the chief executive officer and as such shall preside at all meetings of the members, the Board of Directors and of the Executive Committee, and shall be the official representative of the Association at all times with respect to its relationship to the University and to the public. All general communications shall be subject to the approval of the President and (excluding individual correspondence) shall be in the discretion of the President and Executive Director. The President shall be an ex officio member of all committees, with voting privileges.

Section 12. Secretary. The Secretary of the Association shall attest to the minutes of the meeting of the Board of Directors and to the minutes of the meetings of the members and the Executive Committee. He may, however, delegate the mechanical preparation of said minutes to the Executive Director or his staff.

Section 13. Treasurer. The Treasurer shall present a report with respect to the financial affairs of the Association at the annual meeting and at such other times as may be directed by the Board of Directors. An annual audit of the books and accounts of the said Association shall be had by an independent certified public accountant who shall be employed by the Treasurer with the consent of the President. The Board of Directors may authorize the Treasurer and such other persons as it may appoint to sign or countersign checks drawn by the Association on any bank account or bank accounts of the Association. The Treasurer shall have the responsibility annually to review with the University of Minnesota the Association's fiscal relationship to the University. He shall be chairman and an ex officio member of the Investment Committee.

Section 14. Order of Authority. In the event there is a vacancy in the Office of President, the First Vice President shall succeed to the Presidency. In the absence of the President, the First Vice President or the Second Vice President, the Treasurer and the Secretary in the order named shall assume the duties of President. In the absence or disability of the above named officers the Board of Directors shall select from its own members a president pro tem.

Section 15. Terms of Office. All terms of office shall commence on July 1st and continue for a period of one year. All officers shall continue in their office ex officio even though their term on the Board of Directors will expire before the completion of said office.

Section 16. Vacancies. Vacancies occurring, other than by expiration of a term, in the Board of Directors or among the officers shall be filled for the unexpired term by the Board of Directors. This may be done at a meeting called for that purpose or by ballot sent to each member of the Board.

ARTICLE IV

Executive Committee

Section 17. Membership. The members of the executive committee shall consist of the President, the last living immediate Past President, all Vice Presidents, the Secretary and the Treasurer, and not to exceed six others selected by the President from the Board of Directors, all of whom shall be approved by the Board of Directors.

Section 18. Duties. In the interim between meetings of the Board of Directors it shall act for and on behalf of the Board of Directors. It shall also analyze the annual departmental budgets made up and submitted by the Executive Director and in turn shall prepare and submit the budget to the Board of Directors through the President, with recommendations. In addition it shall advise, counsel with and make recommendations to the President, the Board of Directors and to the Executive Director upon finances, management policy and other business coming before the Association.

ARTICLE V

Executive Director

Section 19. Executive Director. An Executive Director of the Association shall be appointed by the Board of Directors for such term and upon such conditions with respect to duties and compensation as may from time to time be determined by said Board.

Section 20. Duties. The Executive Director shall manage the day-to-day affairs of the said Association subject to and in accordance with directions and instructions of the President. He shall have power to make such purchases and expend such funds as may be within the scope of the budget from time to time adopted by the Board of Directors or the Executive Committee. Upon concurrence of the President, the Executive Director may employ full time or part-time employees but only upon such terms and under such conditions as are approved by the President.

Section 21. Constituent Societies. The Association shall act as a secretariat to each of the constituent societies and its Executive Director will serve as Executive Director to each of the constituent societies.

Section 22. Disbursements. No liability shall be incurred in behalf of the Association by any member of the Association or by any Director, officer, committee or any member of the administrative staff of the Association unless the same shall be provided for in an annual budget prepared under the supervision of the Executive Committee and approved by the Board of Directors. All disbursements shall be made by vouchers stating the purpose for which the funds are expended signed by the Treasurer, such other officers, the Executive Director or staff members as may be authorized by the Executive Committee. No appropriation of money or other property of the Association shall be made for any purpose other than as provided in the budget and other than to defray the legitimate expenses of the Association except by unanimous consent of the members present at any meeting of the Board of Directors or Executive Committee.

ARTICLE VI

Seal

Section 23. Seal. The Association shall have a seal in such design as the Board of Directors may adopt.

ARTICLE VII

Section 24. Official Publication. An official publication of the Association shall be issued to its members and shall be known as the "Alumni News." Editorial expressions relating to policy matters of the University or the Association shall be published in the "Alumni News" only after review by and consent of the President of the Association.

Section 25. Policy. All resolutions adopted by committees and all reports and other communications which purport to reflect the views, attitude or policy of the Association shall first be approved by the Board of Directors before being made available either to the membership of the Association or to the public, except such resolutions, reports or other communications as shall have been approved or authorized in advance by the Board of Directors. No committee shall of its own volition commit the Association to any policy of any kind whatsoever without first having obtained the approval of the Board of Directors.

Section 26. Referendum. When the Board of Directors deems any subject of sufficient importance, it may subject the same to referendum by a ballot printed in the "Alumni News"; or on a petition signed by fifty (50) members after reference and consideration by the proper committee; provided the subject is germane to the purpose for which the Association exists, the Board shall submit the same to such a referendum. The ballots shall be counted within twenty days after that issue of "Alumni News" containing the ballot is mailed. The ballots shall provide for their return to the office of the Executive Director. The envelopes containing the ballots shall be opened and the ballots tallied on the 21st day after the date of mailing of said issue by a committee of three, appointed by the President. The results thereof shall be communicated in writing by the committee to the President.

ARTICLE VIII Meetings

Section 27. Annual Meeting. The annual meeting of the Association shall be held at such place and time as the Board of Directors shall determine, which determination shall be made at least three months prior to the date of the meeting. Notice thereof shall be published at least sixty (60) days prior to the date of the meeting in the "Alumni News." At this meeting the annual reports of the officers shall be made and the newly elected President, First Vice President and Directors shall be presented.

Section 28. Special Meetings. Special meetings of the members may be called at any time by the written request of four directors or twenty-five (25) members, filed with the President, or in his absence, with the First Vice President, which said call shall briefly state the purpose of the meeting. Notice of the time, place and purpose of said meeting shall be published at least once in the "Alumni News," such publication to be not less than twenty (20) days prior to the time of said meeting.

Section 29. Directors' Meetings. Regular meetings of the Board of Directors shall be called by the President at such time and place as the Board of Directors or the Executive Committee shall designate, provided, however, that the Board shall meet not less than three times a year. Special meetings of the Board may be called by the President and shall be called by the President or Secretary on written request of four (4) directors and said call shall briefly state the purpose of the meeting.

Section 30. Annual Board Meeting. The annual meeting of the Board of Directors shall be held prior to the time of the annual meeting of the members. At said annual meeting the election of officers shall take place. The President shall present to the Board at that time the list of persons nominated to be members at large on the Board and as officers, as compiled by the nominating committee. Any other persons may have their names placed in nomination for such positions upon the motion of a member of the Board and seconded by any other member.

Section 31. Notice of Meetings. Except as hereinbefore provided relative to the meetings of the members, notice of all meetings under these bylaws shall be given by mail, telegraph or telephone by the Executive Director upon request by the President, as follows:

- (a) Meetings of the board of Directors, not less than Forty-eight (48) hours nor more than thirty (30) days;
- (b) Meetings of the Executive Committee, not less than Twenty-four (24) hours nor more than fifteen (15) days.

Section 32. Scope of Meetings. Any business within the scope of the corporate powers of the Association and in accordance with these bylaws may be transacted at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors or at any meeting of the Association. Any business within the jurisdiction of the Board of Directors may be transacted at the regular Director's meeting provided that no vacancy shall be filled by the Board at any meeting unless the object of so doing is specified in the notice or call.

ARTICLE IX Committees

Section 33. Nominating Committee. The nominating committee shall consist of the President, as chairman, the two immediate living Past Presidents, the First Vice President, the Second Vice President, and two additional members of the Association other than Board members, appointed by the President. The nominating committee shall meet upon call of the President of the Association but in any event in ample time to allow voting upon the persons nominated.

Section 34. Function of Nominating Committee. The nominating committee will have a two-fold function: First, it will nominate not less than two members for each Director to be elected by the membership to the Board. Second, it will nominate at least one person for each vacancy to be filled by the Board as members at large.

Section 35. Board. The nominating committee shall report in writing to the President of the Association as to those members they have selected to be nominated for election to the Board of Directors. Said report shall be made at least ninety (90) days prior to the date of the annual meeting. Nominations to the Board of Directors may also be made upon petition of not less than twenty-five (25) members of the Association, filed in writing with the President of the Association not less than ninety (90) days prior to the annual meeting. The President shall notify the Executive Director of all persons nominated.

Section 36. Ballots and Canvassing. Upon delivery of the report of the nominating committee to the President, the latter shall cause the Executive Director to prepare a form of ballot subject to the President's approval and cause it to be published in the next subsequent issue of the "Alumni News." The ballot shall be in such form that the same may be clipped from the publication and mailed to the office of the Executive Director. The ballot shall indicate the college, school, place of residence, year of graduation or attendance, degrees and other pertinent information relative to such nominee. In case of nomination by petition the ballot shall contain after the name of each person so nominated the statement: "Nomination by petition." On the same page with the printed ballot shall appear specific directions with respect to the marking and mailing of said ballot, together with a statement indicating the final date the ballots must be received in order to be counted. The names of the nominees on the ballot shall be arranged in alphabetical order. The election committee appointed by the President shall count the ballots and the results of the election shall be reported at the annual meeting of the Board. Any member receiving a copy of the "Alumni News" shall be presumed eligible to vote. He need not attach his name to the ballot. It will be sufficient if his name and return address is on the envelope containing the ballot. All members shall be entitled to vote.

Section 37. Nominations for Members at Large. The names of those persons selected as nominees for vacancies on the Board as members at large shall be communicated to the President at least two weeks prior to the annual meeting. The President in turn shall communicate the recommendations to the Board at its annual meeting.

Section 38. Qualifications. The nominating committee, in making nominations of those to run for election to the Board shall give due regard to the representation by college, sex, schools, organized alumni units and geographical areas, keeping in mind, however, such representations on the Board of Directors as will not make it difficult to secure attendance of a quorum at any meeting thereof.

Section 39. The membership of the Board of Directors representing constituent societies shall be selected by each society in accordance with its own rules and bylaws; provided, however, that no one person shall serve more than four consecutive years unless an officer of this Association, and provided further, that the method of selection shall have been approved by the Executive Committee of the Association.

Section 40. Standing and Special Committees. The Board of Directors, upon the recommendation of the President, shall name such standing committees and special committees as the Board may deem necessary for the conduct of the affairs of the Association. The President, subject to confirmation by the Board of Directors, shall appoint the members of such committees for a period ending with his own term and until the appointment of successor committeemen, whichever is the later. The following standing committees are hereby designated:

Section 41. Investment Committee. The function of the Investment Committee is to invest and reinvest the life membership and other funds of the Association.

The Executive Director shall make a written report quarterly to each member of the Investment Committee as to the status of all money and investments of the Association, including information as to:

- (a) the amount of cash on hand together with a statement thereto as to the amount of said cash that could be invested,
- (b) names of each depository of funds and the amount on deposit in each,
- (c) a list of all investments.

The Executive Director is authorized through the Association Treasurer to place MAA funds in any depository guaranteed by FDIC or FSLIC up to the sum of $10,000; that deposits placed in national banks in the Twin Cities are not subject to the $10,000 limitation.

Section 42. Alumni University Liaison Committee. This committee shall consist of the immediate five living past presidents of this Association. Its function shall be to meet with and advise with the President of the University.

Section 43. Alumni Honors Committee. This committee shall be comprised of three members each serving three year terms, one being named each year and one expiring each year. The senior member of the committee shall be the chairman. The purpose of the committee is to make recommendations to the University Honors Committee for the University's Outstanding Achievement Award, Alumni Service Award and such other appropriate University and/or Association awards.

Section 44. Alumni Fund Advisory Committee. Membership on this committee consists of all past Presidents of the Association or corporation. The chairman shall be the immediate past living President. The committee shall act in an advisory capacity to the Director of the Department of Alumni Fund with reference to the annual giving campaign.

In view of the fact that all funds for the operation of the Alumni Fund come directly from the University for which the Executive Director of the Association has the responsibility of direction, the function of the committee will be to support, advise and counsel as to the various Alumni Funds such as: (a) the Alumni Fund projects developed for and within the various colleges; (b) the Freshman Scholarship Program; (c) the Class Funds (such as the Golden Anniversary Class Fund); (d) other similar funds.

Section 45. Powers and Duties of Committees Generally. It shall be the function of committees to make studies and to make recommendations to the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors and to carry on such further activities as may be delegated to them by the Board of Directors. They shall examine into and report on such subjects as may be referred to them by the Board and they may originate and report to the Board such views as they deem proper for its consideration. Each committee shall endeavor to initiate ideas and procedures for accomplishing the objectives sought to be accomplished by the committee and may utilize the staff of the Association to that end.

Section 46. Election Committee. An election committee consisting of not less than three members who are not officers or Directors or nominees for election shall be appointed by the President with the approval of the Board of Directors, at least twenty (20) days prior to the annual election. Such committee shall have jurisdiction over and supervise all elections for the Association. It shall act as a canvassing board, open the envelopes containing the ballots, count the votes and certify the results to the President. The results shall be made known to the membership at the time of the annual meeting and through the official publication by and under the name of the President.

Section 47. Canvass of Votes. The nominee receiving the highest number of votes for Director shall be declared elected by the election committee by writing delivered to the President. Whenever there shall be a tie vote the election committee shall cast lots and certify to election the person or persons to whom the lot favors.

ARTICLE X Miscellaneous

Section 48. Constituent Societies. Constituent societies may be formed within the Association. Membership in the Association automatically confers membership in the proper constituent alumni society. Application to form such a constituent society may be made to the Board of Directors upon the filing of a petition signed by not less than twenty-five (25) alumni of any school, college, or department of the University or upon a like petition from a new regularly organized alumni association of some school, college, department of a University setting forth that they shall maintain an active bona fide existence as evidenced by holding at least one annual meeting. Upon approval of the Board of Directors of the Association an official charter will be issued.

Constituent societies may adopt constitutions, pass bylaws, elect officers, designate committees and otherwise function as an organization within the Association provided that nothing so adopted or done shall be in conflict with the Articles of Incorporation or Bylaws of this Association.

Section 49. Meetings. Each constituent society shall hold its annual meeting at a time not conflicting with the meeting of the members of the Association. Each constituent society shall make an annual report to the Association through its delegated member at the time of the annual meeting of the Association.

ARTICLE XI Fiscal Year

The fiscal year shall end on the 30th day of June.

ARTICLE XII Amendment of Bylaws

These bylaws may be amended at any time by the Board of Directors, provided, however, that notice of any proposed amendment be mailed by the Executive Director under the signature of the President, to each Director at least five days prior to the meeting at which said proposed amendment is to be voted upon.

THE RETURN ON THE INVESTMENT

Examine the insurance company before it examines you

You'll find healthy differences in the 'Blue Chip' company!

Before you let any insurance company's doctor (including ours) zero in with his stethoscope, it will pay you to take a thoughtful look at that company.

Of the 1,600-odd life companies in the U.S., Connecticut Mutual—the 'Blue Chip' company—ranks in the very top bracket. In high dividends (continuous dividends for 120 years). In liberal benefits and options. In reserves for contingencies. In quality of investments. In low net cost. Connecticut Mutual's net cost to policy holders is remarkably low. This is substantiated by Best's Life Insurance Reports, industry authority.

Our financial health is a big plus for you. It means more dollars—for your retirement or to leave your loved ones.

Connecticut Mutual Life
The 'Blue Chip' company that's low in net cost, too.

ALUMNI OPINION POLL

As alumni of the University of Minnesota it is your right and responsibility to keep abreast of those events which shape and guide your state, the nation and the world.

As outstanding products of an outstanding University, your thoughts and opinions are sought and respected by your fellow citizens. Never before in history have the nation and the world been more receptive to, more dependent on, the considered judgement of you and your peers. Alumni of our nation's colleges and universities are increasingly looked to for leadership and guidance in all major areas of concern which confront our increasingly complex society.

How do alumni feel about some of today's major questions? We don't know but, in an attempt to find out, we are asking the readers of the Alumni News to answer the questions on the following page—on a problem of national concern, one of state concern and a problem confronting higher education in general and the University of Minnesota in particular. While all replies will be anonymous, we think they will be revealing of the overall feelings of our alumni.

This is the first of a series of Alumni Opinion Polls which will appear from time to time in the Alumni News. Your answers and comments will appear in a subsequent edition of the News.

Please fill out the questionnaire today and mail it to

BACK TALK

Sirs:

I was delighted to receive through Professor B. Lamar Johnson a copy of your March issue with its excellent article, "Education for Understanding." It is exceptionally well written, on the whole entirely accurate, covers the ground unusually well in so brief a space.

I am proud to have had a part in the development of the General College for its first eight years and am most enthusiastic about its continuing development and influence under the direction and management of Dean Morse and Associate Dean Vaughan.

Through them I have kept in touch through all the years between and I look forward with full confidence to its further growth and service by continuing research, experimentation and study of the needs of youth and society in these times.

May I ask for expansion of News items as your space allows?

Sirs:

I read with interest the article in the March, 1966 Alumni News entitled University Community Development Corporation.

To my dismay I noticed that you perpetuate an error in this article. You refer repeatedly to the University of Pennsylvania as the State University of Pennsylvania.

The University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia is a private school. The State University, called Penn State, is located in University park, near Lewiston.

I enjoy your magazine and look forward to receiving it each month.

Stephen E. Spielberg '63Gr

Sirs:

That's some computer you have there. How did it find me down here? (Mesa, Arizona). I didn't send you the address, I know.

I am down here for a winter vacation and will be returning soon. (The temperature is reaching for 90 today.)

So please tell your computer that my permanent address is Minnesota, and to quit following me around. I'm not one to criticize efficiency, but this is ridiculous.

I'd like to have a session with that machine the night before I go out to Arizona Downs to lay a couple of bucks down on the horses.

Comments:

"I don't know another business in which you can do as much good and become as successful in as short a time."

Thomas B. Wheeler, Yale '58

"Four years ago some of my closest friends thought I was a little crazy when I quit a solid job with a giant corporation to sell life insurance.

"Now, a wife, a daughter, a comfortable home and over $4,000,000 in life insurance sales later, even the most skeptical of these have changed their views.

"And best of all I am not caged in by the age or ability of anybody else. My ceiling is unlimited — my income is in direct proportion to the work I do . . ."

And income consists of two factors — commissions from new business and fees for policy renewals. Since a new agent's clients tend to be his contemporaries, the volume of new business from them increases as they progress and move up the income ladder. But even if an agent's new business were to remain level at, say $1 million per year for the first five years, his income could double during that period because of renewal fees.

While income is extremely important, the insurance company you represent can make a big difference, too. Ask any life insurance man and you'll find Mass Mutual has a reputation for being solid yet progressive. After all, it's been in the business for over a century and has more than $3 billion in assets.

So if you're a person who likes people, who wants a business of his own with no capital outlay and no ceiling on what he can make — and if you're anxious to work hard for yourself — this is it.

If you are looking for the rewards Tom Wheeler wants, the President of Mass Mutual would like to know about it. Write him a personal letter: Charles H. Schaaff, President, Mass Mutual, Springfield, Mass: 01101. It could be the most valuable letter you'll ever write.

MEMO

ED HAISLET
Executive Director

TO: Members of the Association
SUBJECT: The 1965 Honor Roll

The Honor Roll is the annual listing of the names of alumni who during the 1965 calendar year made a gift to the University of Minnesota.

This year for the first time all alumni, no matter through what channel they gave, are listed in the Honor Roll. This year the total number of alumni donors increased by 66.7%, from 5,298 to 8,835. The total amount given by alumni is almost a half million dollars, $484,874.62 to be exact, and proof enough that Minnesota alumni are interested in the University and believe in its worth. Participation of alumni this year totaled 8% — a figure that will continue to grow.

The total number of gifts as well as total dollars received from alumni during 1965 through all channels was:

University Regents	104	$181,194.12
Alumni Fund	7116	133,599.57
U of M Foundation	31	108,059.53
Medical Foundation	920	27,482.90
Law School Scholarships	78	21,745.00
Special Projects Program	587	12,793.50

The Alumni Fund, now in its third year, showed an increase of 14.73% in gifts received, a 46.9% increase in the number of alumni participating, a per capita gift of $18.77, with a participation level of 6.52%.

Special praise goes to Athletic Director Marsh Ryman and his hard working staff for their energetic promotion of the Williams Fund. Their stated objective of $50,000 was exceeded, and 2,349 donors participated.

A word about the Williams Fund because it deserves your understanding and support.

Under Western Conference rules each Big Ten School can award seventy grants-in-aid tenders each year. This means 280 tenders are possible in a four year period. At Minnesota about $200,000 is needed for the grants-in-aid program each year, which is just about the amount of money taken in each year by the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics from student, staff, and public ticket sales, from radio and television, from Minnesota's share of the Rose Bowl, and other sources. The Williams Program helps to close the gap between income and need and supplements the grants-in-aid program. It provides the motivation and opportunity to student-athletes who may not otherwise receive a tender, or allows an additional tender to be granted. In other words, a student-athlete who qualifies for a Williams Scholarship doesn't use one of the tenders allowed. Recipients of the Williams Scholarships must maintain a 2.8 grade average or better and have varsity potential in their chosen sport, which may be any one of the eleven intercollegiate sports at the University. The Williams Fund is a project of the Alumni Fund.

Total gifts to the University in 1965 amounted to $9,706,979 excluding all Federal and State grants and funds for construction such as Hill-Burton and U.S. Public Health Service.

Please run through the names on the Honor Roll which are listed alphabetically. Note who gave to University last year.

Is your name there?

Sincerely,

Ed Hauget

The Return on the Investment

In reflecting on the comments which might be appropriate for such an occasion, it occurred to me that the present gathering might be addressed as a meeting of the stockholders, who are at this juncture attempting to answer two questions: "What is the nature of their investment," and, "What might be the returns on it." The product in which we have a joint stock venture is represented by the young men and women who are members of this graduating class.

In this sense, then, I would distinguish four major groups of stockholders.

The first of these consists of representatives of the University—the Regents, the administration, the faculty and staff. What is the nature of their investment in this "about-to-be-marketed" product?

When you receive a degree from the University of Minnesota—any degree, whether it is Associate in Arts or Doctor of Philosophy—you bear upon yourself henceforth the hallmark of excellence. For it is beyond question that this University is among the most distinguished institutions of higher learning in America.

Its claims to distinction lie not only in the dramatic achievements in the laboratory—the splitting of the uranium atom, the evolution of a rust-resistant wheat, the development of open-heart surgery, the perfection of the taconite process, among others.

Its distinction lies also in the quality of the learning experiences through which all of you have gone for the last several or many years. It is the teaching effort which commands the main attention and resources of the University, and of its outstanding faculty. In this particular respect the representatives of the University have a considerable investment in the processes which lie behind this evening's celebration.

The second of the main group of stockholders represented at this meeting consists of those who have provided the major part of the encouragement and support to you thus far. These are your parents, or in some cases your wives or husbands.

It is an interesting circumstance that for the most part, those enrolled at the University of Minnesota are a "first generation" of college students. Thus, you are realizing your parents' ambition also, that, in terms of formal education, you shall have a greater advantage than was theirs.

It is our nature to desire something better for our children. But the accomplishment of this laudable purpose often exacts a heavy price, of which I suspect the student is not always aware—the personal sacrifices, the abandonment or postponement of other cherished dreams, the patient planning, the careful husbanding of resources, the self-denial.

I suspect further that those of you who cross this platform tonight will not fully realize the pride, joy, and satisfaction which your parents feel until that day arrives when your own children may achieve like honor and distinction.

There is yet a third group of stockholders who are involved in this affair, represented partly by those here in this auditorium, yet for the most part unknown to you. These are the taxpayers of the State of Minnesota, who furnish a major share of the support of this University, and whose contributions over the years have helped to give Minnesota a national reputation.

In one sense the taxpayers might be considered silent partners in this enterprise—although I suspect that President Wilson and his associates are made acutely aware at times that some of these partners are not so silent after all.

I presume you have already identified the fourth group of investors. These are the graduating students themselves, who actually have the greatest stake in our joint stock company. For you who are candidates for a degree have invested what is in many ways the most precious of all commodities—and that is time, your own days, and months, and years.

We are well aware, however, that it has been not only the expenditure of time, but also of sustained effort, which has brought you to this hour, and that you have faced many obstacles in the precarious pathway to higher education. Not the least of these have been the securing (sometimes by fair means or foul) of tally reservation slips to secure a place in a crowded class, finding a spot to sit down in the main library, braving sub-zero winds to cross the high bridge to the provinces across the river, trying desperately to satisfy some professors who seem to believe that you are not taking any courses besides theirs, waiting in line here, waiting in line there, and the desperate scramble and game of wits to find a place to park.

Now that we have completed the roster of stockholders, the second question naturally becomes this: "What is to be the return to each group on their investment?"

For the representatives of the University, a proper return might be simply, or even tritely, stated: that you, the graduates, are satisfactorily equipped for living and making a living.

Much of this effort on the latter aspect of such preparation might have been avoided, perhaps, if one could take literally a particular want ad which appeared in an issue of the Mines Magazine, and which ran as follows:

"WANTED. Man to work on nuclear fissionable isotope molecular reactive counters and three-phase cyclotronic uranium photosynthesizers. NO experience necessary."

There are many persons who view a university education primarily in terms of its job implications. But it would be short changing the hopes of most of us who represent the University if your experience here had not also quickened your awareness and curiosity, deepened your respect for and involvement in the life of the mind, and broadened your intellectual and cultural horizons.

The function of a teacher is a strange contradiction in a certain respect. It may appear at times to the harassed student that he is being pressured and even driven by his professors.

Ideally, however, the teacher is leading the student along the pathway of learning so that at the end of the period of formal education, the student may continue along the same pathway on his own.

For most of you, we have now escorted you as far as we can go, and henceforth you are on your own beyond the gates of the city.

What of your parents and families—those who have provided both moral and financial support for you—what is to be their return on this investment of faith and self-denial?

Theirs are great expectations indeed, and their repayment lies largely in the extent to which you achieve a successful maturity. There is no pleasure comparable, I suspect, to the gratification which a parent feels when his child measures up to the standards that have been set for him, and when he achieves the respect and acceptance of his peers.

For our third group of investors, the taxpayers of the State of Minnesota, many of the same developments already mentioned constitute a share of their return. But theirs also is a special interest.

It is related directly to the extent to which you become productive workers in the economy of the state and of the nation, and in the extent to which you develop into constructive citizens who will take an active part in meeting the burdensome but crucial problems which lie in the public domain.

Surveys of the civic activities of college graduates are, for the most part, disappointing. They show only a casual interest and involvement in community organizations and political affairs.

In spite of the dedicated and heroic efforts of many, the rank and file of these graduates seem not to be fully aware nor appreciative of the extent to which they have been underwritten by those who pay the tax bill. Such an obligation, so easily and almost unconsciously incurred, should not be disregarded so casually.

Finally, we come to the graduating students themselves. What should be the nature of the return to them on their share of our investment?

They can hardly help but be apprehensive about what the future, immediate and long-range, may hold for them. For we live in a perilous and disquieting time, amidst gigantic forces which struggle for supremacy over the minds and fortunes of all mankind, and the outcome of these struggles will bode well or ill for most of the inhabitants of this terrestrial globe. But apprehension is not yours alone.

Crises and troubles have faced the youth of all generations, who have somehow survived them. Before we yield too readily to doubt and despair, we may reflect upon the words of a prophet of troublesome times long past: "The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done; and there is no new thing under the sun."

The certificate or diploma which you receive will certify that you should have acquired what was quaintly described a century ago as "the discipline and furniture of the mind." The diploma is a tangible and cherished return on your years of striving, but it is only a token.

The real return on your investment will consist in the uses which you make of what you have acquired at this University. It will rest largely on what I should like to term the 'dimensions of learning.'

Basic to all learning is knowledge of facts. Such knowledge is so obvious and essential that there is a strong temptation on the part of both students and faculty members to devote so much time and attention to factual content—to the furniture of the mind—that other important aspects of learning may be neglected.

Knowledge of facts alone, however, is sterile.

True learning ideally has deeper and more pervasive dimensions. There is more than a little wisdom, perhaps, in the comment made by some wag that: "Education is what you have left after you have forgotten all that you have learned."

The first of the five pervasive dimensions of learning beyond knowledge of facts might be characterized as knowing how to apply facts learned in one situation in a different situation, or, what the psychologist would call problem-solving.

It seems simple enough and even obvious. Yet all too often in a classroom we learn to solve problems so that we can continue to solve the same kinds of problems in the same kind of situation, and little practice is afforded in using factual learning in a wider context, as it must be applied, indeed, in life itself.

A short but engaging anecdote from the elementary school level may highlight this point, which is told by the psychologist and philosopher, William James.

A class of youngsters was finishing a study of elementary geology, including the general characteristics of the earth, on the day that a visitor was in attendance. She requested permission to ask the class a question, to which the teacher readily assented. So the visitor said, "Now children, I understand that you have been studying how the earth is made up, and what it is like. Let us suppose that we were to dig a hole deep down into the earth, way below the surface. How would it be down there, warmer than at the top of the hole, or colder?" The children were mystified, and none could respond. The teacher then said, "Excuse me, I believe that you do not ask the question in the right way. Allow me to rephrase it." So, picking up the textbook and turning to the class, the teacher asked, "Children, in what state is the interior of the globe?" In a chorus came back the assured response, "The interior of the globe is in a state of igneous fusion."

The second dimension of learning beyond knowledge of facts may be called critical thinking. It may not take much critical analysis to react to the story of the cub reporter who was asked to check the rumor that there was a man in a certain community who could sing both tenor and bass at the same time. After making the necessary inquiries, the cub dejectedly reported to his editor, "There was no story to it. The fellow had two heads."

It takes much more critical thinking to read the daily newspaper, and to be able to rank in terms of reliability and credibility such differing but highly significant phrases as: "It is rumored in official circles . . ." or, "Vice President Humphrey made the following statement in a press conference . . ." or, "A source close to the government is reported to have said . . ." or, again, "In an informal chat with this reporter the President's secretary intimated . . ." etc., etc.

And it takes a more intensive level of education and practice to develop the major skills of critical thinking which have been identified by social scientists concerned with this problem: The ability to identify central issues; To recognize underlying assumptions; To evaluate evidence or authority; To draw warranted conclusions.

Critical analysis, critical judgement, critical thinking

"The Return on the Investment" was delivered by Horace T. Morse '28BA '30MA '39PhD, dean of the General College, at winter quarter commencement exercises last month in Northrop Memorial Auditorium. Morse was a scholar and assistant in the department of history from 1928 to 1931 and, after teaching at Ironwood, Michigan, for five years, returned to the University in 1936 as an education instructor. He later served as director of the Bureau of Recommendations, assistant to the dean of the Graduate School and, in 1940, as associate director of the General College. He was 41 when he assumed his present position in 1946, the first to bear the title of dean.

—call it what we will—is a highly significant ingredient in learning how to learn. Its proper exercise can help to protect us from the alluring political propaganda of the extreme right and the extreme left. It is as necessary for undergirding the defense of democracy among the rank and file of our citizenry as it is for exploring the highest reaches of scholarship and research in the effort to extend the frontiers of knowledge.

The third dimension of education which I would consider to be of great importance might be called integration of learning.

The man or woman who cultivates this ability is the one who is able to “size up” a situation, the one who sees the relatedness of disparate and disconnected pieces, the one who is able to construct meaningful concepts and ideas from fragmented parts. This ability or perspective is especially important because in our formal learning processes, knowledge has become highly specialized and fragmented. Its possession should also help the individual adjust to changing conditions of living.

The fourth dimension of learning beyond mastery of factual content lies in an area which has provoked much controversy in higher education, and indeed in education at all levels. This may be stated as the development of a set of personal and social values, or, more simply, of personal integrity.

A number of years ago, a study published by a young professor named Philip Jacob, titled Changing Values in College, sounded an alarm for public and private institutions alike. As a summary of this disturbing investigation, the author asserted that college experience barely touches students’ “standards of behavior, quality of judgement, sense of social responsibility, perspicacity of understanding, and guiding beliefs.”

This is a serious indictment, indeed, and has called forth many efforts to improve the situation. There may be, it is quite true, sincere disagreement about the semantics and the applicability of Professor Jacob’s charges. But many would hold, I believe, with the point of view that “values” should be broadly rather than narrowly construed, and that undergirding them lie certain dominant social and political beliefs which colleges should nurture and support as an integral part of their function.

What some of these beliefs are may be indicated by a few quotations, which all of you may complete for yourselves:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident . . .”

“Four score and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation . . .”

“Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men . . .”

The final one of these pervasive outcomes of learning which I would name is characterized by a term already worn so thin outside the academic world that it has lost much of its initial impact. This is what we would call “creativity” or “creativeness.”

We are learning that it is costly indeed that in many of the activities of life, and in the schools in particular, emphasis has long been on conformity, and the young person who exhibits unconfirming behavior of any kind is often penalized and made to feel unwanted. By such social controls, often unthinkingly applied, some of the most rare and precious talents of the human mind have been suppressed and even stifled.

And yet, as Archibald MacLeish stated in a lecture on this campus, we are facing a crisis in the life of the imagination, and real survival requires that we “recover the virility of the imagination on which all earlier civilizations have been based.”

In a similar vein, John W. Gardner, newly-appointed to the post of Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare from the presidency of the Carnegie Foundation, stresses the need for what he calls the “self-renewing” individual, or “innovative men and women.” Exciting experiments in the development of creativity are now taking place on this campus and many others, and we can hope and trust that new and important headlands may be discovered by those who embark on this trackless and uncharted sea.

Such then, I believe, are the dimensions of learning, which in varying measure constitute the returns on the investment to the students who are members of this graduating class.

And for all the stockholders here assembled, I would express the hope and belief that we may expect a good return of our investment in the richest of all resources—the potential of these fine young people whom we are proud to stamp this evening with the hallmark of the University of Minnesota.

CHARTER

DAY

The University of Minnesota celebrated its 115th birthday on Thursday, February 24th, with a traditional Charter Day Convocation and birthday party. Held as the climax to University of Minnesota Week, Charter Day commemorates the founding of the University on February 25, 1851, when Minnesota's territorial government voted to establish an educational institution at or near St. Anthony Falls "to be known as the University of Minnesota." In the absence of President O. Meredith Wilson, Laurence R. Lundeen, vice president for business administration, accepted the traditional huge birthday cake from two students — Mary Ann McFadden, 1965 Homecoming Queen, and Walter Bachman, president of the Minnesota Student Association. The audience was invited to come up on the stage of Northrop Memorial Auditorium to help eat the cake, but not before Vice President Lundeen and Miss McFadden shared the first piece.

THE CANDIDATES

It's time again to vote for candidates for the Board of Directors of the Minnesota Alumni Association. Ten candidates have been nominated this year for the five vacant positions on the board, which is the governing body of the MAA and source of the Association's officers.

According to MAA Executive Director Ed Haislet, the voting period officially opens upon receipt by the members of their copies of this issue, the April issue, of the Alumni News, official publication of the MAA. All ballots must be in the office of the Executive Director by May 27 in order to be counted. Results will be announced officially at the Association's Annual Meeting on June 7.

The nominating committee for this year's election consisted of Owen K. Hallberg '46BSAg '47MA, Waldo E. Hardell '26BSBus, Charles Judd Ringer '38-41 and Edwin A. Willson '30BEE, MAA national president, chairman.

The official ballot, to be filled in and returned to the Minnesota Alumni Association office for tabulating, appears on page 19.

BODDY

Francis M. S. Boddy '30BBA '36MA '39PhD is associate dean of the Graduate School and professor of economics at the University. A life member of the Minnesota Alumni Association, in 1964-65 he served as a member of the Minnesota Alumni Club Committee. He is a member of the board of directors of the National Bureau of Economic Research, New York, and the Minneapolis Citizens League. He is a member of the staff and 1959-62 commanding officer of the Naval Reserve Officers School, Naval Air Station, Minneapolis and also holds membership in the Scottish Economic Society, Mont Pelerin Society, American Veterans Committee, Reserve Officers Association, American Legion, American Association for the Advancement of Science and numerous other professional societies.

BOSS

Wallace L. Boss '28BSBus, former board member of the School of Business Administration Alumni Association, is vice president of The First National Bank of St. Paul, a post he has held since 1946. He has been in the banking business since 1921 and professional affiliations include membership on the executive council of the Minnesota Bankers Association 1948-51, vice president from 1952-53 and president from 1953-

54. From 1954-57 he also served as a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association. Organizations include past treasurer of the U.S. and St. Paul Junior Chambers of Commerce, past chairman of the St. Paul Open Golf Tournament, past director of Saintpaulites, Inc., past regional manager of the Minnesota War Finance Committee, past campaign chairman for the Minnesota Division of the American Cancer Society and King Boreas XX of the St. Paul Winter Carnival.

JOHNSON

Robert W. Johnson '47LLB, a native of Anoka County, Minnesota, for the past 16 years has served as its county attorney. A veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps, Johnson later served the City of Anoka as municipal judge. He presently is serving as chairman of the Minnesota Municipal Commission and for the past several years has served as chairman of the Governor's Advisory Council on Children and Youth which annually attracts between 1,000 and 2,000 youth to the University of Minnesota Campus for a three-day conference.

LEHMANN

Florence Lehmann '23BA, a native of St. Paul, for 25 years operated her own public relations consulting service specializing in civic and social welfare accounts, and served for six years as executive director of the Minnesota Association for Mental Health. She has been elected to the Minneapolis School Board four times and now is serving her 15th year in that office. She has served as the Board's president, treasurer and secretary. She currently is a member of the board of directors of the Minnesota School Boards Association and served as president of that organization in 1960-61. She has served in many different capacities in Parent-Teacher Associations, is a long-time member of the Citizens Committee on Public Education in Minneapolis and helped organize the Citizens League of Greater Minneapolis.

MANKEY

Dr. James C. Mankey '43MB '43MD, immediate past president of the Medical Alumni Association, is engaged in the private practice of internal medicine in Minneapolis. A native of Minneapolis, he received his pre-medical training at St. Thomas College, interned at Milwaukee County General Hospital and continued with a fellowship in internal medicine, despite interruptions to serve in the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps from 1945-47. In 1948 he took over the Minneapolis medical practice of another doctor, in which he is partnered with two other alumni of the University Medical School. He is a member of the staffs of both St. Mary's and Abbott Hospitals in Minneapolis, and a clinical assistant professor in the Medical School.

William O. Nilsen '35MAEd, past president of the College of Education Alumni Association, since 1943 has been superintendent of schools at Spring Grove, Excelsior and Minnetonka, Minnesota. A native of Brooklyn, New York, and a graduate of Minneapolis' South High School, he received his bachelor of arts degree from Augsburg College and, after receiving his MA from the University, did additional graduate work at Harvard, Leland Stanford University and the Universities of Chicago and California. A life member of the National Education Association, he is past president of the Educational Research and Development Council Association of School Administrators and of the Excelsior Rotary Club. He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, national education fraternity, and Sigma Delta Psi, national athletic fraternity.

SALMEN

Thomas M. Salmen '41BA (UC), a lifetime resident of St. Paul, since 1953 has been president of Salmen Foods, Inc., wholesale food distributors. A U.S. Navy veteran of World War II, he entered the service in 1941 and was discharged in 1946 as a lieutenant, senior grade. He has been extremely active on University alumni committees. For four years he served as alumni representative on the Coffman Memorial Union Board of Governors, for three years as alumni representative on the Senate Committee for Student Affairs, he was alumni representative on the University of Minnesota Scholarship Committee for four years and for four years also served as alumni representative on the University of Minnesota Camping Committee. In 1965 and 1966 he has served as president of the Parish Council of St. Leo's Catholic Church, St. Paul.

SHAPIRA

Harold B. Shapira '31BSPhar-Chem, since 1939 has been president of the Highland Park Drug Center, St. Paul, since 1953 has been president of Shapira's Gifts and in 1961 became president of Underwriters of St. Paul, Inc. Extremely active in civic affairs, he is a member of the Mayor's Police Study Committee and the lay board of St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Paul, and also serves on the boards of directors of the Metropolitan-St. Paul Hospital Planning Committee, Capitol Long Range Improvement Committee and the Minnesota Heart Association. A member of the Heart Association's executive committee, he also is chairman of its public information committee. In 1964 he was general chairman of the St. Paul Winter Carnival and currently is serving as its treasurer. He is past president of the Highland Civic Association and a director of Highland Park State Bank and Highland Recreation Association.

SLETTEN

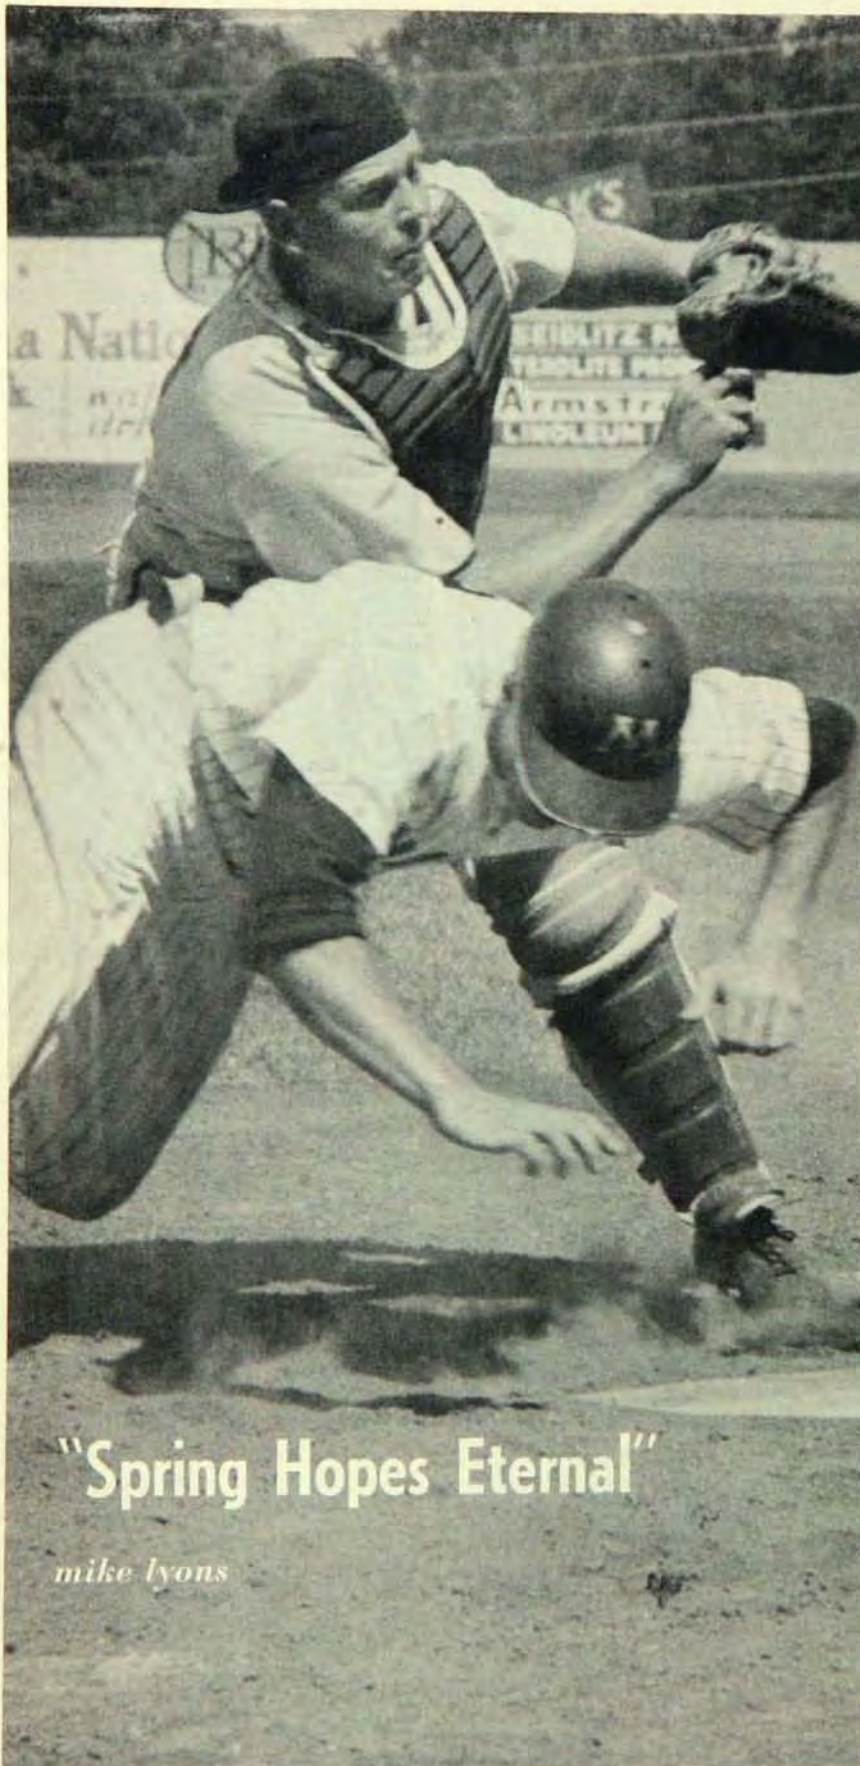

Dr. Melvin O. Sletten '35DDS is immediate past president and currently serves on the board of directors of the Dental Alumni Association. Since graduation from the University, he has maintained a private dental practice in Madison, Minnesota. A member of the American Dental Association and the Minnesota State Dental Association, he is a past member of the house of delegates of the latter and currently is serving on its University Relations Committee. He is past president of the West Central District Dental Society, Tri-State Dental Study Society, Kiwanis and Madison Hospital Association. In addition, he holds membership in the American Association of Orthodontists, Loyola-Jarabak Orthodontic Foundation and in 1961 was honorary chairman and author of a paper on Orthodontia for the Orthodontic Section, International Dental Congress, Lima, Peru.

WHITE

William F. White '49BAJourn, publisher of the Winona Daily and Sunday News, was born and educated through high school in Winona and attended Carleton College and Cornell University before entering the U.S. Army in 1943. Entering as an enlisted man, he now holds the rank of lieutenant colonel in the Army Reserve. After graduation cum laude from the University in 1949 he worked in all departments of the Daily News, became business manager and, in 1961, publisher. He has served as president and chairman of the board of the Northwest Daily Press Association, president of the Winona Country Club and Winona Council of Social Agencies, campaign chairman of the Winona Community Chest and president of the Winona County Chapter of the MAA. A former member of the Winona Planning Commission, he now is president of the Winona Industrial Development Commission and of the state board of the Minnesota Heart Association.

"Spring Hopes Eternal"

The University of Minnesota spring sports season is underway and though there is a dearth of title talk around Cooke Hall, there is no feeling of pessimism. The long-range view is that the Gopher baseball, track, tennis and golf teams all should finish in the first division. With a bit of good fortune, one or two could become serious contenders.

One thing all four coaches have been hoping for is a real, genuine, honest - to - goodness spring - like spring. After the recent blizzard, however, the prospect for such a pleasant turn of events is dim. That deluge of snow revived grim memories of last spring. Baseball coach Dick Siebert called it the worst in his 18 years at the University. Between snow, cold and wet grounds, the baseballers had to scrub no fewer than 14 games. In the process, they lost the sharpness they had acquired on their March trip to Texas, went into a hitting slump and wound up tied for seventh place in the Big Ten. This, coming after an astounding 1964 campaign which produced both Conference and NCAA championships, brought gloom to Delta Field.

The track, tennis and golf teams also suffered, although Coach Les Bolstad's golfers never count on getting on the greens before May 1 and, as a result, never schedule competition during April.

But enough of the past. What of the coming season?

Siebert is restrained regarding the baseball team's chances but feels confident the Gophers will improve considerably on last year's record. The reason for his guarded optimism can be summed up pretty well in one word - balance. If the Gophers do not appear to be overpowering in any phase of the game, they also don't figure to have any serious weaknesses. "We should have pretty good hitting, fielding, pitching and speed," he points out. "We aren't too well fixed for power, however, and we'll have to rely on inexperienced men at some positions." Fortunately there is quality among the upcoming sophs.

As for returnees from last year, three-fourths of the '65 infield is back — first baseman Dennis Zacho, second baseman and co-captain Ron Roalstad and shortstop Steve Schneider. The fourth member, third baseman Jerry Fuchs, is no longer in school.

Zach, who also is a regular wing on the Minnesota hockey team, led the Gophers in hitting a year ago with a .387 average, although a large share of his hits came early in the campaign. Roalstad, on the other hand, had one long siege of woes at the plate, winding up with a .152 mark despite having a reputation as a respectable hitter. Siebert feels he will come around this year. Schneider, a two-year letterman and a member of the '64 NCAA kingpins, is a good hitter and steady fielder. He ranked fifth in hitting last year with a .305 figure for the season and hit .318 in Big Ten play.

The leading candidate for Fuchs' job is a likely looking sophomore from Glenview, Ill., named Ed Bruksch. A transfer student from Air Force Academy, Bruksch suffered a broken navicular — the same injury which disabled Gopher basketball star Lou Hudson — while playing intramural basketball last winter. Fortunately, Bruksch made a much quicker recovery than Hudson and is ready to go. A good fielder with a strong arm, he has considerable hitting potential. His biggest rival for the job is Bob Fenwick from Anoka, another soph who played the position with good results during the Gophers' trip to Texas. Fenwick appears ticketed for a regular outfield post, however.

Two regulars return in the outfield — Dave Hoffman in left and co-captain Frank Brosseau in center. Two other veteran outfielders — Fred DeGregoire and Archie Clark have departed. DeGregoire has completed his eligibility and Clark has decided to pass up baseball this year.

Hoffman is a two-year regular who hit .300 for the '64 champs but trailed off to .259 last year. His sophomore year performance is a better scale of his ability, however, and Siebert thinks he will have a strong final season. Brosseau was a casualty in '65, breaking his hand about midway through the Conference season. This was a serious blow to the Gophers since he was hitting .357 at the time and was a mainstay of the pitching staff as well. Now fully recovered, Frank is a key man in Minnesota's hopes.

Fenwick has the edge for the rightfield job but will have ample competition from two other sophs — Dick Paradise and Tom Boldt. Both are from St. Paul, prepping at Cretin and Central respectively. All three are highly regarded prospects. Paradise also is a regular defenseman on the Gopher hockey squad.

There is no experience but plenty of potential in the catching department. Jerry Cawley, last year's incumbent, is gone. His successors are a pair of sophomores of nearly equal ability — Mike Sadek from Richfield and Bob Micheletti from Springfield, Ill. Micheletti has more power but Sadek has the edge in overall polish as a receiver.

The pitching staff will be built around Brosseau who could be among the Big Ten's best although he was roughed up in his first start in Texas this spring. He compiled a 7-1 record and 1.88 ERA in '64 and was 4-2 and 3.38 for his abbreviated '65 campaign. A second returning starter, Jerry Wickman boasts exceptional control. During indoor practice last winter, he was credited with throwing 70 per cent strikes. A lefty, Wickman fashioned a 3-1 record and a 3.34 ERA last year.

Two of last year's starters are gone. One of them, Joe Pollack, earned a spot among Minnesota's all-time great pitchers. He won 11 of 13 games and had a 1.54 ERA in 1964 while setting Big Ten records for fewest hits given in a Conference season (17 in 42 innings) and for lowest combined batting average permitted by a pitcher (.122). He was 5-2 last season and had a 1.49 ERA. The other non-returner is Gene Rasmussen who had a fine sophomore year with a 4-1 record and 1.96 ERA. He is not in school.

Best bets to fill the gap are two non-lettering juniors with an abundance of potential — Jim Stewart and Jerry Sevlie. Stewart has the best "stuff" on the squad but has been bothered by faulty control. Sevlie has good control and has more speed this year.

The bullpen features lettermen Chuck Thoreson, a junior, senior Tom Lindberg who has not yet lettered but has pitched good ball for two years and another non-letterman, junior Mike McNair. The only sophomore hurler who figures in the picture is Dave Baldrige, a punter on last fall's Gopher football team.

As for track, Coach Roy Griak starts with what he regards as the best dual meet squad he has had during his three years at Minnesota. In addition, Mike Gillham, a talented quarter-miler, is back after being ineligible winter quarter. The Gophers placed fifth in the Big Ten indoors but Griak thinks they have the potential to finish higher outdoors.

One of the key men is high jumper Tom Stuart, a sophomore from Breckenridge who won the indoor title in that event, cleared six feet, eight inches in NCAA indoor competition and broke the Gopher varsity indoor record with a leap of 6-8½. Others are Gillham in the 440; Larry Mueller and John Shaffer, pole vault; Tom Heinonen, two mile; Joe Lane, shot put; Wendell Bjorklund, long jump; Marvin Top, high jump; Rich Simonsen, 220; Hubie Bryant, hurdles. Simonsen is a Norwegian student who attended grammar school in Portsmouth, England. Bryant lettered as a halfback on the '65 Gopher football team.

Gillham holds the varsity record for the 440 outdoors (:47.3) which was set in NCAA competition last year. He finished third in the Big Ten outdoor meet in '65. Mueller and Shaffer share the varsity record for the pole vault at 15-1. Shaffer also holds the outdoor varsity mark with a 15-5/8 effort. Lane was the biggest surprise of the indoor season, placing second in the Big Ten shot put competition and then shattering the varsity mark in that event with a 56-8/8 performance in the NCAA.

Heinonen turned in the best two-mile time ever by a Big Ten runner in the NCAA indoor meet when he was clocked in 8:55.3. Although he only placed fifth in that race, his time bettered the existing record prior to the meet. Heinonen is a two-time runnerup in Big Ten indoor meets and finished third outdoors last year. Bjorklund has placed fifth in the long jump in Big Ten indoor competition. He was hobbled by a leg injury during the '65 outdoor season.

Top, Simonsen and Bryant are all sophomores. Although only Top placed in the Conference indoor, all three are considered first-rate performers. Top, who hails from Princeton, tied for runnerup honors in the pole vault behind Stuart.

Other returning lettermen are Capt. Bill Stevens, sprints; Dean Anderson, 440, 660 and 880; Gerry Brouwer, hurdles; Mike Elwell, mile; John Valentine, 880 and mile; Stan Gaffin and Bob Wandberg, 880.

Additional sophomore help will be provided by Tom Christenson and Phil Soltvedt, both Minneapolis Roosevelt graduates who perform in the 440; Mark Henningsgaard and Steve Puffer, a pair of pole vaulters from Cottage Grove, Oregon, and White Bear Lake respectively; Tom Ochs, Bloomington, 660 and 880; Dick Aften, Osseo, two mile.

Minnesota's tennis hopes are centered to a large extent around No. 1 man Jerry Noyce. Noyce, captain and a senior from Evanston, Ill., is a leading contender for the Big Ten individual crown. He lost in the semi-finals last year to the eventual champion, Northwestern's Clark Graebner.

The Gopher netmen figure to have more balance than at any time in recent years. Two promising sophs — Denny Chez from Hibbing and Bucky Zimmerman from Minneapolis (West) — are expected to take over the No. 2 and 4 spots respectively with junior Ron Keith at No. 3. Behind them are three veterans, Jerry Krause, Tom Boice and Dave Rosenberg, along with sophs Chris Busa and Jack Nist.

In doubles play, Noyce will pair with Chez, Keith with Zimmerman and Krause with one of the remaining squad members.

New tennis coach Joe Walsh says the Conference title is out of sight but he does feel that Minnesota has a good chance to finish as high as fourth. If so, it would be the first time since 1959 that a Gopher team has wound up in the first division.

Veteran golf coach Les Bolstad has lost Dave Gumlia, his key man for three seasons, but he is hopeful of a first-division finish nevertheless. Such an achievement was beyond the reach of last year's squad which dropped into sixth place despite a third straight individual runnerup performance by Gumlia.

Five lettermen return — Capt. George Hallin, Jim Carlson, Nick Lindahl, Art Skon and Jim Weinhaus. None of them finished in the first 20 in the Conference tournament last year, however.

Three newcomers should brighten the outlook. They are Bill Brask of San Diego, Calif., Mike Lanigan of Minneapolis (Roosevelt) and Ed Lee of Hutchinson. Brask is an outstanding prospect with exceptional putting ability. He could become the team's ace. Lanigan also is highly rated and Lee has good potential but less experience than his fellow sophs.

Meet Madame Modiste celebrated seamstress of Livonia, Mich.

She's never worked for Pauline Trigere or Bergdorf Goodman. Yet her professional skills help keep you in the height of fashion . . . if you own a General Motors car. She's a seamstress at a GM Fisher Body plant, one of three thousand whose deft needlecraft turns rolls of upholstery materials into smart, superbly fitted seat coverings—more than seven million times a year.

These talented "couturières" work with cloth, vinyl fabrics, and soft, genuine leathers in the process of creating the designs you see in General Motors cars. The inviting interiors they produce unite with some 170 car models from which today's highly selective car buyer may choose.

General Motors car interiors are fashioned and selected by trained specialists of taste and discernment. But their abilities would be wasted without the practiced hand of the expert seamstress. She is one of the people who keep GM in the automotive styling forefront.

THE UNIVERSITY

Twenty-one Faculty Members To Retire at Quarter's End

Twenty-one faculty members will retire in June with a total of 679 years of service to the University. The combined length of service of five of these faculty members—each with more than 40 years—totals 223 years.

Senior among those retiring is Professor Charles V. Netz, associate dean of pharmacy. Netz, who joined the faculty in 1918, has served the University 48 years.

Next on the top five in longevity, with 46 years, is Elizabeth Nissen, associate professor of Romance languages. A close third with 45 years at the University is Professor Leah M. Lewis who teaches interior design in the evening classes of the General Extension Division.

Numbers four and five on the forty-year-plus list are Lloyd J. Quaid, assistant professor of mechanical engineering, with 43 years, and Harold C. Wittich, professor of dentistry, 41 years.

Those retiring with more than 30 years include Dr. H. L. Mason, professor of physiological chemistry, Mayo Graduate School, 38 years; Ledru O. Guthrie, associate professor, English, 37 years; Troy M. Currence, professor, horticultural science, 36 years; Dr. A. H. Bulbulian, associate professor, medical education, Mayo, 35 years; Dr. G. J. Thompson, professor of urology, Mayo, 34 years; Dr. E. H. Rynearson, professor of medicine, Mayo, and Mykola H. Haydak, professor of entomology, both 33 years; and Mitchell V. Charnley, professor of journalism, 32 years.

Twenty-year veterans at the University who will retire include Willard J. Hadley, professor of pharmacy, 28 years; Dr. Gerald T. Evans, professor of laboratory medicine, and Dr. E. L. Foss, instructor, plastic surgery, Mayo, both with 27 years; Dr. Ernst Simonson, professor in the School of Public Health, 22 years; and Wesley N. Herr, associate professor of chemistry, 20 years.

Dr. Victor Johnson, professor of physiology and director of the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine since he joined the University faculty, and Dorothy M. Smith, associate professor of education and psychology at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, both have served 19 years.

Dr. Robert A. Merrill, associate professor of veterinary medicine, with 16 years as a faculty member, is the "anchor man" of the retiring Class of 1966.

In addition to faculty, approximately 52 civil service staff members of the University representing 799 years of employment also will retire in June. All faculty and staff retirees have been invited to a retirement party May 26 in Coffman Memorial Union Main Ballroom.

New Director Named For Tech Institute

Stanley Sahlstrom '42BS '53MS '61PhD, former director of field services at St. Cloud State College, has been named director of the newly-established University of Minnesota Technical Institute-Crookston.

Sahlstrom

Sahlstrom will direct the development of curricular and administrative affairs for the new collegiate-technical program which will open in the fall of 1966. The new Institute will be located on the campus of the University's Northwest School and Experiment Station at Crookston. It will replace the School, a secondary level program established in 1905.

MacPhail College and School Given to Board of Regents

The MacPhail College and School of Music last month was entrusted to the Board of Regents as a gift from the MacPhail Board of Trustees.

Included in the gift was the college, its school of music and all its properties, located at 1128 LaSalle Avenue and 52 South Twelfth Street, downtown Minneapolis. The gift will become effective July 1.

Spokesmen for the University and MacPhail emphasized that the present program of private music instruction at the MacPhail School will be continued at the present location, with the same teachers.

On accepting the gift, the Regents passed a memorandum enumerating the University's plans for making use of the gift. These include:

- The University will incorporate the functions of the MacPhail College of Music within its department of music, and the functions of the MacPhail School of Music within the General Extension Division.

- Students now enrolled in MacPhail College will be given an opportunity to transfer to a degree program at the University.

- The University will propose to establish in the General Extension Division a MacPhail Center for the Performing Arts, to be housed in the present MacPhail building. The General Extension Division will assume management of the building and may develop programs of extension work there in other fields besides the performing arts.

- "In order to preserve the traditions of service to music which the MacPhail name represents," the University will propose a new chair in the music department, to be named the MacPhail Chair of Music. Arrangements for funding the chair will be undertaken under the Regents' policies on named chairs. The chair is to be filled by "a person distinguished in music performance and instruction" as soon as an appropriate candidate is selected.

- Two leading MacPhail officials will be invited to join the University faculty: President William G. MacPhail as director of the new University of Minnesota MacPhail Center for the Performing Arts; and Dean Adrian Lauritzen as associate professor of music, both positions to begin this fall.

At the Regents' meeting, University President O. Meredith Wilson presented to the Regents a resolution by the MacPhail Board of Trustees which stated that they were entrusting to the University not only the school and college, but also "its good will, reputation, traditions and 60 years of musical heritage . . . to the end that the cultural development of the City of Minneapolis and State of Minnesota may be enhanced."

President William G. MacPhail and Verne Moss, the college's attorney and a trustee, attended the Regents' meeting and concurred in the statement that the school's transfer would be "to the mutual interest of the University and the MacPhail College and School, in order to develop music and music education of the highest quality." The transfer, they said, had been under discussion for two years.

The University's memorandum added the expectation that the move "will add to the growing national reputation of Minnesota as a state committed to excellence in the arts."

Arrangements have been made for all those who are now seniors in the college to receive their degrees there.

The General Extension Division will maintain and develop the preparatory and continuing education division of the MacPhail College. "In addition to continuing the present program of private music instruction, the Extension Division will inaugurate a program of credit and non-credit evening classes at the Center," Dean Willard L. Thompson, General Extension Division, said.

New Pharmacy Dean

Lawrence C. Weaver, who has been a pharmacologist and executive in the Pitman-Moore Division of the Dow Chemical Company for the past 13 years, in February was named professor and dean of Pharmacy of the University's College of Pharmacy. He succeeds George P. Hager, who left the University to become dean of the School of Pharmacy at the University of North Carolina.

Weaver, a native of Bloomfield, Iowa, most recently has been assistant to the general manager of Dow's Pitman-Moore Division, Indianapolis, Indiana. His positions have included director of pharmacology laboratories, associate director of pharmaceutical research, head of the biomedical research department and assistant to the director of research and development laboratories.

Two Associate Deans Announced For Business School

The creation of two new positions of associate dean of the School of Business Administration was announced last month by the Board of Regents.

Named associate dean for academic affairs was Professor George Seltzer, of the school's Industrial Relations Center. Professor Nicholas A. Glaskowsky, Jr., director of the undergraduate programs and professor of management and logistics, was named associate dean for administration.

As associate dean for academic affairs, Seltzer will act as coordinator between the faculty and department chairmen, will help facilitate research and serve as acting dean in the absence of the dean. Glaskowsky's new duties will consist of supervision, recruitment, scheduling, enrollment and counseling of students, and the administrative functions of the school.

Seltzer received his bachelor and PhD degrees from the University of Chicago and joined the Minnesota faculty in 1954 as a visiting lecturer in the School of Business Administration. He was named professor in 1959.

Glaskowsky graduated from Harvard University and received the MBA and PhD degrees from Stanford. He came to the University in 1957 and since 1964 has been director of the business administration undergraduate programs.

Wright, associate professor and a specialist in the history of Central Europe, has been named to serve as acting chairman of the University's Immigrant Archives.

The sixth Choral Arts Institute, musical offering of the Summer Session, will be presented July 1-10 this year, directed by two outstanding musicians. Hugh Ross, conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York City and founder of Tanglewood Music Festival's choral department, and Julius Hereford, Life Professor at Indiana University and distinguished musicologist, will conduct the workshop, joined by University faculty members . . . The University has been given two sculptures and is discussing gifts of three other art pieces, all of them commissioned for the New York State Pavilion at the recent World's Fair.

Theater Announces Showboat Schedule

Two plays completely new to the Twin Cities area — "The Great Git-Away" by Romeo Muller, and "Fashion" by Anna Cora Mowatt — will be presented on the University of Minnesota Showboat this summer.

The Showboat again will prove that it is a real boat by making its regular trip downriver to St. Paul for a two-week season at Harriet Island and will travel both the Mississippi and the St. Croix rivers for a week's performances at Stillwater.

"The Great Git-Away" is a new fantasy written by Muller, a New York television writer, while "Fashion" is an early American comedy. It was written in the 1840's and will carry on the melodrama tradition of the Showboat.

The Showboat's schedule for the 1966 season:

May 26–June 2 and June 10–July 2, "The Great Git-Away," Minneapolis; July 7–23, "Fashion," Minneapolis; July 25–28, "Fashion," Stillwater; July 29–30, "The Great Git-Away," Stillwater; August 1–6, "The Great Git-Away," St. Paul; August 8–13, "Fashion," St. Paul; August 15–27, play to be announced later, Minneapolis.

Performances will be at 8:00 P.M. Mondays through Thursdays, and at 7:00 and 10:00 P.M. Fridays and Saturdays. Tickets will be $2 through Fridays, $2.50 on Saturdays.

Mail orders for groups of 20 or more opened April 1; individual mail orders, April 15; counter sales, May 1 at Scott Hall and Twin Cities ticket offices.

Thirteen Seniors Named Woodrow Wilson Fellows

Thirteen seniors have been awarded Woodrow Wilson National Foundation fellowships for first-year graduate study toward careers in college teaching.

The fellowships are awarded to graduating seniors in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Panama and the Canal Zone to finance a year's tuition, fees and living allowances.

Woodrow Wilson fellows receive one academic year of graduate education, a living stipend of $2,000 and allowances for their dependent children. The graduate school they choose to attend receives an additional $2,000 from the foundation.

Twelve of the University students receiving the fellowships are enrolled on the Minneapolis Campus, while one is at the University of Minnesota, Morris.

The Woodrow Wilson Foundation fellowships were established nine years ago by a Ford Foundation grant of $24,500,000 to launch students in college teaching careers. Students who accept the fellowships "assume a moral obligation to complete at least one year of graduate studies and to give serious thought to a career in college teaching."

Your Man from Blue Cross answers the 4 questions most employers ask about health care plans!

Q. How much of each monthly payment is returned to my employees in the form of hospital benefits?

A. Minnesota Blue Cross consistently returns over 90 cents of every dollar to members in benefits. Most health care insurers don't even come close to this figure.

Q. How about claims paper work?

A. None, in fact, about the only paper involved is the Blue Cross identification card itself. No hospital admission forms. No claim forms. No tying up your own personnel in handling work you should be paying for . . . In short, Blue Cross relieves employers from all costly paper work connected with a health care plan.

Q. How can I be sure my employees won't end up with administrative detail?

A. Again, the Blue Cross identification card answers your employee problems and yours. The Blue Cross identification card is backed by an iron-bound contract whereby over 7,000 hospitals, at home and abroad, honor it on sight. This is the feeling of security that your employees appreciate when you put a Blue Cross card in their wallets.

Q. If Blue Cross is the largest health care plan in the world, is there a danger that we will be lost in the shuffle?

A. Not a chance. Many of the biggest companies in the world have a Blue Cross program and some with only five employees. But the same service, concern, and efficient administration go with any group, no matter what size. The fact that Blue Cross specializes in group health care programs, is another plus for you.

For further discussions, or answers to any other questions, call the man from Blue Cross. He's a health care plan specialist.
