University Information Assets: Re-Defining the University Archives in a Digital Age

The PEL project will explore issues regarding sustaining records of institutional history in a digital age. Both policy and practical issues will be assessed as a result of analyzing current practices for maintaining institutional information and current needs for institutional information.

Specific strategic questions for the President's Emerging Leaders Project include:

- What trends are evident in institutional and departmental activity related to the dissemination, publishing, and maintenance of information about these organizations (e.g., organizational records, publications, and files)?
- How is historical institutional information used in decision making, policy development, and fund raising?
- What are the institutional needs for historic information? What are the risks associated with the retention or destruction of institutional information?
- What is the current level of University community knowledge about the University Archives and the role that it fulfills?
- What are the challenges of sustaining University Archive functions in a distributed, digital age? What structures, policies, and educational programs are needed?
