Gay Announces Gala Parade; Floats, Bands are Featured

"It will take the all-out cooperation, effort and interest of all UMD organizations to make the 1952 homecoming parade comparable to last year's event," commented Dick Gay, chairman for the second year of the parade end of the annual festivities.

There will be little help this year from area high schools since the Minnesota State Teachers' convention happens to take place this week-end also. Of the fourteen bands invited, only five are expected to appear.

The number of organizations entering floats was uncertain at the time this issue went to press. Chairman Gay estimated possibly 20 floats would participate. Last year's winning float, "Drill the Redmen," was sponsored by Mu Delta Pi and Mu Sigma Psi, the medical fraternities.

The prize for the winning float will be a revolving cup. The winning group will have its name engraved on this cup and will keep it for one year, relinquishing it to the next year's winner. First, second, and third place floats will receive a smaller gold cup which they can keep.

The bands marching this year have decided not to compete with each other, so there will be

Hectic Homecoming Weekend Climaxed By "Just Plain Dance" in Armory

This is nothing new. It has no coyly clever name. No subtle subservience in raising funds for a "Cause".

It is an annual commemoration satuated in collegiate tradition celebrating a glorious victory or soothing a gracious defeat. It dates back to the first family battles of the caveman when both sides, the victors and the vanquished, participated in an aftermath affair.

No, the Homecoming Dance is nothing new. But it is respected and honored and attended as the culminating activity of all the hectic homecoming festivities. The dance will be held at the Armory from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. tomorrow night. Student Activity cards are tickets of admission.

All Alumni, faculty and (it is hoped) defeated Gustavus Adolphus students will be more than welcome. The instrumentalists will be a thirteen piece orchestra under the leadership of Bill Kovero. The dance is neither formal nor un-formal, but informal.

The student council is the sponsor. Chairman Jerry Cook and his arrangements committee, Jean Holmstrand, Donna Cathcart, James Fredstrom, Richard Gay and George Stoltz, have planned the evening around the most natural and appropriate theme—sports.

No Foot Ball, no Foul Ball, no Autumn Trotum. Just a plain, ordinary, down-to-earth, enjoy-yourself Homecoming Dance. No student needs to be urged to "take advantage of this wonderful opportunity". When looking back at college life and remembering the high points, it would be too difficult to say, "I wasn't at that dance".

Mock Election Set Today

The Democratic-Republican forum and the STATESMAN are sponsoring a mock election today in the first floor hall of Main. The election by paper ballots gives UMD students the opportunity to assert their political preference for state and national office seekers.

Featured along with the mock election will be the exhibition of a voting machine. No voting can be done on the voting machine, however.

Dudley Johnson and John Brust are in charge of arrangements. They stated that the student must present his activity card prior to voting and also that campaign literature will be available. Polling hours will be from 8:00 a. m. to 3:30 p. m.

The mock election is one phase of a drive to stimulate interest in the Democratic-Republican forum, an organization which over the past several years has made it possible for the student body to hear many local and national political figures.

The purpose of the forum is to enable UMD students to express their political views and points in group meetings and to provide an intelligent political program. The student will also become better acquainted with the machinery of government and the men behind it.

Mel Keldsen, Duluth, is president of the forum and Dr. Alfred Tezla, the faculty advisor.

"Coed in Paris", Queen Coronation Featured in Varsity Show Tonight

MUSIC—MUSIC—LAUGHS—AND MORE MUSIC!! The Varsity Show, "Coed in Paris," written by the fabulous Herb Taylor, and produced and directed by Don Sundquist, under the sponsorship of Gamma Theta Phi, UMD social fraternity, will bring to the UMD stage tonight a lavish splash of Parisian night life.

Paris, the city of love, sets the scene as the American coed meets her hero and, amidst nightclubs, songs can-can, French street painters and impetuous Frenchmen, quite naturally falls in love. Nancy Laine, a freshman from Duluth, will play the dream girl opposite Don Sundquist as the hero.

Gene Gruba, also a freshman, will read the prologue and from that point, the show launches into a rush of scenes—a chase in Paris, nightclub life and a typical "Herb Taylor" gangster skit.

Furnishing music for the production will be the Buckhorn band, directed by Marlan Anderson, including such notable campus notes as Kenny Miller and Terry Evanson. The Hammer sisters, better known as the "Velvet Duo" and veteran enertainers in nightclubs in the area, will team with Don Sundquist in vocal arrangements, and will round out the already sparkling musical.

The climax of the evening will unfold with the coronation of the 1952 Homecoming Queen. One of the six lovely candidates will be crowned to reign over the parade, game and annual Homecoming dance. Emceeding the coronation will be Dick Wallin, general chairman of the 1952 Homecoming activities.

Immediately following the show, the scene of events will adjourn to Chester Bowl where spectators will view the mammoth freshman bonfire.

Thoreau's Philosophies Pertinent To Present Age, Notes Dr. Glick

By RON LEMPI

"What can we learn from Thoreau? We can learn how a serious man who lived deliberately worked out for himself a philosophy for a satisfying life. And that's all we can learn from any man."

So remarked Dr. Wendell P. Glick, assistant professor of English, about the man who gets half the attention in his current course on Emerson and Henry David Thoreau. New at UMD this fall, Dr. Glick comes from Northwestern university, and has done much research into the works of Thoreau.

Why this interest in the mid-nineteenth century New England writer who termed himself "a mystic, a transcendentalist and a natural philosopher to boot," and whose most popular book, "Walden", was the first of that distinctive American literary type, the nature book?

"I just felt he had something to say, something worth following, and that he said it well," Dr. Glick noted. "That combination is rare!"

Though he died in almost peniless oblivion, Thoreau has in recent years become increasingly popular throughout the world. Even Ghandi and Tolstoy used his ideas.

"What he said was pertinent to his own time," said Dr. Glick, "but even more so today—an age of materialism. He saw that the way men accumulate money almost inevitably leads downward, for they tend to put second things first. He attacked the industrial system he saw developing in so far as it was destructive of human worth."

Thoreau felt that we must distinguish between the important and the non-important. To do this, we must penetrate the surface of things, and get to the bed-rock of reality.

"Simplicity! Simplicity! Simplicity!" he said, urging us to "reduce life to its lowest terms," live deliberately, and so avoid a life of "quiet desperation" which the majority seemed to pursue.

He was a fine naturalist, Dr. Glick noted, but "he examined physical things to get the spiritual values beyond them. He was critical of material things as ends-in-themselves, and believed they were just a reflection of greater moral truths."

One of those rare persons who "practiced what he preached," Thoreau could never conceive of ideals as divorced from action. Thus he went to Walden Pond, where for two years he lived simply and deliberately.

In another instance, he refused to pay a trifling poll-tax to a government which sanctioned slavery and pursued war. He was put in jail. His friend Emerson, himself committed to Thoreau's principles, is supposed to have come to see him, and to have asked, "Henry, why are you here?" "Waldo," was the moralistic rejoinder, "why are you not here?"

"Thoreau's philosophy was a philosophy of dissent—a theme most significant in the American tradition," he continued. "He believed that the individual is worth more than the state, that the state is beneficial only so long as it helps individuals to realize their potentialities. Thus the state is only a means to this end, while the individual is the ultimate."

"In our situation today he would make different specific suggestions, of course. He might feel that a stronger state may be the medium needed today to protect the individual, that any form would be justified if the net result was a guarantee of maximum freedom for a maximum number. But the point he'd make is the need for top realization of the potentialities of each and every individual. He would always oppose physical or intellectual slavery of any kind."

It might be, Dr. Glick admitted, that in his aversion to state control, Thoreau swung too far to individualism. "But I think he was right essentially!"

According to a so-called disgusted senior at UMD, most of us are "pinheads." This character had the crust to state, in a letter to our editor printed last week, that UMD is "headed down the same blind alley as other universities", inferring that our school is putting too much emphasis on sports. He or she also poked fun at the Boosters' Club of which our own Provo is a member and whom we know is no "pinhead." In this person's estimation the Bulldogs are "yokels" who "have never done anything great in the MIAC."

We completely disagree. We believe UMD is being very level-headed in the amount of emphasis it is giving athletics, and if anything, this level-headedness means being too conservative. So we like it when a Boosters' Club is organized to push a particular sport. As far as doing something great in the MIAC, we refer our fellow senior to the Bulldogs' five wins and one loss record of last year. We saw all of those games and each one of them was great. So, for a disgusted senior, we recommend a transfer to Gustavus where he can be with Dis-gusted company.

Each year, 438,000 miles of hot dogs are sold in the United States. UMD organizations having concession stands at the games probably contribute a quarter of a mile to this total, but could easily make it a half mile if they ordered enough to supply the demand. Take caution when buying black coffee during the third quarter, especially if the cups are already poured. It may be coke.

A committee from the Student Council has been asked to investigate the situation that now exists in the cafeteria of being too crowded during lunch hours. This is a result of the ban put on bag lunches in Washburn. In years past we were not allowed to eat bag lunches in the cafeteria so naturally Washburn was crowded. As one solution, the committee might recommend that both places be open to sandwich eaters.

A variety of entertainment is awaiting us this evening beginning with the Queen crowning and Varsity Show in our auditorium at eight and continuing on with the Bonfire at Chester Bowl about ten. Don't miss it!

Estonian Urges Extending Democracy to Every Nation

(Editor's Note—This is the third in a series of articles written by foreign students attending UMD.)

Paul Vesterstein, 24, is a native of Estonia. After being torn away from his family, he spent five years in a German displaced persons camp. He has been in Duluth three years.

Paul is aiming at a career in physical education and working with boys. His UMD studies and job as athletic director at the Boys' YMCA keeps him hopping.

Still he finds time for skiing. Last winter, Paul won the cross country event for UMD in the Minnesota College Conference meet. He goes out for football and track too.)

By PAUL VESTERSTEIN

While in Europe, I heard rumors that in the United States, nobody cares about or shares other peoples' hardships and difficulties; everybody has to shift for himself. I heard, too, about Americans' lack of patriotism, which I think is generally true.

But I know now that the rest is a misrepresentation of the United States by Europeans. Friendliness and helpfulness were evident everywhere I went. Such things almost lost meaning during the DP days in Germany.

Another thing that impressed me when I arrived was the thousands of cars, and the tempo of the streets. New York harbor at night and the magnificence of the towering city itself was an unforgettable experience.

I was surprised, too, by girls wearing red slacks. You see, Estonians hate red, the color of the Russian flag, for to us it symbolizes blood, terror and tyranny.

Estonians are hard workers, great patriots and a freedom-loving people. The "Sisu" (guts) which characterizes Finns applies to Estonians also.

What I believe in most is peace, democracy and freedom for everyone, including small nations. Tyranny must be expelled from the world, by force if necessary.

America has the power and moral quality necessary in this battle, and should assume mature world leadership. But Winston Churchill I regard as the greatest living person. His fight for democracy has been pure and firm.

In Europe there will be no actual "neutralism" as long as some countries suffer tyranny under the Russians. They love peace, but they love freedom more. They fully appreciate the aid the United States gave them during the past six years as one of the greatest contributions in all mankind's history. It has helped mortally wounded Europe to recover dignity.

In America, I think there is far too much advertising—it only tries to fool people. Too many people go to the movies, and movies sent to Europe often are poor. They should be censored.

I'm not yet a citizen, but it seems to me that too few people use the privilege of voting. Whoever takes a firmer stand against communism is my ideal candidate.

The Estonian education system differed greatly from yours. We studied lots of sciences and languages. We had to take one foreign language in grade school, and three in high school. So I took Russian, German, Latin and English.

The fine cooperation between students and faculty in America should exist everywhere. But generally, while United States school methods might be useful to people here, they would not apply to other countries, or vice versa.

Students Say

Now that you've been in college for awhile, what difference do you notice between high school and college?

Ralph Romano (Fort William)

"Differences—(1) More and harder school work. (2) In college you're left more on your own than in high school. (3) Smaller ratio of girls which is very bad."

Mary Peterson (Duluth)

"College is much harder but a lot more fun."

Marilyn Lyons (Duluth)

"The kids are much more friendly in college and you're more on your own. It's a lot more fun but also a lot of work."

Helen Bowes (Duluth)

"The kids are much more grown-up here."

PERSONALITY PROFILE

By VERN SIMULA

Meet another busy man. The student you see constantly "digging up things" and "seeing to this and that" around the campus is Arne Moilanen, editor of the STATESMAN.

Arne, a junior from Cloquet, has been quite a busy boy, for the past few years in fact. This is his second year as the editor, while in his freshman year, he edited the sports page.

After graduating from Esko High School in 1947, where he participated in Esko's first year in the gridiron sport and in basketball, Arne worked in the mills at Cloquet and then ventured to North Dakota and Minneapolis where he was employed in the bank business.

He started in the fall of 1950. Since his enrollment, besides being active on the school paper, Arne has affiliated with the Democratic-Republican Forum, the Student Council for two years, and intra-mural bowling. He is the vice president of the Pi Delta Epsilon, a honorary journalism fraternity, and also the VP of the Business Club.

Somewhere in the midst of these time consuming activities, Arne finds time to keep up his grades, his major field of concentration being political science and business and economics.

Upon graduation, Arne looks forward to returning to work with the First Bank Stock Corporation which includes sixty some banks in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Montana. But he also takes into consideration, and rather expects it, that he may have to postpone these plans for a while for as he says, "the draft will catch me like it has the others."

Not all of the life of Arne Moilanen has been taken up at banging a typewriter, burying his head in books, or counting up billions in a bank. Arne finds much relaxation in golf and bowling. Two of Arne's greatest thrills in sports came when he won the Finnish Bowling tournament in Virginia two years ago, when he copped All-Events, a first in the doubles and a third in the singles. His other big moment came when he hit the pins for a 561 in a team event at the American Bowling Congress in 1950 at St. Paul.

Who Will Reign Over Homecoming, 1952?

Win with Gin

Virginia Christie

Here is the sharp, smart majorette that leads the UMD Band, Virginia Christie. She is a senior, majoring in physical education, and minoring in health education. It seems that Virginia not only belongs to numerous clubs, but holds office in many of them. She is WAA president, Barker's president, treasurer of PEMM's, secretary of Student Council, Homecoming treasurer and belongs to Newman club, Non-Residents club and Orchesis. Her ambitions as far as the future is concerned, are to first teach physical education and then to travel around the United States.

Virginia is sponsored by the Beta Phi Kappa, Newman Club, WAA, Non-Resident's Club and Kindergarten-Primary.

Royalty for Rhoda

Rhoda Helgemoe

A glance at the list of clubs to which Rhoda belongs shows a well-rounded personality. She is a member of the University Theater Guild, the Democratic-Republican Forum, Sigma Phi Kappa, Home Economics Club, Alpha Psi Omega and Orchesis. She is a home economics major and a speech minor. Her favorite pastime is cooking, and she likes modern dance and watching football games. A junior now, she hopes to teach home economics after graduation and someday she would like to take a trip to Hawaii.

Rhoda is sponsored by the Theater Guild, Democratic-Republican Forum, Sigma Phi Kappa, Alpha Psi Omega, Orchesis and the Home Economics club.

A Crown for Joan

Joan Jarchow

As business manager of the Quarterly, social chairman of Torrence Hall, and student assistant, Joan Jarchow has more than proven her ability to lead. She is a very active senior, majoring in business education and minoring in social studies. Membership in Delta Beta Gamma and Orchesis are also accredited to her list of activities. Her membership in Orchesis is significant of her interest in modern dance. Although not a musician, one of Joan's hobbies is listening to and appreciating music. As far as future plans are concerned, it is the teaching profession that beckons Joan. And now she may add to her list of activities, candidacy for 1952 Homecoming Queen.

Joan is sponsored by Delta Beta Gamma and Elementary Council.

Surely Shirley

Shirley Leiviska

Any warm summer day will find Shirley engaged in her favorite pastime—swimming. She is the proud possessor of the Water Safety Instructor badge and spent the past summer as life guard on the beach in her hometown. A very active girl on campus, Shirley is a member of Rangers, Wesley Foundation, Theater Guild, Barkers and Statesman. As an art major, and English minor, much of her time is spent in Tweed hall. A candidate, and runner up, for last year's "ROTC Sweetheart of the Corps," Shirley now adds Homecoming Queen candidate to her list of achievements.

Shirley is sponsored by Gamma Theta Phi, Buckhorns, Mu Sigma Psi, Mu Delta Pi, Sigma Alpha Iota and Pi Delta Epsilon.

Jan Can, and Will

Janet Nelson

This friendly sophomore girl is one that will be seen many times during the year, for she is one of the cheerleaders who will provide the pep and backing for the football and basketball games. Proof that she is well liked by her friends and classmates lies in the fact that she is secretary of PEMM's and secretary-treasurer of the Sophomore class. Being a physical education major, she is also active in WAA. Janet is also a member of Barkers, Sigma Psi Gamma, and LSA. She likes to spend her spare time skiing, sewing and dancing. Her main ambitions for the future are to teach physical education and to "ski my way to Switzerland". Janet was also runner-up in last year's "ROTC Sweetheart of the Corps" competition.

Janet is sponsored by the 'M' Club, PEMM's and the Barkers.

"Margie, Margie" for Queen

Marjorie Turnbloom

President of Sigma Psi Gamma, social sorority, is an indication of Marjorie's pleasant personality, ability to lead and to make friends. With these assets, and with elementary education as her major, Marjorie's future as a teacher looks very successful. As a member of Orchesis, she has as one of her hobbies and interests, modern dance. An active member of Barkers Club, she likes to watch and support the football and basketball teams. And so to this peppy, sophomore girl is bestowed the honor of candidate for Homecoming Queen.

Margie is sponsored by the Sigma Psi Gamma sorority.

New, Free Bus Schedule Listed

The bus route will be as follows:

Arnold Air Society Initiates Seventeen Third Year ROTC Men

The annual initiation meeting of the Arnold Air Society took place at Tweed Hall Thursday, Oct. 16. Bernie Dinner was in charge of the proceedings, ably assisted by Dudley Johnson, William Brechlin, and executive officer Lloyd Marchand.

Pledges initiated were: Lawrence Berg, Dick Beckman, John Bailey, Wesley Ahlberg, Fred Olson, Dale Olson, Edward Rapp, John Morrison, Virgil Lindquist, Roger Troyer, Gordon Richardson, Leonard Jokinen, William Yesberger, John Sherman, Roland Cloutier, Robert Bevis and Richard Ojakangas.

John Morrison was selected as operations officer, Richard Ojakangas as publicity chairman, and Lawrence Berg was elected as member at large of the new pledge class.

From the Science building the bus will run directly to 23rd avenue east and Fifth street via Allen avenue and Kent Road. There it will discharge and pick up passengers, then proceed to 24th Avenue east and Superior street, where it will turn around and reverse the route. The first trip will leave the Science building at 7:45 a. m. in order that students and staff may park their cars on the campus parking lot, and take the bus to the old campus, Olcott Hall and Tweed Hall.

According to Dr. William R. McEwen, chairman of the UMD Parking committee, the bus service has been established for the following reasons:

(1) to offer efficient, economical and convenient transportation between the campus areas; (2) to supplement public transportation and to provide direct access to either campus from the east and west sections of the city and (3) to alleviate congested street parking near the old campus.

The Parking Committee feels the urgency of maintaining good relationships with the property owners of the community. It is expected that many cars now being parked in the vicinity of the old campus will, as a result of this transportation plan, be parked on the new campus where adequate and safe parking facilities are available.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Not only has "the disgusted senior" shown a flagrant lack of tact, but it is also apparent that four years of training have failed to instill in him any imagination whatsoever.

Pre-supposing that U. M. D. became a "sportless" institution, what would be the student gain? Where would we benefit? The answer is we wouldn't.

We would most certainly eliminate that part of the student enrollment which depends upon their athletic accomplishments to support them in their education. This? When most of the colleges and universities in America are bemoaning the fact that student enrollment is on the decline.

There is nothing about athletics that discourages students from maintaining high scholastic averages. If anything, it gives students such as you, the edge. You and those like you may use your free time in any way you wish, while it is virtually impossible for the athlete to use his free time for anything except study. Why is it that if one has the unfortunate ability to play football he is automatically placed in the category with morons and emblems? If the "disgusted senior" will take the time to compile the group scholastic average of the present football team he will obtain a surprising rebuttal against the "low scholastic standing" argument.

How about UMD activities, which I for one think very highly of Sno-Week? Homecoming Week? NEVERMORE! Sports are the backbone of UMD. Without the contest where is the fun?

The "disgusted senior" obviously does not have the courage of his convictions for if he did he would have signed his name to the article. It is a very easy thing to ridicule people when one has the cloak of anonymity. If this then is an example of the product of four years in a higher institution of learning, FRESHMEN BEWARE.

SPORTS HIGHLIGHTS

By DICK SIPOLA

Next week our Bulldogs tangle with the powerful Gustavus Adolphus eleven and our hopes for a homecoming victory are not very bright. Currently leading the league, the Gusties are virtually a shoo-in for the MIAC crown. We're sure that the Bulldogs won't be much of an obstacle in their drive for their second consecutive title. After watching the bewildered Bulldogs take a thorough beating from the Hamline Pipers we can not help but feel that they are a very dejected squad. The reasons for the low morale are obvious and we doubt very much that the boys will be able to recover their early season poise and confidence soon enough to have a successful season.

Coach Peterson is in the midst of a rebuilding program that was necessitated by the loss of so many fine players from the second place squad of last season. This year's team does have potential, and with development that comes with continued experience and coaching maybe next season's squad will be troublemakers in the MIAC again.

TIME MARCHES ON

Basketball season will be with us in a few short weeks and Coach Joe Gerlach will have his aspirants for hardwood glory hard at work. With several promising freshmen from the surrounding area enrolled at UMD this year and a nucleus of lettermen, several from the football squad, Gerlach may have the material for a fairly good team. They won't be contenders for the conference title but should win their share of games. We certainly hope our basketball team will give us something to cheer about this winter.

With the approaching winter season, hockey will also swing into the limelight. Coach Gordy Eddoll's boys have a game scheduled with the Golden Gophers this season which could be the start of an intense rivalry between the two schools. This contest, if scheduled every season, should do much to gain recognition for UMD athletic teams among the other schools in Minnesota and the people on the Minneapolis campus. Athletics are one of the finest ways for a school to obtain publicity, and in a growing institution such as ours publicity is a necessity. An annual hockey series with the Gophers would be a definite boost for UMD.

AMAZING BUT TRUE

Minnesota's Golden Gophers pulled one of the most amazing upsets of the 1952 season Saturday when they tripped a heavily favored Illinois team 13-7. It was expected by all that the Illini would trample the Gophers unmercifully, but the determined Minnesotans upset the dopesters.

This game demonstrated the importance of morale and fighting spirit to a winning football team. Last week's victory over Northwestern seemed to give the Gophers the shot in the arm they needed to play inspired ball.

Next week Minnesota travels to Ann Arbor, Michigan to meet the powerful Wolverines in the annual "Little Brown Jug" battle. Michigan will be favored to keep this most famous of all football trophies for the tenth consecutive year, but you can bet the rejuvenated Gophers will put up a stiff battle. The winner of this game could assume the role of an odds-on favorite in the battle for the Big Ten crown. To assume an optimistic attitude is cheering at times so we think the "Little Brown Jug" is going to have a new home come tomorrow night.

Branch Hockey Squad Expected to be Strong

By DALE HOLTER

All things seem to point to a big year for UMD hockey and a determined effort will be made to build the Bulldog's game up to Western conference standards. Again, as in last season, the team will play on an independent basis. This means that no definite schedule has been made.

Two games, however, are definitely on the schedule. These are with the University of Minnesota and Michigan Tech. Although these are bigger schools, the Bulldogs should prove to be a worthy opponent. Games will also be arranged with any MIAC schools that will schedule UMD, plus games with major college clubs, local pro, and top notch amateur teams.

Now in the midst of a rebuilding program, the Bulldogs will be concerned with two main objectives. They are: (1) win as many games as possible and (2) promote hockey as a major sport at UMD.

The squad will have nine returning lettermen from last year as a nucleus plus four former lettermen who were in the Air Force or were ineligible last year. Added to these are the new prospects turning out for the first time.

WAA Activities

The WAA will sponsor an alumnae tea tomorrow afternoon immediately after the parade, according to Virginia Christie, president. The tea will be held at Tweed hall. Hostess for the event is Dr. Graybeal and serving as chairman is DeLores Herald.

UMD Gridders Swamped By Hamline Pipers

By BUDDY LAMPPA

The Hamline Pipers, behind a powerful running attack spearheaded by the "Twin Dynamos", Don and Dale Rasmussen, rolled over the winless UMD Bulldogs, 28-6, last Saturday night at Public School's stadium.

Over 2,000 fans watched Hamline move at will to garner a 14-0 first quarter lead. From that point on, the outcome of the game was never in doubt.

Jack Curtis, big Hamline fullback, drew first blood for the Pipers by climaxing a 30-yard drive with a short plunge to paydirt. Co-captain Dave Peterson kicked the extra point.

Don Rasmussen set the scene for Hamline's second touchdown when he intercepted quarterback Howie Tucker's pass on the Piper 34-yard line. Hamline, aided by a 15-yard penalty, drove to the Bulldog 12-yard line, from where McCarthy passed to Smaagaard for a touchdown.

In the second quarter, Hamline, sparked by the running of Dale Rasmussen, drove 70 yards to make the score read 21-0 at half-time.

The Pipers pushed across another tally in the third canto after a 44-yard march. Don Rasmussen plunged from the one yard line for the score. Peterson again converted for a 28-0 lead.

Coach Lloyd Peterson's gridgers scored their only touchdown in the final chapter. Bobby Daniels intercepted a Piper pass and returned to the Hamline 47-yard line. The Branchmen then ran their way to the 32 from where Tucker opened up a passing attack hitting Boffa for 17 yards and Johnson for 15 and a touchdown. The TD was scored on fourth down after the Bulldogs seemed to be stalled on the Piper 13-yard marker.

The defeat was UMD's third in conference play and the victory was Hamline's fourth. The Pipers have lost once. Tomorrow night UMD tackles undefeated Gustavus Adolphus in the homecoming.

Gustavus Favored in Bulldog Homecoming

By RON JACOTT

Powerful Gustavus Adolphus, defending MIAC champion, moves into Public School's stadium at 8:00 p. m. tomorrow to highlight UMD's homecoming festivities.

The Gusties, who are well on the way to their third straight conference title, will be rated as favorites. The Bulldogs still feel the loss of their Little All-American candidate, Phil LeTourneau, who was ruled ineligible two weeks ago.

Two of the Gusties' great stars who faced the Bulldogs last year will be missing tomorrow night. The pair, hailed as the best small-college passing duo in the country last season, was lost through graduation. Haldo Norman, a sticky-fingered end, made the first string on the Associated Press Little All-American team, and Tom Zwiener, a deadly-firing quarterback, was given honorable mention. Norman is now a member of the coaching staff.

Gustavus will be led by its two returning all-conference selections of last year; Cal Roberts, a 230 pound tackle and Marv Gunderson, a 200 pound guard. Roberts was a Little All-America choice two seasons ago. Another man to watch will be Francis Bradley, a fast-stepping halfback, who will probably give the Bulldogs more trouble than the Rasmussen twins of Hamline did last week.

The Bulldog attack is centered chiefly around three hard running backs: Ken Johnson, Bob Daniels and Wally Aunan. Sling-in' Sam Tucker also adds to the cause with his deadly passing. His main target probably will be Dave Erholtz, an end, who came into his own last week.

If the weather is halfway decent, a capacity crowd will be expected to be on hand to see if the Bulldogs can Disgust Gustavus.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Wedding bells? Not this year! The marriage ball, an annual event sponsored by the Engineers club, has received a stormy reception from the administration of UMD. The ball failed to secure support from the faculty.

When initial plans were being made for this year's ball, it was opposed by the administration due to letters received from a few misinformed persons of the community. These individuals were under the impression that the affair was sacrilegious due to the mock wedding ceremony.

It seems that the faculty is putting the wishes of a few members of the community above the wishes of the students. Maybe the administration is catering to a few community members because they have statements from them. If this is so, why doesn't the student body let itself be heard?

We put this question to the students: "Do they consider the Marriage ball sacrilegious and childish?" The answer could be either side whether the ball will be held, as we think the administration will concede that the student body is mature enough to decide the question.
