Our Mothers

WHO TAUGHT US TO SPEAK THE TRUTH

WE DEDICATE THIS

BOOK.

Dear Readers:

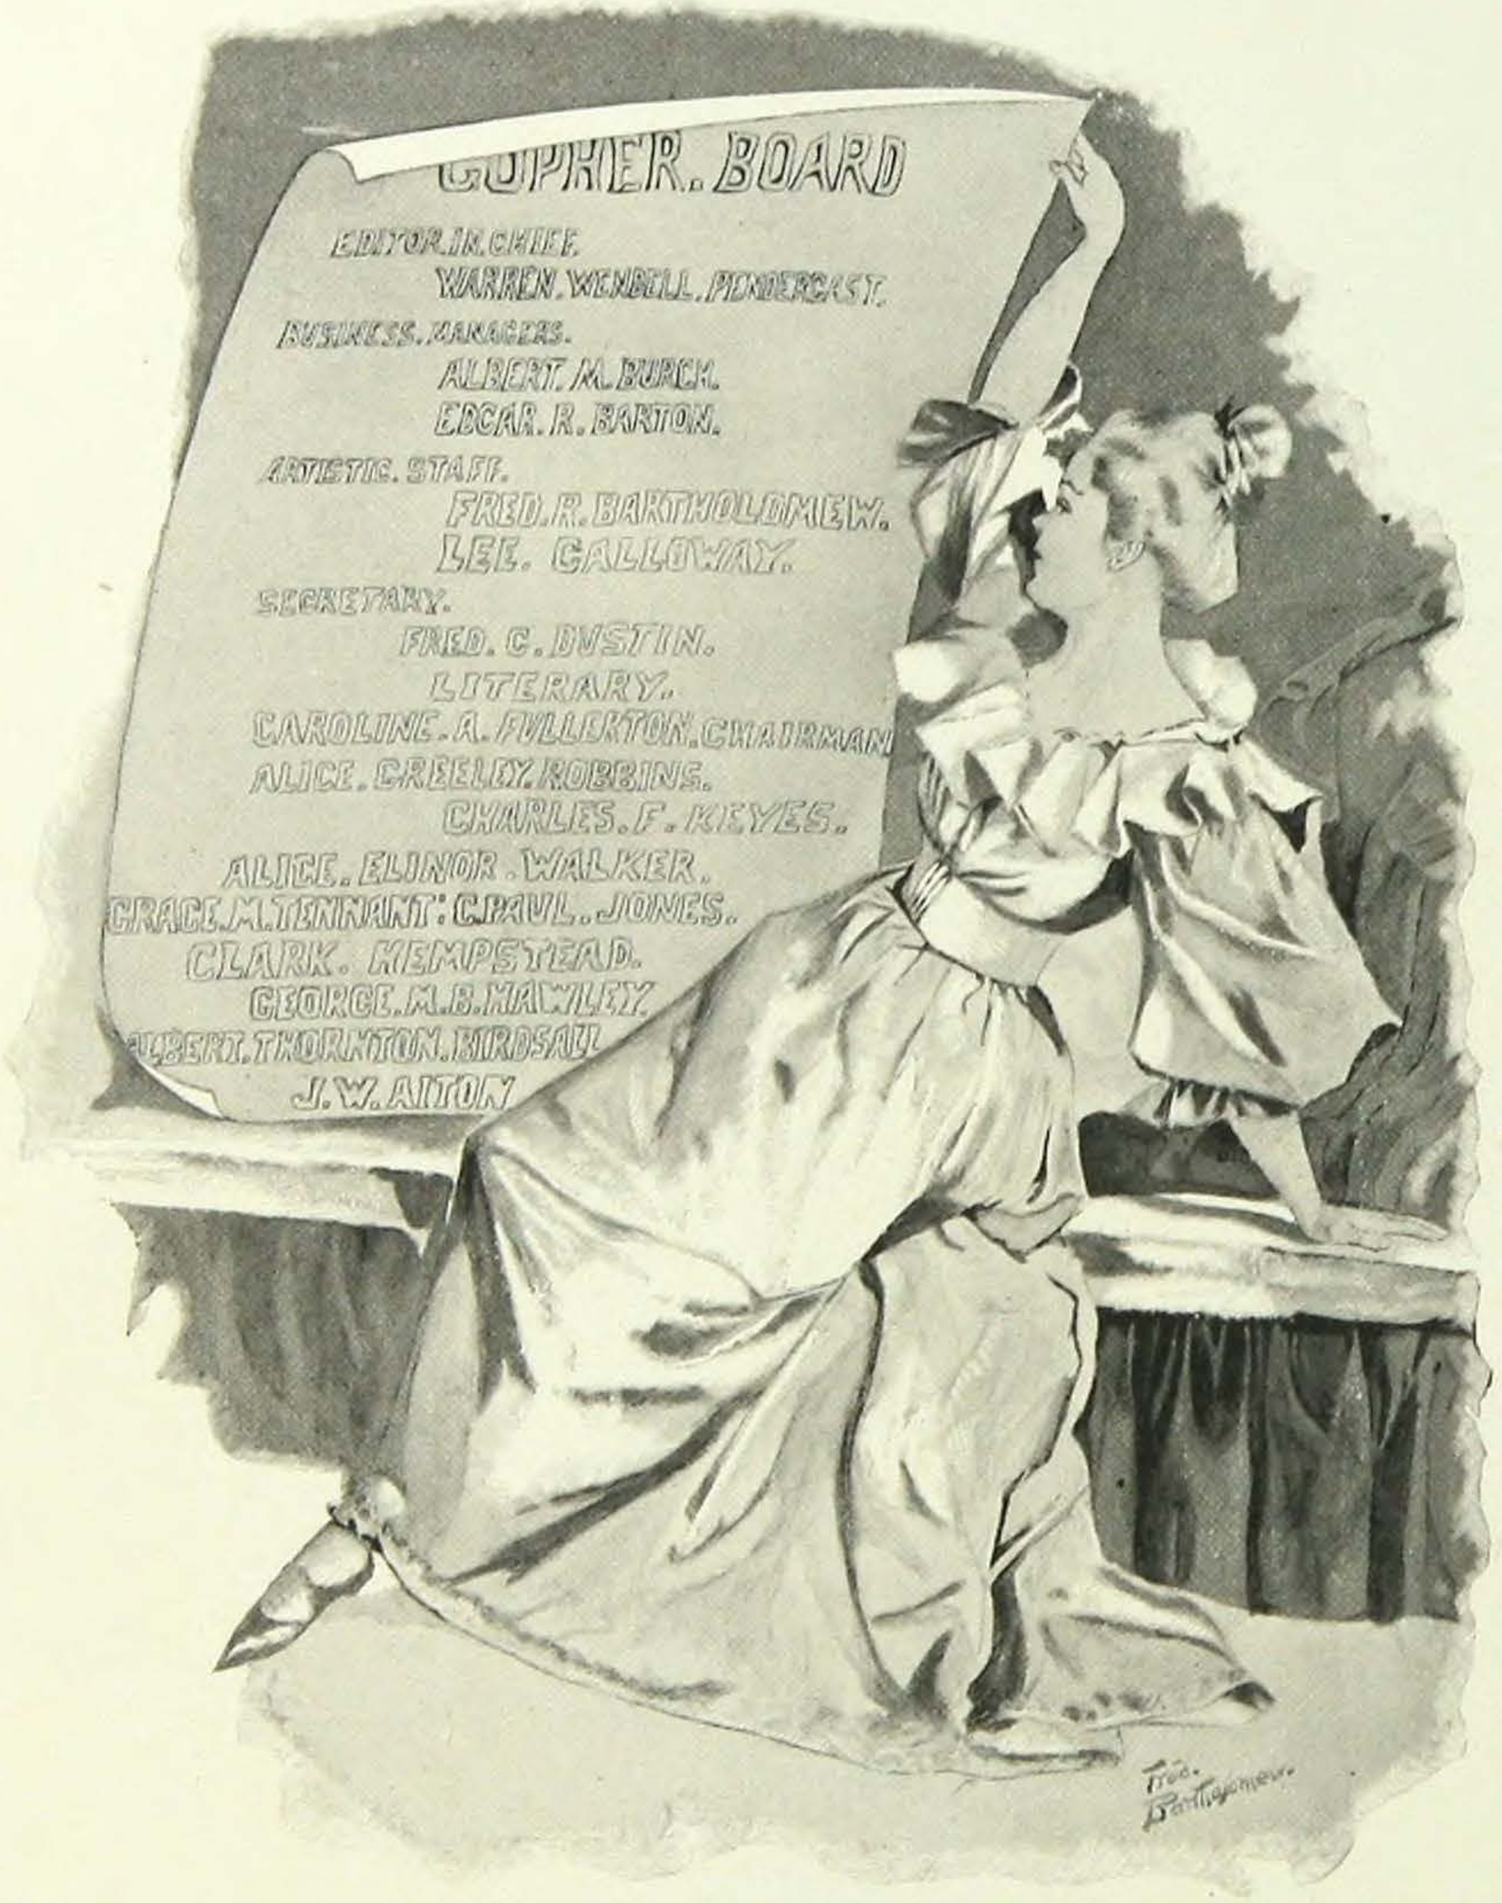

The '96 Gopher is out. If in looking through it you find yourself hit, bear it. If you are not mentioned, bear it.

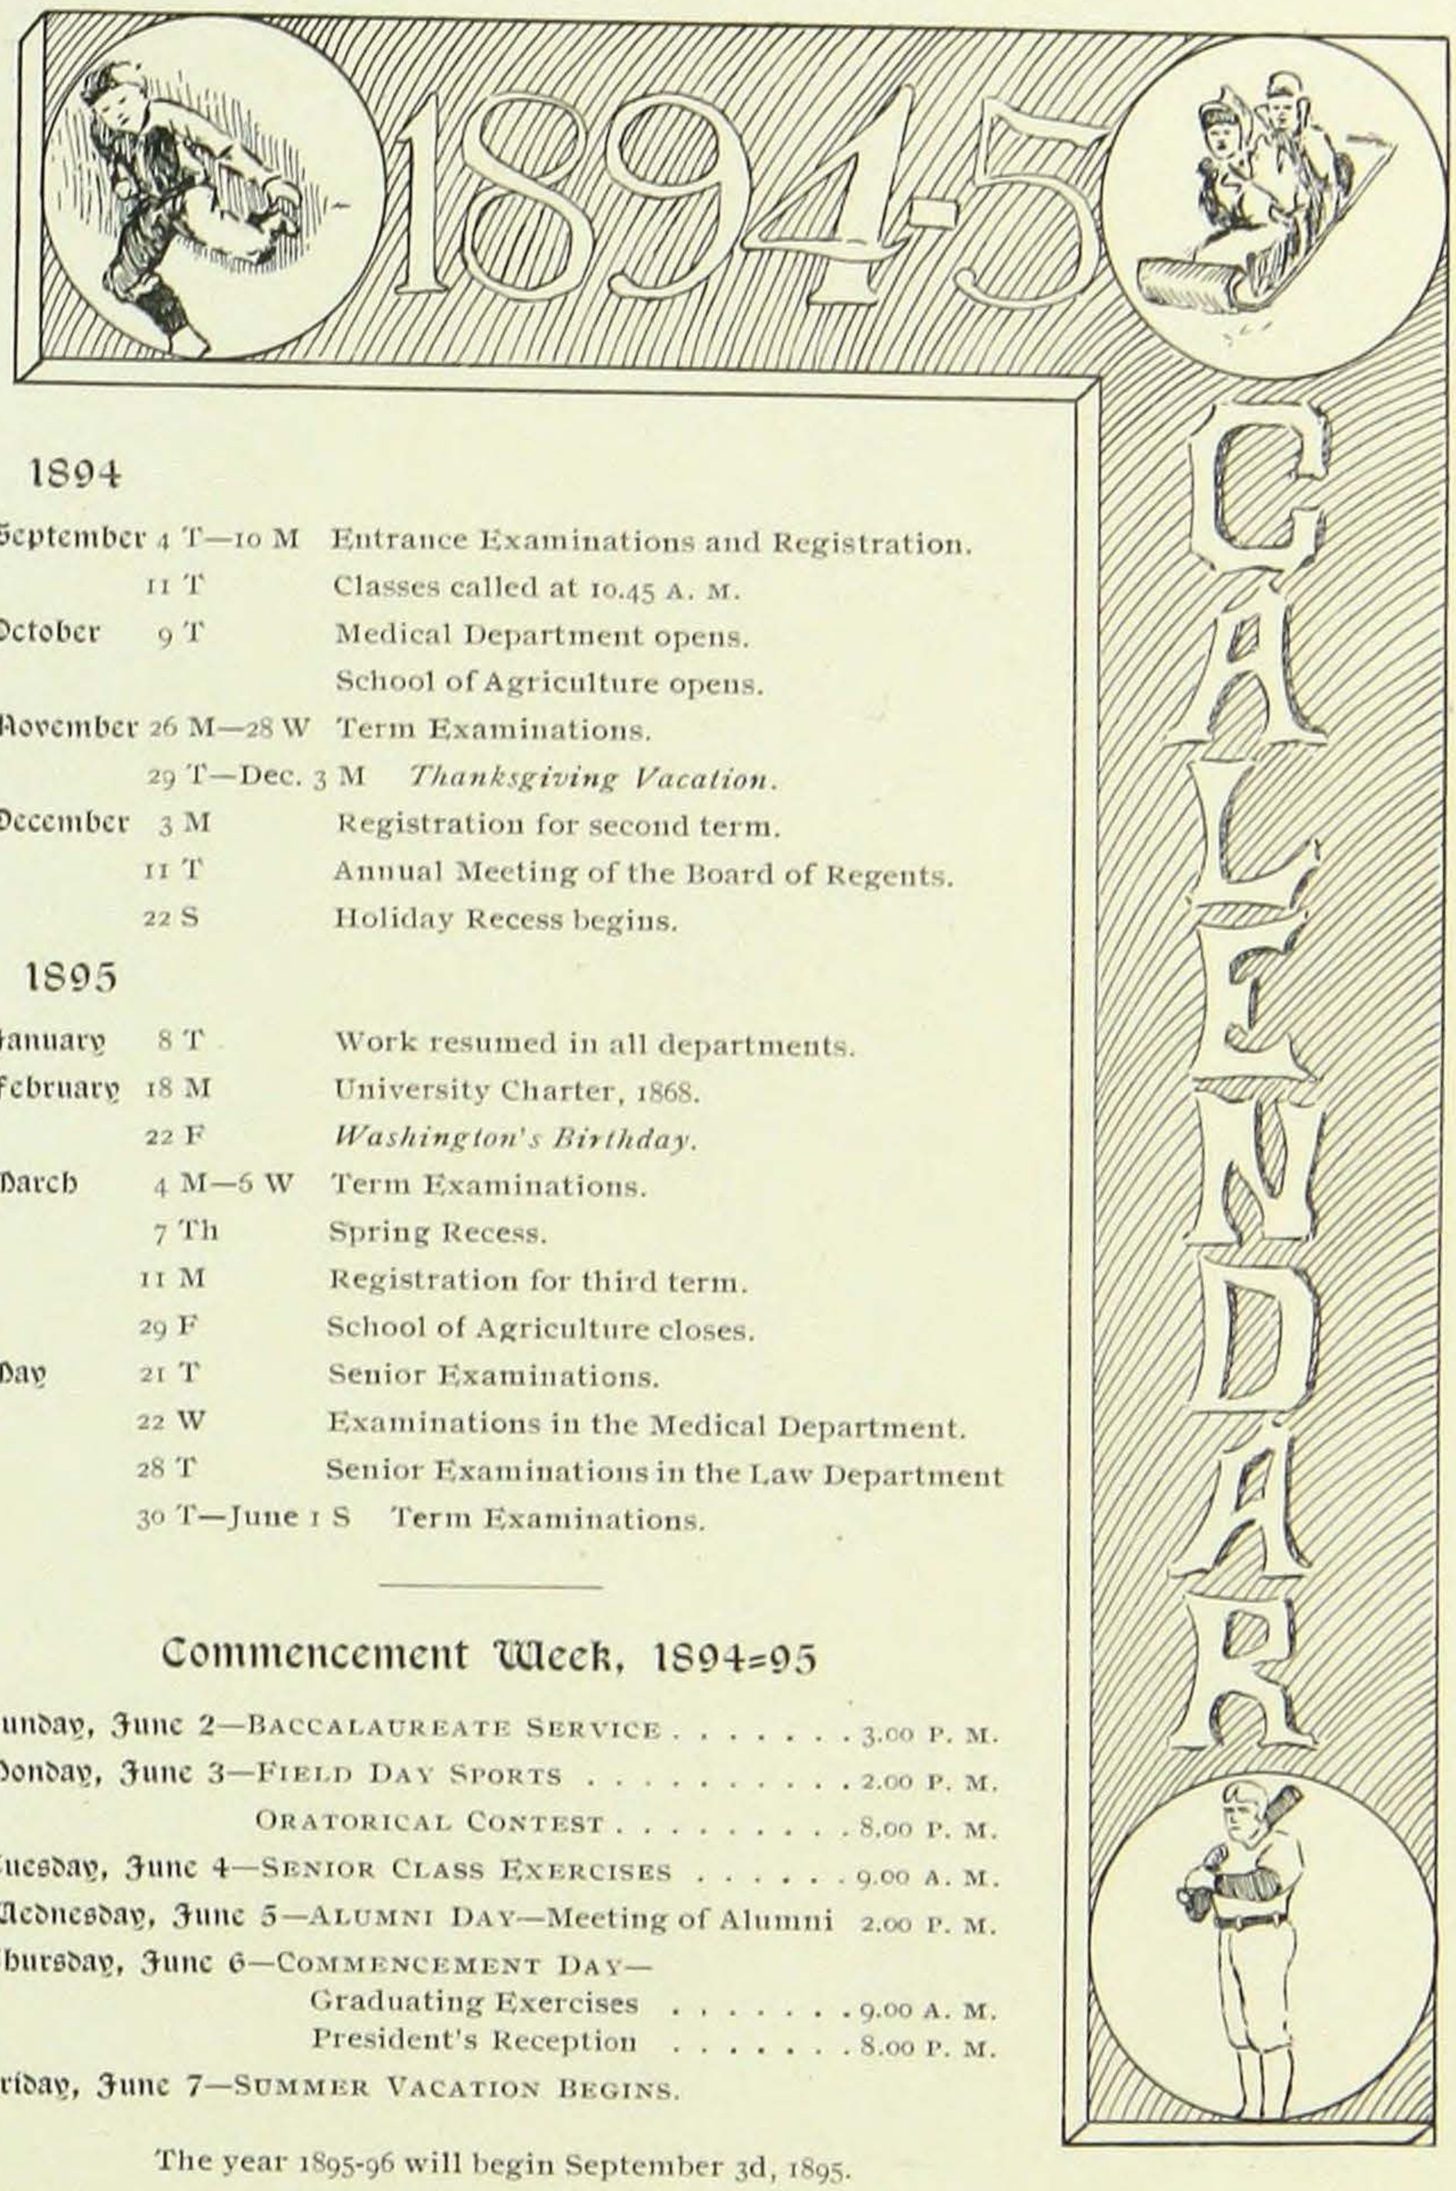

For the generous support of the Class of '96 we beg leave to extend thanks. But especially are our best wishes due to Mr. Arthur Murfin, Miss Belle Austin, Spinster, and Mr. Carl Fowler, of the Senior Class, for timely and helpful advice.

Gopher Board' 96.

Prologue . . .

Go, little Gopher
Our task is done,
The world's before thee;
Thy wand'rings begun.
Who would see himself
As others see,—
Who would know the worst;—
Let him ask of thee.
Thou bearest the truth;
Who seeks shall find.
Go, little Gopher,
Ye Fates, be kind!

Senior History.

Would an artist paint a picture
Fair and beautiful to view,
He would choose from Nature's palate
Every tint and every hue.
Here a red so warm and brilliant,
There a purple royal rare;
Now a glittering gleam, as golden
As a lock of sunny hair.
Now a dash of deepest azure.
Then a bit of balmy blue,
Blending all with skill together,
And the picture greets our view.

'91-2—Victorious over Sophs at our first meeting and at Freshmen party.

So it is in Human Nature,
Thus the artist must portray,
Lives of men in many colors,
Bright or somber, grave or gay.
All in harmony united,
Then the union will survive.
Thus it is the whole world over,
Thus it is in Ninety-five.
There's the maid who sits triumphant
High on reason's lofty throne,
And another quite contented
Just to rule a heart alone.

'92-3—Inaugurated cane rush.
Adopted uniform class cane.

'93-4—Proposed, designed and carried into effect "U" pennant.
Gopher '95 most artistic yet issued. (?—Ed.)

There's another, have you seen her?
One who will procrastinate,
Who never seems to worry
If she is a little late.
Girls who leave the narrow hallway
And adore the sweet fresh air,
Love to stroll about the campus
And may be—you know where.
She who digs and delves for knowledge,
Searches deep in ancient lore,
And the maid who is contented
Just to knock at wisdom's door.

Who can e'er forget the maiden
Always brilliant, full of fun,
She who gives her heart to many,
For it's quite too big for one.
She who speaks right out in meeting,
Who believes in woman's rights;
One who to her days is adding
Just by stealing from the nights.
There's the girl with tactful manner
Who agrees with all you say,
Reconciling her opponents
While she gets her own sweet way.

'94-5—Cap and gown revolt.
Inaugurated $6.00 assessment scheme.

'94-5—Our parties innumerable.
Baby pictures, "Artistic sway and motion," coasting, Bishop's Mistletoe, etc., all characterized by brain and heart repartee globergerena and fine refreshments.

One whose soul is filled with music,
One who simply loves to dance,
In the hall so bright and dazzling
When the melodies entrance.
Men of every life and nation,
Men from almost every land,
You will find them here united
Ninety-five's most wondrous band.
One who loves to wear a sweater
And a wondrous growth of hair,
And the man who looks important
With his pockets full of . . . air.

Handsome men and men ambitious,
Tall ones liked by all the maids,
Short ones whom the girls are fond of,
Men who have their plans all laid.
E'en a married man is numbered
And the man who is engaged;
There the barb against the frat man
Many little wars have waged;
There's the wily politician,
And the athlete you will find;
Men with brains as well as muscle,
In the student here combined.

'94-5—Originated and completed "Federated Students."

'94-5—Instituted "Minnesota Magazine," as a memorial of '95.

There's the man quite literary,
One who shall be known to fame,
And another whose great genius
Will perpetuate his name.
Yes, the world shall hear of many
Of our jolly girls and boys,
Ninety-five shall claim their glories
As her own peculiar joys.
And as time goes on forever,
Many rich harvests grow and thrive
From the seeds we've sown together,
In the year of Ninety-five.

Notes on Lecture by Professor Knowall.
January 17th, 19,996.

I. Introductory.—Reasons why we should study the history of this people.
a.—They were a distinct and peculiar people, far superior to all contemporaries, predecessors and successors.
b.—In them was concentrated all the learning of their age.
c.—"In perseverence, pluck and punctuality, they were equalled by few, excelled by none."—(See M. L. Sanford's "Personal Memoirs of Classes from —— to ——."

II. Origin of race and early home.
Authorities differ.—Some say Ireland, basing opinion on fact of their verdancy (prejudiced and not authentic.) Major surmise false. Since proven by best authorities on antiquities that they were well ꝛe(a)d, and true blue ∴ could not have been green.

Other authorities inclined toward the Lunar Theory, which grants to the moon the honor of being the producer of this remarkable people. While there is a strong analogy between them and the moon, in that they furnished lights in the darkness about them, it cannot be asserted with any degree of probability that they really came from the moon.

Solar Theory—generally accepted—conceded by all best authorities that without doubt the sun must have been their primeval dwelling place and preterrestrial habitation; their unparalled brilliancy being cited as sufficient and abundant proof.

III. Entrance on Stages of History.

At critical period after Dark Ages, during which, tribes of '94 and '95 held sway.

"Night brings out the stars."

a.—Conditions under which they entered.

(See E. B. Johnson.)

b.—Effects of these conditions.

Lives of great men all remind us.

(See Dewart, Higbee, Slusser, et.al.)

IV. Periods of History.

1.—Reign of James I.

a.—Struggle for existence.

(1.)—Era of Invasions.

The barbarous tribes of the Sophomorites secretly recognizing the superiority of the new race and realizing that they were destined to supplant and surpass them, naturally regarded them with no friendly spirit, and in fact, made use of every opportunity to beset them on all sides. Having long and patiently endured persecution at their hands the race arose, and in the sight of the assembled tribes, twenty of their heroes wrested from the Sophomoritic champions the sign of their supremacy and carried off the cane. [In regard to the glorious victory contemporary Soph. records are silent.]

b.—Rebellion against severe Requirements of Military System.

2nd Period.—Rule of the Danes.

Marked religious development,

a. Civil Strife and Internal Dissensions.

Causes—People made up of commingled nations, many Greeks and more barbarians with a sprinkling of Scotts, Fijis and Finns.

(See Walker, Page 304.)

This homogenous structure of the race necessarily gave rise to internal dissensions, usually exhibited at elections and settled peaceably by ballot box; physical force being reserved for foreign invasions.

Culminated in great Gopher Battle, February 17, '94, in which all the other races unite against Barbarians; neither side gained decisive victory; result, the removal of all race prejudice.

b.—Financial distress caused by extreme indulgence in social frivolities. Wonderful ability of the race was equal to the occasion. Sold their women by the pound and paid their debts.

At this time also, election was held for the purpose of making money, a custom not uncommon among their contemporaries.

3d Period. Reign of the House of Hempstead.

All enemies subdued and idea of universal and eternal dominion fully established.

Age of culture and general good feeling.

Literature flourishes.

The great literary work of the age, in fact of all ages, the Junior Annual, is of this period.

New School of Psychology established; great service rendered to mankind in doing away with all laborious study formerly connected with the old school. Psychology formerly treated as study of the internal life and mental development of mankind in general; their new school introduced the idea of Psychology as the study of diminutive man or the infant.

Great discoveries made in other lines of science; subjects looked upon in entirely new light. Biology for the first time treated as study of two legged animals. (See Webb. Ancient examination files, Feb. 17, '94.)

Endo skeleton defined as bones of tail.

(See Rönning.)

In fields of literature, entirely new meter was employed, as we find mention made of "monometer, diameter and barometer" in Higbee, "Notes on Eng. Literature, Vol. I, Mar. 19, 1894."

V. Characteristics and Temperament of Race.

Remarkable Physical Development.

Strong foot-ball tendencies. Athletics played prominent part in national life and politics. (Not due to climate, as the atmosphere was not conducive to activity.)

(See Folwell, in "Fresh Air.")

Beauty of its women. Feminine beauty so highly esteemed, that the handsomest women was voted for at general elections and the result of the vote published in the great work of the age.

FARMINGTOWN, Minn., September 29, 1894.

MY DEAR SON: I was so glad to get your letter and to learn that your homesickness is wearing off. Now, Samuel, don't study too hard. Your health is of more importance than Algebra, and don't stay up late nights. It is very bad for a person who is undergoing severe mental labor to keep late hours. Tell your instructors firmly, but kindly, that you can't possibly stay up studying after ten o'clock. It is contrary to all rules of health.

Well, I must stop and get the potatoes on for dinner.

THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, the oldest and largest of the East Side churches, has always been the chosen religious home of a large number of students. It is noted for its complete equipment, the provision it makes for Bible study in modern ways, and the spirit of democracy and fellowship which rules, particularly among its young people. As in former years, its large facilities for enjoyment and service are freely offered to students. All who do not belong elsewhere are cordially invited to make their home with us.

From Some Alumni.

DEAR '96 GOPHER:

We do not send this account of ourselves to give you any advice; we need all we have;—or that you may profit by our experience. We can't afford to let you. One of the first precepts inculcated on our infant mind was that experience is dear. We have lived to prove it true. Moreover, beneficient nature has so constituted the human race that not even the most generous man can donate his experience to another, as in the kindness of his heart he would often gladly do. But in the Spring a young graduate's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of his Alma Mater, and fond memory drops a tear, or perhaps a letter, as in this case.

Indeed we do think of you, for it is not yet a year since we left the dear old campus, and now, tho' absent in the body, in the spirit we are with you still. It was at the Alumni Banquet last June that one of us granted he would never feel so important again as he did then. "For to-day I am a Senior of the glorious U. of M.—to-morrow--and I am a tramp." But now most of us tramps of '94, turned away from what has been our home for four happy years, have been driven, by our indomitable energy and the Minnesota winter, to take our place among the world's laborers. When we parted we promised each other we would learn our class motto—there wasn't time to learn it at the U—— and make thro' life our guiding star, Sumus quod nos facimus. But now—come to try it—there seems to be a general sentiment among us that it needs revision. A slight change will do it. "We are what we can make the most at (that is, we are going to be as soon as we find out what it is). No one in the class thus far has been found who could change the new motto into Latin, so it hasn't been adopted.

Perhaps you wonder what becomes of all the graduates.

Some of us still linger about the campus—"the last leaves in the Spring"—cramming nights as of old, the next day we may deceive with our great learning, not a professor now, but a class Those of us in the professional schools are so much in evidence among you that we needn't mention them. The vast majority in lesser halls of learning are finding out how not to apply pedagogue theories, and daily administer to the youthful mind sugar-coated facts which it regards as quite superfluous.

Some have been called to the ministry; they were called, it wasn't some other noise they heard.

Some in the classic east are realizing their ideals on canvas, and some in Western newspaper offices are idealizing realities beyond recognition, for the edification of the public.

Some have discovered that it is not good for man (and especially for woman) to be alone. A good many more are apparently on the point of making the same discovery.

But we are forgetting that your interest in us cannot be the same as ours in ourselves or in you, for that matter. Nothing connected with the dear old University can ever lack interest to us. We are eagerly waiting for the GOPHER to be out. Please add five more to those already ordered; the check is enclosed.

So, dear GOPHER, we leave our best wishes with you, and nogood advice, for we said we wouldn't. There is no need to advise our friends of '96 to follow in our footsteps; they are following now. Go on as you have begun and you will succeed. Grab everything in sight, or, in other words, live up to your motto—Avec deux mains.

Class of '94.

MARCH 10, 1895.

(From '93).

GOPHER EDITORS '96:

I sincerely regret that I am unable to comply with your request for a letter from the class of '93, of which I was a member. One soon loses sight of one's old classmates, and the sentimental interest supposed to cling about college days quickly evaporates. Fortunately, perhaps, we are all too busy for such things now. I am always glad to hear of the progress of the State University, however, and will do what I can to support its interests. Enclosed find two dollars for GOPHERS. I may be able to get some one to take one copy off my hands.

Hoping your book will be a success financially and otherwise, I remain,

EDITOR '96 ANNUAL, UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 7th received. Am sorry to say I have no information at hand concerning the class of '92 of the State University, so am unable to accommodate you. Enclosed find $1.00 for your annual. I hardly care for the book, but if it will be any benefit to you—as you imply—you may send it.

Yours, etc.,

History.

As Juniors.

To chronicle the history of that organization, which in the records of the College of Law will be called by the plain and modest name of the Class of '95, in a manner which would do justice to that memorable body of men and women, would be no idle task, and one which neither time nor space will allow. Some of the events in our history which have served to make our class one to be long remembered by the members of the class, and by the faculty, we will not here refer to ; events, which, though temporarily exciting, and of much moment to us as members of the class, delicacy and good taste forbid their record for the inspection of future classes. But aside from all these special incidents, our entrance, the two years sojourn in, and the final triumphant exit from, the now beloved institution, have been rich with events which will not soon be forgotten.

The first act which marked our class as remarkable in depth of intellect and surprising knowledge of Constitutional Law, was the unanimous adoption of a constitution which caused even the grave Seniors to regard us with marked respect. Indeed so profound in its conception was this document, that after striving in vain for a year to construe its provisions, we were forced to adopt a simpler code of rules, and since then, the wheels of government have revolved more smoothly.

As Juniors, we were specially noted for our dignity, and for our high estimation of our own importance, and perhaps, we were justified in our opinion, for we were told repeatedly by our instructors that in points of intellect, application to our work, and good looks, we eclipsed all former classes. (By the way, the Historian has accidently heard the same flattering opinion given out to the present Junior Class, and he wonders if this is not a part of the regular curriculum of the two year's course of instruction.)

As Juniors, we monopolized the offices of the Law Literary; dictated all elections of debaters with the other Literary Organizations of the University; in the election of a delegate to the Convention of Republican Clubs at Denver we strictly observed the rule of Tammany Hall, "Vote early and Often," and hence, it is unnecessary to say that our choice became the choice of the University.

In athletics, our class has been very prominent; J. E. O'Brien, the most successful foot-ball manager in the history of the institution; Fred Foote, the President of the Athletic Association; Southworth, the brilliant half-back and Spicer the unterrified, are all members of the class of '95, as are also Belden and Wallace, famous tennis players.

The political battles have been, as a rule, very tame, and the only issue has been the merits of the aspirants, but if ever any wire-pulling has been necessary, it has been done in a manner that would do credit to the shrewdest politicians in the State. It is perfectly safe to predict that many members of our class will achieve fame in the political arena, and that many of these will trace their political inspiration back to those exciting contests of their college days.

As Seniors.

In September, the old class appeared almost to a man, and in a very short time were deeply engrossed in their work. Time had in the meantime been changing the appearance and personal of the class. In vain several of us looked for Miss Austin; we know not what has been her fate, and careful inquiries have proven of no avail. Miss Munson, the bold champion of woman suffrage, has sought more responsible fields. Prescott, Smith, Morgan, Thorpe and Nielson, were all missing. Many new faces appeared upon the scene, who are now full fledged members of the class of '95.

During our Senior year, we have established several precedents, both in social and political affairs in the College of Law. We have proven to the satisfaction of ourselves, that our department is of equal importance with the academic, by haughtily refusing to accept lesser representation upon the commencement program than a fair proportion of speakers, and the mere fact that we were as haughtily refused, does not disprove the righteousness of our position. We then unanimously determined to introduce a new departure by having a commencement program of our own, and it is safe to assert that our day will not be the least brilliant of that eventful week. In social events, we have played a prominent part. Our class parties have been more than a success in every respect.

Space permits us not to make individual mention of each man's good qualities. Many will not make law their profession, others will become successful, prosperous lawyers, some will be shining lights in the political and judical history of the State.

The Senior year is rapidly drawing to a close; to the members of our class it means that our college life will soon be over, and we shall begin the real battle of life which heretofore has given us but little trouble. We shall meet with bitter disappointments and joyful triumps, but all will enter into the struggle with enthusiasm, and it ever the way seems dreary and beset with difficulties, the watchful care and words of cheer and encouragement of our beloved Dean, while under his care, will inspire us with renewed energy until success shall finally crown our efforts.

History.

Of old it was customary for the class historian to regard his class as a marvelous organization; composed of men and women towering head and shoulders above the ordinary mortal and members of previous classes in particular, in respect to beauty of countenance, grace of movement, stateliness of figure, and physical and mental abilities.

In this, he did not much differ from the philosophers and the wise and learned men of ancient times, who, from their habitations on the flat plane known as "mother earth," bounded on all sides by unpenetrable darkness out of the depths of which mighty monsters stretched forth their hands and seized whoever ventured to approach, gazed upon the vaulted heavens and beheld the stars and planets fixed therein, and the mighty sun make its daily course thereupon.

Our class cannot claim such marked degree of superiority, notwithstanding the fact, that in due season, and at the appropriate time, (many Seniors being present,) after careful thought and deep meditation, Dean Pattee, not in the spirit of flattery or empty praise, but seriously and conscientiously declared:

"This, in my judgment, is the best and brightest Junior Class I ever had under my care,

Brewster.—"Oh, ye Gods, what a head of hair!"

Coe.—" It well becomes a young man to be modest."

and by saying that I do not wish to speak disparagingly of my former classes ; " as our class was conscious of the fact that these words of commendation were unquestionably merited by the members of the class of '95, who moved by their magnanimous kindness and good will toward the Juniors, condescended for a season to suffer affliction with them in order that the class, as a class, might find favor in the sight of the Law Faculty.

The Juniors will always cherish in their hearts the memory of these self-sacrificing men even unto the third generation.

The class of '95 is made up of men from all parts of the state together with a few from our sister states. Its per cent. of college men is somewhat greater than that of previous classes, and the majority of the non-college men are graduates of the best academies and high schools of the state.

The political tendencies of the class are very marked, the Republicans leading with a strong majority. Though it is not generally known, it is true nevertheless, that members of this class held the balance of influence in the late senatorial contest. This augurs well for future fame. The power of oratory and persuading eloquence has been bounteously bestowed upon the Populist faction of '96. The " swell " and the " farmer " are unknown quantities in our organization. In athletics the class is strong. The University has entrusted to our class the leadership in the great contests on the gridiron for the recapturing of the lost championship standard.

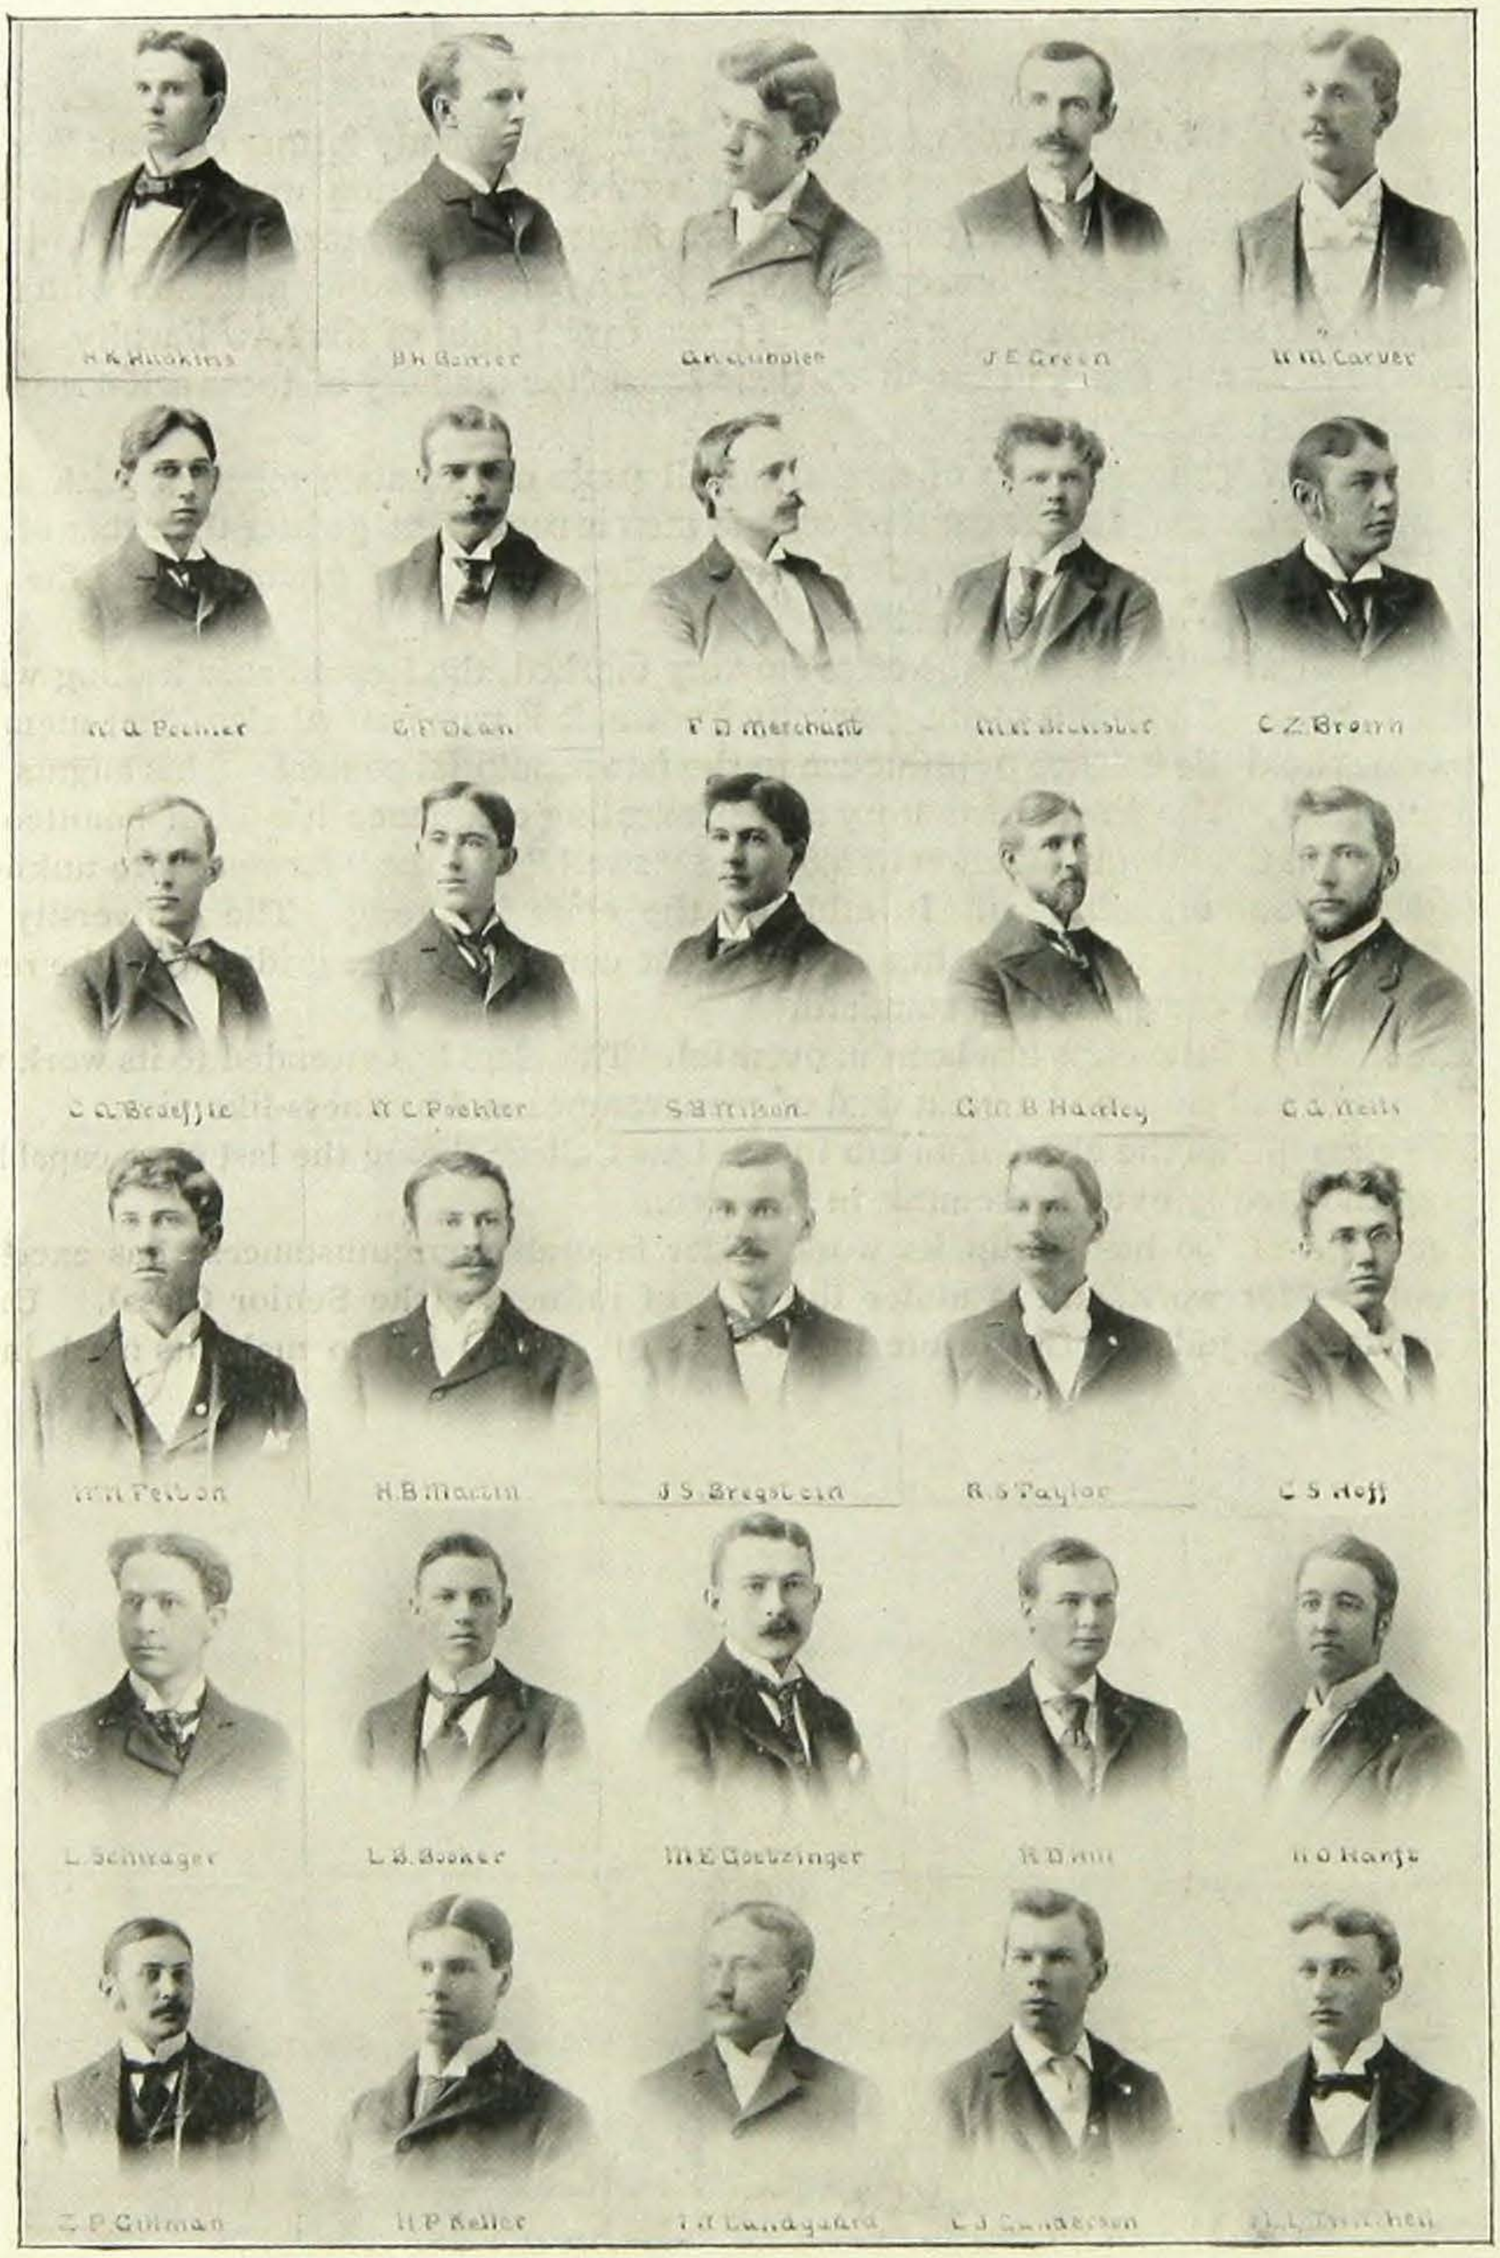

The history of the class has been uneventful. The class has attended to its work with due diligence and care, and a great deal of perseverance and business-like vim.

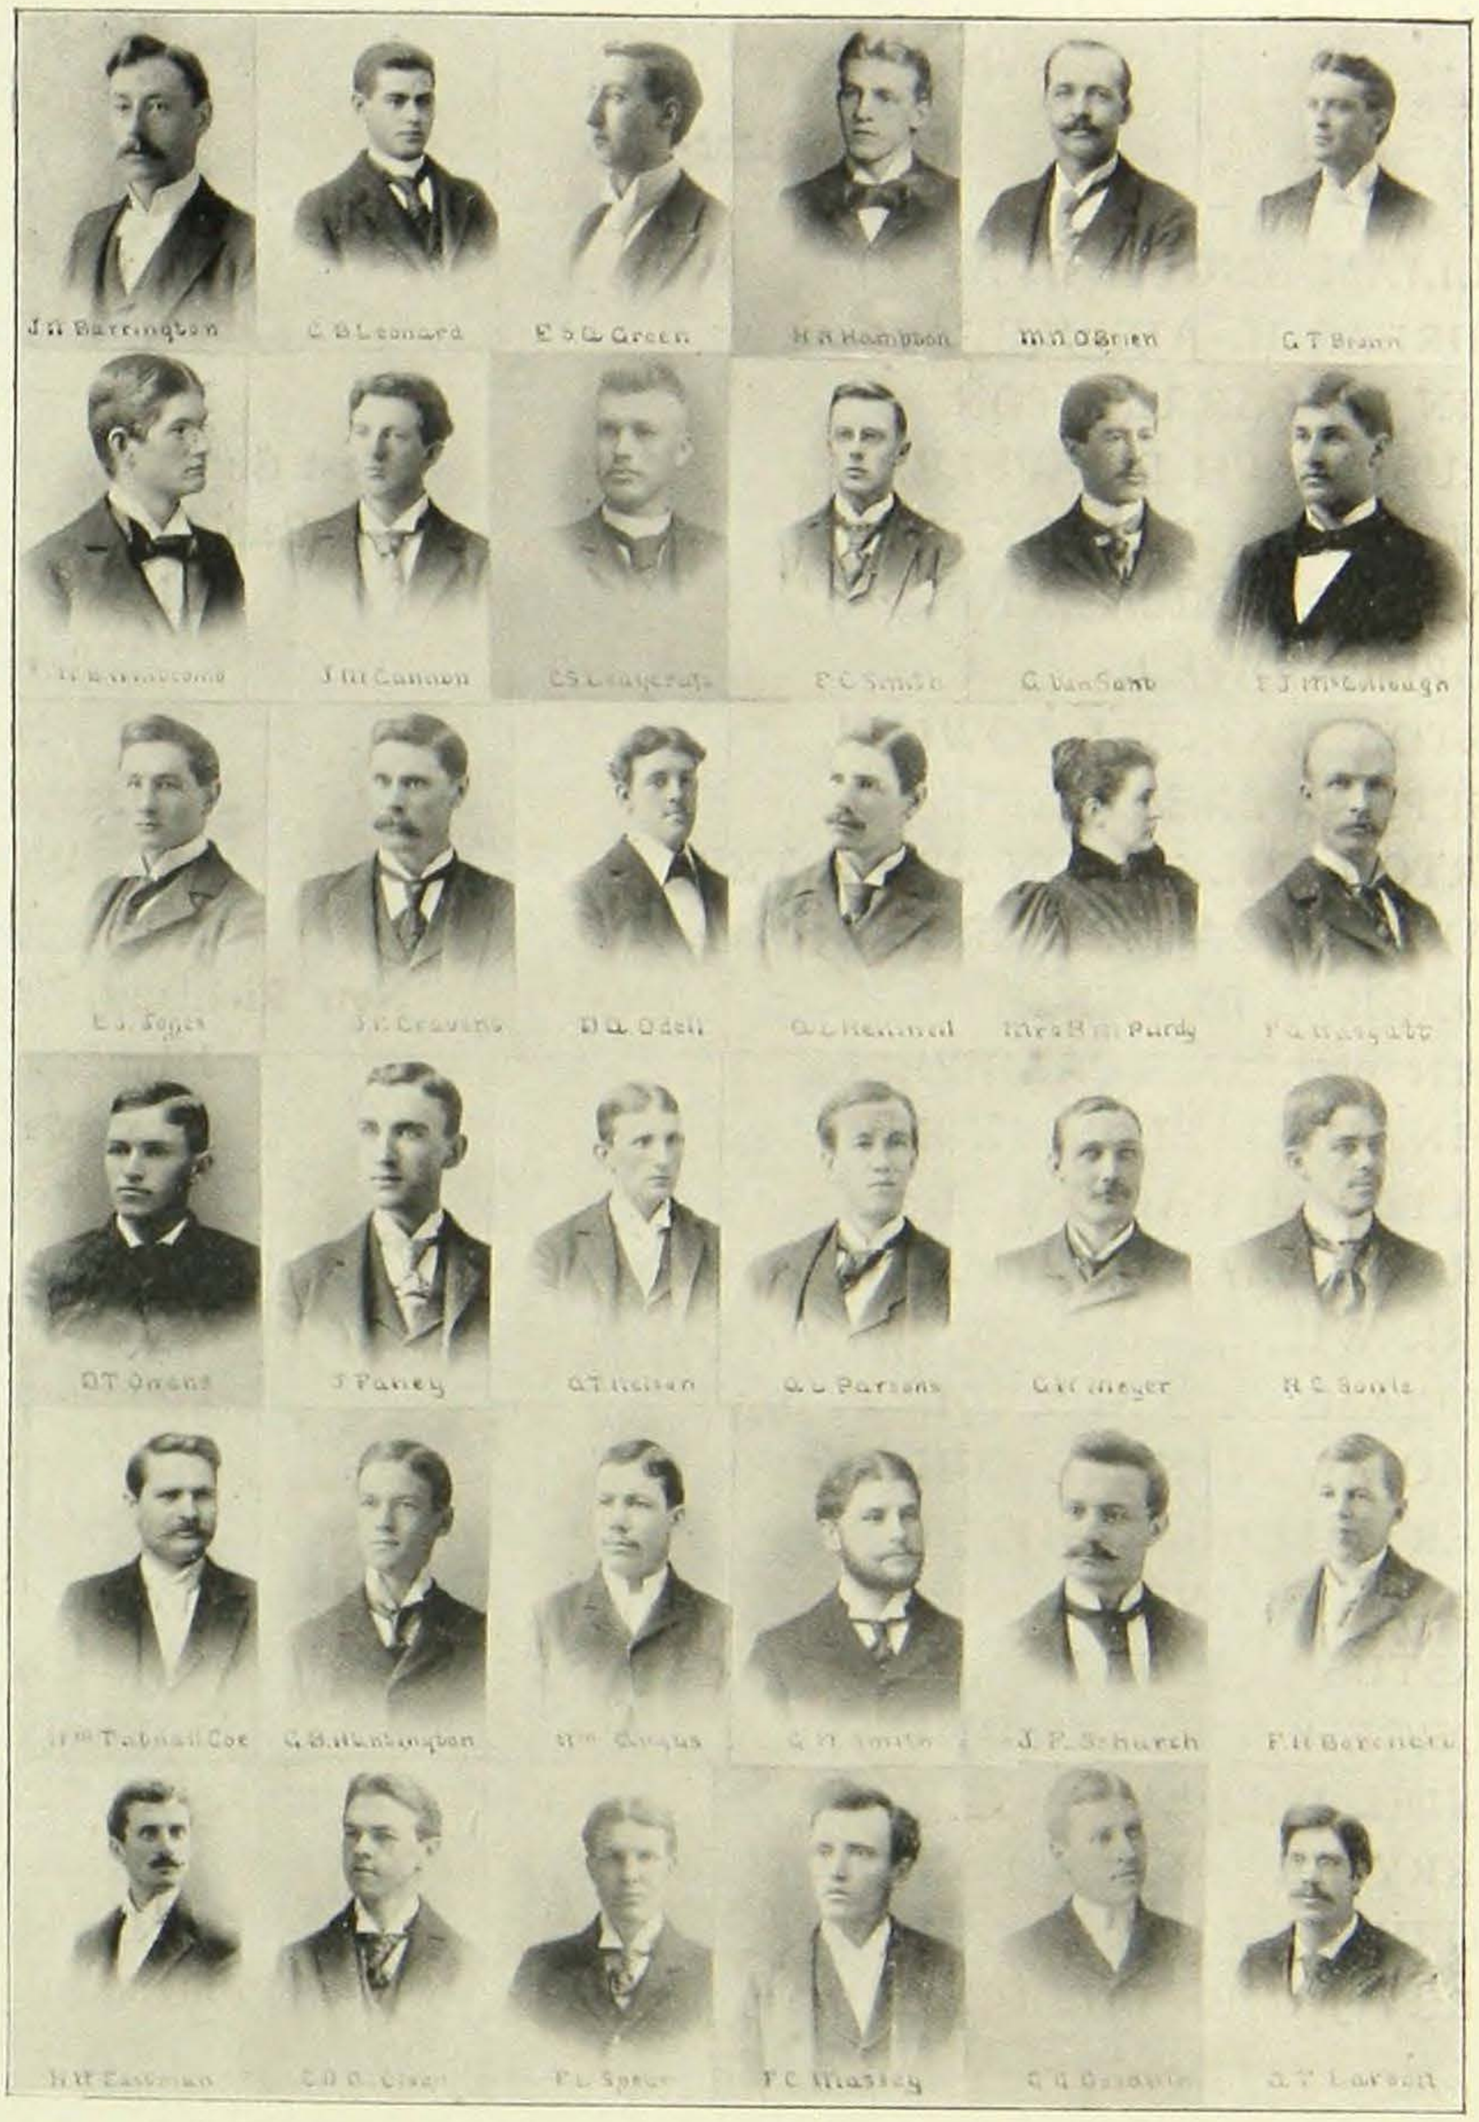

The class marks the close of an era in the Law College, being the last class capable of finishing the greatly extended course in two years.

The class of '96 has begun its work under favorable circumstances; has excellent opportunities for work, and is under the best of influence (the Senior Class). Under these conditions, judging the future by the past, it cannot fail to make its mark in the world.

Schurch—" Wisdom and knowledge, these with thee shall surely die."

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE

PROFESSOR THOMAS G. LEE.

Biography.

THOMAS G. LEE, Professor of Histology, Embryology and Bacteriology, was born in Jacksonville, N. Y., in 1860. After completing his preparatory education there, and in Rochester, N. Y., he entered the University of Pennsylvania and received the degree of M. D. in May, 1886, and that of B. S. in June, the same year. Shortly after graduating, he accepted the position of Lecturer on Histology and Embryology in Yale University, and assumed full charge of these laboratories. He spent a portion of the year 1887, in Germany, at the University of Würzburg, taking special work in Histology and Embryology in the laboratories of Professors A. Von Kölliker, Stöhr and Schulze. On his return to Yale, besides his usual work, he carried on a series of Bacteriological and Microscopical examinations of the various water supplies of Connecticut for the State Board of Health. During the year '91–'92, he was at Harvard, taking post-graduate work in Zoölogy, receiving the degree of B. S. there, in June, '92. During the Summer of '92, he was in the private laboratory of Professor Carl Von Küpffer in the University of Munich, and the following Fall assumed the duties of his present position. While at the University of Pennsylvania he became a member of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity.

Senior Class.

PRESIDENT, JOSEPH A. GATES.
SECRETARY, MILAN J. HART.
TREASURER, JOHN B. HOLST.

The first distinction achieved by the present Senior Class of the College of Medicine and Surgery is due to the fact, that its beginning at the University was contemporaneous with the completion and dedication of the new Medical Building, which for the past three years has graced the Campus. Whether the Medical Building was erected because it became noised abroad that such an imposing aggregation as the Class of '95 was to enter, or whether the imposing aggregation in question assembled because such a magnificent structure was ready to greet the new comers, we will leave for a more philosophical historian to decide. But the fact remains the same. The building was fittingly dedicated in October, 1892, by Dr. Usler of Johns Hopkins, the great authority on Practice, as an omen doubtless of what many of the Class of '95 are destined to become; and a few days later we began our search for medical lore.

Seldom are disciples of Aesculapius brought from more divergent points. Members of the Class filed in and registered from England, Scotland, Canada, the United States and Rochester. But when it came to the nationalities represented, we were not confined even to these places; Germans, Norwegians, Frenchmen, Swedes, Irish, Finlanders, Englishmen and Americans were all there—a conglomerate and heterogeneous mass, one might think, but under the humanizing and civilizing influences of the University and the city in which it is located, cosmos has come out of chaos, and all the various elements have blended into a symmetrical, harmonious whole.

After a few preliminary meetings, the Class effected a permanent organization by electing "Doctor" Head president. Perhaps the "Doctor's" name naturally suggested that he should be made the chief magistrate, or perhaps, and more probably, his deep sonorous voice and reverberating tones gave the impression that great genius, which must not go unrecognized was their inspiration and foundation. At any rate, his hand at the helm guided the '95 Medical ship through its Freshman voyage, and the fact that the ship anchored safely at the end of the year was due either to his great skill in navigation, or to the fact that no storms were encountered.

The work of that year was no pastime. Visions of it even now rise before me like grim spectres. Dr. Hendricks lectured on anatomy, and gave oral quizzes. Some thought they were well up in the subject until the lecturer transfixed them with a question. Their knowledge fled on the wings of the wind, and the lately confident Freshman was a trembling, pale-faced pitiable object, utterly unable even to state whether or not he possessed an anatomy, or if by chance he knew so much he was at least convinced that backbone formed no part of it. Then there was Dr. Lee's examination in histology, which was apparently intended to cover everything known to the medical profession on that subject. It gave the class such a nervous shock that it was reported that it was only revived by liberal injections of a stimulant in the form of "Kline," which many are understood to have had with them in their "medicine cases."

JUNIOR year opened with the class ranks somewhat thinned. Some members had gone to Chicago to study, and others were needed at home. Notable among the absentees was incomprehensible, indescribable Leib, who never could understand why his transcendent abilities were not appreciated, and who expected the class to go to the "demnition bow-wows" when he deserted it. He crossed the river—the Mississippi—and started in at the P. and S.

The class organization was headed this year by Danner, who was elected president. He was elevated to this honorable office by the valiant efforts of himself and his friends, and during his incumbency introduced many unique reforms. Parliamentary law was relegated to the rear, probably on the theory that Medics should have nothing to do with Laws, and disorder and confusion held sway in class meetings.

Knowing by experience how dear to the Freshman's heart a little darkness is—especially when a lovely maiden friend is not too far distant, we planned a pleasant little surprise for their class a few months after the opening of the year. They were giving a reception to their fair friends in the medical building, and the twinkling Freshmen's feet were just becoming accustomed to the intricate ways of the dance, when darkness settled upon the assembly like a pall. The only trouble was that the Freshmen were trying to burn air instead of gas. In the recess of the dental room in the basement a bellows had been connected with the gas pipes, and fresh air pumped in for purposes of ventilation. When they finally realized that fresh air would not burn, that there were not in its chemical composition the necessary combustible qualities, they took their young friends on their arms and quietly wended their several ways homeward.

The last half of our Junior year was mainly spent in delving into the mysteries of "Frogology," under the teaching of Dr. Beard. Frogs of all sizes and shapes, and without regard to race, color, or previous condition, were brought into the amphi-theatres. There they were intoxicated with electricity, and their nervous system, reflexus, muscular actions, and all else pertaining to them were so thoroughly investigated that at the end of the year each diligent member of the class was a competent specialist on frogs' diseases.

THIS, our SENIOR year, opened with a memorable and spirited contest between the "Frat." and "Barb." members as to which faction should control the class offices. "Deacon" Walters was the "Frat." candidate for president, and his campaign was managed by the learned "Doctor," who figured somewhat in our Freshman history. Gates, the opposing candidate, was backed by the solid phalanxes of the "Joe Gates Gang," and by other "Barbs." This combination was irresistible, and its candidate won in a walk. Strange to say, some moss-covered individual did not immediately "move to reconsider," as has been the custom this year with every measure passed, and Gates is still president. He has made a stern and righteous presiding officer, and has developed a smoothness of political method which marks him a worthy disciple of David B. Hill. If he manipulates medicine with the same skill he does politics, he will some day be able to buy a seat in the U. S. Senate with the proceeds of his practice.

After election we settled down to a year's work on Pathology, interspersed here and there with lectures on a few minor subjects. Semi-weekly written quizzes have rendered us all worthy subjects of pathological investigation. The ordeal has been one compared with which the far-famed "sweating system" must be a paradise. The monotony of this was, however, somewhat relieved. Dr. Stone invited the class to his office, in St. Paul, one evening during the Winter, investigated a little as to what the members knew about his lectures, and then induced them to investigate an elaborate luncheon, which was not all dry.

It is but natural and proper that many serious problems should come before the class in the final year for study and solution. Among these we can mention but one. It has puzzled many of the best minds, but with the aid of the Dean it is believed a satisfactory solution will soon be reached. The problem is this: "What Would be the Reciprocal Effects of a vulminating Body Like a Wagon Wheel on a Dysersic Condition?"

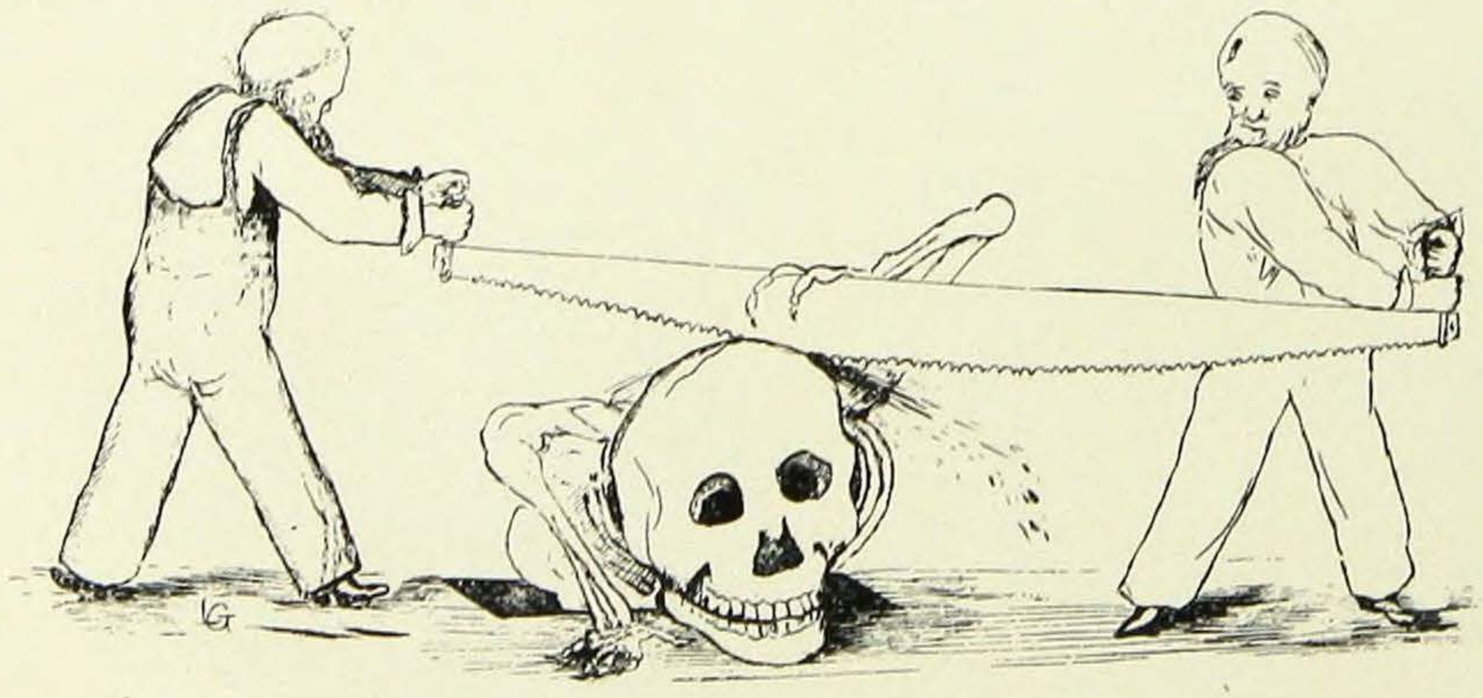

Our class has been particularly fortunate in having among its members six young ladies. It is impossible perhaps to adequately estimate the refining influence their presence has wrought upon the members-at-large. They have uniformly stood high in scholarship, and so, by introducing the element of competition, have doubtless elevated the standard of the class. Much of the work of the course, many of the lectures, and many of the illustrations thereof have been given an added interest by their presence. May success always light their pathway.

The progressive spirit of our class has been shown by a long-needed reform being brought about by its influence. During past years University Commencement Exercises have been very successful, but something has seemed to be needed to bring them to the stage of perfection. This year, however, the Medical Department is to be represented on the program by an oration delivered by one of our number, and the impression is general that nothing is now lacking to make the day and event all that could be desired.

It certainly cannot be improper in this place to seriously express our deep feelings of obligation to all the lecturers who have labored so diligently with us during our course, oft-times at great personal inconvenience and sacrifice. We feel that they have placed it in our power to learn much, and to well equip ourselves for our life work. By precept and example they have urged us to diligence, they have held up before us the reward of honest effort. If we have not made the most of our advantages the responsibility is elsewhere than with them.

The time has about come when the members of the Class must go their different ways. In three years of intimate association strong ties are necessarily formed, but though paths diverge, these ties need not be broken. Some strife in the past there may have been, but in the light or the darkness of the future, that is forgotten. The world is sick and we go out to do what we can, toward the healing and the binding up of the wounds. Whatever of success may be to all, all will rejoice in, and each will wish the other his full measure.

Junior Class.

|---|---|
| PRESIDENT, | WILLIAM ERNEST McLAUGHLIN. |
| SECRETARY, | HARVEY PARKS RITCHIE, |
| TREASURER, | JAMES FLOURNOY BECK. |

We entered college as modest and unassuming a lot of men as ever aspires to the honorable title of "Doc." We had no bad habits and most of us had certificates of good behavior (in daylight) from those with whom we had formerly been honorably associated. We loved and admired our Professors, and as they were in some cases, older than we, it was only natural that we should imitate them. Whatever bad habits we have acquired are the direct results of such imitation. While the historian is aware that a daily chronicle of the deeds of the illustrious Class of '96 would be of as much value to succeeding generations as are the chronicles of the ancient inhabitants of Britian to our contemporaries in the Academic Department, yet he will state here that inborn love for precedent forces him to follow the example of the ancient chroniclers, whose descendent he may well claim to be, and for that reason this will not be a voluminous record, but let no one think on this account that space has been denied us, or that our path has not been strewn with Herculean tasks (which we have easily accomplished.)* We entered our Alma Mater and were informed by the Faculty that we were conditioned in English Conversation and Latin Prose. They however assured us that a few lessons in each subject from their honorable body would obviate this difficulty. We took a short course called, "Complete Mastery of Latin in Six Hours," and if in a future and warmer clime, it should be our good fortune to meet Julius Cæsar or any other kindly Roman gentleman who, in his day, was accustomed to operate on the human body we should be quite equal to the task of inviting him to 'set 'em up.' We also think we could do the same thing in fluent English—but the reader might think us conceited.

*Let anyone who doubts this, attempt to boil down 700 pages of subject matter into a one by twelve inch Yale Roll and his doubts will be removed.

It would not be fair to state here how the professors had to hustle to keep ahead of us in their lectures, how they had to purchase new editions of their standard text-books and asking confusing questions in the vain hope of flunking some of us.

As a matter of fact, their labors have been much lightened since we entered college, our reasoning powers being so great that a mere outline of any subject is all that we require. Those of the gentle sex among us are worthy of all honor and respect. We have inside information to the fact that what they do not get in this world, they will in the next. We used to be very fond of Tootsie, but as she has affliated with the weaklings who came after our illustrious body, we repudiate her. We have not yet decided whether we ought to drop Mr. Phelps. It goes against our vanity to acknowledge that he prefers Tootsie to us, but such seems to be the sad fact.

We had hardly matriculated when about half our members were appointed assistants in some one of the departments. The other half have been hot ever since, but we are consoled with the thought that although the professors have not taken us into their hearts, surrounded us with their vascular mechanism, so to speak, we still know a few houses where we can walk in without wiping our feet.

It would not be just to pass over the social side of our career. When it comes right down to a contest for the cake we are inclined to the belief that it was a fortunate thing for Mr. Ward McAllister's peace of mind that he passed away just when he did. When we think of what his feelings would have been after reading an account of our last ball, under the management of Mr. P. Brown, we cannot help but feel happy that he was spared the bitter pangs of jealousy he certainly would have experienced. He always did the best he could and, now that he is dead, we would be the last to depreciate his merits, but we cannot help but feel that if the task of turning our dissecting room into a "Saele á danser" had been given to him he would have been stumped and thrown up the sponge or anything else he might have had on his stomach at that time.

We have always been a harmonious body. When we entered college we discussed the question of cheating in examinations, and we, each one of us, including the ladies, got up and said we would be men and not cheat. What a beautiful example of a harmonious class! What unison! What a pleasure it must have been to our professors to know that one class, at least, could be trusted. Thus, early in our careers, we showed much character and perseverance,which, coupled with a few other things we are on to, will surely pull us through. We have already deeply considered the subject of what we shall do when we graduate. We have formed a "Whisker Club," but have not yet decided whether we shall go to North Dakota and buy out a man who offers his practice, house, barn, horse and carriage, together with an entree into the best society for a quiz-compend on practice, or keep the compend and stay out of society. Important questions, such as this, should not be decided upon without due consideration. Whatever happens our success is assured. We shall be "in at the death," as it were, and so we send out the glad tidings that we shall soon be with you, and for the present, adieu.

HERBERT ARTHUR PARKYN, B. A., M. D., Univ. of Toronto, Toronto, Can.

Lecture on Hygiene.

SCENE :—Lower Amphitheatre. Class Assembled. Enter lecturer amid loud applause at his unexpected appearance.

Dr.———(sarcastically) "I hope you will feel as happy after our examination."

At which remark the class foolishly shuts up.

Dr.———"We have for our consideration to-day the subject of Quarantine. Quarantine, from the Italian meaning forty, remotely connected with the forty thieves and our modern practice of buying Mint-Juleps—three for forty cents. Thus is the educated mind enabled to trace word derivation which, pursued with our modern antiseptic weapons, seldom suppurates, which reminds me that the subject of ventilation is a very important one. Air is a complex food. We take in oxygen and give out carbon dioxide in the shape of words, which may be or may not be, as Bill Shakespeare has it, or was it Jules Verne? Professional life narrows a man—poor air narrows a man's chest and thus the great parallel truths of science come down through the ages and we will represent them by two lines thus: ═

One of the best examples of modern ventilation is the bar room of the Windsor Hotel in St. Paul, where the door is opened so often that a current of pure air is constantly passing through and where glasses are so quickly emptied that their contents, commonly known as Bug or Bacilli Juice, are prevented from adding their contamination to the atmosphere.

We have endemic diseases where a man makes you sick; epidemic where he makes you sick every time you see him; and pandemic diseases where he makes you sick all over. Thus, by the means of modern, scientific nomenclature we are able to express a great deal without saying much, while in years past it was customary to say much without conveying many tangible ideas.

I will now take up the subject of the use and abuse of alcohol. You remember the scriptural injunction, "Look not upon the water when it is full of bugs," and I assure you that all water is full of bugs. The great question of the saloon is to make the other fellow set 'em up. Stick closely to this advice, never drink on yourself and you will never fill a drunkard's grave. That is all for to-day gentlemen. The next time we meet I shall be detained elsewhere.

"HAVE you any friends you desire to dissect?" asked Dr. Hendricks, quite oblivious of the fact that by a mere slip of the tongue he had struck a chord in our hearts, which, though unheard, has never ceased to vibrate. If we may be allowed to take advantage of your mistake, Doctor, allow us to suggest a few names which we are sure will give more satisfaction to the class than the best lot of mangled remains ever donated by that fiend of investigation, the Hospital Interne. We don't wish to show any partiality in this selection, and we hope that no one's feeling will be hurt because his name is not on the list.

Now to begin with, there is the Freshman Class, which feeds on bread and bananas, and daily deposits its butter and banana skins upon the floor of the Amphitheatre. While we are charitable and realize the fact that they have been brought up in the region of universal swill buckets, yet we cannot prevent a peripheral delitation at the thought of searching in their inter-crainal regions for structures which God has denied them. Next in order we would suggest Tootsie, who, of late, has been much more attentive to some other fellow than to us. Thirdly we have the prestidigitator who for the past two years has caused us so much amusement by abstracting car fare from our overcoat pockets in his inimitable style and who has such a mental grasp that he can absorb a book on sight (his sight, not that of the man who owns the book). Fourthly we would like the man who is ass enough to think he knows more than we do. He would be an interesting specimen for the study of nerve. The fellow that hit us with an overshoe about two months ago we especially ask be retained for our own private use, and lastly, Doctor, we are all of us anxious to investigate the peculiarities in the anatomical construction of Mr. Meighen which cause him to decend the steps of the Amphitheatre in such an odd manner. We sincerely hope that the Anatomical Department may, in these few suggestions, find some solution of the question of supply and demand.

For the education of expert agricultural scientists, the College of Agriculture offers a four-years course. In the first two years of this course, each student is required to pursue two of the four sciences, botany, chemistry, physics and zoölogy, four terms each, and the other two, two terms each. In the last two years of the course each student is expected to continuously pursue one of his two major sciences in some of its forms, and to elect such other kindred lines as will give greatest practical results. In following out this plan the graduate from the agricultural course in the University of Minnesota becomes a scientific expert ready for some line of professional work in agricultural science.

For the training of practical farmers who wish to make farming both pleasant and profitable by the application to it of scientific knowledge and business methods, the School of Agriculture offers a three years' course of six months each. The sciences of agricultural chemistry, bookkeeping, botany, entomology, physics, physiology and zoölogy, are studied in a thoroughly practical way; improved methods in agriculture, animal industry, dairy husbandry and horticulture, are illustrated; and practical work is done in blacksmithing, butter and cheese making, carpentry and dressing and curing meats. Practical work characterizes the School of Agriculture in all its developments.

The third branch of the Agricultural Department, the Experiment Station, has for its function the solution of the many and complex scientific problems involved in the various lines of agricultural work and the dissemination of this information among the farmers in bulletins, which are published quarterly or oftener, and sent through the mails free of postage. Some of the subjects treated in the bulletins of the Minnesota Experiment Station are Rocky Mountain Locusts, Potato Scab, Treatment of Smut, Composition of Native and Cultivated Soils, Winter Butter Production, etc. Other problems awaiting solution are Chinch Bugs, Rust, Russian Thistle, etc. The successful solution of such problems as locusts, rust and potato scab, gives reason to hope that continued systematic research and experimentation will cope successfully with many, if not all, of the various and constantly changing pests which baffle the efforts of the individual farmer.

SECTION 1. The duties of the President of this Association shall be to call and preside at all meetings of this Association.

SEC. 2. The duties of the Vice-President of this Association shall be, (a) to perform the duties of the President in the absence of the latter; (b) to act as custodian of all the property of this Association.

SEC. 3. The duties of the Secretary of this Association shall be to keep a record of all meetings of this Association and a roll of its members.

SEC. 4. The duties of the Treasurer of this Association shall be, (a) to care for all moneys of this Association; (b) to pay out to any manager no greater amount of money than he has received from such manager during such manager's term of office, except by the written order of the Advisory Board of Athletic Control, hereinafter provided for; (c) to collect the membership dues of this Association; (d) to make a report of the finances of this Association at the order of and to the Advisory Board of Athletic Control, and to the Association on his retirement.

SEC. 5. (a) The duties of the department officers of this Association shall be to arrange all matters pertaining to their respective departments, except as otherwise hereinafter provided; (b) each manager shall have power to appoint an assistant manager, who shall aid him in the performance of his duties; (c) each manager shall pay over to the Treasurer of this Association all moneys of the Association received by him as soon as possible after receipt thereof.

ARTICLE VI.

SECTION 1. There shall be an Advisory Board of Athletic Control consisting of the President, Vice-President and Secretary of this Association and two members of the faculty, to be chosen by that body.

SEC. 2. The President of this Association shall act as Chairman of this board, and call the meetings thereof.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of this Association shall act as Secretary of this board and perform such duties in this capacity as usually pertain to the office.

ARTICLE VII.

SECTION 1. The duties of the Advisory Board of Athletic Control shall be the general supervision and control of the athletic interests of this institution.

SEC. 2. They shall authorize all expenditures of the moneys of this Association, except as is heretofore or hereinafter provided.

SEC. 3. They shall audit the accounts of the Treasurer and Department Officers of his Association at least every three months, and oftener, if they deem it necessary.

SEC. 4. They shall make a report to the Association at its annual meeting hereinafter provided for.

ARTICLE VII.

There shall be an annual meeting of this Association the last Saturday in January.

ARTICLE IX.

SECTION 1. This Constitution may be amended at any meeting of this association by a two-thirds vote, provided notice be given of the amendment in the official organ of this Association one week prior thereto.

SEC. 2. All questions involving parliamentary forms not provided for by this Constitution shall be referred to "Robert's Rules of Order."

By-Laws.

SECTION 1. The President shall give notice of special meetings of this Association, and the purpose thereof, in the official organ of this Association at least three (3) days prior to the date of the meeting.

SEC. 2. The President shall call a special meeting of this Association at his option or at the request (written) of the Advisory Board of Athletic Control.

SEC. 3. One-fourth (¼) of the members of this Association shall constitute a quorum.

SEC. 4. The membership fee of this Association must be paid in advance.

SEC. 5. The ARIEL shall be the official organ of this Association.

SEC. 6 The Advisory Board of Athletic Control as soon as elected and chosen shall take steps toward and effect as soon as possible the incorporation of this Association.

SEC. 7. This Association shall assume all assets and liabilities of athletic associations previously existing in the University.

SEC. 8. The President of this Association shall serve personal notice of all meetings of the Advisory Board of Athletic Control.

SEC. 9. The President shall call a meeting of the Advisory Board of Athletic Control at the request of any manager of this Association.

SEC. 10. The Advisory Board of Athletic Control shall make their own rules and regulations except as otherwise provided in the Constitution and By-Laws of this Asoiation.

SEC. 11. The managers of this Association shall consult the Advisory Board of Athletic Control in all matters involving over $150.00 expenditure.

Constitution.

Article I—Name, Composition and Purpose.

Section 1. The name of this federation shall be "The Federated Literary Societies of the University of Minnesota."

Sec. 2. The literary societies forming this federation are: The Delta Sigma, University Congress, Shakopean, Forum and Law Literary.

Sec. 3. The purpose of this organization shall be the promotion of general literary and oratorical work in the University of Minnesota.

Article II—Government.

Section 1. The government of this federation shall be vested in a Federal Council.

Sec. 2. The Federal Council shall be composed of two delegates from each society and the five officers of the Federated Literary Societie selected at large. A majority of the members of the Federal Council shall constitute a quorum. The Federal Council shall be judge of the election and qualification of its own members.

Sec. 3. The Council shall have power (1) to have charge of all matters relative to inter-collegiate debates in which the University of Minnesota may be engaged, (2) to decide upon appeal all matters of disagreement between the societies, and (3) to levy such assessments as shall be necessary, by a two-thirds vote of those present.

Sec. 4. The members of the Council shall be elected on the evening of the last Tuesday but two of the spring term of every year and shall hold office for one year.

Sec. 5. This constitution shall go into effect when ratified by any three of the literary societies heretofore mentioned, and shall be binding upon the societies so ratifying. Other societies may be admitted to this federation by a majority vote of the Federal Council.

Sec. 6. As soon as this constitution shall have been ratified by a sufficient number, the delegates from the societies so ratifying shall meet and make arrangements for the election of the five officers at large. The delegates to the first Federal Council shall hold office until the last Tuesday but two of the spring term of 1895.

Article III.—Miscellaneous.

Section 1. All members of the literary societies composing this federation shall be de facto members of the Federated Literary Socieiies.

Sec. 2. The Council shall make all rules necessary for the transaction of its business not inconsistent with the provisions of this constitution.

Sec. 3. The Council may propose to the societies amendments to this constitution, which amendments shall have full force and effect when ratified by a majority of the societies.

Sec. 4. The officers of the Federated Literary Societies shall be as follows: President, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and auditor, who shall be the corresponding officers of the Federal Council. The Federal Council shall provide by rule for the duties of the officers.

The music was played by Miss Elizabeth Cushman, piano; Mr. Heinrich Hoevel, violin; Dr. Clarence Strachauer, 'cello.

On Friday afternoon, preceding each concert, Mr. Harlow Gale has given a series of lectures on the Psychology of Music. These lectures have consisted partly of historical and biographical notes pertaining to music and composers, a demonstration of the anatomy and physiology of hearing, an outline of the psychology of music, and finally some experimental and statistical work in rhythm, melody and harmony.

Mr. Harlow Stearns Gale, is a native of the city of Minneapolis, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harlow A. Gale, still reside. Mr. Gale graduated at the High School in the class of '80, of which Mrs. Gale and Mr. Oscar Firkins, of the English department, were also members. Mr. Gale entered Yale in the fall of '81, and was graduated with degree of A. B. in '85. The two following years were spent at the University of Minnesota, pursuing post-graduate work in Economics under Dr. Folwell, while he studied Ethics by himself. Mr. Gale then spent two years in Philosophy at Yale, one year at Cambridge under Professor Sidgwick in Logic and Ethics, four years in Leipsic spent under Wundt, with the exception of one semester at the University of Minnesota. In the fall of '94 accepted the position of instructor in Psychology in Berlin. Mr. Gale married Miss Mary E. Corser, a graduate of Cornell, who in the earlier part of her course attended the University. They have one daughter.

Great credit is due Mr. Gale for introducing the chamber music concerts, which have occurred every third Saturday evening during the winter in the Law building. Mr. Gale is himself an accomplished 'cello player.

He is a member of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity and the Society of Psychical Research.

Mr. Frederick J. E. Woodbridge was born in Windsor, Ontario, the twenty-sixth of March, 1867. The family later removed to Kalamazoo, Michigan, where they still reside. Mr. Woodbridge graduated from the Kalamazoo High School, entered Amherst, and was graduated in the class of '89 with the degree of A. B. Among other prominent positions which he held while in college, were Editor-in-Chief of Amherst Olio and Member of the Senate. The three years immediately following his graduation were spent at the Union Theological Seminary in New York City. At the same time he also acted as lay-reader at the Church of the Ascension, of which Dr. Donald, who succeeded Phillips Brooks at Trinity Church, Boston, was then rector. In the summer his duties in connection with the Fresh Air Fund led him among the tenement houses. The next two years Mr. Woodbridge spent in Germany as a fellow of the Seminary Makunga, specialty of the History of Philosophy, under Zeller, Paulsen, Ebbinghaus, Haniack and Pbleiderer.

Mr. Woodbridge, on the opening of the University last fall, assumed charge of the Department of Ethics and Philosophy, left vacant by the absence of Prof. Hough, in Europe. Last November Mr. Woodbridge attracted considerable attention and favorable comment by his paper, "The Theory of Evolution as Affected by the Argument from Design," delivered before the Congress of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Boston.

Mr. Woodbridge is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity and of the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

CHARLES LUKE WELLS was born in Boston, Mass., June 23, 1858. He prepared for College at the famous Boston Latin School, and entered Harvard in 1875, graduating with degree of B. A. in 1879.

Mr. Wells then took a course in the Cambridge Episcopal Theological School, graduating in 1882 with degree of D. B. He was ordained Deacon in the same year and Priest in 1883.

The next six years of his life were spent in the two Parishes of Hingham, Mass., '82–'84, and Gardiner, Maine, '84–88. In 1886, Mr. Wells married Miss Mary L. Goddard, of Nashua, N. H.

Mr. Wells was elected Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the Seabury Divinity School at Faribault, Minn., in 1888, and continued until 1892, part of the time as acting Warden.

In the Summer of 1892, he obtained the degree Ph.D. from Harvard. In 1893–4, he studied abroad in Public Record Office and British Museum. Accepting the offer of a position of Assistant Professor of History at the University of Minnesota, he entered on his new duties at the beginning of the year.

He is a member of the Signet Society at Harvard, of the American Historical Association and of the American Society of Church History.

HENRY TURNER EDDY, A.M., C.E., PH.D., L.L.D., was born June 9, 1844, in Stoughton, Mass., where his father, Rev. Henry Eddy, was Pastor of the Congregational Church.

The years of his boyhood and youth were spent at North Bridgewater, (now Brockton), Mass., where he fitted for Yale College which he entered in 1863. He graduated with degree of B. A. in 1867, having won Φ B K and first honors in mathematics by taking first prize in mathematics each year and the Senior Mathematical Medal.

Entering the Sheffield Scientific School, he obtained the degree of Ph.D. in 1868. He then went to Cornell University where he was Assistant Professor of Mathematics and Civil Engineering in 1869–73. While there he received the degrees of C.E. and Ph.D. being the first receiving these degrees from that Institution. He was also elected a member of the Honorary Fraternity Σ Ξ.

In 1873–4, he was Associate Professor of Mathematics at Princeton College. Later in the same year he was the first member elected of the Faculty at the University of Cincinnati, where he held the Chairs of Mathematics, Civil Engineering and Astronomy for sixteen years; at the latter place he was Dean of the Academic Faculty in 1874–77 and 1884–90.

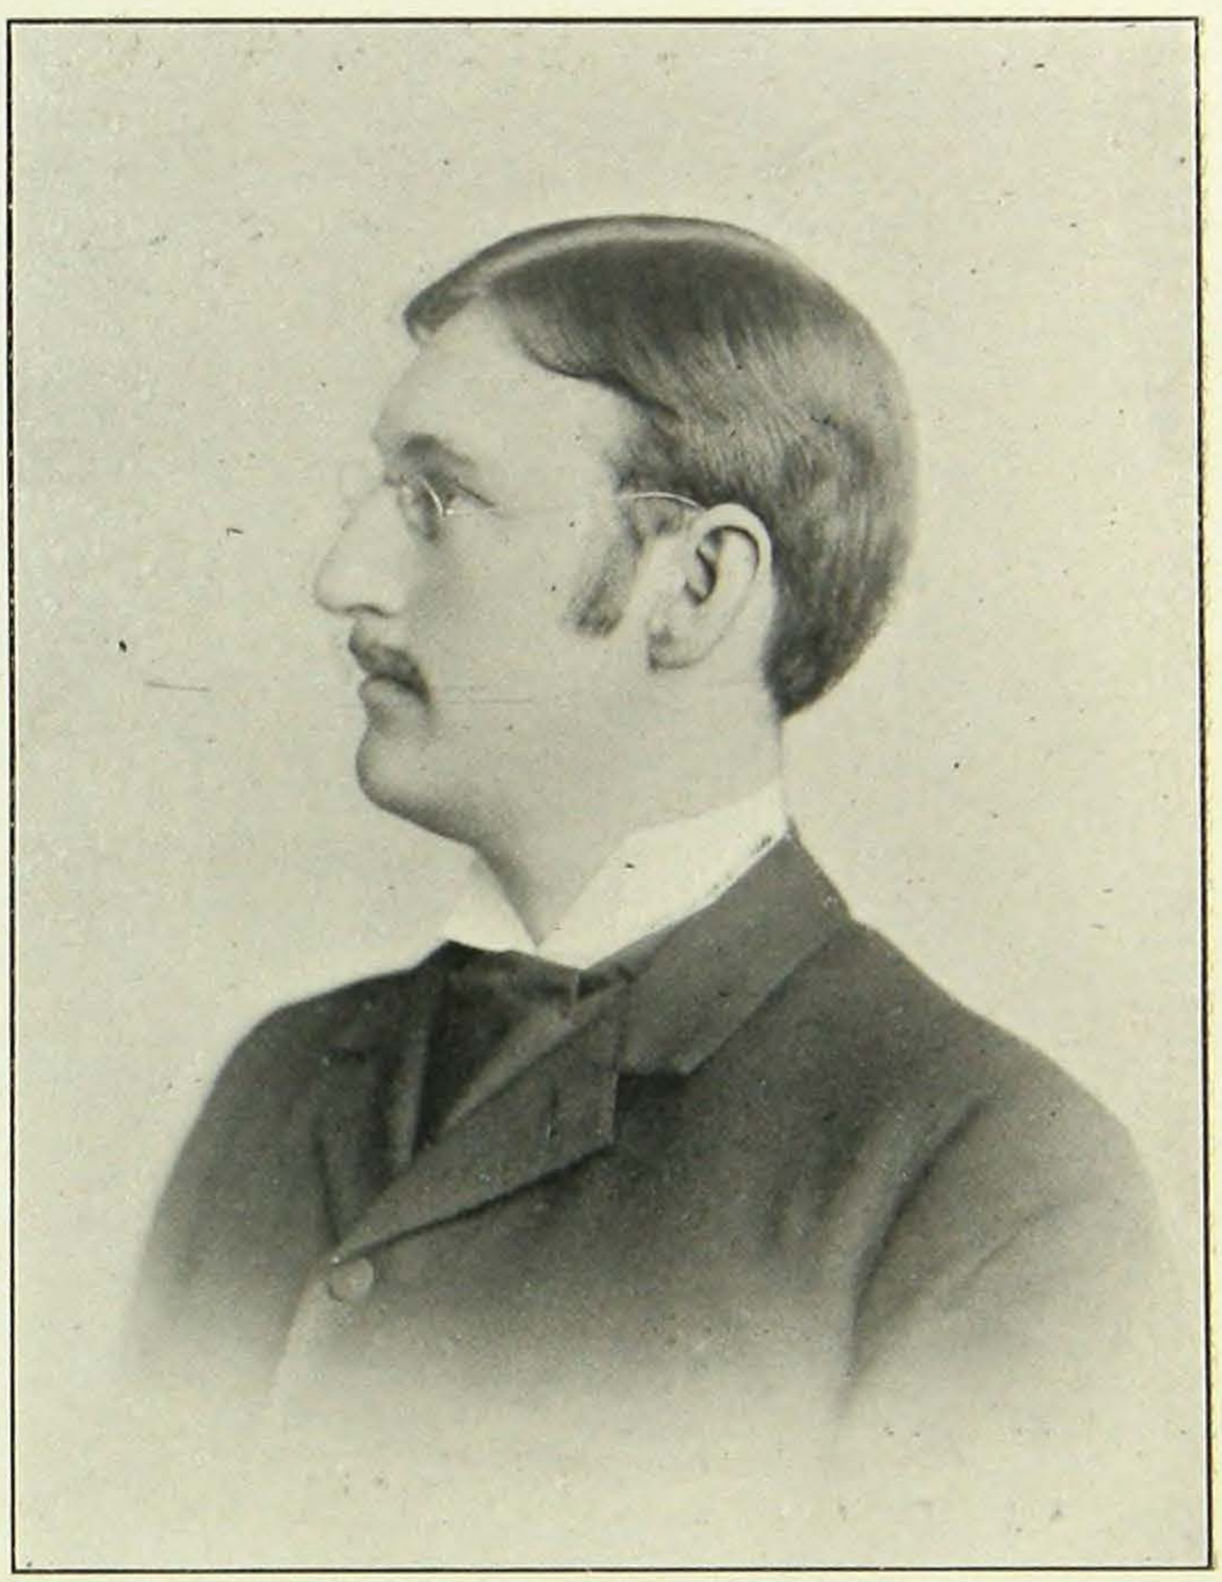

The years 1879 to 1880, Dr. Eddy spent in study abroad, studying at Berlin under Kirchhof and Helmholtz at the Physicalische Institute. For a while he studied in Paris at the Sorbonne.

He is a member of the American Philosophical Society, and of the American Mathmetical Society.

He became President of the Rose Polytechnic Institute in January, 1891, and was elected to the Chair of Mechanics and Engineering at the University of Minnesota in 1894.

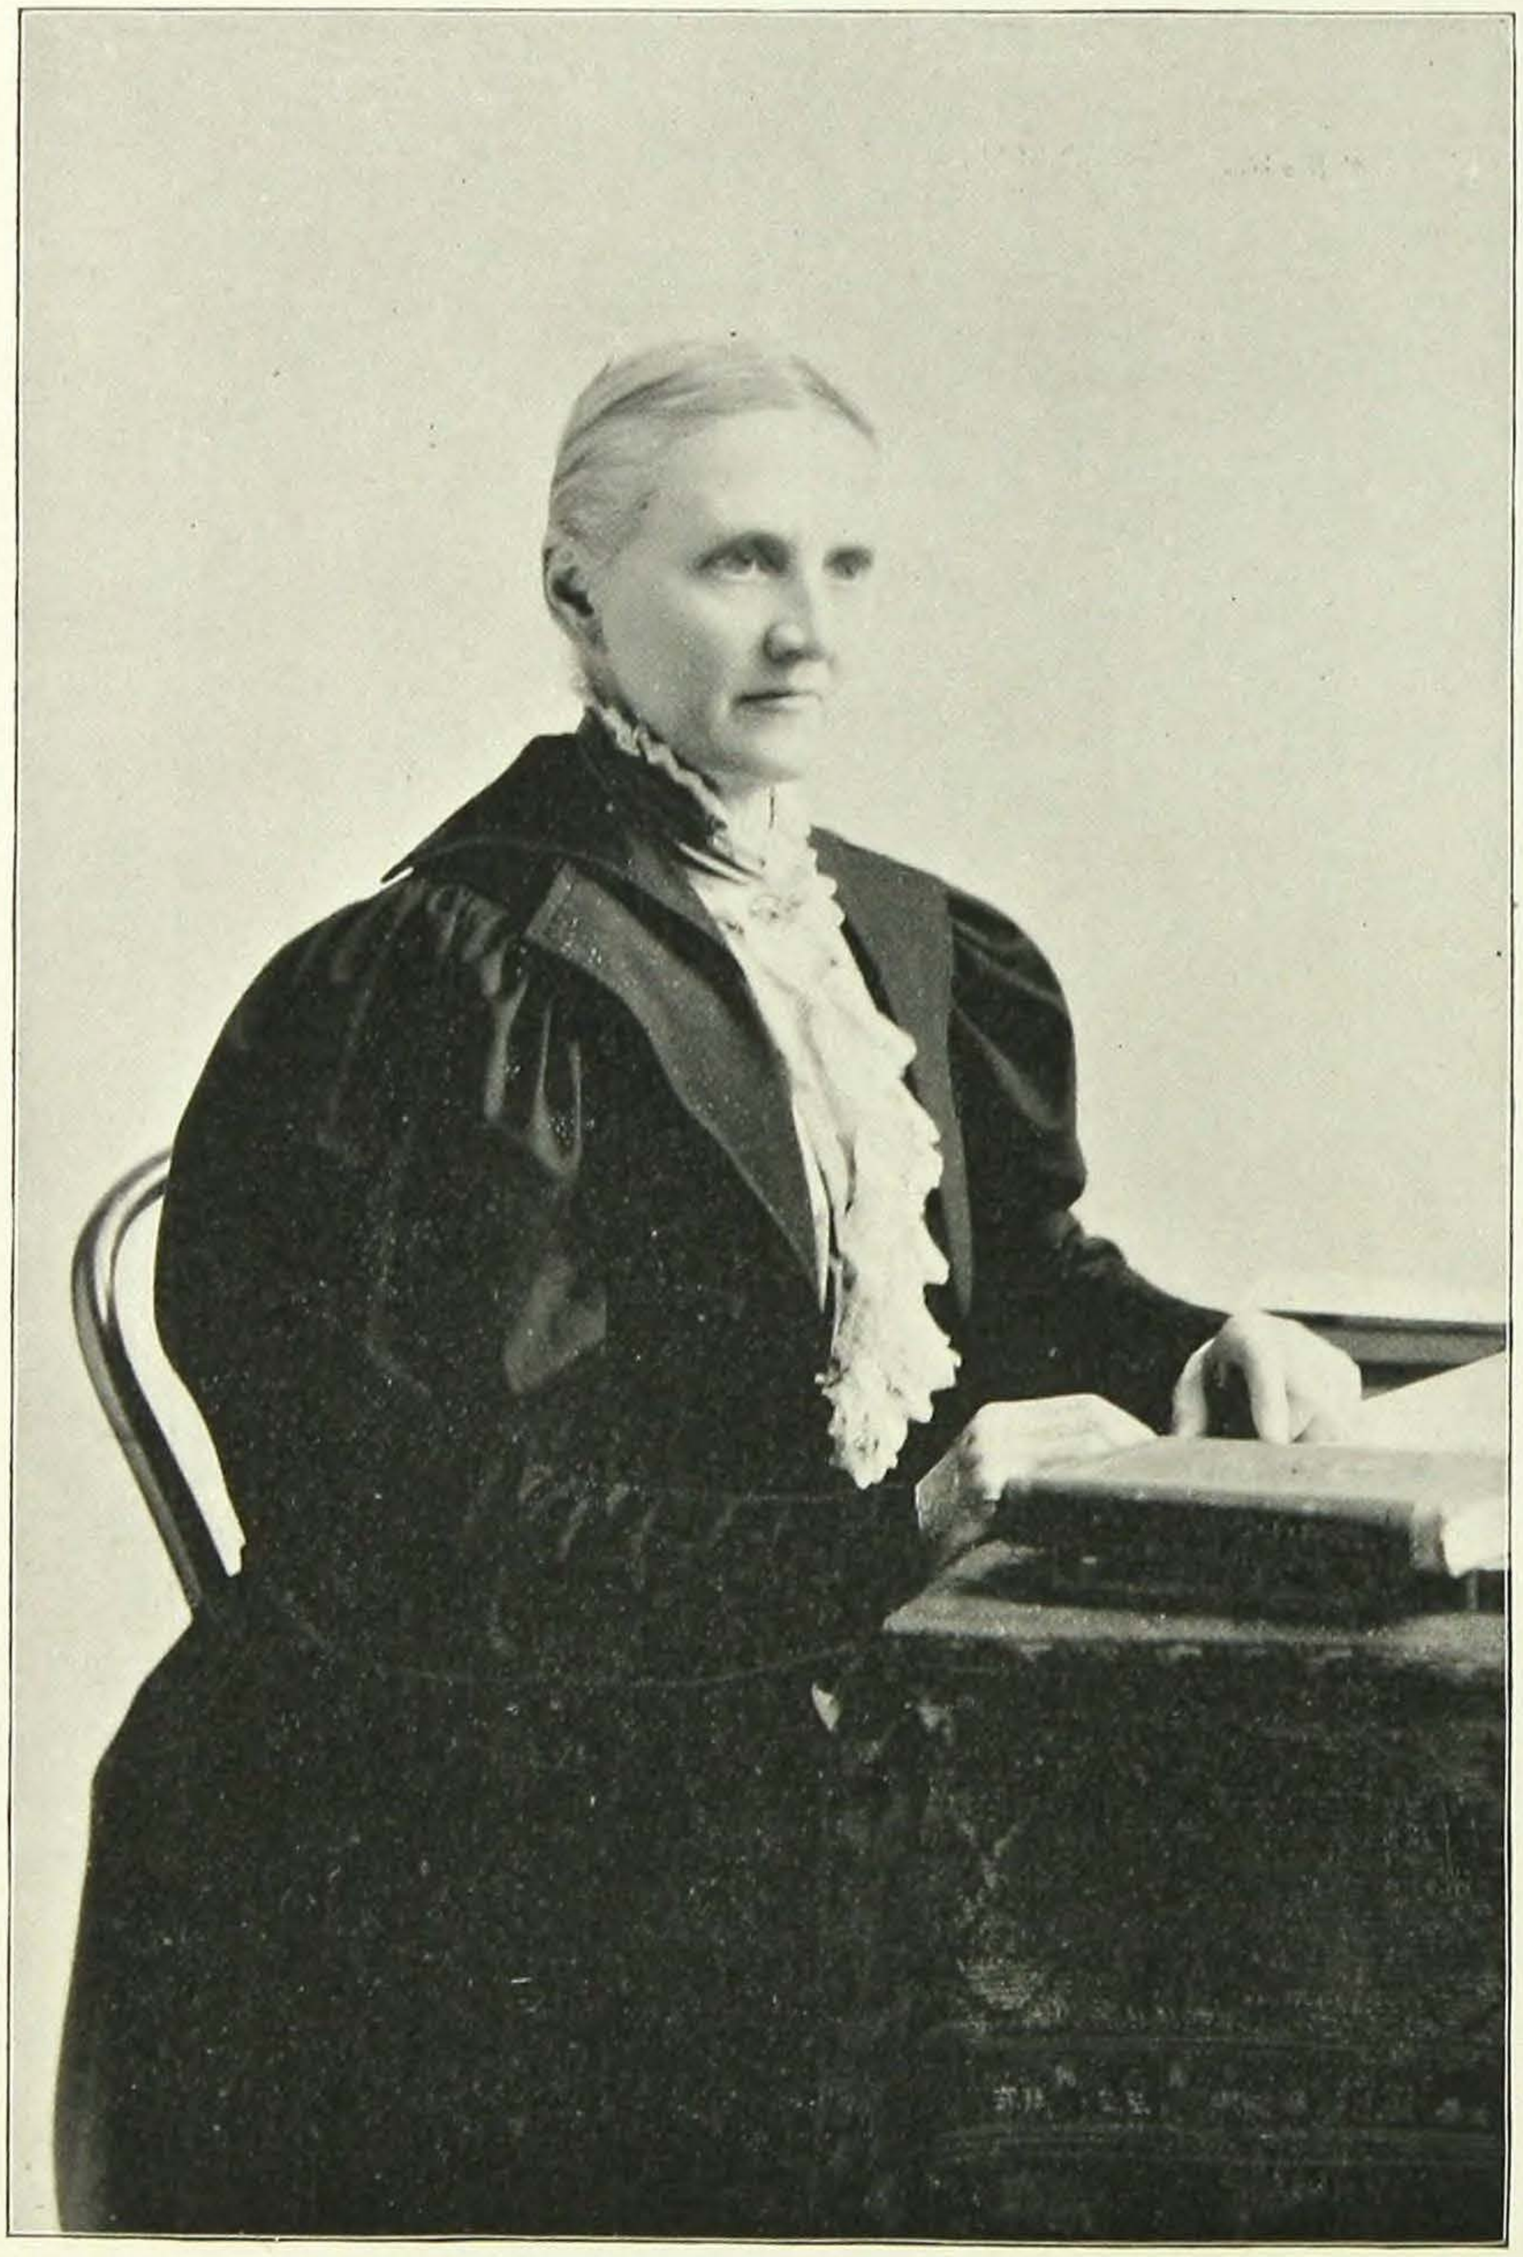

Dr. Eddy has published the following works:

Analytical Geometry, Philadelphia, 1874.
Researches in Graphical Statics, New York, 1878.
Neue Constructionen aus der Graphischen Statik, Leipzig, 1880.
Thermodynamies, New York, 1879.
Maximum Strosses under Concentrated Loads, New York, 1890.

CONWAY MACMILLAN,

PROFESSOR OF BOTANY.

MARIA L. SANFORD,

PROFESSOR OF RHETORIC AND ELOCUTION.

To Professor Maria L. Sanford.

Fair is the life that is young and gay,—
Fair as the dawn of a summer's day ;
Yet nobler far is the life divine,
Whose years have traced with many a line
A face like thine.

Though softly the shadows of evening are falling,
Though voices of darkness are far away calling ;
Yet strong are the beams of thy mind's golden light,
And long may they linger on Gideon's height
Ever bright.

Sure is the sound of thy precepts, and clear ;
Sweet are thy words with instruction and cheer.
God grant thee now rich joys to reap,
And long thy earthly friends to keep,
And then, sweet sleep.

let us cheer our col-lege dear, May bless-ings fall up-on her As let us cheer our freshmen year When we were all so jol - ly; Al-let us cheer that fruit-ful year When youthful as - pi - ra - tion Sought let us praise those hap-py days We spent in search of knowl - edge. We let us cheer for Nine-ty-four, May bless-ings fall up-on her. Where-years un-fold and Time grows old, May she be crowned with hon-or!

tho' in youth we may forsooth Have mingled work with fol - ly.
noth-ing less than to possess All knowledge in cre - a - tion.
wan-dered to the riv - er bank And learned to love our col - lege.

A Sketch.

O, down on the Flats in Poletown,
Across from Prexy's "U"
Abode the belle of the Poletown swells
And both of her eyes were blue.

And he spied the flax-haired maiden,
(So snarled run threads of Fate)
In a sunshine patch near her Pa's front latch
And he leaned against the gate,

And he told rare campus gossip
And described the buildings new
That over the Mississippi's flow
Towered in massy view.

Wisely going before her Pa came
He left her in muse, "I tink
Dat Senior nice, suits my tasts just p'csie"
And both of her cheeks waxed pink.

"'Trilby' and troop of current fads
She could not bid me scan.
'Cons' in score, would vex not more
Than a drouth in the Isle of Man.

Faded the dream! A slavish law,
Obtains in fraternities,
Bids that each vie, to measure high
In esteem of sororities.

And by hap an all-glorious Senior
Of proud popularity;
Strolled one day, down that-a-way,
Blithe and in fancy free.

And they talked of garbage—hauling
Her Pa's profession she said,
Of the onion crops and tomato tops
That grew in her flower bed.

And the onions choked unweeded
As the hours floated away,
Ethics and Greek were exiled quiet
And he flunked in both next day.

And the Senior dreamed as "U"-ward
Rolled his Interurban car,
Of an humble trade, and a flax-haired maid,
And no tenets of Fashion to mar.

No social functions more to bore
Nor opera's tinsel show,
And we'd fish drift-wood along the Flats,
To keep the coal bills low."

For this our fate-thralled Senior
Broke sheer of Cupid's gripe,
And sought to bask in social task
Just like the sterotype.

And the flax-haired belle of Poletown
Mourneth afresh the clause:
"The saddest word e'er writ or heard Runs thusly: 'It might have was.'"

Star Gazings.

I gazed, nor ceased to gaze upon those heavenly orbs,
For in them burned a holy lucent fire,
And to them, as though drawn by siren's lyre,
My soul went out as when that mythic one absorbs
The soul of weakling mortal to herself.

And still I gazed, nor once could call my heart my own,
For in that full orbed light it still would bask
As when a lover, wishing what he dare not ask,
With many a longing hope but inward groan,
And lacking heart to make his errand known
Still hesitates and still berates his awkward self
For daring not claim what is his own.

'Tis true I know not mine own heart so light
It is and joysome with this deep delight,
It revels in the thought of those clear orbs I love so well,
But lest you think me soft I'd better tell:
'Tis really at the stars I gaze to-night.

A Treatise on Heredity.

(Probably by a Medic.)

I've an ancestor sailed in the May-flower,
And one as an emigrant shipped,
The first was the sternest of Pilgrims,
The other from creditors skipped.

Now each has an heritage left me,
The Pilgrim his conscience which kills,
The other his chronic dead-brokeness,
His talent for running up bills.

So now when a bill I've contracted
Because of one ancestor's sinnings,
There's plenty of time—ere cash I can find—
For the Puritan conscience's innings.

All the people dead who wrote it,
All the people die who learn it,
Blessed death! they surely earn it."

Their Charivari.

THIS happened during Christmas vacation. The scene was laid in the Union Station and the time was about 2.15 in the afternoon. The train did not leave until 2.30 so the fireman was busy polishing his engine while the engineer sat reclining in the cabin taking a quiet doze. It was during this time that two youths, evidently bent upon mischief, silently and stealthily made their way along the platform and entered the first coach. By their actions one would have been lead to suppose that they were awaiting the arrival of a third party, for they had no sooner taken up their position than they began to peer out as if expecting an arrival. Each carried a small grocer's bag which was tucked snugly under his arm. They had not waited long before a handsome and gaily attired couple made their way along the same platform, casting, now and then, furtive glances behind as if expecting to see an irate father in hot pursuit. The porters looked up, showed their pearls and grinned knowingly. The young man bit his lip, looked sheepish while the young lady at his side assumed an air of haughty composure rarely to be found under such trying circumstances. It was now 2.25, only five minutes more, and then all would be over with. As yet no kind friend appeared to bid them a fond farewell. They were just mounting the steps, congratulating one another with beaming eyes, when they spied our two friends with the paper bags. They bowed their heads in despair. A groan escaped the young man They entered the coach and sank down. A tear trickled down her cheek while the perspiration stood out on his forehead in perfect beads. Blood rushed to his temples and blood oozed from the lip which he had so thoughtlessly bitten. They were completely at the mercy of these two miscreants. The boys slowly and noiselessly opened the paper bags and rice mysteriously leaked out. Not one single word had as yet been spoken. One of the wretches, in his extreme anxiety to hold on to his bag, lost his clutch and it fell to the floor with a dull and heavy thud. The noise was sufficient to attract the attention of the passengers and by the time the small grains had sought recesses the passengers had exchanged knowing smiles. The game was up. As the train pulled out of the station such salutations as these reached the ears of that happy couple:

"Don't they make a charming pair? Isn't she a young looking bride? My, but he is handsome. People, I just guess, will never take them for bride and groom because they both look so young and innocent."

And then the train sped on. The principals here we must leave to their fate. As the the two prime-movers wended their way back over the platform, the little white-haired "browny" was heard to say to his big confederate:

"Well, 'Yeuse,' just you wait until 'Dal' gets back from Duluth and I bet there will be no living for you two in the same house. It was mean, no doubt, to play them such a trick, but I suppose we were both mad because we two were not invited to that house-party."

"Topsy Turvy:"

WHERE, O where, does the 'Varsity stand!
Right in the middle of Campus Land
Where the students once got the upper hand,
And the way things were ran was simply grand.
The upper classmen had full sway
For the Sophs and Freshmen they sent way,
You see they knew how things should be done
And college life then must have seen some fun.
They made the time fast or they made the time slow
Just as they wished the time to go,
They stood the professors all up in a row
And gave them a quiz every day or so.
Frankforter flunked on Caedmon's hymn
And Nachtrieb on the law of Grimm,
The Albigenses were too much for Gale
And metamerism made Pikey quail.
Wilkin went down on the Periodic Law;
Brooke failed to derive Taylor's Formula.
Wells got a goose egg on Sporophyte
While Ablant Verbs gave Sidener a fright.
They only devoted six minutes to West—
They asked twenty questions; let him do the rest.
Johnson got conditions from every one,
Some of them did it just for fun.
But poor Bird flew into such a rage
They had to put him in a cage.
Every day, did it rain or shine,
The Profs. must drill before they could dine.
Morgan couldn't get out of the awkward squad
Prex lagged behind about a rod.
Who was the captain with gun and sabre?
Who in the world but Cholly Klaeber!
Breda was put on the Gopher board,
To such heights his ambition soared.
Athletics was managed by Christopher Hall,
John Downey ran the Junior Ball.
And for this function 'twas worth a good look
To see Firkins and Woodbridge rushing the book,
Jones was President of the S. C. A.
They all went to Chapel twice a day.
The leader there was generally Dutchy,
And people did say that he could beat Hutchy.
These quondam Profs. were often caught tripping
And they were especially given to skipping.
The punishments were severe and unique,
Macmillan was positively forbidden to speak,
Miss Sanford was sentenced to walk up and down
Alone and at midnight thro' some foreign town.
They kept Frank A. on a diet of dates,
And MacLean had to talk United States.
In a gale of cold wind they gave Folwell a seat,
Then they all stood around and complained of the heat
Some of the Profs. weren't permitted to smoke,
And some had to listen while Clark sprung a joke.

L'envoi.

Now perhaps you ask when this occured,
I can't tell upon my word,
But you are perfectly free to say
How things would have been if you'd had your way.

"A Mayden Waits"

Waiting.

A mayden waits—slow tick the hours away,
So slow away.
"If he but come to-night
I'll say him 'Yea.'"

A fellow waits—slow drag the hours away,
So slow away.
"If I should go to-night
What should she say?"

A monster waits—swift speed the hours away,
So swift away.
Watching his neighbor's light
Hugs he his class-book tight
When comes the morning bright
He'll have his say.

First Girl.

She said "Nay, nay"
When I asked for a kiss.
She sent me away;
I could not stay
With her wrath in full sway,
'Cause I asked for a kiss,
But she said "Nay, nay"
When I asked for a kiss.

Second Girl.

By experience taught,
I took a kiss.
With no danger fraught,
(Just as I thought,)
But daddy's boot I caught,
And it was no miss
By experience taught;
I took a kiss.

E. R. B.

Happiness.

What is it illumes the maiden's face
As she passes down the stairs?
Is't some inward, spiritual grace
Gives her that blissful air?

No; She has got a ten in Trig.!
Oh joy beyond compare!
And the Chemistry Professor has got the Grippe,
Ah, happiness most rare!

J. R., '97.

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA, September 27, 1894.

EAR MA :

I tell you its grate here all but the algebra which is more than grate it nocks arithmetic all holler for being hard, the Proffessor mr. downey says I am the best one in the class—to flunk—I dont know what that means I guess its good all right. All the rest of my studies are easy enough and I have lots of time to study my sunday school lesson. You orter see us lick the sofamores the other day, it was this way. We were going to have a meating to see who would be president of the class, and when we had got all fixed we found the hinges had been taken oft the door and we could not shut it up tight, so we had to leve it open. As soon as one of our men began to say any thing somebody would say, "louder" "louder" "can't here" and all that, when they could here all right. Any how, we lected a fellow President who was a sofa-more named otis, and when we found it out then there was fun I tell you.

Some of the boys took the janitor by the legs and up set him as he had a feller down on the floor, he didn't like that and I gess he swore a little us fellers don't like him very well. Some of the boys had their cloes tore and I lost that gold collar button that you paid 10c. for at the grocery, but dont worry about it, my room-mates got another he'll let me take.

Your son,

JIMMY PFREISHMANN.

DEAR MA :

You know that scrap I told you about in my last letter it is dredful now, the sofa-mores who were the leaders were suspended by the president yesterday and they wish now that they had not been so funny but they cant help it now. I was glad I was not in it any more than I was caus I gess I would have been suspended, cause the president (I heard a feller call him "prexie," I dont know what that means) knows me well he said "good morning gentlemen" to me and another feller yesterday.

The fellers who were suspended are Otis, a feller with glasses; Garfield, I dont know him; Hastings, a feller with a big face; Parry, a big feller who plays foot ball some. They are sorry now you bet and I heard one say he wished he was back again. I hardly slept last night thinking about the scrap, its grate.

Yours,

JIMMY.

P. S.—That celiloid coller I bought last year is busted, send me 15c. for another one. I want to get a pipe too like Murray Dewart. I guess 50c. will buy it.

J.

DEAR MA :

Got the coller all right have broke my suspenders now it takes lots of money to get along here you bet.

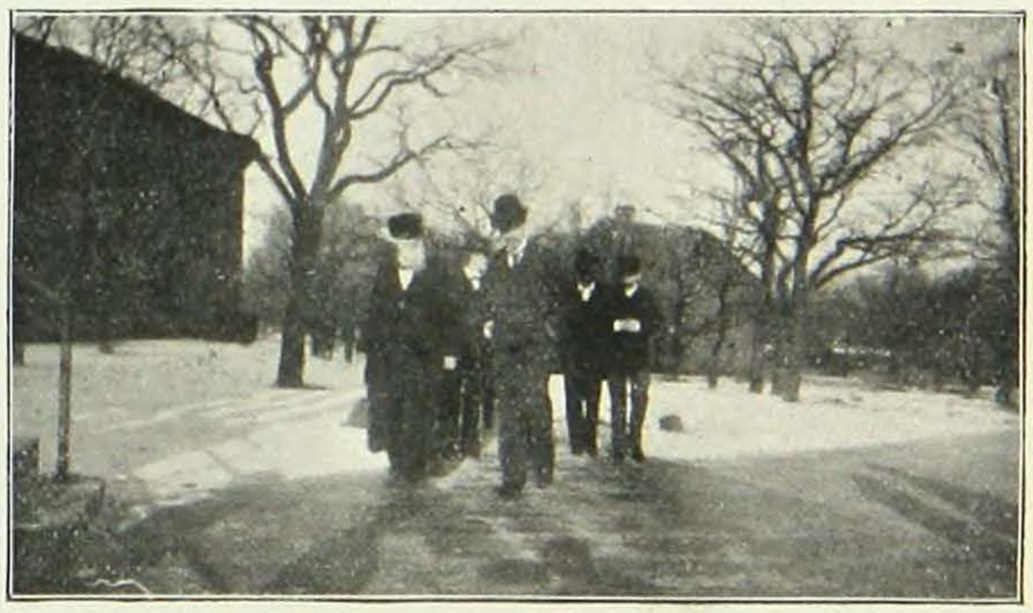

The fellers who were suspended are back now and they won't trouble us again. The president scarred them pretty bad but they said they would not make any more trouble so he took them back and all is quiet. Send me 25c. to get my hair cut. I was taken for Frinlayson yesterday and I was awful ashamed for he looks like that man in the circus we saw.

Your son

JIMMY.

A Speaking Likeness.

There was a young Freshman named Case,
And he had a fair, freckled face.
His astrakhan coat was much like a girl's,
His head was all covered with rich auburn curls.
A student, on seeing by lamplight his nibs,
Said to a friend, " Why there goes Miss Gibbs."

A Senior Interview.

Reported by the Interviewer (but not for Publication.)

SCENE I.—Professor W.'s Office.

Knock at door.

Enter two Senior maidens, M. and L.

L.—"Mr. W., we want to know how to arrange our programme so that we can take just as much from you as possible."

M.—"Yes, we're having a very hard time getting our other studies stuck in somewhere."

Mr. W.—"I'll be delighted to help you. Won't you sit down?"

[M., overcome with emotion, is unable to make her limbs obey her will.]

"Miss B., won't you sit down?"

[M., with great effort succeeds in sitting down.]

Mr. W., (studying catalogue diligently)—"Dear me! I am very much confused. [M. and L. exchange delighted glances.] I hadn't noticed that I had to teach that subject the third time. I am afraid you will have to take this History of Philosophy next term if you want to be well able to take something of me the third term."

M., (blushing)—"Couldn't we, please, take both next term?"

Mr. W., (reflecting the blush)—"Why, why, I would be more than delighted; more than delighted!"

M.—"Well, I guess we'll take both then."

L., (looking up sadly and sighing)—"I'm afraid not."

[Mr. W. looks at his watch. L. rises. M. sits firmly still.]

Mr. W. (hastily)—"O, don't go! I see that your five minutes is not yet up."

[Both sit.]

L. (gazing about wildly in search of a subject to prolong the conversation)—"Well, you know—you see—we thought Æsthetics would be even more interesting than the history or philosophy."

[Mr. W. smiles. L. and M. smile in return and feel the blood rush to their heads.]

Mr. W.—"Well, I don't doubt but what it would be. To tell you something I wouldn't tell everyone, though, I don't know very much about it."

[Again looks at watch. L. and M. rise and reluctantly walks to the door. Mr. W. smiles.]

SCENE II.—Hall.

L. and M. bumping their heads against the wall to make the blood go down.

FINIS.

Then and Now

In far-off years a maiden I knew,
O woe is me, and lack-a-day!
Then swains were bold and maids were true;
Swains were so young, and maidens too,
And time was long and skies were blue,
O happy, happy day!

The world and I are growing old,
O woe is me, and lack-a-day!
The time is short' the skies are cold,
And maidens frown when swains are bold.
She loves a Fee-Gee-U I'm told,
O bitter, bitter day!

—Elizabeth Norris.

Airs Poetic.

"WHO will write our poetry?" That was the unsolved question at the first meeting of the Literary Committee. It never was raised again. There were speculations, however, as to who would not. The spirit of poetry is not dead. Inspirations wander through our classic halls like offices seeking men; and as men are not scarce the inspiration sometimes finds one. The result is a poet—generally an anony mous poet. Let no Gopher Editor in coming years fear the lack of a poet. The poor have we with us alway.

It is our opinion that the anonymous poet is a Junior. This is concluded from the remarkable familiarity he manifests with Parson's "English Versification." (Soph. Eng. 3d term—all courses.) We notice this especially in his conscientious avoidance of all the principles laid down by that author. The anonymous poems received, however, show at times an insight into the darker mysteries of University life which would be expected of none but the Senior mind. The following, entitled "Fate," has a dispairing note of cynicism, which, while we must condemn it cannot fail to arouse an answering throb in the heart of the reader:

"The class was very large,
He never called the roll;
My name came once a week—
I knew the day.
It never failed, nor I,
(I had my pony by)
And all the other days
I stayed away."

"But when the term was done,
I found I had a 'con,'
And I went to ask that Prof.
The reason why.
'Full thirty skips,' he said,
'I keep them in my head;
And I've seen that horse before,
Just bye the bye.'"

Poetry has always appealed to us, though we certainly never appreciated to what lengths it could go, before we began work on this committee. We once thought of being a poet ourselves, but that was before we handed in our contribution to the editor. On the whole, the office of critic is more satisfactory.

In our study of this poetry we have noticed several laws which we do not remember to have seen in the critical work of Horace on the subject. We formulate these for the benefit of our successors:

LAW I.—All poetry is divided into (2) classes:
1. That which will scan.
2. That which will not.

Examples.

A. of 1.

My love was once a winsome girl
With eyes of Navy blue.
To get one look in those eyes of hers
I'd pass by even you.
But what has changed my love, alas!
Those glances, how I miss 'em!
What means this fixed and glassy stare?
She has astigmatism!

B of 2.

"True, earnest work done cheerfully and well,
Through a long life of daily sacrifice
Returns a thousand fold reward,
And blessings never given to those
Who while away their little lives," etc.

Or,

The Fresher's Delight,

Isn't it just immense, boys? Isn't it fine,
Marching over the Campus in double time.

When the thermometer register "ninety in the shade,"
Or standing an hour and a-half in dress parade.

When the mercury is down, and from the West
The wind howls through the thick regulation vest.

Till, as Brownies out for a Hallowe'en jag,
The cold wave with each other play games of tag.

Upon the dorsal side of the rare genus,
Or rather species—privatus freshmanus.

The second class is the more inconclusive—sometimes even including Class I., but, by careful manipulating the class to which a given selection belongs may be determined.

LAW II.—In all poems, meter must be subordinate to rhyme, and sense to both.

The following will sufficiently illustrate this law, although we could furnish innumerable examples from manuscripts in our possession:

"As they draw nearer the building
You'll see many a strapping fellow
Trying to conceal his High-school skeep-skin,
In the depths of a green umbrella."

Or,

"Our hearts are now dead;
They have gone to our head;
Intoxicants stronger than wine."

Or,

"Ask the Deke and ask the Chi Psi
All the frats in turn you can try."

Or,

"Once fame was given to unfurl
The vulgar name of the 'Brats' girl." Etc.

LAW III.—Quality must be always subordinate to quantity.

Example.

(Seventh verse of the poem.)

Our dearest Alma Mater,
Alma Mater, Alma Mater
We send our fondest thoughts back to you.
Where'er the world hath placed us,
Hath placed us, hath placed us,
Where'er the world hath placed,
May we never to thee be untrue.

(Chorus after all XI. verses.)

Alma Mater, Alma Mater,
Our dearest Alma Mater;
Alma Mater, Alma Mater.

Etc.

One fact has attracted our attention, that the number of great subjects here is limited. At one time fourteen of the seventeen articles in our box were dedicated to one professor of the Institution. They present a remarkable variety, both as to conception and manner of treatment. The non-appearance of thirteen may be ascribed to the unlucky number. The fourteenth, by one of our own number, whose poetic fire was kindled, we give entire.

Thou who hast trod most countless ages,
Thou hast stalked down the paths of time;
Thou who hast the learning of sages,
Thou, thou art the soul of all rhyme.
Thou who comest on the first ray of sunshine,
Thou who travellest 2.40 guit,
Thou who art a poetical gold mine,
Thou, oh THOU art the choson of fate!!!

With these soulful lines we must close our discussion of a class of poetry in its nature very exhaustive.

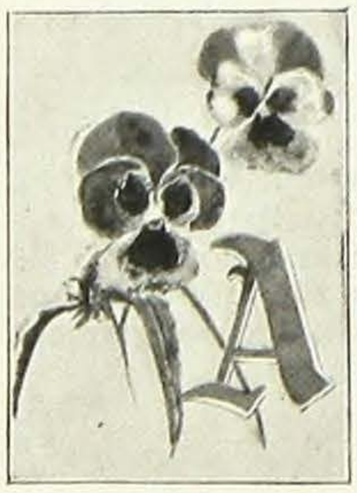

Shall I wasting in despair
Fret because I have to bear
Snubs from many of the Greeks.
1—When my soul companions seeks,
Be they as exclusive as they may
I'll not loiter in their way ;
If they're are not the frats for me,
What care I whose frats they be.

Should my heart be grieved or pined ?
If to me she is not kind,
If she scorns the pin I wear
2—Greets me with a haughty stare ?
Were my frat the best of all
Gladly would I from it fall
If it's not the frat for "she"
What care I whose frat it be.

If our chapters are not friends
What care I—to make amends ?
3—When Greek meets Greek I think alas
The tug of war must come to pass.
Can we in all eternity
Not use above fraternity ?
If there's not a frat for "me"
What care I what frats there be.

JESSIE SCHULLEIR.

Senior Ethics.

T a certain senior party
One bold Duke whom we all know,
Led a maiden unsuspecting
'Neath a bough of mistletoe.

They were talking Senior Ethics
And he asked quite apropo,
"Ought a man to kiss his sweetheart Underneath the mistletoe?"

"Ye-s," she answered, pondering deeply.
A strange sound the silence broke !
And the world is left to wonder
Is she sorry that she spoke.

That Northfield Trip.

HEN the train started—for it did finally start—about 400 (the) of U ladies and gentlemen started with her for Northfield. Dewart sang, Topping yelled, our band played, the flags fluttered, the rabble gazed while we all came in on the chorous, and were off.

When we had gone a ways the train was flagged and some little fellows got on who carried a large piece of cloth on which was carefully spelled out, the word:

M-A-C-A-L-E-S-T-E-R.

They were very nice boys, aside from a lesson in rushing (with copious illustrations) they did not need our care.

Then the train crept into a place down the river called St. Paul.* Here Hamline waited for us. They carried determined faces and their lunches. We were all very glad to see the Hamline brethren and helped them with their yell which goes like this:

Wally, wally hoo!!!
Wally, wally hoo!!!
Hamline Seminary
Prepares for the U!!!

Then, to entertain them while the train stopped, we rushed them up and down the platform. A couple of St. Paul policemen found out to their sorrow what Minneapolis cops knew long ago, that it is dangerous for them to arrest a college rush.

After a while we let the train go on. There were eight cars with one reserved for baggage and one for Hamline.

As we hadn't seen the Methodists since Harding and Finlayson had beaten them at foot ball the Fall before, we went into their car to talk with them. But they mistrusted us and got mad. They would have whipped us, they said, had it not been for the presence of ladies, in whose company they would not touch even one of the Fourteenth Avenue saloon element.

So we left them in peace or, rather, pieces.

The next bit of amusement was kindly furnished us by Mr. Williams. There is a little station, all by itself, thirty miles out. Just as the train was moving from here, Miss Burnett dropped her glove out of the window and Williams, like the old-time hero, sprang gallantly after it. He got the glove, but he also got left. The last we saw of him he was sitting on the step of the depot which was the only house in sight. It was just growing dark and he was thirty-two miles from bed and supper. However, as he is now in the Soph. class he must have got away somehow.

At about seven we got to Northfield. The people thought seventeen Barnums had struck the town at once. Mayor Heatwol tried to make us a speech but we didn't have time to listen to anybody but ourselves. There were two church fairs ready to fleece us for supper, but as we kept on eating, the faces of the pillars grew longer and they wished they had some experience in the U restaurant.

Then came the contest. A U band played some pieces, a U quartett sang, a U president presided and our own dear Coe found, where he was not known—an opportunity for making his speech, for which he had waited so long. And it was a good one. It filled up the time while the judges were making the decision in good shape.

It may be said in passing that Carleton was given first place on the orations.

We stole quietly away to the train, taking only a chief of police, a restaurant sign, a milk can, a hoarse voice and another defeat as fond remembrance of Northfield and Carleton.

Things We Noticed.

McGill was not a judge.

It is against the city ordinance of Northfield for more than two schooners to cross the bar at the same time.

That we can't scare the judges into a favorable decision.

That the contest was too long on one end.

A Foot Ball Romance.

Once on a time there dwelt a maid
  Well versed in every kind of knowledge,
Whose heart vibrated to and fro
  Between two bright young men at college.
When Jack, from Minnesota U
  Appeared, she felt she loved him better,
But when she met Wisconsin's pride,
  She knew he held her heart in fetter.

This state of things progressed awhile
  Until, at jealousy's suggestion,
Wisconsin Will addressed the maid
  And asked the all-momentuous question.
"Pray give me time," the maiden said,—
  "To-morrow, come at 3 precisely.
Between this time and that, I'm sure,
  I can decide the question nicely."

Meanwhile poor Jack observed the pair
  And vowed he'd stand this thing no longer,
So he in turn besought the maid
  To make the bond between them stronger.
"I must have time," she murmured low.
  "Pray come at 3 o'clock to-morrow,
And I will give my answer then;
  I hope it will not cause you sorrow."

Next day at 3 the suitors glared
  At one another in a passion,
Until the little maid appeared
  And gave her answer in this fashion:
"Dear friends, you each have asked my hand,
  Truly an honor I believe it;
Yet I, alas! can not decide
  Between you, so to Fate I'll leave it.
"You each are on your foot ball team;
  The coming game shall be the chooser.
No matter how it may result,
  I'll take the winner, spurn the loser."
The game came on, the girl was there;
  And to discourage neither suitor,

The crucial moment has arrived.
  Jack has the ball; his face sets grimly.
Between him and Wisconsin's goal
  One man,—'tis Will—he sees but dimly.
A crash,—a fall—Jack lies quite still;
  Wisconsin wins; the game is over,
And Will comes bounding through the crowd
  With sparkling eyes,—a happy lover.

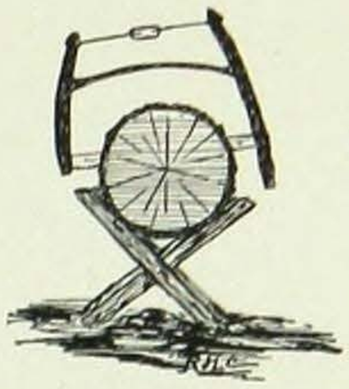

But from her breast the little maid
  Has dashed to earth his ribbon gleaming,
And anger blazes in the eyes
  That meet his own, so proudly beaming.
"You horrid, wicked man!" quoth she,
  "How could you,—oh! how dared you do it!
Why, such a dreadful fall as that Might well have killed him,—and you knew it."

"But,"—the bewildered lad began,—
  "No buts," with scorn in every feature.
"Do you suppose I'd wed a man
  Who'd nearly killed a fellow creature?"
There is a moral to this tale,
  Though what it is I've not discovered.
The maiden tended Jack with care,
  And jilted him when he recovered.

Buck Saws.

F all the odd, original and withal philosophical characters on the campus, probably that person possessing those traits in the superlative degree, is our mutual friend, Janitor Buck.

Having passed through nearly all conditions of life as a trapper, Indian fighter and soldier, his store of anecdotes, together with his loquacity, furnish considerable entertainment for his audiences of engineers.

It was our intention to relate some of these reminisances, but space will not permit, so let a few side remarks suffice.

The engineers, a jolly, good natured set, he calls his devils and for every one he has a nick name.

Hibbard is Nebrasky; Zimmerman he calls cinnamon, (Buck's German); while for Prof. K—, he gives the title, "The Little Dutchman."

"Well," says Buck the other evening, "I've had a hard day of it to-day, in the physics class of Prof. J—s, gave me a flunk for taking too much time at the board. But the hardest was with John Dawney in the Greek class; I had to translate a whole page from Paradise Lost."

"How was it with Prof. S—h," was asked? "Oh, I got along with him all right; he don't know nothin' and don't know how to tell that."

Having entered the office of the latter with soiled shoes recently, he was questioned as to why he didn't remove the snow outside before coming in.

"Oh, there war'nt room out there," he replied.

"Mr. Hoag just called me in his office and gave me a dollar for a Christmas turkey, isn't that better than praying for a fellow, I'd like to know?

Being assigned to some distasteful duty he remarked, "I've soldiered it so long, I'm left handed in both feet and can't do this job at all."

"Now there's Prof. McD—, and Prof. McM—, always going around collecting weeds. They get a mullein stalk, and call it a 'Tink-a-doodle-dum', but it's a mullein stock just the same.

Some time ago when all the earth was resplendent with a new icy garment, a charming young lady was seen passing on a very slippery spot. Buck, like the true admirer of beauty that he is, exclaimed, "Isn't she an angel!" Just then she almost sat down. He added, "But she was nearly a fallen one, though."

"_____ ___?"

Who is it calls the Freshies out before the break of morn
And makes them frequent essays write until they're quite forlorn?
"_____ ___!"

Who is it loves the Seniors and Juniors does admire?
Who reads their wondrous writings to the Sophs until they tire?
"_____ ___!"

Who is it preaches promptness as a virtue quite the best,
But who often to the class arrives when gone are all the rest?
"_____ ___!"

Who is it says so often in accents firm, but kind—
"Miss Smith take off your hat so I can see that man behind?"
"_____ ___!"

But laying every jest aside, who is it doth inspire?
Who is it with enthusiasm each student's heart doth fire?
"_____ ___!"

Then here's to her noble woman's heart, and her mind that we admire—
Every one will take his part in "Three cheers for
_____ ___!"

From Montana.

"You look pretty tough," said the Sun this morning,
"I declare you a perfect fright."
"Oh yes," said the Cyclone smiling,
"I had a little 'blow-out' last night."

Aspiration.

Could we only live as grandly as our inmost soul aspires,
Could the flames but burn forever of those deepest inward fires,

Then this earth would be a heaven, every act a god-like deed,
And of sorrow, pain and trial never more would be a need!

N. E. B., '97.

THE BUSINESS MANAGER had just finished his last recitation for the day. With brisk, energetic step he rapidly covered the distance from Pillsbury Hall, and on his way to the GOPHER room stopped to get the afternoon mail. The only communication was one from an Eastern firm addressed to "Mr. E. A. Barton, GOPHER." Recognizing the firm, and knowing well from experience that the contents could not be enjoyed off-hand, he came into the room, drew a chair up to his table, opened the letter and read this weekly installment to the already large volume of self-praise and fruitless effort. As soon as completed, he quickly seized his pen, and informed the gentlemen that the contract had been let elsewhere. As a parting shot, Mr. B. told them that they remind him very much of a parrot who was noted as a great talker. This parrot was once caught in a cyclone, and after its passage, plumed his two or three feathers and said: "I know what is the matter with me, I talk too —— much." With an easy conscience, and with the feeling that he had fixed one firm in good shape, Eddie started home.

But his little attempt at sarcasm found a ready and sensitive audience. The following week brought the reply which, after acknowledging receipt of his appreciative communication, aptly noted that not the talking but the cyclone made the parrot lose his feathers as our manager had impressed him as a parrot story fancier, he would give him another which he might like to add to his repertoire.

"A certain parrot, having for a number of years been known as the best parrot in the country, was justly proud of his reputation. Whenever his ability as a talker was doubted, he would cock up his head and in his most eloquent manner defend himself. One day he met a person who to all appearances seemed to be a gentleman, but who for some reason did not appear to think very favorably of the parrot. So the parrot put in his little say and, after some time, he noticed that his speech was having no effect whatever on the person before him. He then examined him more closely and found he was a wooden man."

The writer, unable to account for the tone of the GOPHER letter, goes on to say that had they known in the first place that they were talking to a wooden man, they would have saved postage and time. Before drawing to a rapid close, in fear of another parrot story, the gentleman magnanimously wishes his private order to be entered for a GOPHER. But his fears were groundless, for some time later, on looking over the file of letters, Burch found this without any acknowledgment even of the receipt of the order. So, writing, he briefly explained that his partner, Barton, had been so severely stunned that he had not yet recovered from the shock, and that he, personally, would be glad to fill his order. The gentleman immediately enclosed his check and his condolence for Mr. Barton, while Barton has taken a solemn pledge to leave this Easterner alone in particular and parrot stories in general.

The Athletic Election had just passed and had crowned one of our number with new and well-deserved honors. The gentleman was chosen strictly on his merits and popularity. The nomination of Mr. E. R. Barton for Tennis Manager was greeted with rounds of applause and a universal feeling of gratification that one so able had consented to be a candidate. The surprise was complete to Mr. Barton. His election was unanimous, and the rejoicing to his friends was boundless.

Philosophically accepting his election, he determined to make the most out of it. He recalled with satisfaction that he had seen in the Ariel that a shave and an oyster stew were offered to all successful candidates at the coming election. On Monday, at the earliest opportunity, he thought he first needed a shave. On entering the shop he asked Sam if he didn't have a shave coming, to which Sam assented. Having received his shave, Barton put on his coat, thanked him and went out.

Feeling more presentable and respectable, he went into the restaurant, ordered his stew, and ate it with the satisfaction one can only feel when doing something at another's expense. He took the ticket given to him, handed it to the proprietor, and told him that was "one on him," to which he mildly dissented. Barton insisted. Mr. Darling was firm, and could only convince Eddie on producing the copy of Ariel which offered the shave and stew to the '97 GOPHER Board. Mr. Barton charged the stew, and Mr. Darling is still patiently waiting for the Tennis Manager with twenty cents.

To Mr. Pike.

He flunked me to-day,
Will he flunk me to-morrow?
To him I will say:
"Excuse me to-day,"
Or the devil will pay!
For no horse could I borrow.
He flunked me to-day,
Will he flunk me to-morrow?

E. R. B.

The above, bearing on its back "Approved December 2, '94," was a constant source of pleasure and delight to all the members of the board. The refrain:

" He flunked me to-day,
Will he flunk me to-morrow?"

Ran through every one's head like the latest tune of the University Cadet Band. But the fair fame of this poet was of short duration, for Fate early played her trump card. One day the wind came creeping in through the broken pane in the window, and singling out one annual from all the rest hurled it open on the floor. The "percipient" picked up the volume and quickly glanced over the upturned pages; there were the fatal lines:

" —— flunked me to-day,
Will he flunk me to-morrow?"

Accusations and proofs of guilt immediately followed. The surprise, penitence and mortification of the "accused" were sincere and unquestioned. Explanations were easily and satisfactorily made; but in the meantime no more poems have been received from "E. R. B."

The Summer School.

Five maids, co-eds in the U. of M.
To the summer school retuned,
They came to revive their knowledge vast,
Which during the year they had learned.

They sat and wrote round the table old
Midst a sea of old school ma'ams,
They talked much more than they wrote, 'tis true,
And joked midst the death-like calms.

All at once out clear in a sudden pause
They heard a whisper ring,
It came from an antique gay-haired miss,
"Those students, they don't know one thing."

Longing.

"O will that happy term ne'er come
Ere I 'pass in my chips,'
When I can have straight Junior cards
Without some Freshman slips?"

A. E. W.

An Extra.

"I go to chapel" the Junior said,
Because 'twill be so nice
When I register at St. Peter's desk
To find a credit in Paradise."

A. E. W.

$H_2O$ dil.

"This interesting subject
I'm sure you do not hate.
Your paper's written very well,
I was just about to state
That if you Kappas don't come back
You'll drive me to the tomb;
So do come back, now won't you?
And I'll give to you this room,
For you and other Kappas
To hold as all your own;
Yes? Yes I knew you would
Not leave your chemistry
Professor all alone."

To Prof. West.

Though with Saxon Kings I struggle
And with "stubbs" my notes do fill;
Or with French or Teuton nations,
Yet his "bright smile haunts me still."

Campus Botany (After J. E. T.).

Species and Varieties of Hominidæ Native or Introduced upon the U. of M. Campus Classes.

I. Evergreen shrubs; small, vivid green, sometimes becoming rosy-red. Occurring often in parties. Found in large quantities at chapel. H. Freshmane.

II. Long, lank, no especially distinguishing character; many imperfect and stunted specimens. Found under many conditions. H. Sophomoriens.

III. Beautiful specimens; common, often attached or easily becoming so; always in blossom. H. Juniore.

IV. Lofty; very smooth; sometimes with tufts of cilia (often colored) attached; generally go to seed before June. H. Seniore.

V. Mostly herbs, including about 200 species; generally with a pungent and acrid principle, but some are not only quite pleasant, but afford wholesome food (for thought). Often found in fossil state. H. Bacullatus.

Genera, Species and Varieties.

A. Widely distributed, yet generally isolated, except before elections. Native to uncultivated places and St. Paul. When cultivated degenerate into weeds, or may become of great economic value. BARBARIUM.

(1) Cheerfully colored (checked or striped). B. Austinium.

(2) Wan colored; grows in shade; sensitive plant covered with spines. B. Murfinium.

(3) A little weed from St. Paul. B. Espyana.

B. Found generally in colonies in old halls and stairways; very agreeable in Fall of year. Fratophora.

(1) Smooth; found attached to old pipes; nice appearing plants. F. Dekema.

(2) (a) Athletic, rag on head. Var. Dalrymplus.

(b) Parasitic on horses. Var. Higbius.

(2) Large and perfect specimens developed in scientific laboratories; in advanced stages often found attached to botany can. F. Phidelfama.

(b) Prize specimen transplated from arid plains of Nebraska; of great economic importance. Var. MacMillenium

Reveries of a Varsity Maiden.

The violets many maidens love,
They say its petals blue
Are all inwrought with messages
Of love full, sweet and true.

And many maidens love the rose
Because her lovely head
Hangs heavy with the weight of tender
Love-thoughts still unsaid.

And love chimes ring so clearly from
The fragrant lily bells,
That many maidens seek for them
Within their nooks and dells.

But I, apart from all these
When to the test it comes
For reasons which I cannot give Prefer chrysanthemum.

—Florence Clay.

To F. S. D.

There, little boy, don't cry,
You can't smoke your pipe I know,
And your beer mug too, and your cigarette, where!
Are things of the long ago.
But foot ball season will soon pass by,
There, little boy, don't cry.

To M. R.

(Found in Ladies' Parlor.)

"Little Bright eyes, little Bright eyes
For the lamb I will not sigh,
If you'll come and be forever
My black sheep until I die."

What's In A Locker?

Books and hats and rubbers too,
Papers, pens and jackets new,

Alcohol lamp and a cocoa can,
Boxes of lunch and a patty pan.

Calico pocket, nailed on the door—
Like was never seen before!

In the pocket a brush broom old,
Botany notes in a bundle rolled.

Murderous jack knife with broken blade,
Pointless pencils beside it laid,

Dozens of hairpins, a hammer, a tack,
Looking glass with many a crack.

A broken comb and a ball of twine,
The interior of that pocket line,

And old shawl strap and a spotted veil,
Serenely hang on the self same nail.

Umbrella and mackintoch jammed together,
Crowd for room with a satchel of leather,

George Edwin's chart and some orange peel
Piled on a shelf for woe or weal.

Curling iron hung below,
There for use and not for show,

On the floor in a corner dark—
A bar of soap and some elder bark.

And something there I once did see,
And marvelled greatly, it should be—

A liquid queer, in a bottle tall
Standing against the locker wall.

And high from the ceiling plain to be seen,
Junior Colors—the Gold and Green!

O, a small boy's pocket can hold a store.
But a "U" girl's locker can hold more.

L. M. P., '96.

"Methought I Heard A Voice."—Macbeth.

Scene—upper room of S. C. A.
The Fraulein's ill and gone away.
Her substitute of genius rare,
Far more than fills her vacant chair.
With mighty voice he calls the roll!
The sound resounds from pole to pole.
"Herr Jones," he calls; the youth's not there,
But faintly floating up the stair,
As Hamlet's ghost from 'neath the floor—
Comes—"present!" through the open door.
"Herr Jones?" And louder from the street,
Amid the sounds of hurrying feet,
That ghostly "present" sounds again.
The Prof's. cold hand lets fall his pen,
The student's hair erect does stand!
The books fall from each frigid hand.
Their awful looks Herr Jones does greet,
Who enters panting, takes his seat.
Called from his place in Pillsbury Hall
By this wonderful voice and the old roll-call.

Department of Psychology.

Examination.

Question:—What have you found most interesting in the last term's work in Psychology?

ALICE WALKER—"That Hough hasn't got it."

ENGINEERS—That same horse fiddle.

ALL—The baby's diary.

GRUENBURG—Free lunches—pepper especially.

ALICE WEBB—The professor's whistling.

E. R. BARTON—That the roll wasn't called.

Psychology.

1.

I sit so still in a far back seat
And distant noises my senses greet,
As I dream all sorts of wonderful things
And wonderful pictures my fancy brings.
Oh! what is the sound that I hear from afar
As of Syrens playing the light guitar,
Are they calling me down to the depths of the sea,
Are the Syrens playing, and playing for me?
'Tis only the sound of the 'cello you hear
And the tuning forks proving how strangely appear
Harmonics unto the uncivilized ear.

But what is it that I see yonder use,
Are the fairies dancing before my eyes
Each dressed in one of the pieces that fell
From a rainbow caught in their magic spell?
For the rainbow colors are waltzing there
To a rhythmical sound which I can't compare
To aught but the tinkle of tambourine
In some fairy cavern quite sub-marine.
'Tis only the primary colors I ween
Revolving in pairs in hopes there'll be seen
From a blue and a yellow a wonderful green.

3.

What are those odors the breezes bring
Far from the lands of eternal spring?
Of spices brought from India's strands
Of wonderful incense from wonderful lands.
Frankincense and myrrh from the days of old
When the world was young and the age was gold.
Is it these which are wafted over time's sea,
Is it these the breezes are bringing to me?
'Tis of the primary tastes that you tell,
Hold your nose tightly 'twill demonstrate well
That half of your tasting, is nothing but smell.

Reflections of the Parlor Mirror.

I am the Parlor mirror,
A faithful servant and true,
My mission in life is lofty—
'Tis to please the girls of the U.

Many and strange are the secrets,
Locked in my glassy breast;
I will only whisper you one,
And let you imagine the rest.

'Twas one dark night in early Spring
I saw this supernatural thing:
The parlor's very easiest chairs,
I saw go strolling off in pairs!

And then the great old sofa, too,—
A most unseemly thing to do,—
Shaking off its dreamy spell,
Went ambling after quite pellmell!

What scenes they sought, what pranks did play—
I may not such old friends betray,
But they all stole back one dusky morn
With sheepish aspects quite forlorn.

And when I chance to make remark
Upon their little midnight lark,
The plush chair grows a deeper red,
The great green sofa hangs its head.

But telling stories out of school
Has ever proved a dangerous rule.
I never had this chattering tongue,
'Tis from association sprung
With the girls of the U.

To Knights of English Learning.

I want to be a K. E. L.,
And with the "K. L's" stand;
On an Anglo-Saxon pedestal
MacLean's chart in my hand.

Six to Nit.

November 16, 7.30 P. M., One hundred and eighty supporters left Minneapolis with brooms, banner on a pale, band with cymbals, two heelers in a special car, to do up Madison.
Distribution of music.
Chipped in to pay for printing.
Sang all the songs.
Yelled.
Sang the first one.
Sang it lower.
Yelled.
Tried it higher.
Too slow; faster.
Went to next, repeated.
Passed to third; no good.
Went back to first and sang it again.
Got pretty hoarse.
Was tired standing.

St. Paul, 8.10—Receipt for cements.
War dance in depot.
Guyed the depot crowd.
Judged score would be about 24 to 0.
Serenaded all the little stations. Heard we left a fiery trail.

Lake City, 9.55—Took advantage of stop for refreshment—pretty poor.
Smoked bum cigars for next hour—free.

Winona, 11.17—Band concert.
11.45—Stretched out to sleep.
12.00—First round of hoodoo band—tin horns, cymbals, drum, bass horn.
Raised crowd on their feet.
Curses loud and deep.
Woke up sleeping car.

La Crosse. 12.20—Depot concert, full strength.
A barber shop needs a new pole.
Paid 75 cents a pack for cards.
Drank ice water on railroad company.
Conway McMillan stayed with his gang and kept music going.
Every one positively forbidden to sleep.
1.00 a. m.—That——hoodoo band came again.
Heard some fellows break the third commandment.

Portage, 3.50 a. m.—Got a cold lunch.
Saw town; pretty quiet place.
"Good morning! Have you used Pear's Soap;" showed a pair of heels?
Procession through town.
Built a bon-fire; not a fireman.

Elected chief of police ; Mayor's speech of acceptation.
Had a whale-of-a-time.
Heard station eating-house gong was missing.
Woke crowd on sleeping car up twice.

Left 6.15 a. m.—Scrambled for a seat.
Chipped in for band.
Tried to find a fellow who had slept.
Boasted for an hour straight.

MADISON, 7.50—Marched up to hotel ; breakfast.
Looked at gymnasium with envious eyes.
Made a few modest bets ; heard that Dr. Folwell and Dr. Ely had done same ; felt it must be according to economic principles.
Remember crying about something lost.

Left Madison 10.50—Didn't hear anybody talking.
Slept all night.

8.30 a. m—Sunday. Returned with all cash gone, with band minus cymbals, banner in a satchel, reputation lost, few days of stormy scenes ahead.
Never will happed again.

The University of Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS, December 15, 1894.

PRESIDENT'S OFFICE:

Received of Mr. George A. E. Finlayson, eight dollars in full payment of money paid by me to the keeper of the lunch counter at Lake City as compensation for losses incurred by said keeper through operations of students. Of this eight dollars I have returned fifteen cents, that amount having been previously paid to me.

A Fragment.

The sun sank into his fiery sink ;
The new moon's beams were bum,
To keep back the tears a blink I blunk
While humming " Hum Sweet Hum.',

A badger was pounding me on my back
As many a wink he wunk,
And yelling his yell till his face got black,
While the chink in his pocket he chunk.

Says he, " My friend, you bit on the bet,
The GOPHER didn't win this one,"
But I says to him " We'll do you yet
You Cardinal son of a gun."

The Plumbago Gang.

If you chance to be in the Mechanic Arts Building some day, and suddenly the ether is violently agitated by the most discordant and ear splitting sounds imaginable coming from the region of the basement or dressing-room do not allow yourself to be disturbed by images of a man caught in the machinery and being rapidly whirled to his death or of some tragedy transpiring, for it isonly the Plumbago Gang engaged in the innocent, but noisy pastime of hailing some joke or pun with approval or derision. Should you in passing sometime see a peacable and usually dignified civil running as if the last car were just leaving a block away, and chasing him closely a squad of smutty faced squalid and begrimed imps, each arrayed in apparel resembling that of a chimney sweep, do not be hasty in going to his assistance for you may become their recipent of the favors they are trying to bestow upon him—a face as smutty as their own. It is the Plumbago Gang at its favorite amusement.

Again you might see a harmless, but dirty looking crowd of boys playing in the sand and clay. They are not making mud pies, but are moulding. But don't step inside the door, for they are not as harmless as they look, you may come out a changed man.

If some day you smell something burning and hasten to discover its origin, you may find these self same imps looking more fiendish than ever in the smoke and glare from the moulten iron which they are pouring here and there. They are not pouring that iron in holes to drown out Gophers. They are casting.

If you happen around some weeks later, you will find these very Plumbagos in a perfect shower of sparks making merry music on the anvils of the forge room. Their appearance has not improved, for with the onward march of time the infinitessimal increments of dirt which accummulates in an infinitessimal amount of time having been integrated between limits o and 1 year has become infinity, and there being no decrement produced by the application of water, the result remains infinity.

Perhaps you do not believe there is such a strange gang in this University, but if you will any day step into the basement of the Mechanic Arts Building, you will see them for yourself amongst the revolving machinery there. They are not watching the wheels go around as they appear to be, but they will inform you they are doing machine work.

A Charm.

O, there lived a fine ol' farmer in the country.
Scroggit!
Moved to Minneapolis
To educate his progeny.
On Bridge-Square lost his self one day,
O, pitiable pity!
Always do this when you're lost in the city—
Shut your eyes,
Think thirteen lies.
Say, "Grover, Graveyard, Guido, Greece,"
Heel it to the corner and ask a police,
An' if he knows he'll teel ye!
Scroggit!

Behind the Scenes.

EDDY—"I've got a sensation to spring this afternoon"—

PEN—Taking his seat on the table and rapping vigorously wtth his big blue pencil shouts, "It is quarter of three, and this meeting was called at two o'clock. If you people will keep still we'll go ahead. There's only eight here, but '——'" his voice is lost in the general hub-bub.

Raps again and shouts, "Now we've got to decide on the cover of this book."

GRACE—"I think we want it in linen natural color."

MILT—"No, I think it ought to be in the class colors."

ALICE W.—"Or on buckram in the natural color."

GRACE—"But have it in linen, not buckram."

PEN—"I'll go down and get some samples of books from the bookstore."

EDDY—"I'll go too."

(Are gone 15 minutes.)

Return with half dozen books.

EDDY—"There that yellow book is swell!"

PEN—"Well, somebody make a motion!"

GRACE—"Move we have linen in natural color."

PEN—Seconded? Those in favor? One. Contrary? Five.

ALICE W.—Move we have buckram in natural color.

PEN—Those in favor? One. Contrary? Four.

MILT—Move we have it in class colors, Lincoln green and gold, in buckram.

PEN—Those in favor? Two. Contrary? Five,

EDDY—"Move we have it in yellow, like that little book."

PEN—Those in favor? One. Contrary? Five.

"Now see here you've got to decide on something." Hempstead rising and addressing the chair. "Mr. Chairman, I move we have the book bound in the class colors, Lincoln green and gold.

KEYES—Second the motion.

PEN—Those in favor? Five. Contrary? Two.

"Move we have it bound in buckram."

PEN—Those in favor? Six. Contrary? One.

ENTER JONES—He is greeted with the news and emphatically expresses his disapproval.

PEN—Rapping. Well, we must go on. Jones, you keep still! "We'ell have the chronicle read."

It is read and accepted down to February 21. "Clive Hastings walks home from the Junior ball and asks Jessie L—— if he may call her by her first name."

CHORUS—Oh, no! we don't want that in—that's mean.

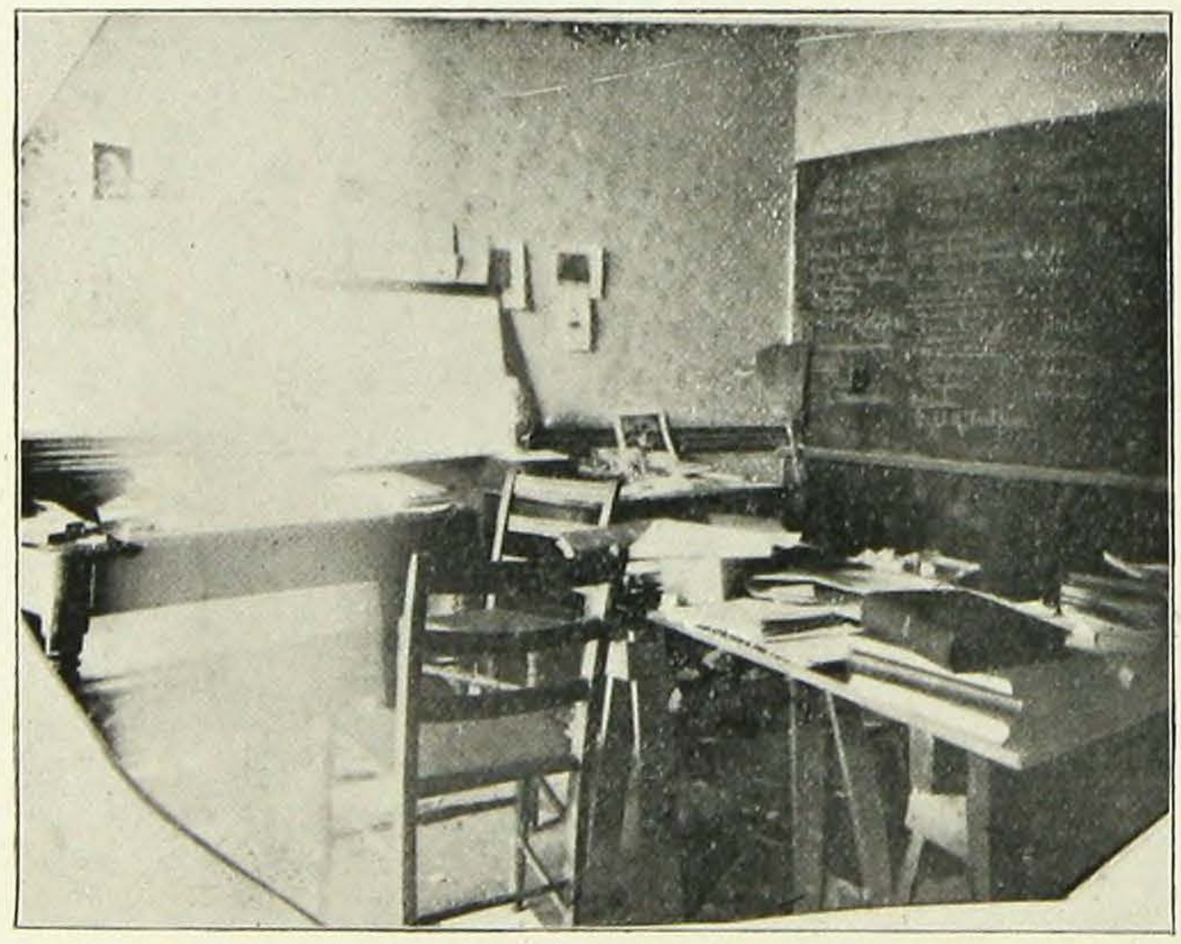

"All right, we'll strike that out."

GRACE—Now, Mr. Barton, give us your sensation.

EDDY—"Well, I think we know each other pretty well, and we call each other Miss and Mr., and I think we'd better agree that everybody shall be addressed by his or her first name or nick name. What do you think?"

CHORUS—"Good thing." Splendid, fine.

Move we adjourn.

Book Reviews.

Some of the best of the recent works sent to the Board of Editors are :

"THROUGH GREECE ON HORSEBACK" by P. A. Higbee, D.Ph.

Written in the writers usual fresh style and interpersed throughout by short quotations of humor from the noted humorist, Prof. Hutchinson. This is not the author's first attempt at horse riding.

"TEN NIGHTS IN A 14TH AVE. POOL ROOM," by Roy Wyman.

Soon to be dramatized and sent on the road. Mr. W. is an expert "stayer" as the title indicates. The "Ten Cents a Corner" game is well described. (Bound á la 10 cent library. Price, 10 cents. Special rates to S. S. Schools and Y. M. C. A. ; all dealers.

"PHYSIOLOGY," by A W. Caldwell.

Contains besides a description of the human body, a chapter on special diseases and their treatment. The treatment of "Magnum Caput" is especially well prescribed. This book is given away as there are a great many cases of the disease in the University of Minnesota ; at the book store.

After The Ball.

DR. FOLWELL.—"Good morning."

WEST.—"There are but a few minutes left I see, I will occupy the remaining time. (Sounds of watch cases snapping in the back row), with a few remarks well worth your attention. There is a book, not in the library, but which you may easily obtain by going down to St. Paul——"

MCMILLAN.—Its raining pretty hard outside. You couldn't get away anyway, so I'll just keep on quizzing that back row."

GALE.—W—e-e-e—l-l. We'll go on with this to-morrow.

MCDONGAL.—The door slams. He has disappeared.

ANDRIST.—"Cela suffit."

MCLEAN.—"I see the houah has expiahed."

SMITH.—Disappears behind that smile.

HOAG.—"You may take twenty-one pages in advance in Johnson's Surveying, hand in that special problem I gave you, finish up that map and hand in your field books with the work all up to date to-morrow. We will now go into the field and put in the rest of the afternoon."

"WADDY."—"That will do for to-day, gentlemen."

"JONSEY."—"I presume there are none in this class who have anything next hour, so we will continue our lesson."

FRANKFORTER—Makes a dancing school bow. (180 degrees.)

EDDY.—Take ten pages in advance.

SANFORD.—"Oh! Is the time up? Well, I'll I detain you a few minutes longer."

HUTCHY.—"Well," (clears his throat and talk fifteen minutes longer.

WELLS.—"I do hope some of you will do some reading before next time."

FIRST SERGEANT. Port Arms! 'smissed!

Lampoons.

PREXY—"The GOPHER shall not be used as a means for lampooning the faculty." "The class-room shall not be used as a means for lampooning the students."

PREXY—The GOPHER Board spends four months doing what they might do in forty-eight hours."

DUTCHY (being introduced to Towler)—"You're not so gut-looking as your sister."

MCLEAN (to Miss F.)—"Have I ever told you how much you resemble John Milton?"

MCLEAN (to Mary Mort)—"You know you always reminded me of my cousin Mary."

PROF. HOAG (to Junior Civils)—"What you got here, a midway plaisance?"

MISS SANFORD—"You make a good debater, M. Anderson, you always keep your head on the floor."

MR. GALE (at the beginning of an exam.)—"Well I hope you've seated yourselves so that those who know a great deal about the subject are next to those who don't."

PROF. MACLEAN—"You are not preserving your sequences in your course, I see, Mr. Matteson, but are going on the old hop-skip method."

MATTESON—"We have to hop and skip when we can get a chance."

MACLEAN—"Especially skip—fancy."

MACLEAN—"Mr. Hime has a map of Hell which the class may make use of later."

Mr. Gale is much absorbed in illustrating the effect of tones on his cello. Finlayson (not absorbed), seated by the radiator, picks up a kazoo and amuses his near neighbors by playing softly. Mr. Gale, finally disturbed by the steam from the radiator, says carelessly, "Will some one please shut off that fizzing apparatus in the corner over there?"

Somebody shuts off the valve and Finlayson does not attend Psychology for a week."

Gems from Special Topics.

MISS CROSBY—"It is supposed that the execution of Charles I. undoubtedly hastened his death."

MISS BUEHLER—"One time a number of Tories were taken out and hung before the British men of war, and of course that was very insulting to them."

MCDERMOTT (describing decoration on Greek vases)—"The animals are entirely of oriental origin, and some of them are Greek gods."

In Archaeology.

DALRYMPLE—"Ribbed ware is common in the upper part of the strata. Skeletons are found in great numbers."

HIGBEE—"Patriotism is a sacred charge handed down to us from posterity."

CASE—"The rest of the monasteries were fisticated in submitting."

What we are Paid to Tell.

That Agnes Belden's hair is naturally curly.
That Mr. Pickett is engaged.
That Miss Walker's intellect sweeps the sky.
That Clark Hempstead can sing.
That Roy Clark didn't check Miss J.'s name for Senior party.
That Harry Castle never cribs.
That a Freshman girl wears Hamilton Lawrence's picture in her locket.
That the Faculty won't stand lampoons.
That Belle Austin didn't get under mistletoe on purpose at Senior party.

What we are Paid Not to Tell.

Why Rob. Hanney changed his course to the Let.
That Miss Sargents calls the boys "dear."
That Miss Lawrence is trying for the position of drummajoress.
That Esli Lutton hired a man to take a girl to the Junior Ball.
That attractions of Stillwater for Mr. Baldy are stronger than those of the brewery.
Why Prof. Smith's lectures didn't burn.
That Miss V. Cleve takes her callers to ride in her small brother's express wagon.
That Ham Lawrence ties the neckties for the Phi Psi boys.
That Jim Evans has five friends who will pay a quarter to see him dance.
Billy Mitchell is only nineteen.
Pendergast ditto.
Which GOPHER girl wanted the brewery ad. taken out in trade.
How Zintheo got thro' his mechanics.
What Prof. Jones said when furnace door fell on him.
Alice Walker got a box of candy labelled—To one I love.
That Mr. Gale never heard "Sweet Marie" or "After the Ball."
That Mr. Murfin is taking Cæsar in the High School.

14th Avenue.

Breaks.

Miss Trennt—"I always look on Mr. M-of-n as very young, but I suppose he is older than I am.

Mr. Stewart—"Oh no! he is really quite young."

* * * *

Jones, expatiating on the advantages of life on the prairies—"Why, you can see a train three miles off when it is going perpendicularly."

* * * *

Mr. Evans calls on Miss B———n. The maid forgets the name in announcing him.
Miss B———n—"Who is it?"
Maid—"I don't know, but I guess it is your fellow."

* * * *

Mr. Woodbridge—"How do you explain the association of the two ideas in the judgment 'The day is bright.'"
Mr. Day—"Well you can't think of day without having the idea of brightness."

* * * *

Hilferty, looking at the row of bicycles in front of Main Building—"Those bicycles make the institution look like a wheel factory."
Wilson—"Aint that what it is?"

* * * *

Prof. McLean after Jack Dalrymple has been reciting at great length.
"Well we must get to work. It won't do to dally so much.
Mc. D ——— "The endogenous plant is one that grows from the end."

* * * *

In front of library building—"Is that figure meant for science?"
"It must be science for it surely isn't art."

* * * *

MacLean—"Can any one name another lyric similar to this?"
Morley—"Sweet Marie."

* * * *

Miss Robbins finds the electric bell out of order and puts up a sign, "Please rapp."
Neighbor, calling shortly after—Pardon me, Miss Robbins, but have you spelled that just right?"
Miss R.—"How stupid!" Changes it to "Please Wrapp."

* * * *

Anne Hawley, to neighbor—"Did you ever see anybody with such red hair as Brother Steve?"
Neighbor, icily—"I beg your pardon."
A. H., recognizing her neighbor—"I was just saying what pretty red hair your brother had."

B. AUSTON, in class meeting—As for the becomingness of cap and gown to the men. I don't see how they could look any worse.

* * * *

MISS BR-CK-NREGE, translating Latin—"Celo means. 'Keep in the dark,' you translated it 'confuse.'"

MISS PL-MM-R—"Well, if you are in the dark you are confused, arn't you?"
MISS B., promptly—"Not at all."

* * * *

MISS B-K-R- TO MR. M-RT-N, at Sophomore Party—"What course do you take?"
MR. GREAMILY—"Miss Langmaid."

* * * *

SENIOR GIRL who did't get kissed at Bishop's party—"This is the last class party I'm going to attend?"

* * * *

MISS ROBBINS TO HAWLEY—who objects to having a snap shot taken. "Oh, but really your face won't show, Mr. Hawley!"

* * * *

MR. GALE—"Some people like beer because of its bitter taste."
E. JOHNSON—"Why, it doesn't taste bitter to me!"

* * * *

PROF. KIEHLE—"Now, when you go home, I want you to sit down carefully and copy these notes."

* * * *

MISS COSGROVE TO LIBRARIAN—"I want Gœthe's autobiography, but I don't know who wrote it."

* * * *

MR. ANDRIST (in French)—"The cow mewed."

* * * *

PROF. NACHTRIEB—Miss M—— is a camel, a mammal."
After much deliberation—"Well, it's got a backbone."

* * * *

MISS SANFORD—"Does any one know what was the nationality of Patrick Henry's mother?"
MR. BALDY—"She was a widow, I believe."

* * * *

MISS H-WL-Y (in biology quiz)—"Biology is the science of two-legged animals."

* * * *

N—CHTR-B—"What do you understand by the endo-skeleton?"
RONNING—"I supposed it meant the bones in the tail."

* * * *

MISS PL—MM—R—"Vereor ne longior fuerimus."
"I fear that I shall never be longer."

* * * *

MR. SM—TH—"What is the meaning of teleology?"
MISS E—SY—"Taileology means science of the end."

ANOTHER YEAR

Will, we hope, mark another advance in the usefulness of the University Book Store. It will probably be located in Dr. Folwells old lecture room and will have charge of the University Post Office. It is hoped that students will no longer be troubled with loss of mail.

New books of value will be received as soon as published and Faculty and students may have an opportunity for examining them before ordering. We shall call the attention of those interested in particular lines of study to new books, reviews, and magazine articles on their subject.

It is the purpose of the University Book Store to increase its sphere of usefulness in a number of ways to be determined before September next.

BOOK STORE.

Practical Lessons
in Hypnotism

THE time has come which we have been predicting for some years: The era of lower prices for high-grade wheels. The time when the people are to get fuller value for their money. Lovell Diamond Bicycles were the first really high-grade wheels that were sold at a reasonable price. For years their sale has increased by such leaps and bounds, and they have proved such a thorn in the side of the "high price" manufacturers, that finally the high price people have had to come down to Lovell prices.

The people would not buy high price high-grade wheels when they could get Lovell Diamonds, which are also high-grade wheels for less money.

So this year most high-grade wheels are being sold at Lovell Diamond prices.

It is a great victory for the people. It is a great victory for Lovell Diamond Bicycles. It proves that Lovell Diamonds must be good wheels, or they would not be worth competing with.

For a long time it has been the cry that a good high-grade wheel could not be manufactured for less than $150. Now, it seems, it can be done; but why now, 1895, and not before?

Because every year only proved more clearly that the high price policy couldn't last. The people were getting to know better. Lovell Diamonds were teaching them.

This year Lovell Diamonds will have a larger sale than ever. The policy of their makers has been vindicated. They are high grade wheels of superior construction They will be sold this year lower than before.

Lovell Diamonds will be much improved this year, over last. Some of the principal improvements will be:— A higher barrel Crank Shaft; narrower Tread; improved Ball Bearings; stronger and lighter Spokes; interchangeable Pedals; improved Wheel Base; new style Handle Bars, and a larger size steel Tubing for the Frame.

Lovell Diamonds have always proved themselves specially good wheels. They have always been exceedingly strong and durable.

They are manufactured with the greatest care, and under the direction of the highest grade of mechanical talent. The factory is one of largest and most perfect in the world.

Lovell Diamonds have always "stood up" well in actual use. Last year was no exception, and their reputation has been well maintained on the road and on the track.

This year they will do better than ever. They are very light weight; and yet great strength and perfectness of manufacture will make them for 1895, as they have been in former years, one of the principal favorites, if not the favorite of the season.

When Buying Law Books

Now or Hereafter,
For School or for Practice,

Remember that the West Publishing Company carries a complete stock:

Text-Books.

We carry a complete stock of standard Text-Books, and ourselves publish a large line, including the Hornbook Series, the works of H. Campbell Black, and other important books on live subjects. This list we are constantly increasing. Catalogue and circulars on application.

☞ We will willingly make suggestions as to the best selection of text-books in starting a library.

Reports.

We publish the National Reporter System, which has taken the place of State Reports in popular use and estimation. Every lawyer must have the Reporter for his own state, and he finds it to his advantage to have the entire System.

☞ We will send on request sample copies of any Reporter, and explain the theory of this "revolution in law reports."

Digests.

In a small library, well-selected Digests play an important part. They give in condensed and accessible form the contents of entire libraries of Reports. The U. S. Digest and the American Digest, for instance, cover all reported American case-law from the earliest time to the present.

☞ These two sets are sold together at prices and terms that put them within reach of any young lawyer, and a better beginning for a library cannot be made.

Second-Hand Books.

We have a large stock of second-hand law books, among which are many bargains. Bi-weekly lists will be mailed free to any address.

For information more in detail, write direct to

WEST PUBLISHING CO., St. Paul, Minn.
