GOODNOW HONORED

The U. S. Consul General at Shanghai, China, a Graduate of '79, Banqueted

Two hundred prominent men of the state came together at the West Hotel Tuesday night to do honor to a man who, as consul general of the United States, has not only, in the last four years, won glory for himself by his strict attention to his work and by his rare diplomacy in matters of state, but who has made the country which he serves looked up to in China, and who has made the consulate service of the United States stand for far more than it did before John Goodnow, a University graduate of the class of '79, went to his post in Shanghai. There were present at the banquet, given in his honor, the President of the University, a governor and an ex-governor of the state, a mayor and two ex-mayors of Minneapolis, the speaker of the state House of Representatives, and many other noted guests, while regrets were read from such men as Secretary of State John Hay, Wu Ting Fang, Chinese minister at Washington, and A. A. Adee, Assistant Secretary of State.

Among those responding to toasts were Mayor Ames, Gov. Van Sant, A. H. Hall, Sam'l Hill, Rev. J. S. Montgomery, Speaker Dowling, James Gray, besides the guest of honor and our own President Northrop. Judge Simpson was toastmaster and served very happily.

The response of Mr. Goodnow, on account of his intimate knowledge of Chinese affairs, is very interesting, and that of President Northrop is of interest to all, hence the DAILY prints both as they are found in yesterday morning's Times.

Judge Simpson then arose to introduce "The Guest." He had no sooner indicated his design than 199 other men jumped to their feet, waved their napkins and cheered the consul general to China. "Our International Status" was Mr. Goodnow's topic. Mr. Goodnow said he would be less than a man if he were not overwhelmed by a gathering like this. "I'm a Minneapolis man and I owe my education to Minneapolis, the public schools and to your institution, sir, (to Dr. Northrop) and if I know anything about politics I learned it rubbing up against your folks here." (Laughter.)

Mr. Goodnow said it was the business of the statesmen of this country to study the affairs of the world. Things don't happen by chance. The crisis of the present was the greatest since the Mohammedans were driven back out of Europe. There had been a constant knocking on the wall of China for fifty years. All the wars of these fifty years had culminated in the Japanese war which had resulted in the advancement of the middle classes of China. At this time came the crisis of the world's history. All European nations were seeking new homes for their people.

To show how youthful our people are by comparison, Mr. Goodnow instanced the case of a Chinese who lived in the same house his lineal ancestors had inhabited for 2,500 years!

"The first thing the Spanish war did was to throw us into Manila," declared Mr. Goodnow. "What did that do for us? It gave us great prestige. The Chinese thought we were a nation of shopkeepers and couldn't fight. They predicted that when the first Spanish gunboat sailed up into New York harbor and threw a shell into the city we would cry 'Please don't shoot again' and surrender. When they saw what happened the change was marvelous. They took off their hats to us. They believed our portholes were too high and that a well directed shot would dislodge our guns and keel over our ships. But after Dewey had concluded that little controversy in Manila bay they acknowledged their mistake and saluted us."

Attitude of the Chinese.

Mr. Goodnow then spoke of the attitude of the Chinese towards the United States.

"After the victory in Manila bay," said Mr. Goodnow, "we were in better favor with the Chinese than any other nation and I think we are today. (Applause.)

"The schools of western learning in China are American and missionary. The Chinese know that our people have treated them fairly, and today no people stand with the Chinese as the Americans do.

"Then came the sudden, quick outbreak of the Chinese, based on hunger. Fortunately we had our ships and troops in Manila, and the best fighters were the American troops." (Prolonged applause.)

American Influence in China.

Mr. Goodnow spoke with enthusiasm of the educational influences that America had exerted in the celestial empire. He paid a heartfelt tribute to the zeal and self-abnegation of the missionaries. He testified to the effective influence being exercised by American educational institutions. He cited the instance of a Chinese nobleman who had contributed munificently to such institutions, and dwelt briefly, but most impressively, upon the loyalty of the converted Chinese.

"I used to believe," said Mr. Goodnow, "that no adult Chinese could be converted to Christianity, but I changed my opinion when I saw many of them bend their heads to the executioner's sword because they would not renounce Christ for Confucius."

In conclusion Mr. Goodnow suggested a new thought. He said that the oldest civilization which originated in the east and spread westward, had after many cycles, been overtaken by the newest civilization, which had its birth in America. The two had at last met on common ground in China, with the newest paramount. The result was bound to benefit humanity.

"We've got a higher mission than simply the mission of trade," declared Mr. Goodnow. "The door is open to our ideas. Their old civilization is to have the benefit of our new civilization."

Mr. Goodnow believed that the nation would be remiss in its duty unless it treated the Chinese with kindness, courtesy and forbearance, and endeavored to fuse the civilization.

Dr. Northrop's Compliment.

President Cyrus Northrop of the university responded briefly to the toast, "Successful Diplomacy." Mr. Goodnow's address evidently furnished Dr. Northrop with an inspiration extraneous to the toast itself, for the president of the university paid the consul general a compliment beyond any uttered last evening. After congratulating him upon his sagacious administration of the responsible duties of his office, Dr. Northrop extolled him for the tribute he had paid to the American schools and missionaries in China.

President Northrop said he was glad there was something better than diplomacy. He honored Mr. Goodnow far more in consequence of the "grand speech he had made." He had not lived in China in vain. He had learned much living in a time of revolutions. He had

THE FIRST DEBATE

Minervas and Castilians Debate
Tonight—First of the Inter-
Society Contests.

Tonight at 8 o'clock in chapel occurs the first of the inter-literary society debating contests for the year 1901. The contesting societies will be the Minervas, the young women's society, and the Castilians, one of the older men's societies. The young women who will uphold the Minerva's banner will be Julia McDonough, '02, Anna Purcelle '03, and Irene McKeehan '03; while Castalian's standard bearers will be Wildey, '03, Norton, '03, and Valerius, '02.

The question to be debated is, Resolved: That there should be an educational qualification for immigrants. The question is a live one, the contending debaters are prominent in University life, and the "man against woman" strife will all contribute to make the debate exceedingly interesting.

J. A. Burger will preside, and Miss Crafts, Professor Jones and Judge Hickman will act as judges. No admission is charged and all students and friends are invited.

Friday night the Hermean society meets the Kent, and Saturday night the Forums meet the Law Literary.

ENGINEERING BULLETIN

The Engineering Bulletin which is to be published soon, will contain a number of changes which will be of interest to all the students of the Engineering College.

Among the changes are to be noted an increase in shop work in the Freshman year and the omission of all shop work after the first term of the Junior year. This will permit the introduction of additional work in "Dynamo and Motors" which will be given to the Junior Mechanical and Electrical engineers during the second term of the Junior year.

The course in Physics will run continuously until the end of the Junior year. "Pumping Machinery" has been added to the third term, Junior year in Mechanics, which will be known hereafter as "Hydraulics." Machine Design" is introduced into the Civil course and "Stresses in Frame Structures" alternates with the work in "Industrial Electricity" for students in Mechanical Engineering. "Political Science" is a required subject for the Senior year and a course in "Contracts and Specifications" will be given to all the engineering students during the third term of the Senior year.

All the courses have been materially strengthened by the character and scope of the work and it is believed that the courses as now arranged, are equal to any in the country.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the faculty and students of the University and to friends for their aid and sympathy tendered us during our late bereavement. Charles E. Daly and family.

Inter-Society Debates

The inter-society debating contests begin tonight with the Minerva-Castalian debate. Unlike previous years the preliminaries are crowded into one week, and a large attendance of the students is hardly to be expected for all of them, but the DAILY would urge as many to attend each debate as possibly can do so. Of all the debates held during the University year, these are watched with the greatest interest inasmuch as the societies and men contesting are all local and well known and the spirit of rivalry between the societies is so keen that the contests are really good debates. The rivalry this year is augmented by the fact that there is a silver cup, the gift of Jacobs & Co., down town jewelers, awaiting the winner.

The debate tonight is of peculiar interest because it is between the young women and the young men. Minerva has such an envious record in these contests that any society opposing her representatives may well fear for the result, hence the preparation made by the Castalian debaters has been great, and the contest gives every promise of being the best of the three to be held this week.

The contests, commencing at eight o'clock, are through shortly after nine, hence little time is taken, and an exceedingly interesting hour is spent. It is sincerely to be hoped that the students in large numbers will avail themselves of hearing these sharp, lively debates, and by so doing encourage the debaters in their immediate effort and in efforts which they may be induced by that encouragement to make for the University in succeeding years.

MORE ATTRACTIVE COURSES

A comparison of the old and new bulletins of the College of S. L. and A., brings to light several new courses to be offered the coming year, which were not mentioned in yesterday's DAILY.

Prof. Burton will offer in the first term a course in modern English poetry, a study of Keats, Shelly, Wordsworth, Browning, Tennyson and Swinburne; and in the third term a course in modern English prose, a study of the present literary vernacular in the best examples.

In the Department of History the following new courses are to be noted, viz: "The History of European Diplomacy, 1814-1878" by Prof. Anderson; "Colonial Expansion and System of Administration" and "A History of the Philosophy of History," by Prof. West.

In Philosophy, Prof. Wilde will offer a course in "The History of Ethics."

In the Department of Political Science, note the following courses; Prof. McVey offers courses in "Corporation Finance" and "Commercial History and Commercial Documents," as a starter towards the School of Commerce which it is hoped can soon be a reality. Dr. Folwell offers a course in "Taxation" to alternate the year after with a course in "Finance," and a course in "Transportation," to alternate in 1902-3 with a course in "Tariff History and Policy."

In Politics, Dr. Schaper, the new professor, will offer the following Junior and Senior subjects, viz: "Science of State," "Science of Government," "Elements of Jurisprudence," "Constitution and Government of U. S.," "State Constitutions and Government," and "City Charters and Government."

CHORAL SOCIETY MEETS

The University choral society held its first regular meeting in chapel yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. The election of officers took place first and the following were chosen: President, Dr. Frankforter; vice-president, Miss Huntley; secretary, Miss Marion Jones; treasurer, Mr. W. E. Moyer; librarian, Miss Edith Jones. The president will choose students to act with the present executive committee; and the committee of five chosen at the last meeting was authorized to co-operate with the executive committee to select a musical director.

A few of the hymns which are supposed to be sung in chapel were practised, and the president expressed his desire for all the members to sit up in front in chapel during the exercises. The next meeting will be held next Wednesday at 4 o'clock and it is expected that the director will be there.

CENTRAL'S TRIALS

The Central High School athletes will hold their track meet preliminary to the Inter-scholastic, on Saturday afternoon of this week at the University Armory. Great interest is manifest in this event at the High, and inasmuch as the winners will have as a reward for their efforts not only the chance to compete in the Inter-scholastic, but will also be given prizes, the contestants are training hard.

It is understood that a small sum will be charged for admission to cover the slight expense incurred.

Indiana, for the first time in four years, wins the annual debate with Illinois.

come back from an experience with that old, old civilization of China, with a magnificent tribute to the heroism and bravery of the American soldier and missionary, and that great tribute to America whose mission is more than to sell cotton, or wheat or iron. That was sublime. It touched every American to the depths of his heart. A nation that lives only for itself is a mean nation. Dr. Northrop believed that the providence of God had put the Philippines under American protection to rouse her from any selfish apathy, and inspire her with a sense of her duty to the other nations of the world.

President Northrop closed with an earnest peroration that moved his entire audience to rise and cheer him and the consul general.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING.

The program committee for the Engineers Society has been very fortunate in getting the promise of a lecture from Prof. A. A. Veblen who occupies the chair in physics at the State University of Iowa. The lecture will be an illustrated one and its subject will be "Ancient Ship building in Northern Europe." Friday Feb. 8th at 2 p. m. is the date set for the event.

Mr. Tate, instructor in pattern work, has been unable to meet his classes for the last few days on account of sickness.

The Senior class in electrical engineering has commenced some of the experimental work in Photometry.

The Senior Electricals began their work in Street Railways yesterday. The course promises to be very interesting as well as valuable.

C. C. Higgins, Mechanical Engineer 1000, now employed by the C. B. & Q. at Aurora, Ill., visited the "U" Tuesday to consult about a new dynamometer for his road. The car will be similar to that being built by the Soo which was designed by the mechanical engineering department. This latter machine will be used in connection with railroad work at the "U."

COLLEGE OF LAW.

Ernest Laycock, law special, who has been with the Deering Harvesting Co. the last eight months, called on the Dean Wednesday. After a trip to his home in Boston, Mass., Mr. Laycock expects to enter the law school to finish his studies.

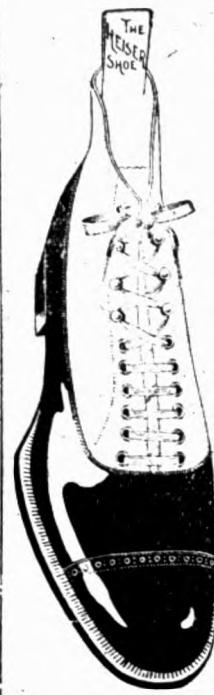

The committee in charge of the Senior banquet would be saved much time and trouble if everyone who intends to attend the banquet would deposit with a member of the committee the required amount decided upon so they may know soon what bargain to make in behalf of the class. As this is the only social function this class has ever had, let it be carried out properly.

Our basketball team got it "in the neck" Tuesday and it was well thus—for it seems the fellows relied upon their reputation to win. Any team which thinks it can beat the freshman team through its reputation will get fooled likewise.

Notice.

The freshman committee on mottoes desires that any member of the class who has any suggestions to offer for a class motto put them in P. O. box 56.
