DULUTH--UdD is one of 15 U. S. campuses selected for a study of student responsibility sparked by the second report of the President's committee on education beyond the high school.

Richard Miller, Duluth, UdD student commission president, has received word of UdD's selection from the U. S. National Student association.

"The President's committee points out needs in higher education in which the USNSA sees an opportunity for college students themselves to help," Miller said.

"We are proud that the Duluth campus has been chosen." He said the present UdD program and form of student government were factors in the Duluth Campus' choice among 60 prospective colleges.

UdD provost R. W. Darland termed UdD's selection "a significant new evidence that UdD is achieving national recognition not only for its excellent facilities but for its program.

Miller has appointed Herbert Wetherby Daytona Beach, Fla., to direct the 10-month study of UdD student government and its relations with the campus and the community.

Wetherby, a sophomore majoring in business and economics, was an outstanding student leader in student government, extra-curricular activities and religious club work at Mainland high school, Daytona Beach.

He also attended the University of Florida at Gainesville for a year and was active there.

Wetherby left yesterday for Philadelphia to attend a weekend conference of coordinators of the 15 campus studies and two regional studies involved.

He will attend a workshop on student responsibility this summer at Ohio Wesleyan, Delaware, O., sponsored by USNSA.

Involved in the nationwide study are:

An analysis of the present status of student responsibility.

Recommendations on how relationships involving student responsibility can be improved, and how the recommendations can be put into effect.

Related problems include:

The teacher shortage and the need to encourage and prepare more teachers for high school as well as higher education.

Raising the level of public opinion on American education.

Communication between students and faculty.

Course evaluation and curriculum improvement, in cooperation with administrative and faculty representatives.

Orientation of new college students to campus life and introduction of high school students to the demands of campus life.

Wider community understanding of and identification with the problems of higher education and campus activity.

A $25,000 grant from the Ford Foundation will finance the USNSA project. Miller said the UMD study will receive a small portion of the grant to finance some of the Duluth work.

St. Mary's college at Winona, a Catholic college, is the only other campus in the Minnesota-Dakotas USNSA region chosen for the study.

UMD student leaders are prominently identified with regional and national NSA bodies.

James Banovetz, Duluth, is chairman of the Minnesota-Dakotas region and member of the national executive committee. Banovetz and Miller are on the regional executive board.

Gilbert Sidney, Galveston, Tex., is regional vice president of international affairs.

Miller has served as head of the NSA's national congress of student body presidents, chairman of the NSA sub-commission on student unions and member of other national advisory units.

He is now preparing an analysis of relationships between student governments and student unions, or activity centers.
