ORDERS FOR BOOKS

Changes in the interest of more prompt service are being made in the order routine of the University library. The library committee has made a tentative allotment to each department. Orders for books up to the limit of the allotment will be put through without delay, if approved by the deans of department heads.

To credit these to the right allotments, it is necessary that each order must be approved by the dean or department head or by their designated representatives. Much delay will be avoided if all faculty members will have their orders, so approved before sending them to the order department of the library. It will also help the order department if orders are submitted on the regular order slips. These will be supplied to any department on application. Catalogs, circulars, etc., in which the books are noted, should always be checked and sent to the order department with the orders.

F. K. Walter, Librarian
