'U' Students Capture Burglar

Miscreant Caught Stealing Tools Chased Several Blocks Before Being Captured.

The contractors on the new chemistry building were saved from financial ruin last night when three university students captured a burglar in the act of stealing tools. The robber was discovered and routed by the watchman, who gave chase. After pursuing him for several blocks down the Northern Pacific tracks, they were joined by Ben Gallagher, Al Hodapp and Clarence Snow, three University students. Through the engineering ability of Gallagher and the able assistance of his two companions the miscreant was caught and overpowered near the Engine House on University Avenue and Oak Streets and turned over to the proper authorities.

There had been noted about the building for some time, and several hundred dollars worth of tools had already been lost, according to the contractors.

Mens' Union Board Adopts Novel Plan To Enlarge Building Fund

All Men of University Are Being Asked To Contribute Refund of Deposit Fee Toward New Building—First Bulletin Hung Yesterday in Post Office.

Posters Bearing "What Are You Going to Do With Your Refund?" Will Appear on Campus This Morning—More than $2,000 Expected From Campaign.

The last and biggest gun has been fired! Over $400 was received in eight hours yesterday, for the Men's Union fund, and $2,000 more is expected when the movement overpreads the whole campus. After considering the plan for several days, the Board of Governors' committee of twenty, decided upon yesterday as the psychological moment, and bulletins were hung in the men's post office, which inside of six hours bore the signatures of nearly two hundred men who agreed to contribute the refund from their general deposit fee. With the refunds averaging from $2.00 to $2.50 at least a thousand signatures should be obtained and it is hoped that the present campaign will even eclipse the one just closed.

The whole campus was struck with the novelty and effectiveness of the scheme, and it quickly resolved into a student-wide movement, being taken up the most enthusiastically of anything on the campus this year. The further success depends upon every man signing the bulletin, thereby donating his refund, which individually means very little to him, but collectively amounts to thousands toward the new building.

Posters will appear this morning bearing the question "WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO WITH YOUR REFUND?" and others with the word REFUND in starting letters to remind those who have not already affixed their signatures.

AN IMPOSSIBLE STANDARD.

The criticism of the last issue of the Minnesota Magazine, a portion of which appeared in the columns of the Daily yesterday and is completed today, attained an eminence of candor seldom rivaled by the usual cleverly written, half playful, half serious criticisms that have greeted the monthly appearance of the Magazine in times past. The unusual tone, the unde-niable frankness, were qualities in the article calculated to command respect but not to carry entire conviction as to the subject matter with which they deal.

We are inclined to believe that the present critic has set up a standard for a college magazine, that is both theoretically and practically impossible of attainment. He takes the function of such an organ more seriously than the limited time at the disposal of the average undergraduate under our present system will permit the latter to conceive of, or his immature nature finds possible of forcing itself to accept. The fact is that the writer of twenty-one summers in the average University whose relation to matters intellectual is unfortunate often merely incidental, especially at a co-educational institution, is very seldom stirred to such depths by literary men that they are constrained to write "through sheer impulse of the personal surge of such men" upon them.
 Practically, the contributors to a college magazine are not aroused to the point of literary effort by the same emotion that produced Spenserian lyrics or Shakespearean sonnets. The critic does not say that the work of undergraduates should be judged by comparison with the masters but he intimates that they lack the ground work on which these men built and to that extent are open to criticism. For example he refers to three contributors who "are not grounded enough in literature and history, as much as they should be at their age and undergradauate status." Yet the Minnesota student who is acquainted with the three individuals referred to are inclined to feel that if these persons are not up to the standard to be expected of persons of their age and status that the average student (for these admittedly stand high) is well nigh hopelessly below it.

 It may be practicable to hold forth such a standard, undoubtedly it is a splendid goal toward which to work; but it is questionable whether such a standard if rigidly enforced would leave any material on which a college magazine might flourish. Untempered criticism will probably benefit the writers themselves, but the magazine is a delicate plant, it needs a little of the water of encouragement for its best development.

DR. WILKIE COLLINS
 CRITICISES "MAG"
 AS VERY MEDIOCRE

Continued from Yesterday's Daily.
 Miss Frisch has a well-joined array of statements on the modern view of history as a science. She claims a little too much for it in efficiency, and a little too much for it as only of the last fifty years. There are exceptions to be made both ways and the essay lacks ripeness and true historical perspective in the failure to make these allowances. The economical historian of the very modern school is as justly suspected in "the overwhelming significance" he finds in his point of view as the older historian who was stirred by the passionate and the dramatic.
 Of Miss Mae Moody's "The Brute" the only thing to say is that it falls because she doesn't know at all how to manage the emotions of her readers—so much more important than managing the characters simply—because her newsboys letters are often false phraseology, and because she has no skill in drawing her main character if—as I took it—she meant to squeeze some pathos out of this end. The sketch, "One thing Thou"

...is a good piece of common narrative, doing what it sets out to do, even if the way the rough missionary produced the effect at the end is left a little uncertain. Miss Chesnut, who wrote it, would have done well to have set forth the conversation the invalid's friend who had failed her overheard. Ralph Underwood in his paragraph sketch "A Student" is doing the right thing—studying human description in the "life-class" of those about him, not out of books.

His insignificant little contribution leads to the real reason of the quarrelsomeness with which I opened. How useless to say such things if they are not to be used as a text, to the making of a point. Here is this intensely interesting Northwestern City and district, with striking, definitely picturesque, though perhaps not lovely, views than in any other city I know; here is the Mississippi river just outside Minneapolis and around St. Paul lovely as anything in the world, and with constantly changing aspects; here is a mixture of nationalities, with Scandinavian elements dominant but others assertive, a tremendous jumble of individual and racial codes; here is the old generation of lumbermen just passing, still to be reached and understood; here is a great drifting population of crime and vagabondage using the city as a nucleus; up at Duluth is the beginning of the Great Lakes; and lying thereabouts are still the forests. For heaven's sake, you young writers attempting your powers, just look at this material. Don't go farther afield. But ground yourselves, ground yourselves, in the past of English literature and history, or you won't understand the Northwest and the present right in their human qualities and also, your technique will fail you.

Grumpy Senior—Awful is right.

Frank L. Palmer

Candidate for nomination for STATE SENATOR from the 29th, the University District

The following letter is used by permission.

"My dear Mr. Palmer:
As the first meeting held since the adjournment of the Legislature, the Board of Directors of the General Alumni Association took action expressing the appreciation of the alumni for your services during the session of the Legislature just closed. We are glad to recognize and acknowledge our debt of gratitude to you for the faithful and efficient way in which you supported the claims of the University, not only during the session just closed, but during the session of 1911. We want you to know that we recognize and appreciate such services."
Signed by the Secretary.

More recently the Alumni Weekly in speaking of Mr. Palmer's candidacy says—

"Frank L. Palmer, who has represented the 29th legislative—the University—district in the house for the past two sessions, has filed for the senate. It is doubtful whether he will have any serious opposition. Mr. Palmer has been a wise and faithful friend of the University and his record in the house gives earnest of a useful career in the senate. We are confident that, since a change is to be made, Mr. Palmer is to be succeeded by an able man and so warm and capable a friend of the University."

This advertisement was prepared under the direction of D. G. Campbell, who is to pay for the same.
