A healthy mind and body combine to make success, said Alice Marble at Convocation yesterday. "If order is the first law of health, certainly the place to begin is in the mind," she said.

The former world's champion women's tennis player claimed that if you "aim high for your goal, strive and pray for it, you will attain it."

She said in her talk, "The Will To Win," that she has found several mental and physical health rules helpful to her in gaining success in the tennis game.

A strong believer in a basic training schedule of proper food, exercise and eight hours sleep daily, Miss Marble also maintains it is well to discipline one's mind along the right channels.

"It's a hard thing to do but it's the key to success, and success is sweet," she said. "Only you can do it."

Miss Marble spoke at Northrop auditorium. Later, in the afternoon, she gave a tennis exhibition at the Fourth street courts.

She began lecturing in 1936 and continues to make lectures and exhibition tours. She gives about 100 lectures a year.

AFL Strike Stops U Building Projects

Progress was halted on all University building projects by 3 p.m. yesterday.

The work stoppage occurred when drivers of AFL teamsters local 221 struck because contractors did not meet demands for an hourly 10 cent wage increase made by the AFL building trades unions.

Representatives of the Minneapolis building and construction trades council began posting banners on the campus about 1 p.m.

When the banners were posted all construction men stopped work because they did not wish to work on a picketed job, Union officials said.

The projects affected included five new buildings on the Minneapolis campus and two on the St. Paul campus.

A superintendent of the H. N. Leighton Construction company said work on the chemical engineering building halted "shortly after 1 p.m."

By 3 p.m. workers at the Health service project had quit, an official of the C. A. Peterson Construction company said.

The strike started in St. Paul Wednesday and spread to Minneapolis yesterday.

Union officials estimate that 90 per cent of the building in St. Paul has been stopped.

Earlier this week the majority report of a fact-finding commission recommended a 7 1/2 cent wage increase.

Tuesday Free Film Stars Vivien Leigh

The British movie, "Storm in a Teacup," starring Vivien Leigh and Rex Harrison, will be shown at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in Northrop auditorium.

Summer session students will be admitted free on presentation of fee statements. The picture is a special recreation event for summer session.

The story was written by Bruno Frank in protest against an exorbitant dog tax in Germany. It later was translated into English and had a successful run as a Broadway play.

Stay Here Ends For Mitropoulos

Dimitri Mitropoulos will end a 12-year career in Minneapolis today when he conducts the final summer session concert at 8:30 p.m. in Northrop auditorium.

For his final appearance, Mitropoulos has selected a program including Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony, Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture and three dances from De Falla's "The Three-Cornered Hat."

Last December, he announced he would leave Minneapolis because he felt it was his "duty toward his artistic career." He leaves Minneapolis to become a conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra.

Mitropoulos directed at the Conservatory of Athens and the Berlin Staatsoper before making his American debut in 1936 as guest conductor of the Boston symphony orchestra. After guest appearances here during the 1936-37 season, he was named conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra in the fall of 1937.

Leslie Chabay, Metropolitan Opera company tenor, will be guest artist at the concert. Chabay will sing three arias, "Call Forth Thy Powers" from Handel's "Judas Macabeus," "Und Gott Schufden Menschen," recitative and aria from Haydn's "Creation" and "Oh Image" from Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

Admission will be restricted to summer session students on presentation of fee statements until 8:15 p.m. After 8:15, the public and faculty will be admitted free of charge.

As He Leaves - Orchestra Members Praise 'The Maestro'

By Dick Margolis

The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra yesterday rehearsed for the last time under their "Maestro," Dimitri Mitropoulos.

To the casual observer it might have seemed like "just another rehearsal," but if he had gone backstage and listened, he would have changed his mind.

Members of the orchestra had a lot to say about their Maestro. And it was all good.

None of these people wanted their names in the newspaper—"The Maestro wouldn't like it if he knew I told you all this," one said. But they all had a comment.

"People take advantage of him because he is so kind," one of the violinists said. "Not many know it but he has put several fellows through college, and he is helping many more. Because he is always so ready to help, some people call him 'God's fool.'"

Another orchestra member commented on Mitropoulos' "democratic attitude."

"You wouldn't know the difference between the director and a fellow in the orchestra. He's just one of the gang."

Mitropoulos is quick to admit that he is reluctant to leave this "gang" of his. So reluctant, in fact, that he has kept a room in Minneapolis.

"I look upon Minneapolis as my own home," he says, "and I shall be back from time to time."

2 U Scientists Promise Hope To Neurologics

Two University scientists have released details of a program they say promises rehabilitation of chronic neurologic patients.

Dr. A. B. Baker, professor of neurology, and Dr. Joe R. Brown, clinical associate professor of psychiatry and neurology, are the authors of the Veterans administration pamphlet which describes the new program.

Some of the patients have been paralyzed for up to 20 years, the pamphlet says. The program, carried on during the past few years at the Veterans administration hospital in Minneapolis, has helped these patients to walk again or even go back to work.

CHAMPIONSHIP form was demonstrated by Alice Marble at a tennis clinic yesterday on the University courts. Miss Marble, holder of practically every major woman's tennis title, gave instructions on the forehand, backhand and service strokes. Members of the audience helped her illustrate her points. After the clinic, Miss Marble and Norm Macdonald, Northwest tennis star, played an exhibition match with Dick Swigart, Graduate student, and Ed Von Sien, Minneapolis Public Parks champ. Swigart and Von Sien won the set, 6-4, despite Miss Marble's net game. (Photo by Leo Stock.)

Will Beer Beat the Heat?

They All Think They Have the Way Out

By Merwin Dechter

Thinking you're not may help. That's what a psychologist says.

Adding H<sub>2</sub>O and NaCl to the body is a good idea. That's what a chemist says.

Or try using what was used in history as far back as pre-historic days. That's what a historian says.

"I use my convertible." That's what a coed said.

"Everybody has a suggestion for keeping cool during hot spells.

Talking oneself into being cool would be somewhat difficult, Paul E. Meehl, associate professor of psychology, observes scientifically.

But as an individual, Prof. Meehl adds that cooling ideas do no harm. "Fretting about heat only adds to discomfort," he says.

A swimming hole is the solution that was used from the time man began to record history, (maybe even before—there's no way of telling), according to a history professor, who preferred to remain anonymous.

Peasants in Europe used to work in the fields without any clothes on, the history prof also said. It would be somewhat impractical in this situation, however.

Nomads in Asia take to the mountains. It's cooler up there. Asiatic mountains also would be somewhat impractical in this situation.

Hervy H. Barber, associate professor of chemistry, has some practical suggestions. Replace the liquid and salt lost by the body through perspiration.

Lots of water, sometimes mildly flavored with salt, is the idea. If you like beer, he suggests, you can drink it, too. But for the beer to be cooling, add salt.

Carmie Haberl, Arts sophomore, uses her own cooling off process. She rides around in her convertible (with the top down). She also goes swimming. She also keeps the windows to her house open at night, closed during the day. She also wears attractive white playsuits. And sunglasses.

Myron Doebler, Arts freshman, uses the mall, open french doors, sandals, tee shirts and cool drinks.

Tom Bell, buildings and grounds employe, rides around the campus on a mechanized lawn mower—with nothing covering him but his clothes.

"When the weather's hot, riding this mower is hot," he says. "But I get hotter when I have to keep bending down to pick up coke bottles from the grass."

One coed on the mall had a solution we all could follow. She used her laundry list for keeping cool. It was placed over her eyes as she lay sleeping on the grass, oblivious to the heat, to studies, to worrying about how to keep cool.

Laundry Today, Cooler Tomorrow

CRAWL INTO SOMETHING that will keep you cool. Stu Gung, Arts sophomore, demonstrates how. Reduced by melting temperature, he climbed into a Murphy hall water fountain. Only dangers in this practice are thirsty students. (Caution: Drinking fountains usually have room for only one person at a time.)

European Reds Take Defensive Acheson Says

Compiled from United Press Reports
By Jim Cowan

Russia is on the defensive Secretary of State Dean Acheson said yesterday in a news conference on the recent Paris Big Four meeting.

He said Russia is now afraid to give the Germans a voice in their own affairs. He said the Soviets' refusal to relax the red army's grip on Eastern Germany proves that firm United States policies have put Western Europe's communists in retreat.

Acheson was referring to the Marshall Recovery plan and the North Atlantic pact as examples of firm United States policy.

The chief value of the Paris meeting was, he said, that it proved that Russia has switched to defensive tactics in Europe in the face of successful Western policies of restoring economic strength and political stability.

He met reporters soon after warning a closed session of the house foreign affairs committee that it would be "tragic" if congress fails to press the United States advantage by not acting at this session on both the Atlantic pact and a $1.5 billion arms-aid-to-Europe program to back it up.

Acheson also made a strong appeal to the committee for prompt action on a $1.5 million United States aid bill for Korea, which he described as an essential non-communist outpost in the Far East.

In a calm, low voice . . .

Alger Hiss flatly denied under oath yesterday that he ever was a communist.

The former state department high official swore that he told the truth at all times to the grand jury which indicted him for perjury.

The two-count perjury charge stated Hiss lied when he said he did not give state department documents to unauthorized persons. It added that Hiss did not see Whittaker Chambers after Jan. 1, 1937.

At frequent intervals, Hiss had to be told to speak up as his casual voice became inaudible. Under questioning by Lloyd Paul Stryker, defense counsel, Hiss said, "I am not now and have never been a member of the Communist party."

He also denied being a "fellow traveler or sympathizer with the party."

Francis B. Sayre, former assistant secretary of state, denied a charge made by witness Malcomb Cowley, writer and former editorial board member of the New Republic, that he was "head of a Communist apparatus in the state department."

A sharp dispute . . .

between Judith Coplon and Government Prosecutor John M. Kelley, Jr., wound up a week of testimony at the former G-girl's espionage trial.

Kelley turned aside from the sultry justice department employe's love life in an endeavor to win an argument of whether she had a right to take secret FBI information "home for the weekend."

Senate Democratic leaders . . .

switched signals yesterday in an effort to bolster their weakened chances of keeping injunctions out of President Truman's Taft-Hartley repeal bill.

The change was aimed at winning support of enough left-wing Democrats and liberal Republicans to pull the injunction "teeth" from a proposed amendment by Senator Robert A. Taft, (R., O.).

It came after the senate rejected, 77 to 9, another plan for dealing with national emergency strikes by allowing government seizure of struck property.

Sponsored by Senator Wayne Morse, (R., Ore.), it would have required the President to take national emergency strikes to congress with recommendations for action. If the recommendations included seizure, the president could take over the property in 10 days unless his plan was vetoed by both house and senate.

New attacks were thrown . . .

by government sponsored agencies in Prague, Czechoslovakia, on Catholic Archbishop Josef Beran and his Bishops and they were warned they were liable to prosecution for subversive activities.

The labor union newspaper, Prace, said Catholic church leaders had used open threats and pressure in the last few days on priests who approved the government's new Catholic action organization.

"These are, of course, illegal, anti-state, anti-popular and punishable methods," Prace said.

Horried townspeople and vacationists . . .

in Bari, Italy, saw a four-engined Dutch Constellation crash with 32 persons aboard yesterday.

Witnesses said the plane, en route from Cairo via Athens to Rome, seemed to be attempting a forced landing as it neared Bari, on the Adriatic near the heel of the Italian boot.

The wings broke off and the fuselage plummeted into the rough water less than 2,000 feet off the main pier.

Harbor boats recovered the bodies of 16 men, five women and three little girls in the wave-lashed harbor.

Gal Shortage

Social Recreation Class Has Lopsided Dancing Sessions

Members of the social recreation class have a problem—a shortage of girls.

Although three of the class sessions are held in Norris gymnasium for women there is a surplus of men. This is a factor of major importance, considering the class is being instructed on dance techniques.

The boys take turns dancing with the girls and when it is not their turn, they dance with each other.

This led to an urgent plea for more girls by Maurice Ostrander, assistant professor of physical education and athletics, and Marjorie Turner, visiting physical education instructor from the University of Illinois.

"Just come to class," said Miss Turner. Sessions are held at 3 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in Norris gym, and from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursday in the Union ballroom.
