Honor Among Thieves

COMING almost on the heels of President Coffman's decision to appoint a committee of five to discover methods of preventing the theft of final examinations before the examinations are held, is the news of numerous students at the University who were suspended for cheating in the fall quarter final examinations. The students have been reinstated with a grade of failure in the affected courses, but, since the courses in question were required in the students' major sequences, their graduation will be delayed for the space of a year.

Precisely what is to be gained from trickery and deceit in the business of widening and enriching an individual's knowledge? No harm was done to the University in the case of these students, for the University's chief concern is not to forestall and to prosecute knavery in its class rooms, but to provide these classrooms, and man them with able and capable instructors. This done, it is clear that the University's mission has been fulfilled.

What gain might have come to these students, had their deception escaped detection? They would have been no richer in learning, for they attempted to circumvent the labors of study by their preconcerted action. They would have added nothing to their name, but they have suffered grievously in the safeguarding of their honor. Their action, if successful, would have made them nothing more than intellectual poseurs. The mastery of a craft or profession does not necessarily accompany a certificate of graduation.

In fine, these students, as in the case of those who stole the examination papers in sociology, gained nothing and lost nearly everything. It is one thing to complete a course with a satisfactory grade which has been awarded as the recompense for study and mastery of the course. It is something else again to complete a course with a satisfactory grade which has been gained only through chicanery and fraud. One represents a distinct achievement, even though the import of that achievement be small. The other is nothing more than an empty shell; a false front.

The existence of fraud in examinations at a modern University is deplorable enough, but the folly and the futility of that fraud is worse. Even a highwayman, if successful, gains a tangible thing. But he who cheats in examinations gains nothing whatever. Where is the profit?

A Plan Succeeds

EACH MAN rushed by fraternities last week paid for the first time a two-dollar fee which had been authorized and levied by the Inter-Fraternity Council. The total sum realized from these fees amounts to $960. This sum, when pro-rated among the 34 fraternities, will bring to each chapter something like $28.

This is by no means a princely sum and will hardly begin to defray the expense of feeding prospective Greeks. But more optimistically, $28 is better than nothing, the amount rushees were taxed last season.

The main purpose of the new system is to eliminate the group that formerly went through rushing who could not afford to pledge and who merely wanted to eat without cost for a week.

This object has been accomplished. Last year over a thousand were rushed. Somewhat less than half of this number pledged. Last week only a few more than 500 freshmen were entertained "down the line" and incidentally paid two dollars for the privilege. Of these 408 joined fraternities.

The blanket tax has discouraged 500 men who would have wasted the time and money of fraternities in order that they might save themselves a week's lunch money.

Nathan Straus

NATHAN STRAUS, who wanted to live until his fortune had been spent in philanthropy, is dead. Though often accused of being haphazard in his altruism, the head of American Jewry will be mourned by thousands who benefited by his adherence to the slogan—"give until you're happy."

Straus' generosity was characterized by an unmitigated disregard for creeds and nationalities. In 1923 the people of New York voted him to be the greatest public benefactor of the Twentieth Century. Wherever possible, human distress found alleviation at the hands of this successful Bavarian immigrant. He knew no prejudice.

A sincere devotion to Judaism did not blind him to the needs of physical life. His gifts, in the main, were of a practical nature. He gave milk to hungry babes on the East Side of New York, found work for the unemployed of Yonkers, relieved the starving lepers of Palestine. He ministered first to the primal requirements of mankind. The promulgation of the theology came second.

Straus is dead, but in the annals of humanitarianism his name, like those of Nobel and Carnegie, will recall riches shrewdly won and wisely spent.

Economic depression! A Creighton student carries a full program and holds down three jobs besides. Sam Epstein, College of Commerce senior, keeps books for a cap manufacturing concern, examines the accounts of a grocery store and has charge of a billiard room.

MUSIC NOTES

By Martin C. Powers

WITH SUCH works as the Beethoven Symphony No. 1 and the Polovetzian Dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor," the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra tonight bids the University adieu for a period of six weeks, as soon Mr. Verbrugghen and his musicians will be playing before thousands in cities of the south.

Paul Kochanski also comes tonight, to round out a most interesting program with the Vivaldi A minor violin concerto, long a favorite of virtuosos and one of Kochanski's own specialties.

THE FIRST Symphony of the Great Beethoven is sufficiently well known to make extended comment unnecessary. On April 22, 1800, the program of a now famous concert in Vienna printed the following: "Today Herr Ludwig van Beethoven will have the honor to give a grand concert for his benefit in the Royal Imperial Court Theatre beside the Burg." The program of seven numbers was headed by a Mozart symphony, and finished with "A new grand symphony with complete orchestra, composed of Ludwig van Beethoven." This first of the greatest sequence of instrumental works ever conceived by the mind of man was well received by the audience, although one person objected to "too much use of the wind instruments, so that the music sounded more as if written for a military band than an orchestra." A Leipzig critic later described the work as "confused explosions of the outrageous effrontery of a young man."

THE REACTION of the Leipzig critic of Beethoven to such music as the Polovetzian Dances from "Prince Igor" by Borodin might be interesting, to say the least. These barbaric dances, intended to distract and delight the captive Prince Igor, abound with startling rhythms, tunes of highest harmonic beauty, sudden climaxes of savage brilliance, truly Slavic in type. The Rimsky-Korsakoff orchestration makes fullest demands upon the orchestra, with a result that is simply breath-taking.

IT WILL be noted by many tonight that several of the melodies, in strings and wood winds, are songs well fitted for the voice. Four years ago we heard a leading eastern chorus of 500 voices, accompanied by the Boston Orchestral Players, give a notable performance of the Polovetzian Dances. Such critics as Philip Hale, J. Lindon Smith and Olin Downes described the concert as an outstanding musical event.

In some respects, such a performance of the dances as tonight's will be more pleasing, because an orchestra can give a vivacity of movement and brilliance of coloring to the music which the best of choruses would be unable to achieve.

IN ADDITION to the popular Vivaldi concerto, Kochanski will play the Concerto in One Movement, by Karol Szymanowski, a Polish composer. The piece, never before played in Minneapolis, is dedicated to Kochanski. It is untraditional in form, written without key signatures, and is both atonal and polytonal. The instrumentation is "extraordinarily rich and heavy," calling for an augmented orchestra.

Students Requested To Exchange Books 4,000 Tickets Still Remain To Be Called For

Students wishing to see the basketball game with Wisconsin Monday night should exchange their coupon books now, according to Dr. L. J. Cooke, director of ticket sales for the athletic department.

In previous years some students have been unable to get new books at the booth in the Field House until the game was nearly over, therefore it is urged that as many as possible exchange their tickets at the booth in the post office. The booth will be open daily from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. except Saturday, when it will close at 12:30 p.m.

About 1,500 coupon books have been issued, which leaves a total of approximately 4,000 to be called for. To obtain the new books, which cover all remaining intercollegiate events except swimming, the old books should be turned in, together with a winter fee statement. No books will be given out unless the fee statement is shown.

Books may be exchanged at any athletic event during the balance of the year, but it is urged that they be turned in before Monday night in order to avoid the rush at the game.

CAGE TEAM LEAVES TONIGHT FOR CHICAGO BATTLE

Hardwood Players Will Battle to Retain Perfect Percentage

Play Wisconsin in Initial Home Game Monday Night

If anyone is entertaining ideas that Coach Dave MacMillan and his Gopher basketball players are making easy work of this week's preparation for the Saturday game at Chicago he had better think again, for it is clearly evident that every attempt is being made to win the game.

One of the striking illustrations of this concentrated attempt was brought to the foreground yesterday afternoon when MacMillan started his players to the Army for a workout. The reason for this is that Bartlett gymnasium at Chicago is similar to the Army in several respects.

MacMillan will take 10 men with him tonight: Captain Harry Schoening, Earl Loose, Don Bondy, Mike Gielusak, Virgil Licht, Ralph Engbretson, Cliff Sommer, Glenn Bethel, Wally Nordgaard and Bradbury Robinson.

The workout which the varsity was handed yesterday consisted of a scrimmage. Both offense and defense received considerable attention. A short shooting drill closed the afternoon. The workout today will probably be light.

Following the Chicago game on Saturday the Gophers will return to Minneapolis for the first of two games with Wisconsin on Monday. The Badgers have had varying luck this year, losing and winning almost alternately. Marquette was one of the conquerors of the Madison outfit, but the Wisconsin five is not up to the standard of other teams from the school. The game will open Minnesota's home Big Ten schedule.

Chicago, Jan. 15. (UP)—Resignation of H. O. (Pat) Page as football coach at Indiana university today provided the Big Ten conference with its first—and probably only—coaching vacancy for the 1931 season. Page's resignation, announced in Chicago last night, came as a distinct surprise. It was even more surprising to learn that Page did not leave Indiana of his own accord, but was invited by President William Lowe Bryan to turn in his resignation three weeks ago. His successor has not been named and Page said he had no position in view.

Tanksters Rely on Captain To Overwhelm Chicago Crew

Michigan Ice Team Plays Here Friday

Pondmen Scrimmage South In Short Workout

By sending his players through a short but intensive scrimmage against the South high hockey team, Coach Frank Pond began preparations for the Michigan game which will open the home conference season here next Friday and Saturday.

Scores were not numerous last night as the Minnesota team still appeared leg weary.

Bucky Johnson, Captain Marsh Ryan and Howard Gibbs performed on the opening forward line, with Hollingsworth and Bill Conway on the defense. Howard Jones kept goal.

It was the first scrimmage for Bill Conway with the squad, and he held down his post rather well, but he is not yet in condition. There is some doubt as to whether he will be used extensively against Michigan.

Gophers Participate in First Meet in Windy City Tonight—Marsh to Swim in 3 Events

When the Minnesota swimmers engage the University of Chicago tank team at Chicago tonight, Captain Lowell Marsh, stellar backstroke man, will swim in three events in order to prepare the Maroons from copping the Gophers' first Big Ten meet of the season.

Captain Marsh's specialty is the backstroke. Critics rate him as "best in the conference." Yet the Gopher leader will enter the free style and relay events to bolster up a team counted strong in pre-season reports, but nevertheless green and more or less of an unknown quantity, as the Maroon engagement marks the season's premier for the Gophers.

"Captain Marsh is the greatest individual athlete in the University," Coach Niels "horpe" said. "He is a consistent winner, is always eligible, and is always ready to sacrifice for his team. It's rather hard to ask a top-notch to leave his specialty to try to win points for his team, but Marsh has never complained. He's a real star." Thorpe's men will enter the meet with the advantage of being in prime physical condition. Every member of the squad is anxious to turn in a win as a tribute to their captain, who is leading his team into action for the first time.

The paddlers left for Chicago last night. The attendance at Harvard football games this year dropped 53,895 from 1929.
