TWEED MUSEUM OF ART SCHEDULE

“Looking North: Royal Canadian Mounted Police Illustrations,” which includes nearly 100 Mountie illustrations that were created by sixteen different artists between 1931 and 1970, will be on display through October 5. In conjunction with the exhibition, Afton Historical Society Press, together with the Tweed Museum of Art, have published a new book titled Looking North: The Royal Canadian Mounted Police Illustrations.

“Selections from the Permanent Collection: Glenn C. Nelson Ceramics and Studio Glass from the Collection of Don and Carol Wiiken” will be on display through October 5. “Gilbert Davis Munger: Quest for Distinction” will be on display July 26 - October 12. In the late 1800s Gilbert Munger (1837-1903) was honored by European nobility for his landscape paintings, which often adhere to tenets of the French Barbizon school in their naturalism, moodiness and formal qualities. Born in Connecticut, Gilbert Munger apprenticed with an engraver at the Smithsonian Institution, and following the Civil War, developed his landscape painting skills by studying the Hudson River School artists. After painting in the American West, Munger lived and painted in Europe for 16 years. His brother Roger had moved to St. Paul and then Duluth, a move which eventually caused many works by his brother to enter the Tweed collection.

As the site of the largest known collection of Munger’s work, the Tweed Museum of Art has organized a premier exhibition and national tour celebrating the work of this deserving but under-recognized American artist. Together with Tweed Museum of Art, Afton Historical Society Press has published a new book Gilbert Davis Munger: Quest for Distinction. Authored by noted American art historian J. Gray Sweeney and collector Michael D. Schroeder, the book will be available for purchase through the Tweed Museum Store.
