ABOUT THE DEPARTMENT

The Department of Family Medicine and Community Health (DFMCH) at the University of Minnesota was created in response to a legislative mandate to train primary care physicians. For over 50 years, we have been leaders in transforming the specialty through education, research, and patient care.

We are the academic sponsor of seven family medicine residencies—five in the Twin Cities, two in Greater Minnesota. We are involved in medical student education activities across the Medical School's two campuses: Twin Cities and Duluth. We sponsor five fellowship programs—sports medicine, hospice and palliative medicine, primary care behavioral health, clinical informatics, and sexual and gender health—and offer faculty development and continuing medical education opportunities.

We are ranked #2 among the top National Institutes of Health-funded family medicine departments. Our faculty are actively researching health disparities, healthcare delivery, and population health.

OVER 50 YEARS OF EXCELLENCE

The DFMCH celebrates more than 50 years of excellence in clinical care, education, and research. In the last half-century, we have grown from a small division within the Medical School to an internationally renowned department that has graduated more family residents than any other program in the nation.
