Stage Favorite to Be Seen on Campus

"Cyrano de Bergerac" Tuesday

A motion picture of "Cyrano de Bergerac," one of the best known of Edmond Rostrand's dramas, will be shown at the University next week on Tuesday evening at 8:00 p.m. in the Music Hall. "L'Aiglon," another of his plays, was produced on the campus during the first term of the summer session as a part of the dramatic arts round table.

One of the most dramatic plays which Rostrand ever wrote, "Cyrano de Bergerac" has been a success on the professional and amateur stages, as well as in motion pictures. It also has elements of the spectacular, one of the characteristics of the French dramatist. Wit and poetry are also combined in the drama in a manner which only Rostrand has.

The film has been shown during previous summer sessions at the University to an audience which packed the auditorium. Students and members of the faculty who hold member's tickets will be permitted to attend the picture production.

Scientists Honor Guest Statisticiap on Campus

Dr. R. A. Fisher, chief statistician at the Rothamsted Experimental Station in England, who is a guest professor in mathematics on the campus this summer, has been invited to be a guest at the meetings of the American Mathematical Society and the Mathematical Association of America which will be held on the campus from September 7 to 11.

His lectures this summer are preliminary to the meetings, and have attracted the interest of leading mathematicians in the country. Dr. Fisher is the author of "Statistical Methods for Research Workers," and of more than sixty other publications in the fields of mathematics, statistics, and heredity.

While he is a prominent mathematician, he has also made important contributions in the fields of statistics and heredity. Courtesy cards to men on the campus holding doctorate degrees have been issued to those who wish to attend the lectures given by Dr. Fisher in his mathematics classes.

Minneapolis Tribune

A trip through one of the best known newspaper plants in the northwest is scheduled for Thursday. This trip is one of the most interesting and instructive of the entire series this session. Persons who have not been through a newspaper plant should not fail to take advantage of this opportunity. The party will leave the steps of the Library at 1:30 p.m.

Rehearsals Held Daily

Daily rehearsals of the incidental music for "Cyrano de Bergerac" are being conducted in Room 4 at 2:00 p.m. in the Music Hall under the direction of Professor Abe Pepinsky. Instrumentalists on campus are urged to come to the rehearsals. Compositions of Walter Damrosch will compose the incidental music.

Play, Lunch, Nap, in Life of Nursery Pupils at the Child Welfare Institute

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles in which interesting places on the campus that may have escaped student observation, will be pointed out.

From two to five years of age is the "taxi-cab age" for children enrolled in the Institute of Child Welfare at the University. Every morning between 8:30 a.m. and 9:00 a.m. the young scholars are brought to the campus in a taxi-cab chaperoned by a staff member in the Institute.

Games, luncheon, nap, more games—all these are included in the school day of the children. And when they reach the mature age of five years, they are graduated into the kindergarten at the Institute or transferred to a kindergarten school near their home.

A cross-section of the population is represented by the students in the school. They are children of laborers, artisans, and professional parents. The group represents all degrees of intelligence and ability.

How grown up they pretend to be, with their "stores," "banks," "carpenter shops" and "trains"! Because they want to "run" the "store" they learn to count. Because they want to hammer and saw, they learn to handle the tools.

The noon luncheon is one of the high spots of the day, for at that time, they gather in groups of four about a little red table upon which they themselves have placed the dishes. The one who has been the very best is permitted to sit next to the "teacher." "Being good" includes eating whatever food is placed before them, cooperating with the teacher, and mingling with the other students.

It is after the lunch that the group skips up a flight of stairs into a room in which there is a group of tiny little beds. All is quiet in a few minutes. The entire group is having its nap.

Dr. John Anderson is director of the Institute of Child Welfare, and it is under his direction that the events in the day's work are outlined for the young students.

On warm days the children play out of doors in the Institute playground. On wet days their pleasures are taken in doors. So satisfied are the children with the routine, that the majority prefer school to home life.

The Institute is one of the few in the United States. The work done there in child studies is known throughout the country. Miss Josephine C. Foster is principal of the nursery school and the experimental kindergarten. Other members of the staff include Dr. Esther McGinnis, Miss Edith Boyd, Dr. Mary Shirley, Neith E. Headley, Rose E. Buckley, and Florence M. Pitman.

Home Study Offers Students Opportunity for Improvement

Courses from a wide variety of colleges will be offered to correspondence-study students through the General Extension Division of the University this winter. While Extension Division classes in the late afternoon and evening are conducted in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, hundreds of people not in touch with these cities each year enroll for correspondence study.

Information concerning the correspondence-study course can be secured from N. A. Anderson, representative of the department, who has a desk in the lobby of the University Library this term. Students desiring to enroll for a course may also secure blanks from him. The office of the Correspondence Study Department is in Room 402 Administration Building.

Students wishing to register for the correspondence study are permitted to enroll at any time, and may begin their work when it is convenient for them. When the course is completed, the student is given a final examination under the supervision of a state, county or local school official. University credit is given for most of the courses. Richard R. Price is director of the General Extension Division, and A. H. Speer is head of the correspondence-study department.

New Club House Attracts The University Golfers

Student and faculty golfers at the University Golf Course are now teeing off a new first hole as the result of the official opening of the new clubhouse. While the course is open only to faculty members and to students with membership cards, and to their guests, an increase in the number of people playing the eighteen holes has been recorded since the opening of the new clubhouse, W. R. Smith, manager, said yesterday.

Lockers, showers, a lounge-room, and refreshment service are among the features of the new building. The golf course has been replotted, because the clubhouse stands in a different part of the course than the old clubhouse.

Golf cards for the summer may be secured by students who present their fee statement in Mr. Smith's office in

Retells Pioneer Days In Minnesota Lecture

Blegen to Talk Today

Pioneer days in Minnesota will be re-enacted in an illustrated lecture which will be given today in the Music Hall at 4:00 p.m. by Dr. Theodore C. Blegen, associate professor of history at the University, and superintendent-elect of the Minnesota Historical Society.

Dr. Blegen, who has studied all phases of Minnesota history, is the author of a syllabus just published by the University of Minnesota Press entitled "Minnesota History," an outline guide for high school and college students, study clubs, and individuals interested in the history of the state. He has studied early books written about Minnesota, he has talked to old settlers, he has read historical novels, and investigated every possible source of information.

In his lecture today he will trace the development of Minnesota history, giving particular emphasis to the pioneers of the state. Years of exploration and fur trading, early settlements, the Civil War and the Sioux Outbreak will be told in a vivid descriptive manner in the lecture. The stirring pioneer days will be permanently preserved through the syllabus which Dr. Blegen has compiled.

All traces of the story which he will tell are being rapidly exterminated. New Ulm boasts of a fort which withstood the Indian invasion, while Mankato has erected a monument at the spot where a large group of the invaders were hanged. But the story the land-marks tell is fragmentary and indefinite. Dr. Blegen will tell the human side of the early history.

As superintendent-elect of the Minnesota Historical Society, he has at his disposal hundreds of relics carefully preserved by the society. Guy Stanton Ford, dean of the Graduate School at the University, is president of the society, and is also interested in preserving these things which will tell the story of pioneer days in Minnesota. The Society has an office near the State Capitol in St. Paul in which visitors may see the things in the possession of the Society. Their collection represents the history of the people in all parts of the state.

Dr. Blegen is giving a course in Minnesota History as a part of the second term of the summer quarter, which was open to juniors, seniors, and graduate students with fifteen credits in history.

Students Tour Hawaii

A student tour from the United States to the University of Hawaii summer session conducted last summer under the auspices of the University of Oregon has resulted in a permanent system by which students who wish to combine vacation with studies can earn University credit in the tropical school. This summer 53 students from the University of Oregon, and a group from Washington State College, were conducted to the University of Hawaii.

A fee of $375 to cover tuition, transportation, board and room in Honolulu was charged each student. Classes are conducted on board ship both coming and going from the island, and after the ship reaches Hawaii, they are registered in the University there. A student tour will also be made in 1932.
