"Best Books" Among The Faculty Written On Campus Yearly.

While the literary critics of the nation select the "Best Books," books are being written on the University campus which should not be ignored by a student interested in stimulating ideas and new theories. Each year, members of the University faculty publish hundreds of magazine articles and as many books.

Every field of learning is represented in the books which the professors write. While many of them are used as text-books, a share of them are written for a general public. "Glass Mountain," a novel by Professor Joseph Warren Beach, of the department of English at the University, took a sophisticated reading public by storm.

While no effort has been made to classify the publications, the following list may interest the student body:

1. Readings in Sociology. (W. D. Wallis and M. M. Willey)
2. Trees and Shrubs in Minnesota. (F. K. Butters and C. O. Rosen-dahl)
3. Two Passengers for Chelsea and Other Plays. (Oscar W. Firkins)
4. Beowulf and the Fight at Finns-burg. (Frederick Klaeber)
5. English Prose, 1600 to 1660. (Douglas Bush, and C. A. Moore)
6. English Prose Writers. (J. M. Thomas and Hardin Craig)
7. Nineteenth Century Prose. (J. M. Thomas and Hardin Craig)
8. Poets and Playwrights. (Elmer E. Stoll)
9. Medieval Foundations of Western Civilizations. (A. C. Krey, G. C. Sellery)
10. Recent American History. (L. B. Shippee)
11. The Day of the Cattleman. (E. S. Osgood)
12. New Views of Evolution. (G. P. Conger)
13. Anatole France's Le livre de mon ami. (F. B. Barton)
14. Principles of Rural-Urban Sociology. (P. A. Sorokin and C. C. Zimmerman)

Brilliant Pianist Begins Concert Season; To Give a Recital on the Campus Monday Hailed as One of the Greatest Pianists

While students groan at the thought of studying for three or four hours for the final examinations next week, a frail, young girl, Eunice Norton, is spending hours of every day at here piano so that the concert which she is to give on Monday evening in the Cyrus Northrop Auditorium at 8:30 o'clock, will reach the perfection which she demands.

This young artist whose successes last winter established her in the eyes of the European critics as one of the outstanding artists of the times, is taking a greatly needed rest in Minneapolis so that she will be able to reach and even surpass her successes last winter. She has been induced by Mrs. Carlyle Scott, manager, to give the concert for the Summer Session students.

Since Miss Norton is to be a guest artist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra this winter, her concert on Monday is restricted entirely to students, faculty, and employees of the University, each of whom is entitled to two tickets. The cards, for which there is no charge, can be secured in Mrs. Scott's office, 110 Northrop Auditorium.

A principle of never interrupting a holiday will be violated for the first time so that several thousands of students and as many members of the faculty will be given an opportunity to hear the compositions of Beethoven, Chopin and Strawinsky which were so enthusiastically received in Europe last season.

Never before have the students, nor has Minneapolis itself been given an opportunity of hearing such a great artist during the summer months. A concert of national importance exclusively for a Summer Session audience has been unheard of until now. For an hour or more the students will be given an opportunity to hear music such as the majority have never before listened to.

Last winter her interpretations of the music of the great composers startled all Europe, and brought the unanimous approval of critics in London, Paris, and Berlin. Brilliant, piquant, and unusual are the adjectives used to describe the concerts which Miss Norton gives. That the University is able to present her in a recital is one of the greatest musical events in the history of the institution.

It was at the University that Miss Norton made her American debut, when she was brought from London to give the recital when she was eighteen years old. After the concert, she immediately returned to England to make her orchestral appearance there. Her first orchestral appearance in America was with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. The following season she appeared in the East with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Koussewitzky.

At the age of fifteen, she went to London to study with Tobias Matthay, and has appeared each year since 1924 in the celebrated Matthay Recitals in London.

In 1925 she appeared with Sir Henry Wood's Orchestra, playing the Bach D minor concerto. In the same year she received the Bach Gold Medal, awarded by the Bach Society in London and also the Chappell Gold Medal.

Mary Garden To Be First Symphony Soloist

A musical season which includes ten of the outstanding artists in the world will be brought to the Twin Cities through the University Symphony Series by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, and five other attractions in the musical world will be brought through the University Artists Course, both projects being under the direction of Mrs. Carlyle Scott.

When the Symphony Orchestra gives its first concert on October 23, after a long intermission during the summer months, it will have as guest artist, the prima donna soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera company, Mary Garden.

While the dates for the soloists have not yet been announced, each will appear in the concert series this winter. With Henri Verbrugghen as conductor, the Symphony Orchestra will appear in sixteen concerts in Minneapolis this winter, and will also make a tour of the United States.

The soloists include: Walter Gieseking, the Rubenstein of this generation; Mischa Elman, world famous violinist; Lotte Lehmann, dramatic soprano of the Berlin State Opera; Tito Schipa, great lyric tenor; Adolph Busch, Germany's greatest violinist; Eunice Norton, Minneapolis pianist now famous in Europe; Jacques Thibaud, distinguished French violinist; Sergei Rachmaninoff, great Russian composer-pianist, and Richard Crooks, popular tenor.

Among the artists who will appear in the University artists course are Richard Tauber, distinguished lyric tenor, Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, Sigrid Onegin, dramatic contralto, and Valdimir Horowitz, brilliant pianist.

All of the concerts are given in the Cyrus Northrop Auditorium. Subscriptions for the series in both events have been pouring into the Symphony office since the close of the season last spring.

Quigley to Talk in the Season's Last Lecture

H. S. Quigley, professor of political science at the University, will stop his preparations for a trip to Hangchow, China where he has been asked to attend the biennial meeting of the Institute of Pacific Relations, for one hour on Tuesday afternoon to deliver a lecture to the students and members of the faculty.

When Professor Quigley has finished his lecture on "The Chinese Situation," the recreational program for Summer Session students will be completed. It will also be the last lecture which Professor Quigley will deliver on the campus for several months. His classes will be conducted during his absence by other members of the staff in the department of political science.

The lecture will be given in the Music Auditorium at 4:00 p.m. It is the last in a series of lectures given by members of the University faculty this term. Professor Quigley is a student of political science, a close observer of human nature, and has himself spent considerable time in the Orient where he was able to observe the Chinese situation at first hand. He is considered such an authority on the situation that he is one of thirty representatives invited to attend the meeting of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Non-Language Test Made Press Publishes Details

Facing the problem of discovering the intelligence quotients of children of eight different language-groups in a Malayan school, Dr. Ruth E. Atkins, formerly of the University of Minnesota, began her experiments in devising a completely non-language test for this purpose. The complete details of this test have just been published by the University of Minnesota Press in the form of a book by Dr. Atkins, entitled, "The Measurement of the Intelligence of Young Children by an Object-Fitting Test." The experimenter tells how she formulated a scheme for discovering the intelligence rating of very young children, deaf children, and children from foreign homes, by having them fit familiar objects into the proper spaces of a form-board, without giving them a single verbal direction. She also gives a complete illustrated description of the test and of the method for administering it.

Psychologists at the University have made important contributions to the field in recent years, and the material has been published in other volumes. "Minnesota Mechanical Ability Tests," a volume compiled by R. M. Elliott, D. G. Paterson, H. A. Toops, L. D. Anderson and E. Heidbreder was published last year. Other books include: "The Measurement of Mankind," by D. G. Paterson; "Experiments in Psychology," by M. A. Tinker and W. S. Foster, and "Personal Traits Rating Scale," by Edna Heidbreder.

Dinosaur Guards Geology Museum in Pillsbury Hall

A short guide to interesting spots on the campus:

1. Golf course, with a new club house—eighteen holes of golf, refreshments, lockers and showers.

2. Faculty Grove, a section of University owned land between the main and the farm campus, where members of the faculty may build their own homes.

3. Mines Experiment station, located behind the University high school, where unusual experiments are conducted with ores of all grade.

4. The Photographic Laboratory on the farm campus does some interesting work, such as photographing pictures through microscopes.

5. The Foundry, especially when students are working in the laboratory, is well worth visiting. It is between Pillsbury Hall and the Administration building.

6. The Medical Arts department, in the Institute of Anatomy, does a unique piece of work. They draw the anatomical charts for texts and classroom work, and these same charts are sent to all parts of the world.

7. The glassblower, whose office is in the Physics building, blows all the complicated glass apparatus used on the campus in research projects. Next to his office is the Scientific Apparatus Shop, where the machinery for research work is made.

8. The Geology museum, on the first floor of Pillsbury Hall has a collection of rocks over which a huge cast of a dinosaur stands guard.
