DULUTH--A Dressmaking Workshop with the teacher in mind has been charted July 10-14 by the UMD Home Economics Department in cooperation with the Center for Continuation Study, University of Minnesota.

About 45 secondary school and college teachers -- 10 more than expected -- have registered for the summer session course. They represent six states.

The workshop will be under the general direction of Mr. Marjorie Stotler Arch, an authority on the time-saving Bishop method of clothing construction. She will be assisted by Dr. Ruth Palmer, head of UMD's Home Economics department.

Registrants will complete a blouse, skirt and dress through the demonstration-individual laboratory work plan, using facilities in the Home Economics department, Third Floor, Old Main. Housing will be provided in Torrance Hall dormitory.

Fred E. Berger, director of the Center for Continuation Study, and Valworth R. Plumb, head of UMD's Division of Education and Psychology, will introduce the workshop.
