Singer Rejected Medical Career for Music

Torn for a time between choosing for her career her mother's profession, medicine, or her father's, music, Miss Minerva Pepinsky, soprano soloist in Wednesday afternoon's recital, found her strongest interests and inclinations taking her into music.

Her piano lessons were begun at the age of five. It was not until she was 16, however, that she began the study of voice seriously. Miss Gertrude Hull of the music faculty was her teacher at that time and has remained so throughout Miss Pepinsky's student days.

She was born in Berlin, Germany, where her father, Prof. Abe Pepinsky, was a student at the Royal Academy of Music and the University of Berlin and where her mother was a physician in the Charité.

Throughout her school days, this young musician has taken part in operatic productions whether of grade school, university high school, or university. She has also made many solo appearances.

Studied for Year in Berlin

When she was a sophomore in the university she accompanied her parents and brothers and sisters to Germany. Here, in Berlin, she was privileged to study music, German literature, and French at the University of Berlin for a year. While there she sang with the Berlin Sing Akademie under the direction of Georg Schumann, which she feels was a rare opportunity. She also sang with the Collegium Musicum Vocale and the chorus of the University of Berlin.

She has just completed an unusual university career. In March she received her Bachelor of Science degree with distinction. Her major was music. In June, just three months later, she received her Bachelor of Arts, cum laude, with a major in German and a minor in French.

Among her honors while in school was the Helen Dwan prize for "outstanding progress and attainment in music" awarded her last year by the music department. She is president of the local chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, national professional music sorority, and has held the presidency for two terms. She is also a member of Pi Lambda Theta, national honorary sorority in education; of Eta (Sigma Upsilon, local honorary sorority in education; and of Lambda Alpha Psi, honorary linguistic society.

If school budgets are cut so low this coming year that no position is open to her as a teacher, Miss Pepinsky will return to the university for graduate work.

EXCURSION

Brown & Bigelow Company, St. Paul, will be visited this afternoon by the University's sightseers. This company designs and manufactures remembrance advertising. It is claimed that this is the largest specialty advertising company in the world. Some 1,500 different forms of advertising are made by them, including such items as signs and calendars. The many processes required to complete them make the trip an especially interesting one. The group will leave the Administration Building at 2 o'clock this afternoon and go by street car.

Best-Selling Novels to Be Reviewed Tomorrow

The last of the book talks which Miss Helen G. Acker is making so popular this session will be given tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Music Auditorium.

As she is going to review several of the new and best-selling books of fiction, it is anticipated that she will draw an audience even larger than usual. Controversy rages over some of the books on the list, and many will wish to learn whether she agrees with them or with their opponents. Many have not yet read some of them and are wondering whether or not they wish to. They may decide that so complete a review of the book with Miss Acker's commentary is sufficient, but it is altogether likely that she will give them just enough of a taste for them to want the whole book.

The books on the list for consideration tomorrow include Gladys Hasty Carroll's "The Earth Turns"; "The Store", T. S. Stribling; "Ann Vickers", Sinclair Lewis; "One More Spring", Robert Nathan; "Little Man, What Now?" Hans Fallada.

Gladys Hasty Carroll is a Minneapolis woman, the wife of Prof. Herbert Carroll of the College of Education. Even though the book weren't causing a sensation the country over, it would be of especial interest here. "The Store" is the latest Pulitzer novel. Sinclair Lewis always produces a storm of both praise and scorn when a new book of his comes from his publishers. "Ann Vickers" seems to have aroused less storm than some of the others, but here again he is probing a whole profession and the workers in it through one character. This time it is the social service worker.
