UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

Minneapolis 14

Office of the President

November 9, 1951

Honorable Richard L. Griggs
1406 Alworth Building
Duluth, Minnesota

Dr. John E. King
Provost, Duluth Branch
University of Minnesota
Duluth, Minnesota

Dear Mr. Griggs and Dr. King:

All of us concerned--Regents, administration, faculty and staff-- have reached a most important milepost in the total progress of the University of Minnesota. I refer, of course, to the decisions approved by the Regents for the future development of our Duluth Branch.

As you well understand, much more is involved than agreement upon a master-plan for physical plant alone. The new campus model, which you are unveiling tomorrow to the Duluth community and the people of northern Minnesota, incorporates as well our longer-range plans for the academic program and expansion of the branch. It is more than an architectural scheme; it is the product of farsighted faculty forethought as to the services which the University must strive to render to the citizens of northern Minnesota and their children.

No aspect of total University operations has been more thoroughly, intelligently, and cooperatively considered. None will more justifiably deserve the support of the entire state, step by step.

Please convey to the staff, students, and friends of the Duluth Branch and of the University-at-large, my cordial greetings and the expression of our happiness in this significant event.

Sincerely

J. L. Morrill
President
