US Interests, Policies 'Important'—Bernbaum

By Jim Hagle

Interests of the United States in Latin America and the policies followed to protect and advance these interests are "extremely important," Maurice M. Bernbaum, Department of State, said yesterday.

Bernbaum, director of the office of South American Affairs bureau of Inter-American Affairs, spoke under sponsorship of Casa Hispanica (Spanish House) in the Museum of Natural History Auditorium.

"WE HAVE important security, political and economic interests in Latin America," he said. "That area is extremely important to us."

Bernbaum said Latin Americans have similar interests in the United States, and that this "close identity" of interests has fostered "productive cooperation in world problems" and has created a "cooperative inter-American political system which has been serving as a guide for similar effort in other parts of the world."

United States policies have been directed to maintenance of this relationship, he said.

"A GLANCE at a map," Bernbaum said, "will show how interdependent the United States and the 20 other American Republics are for their security. They form a distinct geographic unit relatively remote from the rest of the world."

"Together they have a wide variety of natural resources to make them self-sufficient, if necessary. World War II demonstrated how these republics could count on these resources when supplies from the rest of the world had been cut off."

He said a free and cooperative Latin America is a decided asset and could be a "serious security risk if in the hands of unfriendly or enemy governments."

"LATIN AMERICAN countries view the United States as their best guarantee of security," he said. "They know that an attack upon them would be considered by the United States to be an attack upon itself."

Bernbaum pointed out that Latin America is the "greatest trading partner" of the United States, and that it is the second most important foreign investment outlet.

"Almost 30 per cent of all imports come from Latin America," he said. "From 20 to 25 per cent of exports go to Latin America. Unlike other parts of the world, almost all of these exports are paid for—only slightly more than one per cent represents grant aid."

He said coffee, sugar and other foods account for more than half of the imports. "Strategic metals" and petroleum make up the remainder.

UNITED STATES trade with Latin America, he said, accounts for "close to 35 per cent of exports of automobiles and trucks, approximately one-third of the exports of chemicals and electrical machinery, over one-fourth of exported industrial machinery, iron and steel mill products and textiles and almost one-fourth of United States exports of foodstuffs."

He said the private investments which accompany this very active trade total about $7 billion — "an amount exceeded only by investments in Canada."

"Investments in Latin America," Bernbaum said, "comprise almost 40 per cent of the entire United States private investment abroad."

"LATEST INFORMATION indicates that United States private investment in Latin America have been increasing at an average rate of about 400 million dollars each year."

He said close identity of interests explains why there is good cooperation between the American republics, and that the Latin American countries command 20 of the 80 votes in the United Nations General Assembly, giving decisive cooperation on problems involving the Free World.

Solar storms gave out a burst of ultraviolet rays and x-rays sometime late last week. Sunday night this burst was followed by another burst of particles, mostly protons with some electrons. These particles were attracted to the magnetic poles of the earth. As they entered the atmosphere along the magnetic lines of force, they ionized air which fluoresced and created a phenomenon known as the "Northern Lights" shown above. Health Service Facilities To Increase One Third

Health Service facilities will be increased by almost one-third with the addition of another wing to the present building next year.

Dr. Donald W. Cowan, assistant director of Health Service, said yesterday the addition and remodeling of the present building will cost approximately $700,000.

"WE'RE LOOKING ahead to the predicted enrollment," he said, "but are currently faced with cramped conditions."

He said the present building, occupied since 1950, "looked big" when it was completed and seemed large enough for "any possible enrollment."

"Some departments, such as pharmacy and x-ray "have already outgrown present facilities."

Cowan said the current plans are subject to many changes and that construction would probably be started sometime next year.

THE ADDITION will be constructed behind the present building, and will be five stories high, although only the three upper floors will be occupied by the Health Service.

"The lower two stories," Cowan said, "will be a stilt-like construction extending down into the Botany Laboratory area behind the present building."

The first floor above the stilts will be used for doctor's offices, environmental hygiene and radiation. X-ray and eye departments will occupy the second floor. The third floor will be used for administration and specialists.

Two Professors Get Fellowships

Two members of the staff of the School of Business Administration were recently awarded fellowships by the Ford Foundation for the 1957-58 academic year.

Professors Oswald H. Brownlee and John Neter were given faculty research fellowships. Brownlee is now with the United States Operations Mission to Chile, Institute of International American Affairs, Santiago, Chile. He will return in the fall.

Faculty research fellowships release faculty members from regular academic duties to carry on research projects of their own choosing.

Swinging their partners to the calling of Art Eberspacher were about 20 squares of dancers last night on the Mall in front of the Union. The dance, sponsored by the Union Board of Governors, is a weekly Monday night feature of "Country Club." The Union will sponsor a dance from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday on the Terrace.

University Gets Foundation Grant For Polio Research

A large grant from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis will enable University scientists to continue studies of human cells growing in laboratory flasks and test tubes.

The $85,761 grant is effective immediately.

Directed by Jerome T. Syverton, head of bacteriology and immunology, the work makes possible many tests for which living animals formerly were required.

It is possible to gain some insight into the effectiveness of a drug by trying it first in cultures of cells in test tubes.

While final tests must always be conducted in animals and eventually in human beings, a great deal of early screening can be done quickly and economically in tissue cultures.

Such cultures are used routinely in testing the Salk vaccine as well as in making it.

The University research team is also studying so-called orphan viruses. These are, by and large, viruses which were unknown a relatively few years ago, but which have been discovered during the search on polio.

Citizenship Clearing House Executive Group Organized

A seven-member executive committee of the Minnesota Citizenship Clearing House was created recently at the spring conference of the directors of the group's college and university affiliates.

Held at the University, the session was attended by directors of nine of the 20 affiliated colleges and universities and representatives of the Republican and Democratic-Farmer-Labor parties.

The newly-organized committee will guide the organization's work in Minnesota. The Clearing House' aim is to interest college-trained people in active participation in the political affairs of their local communities.

University faculty members who are members of the executive committee are Floyd O. Flom, political science assistant professor; director of the Clearing House, and Lloyd M. Short, political science professor.

During 1957, the Clearing House brought more than 250 college students from outside the Twin Cities to attend sessions of the state legislature. The trips were financed by the Minnesota group with funds received from the National Citizenship Clearing House, which in turn is financed by the Ford Foundation.

Local Ballet at Northrop Tonight

Pictures and Story by Al Ominsky

The Twin Cities own ballet company, the Andahazy Ballet Borealis, makes its fifth appearance at 8:30 p.m. today in Northrop Memorial Auditorium.

The evening's opener, The Snow Maidens, is set in the court of the Monarch of Ice and Snow where the King is honoring his new queen with gala festivities. The Heralds announce the serene entrance of the first guests, the Snow Maidens.

THE SCENE is soon interrupted by the Princes of the Storm who add zest to this ballet with Rimsky Korsakov's music. The Snow Maidens, original with the company, was choreographed by Anna Adrianova and Lorand Andahazy.

The pinnacle of romanticism is displayed in la Spectre de la Rose, the evening's second presentation. A young girl, danced by Anna Adrianova, falls asleep while fondling a rose upon returning from her first ball, is visited by the Spirit of the Rose, danced by Lorand Andahazy. This ballet was first created by Michel Fokine, a Diagaliv choreographer, as a vehicle for Vaslov Nijinsky.

THE SPECTACLE of the evening is Aurora's Wedding from the Sleeping Beauty with Tchaikovsky's music and the original Petipa choreography. The Awakening Scene, added by the Anrahazy's, opens with the Lilic Fairy leading Prince Desire into the sleeping court where his kiss awakens the Sleeping Princess and the court.

The court blossoms into life as the Ladies and Gentlemen of the court enter. Entertainers then spark the gaiety of the newly awakened court in a series of dances climaxing in the Grand Pas de Deux. The entire ensemble enters for the ballet's coda and finale.

In a dream-like dance, Anna Adrianova is visited by the Spirit of the Rose, Lorand Andahazy.

Dukes and Duchesses of the court dance a stately minuet in Aurora's Wedding.
