COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

COMMENCEMENT

CLA Class of 2002

Sunday, May 19, 2002
Northrop Memorial Auditorium

MSA

Congratulations, CLA Graduate!

We come together today—family and friends, students and faculty—to celebrate a major milestone in your life. You have studied hard to achieve the goal for which we honor you—a degree from the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Minnesota.

Whatever your major—economics or music, psychology or journalism, English or Asian Languages and Literatures—you have been privileged to learn from, and with, some of the finest professors in the country. You have listened, critiqued, challenged and been challenged. You have made connections, found meaning, explored and created—all under the guidance of world-class scholars at one of the world's great universities.

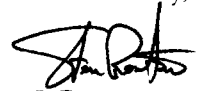

I am confident that, wherever you go from here, your CLA education will be a foundation for a good life, however you define it. You have not simply acquired specialized skills for a job “in your field.” You have been challenged to reach beyond today to build for tomorrow; to be a leader; to think critically and creatively; to cross cultural and intellectual boundaries; to think and act with vision and courage, wisdom and integrity.

My advice to you now is to apply these values wisely and well: Do what you love, follow your dreams, and make a difference in the world. And remember, your first job out of college is just that—your first job. If forecasts are right, you will change careers several times in the coming decades. With your CLA education, you'll have the intellectual versatility to respond with agility when change comes; indeed, you'll be on the leading edge of change.

I do hope that your CLA education has touched you profoundly and that you have been transformed in deep and important ways. And I hope that your years at the University of Minnesota truly have been some of the best years of your life so far, with even better yet to come.

We celebrate today your passage into your future as a shaper of the 21st century. Congratulations on your achievement. I extend my warmest wishes for continued success throughout your life, and I hope that you will stay connected with CLA.

Sincerely,

Steven J. Rosenstone

THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

...world-class education for tomorrow

The University of Minnesota, ranked among the nation's top public universities, reflects the state of Minnesota's strong and enduring commitment to education. It is nearly unique among universities in the United States in its three defining characteristics:

- It is an international research university.
- It is a public land-grant institution with a strong tradition of education and public service.
- Its largest campus—the Twin Cities campus—is located in a vibrant metropolitan area with not one, but two great cities at its center: Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The University is the primary center in Minnesota (and much of the Upper Midwest) for education and research in the liberal arts and sciences, health sciences, law, education, engineering, agriculture, and natural resources. The Twin Cities campus comprises 19 colleges and offers a full range of academic and professional degrees. A comprehensive campus in Duluth offers undergraduate and graduate programs. The Morris campus offers a four-year liberal arts program. Crookston offers associate and baccalaureate degrees in technical, career-oriented programs. Through the Minnesota Extension Service, the University is present in each of Minnesota's 87 counties.

When the University was founded as a preparatory school in 1851, Minnesota had been a territory for just two years, and statehood was still seven years away. The school was built on little more than the pioneers' faith in education. In its early years, the University struggled financially; during the Civil War, it was forced to close. It reopened in 1867, thanks to the energetic leadership of Governor John S. Pillsbury, who came to be known as the "Father of the University." Mathematics Professor William Watts Folwell became the University's first president in 1869. Mark G. Yudof, who since 1997 has led the University into a new era of growth and revitalization, is the University's fourteenth president.

Two students received bachelor of arts degrees at the first commencement in June 1873. Since then, the University has granted nearly 550,000 degrees.

University alumni include five Nobel Prize winners, a former chief justice of the United States Supreme Court, two former U.S. vice presidents, the heads of Fortune 500 companies, pioneers in medicine, civil rights leaders, top journalists, distinguished teachers and scholars, performing artists, and countless other men and women who have achieved distinction in every field.

Alumni and their families and friends are always welcome at the University. We invite you to visit campus regularly to enjoy the many educational, cultural, and entertainment opportunities that are open to the public—including performances by students in CLA's vibrant arts programs. We also invite you to continue your relationship with the University through the Minnesota Alumni Association and the CLA Alumni Society.

THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

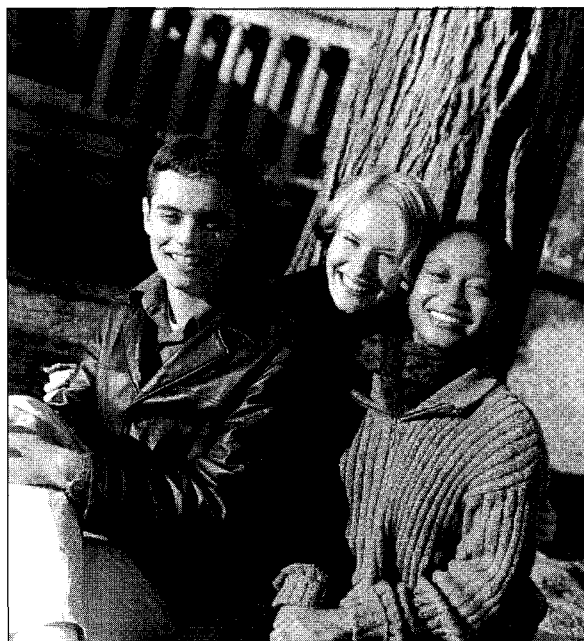

...education for a lifetime

The College of Liberal Arts (CLA) was formally established at the University of Minnesota in 1868, 17 years after the founding of the University. Since then, it has become an international center for education in the arts, humanities, and social sciences.

The liberal arts span all areas of human knowledge, enterprise, and aspirations. The college offers 60 majors, with study and research opportunities in fields ranging from anthropology to women's studies. Students whose interests cross disciplines may also choose to design individualized major programs.

The majority of students who enter CLA as first-year students complete their undergraduate education in CLA. Others complete their basic liberal arts coursework in the college and then transfer to other units of the University. The college offers strong preprofessional programs with close ties to the health sciences and other professional schools at the University.

There are more than 15,000 undergraduate students and 1,700 graduate students enrolled in CLA programs. Approximately 540 permanent faculty members—teachers and scholars of international stature—share with students their vast knowledge, their provocative insights, and the most current research in their fields.

CLA students acquire both breadth of knowledge and particular depth and proficiency in a specialized field of knowledge. Whatever their majors, students complete an education based broadly in the liberal arts. Courses necessary to meet general education requirements introduce students to modes of inquiry and subject matter across the major branches of knowledge. This education is the very best preparation for lives and careers in a rapidly changing world—a solid grounding in ideas and knowledge across disciplines, across centuries, across cultures, and across geographic boundaries, as well as in critical analysis, communication, and research methodologies.

Equipped with this education, graduates of the College of Liberal Arts bring into the world the communication skills, critical and innovative thinking, creativity, and intellectual versatility needed for a lifetime of learning and leadership.

ROSIE K. MAUK
DIRECTOR, AMERICORPS
Keynote Speaker

A longtime champion of volunteer service on the state and national level, Rosie K. Mauk was appointed director of AmeriCorps in November 2001. AmeriCorps is a national service program network—created in 1993—that engages 50,000 Americans each year in intensive service to meet pressing community needs in education, housing, health and public safety, the environment, and other human concerns.

Before coming to Washington, Mauk served on the Texas Commission on Volunteerism and Community Service from 1995 to 2001, having twice been appointed by then-Governor Bush. She helped found and served as chair of the American Association of State Service Commissions, and was president of Camp Fire USA's National Board of Directors.

AmeriCorps members serve through more than 2,100 nonprofits, public agencies, and faith-based organizations. They tutor and mentor youth, build affordable housing, teach computer skills, clean parks and streams, run after-school programs, and help communities respond to disasters.

Mauk, who worked with President George W. Bush on service initiatives when he was governor of Texas, is leading AmeriCorps at a time of intense interest in national service. In his State of the Union address, the president called on every American to give at least two years of service over their lifetimes, and he proposed expanding AmeriCorps by 25,000 members next year. Americans have responded strongly to this call to service, with applications to AmeriCorps up by more than 50 percent.

"Since September 11, our nation has seen a tremendous outpouring of patriotism and civic pride, and people are asking what more they can do," says Mauk, a longtime resident of Fort Worth, Texas. "For many, we hope the answer is AmeriCorps. By helping our neighbors and taking responsibility for others, we reaffirm what's best about America. An active citizenry dedicated to community service is fundamental to our democracy."

For 25 years, Mauk has been answering and leading the call to service. She has been a strong advocate of community service and an active participant in many volunteer and charitable organizations. In Fort Worth, she served on the boards of United Way of Texas and the Preservation Society of Fort Worth, and was president of the AIDS Outreach Center and a founding board member of the Volunteer Center of Tarrant County (Texas).

Mauk spearheaded a fundraising drive for the YWCA of Tarrant County that raised over $5 million to build a new homeless child care center. She has won numerous awards, including the Governor's Volunteer Leadership Award, Fort Worth Woman of the Year, and a 1999 Daily Point of Light award. Born in Toledo, Ohio, Mauk is a graduate of the University of Toledo.

"The president is committed to expanding opportunities for Americans to serve their nation," Mauk says. "I'm working to help make the president's vision of involved citizens and communities of character a reality. National service transcends the agenda of any one political party. It is America's agenda, especially in these challenging times."

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR LISA DISCH

ARTHUR "RED" AND HELENE B. MOTLEY OUTSTANDING TEACHING AWARD

Department of Political Science

One of this year's recipients of the Arthur "Red" and Helene B. Motley exemplary teaching award, political science professor Lisa Disch—regularly termed an inspiration by students—draws increasingly large numbers to both her undergraduate- and graduate-level courses each semester.

Disch thrives on sharing her endless enthusiasm with others, and it seems this is what motivates her students the most. In the words of a former student: "Professor Disch taught with a passion I had never experienced before. The energy and honest excitement she brought to class was nothing short of inspirational. Her dedication to and true interest in the course and the topics proved contagious."

"To talk with Lisa is to learn from her, and there could be no better description of a teacher."—former graduate student and advisee, Samuel Chambers

A scholar of political and democratic theory, Disch models her teaching methods on the democratic process. She allows her students to vote on which topics they will cover more extensively, what types of writing assignments they will do, even grading standards. "Professor Disch worked to constitute our classroom as a public," a student says, adding, "her course was the most participatory and engaging I had as an undergraduate at Minnesota."

Her classes "not only studied theories of democracy but... operated as a democracy" says a former student. Says another, "She embodies the radical democracy she teaches. And she does teach it, in the best way—by example. She is a teacher of unending generosity."

In graduate courses, Disch takes an even less authoritarian role, creating an open atmosphere where students challenge each other to excel intellectually. "I have learned," says Disch, "that if I want the classroom to be a space where students enliven me, I have to challenge them."

Disch provides a comfortable and inviting class environment by treating each student as her equal. She requires nothing more of students than she requires of herself—honest, critical self-reflection, intellectual curiosity, and an openness to new knowledge and ideas. A student from Disch's Democracy & Citizenship course says, "I felt no hesitation sharing my honest thoughts and opinions in class, because Lisa did the same!"

Besides teaching graduate seminars and undergraduate courses each semester, Disch holds third rank out of 29 in her department in the number of Ph.D. advisees she has assisted and fourth in senior paper advisees, not to mention that she advises nearly a third of the undergraduate honors theses. Yet, with this immense amount of work—and with almost superhuman efficiency—Disch is still able to dedicate significant time to each individual.

Praised as an "exemplary critic and advisor" and "an exceptionally energized and engaged teacher," Disch is a dedicated mentor. "She listened to my concerns and desires," says one student, "and offered constructive advice about my options. Ultimately, her feedback and insight—both as professor and friend—were instrumental in my [career] decision."

Author of two books and several other publications on political, democratic, and feminist theory, Disch received her B.A. in political science and English from Kenyon College and her Ph.D. in political science from Rutgers University. Currently an associate professor of political science, she is also an affiliate faculty member in American studies and the Center for Advanced Feminist Studies.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR KIRT WILSON

ARTHUR "RED" AND HELENE B. MOTLEY OUTSTANDING TEACHING AWARD

Department of Communication Studies

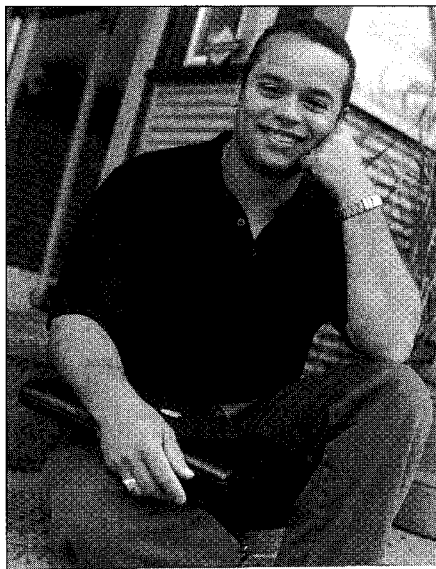

Kirt Wilson was in junior high when his mother became concerned that her only child was spending too much time watching television.

"So Mom enrolled me in night school," recalls Wilson, now an associate professor of speech communication and one of the 2001 recipients of the Arthur "Red" Motley Outstanding Teaching Award. "My choices were chess or computer language."

Wilson chose the computer language course—and that launched his continuing and avid interest in computer technology, so much so that—even after completing a master's degree in rhetorical studies at Purdue University—he thought he might one day find his professional home in the computer industry. At the same time, though, he found himself "turned on to rhetoric as a political exercise," he says. So he completed a Ph.D. at Northwestern University, writing a dissertation on the Civil Rights Act of 1875. He joined the U faculty in January 1996.

Today, Wilson is both a scholar passionately interested in the rhetoric of political discourse and a self-confessed "Linux geek," who maintains his department's Web site and posts links to computer-related interests on his own home page.

A born teacher, Wilson loves exploring ideas and sharing them with students. "Rhetoric has been defined as the act of adjusting ideas to people and people to ideas," he says in a statement of "Kirt is a disciplined and original scholar, a delightful and helpful colleague, and an outstanding teacher on all levels. His course in African American Civil Rights Rhetoric has gained a reputation for being intellectually stimulating and rigorous and also... [for being] taught with uncommon passion and candor. Enrollment swells each time the course is offered, and this spring the enrollment cap was raised twice to accommodate all interested students. He is a model of the personal commitment to education that is recognized by the Arthur 'Red' Motley Award."

*Arlene Carney, professor and chair,
Dept. of Communication Disorders*

teaching philosophy. "Teaching can be summarized with the same sentiment. Pedagogy is the practice of negotiating formal bodies of knowledge and student experience."

The philosophy works. Students give him an average rating of nearly 7 out of 7 in teaching evaluations, and he is one of the department's most popular advisers. Students line up not only to take his classes but also to sing his praises—calling his teaching "inspirational," "passionate," "fascinating," and "captivating."

Says one former student, "I cannot find words that are superlative enough to convey adequately my respect, admiration, and affection for Dr. Kirt Wilson."

Says another, "He is a spellbinding orator who captures the minds of his students. His intelligence, humor, and passion for teaching are unparalleled at this University." Yet another notes Wilson's compassion and kindness, and his "great gift for striking just the right balance between the personae of authority and friend."

Another, noting Wilson's intellectual integrity and genuine thoughtfulness, pays him perhaps the greatest compliment of all: "I look to Professor Wilson as an exemplar scholar, whose scholarship is first rate and who continually inspires my own critical thinking; as a model teacher, whose pedagogical skills I attempt to emulate; and as an ideal mentor, who is both supportive and firm."

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR ANDREA BERLIN

HORACE T. MORSE—UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA ALUMNI AWARD FOR OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTIONS TO UNDERGRADUATE EDUCATION

Department of Classical and Near Eastern Studies

Andrea Berlin, associate professor of classical archeology, has turned her passion for pots and pans and cooking utensils into award-winning teaching and scholarship.

An internationally recognized expert on the archaeology of Hellenistic and Roman Near East and Palestine, Berlin joined the Department of Classical/Near Eastern Studies in 1997 with a Ph.D. in art and archeology from the University of Michigan. She does what she does, she says, because of a singular enthusiasm for finding meaning in the quotidian artifacts of antiquity, in what she calls “the completely unglamorous.”

“I pick up a fragment of a cooking pot and I can see the hearth, imagine the shopping, picture the family eating,” she says. “You get a crystal-clear view of how people actually lived their lives.”

The path to pots and pans began with her dissertation. “I was offered this junk for a dissertation,” she laughs, “pots and pans: the plastic of antiquity. And there was lots of it—not decorated, not special, not sexy at all.

“The director of excavation had been trying to give this stuff away for a long time. I came along and she offered it. So I took it.... All of a sudden I realized that the kitchen dishes at this site were different in each of three phases. I found the correlation between the shapes of the dishes and the people who lived there.”

It’s this kind of surprise that energizes Berlin. “What I really like is when what you think you know is all rearranged,” she says. “The bound pages in a text need to be ring-bound and rearranged. You keep revising the history books.”

“Professor Berlin’s enthusiasm for sharing her knowledge with students is why so many register for classes by first looking to see which ones she will be teaching. She is the reason why I was drawn to the field of classical archaeology.”—Jada Hansen, undergraduate student

With a revolving cast of students in tow, Berlin is currently directing such a ring-binder project in an area called Tel Kedesh in northern Israel. Looking for the personal archaeology of a site that had once been on the border between modern Israel and ancient Phoenicia, Berlin and colleague Sharon Herbert from the University of Michigan began digging in 1997, expecting to find what conventional wisdom assumed was a small farming village.

What they found instead was an enormous public building with major storage facilities and an archive that included 14 massive jars with nearly 2,000 stamps—or bullae—from local officials, an indication that the building had been a depository for official documents. The site, they concluded, may have been a major administrative center of the region during the Hellenistic era.

“It was like finding lower Manhattan when we were looking for upstate New York,” says Berlin.

“When I am standing in a room holding something that was last touched in the eighth century, it’s a straight line to that person. It’s like being in the middle of science fiction,” she says.

Berlin’s enthusiasm is infectious, judging from the reams of testimonials written by students who declare themselves privileged to have worked with this exceptional teacher and prodigious researcher. Aside from her vast intelligence and erudition, her open and engaging personal style, and her passion for her work, Berlin’s greatest gift as a teacher by all accounts is her mastery of “the art of engaging even the largest so-called lecture class in personal dialogue.” As a result, Folwell Hall is constantly abuzz with talk about “Andrea’s dig.”

LIBERAL ARTS DEGREES

The College of Liberal Arts offers five bachelor's degrees—bachelor of arts (B.A.), bachelor of individualized studies (B.I.S.), bachelor of fine arts (B.F.A.), bachelor of music (B.M.), and bachelor of science (B.S.). The bachelor's degrees have many requirements in common.

DEGREE CANDIDATES

Subject to successful completion, degrees will be conferred on those students listed below and on others meeting all curriculum requirements for graduation. Honor citations are provisional and do not become final until all requirements are met for the level indicated. Degrees and degree candidates are listed alphabetically in this program.

Honors designations—Honors graduates complete college and departmental honors requirements, including completing honors projects in their majors, with a minimum G.P.A. of 3.5 for the last 60 credits of their undergraduate career. Students meeting these minimum requirements may graduate cum laude. Students graduating magna cum laude have a minimum G.P.A. of 3.66. Students graduating summa cum laude have a minimum G.P.A. of 3.75 and have completed a summa thesis that has been approved by three readers, one of whom is outside the discipline of the major.

THE DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF ARTS

This degree can be earned through majors in most CLA departments and programs. Its breadth and diversity in general education make it valuable as a base for many kinds of careers or for advanced study. CLA offers several professional majors and specializations as well as interdepartmental programs for the B.A. degree.

ACADEMIC COSTUME

Academic gowns date back to the 14th century, when they served two functions of nearly equal importance: to indicate the academic rank of the wearer and to keep the scholar warm in the drafty stone halls of academia.

The markings, cut, and color of modern-day academic-costume—cap, gown, and sometimes hood—indicate the academic degree, the field of study, and the institution that granted the degree.

Bachelor's degree gowns are black and untrimmed. A tassel hanging from the mortar board worn on the head is color-coded by college at the University of Minnesota. The College of Liberal Arts tassel is white. Honors graduates wear a medallion adorned with a maroon and gold ribbon.

Master's degree gowns, black and untrimmed, have pointed sleeves. Doctoral gowns in the United States traditionally have been black with velvet front facings and crossbars on the sleeves, but in recent years a number of universities have adopted gowns of distinctive school colors.

A new University of Minnesota Ph.D. gown and matching tam made their appearance in 1988 to celebrate the centenary of the first Minnesota doctor of philosophy degree. The new Minnesota gown is maroon-trimmed with black velvet chevrons and gold metallic braid. The traditional gown may still be worn.

The Minnesota hood, which may be worn by anyone with a doctoral degree from the University of Minnesota, is black with maroon chevron on gold. Each institution has its own pattern of colors on the hood, worn around the neck and down the back of the gown. The length and shape of the hood identify the most advanced degree the wearer has earned, and the velvet edging shows the field: blue for doctor of philosophy, light blue for doctor of education, and pink for doctor of musical arts.

At commencement ceremonies those who already have the doctoral degree wear hoods. Degree candidates wear the gowns appropriate for the degrees they are about to receive, and new doctorates are hooded on stage.

THE MACE

The University of Minnesota mace was carried for the first time in 1961 by Regents' Professor of Physics Alfred O.C. Nier at the inauguration of President O. Meredith Wilson. Art professor Philip Morton designed the mace: a crystal sphere four inches in diameter surmounted by the North Star, symbol of the state of Minnesota, on a solid aluminum handle set with the University regents' seal.

THE NORTHPROP ORGAN

Comprising 108 ranks of pipes, the Northrop Memorial Auditorium organ is not only one of the largest organs in the Upper Midwest but also one of the finest examples in the United States of a late-Romantic concert-hall organ. Built in 1932, the organ is located in the ceiling of the auditorium, above the stage and behind the proscenium, and is placed from a console on an elevator platform in the orchestra pit. Unlike many large organs from its era, the Northrop organ is completely unaltered and entirely in its original condition. Persons interested in events that feature the Northrop organ may contact The Friends of the Northrop Organ, c/o the School of Music, University of Minnesota, 2106 Fourth Street South, Minneapolis, MN 55455.
